Debaters Win Top Trophy

Tech debaters have returned from Boulder, Colo., with a first place trophy.

Bruce Roberson, Lubbock freshman, and David Bradley, Dennison freshman, competed against 22 other schools to take the trophy in the junior division of debate.

Twelve Tech debaters and three judges traveled to snowy Colorado last weekend to participate in the Colorado University Forensic Tournament.

The team of Janine Coats, Amarillo junior, and Hall Upchurch, Kermit junior, were fourth in senior debate. Coats also competed with more than 50 students to place third in extemporaneous speaking.

Girls' Team Will Select 45 Members

Final selection of 45 members for the new Army ROTC girls' drill team will be Wednesday afternoon, Col. B. W. Paden, professor of military science, said Monday.

Applicants will appear before a selection panel which will judge them on appearance, poise, scholastic standing and campus activities. Applicants must have an overall 2.0 grade average.

The selection panel will be composed of three members of the Assn. of Women Students, three AROTC cadet battalion commanders and two members of the Army instructor unit.

First stage of selection, the ability to drill, has already been completed.

The group received approval Friday of the Society of Student Organizations, governing body of campus organizations, to proceed with selections.

Wednesday interviews will be 4-6 p.m. in the Social Science Bldg., room 13.

that participated in the tournament included teams from South Dakota, Utah, Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico and Arizona, as well as Colorado and Texas.

Tournament Judges

Debate coach James Robbins, Janie Stennett, Midland graduate, and Ava Robbins, Lubbock senior, participated in the tournament as judges.

This weekend the debaters will go in two directions for tournaments. Two teams will travel to Wichita, Kan., for the University of Wichita tournament, and two will go to an Abilene Christian College tournament.

The debate topic for this year is "Resolved: That the Federal Government Should Establish a National Program of Public Work for the Unemployed."

Annual 'Roast' Slated By Ags

Approximately $50,000 in academic awards will be announced at 6 p.m. today at the 37th annual Aggie Pig Roast.

Dr. James Bennett, sponsor of the event, estimates 50 men will receive recognition for scholarships, graduate research assistantships and fellowships. Various agricultural judging teams will also be honored.

Dean of Agriculture, Dr. Gerald Thomas, and Bennett will make short addresses to the convocation in the Aggie Pavilion. Guests will include members of the Aggie Club, men from industry and School of Agriculture and administration officials.

With Mail-In Ballots

Name-Change Poll Will Begin Today

The Joint Name-Change Committee will begin a concentrated campaign today to record the opinions of students, faculty members and interested persons on the current name-change controversy.

According to Thomas Burtis, committee secretary, new literature has been printed which includes a mail-in ballot where persons may indicate their three choices for the names they think would be the most advantageous for the future of Tech.

Encourage Groups

"The first of these new ballots will be distributed at the committee's regular meeting at noon today," said Burtis, "and we are encouraging all campus groups to send a representative to pick up enough cards to poll their entire organization."

The committee will meet at the Episcopal Student Center, Seaman Hall, 2407 16th St.

The new ballot, unlike those distributed by the committee last year, will offer eight name choices and a write-in blank.

Voters are asked to list their first, second and third choices for the names they believe will help the school the most.

Eight Names

The eight names are Texas State University; The Texas State University; Texas State University of Arts, Science and Technology; Texas State University and Technological College; University of the Southwest; Trans-Texas University; University of Texas at Lubbock; and Texas University of Arts, Science and Technology.

Burtis explained that there would be no variations of "Texas Tech" offered on the ballot because "...we feel that this name would do more damage to the school than good, and we would rather focus our attention on a name that would not be a contradiction, but rather a descriptive and appropriate name for this institution."

Favors Retention

"However," he continued, "the committee still favors the retention of the Double T symbol and

'Tech' as a nickname, but we believe that any 'Tech University' is unfavorable for a formal name."

The polling will take several weeks to complete, but the committee hopes to have some substantial results tabulated and ready for publication before Friday.

'Tempest' To Draw 3,600 Before Close

Shakespeare's "The Tempest" will have drawn from 3,500 to 3,600 viewers following its last performance next Saturday, according to Dr. Paul Larson, head of the Speech Dept.

In addition to three previously scheduled hold-over performances for the latter part of this week, another showing is on tap for Friday evening, the University Theater announced Monday.

Still Available

Approximately 300 tickets are still available for Friday and 70 for Saturday. Wednesday and Thursday are already sold out.

Reservations not picked up by 5 p.m. the night of the performance will be resold. The University Theater reports that about 20 tickets each night have not been picked up and have been resold after 5 p.m.

Resale tickets must be bought at the ticket office, and phone sales will not be accepted.

'Better Response'

Ticket sales have been "surprisingly good," according to Larson. "We have had much better response for 'The Tempest' than any other production," he said. About three-fourths of those attending each night have been students.

Tickets are 50 cents for students and $1.50 for non-students. Only one ticket will be sold for each ID card. All four performances begin at 8:15 p.m.

Deadline Falls For '64 Floats

Deadline for '64 Homecoming float entries is today.

New applicants may contact Larry Carter at the Ex-Students Office for trailer and building site information.

The Homecoming Committee has also set this date for the last Parade Committee meeting. Float chairmen will draw for positions, numbers will be distributed and final instructions will be given at 5 p.m. in the Tech Union Blue Room.

—At 7:30 P.M. Today—

Festival Stars Rathbone

Basil Rathbone, stage and screen star, brings his one-man presentation, "In and Out of Character," to the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium stage at 7:30 p.m. today.

Rathbone's program is a Fine Arts Festival event sponsored by the Special Events Committee of Tech Union.

The presentation begins with Rathbone's reminiscence of his theater career and proceeds to a poetry session. He believes that poetry is to be performed rather than read.

Dramatic Readings

Rathbone closes the evening with dramatic readings from William Shakespeare. He has played 52 roles in 23 of Shakespeare's works and is one of the foremost interpreters of Shakespeare on the current theatrical scene.

"Shakespeare's plays and interpretation cannot be taught in school. They must be learned on a stage," he says.

An all-school reception for Rathbone is scheduled from 4-5:30 p.m. today in the Coronado Room of Tech Union. This reception affords Techsians an opportunity to meet the actor.

Presents Awards

At the reception Rathbone will present first, second and third place awards to winners of a Sigma Tau Delta-sponsored essay contest on Shakespeare.

Also as a part of the Fine Arts Festival, Ronald Schulz, associate professor of speech, will speak on "The Tempest" at a coffee hour at 11 a.m. today in the Union.

"Hamlet," starring Laurence Olivier and Jean Simmons will be shown at 4 p.m. today in the Coronado Room of the Union.

"Julius Caesar," starring Charleston Heston and David Bradley, will be shown 4 and 7 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in the Coronado Room of Tech Union.

Texas Tech's Chamber Orchestra will present a concert at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the Library foyer.

'Young Lovers' Tries For Double Purpose

By NANCY MILLER
Fine Arts Editor

"The Young Lovers," currently showing at the Arnett-Benson, gives the impression of having been filmed with a dual purpose — to show that Hollywood is capable of making an art movie and to keep the censors happy.

As an art movie, it misses the mark entirely. Even though it is shot in black and white and it deals with sex, it just is not convincing.

Cast Trouble

Part of the trouble lies with the cast. Its principal characters, played self-consciously by Peter Fonda and Sharon Hugueny, wander about dazedly muttering clichés that run from "Who would you like to be if you were anyone but yourself," to "What are you afraid of?"

There is no apparent reason for any of their actions—when Pam (Miss Hugueny) decides to give in to Eddie (Fonda), she takes the step as casually as if she were buying a new dress. There is no inner struggle, no soul searching.

No Maturity

And, when she inevitably becomes pregnant, Eddie never is able to muster the maturity to take any sort of stand. He is emotional about the whole thing, but the viewer looks in vain for any sort of decision on his part.

This sort of pointlessness might have made a point in itself, had it been handled with a little more subtlety by an actor and actress with a wider range of talent. But Fonda and Miss Hugueny never seem to be able to get themselves in hand, and the whole thing simply cries for someone with a little experience to step in and give it direction.

Happy Censors

The censors should be happy, though. The story never takes any sort of a stand on premarital sex. It tiptoes around the subject as if the scriptwriter was haunted by visions of his spinster aunt. And the subject of abortion—well, it's anyone's guess whether or not Pam goes through with it.

The hopelessness of the movie and its many flaws can be best described in an account of a short scene between supporting players Nick Adams and Deborah Walley.

Initial Shock

When Miss Walley decides — again for no apparent reason—to consummate her relationship with Adams, she corners him in a bathroom and informs him of her decision. After the initial shock, he takes her into the living room of his apartment, where a party is in full swing, and they waltz amidst huge piles of balloons.

The scene fades—and that is the last we see of Miss Walley.

In short, the movie leaves no clear impression, takes no stand and is acted in an amateurish manner. It is to be hoped that the next time Hollywood tries to make a slice-of-life movie, they will get a better cast and hire a script writer who isn't quite so nervous.

Students Give Music Recital

The Music Dept. will present students in a recital at 4:05 p.m. today at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1510 Ave. X.

The program will open with Bach's Prelude and Fuge in B Flat Major for organ played by Becky Bishop. This will be followed by the aria "Komm, leite mich" from Bach's Cantata 175, sung by Roya Harris and accompanied by Kent Hill.

The program will continue with the first performance of a student baroque ensemble composed of Salli Ann Manicapelli, violin; Billy Watt, flute; Robert Ashby, cello; and Beverly Barton, harpsichord. The ensemble will play the Quartett in E Minor by Telemann.

Vicki Pharr, organist, will then perform the "Dorian Toccata" by Bach and Miss Manicapelli will play "Meditation" from Massenet's "Thais" and the maestro movement from Concerto No. 15 for violin and orchestra by Viotti.

The program will also feature the Sonata in C Minor by Handel performed by James Bureson, Ashby and Hill, and will end with the Concerto Grosso in B Minor by Meck. This work will be performed by Gene Pickens, organist.

-No Shangri-La-

Girls Use Cunning, Brute Force To Beat 'Goofs' In Dorm Plans

By NANCY MILLER
Fine Arts Editor

Life in the new dorms, judging by the number of complaints, ranks as something less than a vacation in Shangri-La.

According to many residents, the wide expanse of glass and graceful arches hide many minor engineering mishaps, with which the girls have contended in a manner sometimes less than ladylike. Cunning, ingenuity and brute force are brought into play in the battle against balky beds, too few dryers, bad lighting and irregularly shaped mattresses.

A Migrant Feeling

The location of the dorm seems to be the most frequent complaint. In order to get to class, residents must leave the dorm at least 20 minutes before class time and forge across plowed fields, dusty roads and wide grassy plains that take on the character of a rice paddy after rains.

It's three-quarters of a mile from Clement to the Textile Bldg., which means that most coeds can count on tramping at least a mile a day. Complaints regarding the distance have been loud and harsh, and girls who have considered setting up pup tents in the middle of the circle have been deterred only by the fear that the security police would issue them a ticket for parking in an unlicensed area.

All Is Not Well

Inside the dorm, all seems well—on the surface. It is not until a girl moves into a room and tries to make up the bed that the difficulties begin. To the casual observer, the beds seem nice and wide—and they are. Just wide enough to split a contour sheet. Anyone foolhardy enough to try to put a standard-size sheet on a Clement-Hulen-size bed had better bring a crowbar and at least two other people.

Tactics for combating the irregular mattresses include having one person sit squarely in the middle of the bed while another bends the mattress back and a third deftly slips the contour sheet over the end of the bed. Ripped sheets and short tempers have taken their toll.

The Bed Fight

Another problem arises when the coed tries to push the freshly-made bed back into the wall. The backs of the beds, while comfortable to lean against, are too low, and pushing a bed into a wall every morning nearly equals the workout prescribed in a Charles Atlas course.

The room reserved for the washing and drying of clothes represents another major area of discontent. The 500 inhabitants of Clement have four dryers among them, and several pitched battles have occurred over who was next in line to dry clothes. It is impossible to hang the dripping clothes out of the windows—they don't open.

Endurance

Air conditioning offers a good test of endurance for Clement coeds. The thermostat which regulates the temperature of rooms on an entire wing is located in one girl's room, and if the girl happens to like to sleep in -50 degree temperatures, the rest of the wing either learns to like it too or retires to the infirmary for treatment of pneumonia.

Storage space, while ample, is poorly placed for anyone under seven feet tall. In order to reach a vast area above the door reserved for suitcases, the coed must either sprout wings or do a balancing act comparable to walking Niagara Falls on a tightrope.

And So On

The list is nearly endless — no

hooks in closets, no pencil shapener, lighting that makes close work nearly impossible, acoustics that amplify every footfall, and elevators that run beautifully until someone gets into them. To some residents, the difficulties are a constant challenge. But to most, they are an incessant torment and an obstacle to a way of life that might otherwise be rather pleasant.

Voice Is Real Question

THE NAME-CHANGE controversy is an issue which, on the surface, seems a little trivial to be raising such a storm over. Whether a university is judged by a name or whether it is judged by its accomplishments over a 40-year period is not really the question.

The real question is whether or not the students and faculty of Texas Tech have a voice in what happens at and for this school.

At a school of this size, the Board of Directors must, of necessity, assume a great amount of responsibility and the power that must go with this responsibility to implement it.

For the most part, they must make decisions on matters which students and faculty have neither the time nor the knowledge on which to base and state an opinion.

But the name-change issue is one which has received a great deal of attention the better part of five years. There have been two student referendums on the issue and both tuned out the same way. Both favored the adoption of Texas State University as a new name for the school.

In the second of these two votes, the largest number of students ever to vote in a school election turned out and favored the same name by more than 50 per cent of the total vote.

In all polls taken, of faculty, ex-students and students the same name has received approval.

But the Board of Directors have continued to ignore all of these indications of popular demand. They have yet to back up with tangible proof their main argument that the majority of ex-students favor Texas Tech University as a new name.

If a bill ever comes before the Texas Legislature on the matter, the Board will undoubtedly have a great advantage.

There is only one way to fight the Board's name proposal and that is for students, faculty and interested ex-students to stick together.

The main method by which these three groups can do so is to support the Joint Name-Change Committee and the work it is doing.

This support must come in active form and not just an apathetic approval of what they are doing. Most of the active members on the central group of the committee have already spent their own money on the hope that popular support would help defray the expenses that must go with such an operation. Most are still not repaid for their expenses.

Teachers, especially those without tenure, have jeopardized their very livelihood at this school on the hope that they would be backed by the student body and the rest of the faculty members.

Thus far they have not received enough support.

If a bill does come up to change the name, it will come up during the first part of 1965. The committee must have finished its work in writing to ex-students and Texas legislators by then, or the whole cause will be for nothing.

If financial help by students is not possible, at least they could talk to committee members and find out what work they could help the committee do in order to take a great deal of strain off of a few people.

The committee deserves the support of all Techsians who feel the way they do about an appropriate name for Tech.

Active support, not passive.

INTROSPECTIVE:

Medicare Forecasted For Future

By MIKE READ

National elections have now been written into the history books; a covering of calm has returned once more to the country; and it is perhaps time to look forward into the future.

The tremendous popularity of the Democratic party this year — relative, of course, to the opposition — should offer new life for many legislative programs which ran aground during the past session of Congress.

MIKE READ

Not the least of these proposals, endowed with hopes for a vigorous new life, is the rather controversial measure to provide medical care for the aged under the social security program.

It is really a shame, too. For sickness and death, like poverty, will always be present in the world, and government should stop meddling with the will of God, gods and whatever.

A conservative philosopher, speaking on this campus last year, advanced the idea that the federal government should not try to alleviate poverty — after all it always has existed in Morocco.

So why should the federal government attempt to alleviate the financial burdens of sickness — illness has always existed in Morocco, too.

Many Agast

Many conservative elements in this nation are aghast at the horrendous thought that citizens of the United States might receive medical security as well as social security.

It is, or so the American Medical Association says, a cruel hoax — apparently something like the cruel hoax of social security 30 years ago.

Groups opposed to further medical aid from the government argue that it isn't needed. After all, they point out, there is Kerr-Mills. Of course, they argued that Kerr-Mills wasn't needed either.

If newspaper reports are to be believed, the first bill to be introduced when the Congress reconvenes will be a medicare bill.

This bill will, in all probability, be a twin brother to the King-Anderson measure which bogged down and died this past session of Congress.

Anderson Working

New Mexico's senior senator, Clinton P. Anderson, has already announced that he is hard at work on a new medicare proposal — and that he has received assurance that it will be the first bill to be introduced before the new Congress.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee has already said that he will clear the way for such a measure to get through the committee. (It was in committee — joint — that the last federal medical bill met its death.)

The bill will undoubtedly come up; it will undoubtedly be passed this coming year; and it will undoubtedly set up a howl of "SOCIALISM" from the AMA and conservatives throughout the country.

Simple Solution

To prevent all this howl of anguish and controversy, why not implement a rather simple solution — one which takes care of any complaints about social security as well as federal medical aid.

Just take every individual who reaches the age where he is now eligible for social security benefits out and shoot him. This simple expediency does away with any need for medical care for the aged by destroying the root of the problem — by doing away with the aged.

Coed Disturbed Over Light Plans

Dear Editor:

Can anyone offer me a half-way plausible explanation for the lights that are being installed in front of Knapp Hall?

An earlier edition of the Toreador stated that they were to beautify the campus and protect the coeds. What are they proposed to protect us from — the police dogs?

REGINA KUHNLEY

'Bookburners' Are Called Necessary

Dear Editor:

I am writing in reply to your editorial in the Wednesday, Nov. 11 edition of The University Daily entitled "Bookburners in Austin!"

In the article you said that those who objected to biology books presenting the theory of evolution were endangering education. I fail to see how such criticism on the part of the citizens can present a danger to education.

The danger I do see is that of refusing to let such persons present their views. I am, and I would hope you and every American is proud of the republican form of government we have.

In America, "We the people" are the governor and the governed. To denounce, as you advocate, any effort of the people to stand up for their right is certainly un-American to the extreme. You asked how communism got in the act.

I suggest that it comes from the very thing you are suggesting: limiting the citizens of the state from expressing their views on the subject.

I certainly hope that we never reach the place where we have to accept any official board's decision without a right to challenge the decision when we feel it is wrong.

Yes, perhaps we will always have the "bookburners" around. I hope there will always be someone who has the initiative and the self-respect to stand up for what is right.

HAROLD KIMBROUGH

Voter Outraged Over ID Foul-Up

Dear Editor:

I AM OUTRAGED!!! Due to a rather foolish mix-up at the polls today, I was denied my right to vote for homecoming queen. It seems that someone in a previous election had punched the wrong letter in my ID card, and when I appeared at the polls to vote for this election, the poll judges would not allow me to vote.

They readily admitted, however, that there had been some mix-up in the last election and that someone had punched the wrong letter in several ID cards, indicating that mine was not an isolated case!!

This is a ridiculous denial of the right to vote of several innocent victims of incompetence on the part of workers at our polls.

When these workers so graciously admit that a mistake has been made, is it not better to take a chance that some few rogues may vote twice than to deny the vote to even a single qualified voter?

No matter how the election comes out, I will be dissatisfied. If the girl of my choice does not win, I will always feel that my vote and the vote of others in my position could have changed the outcome.

If on the other hand, my candidate wins, I will feel slighted in that I could not be a part of her success.

I have only one suggestion, get qualified people to work the polls in the future elections. The ones now are obviously not the ones for the job.

Sincerely,
BOBBY FILLER

(EDITOR'S NOTE: We feel the election officials are qualified but like everyone else they are fallible. Problems of this nature should be appealed to Nancy Shoemaker, executive secretary of the Student Council who is chairman of the elections committee.)

Looney Comments On The Campaign

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this means to express appreciation on behalf of Sen. Barry Goldwater and the Republican party to the countless numbers of Texas Tech students for their support in the recently completed campaign.

The members and officers of the Texas Tech Young Republicans are to be commended for their work in the campaign. The organization under the leadership of its president, Bill Dennis, made a significant contribution to the campaign effort.

Appreciation is extended to each of the more than 200 campus leaders of the Young Texans for Goldwater for their support.

Especially to be thanked is Cril Payne for his service as chairman of the group.

To the great number of Tech students who supported our cause — to those who indicated their support by their vote in the mock election, to those who indicated their support by their attendance at our rallies, to those who indicated their support by the placing of a bumper sticker on their car, and to those who indicated their support in conversations with friends — to all of you we say "Thank you."

In addition, I would like to thank the news editor and staff reporters of the "Toreador" for their fair and impartial coverage of the campaign. I personally want to express my appreciation to each of them for their cooperation.

And in conclusion, although we did not succeed in this election we will not give up, but instead redouble our efforts. We will, in the words of Sen. Goldwater, "continue until the purposes of this campaign are fulfilled, until our cause has won the day, until our cause has inspired the world, and shown the way to a tomorrow worthy of all our yesteryears."

It is far better to have fought for a cause which you know is right and that will in the end succeed, than to have fought for a cause which you know is wrong and that will in the end fall.

Tech Comes Back, Wins 28-10

—Coaches Tell Red Raider Club—

Tech Looks To Arkansas

Telling Red Raider Club members that the Raiders belong in some major bowl, head coach J T King also said at the Monday luncheon it would take a "perfect game" to beat Arkansas this week.

King told the overflow crowd exactly what it wanted to hear—that the Raiders were a long way from conceding the game to Arkansas.

"We feel we can move the ball on them," he said, "but it'll be the breaks that decide the game. We now think we're that close to Arkansas, Texas or any of the rest."

The head mentor cited Raider senior leadership as the main reason for Tech's successful season. Tech can replace their ability, he said, but not their leadership. Twelve senior Raiders are playing their last game this Saturday.

"They're the greatest group of seniors I've ever been associated with," he told the club members.

King listed a multitude of Arkansas assets — momentum, pride, support of fans, top kicking game, and sound defense — which makes them hard to beat.

"But we're looking forward to playing them — it means a lot to us," he said, adding that the Raiders had been looking ahead to Arkansas during the Washington State game.

Assistant coach Merrill Green, former Arkansas coach, has been scouting the third-ranked Razorbacks.

"I watched them play two games," he said, "and the only mistake I saw them make was a bandsman out of step during the halftime show." It was hard to tell whether or not he was serious.

Describing the Razorbacks as the type of team that goes for the big play, Green said the Raiders can't fumble, call wrong plays and make other mistakes as they have in the past.

"They take advantage of your mistakes," he said, "and don't make any themselves."

The Hogs' biggest asset on their monster-type defense is linebacker Ronnie Caveness, who has been around for five years. On offense, it's quarterback Fred Marshall.

Green said Tech would have to contain Marshall's runs to the outside if it were going to win. Although Arkansas has no flashy backs, they're all big, strong and determined — "Sort of like three Leo Lowery's in the same backfield," he said.

"It'll take a super effort to stop that offense," Green concluded.

King also discussed the Raiders' 28-10 win over Washington State Saturday.

He blamed Tech's fumbles on a lack of mental alertness, adding that both the coaches and players were looking ahead to Arkansas during last week's practices.

"They weren't sharp in warm-up drills, and I thought we were in trouble," he said. "Then they starting dropping the ball and I knew it."

Anderson Breaks Tech's All-Time Rushing Record

By DAVID SNYDER
Sports Staff

Texas Tech might have fumbled away the first half against Washington State University Saturday afternoon, but they more than made up for it in the second half with a devastating offensive attack that completely snowed the Cougars under an avalanche of three touchdowns.

Halftime score was 10-7 in favor of WSU, the final score, 28-10.

The win increased Tech's season record to 6-2-1 and considerably enhances their chances of a post-season game, although there is no official confirmation whatsoever concerning bowl bids.

Tech has not been in a bowl game in nine years.

Tech seemed to move the ball at will during the second half, scoring three of the first four times they had the ball as the passing of quarterback Tom Wilson and the running of halfback Donny Anderson made a shambles of the Cougar defense.

Anderson Breaks Record

It was a big day for Anderson, as the talented all-around performer netted 119 yards rushing to crack the all-time rushing record at Tech for one season.

That pushed his season's total to 877 yards in nine games, surpassing Walt Schlinkman's 1945 mark by six yards. Schlinkman is now an assistant coach with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The total wasn't enough, however, to overcome national leader Brian Piccolo of Wake Forest, a Baptist school in Winston-Salem, N.C. Piccolo picked up 92 yards against South Carolina and still leads second-place Anderson by 52 yards with one game remaining for each.

Anderson also out-duelled halfback Clarence Williams of WSU, who entered the game as the nation's fourth top rusher. The stout Tech defense held Williams to 65 yards, 23 below his game average.

Lose Five Fumbles

The Raiders returned from the dressing room at halftime with rediscovered knowledge of how to hang on to the ball, for they lost only one fumble as compared to four in the first half.

Raider fumbles led to all of the Cougar points, and another resulted in a missed field goal attempt. The Raiders also fumbled on the WSU 13-yard line in the second half, but the Cougars returned the favor in the form of a bad snap on a punt and Tech got the TD anyway.

Tech played the entire game without the services of starting halfback Johnny Agan, who missed the contest with a foot injury. Replacements Billy Weise and Jerry Lovelace took up the slack admirably.

Weise started the game and played the first half, netting 31 yards on six carries for a 5.1 average. Lovelace took over in the second half and racked up 37 yards, a 4.6 average and two pass receptions.

Wilson Completes 78 Per Cent

Wilson zeroed in on 14 of 18 passes for a fantastic 78 per cent completions, 175 yards and one touchdown. Two of the four misses were not his fault, as one was thrown intentionally to stop the clock just before the half and receiver Jerry Don Balch was knocked down on another.

Anderson and Balch were the principal receivers. Anderson hauling in five for 65 yards and Balch taking four for 62.

In addition to passing, the Tech offense rolled up 243 yards on the ground to maintain their leadership in the Southwest Conference and their standing among the national leaders.

The Raider defense played no

WSU STARS STOPPED — Three members of the stout Tech defense bring Washington State half-back Clarence Williams to the turf during Tech's 28-10 win Saturday. They are Teddy Roberts (10),

C. C. Willis (30) and James Henkel (66). Other Raiders are Marc Bryant (68) and Joe Hurley (83). The defense held Williams to 65 yards, 23 below his season's average.

Tech Comes Back In Second Half, Beats Washington State
