Richards defeats Williams in gubernatorial race

Richards

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Democratic state Treasurer Ann Richards, battling against Republican oilman Clayton Williams and his $20 million-plus campaign, Tuesday became the first woman to win the governor's office in more than 50 years.

A jubilant Richards held aloft a T-shirt that said, "A woman's place is in the dome" as supporters cheered. Her election marks the first by a woman since Miriam "Ma" Ferguson won her second term in 1933.

"I want to tell you how things look. It looks like, as (former congresswoman) Barbara Jordan said, the people of Texas are back," Richards said.

With 73 percent of the vote counted, Richards led 52 percent to 48 percent, or 1,379,975 to Williams' 1,272,709.

Richards said the vote showed that average Texans didn't want another millionaire as governor.

"They want a governor that gets up and goes to work every morning. They want a governor that isn't going to be distracted by other business. They want their children educated ... They want something done about their insurance rates, and they want a governor that's going to do that," she said.

Richards also said her pro-choice stand on abortion was well-received by voters.

"They want a governor who is committed to the freedom of the people of this state and who is not going to allow government to interfere in their private lives," she said.

Williams, who spent $8 million of his own, did not immediately concede.

"He's tensely optimistic," said Williams aide Bill Kenyon as returns were counted. Williams remained in his hotel room.

Their duel set records for spending and mudslinging. Richards was outspent by nearly a 2-to-1 margin and once trailed in opinion polls by more than 12 percentage points.

But Richards closed the gap with

Williams in the campaign's final days, helped by his admissions that he had paid no income taxes in 1986 and that he didn't understand a proposed constitutional amendment on the ballot.

"Let's prove that the governorship of Texas is not for sale," Richards said.

Williams, a multimillionaire making his first bid for office, even got last-minute help from President Bush, who campaigned across the state with him on Monday.

Williams, from Midland, waged the most expensive governor's campaign in Texas history and promised voters he could "make Texas great again."

The $20.4 million he had reported spending as of Oct. 26 easily eclipsed the previous record of $13.5 million spent by Republican Gov. Bill Clements in his unsuccessful bid for re-election in 1982.

Clements won again in 1986 and is retiring.

Richards got last-minute help from Williams, who stumbled when asked on TV about the only proposed constitutional amendment on the ballot and then admitted he paid no income taxes in 1986, when the oil industry collapsed.

That capped a series of gaffes Williams made since the March primary.

McBeath wins county judge contest

By MELISSA SHARP
The University Daily

With 44 of 75 precincts reporting, Republican Don McBeath led the race for Lubbock County judge with 59.3 percent of the vote.

McBeath said his campaign focused on criminal justice because as the chief budget officer, the county judge is involved with the county justice system.

"Lubbock County citizens are concerned about criminal justice," McBeath said. "They want the kind of good, tough law enforcement I stand for. It has been the predominant issue in the race."

Predicting a victory, McBeath said he will spend the rest of the year learning from Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw.

"I have some experience in Lubbock County, but he has 26 years experience as Lubbock County judge," McBeath said. "I've got an awful lot to learn from him in a very short period of time."

McBeath said voters associate his Democratic opponent, Jim Freeman, with the commissioners court. Voters want a change in county government, he said.

Freeman said McBeath entered the race with more name recognition because of his victory in the Republican primary. Freeman said he started from zero.

His campaign centered on efficient management of tax dollars, he said.

"We looked at it from the standpoint of cost effectiveness," Freeman said. "Most people are concerned with tax dollars and how we are using them."

Lubbock County voters will expect McBeath to improve criminal justice upon becoming Lubbock County judge, Freeman said.

In the race for state representative District 83, Republican, incumbent Delwin Jones led by 59.6 percent with 44 of 75 precincts reporting.

Jones said he led the race because of his qualifications and his experience in the office. He planned to meet with the speaker of the Texas House of Representatives today to express his interest in committees after his re-election.

Jones said his Democratic opponent, Bidal Aguero, has a large following among minority voters because he owns the bilingual news publication El Editor.

Aguero said he needed more people to vote in the minority districts. The results depended on whether voters favored the incumbent or wanted a change, he said.

McBeath

"It depends on whether they were actually reading about the issues rather than being swayed by 30 second commercials," he said.

Predicting a loss, Aguero said he will continue his political activism. "I will continue working for the candidates through the minority media."

Bullock wins lt. governorship

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — With 18 percent of the precincts reporting, Democrat Bob Bullock led Republican Rob Mosbacher 52 percent to 44 percent in the lieutenant governor's race Tuesday.

Bullock, 61, the state's comptroller for the past 15 years, touted his budget experience at a time when the state faces funding crises in education, criminal justice and welfare.

Mosbacher, 39, a Houston businessman and chairman of the state welfare agency, campaigned as a fresh approach to the state problems that have plagued the state.

Mosbacher said Bullock's longevity in public service is a liability. "He's part of the status quo. He's part of the crowd that just doesn't have the fresh, new creative thinking that you need to look at some of the problems facing this state," Mosbacher said.

Bullock derisively referred to Mosbacher as "Junior" throughout the campaign, a reference to his father, U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher Sr., and said the younger Mosbacher failed the one time he was given a responsible position, chief of the state welfare board.

Music professor receives Wells Faculty Award

By LORI TUCCI
The University Daily

The Spencer A. Wells Faculty Award recognizes members of the Texas Tech faculty for outstanding teaching, said Dudley Faver, executive director of the Dads and Moms Association.

William Westney, a professor in the music department, received the award in October.

"This award is given to the outstanding professor at Tech," Faver said. "It gives significant recognition to a college professor."

Any Tech professor may be nominated by their department head. A university honors committee screened the nominees. Members of the Dads and Moms Association, who decided the winner, reviewed the top three nominees.

The Dads and Moms Association committee judged the nominees by employment records, individual achievements and commendations from department chairs.

Westney has taught at Tech since 1978. In 1982, he received an award for excellence in teaching, the New Professor Award, which is given to a faculty member with less than five years teaching experience.

"I am delighted to have received this award because Tech is an environment where faculty members try disciplinary teaching approaches and emphasize research," said Westney. "Tech is always looking for ways to identify its strengths. What I found is that there is a lot of communication among faculty and a lot of room for diversity."

The first Spencer A. Wells Award was presented in 1966. When Hemphill-Wells department store was liquidated, Wells then established a foundation for the award.

Kasparov, Karpov draw 11th game

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The 11th game of the world chess match between champion Garry Kasparov and challenger Anatoly Karpov ended in a draw Monday after less than three hours of play and just 24 moves.

The draw was agreed to after Kasparov had forced a perpetual check, meaning he could make endless checks to Karpov's king, but not a checkmate.

Karpov had the white pieces for Monday night's game.

The match remains tied at 5½-5½. Each man has a victory, worth one point, and have played to a draw, worth one-half point, nine times.

The first player to gain 12½ points wins the championship and $1.7 million of the $3 million purse. If the match ends in a 12-12 tie, the purse will be split evenly and Kasparov will retain the title that he wrested from Karpov in 1985.

Tech law graduates set SWC standard at bar exam

By MELISSA SHARP
The University Daily

The Texas Tech School of Law had the highest results on the Texas Bar exam administered in July, with 97 percent of its graduates passing.

Baylor University and the University of Houston tied for second place with 95 percent of their graduates passing.

Of Tech's 124 graduates who took the test, four failed. Unlike graduates of other Texas universities, each Tech graduate failed only the half of the exam that tests knowledge of state laws.

Law school dean Frank Newton said all United States students take the part of the exam that 100 percent of Tech graduates passed.

"You might argue that the multi-state exam is fundamentally an academic and background test," Newton said. "From a national perspective, our students compete better on that part."

"The added advantage of coming out number one is that it is a tribute to the students and the faculty members," he said.

Newton said he had expected the graduates to perform well on the exam.

"Our students are very gifted," he said. "Their scores on standardized national tests were higher than usual, so we expected them to do well."

Tech's ranking proves that Tech law professors teach a strong educational background, he said.

Newton said Tech graduates have always performed well on the bar exam. Rank among universities can depend on outside factors.

"The fact that we finished number one is a tribute not only to the law school and to the basic ability of the students," he said. "Whether you are number one or number two has to do with whether all the students are well that day."

Tech ranked first in February with 94 percent of the graduates passing. In February 1989, Tech ranked second behind Baylor. Tech ranked third in July 1989.

Texas governor's seat ain't for sale; Richards prevails

Rick Storm
Copy Editor

Perhaps, my dear Republican friends, you should take ol' Cretin Williams' advice: Just relax and enjoy it.

The governor's chair in Texas is not for sale. The governor's chair is back in the hands of the people of Texas.

The dreaded "L" word is dead, dead, dead.

Maybe it was just that Texans wanted a governor that actually had an education plan.

Or maybe Texans wanted a governor who pays taxes — just like they do.

Or perhaps Texans wanted a governor that was not a self-declared anti-environmentalist.

Or could it be that Texans were looking for a governor that hadn't enjoyed millions of dollars in loans from big insurance companies.

Possibly the people of Texas just preferred a governor that actually understood what the ONLY constitutional amendment on the state ballot meant.

Could it be that Texans wanted a governor that thought women were something other than a commodity to "service" men?

I can well imagine many Cretin Williams supporters, the pin-punch in hand, staring at the empty ballot and thinking, "What on God's green earth would happen if Cretin Williams did become governor?"

"I mean, what if Cretin Williams REALLY became governor?"

Hey, in a way I feel sorry for ol' Cretin. Think about it — the dude spent more than $8 million of his own money on this election out of more than $20 million overall. The guy sure as hell ought to be mad! After all, he bought and paid for the gubernatorial seat — bought and paid for it, by Gawd.

Williams can attribute part of his crash landing to a hilarious parade of blunders.

Who could ever forget when a woman should just relax and enjoy it when getting raped?

And just when one didn't think it could get any more incredible, ol' Cretin told the people of Texas how women used to "service" him at A&M.

Now many would have stopped here, but "Clayton Ain't Debatin'" Williams bravely pressed on.

When Gov. Richards said she was moving up in the polls, ol' Cretin responded that he "hoped she hadn't started drinking again." A shocking statement about a recovered alcoholic that was setting an example for millions of people whose lives had been devastated by alcohol.

Leading a "war on drugs" requires strong moral leadership, and such a classless innuendo clearly shows a lack of needed leadership.

But there are more fundamental reasons why Richards will settle into the governor's chair.

When Williams backed off his support for the voucher system with less than a month before the election, it became painfully apparent that ol' Cretin had no plan, no vision whatsoever for education in Texas — a state with an educational funding system declared unconstitutional in the state judiciary system.

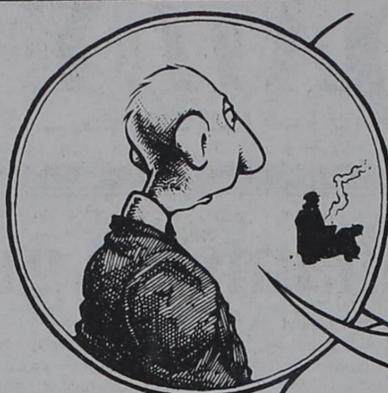

The problem was that Texans saw through the voucher system — a scheme to return education to the exclusive domain of the wealthy, a system that would make free agents out of high-school football players, a system that would plunge Texas education into an even more deplorable state than already exists.

Voters understood that a vote for Gov. Richards was a vote for education.

Voters understood that a vote for Gov. Richards was a vote for a clean healthy environment. Williams' record of pollution — a record that sludged through sealed records of lawsuits settled out-of-court — stood pathetically plain for all to see.

Oh, my poor Republican companions, no by Gawd bustin' rocks, no joy of educating Texas convicts.

And, most of all — The Texas governor's chair AIN'T for sale!

YOU KNOW, IT WAS TEN YEARS AGO RONALD REAGAN WARNED US THAT AMERICA WOULD BE BANKRUPTED BY A HORDE OF FECKLESS NE'ER-DO-WELLS WHO BLAMED THEIR OWN DERELICTION ON SOCIETY AND EXPECTED THE TAXPAYERS TO SUPPORT THEM PERMANENTLY...

...HOW COULD HE HAVE KNOWN?

Nation's capital an eyeopener

LaAnna Efrid
Editor

I had the opportunity to visit our nation's capitol this past week. Washington D.C. is an extravagant city.

I tried to see as much as I could in the little time I had there — the White House, the Capitol, the Smithsonian Institution, Ford Theatre, the U.S. Supreme Court building — they were all so grand.

The architecture of the buildings is so breathtaking and overpowering. I must have stood for at least 15 minutes in front of the Capitol with my mouth wide open, in awe of such a beautiful sight.

But every silver lining has a dark cloud.

Being from a small town, maybe I've led a more sheltered life than I thought. Seeing so many people sleeping in corners and huddled around the steam rising from manholes was devastating. Walking through the streets of D.C. and constantly being approached by outstretched hands begging for spare change was certainly an eye opener.

Sure, I'd watched Comic Relief. I laughed at Robin Williams and Whoopie Goldberg, but when the documentaries on the homeless came on with the toll-free number, it was time to change the channel.

I'd even seen a few bums stumbling around now and then, and gave a pocketful of change to more than a few homeless souls, but seeing 15-plus bodies lying side-by-side in front of every other corner store really brought the problem home.

I had even heard a few months ago that Washington, D.C. had the highest crime rate in the United States. To me, it's hard to believe that the city in which our esteemed president resides, the city in which the congressmen from every state in the U.S. work, has more crime and evidence of homelessness than any other city across this great land.

Doesn't the president see what is happening before his very eyes? Aren't the congressmen ashamed to fight tirelessly over trivial bills in Congress while a good percentage of Americans call the streets home?

I suppose I'm just finding out what millions of Americans have known for a long time — the number of homeless people in the U.S. is a serious problem. I know that there are a lot of people working to lessen the homeless numbers, but will it ever end?

We believe that this nation we live in is such a great democracy while millions envy even the clothes on our backs. Now, what was that toll-free number to Comic Relief again...

Ol' Glory pride

To The Editor:

Apologies to Paul Williams and Texas Tech spectators for the blooper Saturday Nov. 3 Texas Tech/Texas game for the absence of the National Ensign at the opening ceremonies of the football game. Traditionally, the ROTC units, Army, Naval and Air Force here at Tech provide the personnel and color guard details for these events. With each unit taking turns for home games or doing joint color guards for special games, i.e.

However, this year a conflict arose when two schedules had been made. The problem was thought to have been resolved after the Miami game, but like the Tech football team itself — I guess we also have inconsistencies in our game plan or performance level. But, rest assured all proper steps have been taken to ensure this does not happen again and for the final home game against SMU, the Air Force ROTC is scheduled to provide the honors of raising Old Glory.

In response to the Memorial Circle Flag raisings, normally the Campus Security Police raise and lower the flags, but again on certain days, (i.e. the Naval ROTC on Thursdays) the ROTC units again participate by raising the flags themselves as part of training and familiarization to ships, bases or stations procedures. Yes, you are correct in the different type of flags — Holiday (special occasions) Post or Garrison (normal, everyday) and Storm (inclement weather).

Here are some possible reasons why you did not view flags being flown at Memorial Circle: (1) The radical changing weather here locally and the lack of possession of all three types of flags by the university. (2) The variation in standardization of times for raising or lowering the colors by the different service representatives or campus police. (3) The maintenance of the halyards (ropes) or the masts (poles) themselves. But your concern, Mr. Williams, is noteworthy! I, like yourself, love to see our flag flying high — for the people — all people of our nation and the freedoms it represents.

Wrong Romero

To The Editor:

I would like to point out an apparent discrepancy in the article on El Salvador and Central America published on page 1 of yesterday's University Daily.

In the fourth column, Lori Tucci's article notes that Gen. Carlos Humeral Romero was elected president of El Salvador in March 1977. The last paragraph of column five notes that "Romero was assassinated March 24, 1980 during mass in a small chapel in San Salvador." The implication of the reporting is that General Romero was assassinated.

In the handout — chronology on "Political Parties, Guerrilla groups and Violence 1977-1980," distributed to those present, I noted that General Romero was deposed in a coup Oct. 15, 1979, and that a five-member junta made up of two military officers and three civilians came into governance. That partially revised junta promulgated a number of reforms which the film does not deal with nor does the film deal with the ouster of General Romero by a generally progressive coalition of military and civilian politicians.

Toward the end of the handout, I noted that "Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero y Galdames (was) assassinated by a single bullet while saying mass in a small chapel in San Salvador."

I would hope that Ms. Tucci had the correct information in her original draft and that the reference to Romero being assassinated came about because of the deletion by a copy editor or someone else. The two Romeros are very different people.

The HS Daily?

To The Editor:

Once again, The University Daily has outdone itself in its pursuit of journalistic mediocrity. Not since the worldly important, front page story of possible bias in Homecoming Queen judging has The UD asserted itself as one of the best high school papers in the city.

The Nov. 5th edition claims to devote an entire page to the positions of the major candidates in this year's state elections. I thought this was a great idea. Students need to look past all of the fancy commercials and name calling and find out exactly where the candidates stand on issues concerning them. I turned to page three expecting to see where the major candidates felt our state should be heading going into the 21st century.

What I found on page three fairly shocked me until I considered the source. There were no statements concerning abortion. Nor were there any such questions on the economy or censorship. Crime, public schools, a state lottery, and the war on drugs were also omitted from the page.

According to The UD and the all-powerful student senate, the only issues we needed to know about concerned the role of Texas Tech in the state's future. The implied reasoning is that the next governor of Texas, a man (or woman) who will be expected to run the government of the entire state for the next four years, should be voted for on the basis of what's best for Texas Tech. Get Real.

Besides the relative insignificance of questions, the integrity of the answers has to be questioned. Does the senate honestly feel that the candidates would have answered the questions in the same way had they been asked by the student governments at Texas, or A&M? Of course not.

Texas Tech has an image problem. It is perceived across the state as the third best public university. Tech is slowly disproving this myth. The quality of its graduates is beginning to be noticed by the rest of the state. Stunts like this one, however, do not tarnish the "Tech High" image. It is hard to say who is to blame. The senate, who are supposed to be our brightest and finest, should have known better.

On the paper's behalf, I applaud the effort. Most great universities have great papers. These papers try to inform the students of the world around them. If The UD intends to become a great school paper, and thus help Tech become a great university, then it must improve on its coverage of events that really affect the Tech student. If this is not possible, then The UD should go back to issues such as Homecoming elections and bike path debates, which it has proven to cover so well.

Teen sex: Promiscuous or safe? Preventing teen pregnancies gets mixed responses

By COURTNEY CHRISTIAN
The University Daily

Battling the increase of teen pregnancy poses conflicting views of how young people should be educated on preventing pregnancy.

A startling statistic shows that more than 1 million teen-age girls in the United States get pregnant every year. The statistic is the largest of any developed nation in the world.

Texas leads the nation in births by 14-year-old girls and younger. Lubbock has the second largest number of teen-age pregnancies in Texas.

Some representatives of teen pregnancy counseling say more sex education and access to contraceptive means will curb teen pregnancy.

"Most American teens do not know the basic facts about birth control or how to get pregnant. There is a basic lack of education," said Melissa Stell, director of patient education at Planned Parenthood in Lubbock.

"It is probably best to ease yourself into the situation of educating your child about sex by having that reading material readily available. A parent can go to the library, look at the bibliography, and pick out some books. A teen will be interested in the title if it is something like Sexuality In Teens, so it would spark some conversation," Stell said.

The most important source of sexuality information is the parent, said Jan Blackwell, executive director of Planned Parenthood in Lubbock. Teens need responsible parent-child communication.

Parents need to develop an environment in which their children can ask questions about sex and other sensitive matters freely. Otherwise, teens are likely to acquire inaccurate and distorted information from other sources, Blackwell said.

"It is a dream of mine that sex education will be compulsive for parents. Parents are asking teachers to do what the parents are not willing to do, and that is a real tragedy. Sex education needs to take place in the family in that particular moral or religious setting," she said.

Blackwell said sex education should be a cognitive building block theory where sex education is first introduced in kindergarten and advances as the child gets older.

"This would help give the children self-esteem and coping skills. Then, when the child is in junior high, he will know who he is, he will like himself, know his body and how it works," she said.

In 1988, more than 46,000 births were accounted to young girls between the ages of 10 and 19 in Texas.

According to the Texas Family Planning Association, teen-agers are awash with misinformation. The end result of this misinformation and the lack of comprehensive education can be serious health consequences including: unintended teen-age pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases.

The TFPA report states that the two key ingredients for the prevention of teen-age pregnancy are teen access to comprehensive sexuality education and teen access to a full range of reproductive health care services.

"If birth control education were available to teens more readily and in more areas than just the Planned Parenthood Clinic, then we might be able to lower the teen-age pregnancy rate," Stell said.

"Our society is afraid of using the word 'sex,' and we still tell the child that he came from mommy's tummy. We are very slow in realizing the child needs to know the truth and not these stories," she said.

A local church official said increased sex education to teens would lead to promiscuity. Making contraceptive means available to anyone should not be accepted in society.

Artificial birth control is wrong, said Bishop Michael Sheehan. "The use of birth control has brought a lot of problems into our society. An attitude of acceptance of birth control has also led to an attitude of sexual permissiveness and infidelity in marriage and problems outside of marriage.

"People are putting their trust in birth control rather than self-control. I don't think that is going to help build the character of those young people. The church teaches there should be a link between the natural sexual act and a commitment of the two people involved that ought not to be interrupted by artificial means," said Sheehan.

"The answer is to teach our young people that they can control themselves. I know that is not always a popular thing for people to hear, but having a greater sense of moral value is a better way to solve the problem. I don't think the solution is to dump an 18-wheeler load of birth control devices into the bathrooms of the public schools."

Bad posture can lead to stress at work

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS
The University Daily

Office workers experiencing discomfort or stress in the work place may be suffering from bad posture or bad office ergonomics, said H.H. Merrifield, chairman of the department of physical therapy at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center.

Ergonomics is a science that seeks to adapt work or working conditions to suit the worker, he said. Unfortunately, atmosphere is being taken into consideration more than smoothly functioning offices.

Office ergonomics range from how tall a chair is to the placement of a computer keyboard and the height of a desk, Merrifield said. When office workers are faced with poor office ergonomics coupled with poor posture, the results can be lower and upper back strains, neck, arm and shoulder muscle aches as well as headaches, he said.

Chairs positioned too high for workers' feet to touch the ground can cause feet and ankle swelling, Merrifield said. How a person fits into a chair can have an important effect on the lower back if there is not enough lumbar support.

A computer keyboard that is too high or low can cause wrist and hand problems. A person's wrist experiences strain when the keyboard is improperly positioned, Merrifield said.

Many people are not aware that the health problems they experience are due to bad posture or poor office ergonomics, he said.

Merrifield said that over the years poor office environments will hurt individuals and possibly cause musculo-skeletal dysfunctions if the individual does not try to adapt the office to his or her individual needs.

Merrifield said that because of intense modernization, little emphasis has been placed on how the individual fits into the office space.

"People need to be educated on good posture and good ergonomics," he said. "By letting people know the outcome of poor posture and bad office ergonomics, individuals can try to better adapt to their office environment and become healthier and more productive employees."

Iraq promises release of more than 100 hostages

By The Associated Press

Iraq on Tuesday promised to free 108 hostages, none of them American, and insisted anew its foreign "guests" are well-treated. Secretary of State James A. Baker III pressed U.S. allies about their willingness to go to war.

The Baghdad government was keeping an eye on Tuesday's midterm elections in the United States. It claimed any slippage in Republican support would reflect a lack of public support for President Bush's Persian Gulf policies.

"The American people will ... ask him why he is sending their sons to be killed in the Arab desert and he will reap the fruits of his mistake," said Iraqi Information Minister Latif Jassim.

In the latest hostage releases, Iraq's official news agency said 77 Japanese nationals would be freed in response to an appeal from former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone. It also said 20 Italians, five Swedes, two Germans, two Portuguese and two Australians would be allowed to leave.

It did not say when the captives would be freed, but some had already begun to assemble at a Baghdad hotel.

They were among thousands of foreigners trapped when Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2. Some had been held at strategic sites as "human shields" against attack.

Iraq has since freed hundreds of captives, but Western governments have expressed growing fears that Iraq's Saddam Hussein is successfully using the hostages to divide the alliance facing him.

Baker, meanwhile, was seeking to strengthen the anti-Iraq coalition. He is in the Mideast to assess support for stronger steps against Iraq, including a possible military strike.

He met Tuesday in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, but there was no immediate word on the outcome. Egypt has sent thousands of troops to join the multinational force assembled in the gulf.

Theater costume collector exhibits Broadway fashions to benefit symphony

By CRISSE McMENNAMY
The University Daily

It has been said that clothes don't make the man, but the impact of fashion on the modern world is undeniable. The concept of clothing has transformed from a simple fig leaf to the expression of one's personality.

Nowhere are vibrant personalities better viewed than on a Broadway stage. The costumes of Broadway have ranged from sailor suits to wedding dresses — not to mention the occasional cat or flapper. Their pageantry is obvious, because each costume is designed to catch the attention of the audience, even those sitting in the back.

"The interesting thing is that these costumes are beautiful from the stage, because they're an illusion," said Hal Oakley, director of special events for Revlon. "They are created and constructed to take a lot of wear and tear, and if you use the finest fabrics, you'll be lucky if they last one show. The entire Broadway production is an illusion, and I think that's why people go to the theater — to escape."

If New York is too far to travel to see some of these costumes, perhaps the Depot 19th St. Warehouse isn't too great a distance to drive. Several original costumes and music from the stage will be featured in a fashion show at 6:30 p.m. today at the Warehouse, 19th Street and Avenue G.

The show, "An American Celebration: Tribute To Hollywood," is a joint effort of Dillard's and Alexandra de Markoff to launch a new product by the name of Custom Cream. Tickets for the event are $20, and all proceeds will benefit the Lubbock Symphony Guild, Inc.

Many of the costumes to be modeled are from Oakley's personal collection. Oakley, who has performed in such musicals as "Brigadoon," "The King and I" and "The Sound of Music," left the stage 23 years ago to work with Revlon, but he says his love for the fashions of the stage never ceased.

Among the featured costumes, which will be modeled by the Lubbock Symphony Debs, is the wedding dress worn by Mary Martin, who passed away earlier this week, in "The Sound of Music." For Oakley, who performed with Martin, this feature will be one of the more important in the show.

"I'm hoping that I am performer enough to announce Mary Martin's wedding dress without breaking down," Oakley said. "We've lost someone who was everything that you saw. She was a cock-eyed optimist and an excellent performer, and I will miss her dearly."

Other costumes to be included in the event are the tiered white eyelet dress from Kate Pemberton's role in "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," the flapper dresses from "No, No Nanette" and a fringed western suit from "Annie Get Your Gun."

Like every collector, Oakley is not without his favorite treasure.

"I really love the three flappers. I don't know if it's that they're from the 1920s and old and beautiful, or that they're just fun," Oakley said.

This collection has been assembled not only as a promotional agent, but also as a tribute to the musicals' writers, directors and costume designers.

"I was delighted to find that this would benefit the Lubbock Symphony," Oakley said. "The people of Lubbock seem to be interested in all sorts of music and art, and I think they do themselves a disservice by saying 'We're smaller, but we try harder.'"

Killer bees enter South Texas without any fanfare

By N.Y. Times News Service

Weslaco — There is no talk of killer bees at Andy's Cafe 2 here, no panicked calls to the city hall in nearby Alamo, not even a mention of the bee invasion in The Beeville Bee-Picayune.

But over the next few years, the Africanized honey bees will have a dramatic impact on beekeepers and agriculture as they cause a reduction in both honey production and pollination.

And their long-awaited arrival here in the Lower Rio Grande Valley set off speculation about the possible effects on everything from lawsuits to wearers of beeswax-based hair replacement systems.

Still, after years of films like "The Swarm," and "Saturday Night Live" skits of John Belushi in killer bee regalia snarling "Your pollen or your wife," the bees' arrival has been something of a welcome anticlimax.

"Here in the Valley, people have been anticipating this for so long, people are just sick of hearing about it," said Dave Mayes, with the department of agricultural communications at Texas A&M University. "People know more about the bees, and their anxiety level has decreased."

The relaxed response is likely to change as the bees become more prevalent and as stings are reported. Beekeepers view them as serious threats to the $150 million in honey produced in the United States annually and to the up to $10 billion in American agricultural products that bees help pollinate.

Still, when the first swarm of aggressive bees finally buzzed into Texas, their debut played out here much as their spread across the country probably will — an epochal event for beekeepers and a real, but minor, risk for the general public.

Officials from the U.S. Department of Agriculture confirmed Thursday that a 3,000-bee swarm of Africanized honey bees was found and then destroyed in one of the department's pulp-paper traps about a mile north of the Rio Grande.

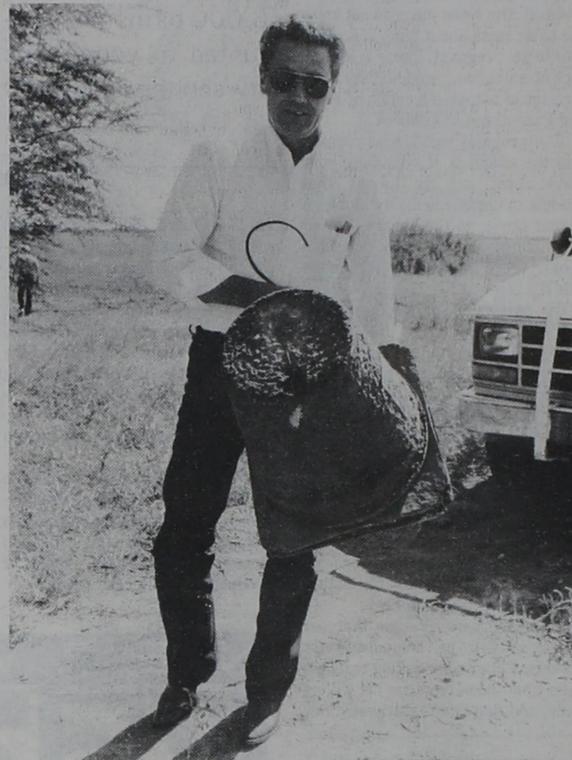

The discovery means that 33 years after African bees were inadvertently let loose in Brazil, the aggressive strain has entered the United States.

Although the Africanized bees' sting is no worse than that of other bees, the bees are extremely aggressive in defending their hives and have the potential to attack and sting in angry swarms.

There are no precise figures on fatalities. The government of Mexico says at least 16 people have been killed by the bees in the past three years, and some experts estimate that 700 to 1,000 people have been killed by stings since 1957, when the bees escaped from a Brazilian breeding experiment and started heading north at about 200 miles a year.

For the most part, the bees' arrival in South Texas was met with yawns.

"I saw it in the paper, but I just read past it," said Jesse Delgado,

They're Here

John Thomas, a Texas A&M University entomologist, inspects a bee trap at a site in southern Texas where a swarm of Africanized bees was found.

manager of Andy's Cafe 2, a popular Mexican restaurant. "No one has even mentioned it."

A hotline set up to give out information on the bees received only about 15 calls, most from nervous residents who wondered if hives near their homes could contain the Africanized bees.

But John Thomas, a Texas A&M entomologist, said some people are so panicked by the thought of the bees they are in a constant state of anxiety about their arrival.

"I still get calls, primarily from elderly widows, wanting to know when it's going to get to Corpus Christi, or when it's going to get to Houston, and how far north it will go," Thomas said.

"They want to sell their homes and move to St. Louis or Kansas City or Chicago before the real estate market crashes because of the bee panic in San Antonio."

In Houston, Tom Magliario of Tom Magliario's Hair Additions, says he worries that Africanized bees might attack the 60 to 80 clients of his who have used beeswax to attach new hairs to thicken existing ones in thinning areas.

He raised the specter of a terrified client driving along in a convertible with a 3-pound swarm of Africanized bees chasing his hair.

UC starts new music catalog service

By COURTNEY CHRISTIAN
The University Daily

Dallas entrepreneur Edward King, in cooperation with the University Center, has made shopping for records, CDs and cassettes more convenient for Texas Tech students.

The Music Exchange in the UC's Raider Express will provide a convenient way for students to shop for current music through catalogs. The Exchange offers students discount prices and a fast delivery date for complete collections of albums as well as the newest music releases.

"Our Raider Express staff will compile all orders by 12:30 p.m. and fax the orders to Dallas. (King) will pull his stock or go to warehouses, fill the orders and send them out using the United Parcel Service. The orders will be here the next day," said Tom Shubert, UC director.

"The Raider Express is so full, there is hardly room to turn around," he said. "Our space is limited, so this catalog ordering service fits our capabilities for offering any kind of music selection."

The catalogs offer the newest music, and students can order an album before its official release.

The discounts vary because special sales are offered on certain albums. The average discount is about $3 off regular prices.

"A student does not have to buy three and get one free. There are no gimmicks," Shubert said. "This is just an easy and convenient way for students, especially Tech dorm residents, to buy albums without driving across town."

If the album a student orders does not arrive the next day, the Music Exchange will give the student three choices as compensation for the missed order. A student can either receive a full refund, receive music bucks (a coupon for the amount spent refundable for albums purchased at a future date) or make another order at the same price.

Vonnegut uses black humor in futuristic story

By The Associated Press

The year is 2001. Eugene Debs Harkke, Vietnam veteran and college professor who is the protagonist of "Hocus Pocus," is awaiting trial for "supposedly having masterminded a mass prison break."

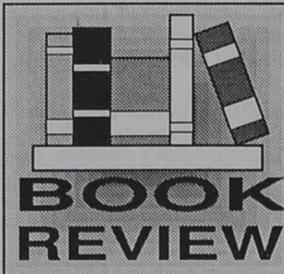

He tries to pass the time by telling what might become of us if humanity does not change course.

So, before the reader starts Kurt Vonnegut's latest novel, it's helpful to know what will soon be missing — namely, the Amazon rainforest and the Waldorf Astoria. Other things would change dramatically: Prisons would be run by Japanese, Budweiser beer would be controlled by Italians, and the "Encyclopaedia Britannica," although still published in Chicago, would be in the hands of a mysterious Egyptian arms dealer living in Switzerland.

But some things will never change. Oil spills and the defiling of the environment would continue, as would the collapse of savings institutions; and America would become a "bankrupt nation whose assets had been sold off to foreigners."

Writing much like Mark Twain with a pen heated in hell, Vonnegut goes forth and back, telling his story of the last part of the 20th century and displaying a moral outrage tinted by black humor ("The truth can be very funny in an awful way," says the protagonist).

The result is a wonderful novel, full of epitaphs for a lost world, and the sad conviction that only a writer able to don the mask of a clown could be taken seriously.

Alley's whining makes 'Sibling' flick candidate for worst movie ever made

By KIRK BAIRD-PARKS
The University Daily

A comedy of errors is one of the more difficult films to pull off. It's also one of the more boring and predictable.

It usually involves several plots going on simultaneously that merge in a frantic ending which ties up all the loose ends and finishes on a happy note for everyone.

"Sibling Rivalry" tries desperately to be this type of film but fails on every level imaginable.

Director Carl Reiner, who directed Steve Martin in Martin's early films ("The Jerk," "The Man With Two Brains" and "All of Me"), shows himself to be less capable of competency at the directorial helm.

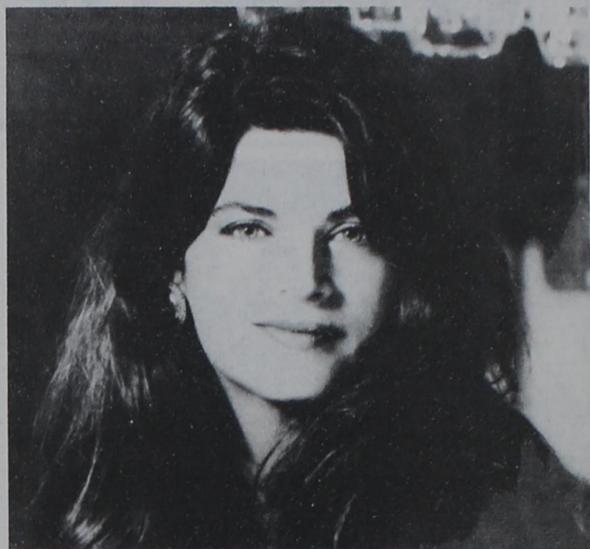

His last film, "Bert Rigby, You're a Fool," was a commercial flop and "Sibling Rivalry" just set a new personal low. Without an improvising comedic force like Martin, Reiner seems lost as to what his cast should do. Unfortunately, so do they.

The primary plot of the film focuses on an uninspired housewife (Kirstie Alley) yearning to be free from her prison of a marriage. She loves her husband (Scott Bakula) and doesn't want to leave him, but he is slowly poisoning her with his boring life, his work and his nosey family.

Bill Pullman plays an earnest but inept salesman whose brother (Ed O'Neill) is up for the position of police chief.

Without revealing too much of this lame story, Pullman and Alley cross paths after Pullman discovers Alley's brother-in-law (Sam Elliot) dead in a hotel room. Elliot died of a heart attack after having sex with Alley.

The pair find themselves trying to decide what to do about the corpse and how to conceal it from the police. The film drops off into a muddle of misadventures that even a preschooler would find trivial and uninteresting.

Cry Baby

Kirstie Alley whines her way through her newest film "Sibling Rivalry," and the result is not pretty.

The acting doesn't save the day. Alley becomes wretchedly bad as her narcissist whining draws attention away from other goings-on and highlights her hamming ability for the screen. This is her worst role yet.

Pullman is miscast in a role requiring physical comedy. What happened to his career after his great turn as a doctor investigating voodoo in "The Serpent and the Rainbow?"

How bad is "Sibling Rivalry?" The only thing "Sibling Rivalry" rivals is history's worst film. Everyone involved in this debacle should consider this movie a film-career re-evaluator. ♪

Fall softball winners proclaimed

Another season of fall softball went down in the history book as new champions were proclaimed. The Men's semi-final action had Keel easily handling the Thrashers 12-2 in four innings of play, scoring six of their runs in the first inning. In the other semi-final match-up, a new comer to the final four, the Regulators came from behind in the bottom of the seventh to knock off The Other Guys 10-8. The Regulators first All University game did not turn the results they had hoped for as they challenged last year's champions, Keel. Keel jumped out to a 4-1 lead in the first inning, adding two more runs in the second and two in the third. The Regulators could score no more than one run in a single inning causing them to fall short, 8-4 to Keel.

The Women's action saw The Other Girls capture their title after easily dominating the Zoomba Warriors 17-2. Zoomba's only two runs came in the second inning while The Other Girls continued to score more each inning as they progressed through the game.

Co-Rec action witnessed another new comer to the winners' circle as the Sox easily dominated The Other Team 19-9 to capture their first title. The Other Team advanced to the finals after downing last year's champions, the Blazers, 14-7 in semi final action and the Sox squeaked by Zoomba Warriors 6-5. In All University action the Sox jumped out to a 1-0 lead, never to relinquish that lead.

Campus Community action also came to a close as the F-6's defeated the Boilerplates 5-1 for their title. The Watchamacalits dominated MS-I 12-2 in Campus Community Co-Rec to take their division.

Flag football All-University results

Rec Sports concluded the 1990 flag football season Sunday, Nov. 4 on a cold, blustery day in Jones Stadium. Four All-University champions were crowned. The Campus Community championship pitted the Candidates versus MS II's. MS II's held a 7-2 lead going into the second half. Brad Pursley led the Candidates comeback with two touchdown passes, an 11-yard pass to Tony Jones and a one-yard toss to Kelly Robinson as the Candidates squeezed out a 16-7 victory.

Stark went into the Women's All-U games feeling confident by virtue of allowing no points scored during the playoffs. Powerhouse struck quick and early for touchdown passes of 65 and 70 yards caught by Stephanie Scott as Powerhouse powered to a 13-0 victory.

Perennial power Zoomba Warriors once again flexed their muscles in the Co-Rec final. Zoomba Warriors streaked out to a 13-0 halftime lead on a 50-yard field goal by Jimmy Orr and a seven-yard pass from Matt Noffke to Stephanie Wilde. Tom Allen led the Pyzons' second-half comeback that fell short. Allen's 35 yard touchdown pass to Robert Camp rounded out the game's scoring. Final score Zoomba Warriors 13, Pyzons 6.

The Men's All-University game pitted two teams who are very familiar with each other. The All-Greek champion Phi Delta Theta against Sigma Chi. The Phi Dels defeated Sigma Chi both in regular season play and for the All-Greek title. But to defeat a quality opponent three times in a season proved disastrous for the Phi Dels Sunday. Jim Nolan shocked the crowd with an electrifying 75-yard run, then later with a nifty 15-yard wun leading Sigma Chi to a 14-0 halftime lead. The Phi Dels countered with a 10-yard pass from Maynard to Pierce. Sigma Chi added another 16-yard run by Brent Murphy to close out the scoring for the day. Final score Sigma Chi 21, Phi Delta Theta 7.

TCU happy with Triple Shoot Blackwell becomes a bigger part of Frog attack

By ANDREW HARRIS
The University Daily

Texas Christian tight end Kelly Blackwell, who primarily has served as a blocker during his career as a Horned Frog, has in the past opened holes for great TCU running backs such as Kenneth Davis and Tony Jeffery.

But this season, Blackwell's duties have changed from a constant blocker to a legitimate pass-catching threat.

The 6-foot-3, 238-pound junior from Richland Hills, has emerged as one of the premier tight ends in the nation, hauling in 50 passes for 668 yards and four touchdowns so far in 1990, ranking him third in receiving in the Southwest Conference.

Blackwell said the constant passing style of the Frogs' Triple Shoot offense is better suited for him than their former offense, the Veer.

"I like to be able to catch the ball," Blackwell said. "Blocking is alright, but you also like to have a little glory involved, so I really like the Triple Shoot."

"I think it is a lot better attack against defenses because it spreads the defense out and really exploits some weaknesses, whereas the Veer is hard to execute because of the athletes teams are getting on defense."

Because of the Triple Shoot's emphasis on passing, tight ends do not normally catch many passes. But Blackwell said he could not have predicted he would catch as many passes as he has so far this season.

"It is always nice to have the opportunity to catch the ball as many times as I have," Blackwell said. "I just like to have the ball thrown to me."

In last week's 56-35 loss to Houston, Blackwell caught eight passes for 154 yards, one of five Horned Frog receivers to catch passes for more than 100 yards.

Junior quarterback Matt Vogler, subbing for the injured Leon Clay, and the TCU offense set eight NCAA records in a losing effort against the Cougars.

Blackwell said it was disappointing to lose to Houston after the offense played so well and scored 35 points.

"It really was a disappointment," Blackwell said. "But it was also something that the offense didn't necessarily control."

"But you win as a team and you lose as a team, and therefore, we lost the game," Blackwell said. "All the records in the world don't really matter when you lose. It's as long as you win the game, because that's what goes down in the books."

Blackwell has already surpassed last year's statistics of 33 receptions for 389 and two touchdowns — good enough to earn him second-team all-SWC honors a year ago.

Blackwell

The Frogs are 5-3 overall and 3-2 in conference play so far this season and were ranked No. 24 in the Associated Press Top 25 poll earlier this season.

Blackwell said TCU was not overconfident going into the Oct. 27 contest against the Baylor Bears, which the Horned Frogs lost 27-21.

"I just think we didn't play well against Baylor," Blackwell said. "Everybody has their bad days and that was our worst day of the year."

"Our offense really wasn't productive and we just happened not to be able to pull that one out in the fourth quarter."

Blackwell said the Frogs won't concentrate as much on passing when they face Texas Tech at 2 p.m. Saturday in Fort Worth.

"I think it is going to be more of a balanced attack and not as much throwing as what happened against Houston," Blackwell said. "We would like to try and establish the running game."

Vogler's record-setting outing earns weekly honor

By The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Matt Vogler figured he would spend the rest of the season on the bench as Leon Clay led the Texas Christian Horned Frogs to one comeback after another.

That was before Clay broke his thumb two weeks ago in a 27-21 loss to Baylor.

Vogler, a junior transfer from Auburn, got the call against the Houston Cougars on Saturday and he did something no quarterback had ever done before: passed for 690 yards in one game.

Vogler earned The Associated Press' Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week award for the performance. He became the first to win the honor with a losing team.

The AP's SWC Defensive Player

Vogler

of the Week honor went to Boone Powell, a linebacker for the University of Texas. Powell broke open a tight game in Lubbock by returning an interception for a touchdown and making a crucial sack that led to a blocked field goal in the Longhorns' 41-22 victory over the Red Raiders.

TCU lost 56-35 to the unbeaten Cougars but not before giving them a big scare.

Vogler left a trail of shattered NCAA records. He had 44 completions on an NCAA-record 79 attempts. His five touchdown passes tied a school record. The passes went 80, 88, 5, 9 and 15 yards.

"We've found a confident quarterback and the team has confidence in him," said TCU coach Jim Wacker. "Vogler did a tremendous job. And I think it also shows that our triple shoot offense is for real."

TCU became the first team to out-pass Houston (690-563) since the Cougars began running the run-and-shoot offense.

"It was a fun game," Vogler said. "I've got mixed feelings, of course, because I wish we could have won. We gave it a great shot."

Vogler started TCU's second game of the season but lost the job when Clay came off the bench to rally the Frogs to a come-from-behind victory over Missouri.

"I tried to make the most of my opportunity," Vogler said.

TCU's school-record 739 yards in total offense was an NCAA record for a losing team.

"This is not a good time to be a defensive coordinator in college football," Wacker said.

It's the third time a TCU player has won Offensive Player of the Week honors this year.

Jenkins, Coogs ready for Texas; thinking national championship

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Cougars lined up as the No. 3 team in the nation Tuesday, but coach John Jenkins said he's more concerned about the season's wind up.

"We're a rock's throw of winning the national championship with three games remaining and the greatest opportunity for us comes Saturday," Jenkins said. "It's not the lineup that counts, it's where you wind up."

The Cougars (8-0) are the only NCAA Division I unbeaten, untied team in the nation and they'll carry a 12-game winning streak, the longest in the nation, into Saturday's game against No. 14 Texas (6-1).

Houston is 7-0 and Texas is 4-0 in Southwest Conference games.

"We take it as a challenge that all of the voters (in the Associated Press poll) are out there saying, 'Not so fast; we'll see if you're the No. 1 team on Saturday. Show us,'" Jenkins said. "That's the message I'll relay to the squad so let's tee it up and let it happen."

Houston is in the final year of a three-year NCAA probation sentence that will prevent them from playing in a bowl game but Jenkins thinks it would be good for the SWC for the Cougars to win the national title.

"The greatest thing that could happen to this league would be for Houston to win the national title and for the Cotton Bowl representative to have a good showing," Jenkins said.

Houston has beaten Texas 60-40, 66-15 and 47-9 the past three years and Jenkins has special memories of the Cougars' 60-40 victory in 1987.

"This offense (run-and-shoot) finally took its place against Texas in 1987," Jenkins said. "That was the beginning of this era. Since that time we've had a 29-5-1 record. I guess we have a sentimental attachment to this game, like a reunion."

Jenkins said he has a job to do in getting his team ready to play the Longhorns.

The Cougars' No. 3 ranking is their highest since they reached a No. 2 ranking in the AP poll in 1967.

Raider roundball tips off Thursday night

The Texas Tech men's basketball team will take on the Oklahoma Athletes in Action in an exhibition game at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Fans will be able to attend the game free of charge, and the first 1,000 people to enter the Coliseum will receive a 1990-91 Red Raider basketball poster, featuring Tech sophomore forward Will Flemons, senior center/forward Steve Miles and senior guard Jonny Grusing.

Texas Tech Athletic Ticket Manager Carol Baker announced Tuesday that Student Basketball Coupon Booklets are currently on sale at the Athletic Ticket Office at the north end of Jones Stadium.

The price for the booklet is $37.50 and includes admission to all Raider men's basketball home games, plus all women's games and the entire 1991 Tech home baseball games.

Track stars claim drug testing unfair

LONDON (AP) — Two U.S. world-record holders — former Texas A&M track star Randy Barnes and runner Butch Reynolds — accused track and field's worldwide bosses of shoddy drug testing procedures in the sport's biggest drug bust since Ben Johnson.

While awaiting word Tuesday on when they can appeal the positive test results, both face two-year suspensions that could keep them out of the 1992 Summer Olympics at Barcelona.

Johnson was stripped of his 100-meter gold medal for using steroids at the 1988 Seoul Games and has just come off a two-year suspension.

Both Barnes and Reynolds flunked initial drug tests after meets last August as well as the backup tests administered as a failsafe, the IAAF said in announcing the suspensions on Monday from London. The IAAF is the world governing body of track and field.

Justice named season's top NL rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Justice, who began the season in the minors and blossomed into baseball's best baby boomer, was the near-unanimous choice Tuesday as National League rookie of the year.

Justice hit 28 homers for the Atlanta Braves, most of them after he took over in right field when Dale Murphy was traded in early August. Justice batted .282 with 78 RBIs in 127 games.

Justice received 23 of 24 first-place votes for 118 points. Montreal second baseman Delino DeShields got the other first-place vote and had 60 points.

proved its season record to 26-2 as it easily downed Southwest Conference foe Rice in a Tuesday night match-up in the Tech Student Recreation Center.

The Red Raiders won the match in three games 15-5, 15-10 and 15-5 in front of a crowd of 462.

Tech now holds the second spot in the conference behind Texas with a 7-2 mark in league matches.

Coach Mike Jones said he was not looking at the Owls as an automatic win considering they beat A&M, who has been a tough competitor for the Raiders this season.

"We were ready," Junior outside hitter Andrea Ventura said about Rice, who now stands 10-18 overall.

"We were ready in all areas. We were both physically prepared and mentally prepared."

Jones took advantage of the dominating play Tech had over Rice as he had a chance to alternate his players, just as he did at the UTEP Tournament last weekend.

The Raiders gained control of the third and final game early as they jumped to a 10-1 lead with the help of three kills by Ventura.

Ventura had a total of eight kills, despite only appearing in the last game of the evening.

Ventura Kaaiai

Tech ended the match as the Owls choked on the Raiders' final serve and could not manage to get the ball over the net.

Freshman middle blocker Erica Ruegg led the team in kills with a total of 10 for the evening. She also had 18 total attempts and only committed two hitting errors.

Sophomore setter Rochelle Kaaiai had the team-high hitting percentage with a mark of .666.

tempts and 12 defensive digs.

The win for the Raiders not only improved their record, but was another step in the right direction as they try to win-out their schedule in an effort to receive an invitation to the NCAA Tournament.

"We have a lot of confidence that we will get the bid," Ventura said. "We talk about it quite a bit because it's one of our goals."

"I feel really good. I think we accomplished a lot as a team. I knew we would do well."

Tech moved up in the AVCA/Tachikara Top Twenty Coaches Poll this week, going from the No. 17 spot to the No. 16 spot.

Tech fell in the NCAA Top Twenty Volleyball Poll, however, moving from the No. 12 spot to the No. 13 spot this week.

The Raiders will break from their conference play on Monday as they host Southwest Texas in the Student Recreation Center. Tech finishes its league play for the year with a home match against Houston on Nov. 16.

New ballpark hits roadblock; Arlington residents oppose tax

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers' plan to build a new stadium is coming up against a couple of hurdles — a group of residents who are opposed to a half-cent sales tax to fund the ball park and the need for legislative approval of the tax.

Team officials did not disclose the need for the Legislature's approval of the extra sales tax levy because they consider it routine, Dallas Morning News columnist Kevin B. Blackstone reported Tuesday. But lawmakers say the stadium deal is anything but a done deal.

State law restricts what sales-tax increases can be used for in municipalities and counties, limiting them to government operations, public transit systems or economic development.

"There's no way a sports arena can fall into the category of economic development," said state Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

"You would have to come to the Legislature for some sort of authority to levy a half-penny," he told Blackstone.

A group of Arlington residents hopes the tax proposal never makes it past the Legislature. They have formed a group to oppose the half-cent sales tax increase the city is seeking to build a new stadium for the Rangers.

City council members said they believe most Arlington residents are willing to pay for the $165 million stadium complex, which will include a river walk, Little League ballpark and other entertainment facilities.

"I don't believe they have much support for what they're doing," Mayor Richard Greene said.

Arlington residents will vote in January on whether to enact the sales tax increase.

A half-cent increase in the sales tax, to 7.75 percent, would cost a family of four with a household income of $35,000 about $50 a year, city officials say.

TO GEORGE,
COLLEGE IS ALL
GOLF AND CHAMPAIGN.

Champaign, as in Champaign, Illinois, where George Sakas is a Master's Degree candidate at the University of Illinois.

And Golf, as in George's 1987 Volkswagen Golf.

"This car's great to drive. We've taken it on road trips to Florida and all over the Midwest. Golf's got that special, solid Volkswagen feel." (Hey George, the word is Fahrvergnügen!)

"Golf's got lots of room for friends. And its hatchback design has come in handy for the many times I've moved."

For practicality, performance and the fun of Fahrvergnügen, take it from George.

And take up Golf.
