Time Is A Priceless Gift

When people ask, "Do you remember when...", I am stunned to know I do remember when, what, how and who about that event that took place MANY years ago! I can assure you, I am not bragging about a good memory, I am realizing how many historical and other types of events endeavor where one is guaranteed advancement.

It is my birthday and the passing of huge shoulder pads in womens dresses that are again in style.

Instead of trading recipes, we swap latest medications and newest doctors. We would rather eat than cook. In today's world of upscale prices and weight scale mentality, a restaurant that serves real "country vittles" is definitely on the avidance of crecipe list.

Lots of us don't understand today's generation. Teenagers are people who think poverty is owning jeans without a designer label. We like shoe laces and them tied when wearing sneakers, jeans-without holes, our music romantic intend of reaching and our moving stem to without holes, our music rollamine instead of revolting and our movie stars to have principles, not paroles. Teenagers think old age is when raising your voice, is an act of aggression.

You are making progress if each mistake you make is a new one. At one time, I thought I knew everything, but today, I have more questions than answers.

If it is such a small world, why does it cost so much to run it? What is wrong using a cast iron skillet to cook dinner even if it can't be tossed into the dishwasher? Why don't they sell those ole mannual non-electric typewriters that got me through high school, college and news columns? Should congressmen be required to take literacy tests? Will we keep voting for the lesser of two evils? Does what you say matter less than how you say it? When will we stop buying cars that sound like something you eat with chopsticks? What's wrong with being too lazy to plus in an ultra-modern electric toothbrush? Are the Houston Oilers ever going to make it to the Super Bowl guaranteed advancement.

It is my birthday and the passing of another year. A lot of my observations have to do with aging. At our age, comfort has won out over fashion. Much as I enjoyed the films of Alexis Smith and Joan Crawford, I can live without those huge shoulder pads in womens' dresses that are again in style.

Does what you say matter less than how you say if? When will we stop buying cars that sound like something you eat with chopsticks? What's wrong with being too lazy to plus in an ultra-modern election through the control of the complex of the control of

I do not feel I am getting old and grumpy to be proud of the fact that, although it may seem terribly old fashioned at times, to have an appreciation for good manners. Being polite to every-one who shares this world with us is not always fun, but I'm proud of the fact that my generation tries. I am glad to know reading is becoming popular once again, drugs are OUT, but being involved with the drug war is IN. Last and best of all, families here are becoming whole, full, total, entire and complete without standing on soan boxes or street corpers shout. ing on soap boxes or street corners shouting to the world, "Listen to me".

I find old age is when you quit watching the clock and ramble on and on! Yes, I am ending this column, but remember,
"Time is not an enemy, every moment of it is a priceless gift."

OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT JUDGE 110TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF TEXAS BRISCOE, DICKENS, FLOYD AND MOTLEY COUNTIES 110 EAST HARRIS STREET

SPUR, TEXAS 79370

TO THE CITIZENS OF MOTLEY COUNTY:

I want to take this opportunity to ask you to write in my name for re-election on November 6, 1990. I need your help very much in November if I am to continue to serve as your District Judge.

Most of you know by now that this is ending my first term as your District Judge. It has been a great pleasure serving the people of Motley County these past four years. We have accomplished much. I say we, because it has been a joint effort. Many of you have served on juries in Motley County. That has been our joint effort to see that the Courts were open as a way to settle disputes in a civilized manner. I have spent many days in Motley County in jury trials. I am happy to be able to report to you that EVERY SINGLE CASE TRIED IN MOTLEY COUNTY THAT WAS APPEALED HAS BEEN UPHELD ON APPEAL. This was accomplished by long hours of legal research before and during the trial to make certain that my rulings were correct. While this took longer to try a case this way, I think it is better to do something right the first time than to make mistakes and then have to try the case again.

I have made a point to be in Motley County whenever I was needed there and the Courts have been open to the Citizens of Motley County on a prompt basis

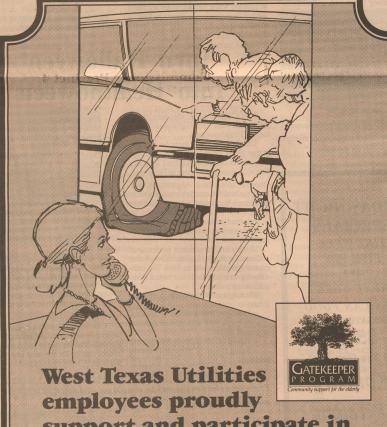

Aside from having taken care of the current cases we have disposed of all of the very old cases pending in this District when I took office. All of the criminal cases tried in Motley County have been upheld on appeal to the Court of Appeals in Austin which I presided over.

I am determined that we will have a Court system that adheres to the principle stated by President Theorodore Roosevelt when he said, "NO MAN IS ABOVE THE LAW AND NO MAN IS BELOW IT, NOR DO WE NEED TO APOLOGIZE TO ANY MAN WHEN WE ASK HIM TO OBEY IT.

Please consider me for a Second Term as your District Judge, and with your help we will continue our good work for another four years.

Thank you for your past support and for your upcoming efforts.

As a follow-up of the October meeting, members will have aluminum cans to bring to the November meeting.

The program, "My Part in Ecology" was introduced by Mrs. Meador, leader, who called for a roll call of the members, who answered with the repsonse, "My worstecology worry." DECIDING ON AN ALLOWANCE

The beginning of the school term is a convenient time to consider a child's allowance. If parents have not been giving an allowance, it may be time to begin. If a child already receives an allowance, the amount may need to be adjusted for increasing needs. creasing needs.

Parents have traditionally used two approaches in providing money for children and teenagers: the "handout system" considered by many to be the least expensive; and the "allowance system." Some parents feel they cannot afford to give their children a regular allowance betheir children a regular allowance be-cause of other financial obligations. However, when they take time to add up all the money that is "doled out" during a week, they are shocked at the total amount. Very often the amount of money that is given "as needed" exceeds that of a reasonable allowance.

Money provided in the "as needed" stem eliminates the opportunity for a child to learn to plan expenses, allocate funds, and set aside money for use on another day. A valuable lesson in money another day. A valuable resoon minoring a child one weeks' lunch money and permitting him or her to take from the total each day to purchase a school lunch. Obviously, the expense to the family is no greater than if the money is "handed out on a daily basis. But the child is introduced to handling money and makout on a daily basis. But the child is introduced to handling money and making it last to meet needs.

Children learn responsibility by assuming responsibility. When children are old enough to tell the difference between coins and when they begin to ask for money of their own, that is the time to begin a regular allowance. Most children will be able to handle an allowance by age five or six, or even earlier if they have older brothers and sisters already receiving an allowance.

How much allowance is the right amount? Hold a family conference. Communication skills about money can be learned while the decisions are fairly simple. In assessing the situation, keep in likes and dislikes, and family routines.

A general rule of thumb is to make an A general rule of thumb is to make an allowance large enough to cover a child's basic needs plus some "extra" to permit opportunity to save or spend, yet small enough to force some choices. Everyone needs to develop decision-making skills and an allowance provides an opportu-nity for a child to build these skills. Also, an allowance puts the burden of a decision on the child, relieving parents of having to evaluate every request for money or having to be the one to say "no"

Probably the most effective way to determine the amount of an allowance is to work out with the child how much he or she actually needs for school or other expenses, and how much he or she will be allowed to spend on choices.

A recent article in MONEY magazine shows that nationwide estimates of allowances given average from about $1 per week for 4-year-olds to about $20 per week for older teens, with most parents providing an allowance of less than $10 per week for preteens. Of course, what is a reasonable allowance amount depends on the level of household income available and the number of children who will receive an allowance.

How often an allowance is given may also change as a child matures. Elementary children may need to be given amounts twice a week. Older children can handle a weekly allowance and teenagers, a monthly allocation.

What is important in providing an

Turn Halloween Into Healthoween

With a little creative shopping, treat-givers can turn this Halloween into a happy "Healthoween."

happy "Healthoween."
"Children are much more health conscious these days," said Dr. Corinne Montandon, nutries at the Children's Nutrition Research Center in Houston

"those of us on the giving end can reinforce the health message by sending trick-or-treaters home with a bag of nutritous treats."

Potential treats can be found on nearly every grocery store aisle if shoppers look carefully.
Montandon, an assistant professor of pediatrics at Baylor College of Medicine, encourages shoppers to look for individually wrapped snacks or boxed items containing packets.
She suggests the following nutritous treats:

treats:
-- Packaged fruit snacks
-- Granola bars with raisins, oatmeal

or peanut butter
-- Boxed or canned pure fruit juices
-- String cheese or other small cheese

Mini-puddings or applesauce Miniature packs of nuts (for older children)

-- Dried fruits, such as raisins or banana chips

-- Single-serving, boxed cereals
-- Packaged crackers with peanut butter or cheese filling
-- Freeze-dried ice cream
Non-food items make good treats, too.

Mini-pumpkins to decorate, crayons, pencils, stickers, food or frozen yogurt gift certificates, and even coins can be special treats.

Halloween sends a mixed message to children, Montandon said, because "all of a sudden we forget good eating habits and say come get more candy than you can possibly eat."

Montandon thinks it's time to change that message.

"Coming home with a bag of healthy treats can be just as rewarding because the treats can be part of lunch and after-school snacks for the next few weeks," she said.

Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

ABOVE BOARD

Our Lord wasn't like some of these modern day religious leaders. He did not isolate His disciples from other influences in order to program their minds. Neither did He conceal His teaching from "outsiders". Our Lord said, "...I spake openly to the world... and in secret have I said nothing (John 18:20). Everything was open and above board with Jesus. It will be that way with us if we are His disciples.

Our Lord was often questioned, as we see from Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. It was through His apostles He said to us, "Prove all things..." and "...Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meakness and fear," (I Thessalonians 5:21; I Peter 3:15).

We of the Matador Church of Christ believe in being open and above board about all that we say or do. We believe we should invite your questions. That we should encourage people to investigate for themselves. If what we teach and practice will not stand the test of Bible investigation, it does not deserve to be accepted.

Oil Crisis Promotes Energy Hustlers

The current crisis in the Persian Gulf has heightened consumer awareness of the need to save fuel. Energy conservation not only saves the consumer money, it helps the nation become less dependent on oil imports. But in the haste to save, many customers fall victim to energy-related consumer frauds.

During periods of crisis, it's not unusual to see scam artists work overtime. The Consumer Protection Division has seen unscrupulous businesses take advantage of natural disasters, economic hard times and other catastrophes by playing on the emotions of consumers.

The Texas Attorney General's Of-fice recently joined the Federal Trade Commission and other state At-torneys General in warning con-sumers to be on the lookout for rip-offs that take advantage of America's current concern about oil supplies. Below are some tips to help you avoid being a victim.

As gas prices rise, consumers may want to improve their fuel mileage. Marketers have offered all sorts of automotive devices, including oil and gasoline additives, intended to enhance fuel mileage. Unfortunately, most of these products fail to significantly increase fuel economy. To get better mileage, you should check your tire pressure, remove excess weight from your car's trunk and cess weight from your car's trunk and get a tune-up. Follow the vehicle owner's manual for specific details.

There are several home im-provements that will help home provements that will help home owners save energy and reduce fuel bills. These range from low cost alternatives like caulking and weatherstripping to more expensive options such as installing attic and wall insulation or purchasing a new, more efficient heating and cooling system.

In the past, some marketers have exaggerated energy savings claims for home products such as insulation materials, storm windows, room heaters, residential siding and solar heating systems. Assess advertising claims carefully so that you understand the basis for such claims and how they may apply to your specific situation. If the savings claimed appear unrealistic, they probably are. Remember, if you follow energy conservation methods, your monthly bills may not go down if the price of fuel is rising. But it still may cost less than you would have paid because you've made your home more efficient.

efficient. Other scams common when oil prices rise are investment rip-offs. Watch out for oil and gas partnerships, gold and silver mining schemes, phony investments in oil drilling or bogus pipelines, or any investment scam that promises a significantly higher rate of return than you might expect from more traditional investments.

And always be cautious about investing in something you're unfamiliar with — rare coins, fine art or gemstones, for example.

You can help stop energy-related Other scams common when oil gemstones, for example.

You can help stop energy-related scams by reporting such businesses. The FTC and the Attorneys General are reactivating the Energy Fraud Clearinghouse that was created in 1983 as a way of sharing information on possible fraudulent energy-related products and advertising.

If you are the victim of an energy-related scam, please contact one of my Consumer Protection Divisions. There are offices in Austin, Dallas, El Paso, Houston, Lubbock, McAllen and San Antonio.

Remember, saving energy and money is a goal all consumers should set. But make sure you are not merely driving money from your savings account into one of an unscrupulous
