

Border Banter

By Mike Pomper

BTD was a lot of fun

What else can you say: Border Town Days was a heckuva lot of fun. When so many kinfolk, friends and neighbors get together for a good time, what do you expect will happen? A fun time for all. Everything went smoothly, from the parade to barbeque to the awards to the queen contest to the giveaways. The consensus of the comments I heard about the parade was that it was as good as if not better than any held in the past. I think a large portion of the credit ought to go to the Texico Wolverine Marching Band. Music sure makes a difference in a parade, doesn't it?

We also had a bunch of super floats. I realize that someone had to be first but if I had my druthers, there would have been a tie among several floats for the top prize. They sure looked neat.

Add to that the Red Raider from Texas Tech (some thought he was "Zorro"), the West Texas State buffalo, the veritable wagon train of mule teams and the nifty antique cars, and the parade seemed pretty darned good for a small community such as ours.

Over at the park, it was business as usual. The Rotary barbeque went great guns, again thanks to Walter Hughes and his crew. The lines moved smoothly with a very short wait; folks appreciate that.

There were 30 arts and crafts booths this year, compared to 19 last year. A big "thank you" should go to Janie Bowery for running this part of the BTD celebration.

There were more booths in the city park, too. And they were needed. I was told that five groups sold ice cream -- and all five sold out.

One group that went all out for Border Town Days this year was San Jose Catholic Church in Texico, with its Knights of Columbus and Knights of Columbus Auxiliary. They provided a beautiful float for the parade (which took second in the judging), musical and dancing entertainment in the gazebo, plus two food booths offering everything from tacos to hamburgers to canteloupe drink.

A group that also worked very hard was Peggy Jones and her queen's contest committee.

Judging by the applause of the crowd when it was announced that the winner was Patty Cavallero, it appears the judges made a good choice and the Twin Cities will be well represented this year. We should also thank the outgoing queen, DeAnn Curtis, for her service to our community while reigning as BTD queen.

One addition to this year's gala was Shot's Miniature Train. Our committee decided to allow him into the Day in the Park activities because we thought it would add something for little kids. It sure did. The train was kept busy from the moment it first tooted its horn until day's end.

As usual, there are so many folks that should be thanked: the BTD committee, emcee Fred Chandler, Waste Control of New Mexico (for donating use of its dumpsters), the participating merchants in the annual Merchants Giveaway, the Hardages for providing musical entertainment, etc., etc.

And don't forget the rodeo over at the arena. My boy got the opportunity to help herd the calves there and he had a ball. It takes a lot of folks to put on a rodeo and a special thanks go to the Farwell Arena Association.

Oh, before I forget, the BTD Committee will meet Monday at 8 p.m. at Luce's Restaurant to discuss how this year's event went. If you have any constructive criticisms or comments, please attend and let us know your views.

I guess I'm no longer a newcomer. We're about to see a family leave our area and I'm going to miss them: Steve and Sudie Foster and their kids are moving to Killeen, Texas. We wish them the best.

I've heard yet another reason to explain why oldtimers keep their hands on the steering wheel and just wave one finger when passing another vehicle.

It's because (I'm told) that years ago when you drove a horse and buggy you needed to keep both hands on the reins, thus necessitating the use of just one digit when waving hello to a neighbor.

Higher appraisal values explained

Ron Proctor, manager of the Parmer County Tax Appraisal Office, attended a Farwell town meeting Monday night at City Hall called by Mayor Chris Gikas.

The meeting was sought after appraisal notices arrived in residents' mailboxes last week that generally showed hefty increases in their appraisals.

The main points made at the meeting were:

--The last time properties were appraised was in 1982 and they were appraised too low at that time.

--Just because appraised values are up doesn't necessarily mean taxes will go up, too. Tax rates still are to be set and government bodies can lower them, thus keeping taxes about the same. Tax rates generally are decided upon in August.

--While it's likely that Farwell city taxes will either stay the same or actually go down, Farwell school taxes may go up. This is because the bulk of school taxes come from farmers, many of whom had their appraisals go down. Proctor said irrigated farmland values are down but dryland has held.

Proctor explained to the 40 persons present the process used in determining values. They look at the grade of the house, the square footage, age, plus the sales of residences throughout the county in order to make a fair evaluation.

"From the sales we picked up and looked at for our valuations, about 99.9 percent of all homes sold for more than we had appraised for," said Proctor.

Proctor acknowledged that mistakes are made and he urged residents to file a protest if they think their home was valued excessively. A letter of protest must be sent to his office (Box 56, Bovina, Texas 79009) by Aug. 5.

If no agreement is still reached after the protest is checked by his employees, then the protest would go before the county appeals board which begins its deliberations Aug. 6. The board is expected to meet for several days since many protests have been filed.

Proctor also explained about the legal ads his office will be placing in the newspapers next month. He urged residents to read them closely and follow the taxing process.

What first happens is that he places ads calling for an "effective tax rate." This can be scary to residents because they can seem to be announcing a hefty tax increase. In fact, they aren't. But they show what could happen if the local taxing bodies, such as the city, school, county and hospital district, don't lower their tax rates to "even up" the higher valuations.

He gave a tip to farmers about seeking an exemption. He said if their irrigation level is dropping, they must meter their wells and get a gallon per minute count. He can adjust their evaluation downward if this is occurring.

Proctor stressed that when people protest and his office finds that a mechanical error was made in estimating the value, such as using the wrong grade, the adjustment will be made quickly. But he said they have found that they are being correct on 95 percent and higher on their appraisals.

The county re-appraisal began in the summer of 1985 with persons checking the outside of each home. Proctor said the state hires persons to also appraise locally as a check on county agencies.

Appraisals are called for every four years. But if the economy takes a nosedive, Proctor said the next appraisal would come sooner. He noted the expense in conducting an appraisal.

The law requires that appraisals be at 100 percent of a property's market value.

Murder charged in shooting death

Frederick Albert Cantrell, 63, of Farwell was charged with murder Sunday, reported Parmer County Sheriff Bill Morgan.

The charge was made after the death of Carl William Moore II, 26, an Ohio native residing at 902 Ave. D, Farwell.

Morgan said Cantrell was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Albert Smith Sunday night and bond was placed at $25,000, pending Grand Jury action.

The sheriff said the problem apparently started early Sunday morning when Moore and a son of Cantrell had an argument.

He said Cantrell and his wife,

Pearl, drove to Moore's residence about 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Witnesses told Morgan that Moore was in the front yard and Cantrell allegedly shot Moore at least twice, in the chest and back, with a .22 caliber rifle. Thirty minutes later Cantrell and his wife voluntarily appeared at the sheriff's office.

The case is still under investigation, Morgan said. Moore's relatives were alerted to his death about 9 a.m. Monday.

This was the first shooting death in Farwell in about seven years.

Moore and his wife have three children.

Sarpalius: Special session only a start

The special legislative session slated for Aug. 6 has the potential to be the first step in the resurrection of Texas' sagging economy. Be warned, though, it also could be an unmitigated disaster.

Much of the success (or failure) of the session will depend on the Legislature's ability to lay the groundwork for the state's economic future. If we at least can get pointed in the right direction, then Gov. Mark White's decision to call us back to Austin will prove justified.

If, instead, House and Senate members squabble for 30 days without agreeing on any kind of plan or leave with only a mixed-up package of senseless budget cuts, then the governor will have wasted everyone's time and sealed his own political fate.

At this point, both scenarios are equally possible since no one seems to know just what to expect from this historic special session.

If there is heartening news, it is that the Legislature will try to trim the state budget before doing anything else. Budget cutting won't solve everything; the state is, after all, facing a $3 billion budget deficit. But, there is no other reasonable place to begin this process.

We simply would be irresponsible if we did not reduce state spending before increasing state revenue. No government has the right even to discuss a tax increase if that government is wasting any of the taxpayer's money.

It's not that taxes don't loom somewhere on the horizon; they will be discussed eventually. Three billion dollars can't be trimmed from the budget without wreaking some havoc on state services. About 90 percent of our budget is tied up in four areas, and two -- education and highways -- are too critical to our business climate to cut severely while the others -- prisons and social services -- largely are protected by federal court orders.

Remember too that we are talking about cutting $3 billion from the fiscal year 1987 budget only. Fiscal

NUMBER 48 SEVENTY-FOURTH YEAR 25 CENTS

20th annual BTD rated another success

For the third year in a row, the estimate of the crowd at Border Town Days in the Farwell City Park Saturday was more than 2,000.

The consensus of several longtime observers was that the attendance was a bit higher last year. This was attributed to the number of class reunions and the growing popularity of the Twin Cities celebration.

Nearly 1,200 barbeque meals were served by the Texico-Farwell Rotary Club, while hundreds of others patronized the booths featuring tacos, hamburgers and hot dogs. San Jose Catholic Church's hamburger booth reported an increase of 100 hamburgers sold over last year's total.

With temperatures in the 90s, food and refreshment business was brisk. It was reported that five booths offered ice cream -- and all sold out. The scout fishing pond was a sell-out, also.

The day kicked off with the decorated bicycle contest in Texico. There were 35 Class A entrants (ages 7-12) and 8 Class B (ages 6 and under) entrants. Results were:

Class A: Jerod Servatius and Logan Nichols, firsts; Chad Cochran and Tasha Cochran, seconds; Brea Granes and Landon Lunsford, thirds, and Josh Lynn, Chris Schwertner and Melissa Schwertner, fourths.

Class B: Bret Curtis and Candace Granes, firsts; Caleb Cloud, second; Mark Lunsford, third, and Gordon Nichols, fourth.

In the bike contest, first place winners got $5; second, $4; third, $3, and fourth, $2.

Then came time for the annual parade, highlighted by the appearance of the Texico Wolverine Marching Band. It was the first time in many years that a high school band had marched in the parade.

Three Clovis Rotarians -- Mayor Frank Murray, Chamber of Commerce Secretary Tim Martin and Social Security Director Carl Thompson, judged the parade and bike contest.

The winning floats were: Texico-Farwell Senior Citizens, first; San Jose Catholic Church (sponsored by the Knights of Columbus), second; Muleshoe Jenny Slippers, third, and Peggy Edison's Past Fashions, fourth. Each received cash prizes, from $75 on down.

Trophies were given for motorized units. Winning first was the small cycle unit of the Clovis Shriners. Second was the Shriners' large cycle unit.

Several mule and horse teams were entered. The first place trophy went to the Video Center of Farwell. Second was the Eastern New Mexico Mule Association.

Besides the Texico band, the parade had other music. Gladys Hardage's calliope was played, and a fiddle band participated.

At the park, several contests were held and persons recognized.

A special plaque was given former Farwell Mayor Walter Kaltwasser for his years of service to the community.

Certificates were given the Pioneers of the Year, Mitz Walling and Vashti Fowler, plus the honorary parade marshals, John and Joann Getz.

The Ugliest Pickup Contest, sponsored by Farwell Farwell Farm Supply, had five entrants. The winner was Woody Goforth of Texico. He received $25.

A large group of antique cars participated in the parade. The winners were:

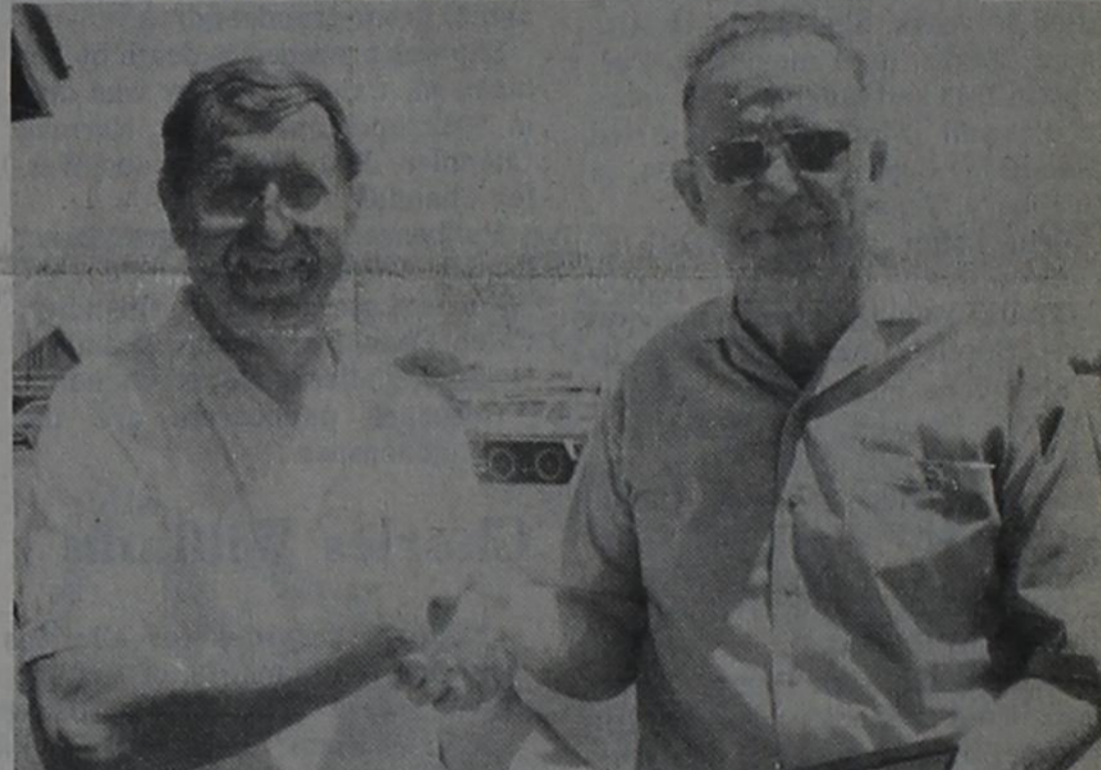

Oldest car -- 1913 car -- 1913 Model T Hack, owned by Keith Terry, Portales; longest distance driven -- 1940 Plymouth pickup, owned by Felix Williams, Norwalk, Calif.; and Judge's Choice -- 1920 "T" Hack, owned by Jack Carr, Portales. Each received $25.

Fourteen girls entered the contest for 1986 Miss Border Town Days. The winner was Patty Cavallero of Texico.

First runnerup was Dana White. Second runnerup was Nellie Jurado. Third runnerup was Melinda McMillan. Fourth runnerup was Shelly Herrington. The five finalists performed talents and answered questions from the judges. Patty's talent was a flag twirling presentation.

The winner received her crown from 1985's queen, DeAnn Curtis. The winner receives a $100 scholarship award toward college.

The dedication of the new playground equipment for the city park was made by ESA Sorority, which earned the funds to buy it through last winter's pheasant hunt.

The Best-Looking Beard contest was held. Winner was Carp Owen of Texico. Kevin Penner of Lubbock was second.

Two giveaways were made. Glenden Sudderth of Bovina won the new pickup truck given away by the Texico Volunteer Fire Department, which sold out all its tickets. And Thelma Eskew, Star Route, Clovis, won the satellite TV system given away by the Pleasant Hill Volunteer Fire Department.

Three class reunions were held, by the Farwell classes of 1955, 1956 and 1966. The winner of the traveling trophy given to the class which has the largest percentage of living graduates attend BTD was the Class

Energy Commission should look elsewhere

Dear Editor:
The Energy Commission's plan to sink a high-level nuclear waste shaft deep into the fertile prairies of the Panhandle will certainly earn the commission the "Mindless Bureaucracy of the Year" award.
The Ogalalla aquifer, the sole source of drinking water for the whole Panhandle, South Plains and eastern New Mexico, sets in water bearing sands under the area. The depth of these wet sands range from as little as 50 feet to around 400 feet where the "red bed" or rock strata lies.

This huge aquifer which took eons to form and fill is very gradually resupplied in two ways: (1) gravity flow through underground rivulets and sand strata from run off from the eastern slope of the Rockies and (2) some gradual seep down from the hundreds of playa lakes which catch run off from local rainfall. Any pollution from either a high-level nuclear waste shaft into the aquifer or radio active seep down from the surface could eventually pollute a wide area due to the very nature of this unique geological structure.

Letter To The Editor

The economy of this vast area is predominately based on irrigated farming and cattle raising. These agri-industries are large scale which makes the area a major source of supply for the nation's food and fiber.

This agri-economy and the people living in it have been hard hit in recent years by inflated production costs and the slump in commodity prices. Many blame Washington for their plight (i.e. the Carter grain embargo again Russia). None will take kindly to a high level nuclear waste shaft being sunk into their precious water supply.

The Energy Commission had better look elsewhere for nuclear waste sites or the first "nuclear-waste war" could well be fought in the Texas Panhandle.

Dusters lose in tournament

The area AAU basketball team that included girls from Texico and Farwell finished its trip to Roanoke, Va., last week by playing in a consolation tournament.

The local team, which won the New Mexico state title, lost to a Pennsylvania team, 32-26, and a Georgia team, 32-31.

The local team, the "South Plains Dusters," showed good sportsmanship and played well, said coach Patsy Camp.

Troop named Honor Unit

Boy Scout Troop 200 from Farwell attended Wehinahpay Mountain Camp July 6-12.

The Troop was named an "Honor Unit" and both of the patrols comprising the Troop were named "Honor Patrols."

Twelve boys attended the camp and earned 48 Merit Badges and Skill Awards. Chris Aycock acted as Senior Patrol Leader of the Troop. And was the recipient of the camp's "Scout Spirit Award."

Brian Johnson received an outstanding marksmanship award and the entire Troop was cited for its participation in the Mountainman Camp. Also, Lance Castleberry and Wayne Peterson were selected to be members of Order of the Arrow and completed the ordeal requirements for membership in the Order.

Scouts attending were Clay Corn, Kevin Welch, Rob Pomper, Mark Chandler, Matt Foster, Brian Johnson, Wayne Peterson, Lance Castleberry, Chris Aycock, Brian Haseloff, Jeffrey Stewart and Mark Milloy.

Also attending were Asst. Scoutmasters, Steve Stephens and Ed Corn, and Scoutmaster Charles Aycock.

The Order of the Arrow is a national brotherhood of campers with legends and traditions of the American Indian as its basis. To be inducted into the Order of the Arrow (OA) a Scout must first be elected by his fellow troop members. Each troop may have one OA election each year.

To be eligible for election a boy must be a registered member of the Boy Scouts of America, must have the approval of his Scoutmaster, must have experienced 15 days and nights of camping within the past two years including one long-term camp (6 days and nights) and must have attained the rank of First Class or higher.

After being elected, the candidate must undertake the Ordeal of the Order before he may be inducted. The purpose of the Ordeal is to have the candidate reflect on his own Scout life and character and to come to a deeper understanding of the Scout Oath and the principles of the Order.

This purpose is achieved through a fourfold Ordeal which includes spending the night outside alone, keeping complete silence, spending the daylight hours at hard labor, and eating very little food.

Indigent care discussed

The Parmer County Commissioners Monday discussed the future of indigent care.

Due to new state laws, more responsibility for paying for indigent care will fall onto counties and local hospital districts.

At the invitation of County Judge Porter Roberts, Steve Walters of Northwest Texas Hospital, Amarillo, spoke to the commissioners. Also present were representatives of Parmer County Hospital and the Farwell Hospital District.

Discussed were ways to handle indigent care in light of the new state laws. Decisions are expected at the next commissioners' meeting.

In other business, Dura Bilt, of Clovis, received the bid awards for building barns in Pcts. 2 and 4.

Yellowhouse Machinery got the bid award for motor graders for

Schilling, Alford wed

Judith Catherine Schilling and Jeffrey Don Alford exchanged wedding vows in a candlelight ceremony June 21 at St. Thomas Apostle Catholic Church, Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Joe and Eunice Schilling of Farwell. The bridegroom's parents are Lawson and Pat Alford of Lake Tanglewood, Amarillo.

Officiating at the double-ring ceremony was Fr. Joseph Tush. Vows were exchanged before two large floral arrangements set in front of each pulpit. Spiral candleabras decorated with greenery and blue bows framed the altar. The unity candle was decorated with greenery and a blue bow. Blue bows also complemented the ends of each pew in the center aisle.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father. Her formal length gown of white organza was trimmed with silk venise lace. It featured a sweetheart neckline outlined with pearl scattered lace appliques, which also embellished the fitted bodice. A standup ruffle of organza formed the butterfly sleeves and rows of ruffles circled the cathedral length train.

For something old, she wore her mother's pearl earrings. Something new was her dress, and something borrowed was her wedding hat. Something blue was the garter she wore.

She carried a large cascade bouquet featuring an arrangement of fresh white and blue roses with long ribbons cascading from the bouquet.

Melanie Kenney of Canyon, served as Matron of Honor. Her other attendants were her cousin, Lisa Schilling of Bovina, Sharmy McDonald of Lewisville, and Alicia Irlbeck of Canyon. They were attired in identical tea-length dresses of light blue taffeta with ruffles off the shoulders, held at the back with a rose knot. Ruffles traced the bottom of each skirt. They carried a fresh arrangement of roses and carnations in shades of blue with ribbons to accent.

Stephen Schilling of Farwell, brother of the bride, served as best man. Dwayne Hollis and Jay Irlbeck, both of Canyon, and Kirk Skipper of Amarillo, served as groomsmen. Trent Schilling, brother of the bride, of Farwell, and Darius Linder of Slaton, cousin of the bride, served as candlelighters. Serving as ushers were Jason Schilling, brother of the bride, Danny Byrd, Jerry Soliz and Kevin Collins, all of Canyon.

MR. AND MRS. JEFFREY ALFORD

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Schilling wore a light blue tea length organza dress with no sleeves and a round neckline accented with pearls. Her corsage was made of white roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore a pink silk tea length dress fashioned with long sleeves, a round neckline and a corsage made of white roses.

The traditional wedding music was performed by organist Jim Gardner and solos were sang by Shirley Greener and Danny Pelton.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held. The bride's table was laid with a lace table cloth over blue. The three-tiered wedding cake featured a fountain on the bottom layer. The groom's table was also covered with a lace table cloth over blue. The groom's cake was chocolate and featured blue flowers to match the bride's cake. Each table was decorated with a centerpiece arranged with blue flowers.

Serving the cake and punch were Denise Anderson, Cheryl Linder, Cathy Schacher and Becky Schacher.

A brass champagne fountain and large palm trees decorated the reception hall.

The bride, a 1981 graduate of Farwell High School, graduated from West Texas State University in 1985 and is employed by Glasrock Home Health Care in Amarillo.

The groom is a graduate of Canyon High and attended West Texas State University. He is employed by Alford Cattle Company.

After a wedding trip to Ruidoso the newlyweds are at home south of Amarillo.

Plan to use safe canning methods

If you're counting on canning some of the extra produce from your garden this summer, plan now to do it the safe way.

Some canning methods, equipment and procedures are not safe and can result in food spoilage and even serious illness or death.

Canning in a microwave oven, for example, is dangerous. Microwave ovens do not allow even heat penetration in the closed canning jar and the metal lids interfere with heat distribution. The use of metals in a microwave can also damage the oven's magnetron tube, requiring costly repairs.

Canning in a conventional oven is not advisable, because oven temperatures vary as the heat goes off and comes on again. The dry heat may not penetrate the food thoroughly either.

Trying to can in a conventional oven is also a safety hazard. Pressure can build up in jars causing them to explode, or jars may break as drafts of cooler air hit them when the oven door is open.

The "open kettle" canning method which was popular years ago, may not kill spoilage organisms.

In the open kettle method, foods are simply heated and put into sterile jars. Spoilage organisms can enter the jar when the food is transferred from kettle to jar. Also, the initial heat treatment may not be sufficient to destroy spoilage organisms and even if the jar seals, it may be only temporary.

Steam canners are also not fool-proof for canning. The U.S. Department of Agriculture does not recommend the use of steam canners when the process time is based on boiling water bath times.

Research shows that the ability to kill bacteria in a steam canner is considerably less than in a boiling water bath canner when using the same process times.

For that reason a steam canner should never be used for low-acid vegetables and meats.

Farwell Convalescent Center Chit Chat

By Lynne Gann
Activity Director

We have 69 residents, 16 men and 53 women. 40 of which are wheelchair residents, 23 can ambulate, 6 are bed patients.

We have a staff of approximately 63. They are house-keeping, laundry, maintenance, Dietary Supervisor, Dietary Assistants, Housekeeping Supervisor, office manager, Director of Nursing, nurses, nurses assistants, In-service Director, Music Therapist, Activity Director and our Administrator.

We try to keep each resident clean, comfortable, well fed with a proper diet, healthy and entertained. A task we try to do cheerfully and with respect.

We have made and lost many friends and loved ones.

It takes a special person to work in a nursing home. You must be able to be cheerful and kind, be respectful, able to face sickness daily, death frequently, verbal and sometimes physical abuse yet still remain alert to all that surrounds you, hiding your feelings behind a smile.

Most people look at a nursing home as place for the elderly -- often forgetting the people who work there. We, too, forget the every day functions that many take for granted.

There are times we need a thank you, a please, a hug, a smile, a well done.

I, for one, tend to forget these things. So -- to those I've missed--

To the Staff at our Center-- Thank you for caring -- for sharing -- for being here when we need you -- for being the "Not Forgotten!"

Texas Navy commander declared a pirate

1839: THURSDAY, AUGUST 1. In a highly successful auction in Austin today, 301 lots were sold for a total of $182,585. The new city, on the upper Colorado River, is designated as the Republic's permanent capital. The funds will be used to help pay for the erection of government buildings now in progress. The auction was conducted by Sheriff Charles King of Bastrop.

Lots ranged in price from $120 to as high as $2,800, reputed to be paid by Alexander Russell for Lot 6, Block 55, at Pecan Street and Congress Avenue. A number of those who bid for lots had already set up cabins on the lot of their choice with the expectation of buying it during the auction.

The town has been laid out by Judge Edwin Waller, appointed for this purpose by President Mirabeau B. Lamar. The main feature of the plan is Capitol Square, where the capitol building will be located, surrounded by a picket fence for protection against Indians. It is reached by two very wide streets, Congress Avenue running up from the river, and College Avenue at right angles to it. The streets which parallel College Avenue are named for trees, and those parallel to Congress Avenue are named for rivers in Texas. The streets were named by President Lamar.

Around Capitol Square are major government buildings, including the President's House. Other buildings are designated for the War Department, the Navy Department, the State Department, the Treasury Department, the Post Office Department, the Attorney General's Office and the General Land Office. The government is expected to move to Austin in October.

Judge Waller reported to President Lamar that the President's House will be completed August 15, in accordance with contract, and that 28 rooms for offices are complete, or soon will be. However, he wrote, "I have to pay very high for hands and every article that I purchase, owing to the depreciation of our currency, it being reported here that our money is only worth 22 cents on the dollar." Judge Waller also informed Lamar, "The citizens of Austin are anxious to know when you will be here, as they are anxious to show you as much respect, as their circumstances will admit of."

1843: SATURDAY, JULY 29. Commodore Edwin Ward Moore, commander of the Texas Navy who was declared a pirate and dismissed from office by a proclamation of President Sam Houston last May, was feted in a testimonial dinner in Galveston yesterday. An effigy of President Houston was burned in the street.

Moore docked his flagship Austin and the brig-of-war Wharton at Galveston's Menard's Wharf on July 14 after a three-month foray along the coast of Yucatan. The two Texas sailships, aided by a few

The Farwell Chamber of Commerce Tuesday discussed its annual banquet.

Ideas were tossed around of honoring persons in the community with awards such as "Employee of the Year."

Also, the Chamber was notified that if it wants an astronaut to visit Farwell, it has to pay the transportation. This will be checked into further.

small Yucatan gunboats, successfully challenged the entire Mexican fleet, including two steamships-of-war recently built in England, the Montezuma and the Guadalupe. As far as is known, it is the first encounter in naval history in which sailships were able to best steamships.

However, the cruise was in violation of specific orders by President Houston, who was concerned that it might interfere with his diplomatic overtures to Mexico for a peace treaty, to clear the way for annexation by the United States. He issued the "piracy" proclamation to disclaim Moore's actions.

Moore was appointed Commodore of the Texas Navy by President Mirabeau B. Lamar on June 8, 1839, at the age of 28. At that time, the Navy's only fighting ship was the steamer Zavala. By April, 1840, six sailing vessels were delivered by the Baltimore shipyard of Schott and Whitney, commissioned as the Austin, Wharton, Archer, San Jacinto, San Antonio and San Bernard, all named by President Lamar.

In the fleet's first major assignment, the Zavala sailed on July 22, 1840, followed on July 26 by the Austin and the San Bernard, for the Yucatan port of Sisal. The Zavala carried a letter from Mexican General Antonio Canales of the Federalist army of northern Mexico to his counterpart in Yucatan, General Juan Pablo Anaya, for the purpose of coordinating their war against the Centralist government of Mexico, with help from Texas. Both Canales and Anaya had spent considerable time in Texas urging President Lamar to join their cause, and enlisting volunteers.

The fleet's orders were to take no offensive action unless fired upon, so as not to jeopardize the mission of James Treat, President Lamar's special agent to Mexico City to negotiate for recognition of Texas independence. On the same day that the Zavala sailed for Yucatan, the San Jacinto sailed for Veracruz to contact Treat and return with him, or with messages from him. Treat was not ready to return, thinking he was making progress. Actually, the Mexicans were merely using delaying tactics to keep Texas from joining the Federalists.

The fleet lingered in these waters for several months. Bases were set up on the Arcas Islands, about 100 miles northwest of Campeche, and on Lobos Island, offshore between Tuxpan and Tampico. On September 29 Treat at last admitted failure, but it was more than a month later before he was able to embark on the San Antonio to return to Texas. He was seriously ill with consumption, and died before Galveston was reached.

Commodore Moore was now no longer required to hold off. He had not been completely idle before. On October 4 the Austin rescued the 26-man crew and cargo of the Centralist brig Sergunda Fama, wrecked in a four-day storm near Lobos Island, and brought them to the base. While they were there, the Yucatan schooner Conchita dropped anchor on October 10. Aboard was the Federalist General Pedro Lemus, his wife and six children, and a brother. General Lemus had been imprisoned in Matamoros for miles up the Tabasco River, held by some 600 Centralist troops. It could where he managed to escape and board the Conchita, in port under false papers. He sailed to the Texian naval base at nearby Lobos Island and requested safe-conduct to Campeche, which Moore gladly granted. He now had 35 passengers aboard the Austin, 26 from the Segunda Fama plus nine from the Conchita.

The Austin left Lobos Island on October 14. Two days later she dropped off the Fama crew and cargo in their own lifeboat, which the Texians had repaired. The rescued Mexicans left effusive letters of thanks, which Moore later sent to Texas newspapers as proof that he had not taken offensive action during the truce. He then sailed for Campeche, dropping off Lemus and his family on November 8. They had been aboard for 28 days.

In Yucatan waters Moore received the unhappy news that the San Jacinto had been broken up during a storm on October 31 at the Arcas Island base, and was a total loss.

At this time Moore learned that General Anaya had about 125 soldiers laying siege to the jungle city of San Juan Bautista, about 80 miles up the Tabasco River, held by some 600 Centralist troops. It could be reached only by water. General Anaya agreed to pay Moore $25,000 if the city was captured with his help. Moore had the steamer Zavala tow the Austin, San Bernard, and a Yucatan brig up-river, arriving there on November 20. Threatened by the ships' heavy cannons, the Centralists gave up without a fight. Moore got his money, though with some difficulty. Most of it was used for supplies and to pay the crew, but $8,460 was later turned over to the Texas treasury. Another $7,000 was brought in by a prize cargo of flour, flannel and coffee on the Anna Maria, which had been captured by the San Antonio on November 2. Moore returned to Galveston in February, 1841. His crews had suffered considerable sickness during the previous eight months, with several deaths. He spent the spring and summer of 1841 patrolling the Texas coast, while President Lamar made another futile attempt to negotiate with Mexico by sending James Webb, who was kept waiting off Veracruz without ever being permitted to land.

On September 17, 1841, Lamar approved a naval agreement with Yucatan by which Texas would provide three or more ships for their protection, for a monthly fee of $8,000, paid in advance. It was not until December 13 that Moore was able to sail, with the Austin, San Bernard and San Antonio. The Zavala was laid up for badly needed repairs. On the same day, Sam Houston succeeded Lamar as President, and three days later Houston issued an order recalling Moore, dispatched by the pilot boat Washington, which failed to reach him.

Moore eventually received this order on March 10, 1842, when the San Antonio rejoined the fleet after a run to Galveston to deliver reports, and to New Orleans to drop off the passengers and crew of the American vessel Sylph, rescued by the Austin the previous January 25 during a major storm.

While anchored at New Orleans on the night of February 11, the San Antonio crew had mutinied. They had been without pay, and had been denied shore leave because of fear of desertions. The mutineers killed the ranking officer aboard, and wounded two midshipmen. They were captured by a nearby American cutter, and by New Orleans police. Eleven were imprisoned pending determination of their citizenship, and two were returned to the San Antonio, whose commander obtained a replacement crew and sailed for the Yucatan. There she rendezvoused with the Austin and San Bernard, bringing Houston's recall order and news of the mutiny.

Moore chose to ignore the recall as long as Yucatan continued to pay the $8,000 per month. The first payment was made on March 8 by none other than General Lemus, now Yucatan's Secretary of War and Marine. The Texians had captured the Progreso on February 6, and later captured the Doric, Doloritas, and Dos Amigos.

In April the fleet was joined by the Wharton, with news that President Houston had proclaimed a blockade of Mexican ports and had ordered Moore to return for consultation. Delighted with this turn of events, he left Yucatan on April 25, 1842. His allies accorded him a parting exchange of salutes. All bills had been paid in full, except that $4,000 had to be covered by Yucatan notes. They were later converted to cash.

Moore met with President Houston on May 2, and was pleased to receive orders to go to New Orleans for refitting, and then to proceed to enforce the blockade. However, lack of funds caused the refitting to drag on for months, during which the political situation in Texas changed. Houston felt that a Navy was no longer needed, and Congress agreed. On October 29, 1842, Moore received the first of several orders to return the ships to Galveston. He ignored them all. On January 16, 1843, Congress passed a secret act authorizing sale of the Navy, and Houston signed it the same day.

Two commissioners were sent to New Orleans to implement the sale, arriving on February 25. By then Moore had obtained funds from Yucatan and from New Orleans businessmen, and was almost ready to sail for Mexico. While one commissioner returned to Texas for instructions, the other, swept away by Moore's enthusiasm, authorized him to proceed, and sailed with him on April 15.

Upon getting this news, President Houston released his piracy proclamation on May 6. He had been holding it since March 23, when he had originally signed it. It suspends Moore "from all command in the Navy of the Republic." Moore now claims that this is not valid, since an act of Congress approved February 4, 1841, makes it unlawful to deprive an officer of his commission without court-martial. Moore is therefore insisting on a general court-martial, which he hopes will clear his name and restore his rank.

year 1986 funds have been used up. That means we're trying to cut from a one-year budget of $18 billion instead of a two-year spending plan of $37.2 billion, a situation that makes our task all the more difficult.

So, there is no question taxes will be considered sometime. It's just unlikely they will be discussed during the special session. All of Texas statewide officials, half the Senate and the entire House are up for re-election, and no politician enjoys increasing taxes in an election year.

On a slightly higher level, we personally are pleased the tax debate has been delayed. We would prefer tax options be outlined before a session, so that we would have time to present the alternatives to you and solicit your input. We're not prepared at this time to support a tax increase and never will back one without your support. After all, it's your opinion that counts in the end.

We are left, then, with budget cuts, an unpleasant task that must be performed. We lawmakers are going to make some people mad, scuttle some pet projects and eliminate some state jobs in this process, but financial realities leave us few other options.

Mexican school prepares future pastors

Mary Arevalo is a life-long volunteer missionary in San Jeronimo, Guerrero, Mexico.

She spoke last week at the Farwell First Baptist Church.

Mary is not only the administrator, but also a teacher for Instituto Bautista Engleman-Arevalo, the Baptist Institute (Seminary). Her duties include legal representation, properties, housing, food services, maintenance, salaries, bookkeeping, public relations, mission work assignments, health, and fund raising. She receives no monetary compensation.

The school where Mary teaches is located down in the Tropics, 17 miles from a tourist resort. There is a population of about 8,000, with a floating population of 3,000.

The school has running water and electricity. It has one telephone booth. They send out a messenger from the area to deliver phone messages. The school has one doctor in their service.

Students who attend come from the rural communities, the mountainous areas, hot lands and the coast. Their parents are usually farmers, freighters (they transport goods on the backs of burrows or horses), and field workers. They come from low income families which usually have six or seven children and who can't afford to pay for their children's education.

To enter the school, students must have a letter or word of recommendation from a missionary, friend or pastor sent to the director of the school. The student must then send in an application and be interviewed by the director. When accepted, they take with them their Bible, hymn book, and bedding. They must also have the willingness to accept the discipline from the school and sign a document saying that they will.

Some students who come have no academic training. But this year, Mary says all have their elementary education and two have high school education.

Students attend school for three years. During this time they must complete 109 hours of study in 58 subjects. They are not allowed to graduate unless these conditions are met.

At the school the students do all of the household chores. Boys as well as girls do their own laundry. This is hard for the boys in that they are taught at home that only the women are to do the housework. Their laundry is done on a flat slab of rock with a cement box (pila) filled with water next to it.

Water is splashed upon the rock and the clothes are scrubbed clean with soap. Tables are covered with oil cloth and after meals the tables are cleared and the dining area is used for the classrooms.

Drinking cups have no handles because when the students are learning to wash the dishes they are broken too easily. One dish in Mexico cost about 200 pesos ($4 in American money); therefore they are not easily replaced.

Most students have to be taught how to use the silverware. In their homes, the students eat with their torillas, (a piece of tortilla in each hand). Table manners are also taught at the school.

Students are taught respect for their teachers, directors and elders. Disciplinary measures are not severe. Punishment consists of receiving no dessert, being restricted from going to the corner store, or merely being asked to leave the table.

On weekends, students walk two or three hours to get to their mission points. Once they arrive they must visit all the people, not just the believers. They pray for the sick and help the people with problems. On Friday nights they hold services. Boys preach and special music or poetry is delivered.

Twelve students finished this school year and will enter their second year in September. The school hopes to receive 12 to 15 more students this fall. The school still has lots of needs, including dormitories, beds, plates and books.

Mary's mission's main objective is to prepare future pastors for all the churches which need them and for new churches being organized.

Kuehler, Ferris, Franks elected to board

The Farmer's Cooperative Elevator of Muleshoe held its annual meeting at Muleshoe High School July 25.

Ben Kuehler, Joe Ferris, and Danny Gene Franks were elected to the board of directors.

Robert Johnson presented a report to the membership. After the meeting, Johnson summed up some of his main points:

The Farmer's Cooperative Elevator has almost finished its repairs on its concrete elevator, and the local association is financially strong.

"But," said Johnson, "I know some people who were financially strong three to five years ago and are gone now. Agriculture is a very critical period. For most of our members this period will probably last from now till January. If they can make it through this period they will have made it through the worst." Johnson stated, "We're in a very evolutionary period in agriculture. Because of the economies of scale of both buying and selling commodities, there are larger farms and larger supply center growing each year while smaller local farms and supply center may be gone.

"We are probably in the bottom year for farmers, if government will cooperate at all, because we have seen lower fuel costs, lower fertilizer costs, and lower interest rates this year.

"On the local scene, we will probably see more semi-irrigated grains grown—especially strains which use less water."

McCathern campaigns here

Gerald McCathern, Democratic candidate for the 19th Congressional District, spoke to a gathering of about 20 at the Farwell Community Center Saturday morning.

McCathern, running against GOP incumbent Larry Combest, started off by noting how the federal deficit relates to agriculture, the largest industry in the nation. He said agriculture and ag-related jobs contain 20 percent of the nation's work force.

"If you don't make a profit," McCathern said to the farmers present, "You can't generate the dollars that flow into the economy."

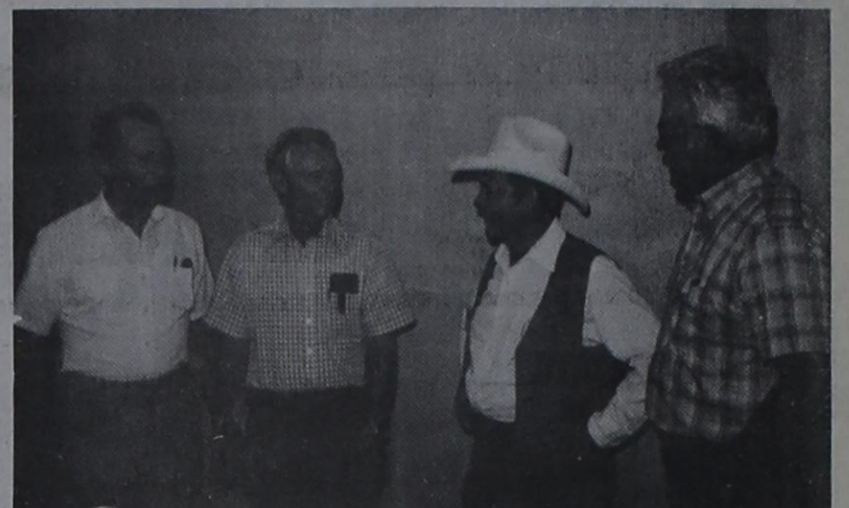

McCathern said agriculture can generate prosperity for the nation, something most economists recognize. Thus, it's important to make agriculture profitable.

He pointed out that the 19th District used to be the highest tax-paying district in the nation, due to its gas, oil and farm economy. Now, he said, the district is heading for a tax deficit role, meaning that the federal government puts more money back here than is generated through federal taxes.

There are two ways for the federal government to increase its income, he said. One is higher taxes, which he called unacceptable. The other is to generate more taxpayers. This can be done by allowing industries to make a profit, thus generating more jobs.

"Agriculture can generate more jobs than any industry if we are allowed to make a profit," he said.

The winners of the first Pioneers of the Year awards went to Vashti Fowler and Mitz Walling, who rode in the parade.

The honorary parade marshals were John and Joann Getz of Farwell, who were in charge of the Border Town Days celebration for 13 years until this year.

Leading off the antique cars on parade was Orie Jones of Farwell.
