OATIS C. WELCH

I needed to do something, but what could I do I thought it might help to write this poem about you

You came into this world weighing less than three pounds They had to dress you in the smallest of gowns

The doctor said you wouldn't live but a very few days But he didn't know of your mother's wise ways

In little blankets you were snugly wrapped Between warm bricks you peacefully napped

You fought and you made it though not very strong Wasn't it just like you to prove the doctor wrong

Your garden you loved and you tended it with care You were giving something from it most of the year

Although you always had mischief upon your mind Everyone knew you were really honest, generous and kind

Big Paw is what the little ones always called you But they can't miss you any more than we do

You loved us to gather at your house this is true Nobody loved a crowd anymore than you

I think of all the ones you loved that have passed away And that you must be having a great reunion with them today

The few days the doctor gave you turned out to be Twenty seven thousand eight hundred and thirty.

KOKOMO NEWS

The church house was filled, and what wonderful time we had uniting our voices in songs of praise and worship at the fifth Sunday night singing at the Kokomo Baptist Church. There was congregation singing, choirs and special music from the members of the New Hope Baptist Church, First Baptist Church and First United Methodist Church and Family Life Church in Gorman, the Kokomo Baptist Church and other visitors. Our hearts were especially blessed to see so many young people taking part in the service.

And what wonderful Christian fellowship we enjoyed following the service as we gathered in the fellowship hall for the refreshments of sandwiches, chips, cookies and cold drinks.

Frankie Jarrett of Gorman and Vera Lyerla and Mrs. Hudson of Flatwood were visitors at the Kokomo Baptist Church on Sunday morning. And baby Justin Little was at church for the first time with his parent, Alan and Shellie Little.

Claude and Juanita Fuller attended church at the Tuscola Baptist Church on Sunday morning. Their grandson, Chad Eaton, rendered the special music on his saxophone. The Fullers were dinner guests of Wayne and Christi Eaton, Chad and Lindsey.

He won third in the second race and was in third place in the feature race when he got too high on the banked curve and ran into the guard rail. There were 17 friends and relatives who came to see Ron race.

The weatherman predicts that it might get near freezing later in the week, but we hope that it doesn't get that cold. There are sure a lot of tender garden plants that could be hurt. There was a thunderstorm during the night Friday that left us some more rain, but I don't know how much. Just never did go look at the rain gauge. Probably about two to three tenths.
