

Hot Showers Save Lives Of Mustard Gas Victims.

Paris, France.—Hot baths as an antidote for mustard gas are saving lives of many soldiers in gassed areas.

While gas shells are still falling the chemical warfare service rushes up motor trucks carrying 2500-gallon tanks, equipped with instantaneous water heaters.

Halting behind a sheltering wood, the crew throws together a wooden framework, under which 24 soldiers can stand in hot water showers. Pipes are connected and the water is turned on.

Soldiers quickly remove their clothes. Hands and shoes are dipped in lime to destroy the lurking gas. Even helmets are dipped in lime water. Men with obvious burns are sent to the hospital. The others are sprayed with liquid soap, after which hot water is turned on and bodies scrubbed thoroughly.

After the shower, each man's eyes, nose and throat are sprayed and clean clothes brought up in a second truck, are passed out.

In a test made recently, 48 men were given the anti-mustard gas shower baths in two and a half minutes.

Ocean Depths To Be Lighted.

Washington. —An invention that will make possible the salvaging of a majority of the thousands of vessels sunk by submarine and mine has been perfected and placed before government officials here. Some of the largest wrecking and dredging companies are interested.

The device, which is the invention of a New York man, enables light rays to be projected for a quarter of a mile thru water. It is described as out of the experimental stage.

Since August 1914, to date, approximately 21,500,000 tons of allied and neutral ships have been lost, a large percentage about the British Isles, at depths practicable for diving operations, provided the divers can see what they are doing.

Surface lights penetrate water for a comparatively short distance. If brilliant light were available for divers the greater difficulties of his work would disappear.

American Gas More Deadly Than That Made In Germany.

New York.—Gas shells prepared in America are more deadly than any so far made in Germany and their fumes can penetrate even the most modern gas masks, Major H. W. Duffy of the British-American gas service, declared in a lecture before the Society of Chemical Industry.

Major Duffy said that in tours of battle fields in France he had observed hundreds of Germans, all of whom wore masks of the latest German design, killed by American gas.

TO MY SOLDIER.

I'm feeling rather shaky over all the things I hear,
Of the shrapnel and the cannon that are roaring
round you, dear,
Of the Zeppelins and airplanes and sneaky submarine.
But the worst of all the things I fear—it nearly turns me green—
Is the fear of all the damsels you'll be meeting
"over there."
All the pretty maids of Paris with her fascinating air.

Now be a loyal lover, don't forsake the girls back home.
No matter how they smile on you, don't let your fancy roam.
The French girls may be pretty, and the nurses may be kind—
But don't you be a traitor to the girl you left behind.
I know that you are loyal to the Red and White and Blue,
And I hope that you're loyal to your old time sweetheart too.

Against the Huns that spell with "u" you'll hold your own I know.
But I fear you may be ambushed by the Huns
they spell with "u."
Stand guard against temptation, don't surrender to their charms,
And wait till you come to me before presenting arms.

Leave the French girls to the Frenchmen and the nurses to the "Docs."
The boys in khaki should be true to the girls who knit their socks.
Though the French girls may be pretty, and the nurses may be kind,
Oh, do not be a traitor to the girl you left behind!

Aviator Describes

28,900-Foot Ascent

altitude flight made by Captain R. W. Schroeder of the air service over Dayton on Sept. 18, has officially been reported to Major General Kenly, director of military aeronautics. Captain Schroeder attained the height of 28,900 feet. His reports says:

"In order to take an airplane to a higher altitude than any other pilot in the world, I found that it would require more than one or two attempts. I made three attempts. The first one took me to 24,000 feet, the second to 27,000 feet and the last one to 28,900 feet, but now I feel certain that I can get to 30,000 feet.

"The cold, thin air is one's greatest adversary. First of all, one must make a study of the performance of his motor at these high altitudes. I took off at 1:45 p. m. Wednesday, Sept. 18, 1918, and made a steady circular climb, passing through clouds at 8,000 feet, 12,000 feet and 16,000 feet. At 20,000 feet, while still climbing in large circles, my goggles became frosted, making it very difficult for me to watch my instruments. When I reached 25,000 feet I noticed the sun growing very dim, I could hardly hear my motor run, and I felt very hungry. The trend of my thought was that it must be getting late, that evening must be coming on, but I was still climbing, so thought I might as well stick to it a little longer, for I knew I could reach my ceiling pretty soon, then I should go down, and even though it were dark, I could land all right, for I had made night landings many times before, and so I went to talking to myself and this I felt was a good sign to begin taking oxygen and I did. I was then over 25,000 feet, and as soon as I started to inhale the oxygen, the sun grew bright again, my motor began to exhaust so loud that it seemed something must be wrong with it, I was no longer hungry and the day seemed to be a most beautiful one. I felt like singing with sheer joy as I gazed about through the small portion of my goggles which had no frost, due to a drop of oil which had splashed on them from the ### motor.

"It was wonderful to see the blue of the sky above me. The frost on my goggles bothered me very much. At times I had to remove my glove in order to put the warm palm of my hand on the glass to thaw the frost. I did this about every ten minutes, so that I could take the proper readings of the instruments, which I marked down on my data pad. I believe that if my goggles had been better ventilated they would not have frosted. When I was about 27,000 feet I had to remove my goggles, as I was unable to keep a steady climb. My hands by this time were numb and worried me considerably. The cold, raw air made my eyes water and I was compelled to fly with my head well down inside the cockpit.

"I kept at it until my oxygen gave out, and at that point I noticed my aneroid indicated very nearly 29,000 feet. The thermometer showed 32 degrees below zero, centigrade, and the revolutions per minute had dropped from 1,600 to 1,560. This is considered very good. But the lack of oxygen was affecting me. I was beginning to get cross and I could not understand why I was only 29,000 feet, after climbing for so long a time. I remember that the horizon seemed to be very much out of place, but I felt that I was flying correctly and that I was right and the horizon was wrong.

"About this time the motor quit. I was out of gasoline, so I descended in a large spiral. When I descended to about 20,000 feet I began to feel much better and realized that the lack of oxygen had affected me. I passed down through the clouds at 16,000 feet and, as I remember, it was snowing from these clouds upon the next layer, some 4,000 feet below. I am not positive of this, as I may have been affected by the lack of oxygen. I noticed as I descended that the air seemed to be very thick and stuffy, but very nice and warm. I did not see the ground from the time I went up through the clouds above Dayton, Ohio, until I came down through them again at 4,000 feet above Canton, Ohio, over 200 miles from where I started.

"I was lost, beyond a doubt,

Washington. —Lloyd Sydenham, British authority on fortifications, in a message received by Major General Kenly, director of military aeronautics, said: "Impress upon your people that 10,000 airplanes at this juncture are worth more than 500,000 troops on the ground and will not require nearly so much transport. We can bring them by air force."

Soldier's Life Is Hard

In Prison Camp.

Paris, Friday, Oct. 25.—The Stars and Stripes, the official newspaper of the American Expeditionary Forces, identifies the first American private soldier to escape from prison in Germany as Frank Savicki of Shenandoah, Pa., and devotes an article to his experiences.

While a prisoner Savicki spent ten weeks behind the German lines, where he worked fourteen hours daily on military work. He then was sent to a farm. He often went without food and water and was clubbed by his guards for picking grass along a roadside to eat. Finally he was sent to the prison camp at Rastatt.

After several weeks, Savicki succeeded in escaping and making his way through the mountains into western Alsace, where he has rejoined his regiment.

Stones Are Badly Needed

New York.—The Government needs 1,000,000 pounds of nut shells and fruit stones daily for manufacturing gas mask charcoal and at present is unable to purchase one-third that amount. This and the failure of the public to co-operate fully by saving and sending in this form of waste from the kitchen have made it necessary for the chemical warfare headquarters to renew its appeal.

Germans Carry Explosives In Red Cross Ambulance.

With the Allied Armies in France and Belgium.—The British army now has obtained absolute proof that the Germans are violating the rules of civilized warfare in respect to the use of the Red Cross, as had for some time been suspected. On October 25th the Fifth Army captured a German ambulance which, engaged in carrying ammunition, bore the Geneva Red Cross. This vehicle was found to be loaded with explosives and the capture was considered so important that sentries were immediately posted to make certain that no one touched it until photographs of it could be made for future reference.

Anybody who thinks it's going to be a walk-away from now on should be sent to the trenches at once.

When peace comes are we going to punish all those palatially interned German spies by driving them out into the miseries of civil life?

Three months ago we were all howling for war on Bulgaria. But we've learned the leave-it-to-Wilson lesson now—all of us except Senator Lodge.

Let's give the same deaf ear to the arch fiend of Berlin, who has led his uncivilized hordes of beasts in men's image on to unspeakable crimes, that his cruel followers have given their victims, until the brutal Huns are completely defeated and crushed to a pulp.

Then the officers from the lowest to the highest who have ordered these crimes should be sought out. Our soldiers should go all over the empire to capture them and bring them before an international courtmartial, where they should be tried for the high crimes against civilization which they ordered.

And then they should be shot, hanged and imprisoned, according to their just metes. —Denver Express.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

President Wilson favors granting an armistice to the Germans in order that the details of the peace to which they have agreed may be worked out, provided, in complete accord with the plans of the Allied War Council, they lay down their arms and let the Allies draw a bead on them.

This is the substance of the President's reply.

Perhaps Wilson, in failing to advocate the return of stolen Schleswig and Holstein to Denmark felt that he had to draw the line somewhere. If he took away from Germany all the territory she has stolen, there'd be no place for the Germans to call home. And the Lord knows we don't want them hunting new homes all over the world.

Back the President in all of his undertakings, is the only way to help win the war. We, as citizens of the United States, should do more than we think is our part by purchasing Liberty Bonds, War Savings Stamps and then contribute liberally to all war funds. Remember that our future depends wholly upon our actions at this very critical time. Keep in mind that George Washington is the father of our nation and we do not care to have the Kaiser as our step-father!

"The German peace propaganda and peace rumors form no reason for relaxation of conservation," says M. R. Johnston, acting Federal Food Administrator for New Mexico.

"Every mite of territory evacuated by the Germans means more people to feed, and remember food control must continue after peace is declared. Hungry Europe must be fed and unless exports are controlled, it is certain that distribution will be irregular and sections may be slighted to the extent of actual famine.

"Therefore, every American must continue to save food to meet the present needs of the armies and the allies and be ready to share with Europe after the war ends. The allies are today going with less food than America, especially sugar.

New York, Oct. 28.—Immediate passage by Congress of a law prohibiting the landing at American ports of German-made toys or other German-made merchandise "until the central empires have submitted to an allied peace," was urged in a resolution adopted at a convention here today of the Toy Makers' Association of America. Declaring that "long ago we eliminated these goods from our catalogue, accepted our loss and forgot all about them." Walter Scott, vice president, said his concern has set itself against "German propaganda designed to reintroduce into America German-made articles."

The shipment was part of a lot of goods purchased by the firm early in 1914, he said.

Her Hands Made Beautiful.

There is an old legend concerning three young women, who disputed as to who had the most beautiful hands, which reveals that the true source of beauty is in the heart.

One dipped her hands into the pure running stream, another another picked berries until her fingers were pink, a third gathered roses until her hands were made sweet by their fragrance. An aged woman, careworn and decrepit, leaning upon her staff, came, asking a gift, but all alike refused her. A fourth young woman, making no claims to beauty, ministered to her needs. The aged woman then said:

"It is not the hand that is dipped in the brook, nor the hand made red with berries, nor the hand garlanded or perfumed with roses, that is most beautiful, but the hand that giveth to the poor." As she thus spoke, her mask fell off, her staff was cast aside, her wrinkles vanished, and she stood before them, an angel of God.

It matters not whether the hand gives in money, or in kindly acts; in some cases money would be quite useless, while kindness is priceless.—Selected.

The proud Prussian prince grunted in disgust and disdain. He glared at the American.

The prince wilted, stood at painful attention and answered questions like a spanked school-boy.

A Stateline location with advantages of freight rates over two large states viz: Texas and New Mexico and being centrally located in the Southwest, far removed from the Eastern Automobile Center, near the base of the largest field of supply makes TEXICO the most favored location to establish an Industrial Center.

On the right is shown a picture of the administration building of the Cannon Ball Motor Company, with a group of visitors who visited its home office on April 12th 1918. This is beyond question one of the most modern three story brick buildings in the middle southwest, comprising 23 office rooms and clerical apartments including cafe, barber shop, demonstration rooms, company garage, etc., with all modern conveniences and facilities. This building and its equipment represents a cost of more than $60,000 and is fully paid.

That the Cannon Ball Motor Company is making wonderful progress is evidenced by the illustration shown on this page. Our Six-Sixty, "Star of the Highway" models are now finished and will be on our demonstration floors in a few days. Designs are complete and truck models as illustrated below are being rushed to completion. Contract has been let for the construction of the first unit of the factory building at Texico and actual work will soon be under way.

With administration building complete! With factory building now going under construction; with three distinct designed and modeled cars actually manufactured and on our floor; with truck model almost complete; with more than 2,000 stockholders; with enough Bills Receivable to erect, equip and operate a large plant and with one of the most efficient working organizations that any company has ever acquired, and all of this has been done within a period of ten months. It is conservative to state that such wonderful progress has never been equalled in the industrial field.

CALL FROM OVER THERE.

(By James W. Wise, of the Vigilantes.)

You've sent us here across the waves,

To make the whole world free To keep our nation's honor bright To fight for Liberty.

—went and we were glad to go to fight—perhaps to die— To pay our debt to noble France. Democracy, our cry.

We ask no praise nor honor, No riches and no fame, Our hearts are in the fight for truth, But—back us in the game.

You've sent us here to fight your fight, Though it be ours, too, We'll do our bit out at the front— The rest is up to you.

Intuition Tells Yanks Location of Bomb Traps.

Paris, France.—Two American officers walking thru the central square of one of the towns captured by the Yanks, started up one street. Suddenly one had a "hunch."

"Let's take the next street," he said. They did. And two minutes later the other street blew up with a bang. It was another German trap. The entire street had been mined by the retreating Huns and a timing device left to detonate it—blowing up, the Huns hope, a whole regiment.

In another town, a chateau dug out of the cellar of another chateau by United States engineers —after they had carefully disconnected a wire so arranged as to set off the explosive the moment the front door of the chateau was opened.

A German sword was found sticking in the ground at the side of a road. An American sergeant, ever suspicious, tied a 50-foot rope to the sword handle and, from this safe distance, yanked it out of the ground. A mine blew a ten-foot hole in the middle of the road.

Raise Rabbits for Meat.

Rabbits, which have proved a valuable food source in Europe during the present war, may well be raised more extensively in America to reduce the drain on the ordinary meat supply, according to biologists of the U. S. department of agriculture. The animals may be raised in back yards of cities and towns as well as on farms.

The Belgian and Flemish giant rabbits are recommended for meat production, as the ordinary tame rabbit is smaller and develops more slowly. Rabbits are easily kept. They eat hay, grass, lawn cuttings and green vegetation of many kinds.

The department has published a bulletin on raising rabbits, which will be helpful to persons who wish to engage in this pursuit.

There has been only one death from influenza in our town to date, and we trust that all who are suffering from the disease will continue to improve, and that this nice sunny weather will help to stamp out the germs from all over the country.

With all respects to Lord Milner, it is hard for American democracy to understand his fear of the spread of Bolshevism in Germany. If the Huns take to cutting their own throats it will save us the trouble.

Oil Sand Is Found

Near Taiban, N. M.

Quite a little excitement has been created by the reported discovery of oil bearing rock and oil sand in the vicinity of Taiban, N. M., where Amarillo parties are now prospecting. A gas well said to equal the Hapgood well has been brought in and arrangements are being made to get a drilling outfit to put down a test well. The Gypsy Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Standard, is drilling on the Anton Chicko grant north of the new discovery and the Carter Oil Company, another subsidiary of the Standard, is obtaining all the leases they are able to get in this locality. —Amarillo News
