There was a time when it was taken for granted that slavery of the black man, would continue without restraint, perhaps forever. Those who opposed it were convinced that it would never be checked. It did appear that it had come to stay, and the only relief looked for by some of the foremost leaders in opposition to human slavery, was the regulation of the same. Its end did come, though it cost us many a true son on both sides. All admit that the right prevailed, although many claimed calamity to the slaveholders, were they deprived of the same, but instead this great south has made more progress without the negro slave than they ever could have hoped for with them.

When you and I were children, we remember that our fathers and mothers, regardless as to their idea or stand on the liquor question, all agreed that the awful stagnant of society, was too well rooted to ever be displaced from our grand domain. We can remember how hopelessly we sympathized with Francis I. Willard and John P. St. John, the noble pioneers who have gone on before, but were almost ashamed to tell it above a whisper that we sanctioned their efforts, so futile did we view it. The Civil strife took thousands of our best and bravest men, but John Barleycorn has the record in number of lives taken. But we stand today realizing that he has at last been totally defeated, and the barrier which in our youth seemed impenetrable has been beaten down completely. The thing that could not be done, has been accomplished, and regardless of the prophesy of the liquor men, that our country would go to the dogs, we entered on a new era on July 1st that will surpass any other era in our country's history for progress, mentally, physically, morally and spiritually. Our fathers forgot to take into consideration, we failed to bring to mind that there is a Ruler of the universe, who has in all times since Adam, made it His business to see that in the end, Right would win against Wrong.

A very exciting race was pulled off just outside the corporation north-east of town Tuesday evening. It was exciting for several reasons. It was exciting because it was a race between a Ford and an Overland. It was doubly so, because the challenger was being framed up on, and almost everyone in the community knew it was a frameup but him. The challenger bet on the Ford. A friend of his, having been put next, also placed an equal amount on the Ford. The owner of the Overland of course placed an amount to cover both bets. All arrangements were perfected even to starters being placed in position (which of course were not used), a large number were at the finish, and witnessed the pitiful look gradually grow on the young man's face as the cars were nearing the finish, with no chance for the Ford to win. The $200.00 was turned over to the winner, while the loser received the taunts of the crowd. Finally after several days, the young man was given a lecture on evils of betting, was given his money back (less the amount taken out for the treats for the crowd.) His pulse are beating regular now.

MUSIC

Mrs. Chauchon, teacher of piano and voice will give private lessons.

Robert Morse left for Illinois Sunday morning, where he expects to be most of the time for the next few years. Bob will be greatly missed when it comes to well matters especially, for he is an expert in that line. When a well has been given up, people have been advised to send for Bob Morse, and without one single failure, he has made a well out of the hole. He has other machinery that this community has received the benefit of as well. Make your stay just as short as possible Bob, and come back to us for we need you.

Furniture and Kitchen Supplies at

MOUNT VERNON

We look on the place as a sacred shrine, as well we might. To one as he stands and beholds the haunts of our noted and immortalized dead, it will make him walk cautiously as if he were walking on holy ground. The crowds going there seem to all have that sacred feeling, for no one is heard to make any unnecessary noise of any sort, even in the garden or woods surrounding the mansion.

The Mansion House at Mount Vernon occupies a beautiful site overlooking the Potomac river. It is of wood, cut and painted to resemble stone. The building, 96x30 feet, has two stories and an attic with dormer windows. The roof is surmounted by a cupola, with an antique weather vane. In front extends a piazza fifteen feet deep and twenty-five feet high, with square pillars and a floor tiled with flags from the Isle of Wight. Two kitchens are connected with the central building by colonades. In front of the house are shaded lawns, and a deer park below; in the rear are lawns, gardens and orchards; and disposed about the grounds are the outbuildings of a Virginia farm. The main hall of the house extends through from front to back. The six rooms on the first floor are the banquet room, music room, west parlor, family dining room, Mrs. Washington's sitting room and the library. The upper rooms are Washington's room, Mrs. Washington's room, Miss Curtis' room, LaFayette's room, the River room, the Connecticut room, the Florida room, the District of Columbia room, the Rhode Island room and Tennessee room. I will make particular mention of only a few of the above.

The room in which Washington died is the south bed room (his room). The furniture is that which was used by Washington; the bedstead is the one upon which he died, and on the chair lays the open Bible from which Mrs. Washington had been reading to him at the moment of his death. All the rest of the furniture and fixtures are as he left them, in all the rest of the rooms as well. Mrs. Washington's room is in the attic. After the death of her husband the south bed room was closed, in accordance with a custom of the time to be left vacant for a space of three years; and Mrs. Washington occupied the room directly above, choosing it because the dormer window overlooked the grave of her husband. It was here that she died. LaFayette's room was the one which the Marquis occupied when a guest here. Each room is fittingly arranged with furniture, pictures, etc., as in Washington's time, with the addition of the most famous paintings of Washington. The kitchen is apart from the mansion proper. The culinary art is no longer practiced in the kitchen, although the crane still hangs in the great fireplace and the brick oven is well served.

The sun dial is on the west lawn with the inscription: "Horas non numero nisi serenas,"—I record none but sunny hours.

The flower garden is quaint with boxwood hedges, which are reputed to have been set out more than a century and half ago. In each plot on the side of the main walk the central space is occupied by a circular bed, around which are disposed four oval and four triangular beds, the whole forming a square. Some of the beds near the greenhouses are very intricate and curious in design. The Kentucky coffee tree was planted by LaFayette in 1824; the four strawberry shrubs, or calycanthi, were sent to Washington by Jefferson from Monticello; the hydrangea was planted here by LaFayette in 1824. A sage palm is the only greenhouse plant now living, which was at Mt. Vernon in Washington's day. At the foot of the garden is the famous Mary Washington rose, named by Washington for his mother. Near the butler's house is the magnolia which was brought by Washington from the James river in 1799, the last year of his life. The elm on one of the mounds near the entrance to the grounds was a slip from the Washington elm at Cambridge.

The barn was built by Lawrence Washington in 1753 with brick imported from England. In the coach house is Washington's carriage, and a cumbersome looking vehicle it is too. The deer park as Washington left it is under the hill between the mansion and the Potomac.

The tomb of Washington is a severely plain structure of brick, with an arched gateway in front, above which a marble slab is inscribed: "Within this enclosure rest the remains of General George Washington." Above the door of the tomb are the words: "I am the Resurrection and the Life. He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." In ante-chamber are seen two marble sarcophagi. The one on the right bears on its face the name of Washington, with chiseled coat-of-arms of the United States and a draped flag. One of the talons of the eagle in the coat-of-arms is missing; it was broken off by a vandal in war time. The other sarcophagus is inscribed "Martha, Consort of Washington, Died May 21, 1801, aged 71 years." The date is an error, curiously enough; it should have read 1802. The tomb is known as the New Tomb, in distinction from the original one, on the right of the path leading to the house. It was to the old tomb that LaFayette paid his memorable visit in 1824. Very few people know that an attempt was ever made to steal the body of Lincoln, and I think a less number know that a like attempt was made to take Washington's body. In 1831 the tomb was broken and rifled of a skull, which the dastard robber believed to be that of Washington, but proved not to be. The new and more secure vault was then made ready and the remains were transferred to it. In 1837 John Struthers, of Philadelphia, having hewn the two sarcophagi each from a single block of marble, and presented them for the purpose, the remains of Washington and Martha, his wife, were intrusted to their final keeping and the key of the vault was thrown into the Potomac. Within the vault rest forty members of the Washington and Curtis families.

A meeting was held at the court house a few days ago to protest against the water service, rendered the community the past month. This action seemed in keeping with the facts. We are not prepared to act as judge, but it appears that regardless of the agreement entered into by some in attendance to not pay anything on last month's water bills, that the action of the company in compromising by asking but half pay for June would of itself, automatically annul the agreement.

The water proposition in this community is getting to be a serious affair. While the company seems bound only morally to furnish us water, yet it could be made so that the service could be made better. It can't be done through threats or bluffs. Did the company see fit to shut off the water, we would all have time to die of thirst before the courts could get the tangle straightened out. The city claims that the company has a franchise and the company claim that they have not. This being the situation, it evidently is necessary for the courts to decide.

But what are we going to do if the company should take a notion to shut us off? Mighty quick work (and with much more speed than we have shown heretofore) would be necessary to give us relief. Then if we don't believe that it could be accomplished, why can't we get at the matter in a sane way. There are several ways out of the difficulty, and it looks like it is up to us to get busy.

The losing side in membership contest of the W. O. W. gave a fine supper to all the members and their families Saturday night. Ice cream and cake were served. A few indulged in speech making, but that was of little importance, taking the supper into consideration. A fine social evening was enjoyed by all.
