It's private property

Texico-Farwell folks need to be advised about potential dangers in using the pit north of Helton Oil Co. along State Line Road.

It's private property and "no trespassing signs" have been posted. But the signs disappear shortly after being put up, noted Hal Helton.

Some folks are illegally using the pit for firing practice and even aiming in the direction of Texico residents. Shells have been found to ricochet near Texico dwellings.

Also, Helton said, some folks are reported to have been shooting guns in the pit while youngsters are riding their bikes in the same area. "Before someone gets hurt, please don't use the pit for these purposes," said Helton. "It's private property. If someone wants to use the pit, they should see me at Helton Oil first."

Obituaries

Ruth Bristow

Ruth Bristow of Farwell died April 1 at the Farwell Convalescent Center in Farwell.

Funeral arrangements are being conducted by Singleton-Ellis Funeral Home, Muleshoe.

Autrey honored

Rae Lynn Autrey, an eighth grader at Texico School, was selected as one of the outstanding players in the ENMU Solo and Ensemble Festival held in Portales Feb. 15.

She was one of 18 soloists picked from over 1,200 students who performed in the contest. Her adjudicator was Charles Faulkner, director of bands at Clovis High School.

She was chosen on the basis of her performance of "La Spagnola," a solo for alto clarinet and piano. Faulkner remarked that the alto clarinet is a difficult instrument to get the correct quality of sound on, but that she had done it.

She was the only student from a small school selected in the festival. Other students selected were from

Booster Club seeks more participation

The Texico Booster Club discussed Tuesday night ways to seek better participation.

Present at the monthly meeting were club President Jim Holland, Mike Pomper, High School Principal Ken Shaw and Coaches Borde Williams, Dave Lynn, Michael Littlejohn and Roy King.

Among the points made were: - Perhaps instead of meeting monthly the whole year, it might be better to adopt the Farwell Booster Club's format of meeting just during the football season. At the Farwell meetings, game films are shown. About 15 to 20 persons attend those meetings.

Texico's club may schedule its September meeting after the first league football game and show game films. Lynn, head football coach, was amenable to this idea.

-It also was suggested that instead of meeting monthly the club should meet every other month. The main thrust of the club is to raise funds to help the athletic program. This is done via the barbeque at Homecoming and a fund-raiser to help pay for plaques for the annual athletic awards assembly in May.

The club also discussed the upcoming athletic awards assembly. Plans call for the same format as last year, with punch and cookies served afterward in the educational complex building.

Cancer

spread. You know the answer.

There are two ways to treat the Nicaraguan cancer: make sure the Contras win or send in U.S. troops. I would support either venture.

And if it means that some Americans would die in the fighting, that's the price we must pay for being the democratic leader of the world. It's not a pleasant thought to know that some of our countrymen might have to give their lives for that concept, but it's one we must accept. It happened in Korea, it happened in Vietnam, it happened in Lebanon and it will happen again.

We shouldn't give the Contras $100 million in aid. We should give them $100 billion in military aid, and if that fails, we should be prepared to take the next step.

Texans flee northward much better for us." He urges the government to "tell our people never again to give way to panic; but to do their duty."

This "Runaway Scrape" adds greatly to the difficulties of the Texas cause. It reduces the number of volunteers for the army, since many settlers refuse to abandon their families in their flight to safety. The runaways clog the roads and river crossings, hampering movement of the army. Should Texas eventually emerge as the victor in this war with Mexico, the settlers will then be returning to unworked farms, where little or nothing has been planted. They will be facing a difficult winter.

1838: TUESDAY, APRIL 3. With the organization of Fannin County, authorized by Congress last December 17, the total number of counties in the Republic of Texas has now reached 30. It is on the Red River, west of Red River County. It is named for the hero of Goliad, Colonel James W. Fannin.

Other recent counties include Galveston, Fayette and Robertson. Mina County recently changed its name to Bastrop, which is the name of its major town. It is named for Baron de Bastrop, an early settler and an associate of Stephen F. Austin, and of his father, Moses Austin.

The total list of counties at the present time, naming them from the southeast to the northwest, is as follows: San Patricio, Refugio, Goliad, Bexar, Victoria, Gonzales, Jackson, Matagorda, Colorado, Fayette, Bastrop, Brazoria, Fort Bend, Austin, Washington, Milam, Galveston, Harris, Montgomery, Robertson, Jefferson, Liberty, Houston, Jasper, Sabine, San Augustine, Nacogdoches, Shelby, Red River and Fannin.

1842: SATURDAY, APRIL 2. General Edward Burleson, Vice President of the Republic of Texas, today disbanded an army of 800 volunteers under his command. It was assembled to invade Mexico in order to counter an expected invasion from that quarter. When President Sam Houston refused to support such an offensive, General Burleson decided to disband the volunteers. Texas has been in a state of uproar since the invasion of San Antonio on March 5 by General Rafael Vasquez with some 700 troops. Refugio and Goliad were also occupied at that time. Although the Mexicans departed after two days, they distributed a proclamation by General Mariano Arista that a much larger invasion force was on its way. Texas issued a general call to arms on March 10, and Brigadier General Alexander Somervell was ordered by President Houston to take command of the militia that was being raised. There is no regular army in Texas at present.

In the few weeks that have passed, it has become evident that a Mexican invasion is not imminent, and many of the volunteers have returned home. However, a considerable unit has assembled at San Antonio under General Burleson, who advocates a strong offense as the best defense. By vigorously bringing the war to the enemy, he believes that a lasting peace can be forced upon Mexico. President Houston is adamant against an invasion because of the meagre resources currently available to Texas. He believes that several months of preparation will be needed before the Republic can make such a major effort. He therefore ordered General Somervell to

Farwell Chamber directors named

The addition of five directors to the Farwell Chamber of Commerce was announced by Chamber Secretary Dutch Quickel. The new directors are Steve Breckenridge, Doris Eckhardt, Gwen Hughes, John Grigsby and Ron Fechner. Their terms expire in 1989.

Other Chamber directors are Fred Chandler, Ricky Stewart, Mike Pomper and Don Williams. The directors now will vote on officers for the coming year. This is done by secret ballot and the announcement will be made by Quickel later this month.

The Burger Barn in Texico is now offering breakfast, announced Billy Jo Potts, one of the restaurant's owners. "We are opening now at 5:30 a.m. proceed to San Antonio and take over the command. General Burleson relinquished his command as ordered, but the troops under him refused to accept Somervell. As volunteers, they claimed the right to elect their own commander, and voted overwhelmingly for Burleson. President Houston then vigorously demanded that the volunteers recognize General Somervell's authority, stating that the government would withdraw all support otherwise. He said it would be four months before Texas could undertake a major invasion of Mexico. That would be in August. General Burleson stated, "Whether this plan can be executed under the burning rays of an August sun yet remains to be seen," and dismissed his men, permitting them either to return home or to join General Somervell. In addressing them, he said: "For you soldiers, I will hear witness that if you have not chased the barbarian enemy to his hiding place, and chastised him for his insolence and outrage, it is no fault of mine. If the President has thought fit, by a different course of policy, to disband a force which, by this time, might have been strong enough to have bled the enemy to his heart's core, I beg you to recollect that he is the constitutional Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, and he alone is responsible for it."

Eubank, Hale married

D'Lynn Eubank and John Dow Hale, both of Lubbock, exchanged wedding vows March 15, in the Garden Room of the Timbers of Willow Hill Apartments in Lubbock.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Eubank of Farwell, and the bridegroom's parents are Jane Hale of Clovis and Jim Hale of Albuquerque.

Officiating at the double-ring ceremony was Ralph Gates, formerly of Farwell, and now the minister of Fairmont Park Church of Christ in Midland.

A large natural stone fireplace was the backdrop for the wedding setting, forming a background for three 15-branch brass candelabras arranged in arch type effect. Grapevine ivy, ficus benjamin and leatherleaf fern decorated the candle stands which held white votive candles.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was escorted by her father. Her formal gown of white re-embroidered alencon lace and silk organza featured a scooped neckline flowing into a deep vee in back. The neckline and basque waist bodice were covered with jeweled alencon lace.

The sheer leg-o-mutton sleeves of organza were studded with pearl clusters and formed a fitted Bishop cuff accented with beaded alencon lace. The ballroom skirt of organza over taffeta was bordered with scalloped alencon lace and formed a cathedral length train.

For something old she wore an antique wrist watch which belonged to her maternal grandmother, Alleta White Walker, and also wore the first gold wedding band of her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Johnnie Eubank Pitts. Something new was her dress, and something borrowed included a string of pearls belonging to her mother and pearl earrings belonging to the bridegroom's mother. Something blue was a garter made by her mother from the same fabric as that used in the bridal attendants' dresses. In her shoes she carried pennies minted in the years of the couple's births.

She carried a cascade bouquet featuring white sweetheart roses surrounded by English ivy, boxwood and leatherleaf fern. Circlets of pearls were interspersed throughout the bouquet with single pearls also enhancing the white roses. In her hair she wore a band of miniature flowers of organza and satin centered with seed pearls and larger pearls which matched those in her bouquet.

Ronda Eubank of Northbrook, Ill., served her sister as maid of honor. Her other attendants were her sister, Gina Eubank of Midland, and Peggy Goetsch of Farwell. They were all attired in identical floor length dresses of teal blue with the fabric design forming shades of light and dark in a stripe effect. The dresses were designed with wide shoulders, vee neckline, long fitted sleeves, and straight skirt split to the knee in front. The self-fabric belts closed with gold buckles. They carried long-stemmed white roses with English ivy in hogarth curve, highlighted with touches of pearls and white ribbon.

Marty Hale of Lubbock, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Steve Lewis and Ron Morris, both of Lubbock, served as groomsmen and ushers. Alan Eubank, brother of the bride, and Lezlie Castleberry, cousin of the bride, were candle-lighters. Alan also served as usher, seating his mother and grandmother, and the bridegroom seated his mother.

Lezlie wore a dress like those of the bridesmaids and wore a wrist corsage of white roses and baby's breath.

The bridegroom wore a dark gray formal tuxedo with tails featuring gray and black striped trousers, white shirt and ascot tie. His attendants wore dark gray tuxes with tails, and all had white rose boutonnières.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Eubank wore a fuchsia suit with white blouse and a corsage of white roses and baby's breath trimmed with white lace. The bridegroom's mother wore a jade silk dress with a white gardenia corsage.

Tracy Williams of Lubbock presided at the guest register at a table covered with white crochet over teal blue and centered with a teal blue candle encircled with white flowers.

Taped recordings of traditional wedding music by "His Image Singers" was overseen by James Castleberry, cousin of the bride, and Neil Jones.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Garden Room. The bride's table was covered with floor length teal blue skirt overlaid with a white crocheted cloth made by the bride's paternal great-grandmother, Etta Eubank. A smaller table which held the coffee service was also covered with teal blue with an overlay made of hand crocheted doilies which matched the other tablecloth and were made by great-grandmother Berta Smith.

Crystal and silver appointments belonging to the bride's grandmother, Johnnie Pitts, were used, and the bride's bouquet in a silver teapot centered the table. The three-tiered white cake was trimmed with teal blue flowers and was topped with white satin wedding bells and two white doves, each holding a wedding band in its beak.

Cake, punch, nuts and mints were served by Mary Hale, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Marianne Jones.

Another table, was also covered with teal blue, held assorted finger sandwiches, meat and cheese trays and various vegetables and relishes. The refreshment tables were centered with crystal vases holding satin rose-shaped rice bags made by the bridegroom's grandmother, Oma Johnson of Henderson, Tx. Rice bags were handed out to the guests by Lance Castleberry, cousin of the bride.

Reception hostesses were the bride's aunts, Betty Jean Castleberry of Farwell, and Alma Preston of Midland.

For a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe the bride wore a two-piece white suit with teal blue blazer and a corsage of white roses.

The newlyweds are now at home at Timbers of Willow Hill Apartments, 4425 82nd, #1146, Lubbock.

The bride, a 1978 graduate of Farwell High School, attended Abilene Christian University and Lubbock Christian College and is employed by the Law Offices of Patrick C. Simek.

A 1978 graduate of Clovis High

School, the bridegroom will graduate in May from Texas Tech University with a degree in landscape architecture with a specialty in construction design. He is employed by Sherwin Williams.

Farmers asked to watch water

Parmer County Commissioner Robert White asked that area farmers using sprinklers be sure not to let the water fall onto neighboring roads. "We ask that farmers please cut the end guns on their sprinklers when adjacent to county roads. We're hearing complaints about the roads becoming muddy and dangerous for school buses and mail carriers. If an accident were to occur due to muddy roads, then the farmer could be liable."

Skeen seeks re-election

Joe Skeen announced Monday that he will be a Republican candidate for re-election to the U.S. House of Representatives from the Second Congressional District covering eastern and southern New Mexico.

At a press conference in the Roswell Inn attended by the area's top GOP officials, the Lincoln County rancher said he would campaign on his record of "getting things done for the people of New Mexico."

He said he also would continue his efforts to keep New Mexico from "being a gateway for illegal drug traffic."

"Because we are a border state, we are confronted with this tremendous drug problem and I will continue to build up financial support for the agencies that are involved in drug interdiction and detection," he said. "The support today is too limited."

Skeen was elected to the House in 1980 by a successful write-in effort. He said his 98 percent voting record in the House is evidence of his commitment to his New Mexico constituents.

Program for gifted, talented planned here

BY JOHN A. GRIGSBY
FARWELL INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT
SUPERINTENDENT

One area that has long taken a back seat in the educational process throughout the State involves special classes for gifted and talented students.

Throughout Texas, this area is receiving increased attention as more and more local school districts initiate gifted and talented programs. In Farwell, we also are planning a program for gifted and talented students.

I want to emphasize that this program is just now in the planning stage. It hasn't been brought before the School Board yet nor presented for approval by the State.

We are considering starting a program at the elementary level, from kindergarten on up. If approved, then we also plan to take a look at serving the high school levels at a later date.

Without a special program for talented and gifted pupils, it's very difficult for a teacher to work specifically towards meeting the special needs of these students. Teachers must ensure that their students meet mandatory state requirements. This is foremost in their work methods. Thus, teachers do the best they can for the most they teach. State rules and time requirements "box" them in.

Currently, we're in the process of identifying gifted and talented pupils at the elementary school. Tests are being given and a list compiled. To meet state requirements for an approved program, a minimum of 150 minutes a week must be given to gifted and talented instruction.

In the past, educators have sometimes felt that the gifted and talented kids can take care of them-

Hudnalls attend Spring Concert

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hudnall of Farwell went to Portales March 27 where they attended the Spring Concert of the Portales High School Concert Band.

They played selections that the band will play in the district festival competition in Hobbs in April.

The Hudnalls' grandson, Bryce Harmon, senior, plays the kettle drums in the percussion section. One group of selections was tunes from the 1940's for the older people present.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Harmon of Portales and Mrs. Brenda Hammond of Hobbs played in the Portales High School marching band and in the concert band when they attended the Portales schools. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harmon have been band sponsors all the years their children have attended school there.
