As We Sit and Think (Sometimes Just SIT)

If we were allowed to use the language often thought but not expressed, we would start this episode a bit different this week and say "sometimes think like -ell."

Supreme Court Blocks Farm Program

The Supreme Court handed down a decision Monday, 6 to 3, declaring the triple A farm program unconstitutional, which completely upset the farm program of the present administration, and wrecked the agricultural program of President Roosevelt's main hobby.

Just what effect the upsetting of the new deal will have on agriculture cannot be foreseen at this time. At any rate, the future looks different to us from an agricultural standpoint.

GOOD NEWS

Double Insurance

The fire at Tom Fink's bungalow did very little damage this morning. Tom says the fire boys pulled up in front of the house almost before he hung up the telephone after calling them.

Santa Anna Telephone Company

Santa Anna Hatchery OPENING. We will start the Santa Anna Hatchery Monday, January 13th. Will buy Hatching Eggs Saturday, January 11th at the old stand, West Depot St. Custom Hatching. The public is invited to call if interested in Hatching or Baby Chicks. E. M. Niell, Prop.

Political Pot Is Now Taking On Steam

State and national politics are taking on form this week, and many surprises are likely to occur during the ensuing campaign. It is too early to begin predictions as to the outcome, but the maneuverings are already becoming interesting.

Senator Roy Sanderford of Belton has entered the race for Governor to oppose the present Governor, James V. Allred, and is handing out some rather catchy dope in his formal announcement.

Bonus Vote Friday

Congress is busy this week working out a slightly amended bonus bill, which, in the discussion of a majority of the democratic leaders, will pass by an overwhelming majority.

The year 1936 holds much in store for the people of the United States and world. The depression is not over, and the ill effects of it will hang on for years to come.

In starting out on the new year, we have much to be thankful for, as well as a few regrets. There is no use to grieve over spilled milk, or crossing bridges before you get to them.

A week later, remove the meat and rub the remaining half of the mixture on and repack. Information collected at the Lubbock Substation in cooperation with the Texas Extension Service shows that it requires less time to cure hams and bacon in western Texas than is generally recommended.

KILLING AND CURING OF PORK ON TEXAS FARMS

By Fred Hale, Swine Husbandman. The average farm family consumes about three 225-pound hogs each year. In order to cure and preserve hams, bacon and other pork products so as to prevent spoilage or waste, and to secure the luscious taste and quality desired, certain points of prime importance must be taken into consideration.

Proper temperature, slaughtering, and correct handling of the carcass are necessary to prevent spoilage. After a healthy animal is selected for slaughter, it should be taken off feed and water for twenty-four hours before it is killed. Thorough bleeding is of prime importance and lessens the chance of spoilage of the meat in the cure.

After the viscera is removed, the carcass should be split and hung up over night to cool. In the event of unexpected warm weather, rush the carcass to the ice plant in town and arrange for curing at the ice plant, if possible. Do not salt down hot pork. Quick cooling of carcass after killing will insure a safer cure and less spoilage.

The principal curing agents are salt, saltpetre, and sugar. Salt when used as a sole curing agent makes the meat hard and dry. Saltpetre is used principally to retain the natural red color of the meat. Sugar reduces the drying effect of the salt, tends to soften the muscle fibers, and imparts a flavor to the meat.

Whereas, it is fitting that we dedicate ourselves in all lines of endeavor so that we may continue the glorious progress in the coming century, which has been Texas' during its first one hundred years, and Whereas, no more worthy effort could be made than that of re-dedicating ourselves to the principles of democracy and the standards of conduct, religion and law which were advocated by the founders of our state,

Whereas, the churches of Texas are planning to celebrate the Centennial Year with a call for all citizens to co-operate in this great movement.

Now therefore, I, James V. Allred, Governor of the State of Texas, do hereby urge all patriotic citizens and organizations to back the churches of this state in the Texas Centennial Revival which is designed to preserve our State for another one hundred years of glorious progress toward brotherhood.

Write in to the Director of the Texas Extension Service for their Circular No. 60 on the Killing and Curing of Pork, and also the U. S. D. A., Washington, D. C. for their bulletins No. 913 and 1188 on killing hogs and curing pork, for detailed information.

CHURCH FORCES OF TEXAS TO HOLD CENTENNIAL RELIGIOUS RALLIES

A state-wide committee representing the Methodist, Presbyterian U. S., Presbyterian U. S. A., Nazarene, Episcopal, Baptist and Christian Churches of Texas, composed of Rev. Patrick Henry of Fort Worth, Rev. R. N. Huckabee of Haskell and Rev. C. E. Matthews of Fort Worth, have designated the week of March 9-13 as CENTENNIAL REVIVAL RALLY WEEK, and will direct the holding of an interdenominational rally in each of the following cities: Texarkana, Sherman, Tyler, Houston, Harlingen, San Antonio, Austin, Waco, San Angelo, El Paso, Abilene, Lubbock, Amarillo, Wichita Falls, Dallas and Fort Worth.

The program for these One Day Rallies will consist of a general meeting at 10:30 in the morning; two simultaneous meetings at 2:30, one for women and one for ministers and lay leaders; two simultaneous dinners at six, one for young people and one for men; the rally will be climaxed with a mass meeting at eight. All the speakers for the various meetings will be Texans.

Whereas, in the early days, woman was something of a chattel—a possession of mankind, to be disposed of as his fancy might decree.

Among the rich and powerful, she was an ornament, a plaything. In the humble walks of life, she was a drudge, little better than a beast of burden. If any person had told the kings and knights of old that the time would come when woman would be man's equal in all things, that person would have been considered a lunatic, or a liar, or both, and a dangerous person to remain at large.

WHAT DOES IT MATTER?

Thirty-six thousand four hundred persons in America were killed in motor accidents in 1935. One hundred and eleven men, women and children were killed in motor accidents in Dallas County in 1935.

Well, what does it matter? You were not one of them, were you? Of course, you may have been driving the car that killed some of them. Well, what of it? You are still living, are you not? By all means continue to drive with reckless disregard for traffic courtesy and safety.

By all means drive when you are drinking! This is a free country, is it not? Who should tell us when we can and when we can't handle the wheels of our own cars? Liquor habits are personal matters. They may be personal to the motor-mangled corpse, too. But the corpse can't complain—it's dead—the mangled body of the little old lady slowed by age—she ought to have been snry enough to jump more quickly!

Caution is for fools and slowpokes. Ours is a hurrying age—we must get somewhere or nowhere at top speed.

One cup to the dead already! Hurrah for the next that dies! —Dallas Morning News.

THE RISE OF WOMANHOOD

In the early days, woman was something of a chattel—a possession of mankind, to be disposed of as his fancy might decree.

Among the rich and powerful, she was an ornament, a plaything. In the humble walks of life, she was a drudge, little better than a beast of burden. If any person had told the kings and knights of old that the time would come when woman would be man's equal in all things, that person would have been considered a lunatic, or a liar, or both, and a dangerous person to remain at large.

CASES OF CEREBRO-SPINAL MENINGITIS INCREASE

Austin, Texas, Jan. 9.—A definite increase in the number of cases of epidemic cerebro-spinal meningitis has been noted in Texas, according to Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

The best method of escaping this disease is the prevention of overcrowding either at home or in public. Overcrowded conditions in camps, barracks, jails, or other institutions where men are brought in close contact are most favorable for outbreaks.

OUR WEEKEND VISIT

The editor and wife drove over to Palo Pinto county Thursday of last week, and spent the remainder of the week with relatives, some of whom we had not met in over forty years.

Useless to say we enjoyed our visit, for it afforded us a great pleasure. The last time we saw our two cousins they were young women, filled with adventure and enthusiasm, now they are in both in the evening of life, their children all grown up and in the middle ages.

What most of us are now demanding is a square deal.
