Mass Comm gets $25,000 endowment

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

The Texas Tech School of Mass Communications has received $25,000 from Morris Communications Corp., said Jerry Hudson, mass communications school director.

"This is a very significant endowment," Hudson said.

The $25,000, received on Jan. 12, was the last installment of a $100,000 endowment contributed in 1985. Frank Anderson, general manager of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, presented the check. The endowment was contributed on behalf of the Avalanche-Journal and the Amarillo Globe News, Hudson said.

"The Morris Corporation gave $25,000 in each of four years to support the change to school status," Hudson said.

The department began working to achieve school status in the late 1970s. The department changed the name to School of Mass Communications last May with approval of the Tech Board of Regents.

"I was extremely pleased (with the regents decision)," Hudson said. "I think it's the first step to becoming a legitimate school outside the College of Arts and Sciences."

Hudson said the endowment will be used to improve teaching and academic standards, provide workshops and seminars and recruit minorities.

Based in Augusta, Ga., Morris Communications Corp. owns six non-daily newspapers and 14 daily newspapers, including the Avalanche-Journal and the Globe News.

According to Tech University News and Publications, Tech has the eighth largest School of Mass Communications in the United States with 1,400 students.

Legislature grants Tech fraction of requested funds

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

Texas Tech received only 10 percent of $15 million disbursed to the state's higher education institutions for research projects Thursday by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Although Tech submitted 34 proposals totaling more than $7.8 million, the Coordinating Board approved only five proposals totaling $790,668 from the Energy Research in Applications Program (ERAP).

Clara McNamara, a sponsored programs associate, said Tech officials had high hopes of receiving research funds from the state Legislature.

"The proposals were due in October," she said. "We were hoping some of them would be granted."

According to the Research Services Department, ERAP will provide four years' support for energy applications research projects conducted by private and public institutions of higher education in Texas.

Mechanical engineering Associate Professor J.R. Dunn and J. Borrelli, chairman of the agricultural engineering department, received $189,787 to conduct a research project titled, "An Applied Research Program for Improving Pumping Plant Efficiencies."

Geosciences Professor G.B. Asquith and A.K. Jacka, chairman of the geosciences department, were awarded $173,887 to study "Carbonate Bimodal Pore Sys. Reservoirs: Resource Evaluation Model for Occurrence, Production Potential, and Volume Reserves."

Mechanical engineering Associate

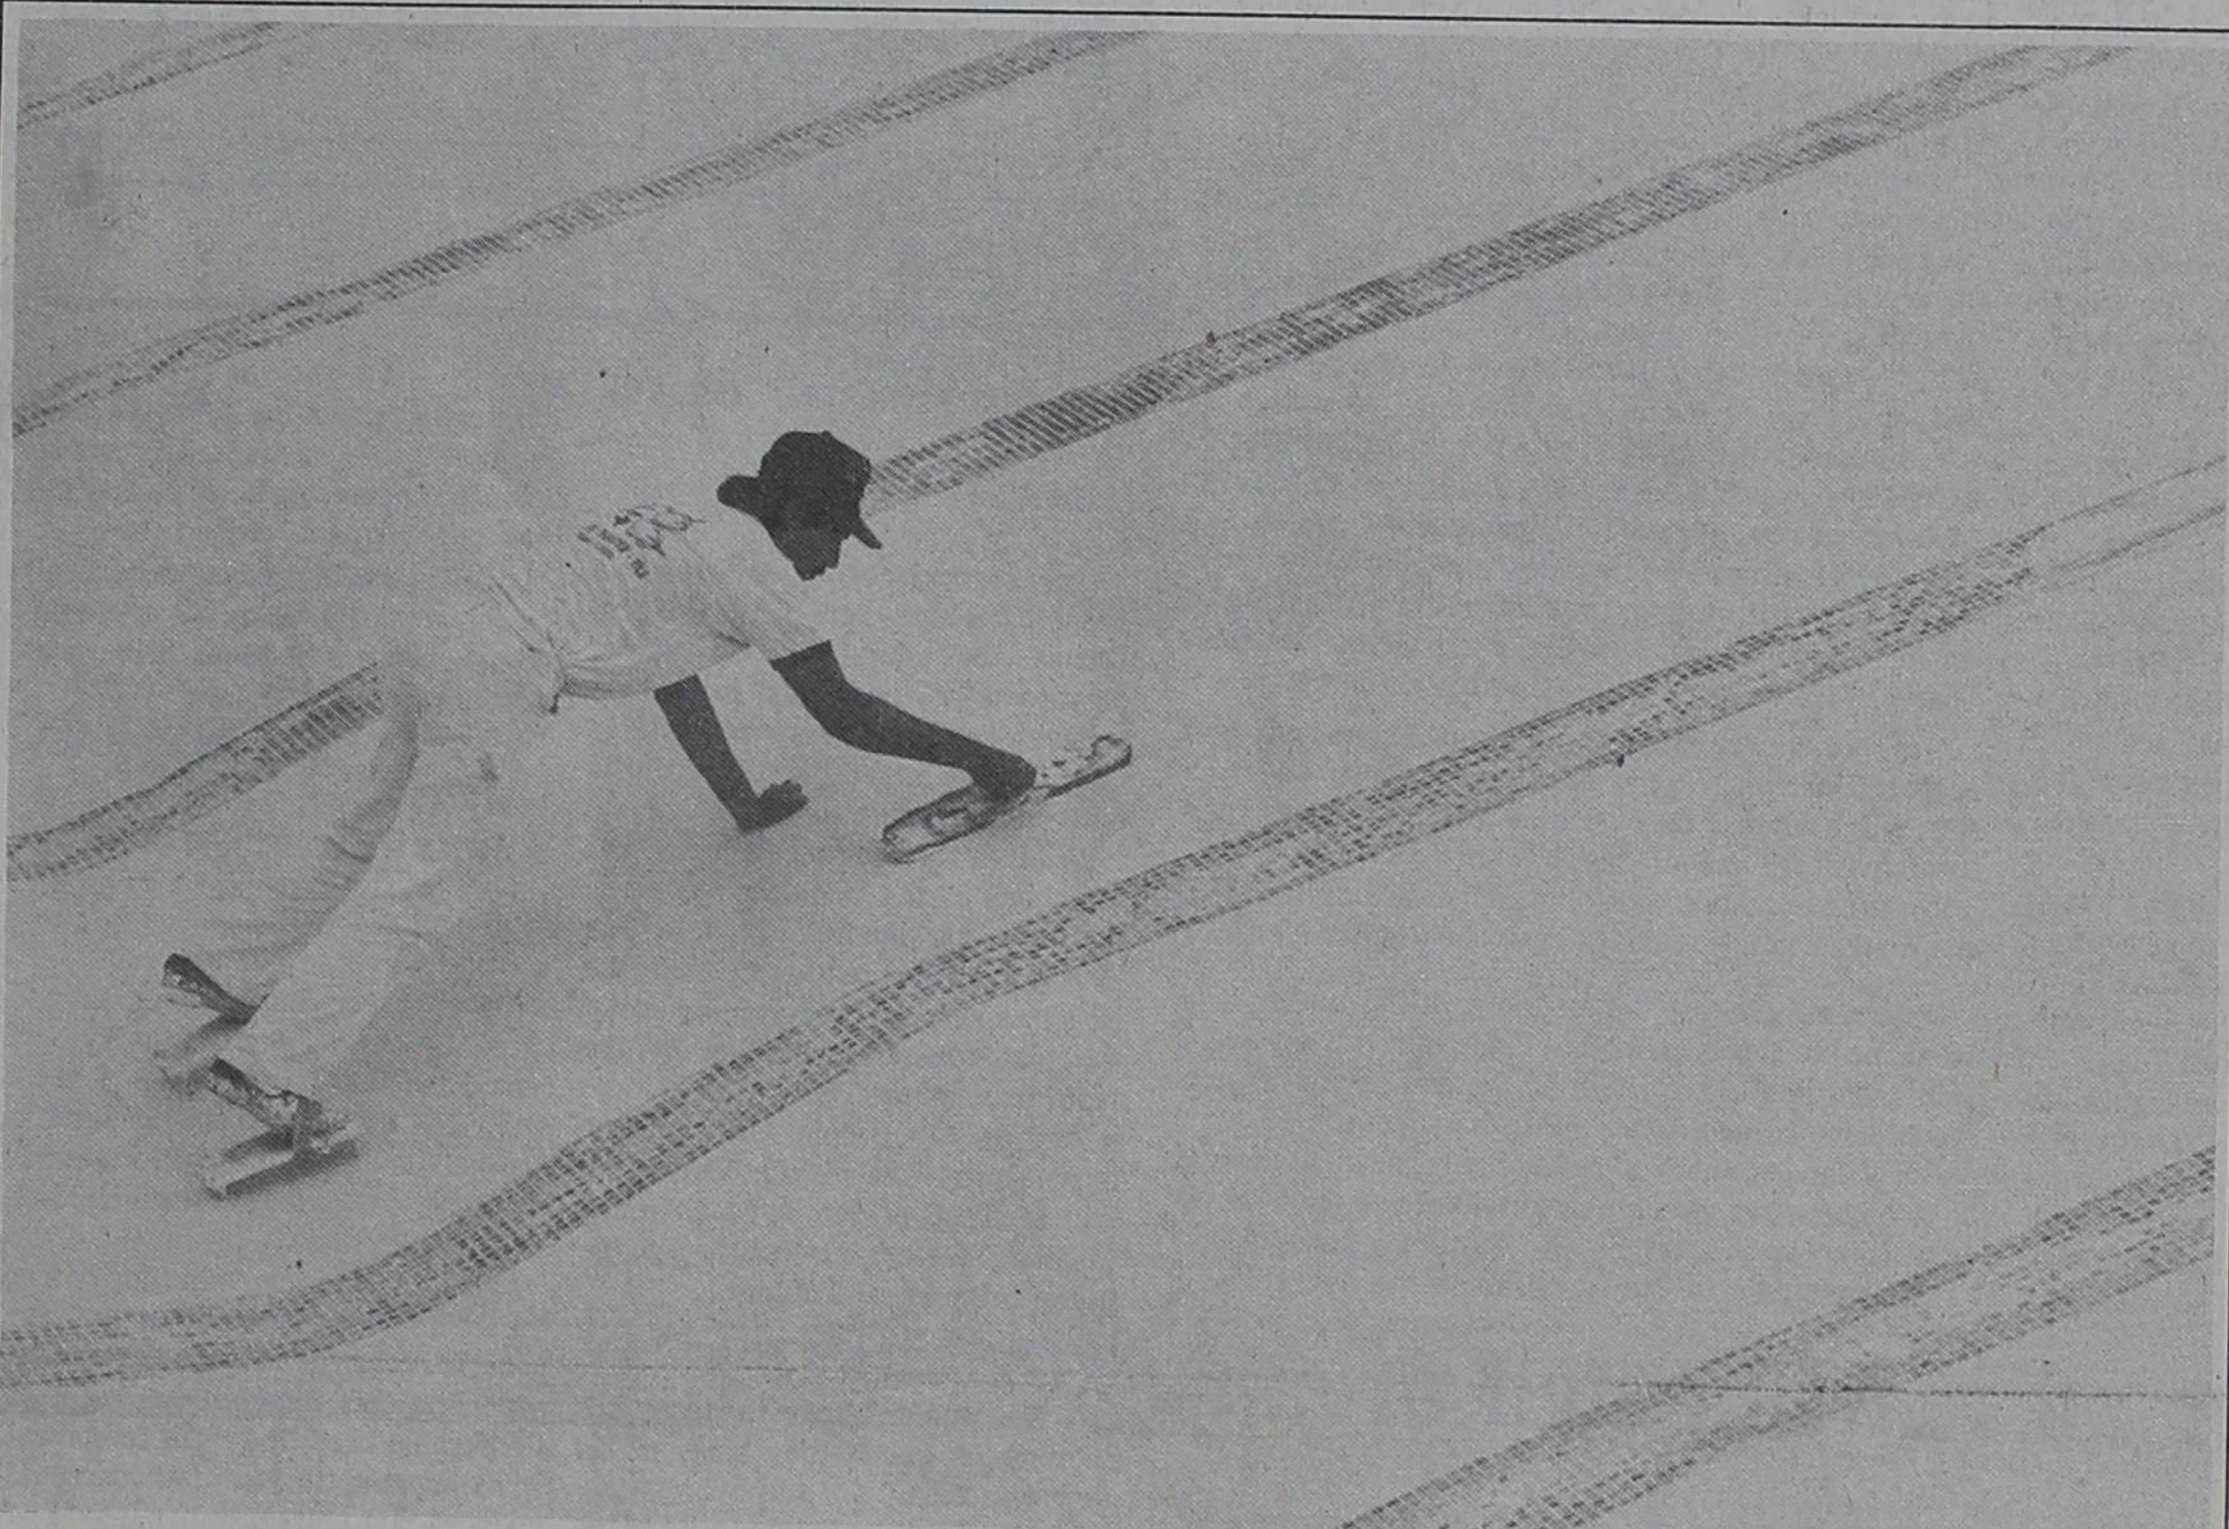

Professor A. Ertaş and E.E. Anderson, chairman of the mechanical engineering department, received $191,571 to research "Development and Investigation of a New Liquid Desiccant System and Use of Solar Energy for Hot and Humid Climates."

M. Spitzglas of the department of architecture received $205,023 to study "Highly compact building forms with minimized climatic exposure through ext. fenestration ... energy efficiency opportunity."

Mechanical engineering Associate Professor Walt Oler, in conjunction with West Texas State University, received $30,400 to evaluate a wind engineering system.

The proposals were evaluated using the following criteria:

- Qualifications of Principal Investigator(s)
- Methodology
- Energy Benefits
- Technology Transfer
- Leverage
- Longevity
- Measurability.

President seeks degree approval

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

Interim President Elizabeth Haley will ask the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board today to approve a master of science degree in restaurant, hotel and institutional management (RHIM).

"We feel very enthusiastic about it," she said. "There is a strong demand for graduates with a master's degree in RHIM."

Haley said the meeting today will be the first of two meetings scheduled for the board to review the recommendation.

The Coordinating Board's staff reviewed the graduate program, and Haley indicated that the staff will recommend the program's approval to the Coordinating Board.

Haley said about 20 students have expressed interest in enrolling in a master's degree program in RHIM.

Fred Smith, human resources director with Marriott Corp. in California, will represent the business industry at the Coordinating Board's meeting, Haley said.

"He is aware of the strength of our undergraduate program at Texas Tech," she said. "He will be speaking from the industry's side, and I will be speaking in behalf of the university."

Tech's undergraduate program began in 1983, and Haley said that since then, Tech graduates have been recruited by major firms around the country.

The Tech program was ranked as one of the leading RHIM programs in the nation in the Oct. 3, 1988, edition of Nation's Restaurant News, an industry-wide publication.

Tech has 700 students majoring in RHIM, Haley said, making the program the fifth largest major at the university.

Since the change has been made, Black said, beer and wine can be served at Mackenzie Park, but authorization for specific events must be given by Director of Parks and Recreation Lee Osborn.

Councilmen George Carpenter and Gary Phillips voted against the ordinance.

"I am not convinced that the potential benefits would outweigh the potential problems," Phillips said. "One person can do as much damage in 20 minutes as we could raise money in six months."

Phillips argued that problems on the Meadowbrook golf course could arise since the ordinance states that alcohol could be sold in the clubhouse and on the golf course in carts.

Pay raise foes will try rollback

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House opponents of a proposed 50 percent congressional pay raise said Thursday they can't stop the increase and are focusing on long-range efforts to roll it back and to change the system of automatic salary hikes.

Rep. Thomas J. Tauke, R-Iowa, a leading opponent of the raise, said he will try to organize a meeting of opponents next week that will assume the raise will become law Feb. 8.

Under a special procedure not used for other legislation, the congressional pay raise would become law unless both the Senate and the House vote to stop it.

The Senate is virtually certain to reject the increase in a vote promised by its leaders. But in the House, Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the majority whip, has said there wouldn't be a vote, and Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., the minority whip, advised Republicans that no legislative business is expected by the deadline.

"We cannot budge the speaker," said Rep. Robert C. Smith, R-N.H., who has organized a House letter-writing drive to demand Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, schedule a vote. Thirty-nine House members, 33 of them Republicans, have signed the letter, and Smith said he will keep trying even though "there's nothing I know if in a parliamentary way" to force a vote by the deadline.

Tauke said: "Next week, we'll have a meeting of members here to develop long-range strategy after the pay raise goes into effect, as it apparently will."

"We recognize the pay raise is not going to be stopped. So we have to look at alternative strategies. We have to find a method to get a rollback."

Former President Reagan — accepting the report of a presidential commission — recommended to Congress that rank-and-file lawmakers' salaries be increased from $89,500 to $135,000. Federal judges and top executive branch officials also would get 50 percent increases.

Judges' salaries cannot be reduced under the Constitution. But Congress could allow the raises for lawmakers and executives to become law, and cut them back or eliminate them later.

Any long-range strategy would focus on finding a legislative mechanism to bring the pay raise issue to the House floor.

Tauke said the Senate could provide such a vehicle by passing legislation introduced Wednesday. The bill, anticipating the raise would become law, would rescind the increase entirely for the executive and legislative branches. It would require recorded votes for any future pay raises.

Tauke said opponents of a raise could try to attach that bill on to any House measure, thereby forcing a vote on members' pay.

If the legislation is bottled up in committee by the Democratic leadership, Tauke said, opponents could try for a discharge petition, which takes 218 signatures to force legislation from committee.

Tauke has introduced his own legislation, which would require a recorded vote on pay raises, separate congressional pay recommendations from those of the other branches and prevent any congressional raise from taking effect until after the next election.

Judge rules former prof died of natural causes

By BETH GEORGE
The University Daily

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack ruled Wednesday that the death of former Texas Tech professor Paul Couey was due to natural causes.

Blalack said autopsy reports showed that Couey, a former mass communications professor, suffered a fatal heart attack sometime between Jan. 7 and Jan. 8.

The Lubbock Police Department reported that Couey was found dead in his home Jan. 17. Police reports indicated the body was discovered by Couey's bank consultant.

The man told police he went to the residence in an effort to locate Couey. After receiving no response at the front door, the police reported that the man looked in the windows and saw Couey lying on the kitchen floor.

Blood was found in the kitchen sink and on the refrigerator door, according to police reports.

Police said Couey apparently starting bleeding while sleeping and went downstairs to wash himself. Once in the kitchen, he probably fell against the refrigerator, then onto the floor, police said.

Initial police investigations placed the date of Couey's death a few days after Christmas. Couey's ex-wife told police she last had contact with Couey on Dec. 27.

Blalack said autopsy reports showed the time of death about a week later than the originally suspected date.

Foul play never was suspected in the incident, police said, because no signs of violence were detected in the residence.

Couey's body was cremated Jan. 20 under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors. No local funeral services were conducted.

Couey was hired by Tech as an assistant professor in September but resigned from the university on Nov. 15.

Life, death issues haunt week

Scott Brumley
Editor

The week that soon will pass has provided the Texas Tech community, the state and the nation with a period for introspection. Let us hope the opportunity will generate thoughtful discussion and action where necessary — not the apathy which has stained the American public from the late 1970s to the present.

Indeed, the week has been rife with moral and legal questions which, realistically, still are likely to remain far from answered.

Monday marked the 16th anniversary of the divisive Roe vs. Wade decision which blocked states from legally prohibiting abortion. There are few informed people in the United States who don't have an opinion on the decision or the subject matter which brought the case to court in the first place.

Marches and demonstrations commemorating the 1973 ruling took place in Lubbock, across the state and in several places across the nation. Two of the more notable sites of protests were Dallas — the place where the original lawsuit was filed that later facilitated the Supreme Court decision — and New York.

Security was abundant at all demonstration venues, and the annual arrests were made when some of the more zealous demonstrators physically prevented women from entering abortion clinics and acted in other ways to bring a charge of disturbing the peace upon themselves.

The anniversary of the decision and President Bush's vocal support of the right-to-life movement and their ultimate cause raise the question: will (and should) the Supreme Court overturn its decision and allow states to outlaw abortion?

Anti-abortion activists seem convinced that former President Reagan's appointment of conservative Justice Scalia to the court and promotion of William Rehnquist to chief justice mark the turning point that will result in Roe vs. Wade being overturned.

Moderates and liberals, however, have legitimate cause for predictions of a different outcome. The court's three more leftward-leaning justices, Blackmun, Brennan and Marshall, still occupy their places on the bench and are unlikely to change their course on the issue now. Add to the court's makeup moderates like Kennedy, O'Connor and Stevens, and the stage is set for a showdown of moral and judicial ideology.

The question in this matter will be whether the court's moderates take more stock in respecting established precedent or enforcing a concept of morality that may not even represent the view of a nationwide majority of the public.

Many dilemmas arise when the question of court-enforced decisions on morality are proffered — not the least of which is the lack of a uniform judicial definition of the beginning of life.

Assuming the Supreme Court strikes down Roe vs. Wade, the door would be open for states to create their own definitions of life and its "official" beginning. However, in the absence of a uniform definition from which courts could view the issue, the door also would be open for a multitude of challenges until establishment of such a definition.

In other words, the high court quite easily could create more problems than it solves by overturning Roe vs. Wade.

Another major question to be answered on the issue is this: Should government legislate morality?

I tend to think not (as, in the case of Roe vs. Wade, do 61 percent of the people responding to a recent nationwide poll on whether the Supreme Court should overturn the decision), but the matter is in the hands of the nine justices now.

The hard-fought question on the other end of the life-death issue surfaced again this week, as well. Ted Bundy was executed early Tuesday at the Florida State Prison near Starke, Fla., giving rise to the controversy surrounding capital punishment.

Bundy's execution prompted not only the omnipresent debate of justification in the case of the death penalty, but also concern about the manner in which some people observed the convicted mass murderer's demise.

Also, a man who interviewed Bundy extensively and prepared a biography of Bundy questioned the retributive value of the execution. After all, Bundy may have murdered as many as 50 women.

Does one execution repay the pain of 50 families? Will one man's death bring back even one murder victim?

Opponents suggest that a more fitting punishment would be life in prison in cases like Bundy's. They argue that a lifetime of reflection on the atrocity of his acts would have borne greater merit than death.

But if the testimony of several psychological experts is to be believed, Bundy felt absolutely no guilt for his acts. How can such a monster be fittingly punished? Unfortunately, we may never know the answer.

'And justice for all': Mitigated dream or paragon for Americans to attain?

Amy Lawson
Staff Writer

are the problem.

It's the people who do not know what justice is or what it's about.

They define it as something the "other guy" deserves when he does something wrong. But when the situation is reversed, justice sometimes becomes injustice to them, showing their ignorance to the real meaning of the word.

Justice cannot be an absolute.

There are no set rules of what is justice, but if justice is to be accomplished, then there must be some guidelines as to what isn't justice.

What it isn't is what exists today.

It isn't the violation of human rights that exists today. And it isn't the crime, the apathy or the "system" that exists today.

"And justice for all" is in the last line of the pledge of allegiance. But whose justice does it mean?

Is it the people's justice, the government's justice or God's justice?

And when we find out whose justice, how do we execute that justice? To what extent is justice ... well, justice? And, then, if we are somehow denied justice, how do we regain that right?

There are so many questions that aren't being answered, and even more not being asked.

Living in a society that demands justice, we often find that people want it but are not willing to work for it.

The people need to find justice. But looking for it in a missed comma, a sentence that was worded wrong or a loophole in a paragraph is not where they'll find it.

They must find it in themselves or each other, but not in a sentence on a page.

Boo birds should take off

To the editor:

I have recently attended two men's basketball games here at Texas Tech. During the course of the game, players were substituted in to help relieve starting players and enable them to rest. One of the players who entered the game was Wes Lowe.

When this occurred, several members of the audience began to boo and hiss loudly. I'm sure this demonstration of team support by the fans was very well received by one of the teams playing, but not by the team from Texas Tech.

Who are the people who have the nerve to boo Wes when he enters the game? None of you have as much talent as Wes, or you would be playing in the game instead of him.

Who gives you the right to say he's no good? Coach Myers doesn't, if he did, Wes wouldn't be on the team. His teammates don't; they know of his determination.

In fact, I believe the majority of the Tech student body supports Wes as well, as the rest of the team in their effort to represent Tech. But you few people who boo and hiss are pathetic.

I have known Wes for the past two years, and I assure you that there are few people with as much heart, determination, skill, drive and ambition as he has. His only fault is that the fans are asking him to deliver something that no one on the team can deliver ... perfection.

And it is a bunch of imperfect fools who are demanding it of him. What a joke!

I guess the one thing that most of these people don't realize is that when you boo a single player on a Tech team, you are booing the entire team.

Because that is what they truly are: a team. They are not a bunch of guys gathered together, each trying to gain his only individual glory. They are a synchronized unit, working together to get a job done and to achieve a goal. But when one of the elements is off balance, the entire team is thrown off balance; and having fans boo and hiss that one element doesn't help.

In the future, I urge fans to cheer all the players on the team. No one on the team deserves to be booed, because at least they are trying.

Rights offend 'pro-lifers'

To the editor:

Recently there has been a great upsurge by the "moral majority" to repeal the 1973 Supreme Court decision, Roe vs. Wade. This landmark decision had established the right for a woman to choose to carry a child or have an abortion.

I would like to take this time to ask the intelligent people of this institute of higher learning to think hard about repealing this fundamental right of the female race, the right to control what happens to your own personal body.

We would never consider ridding ourselves of the right to free speech or the right to lobby or the right to privacy or even the right to deny health care.

But somehow righteous "pro-lifers" feel that the right of an 11-year-old to not bear a child, even if she has been sexually molested by her father, is immoral and unconstitutional.

One cannot deny that homelessness is not directly a cause of overpopulation. Yet instead of working toward curtailing the unwanted births of lower-class families, "pro-lifers" wish to allow every unwanted pregnancy to result in an unwanted child in a world that cannot support it.

Senate reports of the 1970s have shown, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that abortion clinics, performing abortions with homemade equipment by unskilled persons, in unsanitary conditions, often resulted in infertility and death.

I would like every person who takes the time to read this letter to take a few minutes tonight, or sometime soon, to write the Supreme Court, the House and the Congress to support the right to choose over your personal bodily functions.

The loss of this fundamental right would set our country backward to the dark ages of not 100 years ago, but 16 years ago.

Library strives to serve

To the editor:

Re: Catherine Tannahill's letter
Thank you for pointing out the situation of the incorrect posting of hours for the library. We will continue to make every effort to keep our community informed of the changes in hours via correct signs and a special telephone number.

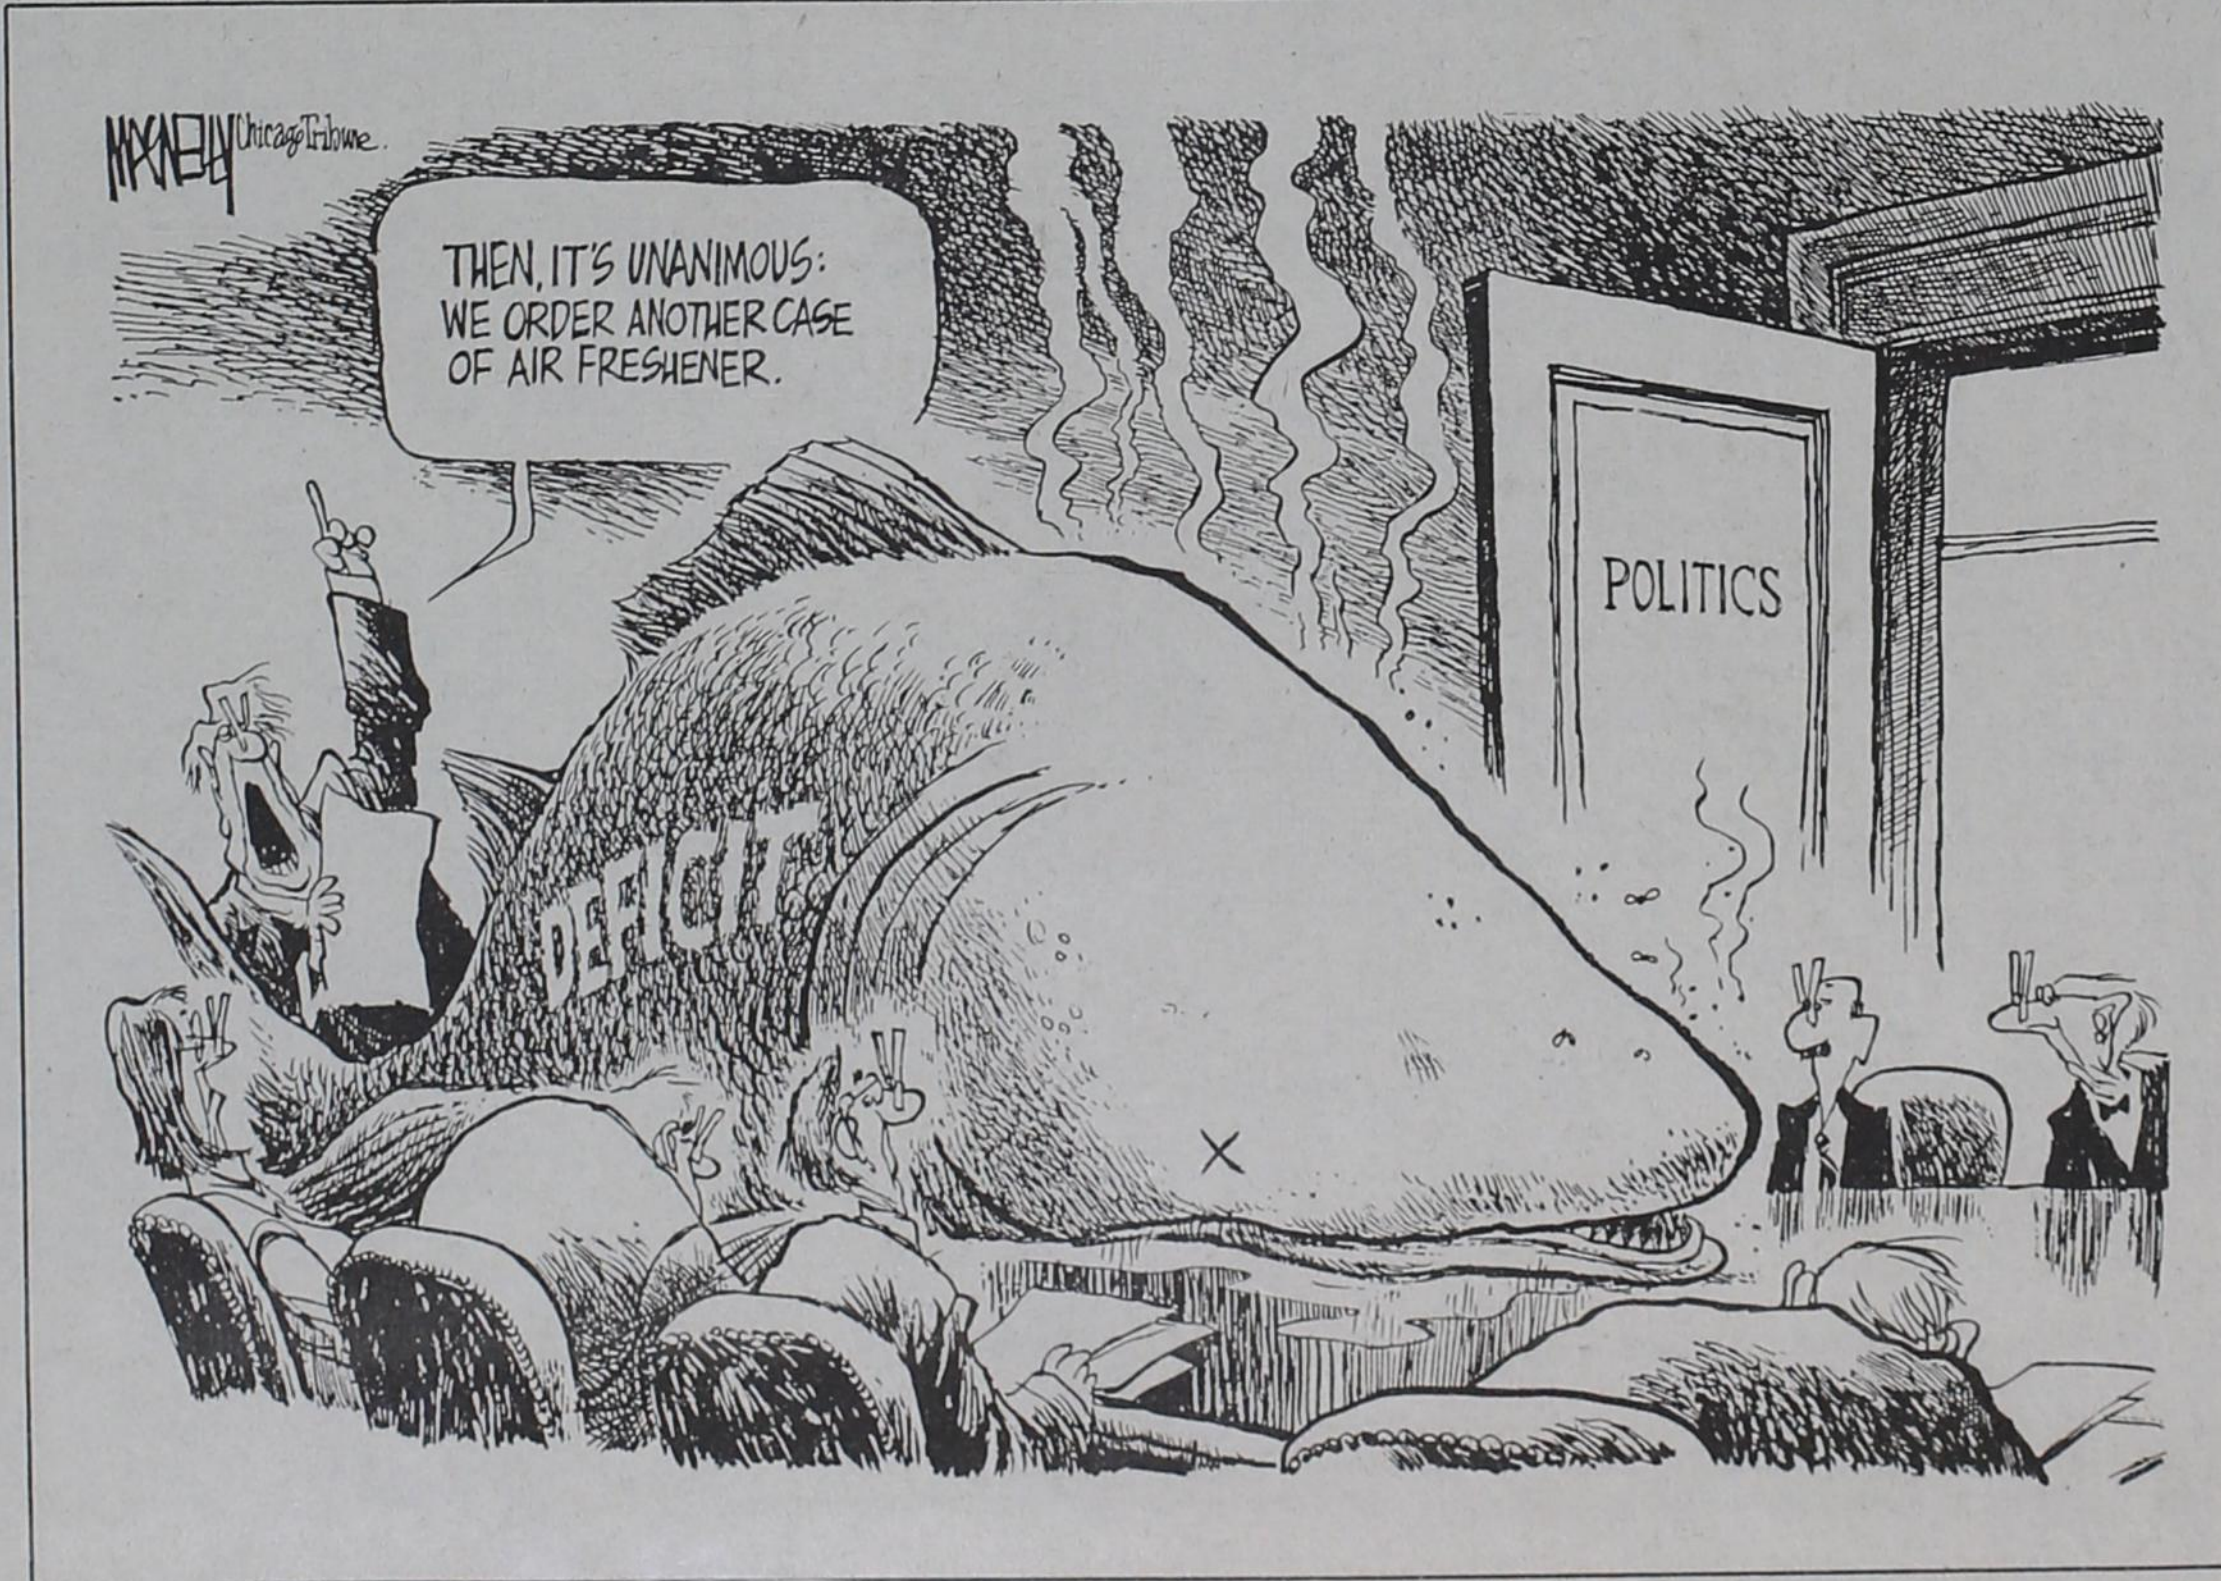

The number, 742-2251, has been in use since the early 1980s.

Since classes are starting on the hour rather than the half-hour this year, there is an option of reorganizing some of the library's hours. A questionnaire concerning this option will be published in The UD; we are soliciting input from the students, faculty and staff of the university about how to best use two hours.

I can hear the groans now ... only two hours? Just as your frustration is real, so are budgetary constraints, and decisions must be made on how best to serve the community.

I empathize with your frustration in finding hours the library is open when you can use it. As a single parent, I worked full-time and earned two graduate degrees. It seemed there were never enough hours in the day to get everything done.

Kentuckian gets the dust storm welcome

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

From the first day she arrived in Lubbock, Nina T. Pollard knew she was headed for new experiences.

"As I was driving in from Plainview, I looked toward the south and all I could see was a red-brown haze. Then all of a sudden it was swirling around me. That's when I realized it was a dust storm," she said. "It was a new experience."

Pollard, an associate director of the Division of Allied Health at the University of Louisville in Louisville, Ky., is doing an internship at Texas Tech this semester in the development office.

"The reason I came out here was to learn about development and fund-raising," she said. "I want to go on in higher education administration. If you want to go on, you have to learn something about fund-raising."

Pollard expressed her desire to learn about fund-raising to an acquaintance, Colette Murray, vice president for development at Texas Tech. Murray suggested that Pollard do an internship, and together they worked out the plans, Pollard said.

Pollard convinced the University of Louisville that spending a semester at Tech learning about fund-raising would benefit the division Pollard worked in, she said.

After a total of 23 years at the University of Louisville, Pollard earned a doctorate in microbiology and recently completed a five-year term as assistant provost. Pollard said most of the time spent in administration involved curriculum, degrees and the academic side of the university.

"What I'm doing is looking at all aspects of what goes on here in the office, including contributions to the annual fund, planned giving, relationships to foundations and corporations and things they do here in institutional relations," Pollard said.

"Colette has involved me in meetings where she establishes contacts with people. It is important for the university to be involved in the community."

Pollard said she spends a lot of time reading books and journals.

"I'm taking time to read the literature in the field. I wouldn't have had time to do that in my full-time job at Louisville," she said. "I am thoroughly enjoying being here. It's a good break in routine to see a different side of a university."

Pollard said she likes West Texas sunrises and sunsets.

"I had not been to West Texas before," she said. "The sunsets are absolutely beautiful here."

Living in an apartment in Horn Hall helps Pollard recapture her own college days, she said.

"It makes me feel like a coed again," she said.

The Tech Red Raider basketball team provides Pollard with a lot of entertainment.

"I'm a basketball fan," she said. "I have gone to all the home basketball games since I've been here."

When she returns to Kentucky in May, Pollard will take all her experiences at Tech with her.

"I think I'll go back to the University of Louisville better off for having been here," she said.

Students design wardrobe

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

Texas Tech is the first university in the country to create new cotton fabric designs for an experimental project.

"We wanted to see what students can create and expand their knowledge on the use of cotton," said Dean Pelczar, manager of fabric development/wovens at Cotton Incorporated Research Center in Raleigh, N.C.

Home economics Assistant Professor Jackie Brewster said the fabric will be used to create a coordinated spring 1990 wardrobe that will be judged at the Apparel Mart in Dallas April 8. The garments will be constructed from the pink, orange, gold, purple and gray fabric before spring break, she said.

Students will be allowed to design fabric patterns on five-yard section of fabric, Pelczar explained.

"This is an opportunity to see firsthand how fabric for garments is made," he said.

Students were guided through a crash course in fabric-making, Pelczar said.

"We walked them through and actually designed the fabric," he said. "We wanted much input from the students."

Brewster said the competition is sponsored by the Fashion Group, an international organization of professional women in the fashion industry. About 150 garments from 200 state-supported schools will be judged at the competition, she said.

Home economics External Relations Director Mary Reeves said 541 pounds of dyed, two-ply cotton yarn were donated. Edwin Foster, head of mechanical processing at the Tech Textile Research Center, said the material will take about a week to be woven and finished.

SA president opposes student coalition's agenda

By STACY ALBRACHT
The University Daily

Texas Tech is not represented by student lobbyists in Austin because Tech student leaders oppose an agenda endorsing student regents.

The Texas Student Coalition, student lobbyists in Austin, are calling for student regents to serve on all governing boards of higher education, said Shayne Woodard, president of the Student Association.

"We at the Student Association have a super relationship with the administration," Woodard said. "Therefore, the student regent issue is not something that we have a problem with."

Woodard said Tech regents are willing to talk about any subject initiated by students.

"I appreciate the opportunity to provide information to the administration," he said. "Some schools don't have that relationship with their administrators."

Tech had three representatives at the two Texas Student Coalition conferences, one in the summer and one in October.

Thirty schools, including Tech, were represented at the first conference. Three topics discussed at that conference were tuition, financial aid and student service fees.

At the October conference, however, Woodard estimated that only 15 schools were in attendance.

"The Texas Student Coalition lobbyists railroaded things onto the agenda that we did not agree with," Woodard said.

Tech currently has two permanent lobbyists in Austin, Mike Sanders, Texas Tech vice president for governmental relations, and Martha Brown, associate vice president for governmental relations.

"When a student officer is needed to provide information, Mike Sanders will let us know," Woodard said.

Engineering college to host battling robots competition

By SCOTT VAN DUYN
The University Daily

The Texas Tech College of Engineering will host the third annual battle of robots in the 1989 Walking Machine Decathlon in April.

Jaime Cardenas-Garcia, director of this year's event, said the contest is challenging, enjoyable and a unique learning experience.

The electrical and mechanical engineering departments at Tech will enter a walking contestant along with several other colleges around the nation.

Colleges competing in the event, which is sponsored by the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE), are Penn State, the University of Central Florida, Northrop University, the University of Delaware, the University of Maryland and New Mexico State University.

During the decathlon, walking robots will compete in 10 events ranging in difficulty from running in a straight line to walking a full circle while pushing a hockey puck.

"The goal of the decathlon is to get undergraduate students involved in an interdisciplinary project," Cardenas said. "In this case, the project is building a robot."

Cardenas, who also is an assistant professor of mechanical engineering at Tech, said that in years past only the mechanical and electrical departments participated in building the robot.

"Someday we would like to have all of the engineering departments involved," he said.

The students involved with the project expect to have a walker designed and construction begun by the middle of February, Cardenas said.

"By the end of next month we will have something put together," he said. "We should have it walking by the end of the following month."

'Texas' director holds auditions at Tech

By TIM WEINHEIMER
The University Daily

Set beneath a 600-foot cliff in Palo Duro Canyon State Park near Amarillo, Pulitzer Prize winner Paul Green's outdoor musical drama "TEXAS" already has begun to assemble its cast and crew for this year's 24th season.

Told in song, dance and drama, "TEXAS" is a remarkable combination of breathtaking background, spectacular sound and light, hundreds of unusual props and a colorful historical story of Texas Panhandle settlers.

Auditions for the outdoor musical drama "TEXAS" at Palo Duro Canyon will be conducted on the Texas Tech campus from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 5 in the Tech music building, with dancers at 3 p.m. Feb. 5.

Directors from the "TEXAS" company will be looking for 140 people to fill paid positions as actors, actresses, singers, dancers, technicians and musicians.

All voice ranges are required for the "TEXAS" chorus, including solos and men's quartet. Each auditioning man and woman should bring one prepared number of his or her choice.

The director prefers an aria, art song or musical show tune. Performers may bring their own accompaniment, but an accompanist will be provided.

Singers also are required to fill minor speaking roles, so each person should prepare a short, timed, two-minute memorized scene or monologue.

Persons wishing to audition as actors and actresses will be expected to memorize any scene, not to exceed three minutes, that will accentuate outdoor voice ability and presence. A short vocal piece also is desired for the audition.

Men and women applicants for dance positions should exemplify both ballet and modern dance training. Dancers also should bring appropriate workout clothes.

The "TEXAS" director seeks two violinists with concert training and a high level of technical facility and good legato. Musicians experienced with string bass (upright), guitar, banjo and accordion also are needed to complete the ensemble.

Theater technicians and hospitality crew members will be interviewed personally by the director.

Auditions for "TEXAS" also will be conducted at the University of Oklahoma in Norman on Feb. 12 and at West Texas State University in Canyon on Feb. 19.

"TEXAS" is scheduled to begin June 14 and play nightly except Sundays at 8:30 p.m. through Aug. 26.

With the highest average attendance of any outdoor musical drama in the United States, "TEXAS" cast members perform before more than 1,600 persons a night and almost 100,000 viewers each season. A total of more than 2 million people from all over the world have seen the production during the past 23 years.

Competitors strive for that Windex[®] shine

By MARIA HUNT
The University Daily

There is much more to window cleaning than one might think — enough to have a whole seminar dedicated to the window cleaning industry.

The 2nd Annual Southwest Window Cleaners Seminar will be this weekend at the Holiday Inn Civic Center in Lubbock.

Jim and Jacinda Willingham, owners of New Day Window Cleaning Service, decided to conduct a seminar last year to get other window cleaners together and discuss the problem of a high workman's compensation rate.

This year, the Willinghams expect representatives from more than 200 window cleaner companies and equipment manufacturers from the United States and Canada to arrive in Lubbock for the seminar and to compete in the Ettore American Challenge Cup competition, the first national window cleaning contest ever in the United States.

Contestants will be competing for the Guinness World Record, which currently stands at 15.16 seconds, for the cleaning of three 40-by-45-inch panes of glass.

"The record of 18.92 seconds was broken in England on the actual Guinness Book of World Records show," said Willingham.

The rules for the competition will be the "official Guinness rules, which were written a long time ago," Jacinda said.

The contestants will be judged on speed and accuracy, and a half second will be added to a person's time for each smear left on the glass.

The public is invited to watch the competition between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Saturday in the atrium area of the Holiday Inn Civic Center.

The four main aspects of professional window cleaning, according to Willingham, are high-rise, which requires special training and equipment; route work, which includes store-front windows; residential; and new construction cleanup.

Window cleaners' pay starts between $5 and $8 an hour for route work and $10 to $15 an hour for high-rise work, Willingham said. But in cities such as New York and Miami, the pay may be as much as $35 an hour.

"You can make good money window cleaning, but you have to be quick," he said.

Willingham said he hopes to hire some new window cleaners this spring, probably female Tech students because, he said, "women are usually better at cleaning."

There is a window cleaning company in Hawaii that consists of only women, Willingham said.

"Safety Before Service" is the theme of this year's seminar. High-rise safety is an important part of the window cleaning industry and is a topic to be discussed in the seminar.

Willingham said the equipment used by window cleaners is the same that is used by professional firefighters and police departments.

The workman's compensation rate for window cleaners in Texas was 51 percent and rose 19 percent this year, he said, which means that for every $100 paid to an employee, Willingham must pay an extra $70 to the workman's compensation pool in case of an accident.

A member of the State Board of Insurance will attend the seminar to get a better understanding of the window cleaning industry, and Willingham said he hopes to get the compensation insurance that was able to get the rate lowered. (in Illinois) lowered from 78 percent to 4 percent," Willingham said.

Slumping Tech faces hot Aggies

The Texas Tech women's basketball team, loser of three of its last four games, will meet Texas A&M at 1 p.m. Saturday at G. Rollie White Coliseum in College Station.

The Red Raiders are 2-4 in Southwest Conference play and 8-9 overall. A&M is 5-1 and 13-4 and is the league's second-place team behind Texas.

The Aggies have won nine of their last 10 games and are led by preseason All-America candidate Donna Roper, who is averaging 18.2 points a game. Senior Lisa Jordan is scoring more than 12 points a game.

Center Stacey Siebert has paced the Raiders with her 13.8 points and 9.8 rebounds per outing.

Back for the Raiders is junior forward Reena Lynch after not starting the last three games. Junior transfer Kelly Schilling started in place of Tech junior guard Karen Farst has hit 33 of 76 (43 percent) three-point goals.

In their last outing, the Aggies downed Houston 73-61 at home. The Raiders fell to SMU 70-63 in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum Tuesday.

ATC to host biggest meet yet at Tech

The Texas Tech Invitational track meet will see men's and women's teams from 12 schools from Texas and New Mexico today and Saturday at the Tech Athletic Training Center, the largest indoor track meet ever at Tech.

Pole vaulters Brit Pursley and Mike Turner will be shooting tonight for the NCAA qualifying mark of 17 feet, 4 inches. Pursley captured the school record of 17-1 last week after Turner vaulted 17-0 in the season's opening meet.

The Red Raider women have not been as successful this year outside of distance runner Kim Mudie, who is undefeated in two meets in the 1,600 meters.

Texas-El Paso and New Mexico lead the 24-team field.

Unfriendly road, A&M await Red Raiders

By JOEL WEST
The University Daily

Playing away from Lubbock Municipal Coliseum the last 2½ seasons has not proved very fruitful for Texas Tech. Nevertheless, the Red Raiders will be trying to create some momentum going into the midway point of the season — on the road.

Tech, which improved to 2-4 in the Southwest Conference and 7-10 overall with a 63-56 home win over SMU Wednesday, faces another trying road battle.

The Raiders meet Texas A&M at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at G. Rollie White Coliseum in College Station. The Aggies are 1-5 and 8-10 following Wednesday's 71-67 loss to Houston.

Tech has won only one game in 21 on an opponent's home court since beating Rice two seasons ago. Tech downed Colorado State on Dec. 29 of this season.

The road woes have left the Raiders with a losing streak of 14 regular-season SWC road games. The Aggies have beaten Tech the last four times in College Station.

Raider guard Sean Gay, who exploded for 27 points against the Mustangs, leads Tech in scoring with more than 17 points per contest.

The senior from Houston Madison also leads the Raiders with 75 assists and 28 steals. Gay's three assists Wednesday night gave him 379 for his

State guard, 1955-57.

Gillman, 77, learned of his selection in a telephone call from The Associated Press to his home in Carlsbad, Calif.

"It's a great honor and especially to go in with two great friends, Frank Howard and Warren Woodson," Gillman said. "I've known Frank for 100 years, and I used to compete against Warren. They're both fine coaches and fine men."

Howard, who will be 80 on March 25, spent 30 years as Clemson's head coach after succeeding Jess Neely in 1940 and compiled a record of 165-118-12. He was Clemson's athletic director from 1969 until 1971 and serv-career and broke Bubba Jennings' school assist record.

Tech center J.D. Sanders is expected to play Saturday after sitting out a one-game suspension for missing class. Hitting 72.2 percent of his floor shots in league games, Sanders is leading the SWC in field goal accuracy.

Sophomore forward James Johnson has played strong lately, hitting four of seven field goals in each of the last two games. Johnson also has 13 rebounds in that time.

The Aggies are led by senior forward Donald Thompson's 17.9 points and junior guard David Williams' 4.8 rebounds per game.

A&M's Shelby Metcalf, the league's dean of coaches, is the winningest coach in SWC games with a record of 230-152 since he took over the Aggies in 1964. Tech coach Gerald Myers is second to Metcalf with a 228-154 record through 17½ seasons with the Raiders.

Sports Briefs

Jordan not shooting for 20,000 points

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan is proud of his 10,000 career points, but he said Thursday he has no intention of getting bogged down in the numbers game.

"It means an awful lot to me," Jordan said as he prepared for practice with the Chicago Bulls. "It's something I will always be able to look back on."

"But, realistically, I'm not going to put myself in a position where I'm thinking of 20,000 or 30,000 points. I have a goal, and that's to help the Bulls get an NBA championship."

Jordan scored his 10,000th point with his 33rd and final point Wednesday night in the Bulls' 120-108 loss to the 76ers in Philadelphia. It came in his fifth year and his 303rd game.

Only Wilt Chamberlain accomplished the feat more quickly.

Texas invites Cecena, Stanley to camp

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers announced three signings for the 1989 season Wednesday.

Pitcher Jose Cecena and catcher Mike Stanley, listed on the Class AAA Oklahoma City roster, agreed to one-year contracts and will report to the Rangers' major league spring training camp as non-roster players. The club also signed free agent infielder Andre Robertson to a minor league contract.

Cecena, who missed the second half of the 1988 campaign with elbow problems, was 0-0 with a 4.70 ERA in 22 games with Texas, and went 0-0 with a 6.00 ERA in five games at Oklahoma City.

Stanley batted .229 with three home runs and 27 RBIs in 94 games for the Rangers last season.

Robertson spent all or part of 1980-1985 with the New York Yankees.

A&M to hold results until after Feb. 8

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M is almost finished with an internal investigation of its football program, but school officials say they won't release results until after the first day recruits can sign.

"Anything that should come out from this point should come from the school," said the NCAA's chief enforcement officer, David Berst. "But I don't think anything will come out before then."

National signing day is Feb. 8.

The internal investigation began in the wake of allegations revealed in a story by The Dallas Morning News that former head coach and athletic director Jackie Sherrill paid a former player "hush money."

Sherrill since has quit, and two assistants previously sanctioned by the NCAA have been fired.

Three coaches to join ex-Raider in college shrine

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sid Gillman, Frank Howard and Warren Woodson, dominant coaches of an earlier era, have been elected to the College Hall of Fame, the National Football Foundation announced Thursday.

The three were selected by the foundation's 12-man Honors Court and will be formally inducted, along with 11 previously named players, Dec. 5 at a banquet in New York.

Former Texas Tech standout running back Donnie Anderson was among the 11 players elected Wednesday. Anderson, who played in 1963-65, was a three-year starter for the Red Raiders and rushed 526 times for 2,376 yards and caught 105 passes for 1,327 yards.

Also inducted Wednesday were Archie Manning of Mississippi and Roman Gabriel of North Carolina State and fullback Larry Csonka of Syracuse. The others were Bob Schloredt, Washington quarterback, 1958-60; Paul Cleary, USC end, 1946-47; halfback Chalmers "Bump" Elliott, Purdue, 1944, Michigan 1946-47; Bob Johnson, Tennessee center, 1965-67; Ted Kwalick, Penn State tight end, 1966-68; Edgar "Eggs" Manske, Northwestern end, 1931-33, and Aurelius Thomas, Ohio

State guard, 1955-57.

Gillman, 77, learned of his selection in a telephone call from The Associated Press to his home in Carlsbad, Calif.

"It's a great honor and especially to go in with two great friends, Frank Howard and Warren Woodson," Gillman said. "I've known Frank for 100 years, and I used to compete against Warren. They're both fine coaches and fine men."

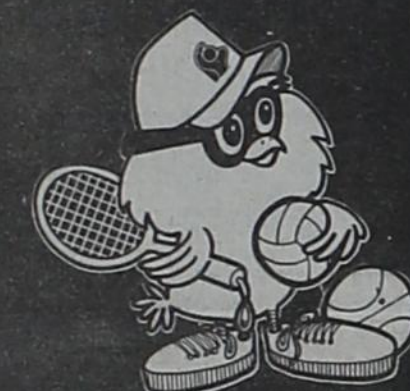

Howard, who will be 80 on March 25, spent 30 years as Clemson's head coach after succeeding Jess Neely in 1940 and compiled a record of 165-118-12. He was Clemson's athletic director from 1969 until 1971 and served on the College Football Rules Committee.

Woodson, one of 18 coaches whose teams have won 200 or more games, coached at Conway (Ark.) State from 1935-40, Hardin-Simmons in 1941-42 and 1946-51, Arizona from 1952-56, New Mexico State from 1958-67 and Trinity (Texas) in 1972-73. His overall record was 203-95-14.

Woodson, who will be 86 on Feb. 24, was named College Division Coach of the Year in 1960 for leading New Mexico State to an 11-0 record.

Gillman, who is known for his innovative passing offenses, stays active by scouting quarterbacks for the Kansas City Chiefs.
