"He Profits Most Who Serves Best"

SMOKE

FROM THE MOUNTAIN

Roy Reid and his brother, Claude, turned train hitchhikers recently but it wasn't because they wanted to. And they got in bad with the conductor in a big way. Saturday they were putting their mother on the train and carried her bags to her seat. In the meantime the train started leaving, the aisles were jammed, and in the scurry to get out, the Reids barged into the conductor so hard he fell down. After that the conductor thought it would be well worth the train's time to get those two off the train so they stopped the train and let the Reids off. That cured them of getting a ride for nothing.

The Lions are trying to teach their members "etyket" it seems for it costs them to eat watermelon with a spoon instead of a fork. But just the same if they can get the juice with a fork we'd like to see the fork they're using.

The hen that laid the round egg got some publicity, last week, too since the article quoted in the Smoke appeared in the Abilene paper recently. Hope the hen doesn't get the big head and stop laying completely.

At the request of two young business men who are also very eligible bachelors, the News office has established a dating bureau, so if you want the name and address of a girl, call here. We started this after the two said bachelors saw a young lady come in the office and as soon as she had gone, they dashed in, so to speak, to inquire her name, address, description, and state of single or married blessedness. You should have seen the happy look when we informed them she was single, but try as we might we couldn't remember her name. They found out where she works though.

The rain that fell last week surely put a smile on faces although some sections around here did not get even a shower. Rockwood had about four inches, some of the farmers said. That community and when are kind getting an exclusive license on rain it seems, since they had quite a flood some time ago and our citizens north of town were not even honored by a sprinkle.

The fireboys went to Brady Tuesday. Nuff said.

Home, which means the town as well as the house you live in, is called the grandest of all institutions. When you go elsewhere to spend your money, you fail in your loyalty to that institution. It takes a long time to fill a tub with water if you carry it in a leaky pail. So it takes a long time to build lasting prosperity in a town, if much of its trade leaks out in purchases from stores in other towns.—Eureka Herald.

Local Boys Win Golf Tournament

Pete Newman and Stuart Williams, both of Santa Anna, took the two first places in the Coleman County Golf Tournament last week-end at Coleman Country Club. The tournament was sponsored by the San Antonio Light and was open to boys under 21. Both boys will leave for San Antonio this week-end to enter the tournament there next week.

Newman also placed as medalist and both shot near-par in order to win their places. Over 12 boys from the county entered in the meet.

COURTHOUSE ELECTION DEFEATED SATURDAY

Baker Is Named County Supt. by Commissioners

Santa Anna Man to Fill Office Vacated by J. L. Beard; Taught 19 Years

J. L. P. Baker of Santa Anna was named county superintendent of Coleman County Tuesday at a called meeting of the Commissioners' Court, to succeed J. L. Beard, who resigned last week to accept a position as deputy state superintendent at Childress.

Mr. Baker is well qualified for the position which he will assume Sept. 1, having had 19 years teaching experience. Fourteen years of this time he was superintendent of the Buffalo High School and his influence and leadership has much to do with Buffalo becoming what is believed to be the first rural consolidated high school in the state.

The new county superintendent has a bachelor of arts degree from Howard Payne College, a diploma from the Commercial department of the same college and has attended John Tarleton two terms taking courses in industrial work.

Mr. Baker has been a resident of this county for 36 years and is well known, both here and at Coleman and other parts of the county. He was named to the place over 21 candidates who had applied for the position.

Traffic Lights to Be Installed on Two Corners

City Commission Agrees to Lions Proposal for City's First Signals

The City Commission reported favorably in regard to placing traffic lights on two busy corners in Santa Anna, it was announced at the Lions Club meeting Tuesday.

Last week the Lions voted to ask the commission to install at least one light on the main business street, although two were needed. The commission stated that equipment for two lights on Wallis Avenue would be installed soon. Exact location was not announced but it is thought probable that they will be on Depot Street and on the corner east of that.

Members present at the Lions meeting were M. L. Womack, C. F. Campbell, Chas. Berry, W. R. Mulroy, John F. Turner, C. A. Walker, J. W. Riley, Roy Lovelady, W. H. Thate, Hardy Blue, J. C. Scarborough, O. L. Cheaney, Jim Bob Gregg, W. H. Ragsdale, O. A. Etheredge, Loyd Burris, F. C. Woodward, J. T. Garrett, Mrs. R. R. Lovelady, pianist, and her sister, Mrs. Cleveland.

Gouldbusk Club Women to Visit Soil Project

Thirty ladies from the Gouldbusk Womens Club will visit the Upper Concho River Soil Conservation Project on August 24th, reports C. B. Edwards, Vocational Agricultural teacher at Mozelle. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards will accompany the group and will make plans for another large group of landowners and farm boys to visit the project about September 1st. Edwards, with several other teachers of Coleman county, brought the largest delegation, about 150 men and boys, to the project last year.

The Gouldbusk Womens Club has recently been studying soil and water conservation and wishes to see all of the applicable conservation practices that they have studied combined in a complete conservation program. Combining contour ridging, listing, terracing, water spreading, and other measures on each farm so as to hold all the rainfall on the land and also to use extra runoff water from adjacent areas forms a complete conservation program for a large area of Rolling Plains land, said R. M. Milhollin, Project Manager.

A new mill has been purchased, the gin has been entirely rebuilt with the best equipment and everything has been improved for your convenience and comfort.

Coleman Man Killed When Gun Discharges

Jack Norman McClure, 37, of Coleman was found shot through the heart Thursday morning between 9:30 and 10 o'clock in the store room back of his home where he had been cleaning a shotgun.

He had told his son that he would clean the gun out there and a few minutes later a shot was heard. He was dead when his family and neighbors found him. Rags and cleaning equipment around him point out that Mr. McClure had been cleaning the gun at the time and that the discharge was accidental.

Mr. McClure, who was connected with the Great Southern Life Insurance Co., is well known here. Surviving him are his wife and son, Billy Jack; his father, J. E. McClure of Santa Anna, five brothers, G. K., D. W., W. J. and B. H., all of Santa Anna, W. E. of Motley, and one sister, Mrs. Louis Newman of Santa Anna.

Boys Interested in Football Asked to Sign Up This Week if Interested in Training Camp

Coach John E. Little passed through Santa Anna Sunday enroute to his home at Woodson after attending a coaching school at Waco last week for high school coaches. Dana X. Bible and other celebrities in the coaching field conducted the school.

Coach Little will return to Santa Anna about August 25 to take the football boys out for a week's training before school begins Sept. 6. All football boys who would like to spend the week of August 30-Sept. 4 in an outing and training camp to be selected later, should turn their names in to Supt. J. C. Scarborough or Principal A. D. Pettit if they will go with the squad this week.

In event this is not attempted, Scarborough stated, Coach Little will be here during the week for daily work-outs on the local field. All boys interested in football are asked to meet Little at the high school on Thursday night, August 26.

Rev. James Land Leads Revival at Assembly of God

San Saba Evangelist Begins Meeting Last Sunday

Rev. James J. Land of San Saba is conducting an old time revival at the Assembly of God Church in Santa Anna now, the meeting beginning last Sunday night to continue indefinitely.

Rev. Land's congregations have stated that his "soul stirring messages" are exceptionally practical, and inspirational and gives a special ministry and earnest appeal to the sinners.

The sermon Saturday night will be on "The Mark of the Beast." Sunday night's sermon topic will be "Hell and How Long It Lasts."

The evangelist, who is a noted church builder in his denomination, was here about three years ago and conducted a revival. He is here now with his wife.

"An invitation is extended to all to attend the meetings," stated Rev. Land.

ARRESTED

J. McCoy was arrested Friday and Saturday and charged with possession of beer for purpose of selling. He was fined and made $500 bond.

School Budget to Be Adopted This Evening at H. S.

Patrons Invited to Attend Call Meeting of Board

At a called meeting of the Board of Education Friday night at the high school building the 1937-1938 budget for the Santa Anna Independent School District will be reviewed and adopted. It is an open meeting and any interested patron or taxpayer is welcome to be present.

For the information of the public it will be shown that at the close of this fiscal year there will be an indebtedness on the part of the district to teachers of $4,000 and to Bond Holders of $5,000, a tax delinquency in excess of $30,000 and an assessed valuation so low that if 100% collection of current taxes obtained there would not be collected enough to meet the bonded debt requirement.

This is seen when one recalls that Santa Anna District had an assessed valuation as large as the present one, $1,440,000, before the $100,000 bonds were issued for constructing the high school. These bonds were voted with the understanding that valuations would have to be increased from 30 to 35%. The election carried 283 to 70, and the assessed valuation was raised to approximately $2,200,000. With the natural shrinkage in valuations due to the depression, and the failure of many to meet their obligations in the matter of paying their taxes the above-named conditions have inevitably resulted. This condition in the opinion of the Board of Education not only justifies but also impels it to use every means possible to effect a better balance.

Cast Your Vote Monday

Monday the voters of Texas will have a chance to voice their approval or disapproval of six constitutional amendments which have been proposed by the legislature.

Two of the amendments deal with state-federal compensation for Texas' needy blind and needy children. Both would comply with the federal social security program and the federal government would match the state dollar for this work.

One amendment provides that stockholders in state banks should be relieved of double liability and thus would save state banks from going on the rocks.

An amendment to reduce delinquency in tax payments and to reward the prompt tax payer is another amendment up for approval Monday.

The fifth amendment for immediate state-wide interest provides that the salary system for local and district officers be abolished and a return made to the fee system, which was abolished three years ago by an amendment.

The sixth amendment has to do with Harris county, but if it proves successful, if it passes, may be applied to other counties. Harris county wants to abolish the custom of building roads by bond issue and use a method of direct local taxes or a pay-as-you-go policy.

Keep the amendments in mind and think them over. When you go to the polls Monday vote your honest convictions and you will have done your duty. Don't stay at home and let someone else do the voting.

You've also probably noticed that the weaker a man's argument the stronger the language he uses. You can tell when youth ends and decay begins. You begin to notice how noisy the world is.

Baptist Column

Rev. R. Elmer Dunham, Pastor, Sunday School at 9:45 a. m. T. H. Upton, Gen. Supt. Preaching services 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. (Earlier in evening now).

Training Union 7 p. m. Rev. A. B. Lightfoot, Gen. Director. Pastor to Preach Sunday

The pastor having closed a twelve days revival at North Coleman will fill the pulpit at the morning hour as usual. All RSGDb, v'gy H7theDaat are invited to read the article "Why I Don't Go to Church" in the American Magazine and the answer to it in the Baptist Standard of last week. Reference will be made to these in the sermon "Classified by A Crisis."

That Was Splendid! That Mr. Augustus Lightfoot, Miss Rosalie Niell and Mr. Tamadge Turner, three of our own young people, should go out to a school house center where no services have been being held and hold such a revival meeting as they did at the Plainview School house speaks well for several. It speaks well for the young people, well for the Training Union in which they have been developing leadership, for the church which sponsors this Training Union and for the splendid people of the community out there who backed them with their attendance, prayers, singing and a liberal offering. Truly it is a thing to make all rejoice and take courage in the work of the Lord. The conversions, rededications and new resolves made during that meeting are worth much in the realm of eternal things. May their week at Line School house be equally blest, and may our own church see again and again the value of investment in training for leadership thru the BTU.

We Welcome Her Mrs. Flores, who came to unite with our church Sunday after the splendid sermon preached by Rev. Mayo Cleveland is extended a hearty welcome by all.

Thanks for the Reminders In the rush of meetings, revivals etc we have not been able to keep up this column every week lately. But friends we do appreciate your reminding us that you miss it when it doesn't appear. We believe it is from a deep interest in things spiritual that you want to read this church news column.

The Attendance Holds High Our attendance during the vacationing period has held up remarkably well in Sunday school. While a number of our own people are away, it is gratifying to see so many visitors who are vacationing here in attendance at our own services. And as our people return, we are happy to learn that they have attended church and Sunday school elsewhere to their own profit and enjoyment. Fine reports of the Newman's visit to the old Independence Home coming, the churches en route and especially the visit with the Wings at Gonzales are interesting and helpful. The recent revival at the First Baptist church, Gonzales, is still being talked about in that historic old town. It is the greatest revival we have known of in that city for years, and since we lived there for nearly four years, we are in position to appreciate what that means. Brother Wingo and his people are to be heartily congratulated and thanks rendered to God whom they serve for all these things. Promotion Day and Installation of Officers

A big day in the history of the church his the Annual Promotion day and installation of new officers in all organizations. The nomination committee has met three times and many of the officers have been elected other nominated and lists ready to present to the church have been made. Mr. Roy Reid has been elected as the incoming Sunday school superintendent and is at work as head of nominations for other Sunday school officers. Promotion day is September 26 and new officers are in charge from there on thru the next year.

After the program, the party was invited out on the church lawn, where they were served with a watermelon feast. All departed with the next zone meeting going to Coleman. BETRAYAL
 Love beckoned and I followed;
 Her sign invoked no loss,
 And yet, she left me stricken
 Before a wooden cross.

Love beckoned and I followed;
 She led me to a mart
 And bought a jeweled casket
 That held my bleeding heart.

Love beckoned and I followed;
 I was her passive slave,
 She vanished when I stumbled
 Upon a new-made grave.

THESE THINGS I ASK
 A little band upon my finger,
 A little home in which to linger;
 Two little tots upon the floor,
 A friend and neighbor right next door.
 A little money laid away,
 A little dream from yesterday,
 A little joy, a little sorrow,
 A little hope for dim tomorrow.
 To be a mother and a wife
 Is all I ask of you, O Life.

MY MAN
 My man is a quiet man,
 Loving his home,
 But I have a restless heart
 I long to roam.

He wants a little house
 Down in a glade,
 I dread the thought of it—
 Too much shade.

He thinks an apple tree
 Right for the door,
 I choose windy pines
 And great ocean's roar.

But, O my love's a true man
 And dear is my home—
 My heart stays with him,

While my wild dreams roam.

W. T. Utilities Reduces Charges

Reduction Applies to Homes Equipped with Electric Ranges for Cooking

The West Texas Utilities Company this week ignored the rising cost of living when it announced a reduction of 16-23 per cent in electric rates for Santa Anna.

A new low rate of 2½ cents per kilowatt-hour for all current over 50 kilowatt-hours used monthly in homes equipped with electric ranges was announced by W. R. Mulroy, local manager. The reduction makes electricity as practical as any other fuel for cooking purposes, he said.

The 2½ cent rate is effective with this month's bills. Only customers using electric cookery will benefit by reduction. It is based on the theory that "the more you use, the less it costs," Mr. Mulroy said.

Where the electric range is installed, all current over 50 kilowatt-hours used each month will take the lower rate. It is a step in the "incentive rate schedule" which provides low-cost current for refrigeration, lights, and other domestic purposes inasmuch as these are included in the high-usage bracket.

Popularity of the electric range was credited with making the reduction possible. The spread of electric cookery to hundreds of homes formerly using old-fashioned methods makes a lower rate practical, Mulroy said.

"The reduction is in keeping with the company's policy of lowering rates as fast as increased usage permits," he added. "Although the cost of living in general has risen and taxation has reached an unprecedented height, we believe it wise to encourage home modernization by making electric service as cheap and efficient as possible."

"The Rest of the Record"

BY JAMES V. ALLRED
 Governor of Texas

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 14.—By the time you read this, we will be back in Texas and, notwithstanding the wonderful privilege it has been to visit Mexico, happy to be back home. We are particularly anxious to see little David, our second son, and baby Sam Houston.

It is difficult for us to realize that it is so hot in Texas. Mexico City is 7500 feet high and the weather is ideal. They tell us it is this way the year round, little cooler in winter than in summer. It was a little chilly for us at first—believe it or not, we asked for a fire at lunch; now, however, we are accustomed to it and the weather is lovely. Occasionally when the mountain tops are clear of clouds, we can see two snow capped volcano peaks in the distance.

Although Ambassador Joseph Daniels is in Europe, he wired his assistants here to insist upon our staying at the American Embassy. So here we are—and we have never been privileged to stay at a lovelier place. Our own government officials have been almost as marvelous to us as those of the Mexican government.

Last week I told you how hospitable these people had been to us in the early stages of our visit; this hospitality has increased in warmth at every stage. We have been entertained by seven governors in as many state capitols, and by officers in the President's cabinet here in Mexico. It clearly demonstrates that these people believe in the Good Neighbor policy inaugurated by President Roosevelt.

President Cardenas of Mexico is absent from the capitol. He is in the state of Yucatan, which is the most southern Mexican state, working on agrarian, or agricultural problems. He sent us a warm telegram of welcome, then commissioned the Governor of this Federal District to call on us officially as his representative. Mrs. Allred is visiting the President's wife today. Everywhere these people seem to realize that they have more in common with Texas than perhaps any other state; I think if we take the same position, it can only result in more business and better relations for all of us.

It would be impossible in this short space to even refer to all the interesting places we have seen on this trip. I really believe we could spend a month right here in Mexico City and not see half of all we should see. The old churches or cathedrals, the palaces, the public buildings, the theatres, the gardens, the parks, the flowers, the schools, the public markets—the people. It is the people who most interest me. They are picturesque with their music everywhere, their arts, their dress which has changed but little for centuries, yet all this maintained alongside a twentieth century civilization of modern highways, railroads, hotels, tourist camps and conveniences of every kind. We have driven over highways as well constructed and maintained as any in Texas, yet in fields adjoining they still plow with oxen; and peons trudge alongside the road plying whips over the backs of burros loaded with wood or cargoes larger than the beasts themselves.

The history of Mexico is as interesting as that of any nation. The struggles of the people for liberty and freedom have been just as brave, if not braver, than our own. It has been such a privilege to us to journey over the very ground travelled by Cortez, the Spanish Conqueror, hundreds of years ago; to see the palaces and the churches he

WE SOLICIT YOUR VOTE

An election will be held this coming Monday to vote upon certain amendments to the Texas Constitution. One of these amendments affects stockholders in State Banks. The undersigned banks and their stockholders respectfully request that you vote for this amendment.

Heretofore, stockholders in National and State Banks were subject to what is known as the double liability law. Under this law, each stockholder was subject to a cash assessment for an amount equal to the face value of his stock for the protection of depositors. In 1933 Congress enacted a depositor's guaranty law and set up the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for the protection of depositors. This corporation is financed by assessments against each member bank amounting to 1-12 of 1% of its average daily deposits. It does for the depositors what the double liability did before but in a much more effective manner.

In consequence, National Banks on July 1, 1937, were relieved of this double liability. The amendment to be voted upon on Monday is designed to do the same for stockholders in State Banks. Mr. Leo T. Crowley, Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Washington, D. C., as well as Governor James V. Allred of Texas endorse the amendment. The undersigned banks believe that this amendment is in the interest of justice and fair play and earnestly urge you to vote.

VOTE

"For the amendment of Section 16 to Article XVI of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for the amount of the liability of stockholders in State banks."

July 2, 1937
 Our attention has been called to the proposed amendment to the constitution of Texas to be submitted to voters in an election to be held Monday, August 23, 1937, which provides for the elimination of double liability on stockholders of State banks in Texas. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation favors the proposed amendment.

And Scratch Out

"Against the amendment of Section 16 to Article XVI of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for the amount of the liability of stockholders in State banks."

Inasmuch as more than 98 percent of the depositors in insured banks are fully insured against loss by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, repeal of double liability will not affect their interests adversely. Double liability of stockholders in most national banks has been eliminated. Passage of the proposed amendment to the constitution of Texas will put stockholders of State banks in Texas on a par with stockholders of national banks, thus avoiding discrimination.

I am in favor of the passage of this amendment and I endorse same to the voters of Texas.
 Sincerely yours
 JAMES V. ALLRED

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Preparing to close her summer home and spend the winter in France with a great-aunt, Anne Vincennes, a middle-aged widow, accedes to the pleas of her adopted daughter Rachel, twenty and pretty, that she tell her about her real mother. Anne, an unselfish, understanding soul, finds the task difficult, since she feels Rachel is putting a barrier between them. Rachel learns that her real mother was beautiful, eighteen-year-old Elinor Malloy, deserted by her young husband, before Rachel's birth. He was killed in the World War. In desperate financial straits, Elinor had agreed to Rachel's adoption at birth by Anne, whose own baby had died. Elinor subsequently had married Peter Cayne, a wealthy New York business man, and had a son. To soothe the story for Rachel, Anne omits to tell her that her mother had been selfish and selfish.

CHAPTER II—Rachel goes fishing with Bob Eddis, a local boy who runs a library and does wood carving. She refuses his plea to stay in Rockport and travels him instead of going to New York for the winter. At dinner Rachel announces she is going to do something of her very own in New York. Departing the next morning they leave the keys with Mr. Kreef, a neighbor.

CHAPTER III—Reviewing the situation between Rachel and herself, Anne is surprised in her belief that it is time for Rachel to learn more self-dependence. Rachel makes arrangements to stay in New York for the winter with "Pink," the green, vivacious girl absorbed in her job. Anne leaves provision for Rachel's expenses in case of need and leaves for Europe. After Anne sails, Rachel, bent on seeing her real mother, looks up Elinor Cayne's number.

CHAPTER IV—Rachel learns the Caynes are not in town. Pink takes Rachel to dinner at Tom and Rhoda Steele's where she meets Oliver Land, a shabby gentleman young man out of work who suggests that she apply for a job as a photographer's model for advertising illustrations. He agrees to introduce her to the head of an agency.

CHAPTER V—Thinking of Anne, Rachel is piqued, fretfully tells her own mother would not have left her alone. She is not entirely happy with Pink Matthews. Her desire to see Elinor Cayne increases. Through Oliver Land she meets Louis Vingo, is hired as a photographer's model and succeeds on her first assignment posing for furniture advertising. Oliver makes her feel her usefulness to him.

CHAPTER VI—On an assignment, Rachel meets Curt Elton, a young friend of Vingo's. At lunch she learns that he is a country newspaper man spending a year in New York. Her experience takes a number of different things, planning to return home later to edit the paper his father left. That evening she receives flowers from him. She shows Mrs. Cayne's name but is rebuffed because she will not give her name. Later Curt reveals that Vingo had received an inquiry from a private detective for a girl to go into a rich family and act as lady's maid to check up on some jewelry thefts. Rachel is amazed when she learns the name is Cayne. Without revealing her relationship, she gets Curt to persuade Vingo to let her meet Terriss, the detective, hoping to get the job.

CHAPTER VII—Terriss explains that Elinor Cayne is twenty years younger than her husband and that the son is seventeen. He asks to have Rachel meet Mr. Cayne. She impresses him favorably and gets the job.

It was all unreal, what she was doing, all of her thoughts were in a fever of impatience, she had to force herself to the routine of her preparations.

She lunched with Curt and seemed to listen to his advice, but she didn't really hear much of it. She was annoyed with herself that she should be so wildly excited, and was afraid that she would reveal it, so she made a great effort to be casual. Only his last words came through to her distinctly: "When you don't know what to say, keep still, and don't forget I'll be on the first look-out post, ready to come if you whistle."

"When you don't know what to say, keep still," Rachel thought of that while she packed a shabby suitcase with her shabbiest clothes, slipped down her hair, rubbed her nose shiny and wiped off her lip rouge, then dressed in a faded green knitted suit which she had meant to throw away. She had decided against wearing the spectacles Mr. Terriss had suggested, she felt they would only bother her. When she was ready she looked at herself in the glass and thought she made a very good likeness of a neat respectable housemaid.

On her way uptown her excitement changed and cooled and, oddly, she found herself thinking of Anne with a sense of comfort and support. No matter what happened there was Anne in the background, loving, understanding. Then she began to think of the woman she would see in a few moments, her own mother who had brought her into the world, given her life and being, a heart to beat, blood to demand its own blood kinship. And she felt an immense, overwhelming certainty that her own mother would somehow recognize this kinship and respond to it. Perhaps not at once, perhaps only vaguely—but yet, surely, unmistakably.

She went to the servants' entrance of the apartment, rang the bell of a middle-aged man in a houseman's coat opened the door. "Oh, the new maid," he said. "Mr. Cayne said you'd be coming. This way."

Rachel followed him into a large hall where a stout woman was arranging an elaborate tea table. "This is Lena, my wife," he said. "My name's Towers. What's

"My name's Rachel," she said meekly, adding still more meekly, "pleased to meet you both."
"I'll show you your room," said Mrs. Towers, giving Rachel a cold prolonged stare. "And you get along with this tray, Bert, the madame's rung twice. You're to go in and see her as soon as you've taken off your coat and hat, Rachel. Come right along."

Down a back hall was her room—no smaller than the one she had at Pink's, Rachel noticed—with white iron bed, unmade, a bureau with wavy mirror, a chair and table, a stationary stand.
"Bedding and towels is in the bureau," said Mrs. Towers, "but don't stop to fix anything now, the madame's waiting. There's the closet, put your hat and coat in there. Mr. Towers and me have a room two doors down, the bathroom's between. Come ahead."

With a strong sense of masquerade and warning herself to be very careful, Rachel followed Mrs. Towers again through the back hall, then at the kitchen door they turned into another hall which led to the front. At a mirrored door Mrs. Towers paused and tapped, then opening it, announced in sugary tones: "Here's the new girl, madame."

Rachel found herself in a long, too-decorated, too-colored, too-colored drawing room. Directly before her against the light were a smallish woman dressed in fluttery pastel chiffons and a very young man, lounging in one chair, his feet on another. And for the first time in her life she waited to hear her own mother's voice.

"Now where on earth," said Mrs. Cayne fretfully, "did Peter pick up such a great overgrown gawky creature?—she's sure to be clumsy."

The shock of the unfeeling comment sent the blood flying to Rachel's face. She couldn't speak. Then the very young man said, "Look, she's blushing!" and began to laugh.
His laughter brought back Rachel's composure. She comprehended that this was her half-brother, Peter Cayne's and Elinor's son, and she remembered that she must play her part. "Good afternoon, madame," she stammered. "I hope—I hope I will be able to do the work satisfactorily."

"I suppose you haven't a uniform? Not even an apron?" said Mrs. Cayne.
"No, madame."
"There, you see, Holbrook," Elinor Cayne turned to her son. "Your father leaves everything to me. He would have it that I needed a maid and he sends one who hasn't so much as an apron."

"What color uniforms are you going to get for her? Why don't you try something interesting—soft blue or violet or bright pink?" Holbrook Cayne's voice was not boyish and he seemed older than his seventeen years, though he was slender and not very tall.

"Your father would have a brain storm!" Mrs. Cayne laughed now. Then she spoke again to Rachel. "What's your name?"

"Rachel." As she said it Rachel wondered if her mother would ask her last name, but Mrs. Cayne seemed satisfied and as she was busy with the teapot Rachel could look at her closely for the first time, the blue eyes Anne had described, the dark hair, the fair white skin, the general loveliness and an amazing youthfulness of outline and manner. "Youthful," thought Rachel, "but obviously not young. And this is my own mother! How strange, how strange this is." Mrs. Cayne's many rings, the bracelets clinking down her arm as she lifted the cup, the twisted bar of diamonds in the chignon at her breast recalled Rachel to the reason she had been sent there. "I must be careful, I must be awfully careful," she thought. Aloud she said: "If you don't need me to do anything right away, madame, I'll unpack my suitcase. Or if you'd like me to I could go out and buy an apron to use tonight."

"But I do need you to do something," Rachel followed the small fluttering figure down the hall again and into an astonishing bedroom, rocco pink and blue with endless mirrors. "There, look in that closet and you'll find some evening dresses that need pressing. I don't know which one I'll wear tonight, so you can press them all. That closet's for evening clothes alone. This one over here is for day things."

The evening dress closet was wide and deep, with so many gowns of every color, every material, that Rachel paused in surprise.

Mrs. Cayne was impatient. "Take the first row and get them done before dinner, I'll wear one of them. You can do the others tonight."

"It's a tryout for me," thought Rachel. She took an armful of dresses and went back to Mrs. Towers, who indicated a small laundry beyond the kitchen with an iron and pressing board.

The dresses were expensive and elaborate, too elaborate, too showy. Rachel worked at them carefully, surprised to find herself almost without feeling. She wasn't even disappointed, she was simply numb and blank.

Mrs. Towers called her. "This madame's ringing for you."
"I'm not half done," said Rachel. "Take 'em all back and don't say nothing. She won't look 'em over, she'll advise the cook with a shrewd, not unfriendly glance. She don't know good work from bad. She just likes to think she's making people

Thus warned, Rachel carried the dresses back to the bedroom. Mrs. Cayne was sitting before her dressing table taking off her bracelets.
"I'll wear that blue crepe, I think," she said, and Rachel laid it carefully on the bed. "Silver sandals—on the rack in the evening dress closet. And I want my bath quite warm; but not hot. Heaps of scent."

Rachel brought the slippers and was sent for fresh stockings and underwear from one of the tall-inlaid French chests. There seemed to be no end to Mrs. Cayne's exorbitant arrangement of colored marbles, mirrors, plate glass, silver. Rachel started the water, added quantities of gardenia bath salts and was startled to see how somber and shabby she looked in her old knitted suit in the middle of the glitter and luxury. She fetched a negligee of crushed pink velvet, pink velvet mules bordered with white fur, helped Mrs. Cayne to take off her chiffons and to slip out of her girdle.

"Press every dress before you hang it up, that's most important," said Mrs. Cayne absently. She was absorbed in watching her reflection from every possible angle with open pleasure.

Rachel put the room in order while Elinor bathed. The door opened and Mr. Cayne looked in. He recognized Rachel with satisfaction. "Here you are then," he said, nodding. "Where's Mrs. Cayne?"

"Taking her bath, sir."
"Oh Elinor," called her husband, "want to see a show tonight?"
"I can't tonight. Holbrook and I are going to the movies."

Mr. Cayne came into the room, his keen glance ran over the bracelets and rings on the dressing table, he put out a cautious finger, moved them, counting. "I'll go with you," he said.

Mrs. Cayne's voice was sweet, but faintly mocking. "Dear, you won't like it, I'm chaperoning a party of Holbrook's friends."

"No, I couldn't stand that." He looked round at Rachel with a sly twinkle. "How do you like your new maid?" he called.

"She's terribly overgrown and gawky and rather dumb. I don't see why you couldn't get me someone experienced."

"Oh pooh, nobody ever suits you." Rachel realized that this remark was in the nature of explanation and apology to her. She seized another armful of dresses and escaped to the laundry. When she came back Mr. Cayne had gone to his own room and Mrs. Cayne was waiting to be dressed. She was in much better humor. Rachel tried to seem accustomed to her work, buckled the sandals deftly, manipulated the hooks and snaps with concentrated attention. Just before the gown went on Mrs. Cayne settled herself to the prolonged labor of make-up. It was plain that she enjoyed the process and she did it skillfully. Rachel watched her with an obscure painful resentment, which she could not reason away.

When Elinor's face was tinted to her pleasure she stepped into the dress she had selected, a blue crepe exactly the color of her eyes, and Rachel drew it up over the slim hips, adjusted the intricate shoulder straps and buttoned 25 tiny buttons down the back. Then Elinor again put on her rings and bracelets and brooch, reshaped her lips, touched perfume to each wrist and behind each ear and finally, directing Rachel to move the long mirrors so that they would offer her entire reflection, she walked back and forth the length of the room, observing her effect intently.

When she was quite satisfied, she had more orders for Rachel. "I'll want my mink coat and muff and that little hat of blue velvet flowers and a blue velvet bag. Have everything ready as soon as dinner's over, and you might as well open the beds. Towers will show you, you'll have to do that regularly. But you don't need to wait up until I come in tonight."

Rachel went back to the kitchen and asked if there was anything she could do to help Mrs. Towers, an offer which pleased the woman.

"No, you go on and unpack your bag and make your bed," she said. "She may think up something for you to do tonight."
"I have that set of those dresses to press," said Rachel.

"You take them out of the closet and shake them and put them back. She won't notice. Is she going out tonight?"

"She and—and—young Mr. Cayne are going to the movies with some of his friends."
"You better call him Mr. Holbrook, that's what they like. Mr. Cayne not going?"

Rachel reported the conversation on that subject and Mrs. Towers smiled grimly.
"She likes to run around and pretend Mr. Holbrook's her beau. She can't get away with it when Mr. Cayne's along. Go ahead now, fix your bed, we don't begin our dinner till the dessert's gone into the dining room."

"I'm awfully obliged to you for helping me out, Mrs. Towers," said Rachel. "Any time you want me to do anything here please say so."
"That's all right. I guess we'll get along. You can call me Lena if you want."

Lena liked her. Rachel knew that was an asset. She hurried into her tiny room and made haste to unpack and put the bedclothes on the bed, then scrubbed her face and hands and smoothed her hair flat again for her curls were perking up—everything at top speed to be ready if Mrs. Cayne rang for her, and to keep her thoughts off the display of vanity and uselessness she had just seen. It had disturbed and hurt her in a way she could not explain nor forgive; she was shaken with disappointment which she must not yet admit.

When Rachel went back to the kitchen dinner was going into the dining room. The serving table was filled with massive silver and red and gold French china and Lena was making fresh toast, draining artichokes and stirring golden Hollandaise sauce all apparently at the same time. Towers, impressed in his dress suit, had just carried in boned stuffed squabs, he brought out the platter, seized the tray with gravy, wild grape jelly and buttered crumbs in individual dishes and disappeared again. He and Lena had the serving beautifully systematized, it was fascinating to watch, every one of the many dishes was ready for him exactly as he needed it. Lena glanced up only once as she spooned and garnished and turned from the stove to the serving table: "You could set our table if you want, Rachel," she said "on the side there, the dishes in the cupboard up above, see?"

So Rachel prepared the table for her first meal under her mother's roof in the kitchen with the cook and the butler. She did it carefully, anxious to win Lena's approval, but it took only a few moments, she had it finished before the salad was served. It was a marvelous-looking salad, white, endive wreathed with green scallions, and it came chilled from the icebox with its plates. The sight and smell of the food made Rachel very hungry and Lena guessed it. She ladled out a bowl of soup and handed it to her. "They take their time," she said, "but that's no reason why you should starve."

Towers hastened in. "They're going to have coffee at the table on account of her and the boy going to bed." He looked at Rachel: "You better be ready to jump."

Rachel slipped down the hall past the dining room door to Mrs. Cayne's bedroom and took out the coat, hat and gloves, but she could not find a blue bag and was wary of rummaging. Presently Mrs. Cayne came in, head in the air, bright with triumph. "The blue bag's in that chest, top drawer—no, no, stupid, the bag with the lapis top's the one I want!"

She flung that direction at Rachel but otherwise hardly noticed her, for she was again intent on herself in the mirrors. But when she was ready, the little blue velvet hat set exquisitely on her exquisite little head, her slim body wrapped in the softness of her furs, she had one thing more to say and she said it with thoughtless cruelty. "Borrow an apron from Lena before I see you again, you're too depressing in that dreadful old rag."

The atmosphere in the kitchen had greatly changed when Rachel went back for the rest of her dinner. Towers had taken off his coat and he and Lena were leisurely and thoroughly eating their way through the generous remainders of the family's meal. They piled Rachel's plate, but she had lost her hunger. "I'm tired," she told them, wishing they wouldn't chew so audibly and visibly.

"Got to wait up for her?" asked Towers, taking another squab.
"No, she said not to, tonight. But she said I was to open the beds, that you'd show me how she likes it done and then I'm to do it regularly."

Towers and Mrs. Towers exchanged meaningful looks. "She don't want Mr. Cayne to know what she gets in. She wouldn't take the car, she knew Yates would keep tabs on 'em." This was Towers' explanation.

"What was she nagging him for tonight?" asked Lena.
"Wants an ermine cape and some jewelry, pair of clips, I think they only cost seven thousand."

"She's got enough jewelry now to stock a shop," said Lena to Rachel, "and she takes no more care of it than if it came from the five-and-dime. Did you see where she keeps it?"
"No, I didn't." Rachel hid her now stimulated interest.

"It's all in a little wall safe behind her dressing table and half the time she don't remember to lock it. If Mr. Cayne didn't look after it she wouldn't know what she's got, nor where she'd put it."

"She don't keep track of anything," added Towers.
"I don't see how she can," said Rachel. "I never saw a place so full of ornaments."

Towers wagged his head. "It's a junk shop, that's what it is. Mr. Cayne used to have the nicest neatest bachelor apartment before he got married! But she likes things fancy, everything."

"All the same," chimed in Mrs. Towers, "it's Mr. Cayne who knows what they've got. He'd miss a dish-rag if it disappeared irregular."

Towers made a warning sign. "He's got a keen eye, Mr. Cayne, that's a fact. Well, Rachel, I guess I better show you the bedrooms. The missus and I have got to get at that stack of dishes in the pantry."

Mr. Cayne's room communicated with his wife's, it was done in black oak and Jacobean linen, heavy and severe. Rachel noticed that there was only one mirror, a relief from Mrs. Cayne's bewildering panels. Then into Holbrook's room, which looked like a girl's—furniture painted white, a gray rug, rose-colored curtains. But there were shelves full of books and Rachel would have liked to read the titles, for these were the only books she had seen in the apartment. Under Towers' direction she folded the bedcovers, laid out slippers, pajamas and dressing gowns, lit bedside lamps. Holbrook had pale gray pajamas piped with rose, Oriental sandals and a dark rose-red brocade robe. Towers sniffed as he displayed them. "His mother likes him to doll up like that," he commented, "not that he needs any encouraging." Mr. Cayne's pajamas were cotton, his dressing gown a worn and weary dark wool. While they were in his room he came to the door. "Is that the new maid, Bert?"

"That's what I told Terriss, that's what I told Terriss."

Switch To ELECTRIC COOKERY with NEW LOW RATE!

Rate Reduced to

2 1/2¢

Per Kilowatt Hour.

Electric Cookery Averages No More than One Cent a Meal per Person

NEW RATE EFFECTIVE NOW!

Requiring usage of the modernized, speedier, and cleaner type of cookery provided by the Electric Range, a new, comprehensive rate, conducive to greater use of Electric Service, becomes effective with this month's payment of bills. Under its provisions ALL OVER 50 kilowatt-hours of electric current used each month costs only 2 1/2 cents per kilowatt-hour. The basis for the reduction is the proven theory that "the more you use, the less it costs."

This reduction, amounting to 16 2/3 per cent, is designed to make Electric Cookery as practical, from the standpoint of fuel, as any other type. The fact that there is no combustion makes Electric Cookery cleaner. A greatly improved flattened calrod heats almost instantaneously and hugs the bottom of utensils to prevent escape of heat. There is no flame to burn up oxygen, thus making air fresher and cooler in the kitchen. It is automatic, thus making it easier. Cleaner! Cooler! Easier! And this new, low rate makes Electric Cookery just as cheap or, in many instances, cheaper. Add faster. It's another reason for switching to Electric Cookery.

Lowers Cost of Lighting, Refrigeration And All Other Residential Usage Over 50 K.W.H. per Month

Many, many homes already use over 50 kilowatt-hours of electric current each month. By adding the electric range to kitchen equipment (it has proven itself the most valuable of all Electric Servants) you secure a rate of 2 1/2 cents per kilowatt-hour on ALL current used over 50 K.W.H. used monthly.

This means that when you reach the higher usage brackets for light, refrigeration, and all other domestic purposes, your electric bill is calculated at a rate which actually amounts to a saving. It permits increased usage at no additional cost. Best of all, it permits Electric Cookery to enter homes which heretofore considered it "too high."

We invite you to come in so that we may show you the latest models in Electric Ranges. We believe you will approve of Electric Cookery—and the new rate that permits you to use the switch.

Practical Jokers Fifty Years Ago Made Xmas Merry

(By Miss Luella Chambers)

Near Christmas time in 1894 Jack Brown, brother of Adolph Brown, Robert Moore, Eli Thomson, Pink Barton, Moses Walters, Jr., Robert Stephenson, J. B. Chambers and W. E. Chambers and a few others decided that Santa Claus should visit every girl.

The result was that our door knobs were heavy with a stocking stuffed with candy, apples, oranges and nuts. Big girls got little stockings, little girls got big ones. Where two girls were in a house the stockings were not mates. Even Gertie Austin, Berta and Lizzie Campbell and the Weaver girls received stockings although the boys had no autos to run around in.

We were certainly surprised and we had a "hurrah" time and waved our stockings at the boys as they passed, thanked them and said, "We wish you had sent us two apiece." One girl got huffy and she soon found she had to keep her feelings in her pocket.

Christmas 1895 the boys heard two of our pretty girls were picking the little red cord bows out of the inside band of the boys' hats and wearing them on their garters so the boys bought elastic and cord and made garters with little red bows on and put one garter on the Christmas tree for each girl.

I never knew whether the boys made the garters or got some woman to make them. Anyway we all enjoyed the fun and hoped Santa Claus would visit us again.
