Needed--Immediate Action

RECENTLY The Toreador carried an editorial advocating the abolishment of the 50 cent late fee assessed girls living in the dormitory. The Toreador took this stand, not only because it believes the ruling to be wrong, but because it expressed the opinion of the students. As the student newspaper, it is the duty of The Toreador to present and advocate such views.

Following the printing of the paragraphs in regard to the assessment and a visit of the editor to the offices of Dean Doak and President Knapp, a meeting was held in the dormitory. Here, as in the columns of The Toreador, the opinion of the students was emphatically expressed. They do not think the assessment is fair and desire a change in the ruling. Word from those attending the meeting show that the visiting official continually "beat about the bush" when speaking of the matter.

The girls of the dormitory have shown that they desire a change. The Administration knows the students want the conditions remedied. Yet has anything been done by the governing officials? No!

The Toreador, as the student organ, shall continue to advocate a change in the policy of officials concerning the fine. Students desire a change and will not be satisfied with anything less. The least that can be done is a modification to the ruling which, expressing the opinion of the students in the dormitory and given at the above mentioned meeting, is UNFAIR, UNJUST and AGAINST the will of the dormitory resident.

Decennial Celebration

IF there is a thread of continuity which binds Tech's past with the present it is the yearly return of alumni and ex-students to our campus. This year the call is more urgent. Next month under the direction of the Alumni and Ex-Students association the college celebrates its tenth birthday in connection with Homecoming.

Eight years ago the institution celebrated its initial Homecoming. Tech was an infant in the collegiate world. Traditions were few and the appeals based upon love and loyalty for "dear old Alma Mater," which has brought alumni and ex-students flocking back for reunions at other colleges, failed to arouse more than even mild interest in the Tech alumni.

During the three days of November 9, 10 and 11, graduates, ex-students and present enrollees are to celebrate the founding of an institution that has rapidly gained for itself a leading position among the colleges and universities of the South. This celebration should be a memorable event. Notables from the state and nation have been invited to attend the jubilee and make it such an event.

Every undergraduate should consider himself a part of the program committee. Should the association call for help from you, respond with the willingness that characterizes Tech students when the college needs support.

Then, consider yourself a reception committee during the celebration. Revert to your freshman days and greet strangers with a cheery "hello." Make the "old hands" realize that the institution is still the same democratic school that they once attended. Make the jubilee a genuinely welcome Homecoming.

Book Reviews

(Editor's note: Books reviewed in this column from time to time will not always be the newest publications. Some of them will be new, others are only new to the library. Still others will be books which have been in the library for some time but which we feel our readers would still like to read. All of the books reviewed will be interesting to some readers. For this reason subject matter and type of book are to vary in each issue.)

Blodgett, Harvey A.—Making the Most of Your Income. New York, MacMillan, 1935. HG 7931 B56.

The problem presented in this book is one for which we would like to find a solution. As a matter of fact, some of us have begun to wonder if there is a solution. For this reason, the book is one of interest.

Some of the chapters deal with such intriguing topics as how to be better off a year from now, how to get out of debt and how to get one's first $1,000.

Money problems have always been student problems. There is, however, no chapter dealing with how to acquire an income. The book merely tells what to do with it after acquiring a sum of money.

Ferguson, Erna. Fiesta in Mexico. New York, A. A. Knopf, 1934. F12-15 F34.

"Mexican fiestas offer a varied, unforgettable, poignant picture of the people"—Introduction.

The life of the people, their conflicting customs and beliefs are so closely related to their fiestas that one cannot obtain a knowledge of one without appreciating the other. The author takes the reader with her in a leisurely way from one fiesta to another. She leaves him at the end of the book, feeling that he has actually attended the fiestas, which she describes, and mingled with the people who make them the colorful events that they are.

One-Minute Interviews

Question: What would you do if you could do what you wish to do?

Allie Eason: I would go ahead and get my degree, and then go to Mexico City to be an interpreter or a correspondent for an American newspaper.

Earl Dodd: I would change some of the rules in the girls' dormitory.

Marian Bullock: I'd find out who writes Sallyport.

Sneed Parker: I would go ahead and get my degree. Then I'd go to work as a chemist.

Catherine Royalty: If you're talking about the immediate present, I'd go to Fort Worth for a visit.

Junius Carter: I'd like to get all the things done this week I should have done last week.

Allridge Salyars: I'd get my B. A. degree from Tech, and then go to law school.

Paul Eubank (without cracking a smile): I would do everything I can to lighten the burdens of my fellow men.

A Washington State freshman was registering at the campus bookstore. The blank which he was filling in requested the telephone number. So they asked him where he lived. He couldn't remember that, answering, "I pledged some fraternity last night, but I don't know the name of it, either."

Interviewers for the Notre Dame Scholastic, trying to gather some statistics on the likes and dislikes of students who entered that school this fall, ran into one fellow whose attitude was non-committal but for four points. OFFER HITCH-HIKING RULES

Dear Editor:
We read your editorial in The Toreador of October 9th and think your suggestion is a very good one. Think it is about time some customs or practices are established in this method of getting to town.

It is the fault of the hitch-hiker that more of the Lubbock people do not pick them up when they wish to go to town. We have heard business men after business men say that he would be glad to take students with him but he did not appreciate the attitude of the student when stopping to pick him up. Instead of getting a sufficient number to fill his car, he gets 10 or 15 who climb over his automobile. Some act as if the driver should turn the car over to them and ride on the fender. The citizens of Lubbock do not appreciate this attitude and the treatment of their automobile. Many drive out of the way to avoid carrying students.

When a driver stops for persons that he knows, a car load of students who he has never seen before "piles in." The car owner does not appreciate this. After all the driver has the privilege of picking his passengers.

There should be a code of ethics even among hitch-hikers. The students of Tech need a body of LAWS.

We would like to present a few suggestions that we think would fit in with yours. 1—Establishment of convenient places to get rides. 2—Be courteous to drivers and do not overload the car. 3—Let the town people know that the students appreciate the rider and that their cars will be properly taken care of by riders. The town people will be more than glad to help the students under such conditions.

Other schools have traditions and customs to govern the practice of hitch-hiking. Why shouldn't Tech? The school is old enough to regulate this practice and even establish a tradition along this line.

Matadors Prepare For Game With Loyola Lions In Los Angeles Stadium

COACH Pete Cawthon is a serious minded man. He likes to win, and he can see no reason in losing or having tie scores. The Raider mentor is interested in his charges, but he does not make any bones about it when he says he wants to win. So the Raiders are having a special scrimmage class after working hours this week. Practice has begun promptly at five and lasted until nine o'clock.

It is a gruelling affair that has been going on at Tech Field this week behind locked gates, and the Raider teacher has made it emphatic to his pupils that there will be no let down from now until the sun sinks in the west December 7 at Oklahoma City when the Raiders finish their season against OCU Goldbugs. And at the rate they have started out, the Raiders will either be from men or total wrecks by that time.

Although the Raiders did have a putrid afternoon against DePaul and were stuck to the ground most of the time, the Demons did not have the club they seemed to possess. If the Demons had had a better club, they would have scored at least one time with their several chances. Then, the Raider forwards deserve a rose or two for their goal line stands.

Coach Cawthon is centering all of his concentrating powers on the Loyola game. The head coach has his heart set on bringing back a victory from the coast, and the Raiders are drilling long and hard this (See DOUBLE T, page 4)

Cagers Begin Workouts Soon

Huffman Issues Call For Basketball Prospects; Lettermen Return

Varsity basketball practice commences in the gym the middle of November, Coach Berl Huffman announced yesterday. Previous plans were made to start court workouts earlier, but football practice would interfere and the date was postponed. The squad will work twice each week under the direction of Coach Huffman when the practice sessions begin. The Tech mentor will be greeted during his first year as head of basketball with three lettermen, three junior college transfers and three promising sophomores up from the '34 frosh ranks. Captain Leroy Crews, Hugh Snodgrass and Curly Wilkerson are the lettermen. Howard Shook of Tupelo, Mississippi, James Burk, Cameron A. and M. college transfers, and Paul Morris are expected to form part of the starting quintet when the season opens.

Three sophomores: Cotton Wington, Stratford; Robert Case, Petersburg; and Fred Byrd, Ardmore, Oklahoma, will bolster the strength of the Scarlet and Black basketballers. BARABAS IS STANDOUT Columbia's backfield this year is built around Captain Al Barabas, who, it is predicted, will be one of the standout backs in the East this year.

All-American fullback in 1934, Bobby Grayson is playing his last year at Stanford.

Raiders Polish Defense For Battle Against Lieb's Catholics

COACH Pete Cawthon's Red Raiders are not in circulation this week-end after four consecutive games. Six contests on successive week-ends remain on their split schedule.

After three days of workout that seemed more like the real thing, the Raiders tapered off yesterday afternoon and rested today in preparation for their last two days of practice, Monday and Tuesday, before they leave Wednesday morning for Los Angeles to battle the Loyola Lions.

Work On Defense Most of the week's lax work has been concentrated on ground defense at which point the offense of the Lions of Coach Tom Lieb is considered the strongest. The Raider defense has shown up excellently in the last two games with DePaul and Wichita, but their offense has been the worry of the coaching staff.

Coach Cawthon predicted at the first of the week that shifts were to be made in the Raider lineup. However, very little change had been made Friday. The squad has been working at night, and Coach Cawthon is still not pleased with the success the offense has been displaying in scrimmage. Practically the same squad personnel that made the trip to Chicago will make the Los Angeles jaunt.

The thirty-seventh annual Texas-Oklahoma game was witnessed by 15,000 fans. The Longhorns stretched their lead over the Sooners with a 12 to 7 verdict.

New York university has received more than 10,000 books during the past few months through the activities of the Society for the Libraries.

COACH A. EXENDINE

Crafty Delaware Indian Pits Team Against Raiders

A crafty Delaware Indian, A. A. Exendine, head coach at Oklahoma A. and M. college, pits the Sooner State gridders against the Raiders November 2. He learned the football game at Carlisle under the famous Glenn S. "Pop" Warner.

Exendine was captain and named at end on the late Walter Camp's All-American eleven in 1906. He has been coaching football for 25 years including posts at George Washington university, Washington State, Occidental, Carlisle, where he was twice named assistant to Warner, and the Northeastern Oklahoma teachers college.

Exendine came to Oklahoma A. and M. in 1929 as assistant under Lynn O. Waldorf, and developed the double wing back style of play. When Waldorf went to Kansas State in 1933, Exendine was selected as his successor.

Three Faculty Golfers Reach Tourney Finals

Horne, Helwig, McRee, Seek Championship In Closing Matches

Three professors reached the finals in the faculty tournament on the Country club course that was scheduled to end Sunday but was postponed in an effort to have more participants in the tourney. But the field remained the same, and Cecil Horne, the defending champion, W. F. Helwig and F. L. McRee met in the final bracket today to decide the champion for this year with a round of 18 holes.

In the playoff slated today a threesome will be played to decide the title. Horne plays Helwig, and McRee's score will be compared to the winner of the round to decide the champion.

Horne, McRee and Helwig advanced to the finals with first round victories. Helwig has won two matches having defeated C. C. Galbraith, 2 and 1, and then coping a match from Clarence Fax, 6-5. McRee won from D. W. Smallin, 5 and 3, and Horne beat M. E. Heard, 2 and 1.

Robert Harding Heads Engineers Organization

ASCE officers for 1935-36 are: president, Robert Harding; vice-president, Edwin Campbell, and secretary-treasurer, E. T. Shaban.

Prof. G. W. Parrhill of the civil engineering department is faculty advisor.

The association meets the first Tuesday night each month in the engineering building.

All-star guard in the Eastern conference, Bill Ackerman captains the Dickinson college eleven.

Lions Are Plenty Tough, Coach Huffman States

Frosh Mentor Watches Loyola University Defeat Tempe

"The Loyola Lions are a year older and a year tougher," Coach Berl Huffman pointed out in an interview yesterday concerning Tom Lieb's football machine. The Fricador mentor scouted the Californians in their game with Tempe Teachers at Phoenix last week-end.

"Against Tempe last Saturday night the Lions enjoyed life, taking it easy and putting out very little effort against the Arizona college," Huffman said. They could have run up a score like they did against California Tech and Whittier if they had tried," the Fish tutor added.

The Lions, decided favorites over the Bulldogs last week, edged them out with a 7 to 3 victory, according to press dispatches. Coach Tom Lieb announced that he was pointing for the Arizona university and Texas Tech games on successive week-ends, and wasn't taking any chances with the Lions against Tempe.

Duvall Powerful "Al Duvall, the giant negro tackle, playing his third year and who is being touted for all-American honors, is without any question all-American calibre," Coach Huffman continued. "The big 200 pound lineman seemed to spring from the line of scrimmage into the Bulldog backfield and smear them left and right for many losses."

Coach Huffman was exceptionally impressed with two murdering guards, Johnny Vitalek and Nes Enrico, whom he contends are two of the best he has ever seen.

Not only is the line strong but the Lion backfield is even stronger. Blocking has been one of Loyola's greatest assets this year. "Francis" Pete Lubisch, 130 pound fullback, has gained a wide reputation on the western coast during the last two years as being the hardest running back in that section, and Lubisch's power is to be aimed at the Red Raiders.

Tickets For Special Train On Sale Until Departure

Tech special train tickets to Los Angeles and ducaats for the Loyola game will be on sale until the final minute Wednesday morning before the train pulls out. Bo Williams, graduate manager of athletics, re-announced yesterday.

The round trip ticket to Los Angeles on the special is $35 exclusive of pullman. Pullman tickets are not included in the excursion fare. Admission to the game is $1.50.

Approximately 400 Matador fans and the Tech band is to make the trip aboard the special.

"AND ANNIE doesn't live here anymore," crooned the painter in a somewhat doubtful tenor as he unconcernedly smeared paint over the portrait of a co-ed, a la Russell Patterson, on the wall of the La Ventana office.
