HENRY SAYS:
Contrary To Popular Opinion--
Valves do need grinding more often than before. Leaky valves are the first sign of loss of power and economy that in turn cause a host of troubles, such as leaky rings, worn cylinders, worn bearings, ruined crankshaft, etc.
Today's Automobiles Call For Today's Service Methods
No longer is the old hand valve reamer and hand valve grinder considered efficient enough for the modern, high compression, high speed motors. Nothing but the very best in precision can possibly give the performance and economy in today's cars that the manufacturers built into them.
We Have Just Installed—
Complete Hall Valve Reconditioning System
... which more than 70 manufacturers of cars, trucks and tractors use in building new motors. HALL employs the exclusive patented eccentric grinding process which gives the utmost in precision and finish.
Also we use the Hall Method of synchronizing valves to make them deliver every ounce of power of which they are capable. This method produces quieter valves and eliminates valve tappet adjustment on L-head motors.
If your car is not performing as good as it did when new, let us check the compression and see if all cylinders are delivering their full share of power.

Chevrolet Featuring New Fleetline Body

Chevrolet dealers throughout the United States are now displaying the latest addition to that division's passenger car line—the six-passenger sedan featuring the new Fleetline body by Fisher, presented as setting a new high mark in luxury, comfort and style.

Hewitt Chevrolet Company are local dealers for the Chevrolet automobile.

Mechanically, the new car is identical with other 1941 Special Deluxe Chevrolets. It has the 90-horsepower six-cylinder valve-in-head engine, knee action, and the famous vacuum power shift at no extra cost. The body, however, is entirely new. Its roominess and richness of appointment make the Fleetline the most luxurious car ever offered by Chevrolet.

Length and lowness characterize the new model as viewed from the side. The body is of the landau type, with four doors and a closed rear quarter. Doors are extra wide a fact which contributes both to utility and smart appearance. Rear doors are hinged at the center pillar like those of other four-door models in the Chevrolet line; but rear door windows, unlike other four-door model windows, are equipped with ventpanes. Hinges, both of the doors and of the rear deck, are of the concealed type.

It is expected that as many as 100 club women will come to the campus for the course. A timely program of lectures, motion pictures, and other materials will be arranged.

The college committee helping to plan the course includes Mrs. T. V. Reeves, chairman; Dr. L. F. Sheffy, Miss Mary E. Hudspeth, Miss Darthula Walker, and Prof. H. S. Condon.

CHAPTER XVIII

Synopsis

When Mark Alexander's beautiful wife Ellen, died, he was left with Valerie, Ellen's daughter by a former marriage. All of Ellen's family save Shirley wanted to adopt Valerie—and the trust fund which Ellen left her, but Mark would not hear of it and took Valerie on a long trip. On the way home, they met Lucy Treadway and engaged her to tutor Valerie. Now, Elsie, fearing that Mark is interested in Lucy, has urged Ellen's sister Dorothy to come and try to get rid of Lucy. Dorothy has just told Lucy that Valerie's friends would not be permitted to visit her if Lucy stays. Lucy says that she must speak to Mark first.

all my love, Valerie darling, Lucy." She ran with it to Valerie's bedroom, and laid it on the dressing table. She opened Mark's sitting-room door almost timidly. It was the first time she had ever crossed the threshold. Even the air seemed filled with him. She ran to his desk and propped the note there, with the check folded inside. Pain almost beyond bearing knotted her throat. A handkerchief with an embroidered "M. A." lay unfolded on a chair, where Mark had dropped it. She picked it up and held it for a second against her face. Then she thrust it deep inside her sleeve. She closed the door carefully and ran downstairs. Everything depended on secrecy. And speed. If Chiltern should see her—if Mark should

She knew, however, as she drove along the quiet road in the late winter afternoon, that the wonderful feeling of security had been lost even before Dorothy had appeared. Looking back, she could trace its loss to Elsie, and Thanksgiving night. Now that the excitement of getting away was beginning to wear off, she was filled with a sort of panic, which gave way at last to complete desolation. It ought to be easy to take up the old ways again. Easier because she was rich! She had over a thousand dollars in the bank at Allington. What was she afraid of? Didn't she realize how lucky she was? Luckier than she had dreamed of being. And this was probably

"Can you honestly tell me you believe my brother-in-law would let you go if you talked to him about it?" Lucy longed to say she knew he would. At last she lifted her eyes and looked into the greenish-yellow ones staring at her. "No", she said. "He's much too decent. I'm sure he wouldn't." "It's something in your favor that you admit it. Mark has always been wax in the hands of attractive women. And of course you must have a certain kind of charm for men—" Lucy went to the door and opened it. "This is still my room," she said. "Will you kindly leave it?" "Why—I want to help you with your plans—" stammered Dorothy. "Will you kindly leave my room?" repeated Lucy. "I don't know if I shall ever forgive you or not. But I don't have to listen to you any longer. Or see you—"

Dorothy tried to look as though nothing had happened

Dorothy found herself at the door without quite knowing how she got there. She fancied she heard a faint foot-fall in the hall, but when she glanced out there was no one in sight. Lucy allowed herself a storm of tears. She buried her head in the cushions of the couch, and cried her heart out. When she began to get her breath once more, she got up and washed her face. Then she began to pack. Plans formed and unformed in her mind as she worked. And suddenly she knew what she would do. If she was going, she must go at once. If she waited to see Mark again, she would never find the courage. It took her only a short time to get her things together.

come back before she got away—it was almost like an escape. The big hall was empty. The house might almost have been deserted. She pulled the soft fur of her coat around her and opened the front door, running down the drive and around to Catlet's quarters. Luck was with her, for Catlet was just running out the big car to go for Mark and Valerie. Lucy blessed her genius for getting on with servants as she called to him. She had, she said, a sudden longing to take the Ark out for a little run. Was it in working order? Catlet assured her that it was, as he had run it out only the day before to put it in a different place. She supposed, she said, that Catlet had heard the funny old thing was hers? Catlet had heard so. and told her gravely it was a fine old bus. Would he get it out for her before he started? He would indeed. He did the lumbering old hybrid, its aged tires, rolling majestically in to the drive. Lucy almost forgot her grief to smile as Catlet stepped out of it in his smart uniform. "She runs like a two-year-old", he said. "I can hardly wait to try it myself. Thanks a lot", Lucy said. She invented delays, poking inside, waiting for Catlet to leave. He evidently had no suspicion, for he stood for a second waiting to see if she needed him. Then he got into Mark's car and drove away. Lucy ran quickly to a side door. Her heart almost choked her with its pounding. It was awful to go like this. She crept up a back stairway to her own door unseen. The upper hall was empty, when she carried her luggage down piece by piece, making three trips, and hiding her things in the back of the van. At last they were safe. Chiltern, she was sure, was at the front door. She got quickly into the Ark and started the engine. The van's gay coloring had been painted out, and it was now a dark shining blue. It merely looked like a rather smart delivery car, if no one looked closely at the driver.

only the beginning. She must face ahead. Dorothy was resting in her room when Mark and Valerie returned. She could hear them laughing in the hall below, and then on the stairs. She was by now thoroughly frightened by what she had done. She wondered now how she could have been so weak as to leave Lucy alone. Just because a girl from nobody knew where had had the impertinence to order her out of the room! The whole thing hinged now on whether Lucy had left a note. What had she said in it. If she had told Mark the truth, things would be worse than ever. If, however, she had gone decently and said nothing, or merely "good-bye" who could connect it with Dorothy? Mark and Valerie were waiting for her, and went in immediately to dinner. One look at them told her Lucy had gone. Valerie was very pale, and obviously been crying. Mark was hardly himself at all. His face was very stern, and he looked years older than when he had driven away that morning. Dinner was eaten practically in silence. They seemed driven by some inner haste, and left the table when Dorothy had barely finished her dessert. Mark beckoned her into the library, and Valerie followed. She had begun to cry once more, and Mark put his arm around her as he faced Dorothy. "Miss Treadway has gone," he said flatly. "She left a note, but it means nothing." Dorothy drew a deep breath. "The whole thing is a mystery. Totally unlike her in every way. Of course something happened after we left this morning. I'm making it my business to find out what it was. Can you tell me anything?" Dorothy lifted innocently injured eyes to his. "I'll do everything I can of course. But I'm afraid it isn't much. You see, I spent most of the day in my room. I had a lot of letters to write. I saw Miss Treadway at lunch for a few minutes. I'm afraid that's all." "Of course it isn't all!" said Mark. "Naturally, I'm not questioning what you say. But there's something back of it. Have you any idea where she went? Or at what time?" "I told you I didn't even know she was gone," said Dorothy. That, at least was the truth, she thought virtuously. Valerie laid her head against Mark's arm, sobbing. He had shown her Lucy's little note. In all her life, nothing had ever hurt her so much. "It must be me—I mean, I—" she said. "I'd have done anything for her father—" She broke down completely. Mark gave her a gentle shake, and spoke almost roughly. "Stop it, Val! Lucy will come back. You'll have to pull yourself together!" "Your father is quite right," said Dorothy. It was probably better to take some part in it than to stand and say nothing. "There was nothing about the young woman after all, that is worth making yourself ill over." Valerie raised her head. She wiped her eyes and faced her aunt. "Lucy is the most wonderful person in the world, next to my father! You could not possibly understand. I'm going upstairs, father. I'll do whatever you want. If you say you'll find her, you will. So everything will be all right." She turned and ran out of the room. Dorothy gathered up her dignity. "I shall go to my room, too, if you'll excuse me," she said. "I find

I may have to leave quite suddenly. Perhaps in the morning—" If she expected any opposition to this she was disappointed. He nodded, as if he hardly knew what she was talking about. Mark sat down by the fire in complete daze. He tried to reason it out. He would have staked anything on Lucy. Why had she gone? Chiltern brought in fresh cigarettes for the antique silver box. He filled it, and set in on the table within reach. Filled Mark's cup again. Made obvious, small excuses to linger in the room. Mark looked up at him suddenly. Why hadn't he thought of the man before? Chiltern was at the doorway when Mark called. He came back and stood beside Mark's chair. "Yes, Sir?" "I want you to forget yourself," Mark said surprisingly. "Yes. All about your station, or position, or whatever you call it. I'm in a devil of a mess, and I have a hunch you could help me out." "Quite Sir," said Chiltern. "You mean Miss Lucy, I suppose." "Of course I mean Miss Lucy. I leave the house this morning with everybody happy, and everything as usual. I come back at night, and the place is disrupted. Miss Treadway has left, and nobody can tell why—" "She could hardly be expected to do anything else, sir—not after what happened this morning. Not her kid of young lady," said Chiltern. Mark jumped to his feet. "Now we are getting somewhere. What the devil did happen? That's just what I'm trying to find out." Mrs. Summerville went to Miss Lucy's rooms, sir. I went to your room to look at that defective light, as you told me. As I passed Miss Lucy's sitting room, I heard voices. I recognized Mrs. Summerville's. I could hardly help hearing what she said. Anybody could have after that,—I paused, as you might say until she finished. Until—well, until Miss Lucy showed her the door." (To be concluded)

She deeded the duplex on eighth street, next door to the Methodist Parsonage, to the local Methodist Church, and stated in her will that the property could be used as a monthly income to the church, or could be sold, for not less than $2,000, to help with the building program, now underway by local Methodists for a new church building.

The Liberty Hill Cemetery Association is to receive $250 as requested by Mrs. Gardner.

She provided for the sale of her farms in Lamb county and near Liberty Hill, and the money to be divided among relatives of her and the late W. H. Gardner.

He pointed out that it seemed unfair to draft the youth at a dollar a day while industrialists continued to make profits and remain practically free of war time difficulties. "A war would be quicker and more efficient with a draft everything clause, he explained. The Legion has long been a supporter of drafting all resources and manpower in time of war, pointing out that when war was declared that it was "everybody's fight!"

Captain Markley was introduced by Orien Dennis, vice commander of the local post.

Robert Dennis and Jodye Jones advanced the colors before the program; and Ross Short, Warren Rutledge, Jr., Byron Harrison, Robert Rutledge, John T. Street, and Kenneth Neal Evins gave the pledge to the flag.

Mrs. Maude Street, president of the Auxiliary, was in charge of the program.

John T. Street gave a tribute to the "Unknown Soldier", accompanied at the piano by Mrs. G. M. Shaw.

After a brief business session, sons of Legionnaires entered the hall carrying candles and a beautiful birthday cake, was presented by Tommy Lou Matthews, singing "Happy Birthday"! They were accompanied at the piano by Kenneth Neal Evins.

The group does not visit the same school twice in two years, and try to make the same tour twice in four years.

Forty members of the band have earned the Kappa Kappa Psi fraternity.

The band members, in their red, black and yellow uniforms, presented a concert that lasted an hour.

The program follows:

"El Cabellero", "Crusaders Over-re", "A modern swing version of Annie Laurie, "Prima Donna", "Cas-Ruins", "Frenesi", "Begin the Beguin", "Prelude to Spring", "Shortenin' Bread", and "Nursery Rhymes".

All of the teachers in the Littlefield schools are expected to attend the two-day session of the annual West Texas State Teachers Association, scheduled at Big Spring Friday and Saturday, March 15 and 16, Supt. F. A. Hemphill announced this week.

The local schools will be dismissed Thursday afternoon, he said.

Theme of the two day session is "Education for the Nation's Security", which will be brought out by a number of prominent speakers.

Included on the program are Major General Claude V. Burkhead, Camp Bowie; Dr. George S. Counts, Columbia University; Jeff H. Williams, Chickasha, Oklahoma; Dr. A. J. Stoddard, Superintendent of City Schools, Philadelphia, Penn.; and Dr. A. W. Birdwell, president, Stephen F. Austin State Teachers College, Nacodoches.

Last year the meeting was held in Plainview and in 1942 will be conducted in Lubbock.

"Mitzi Mixes In" has been chosen as the second annual junior play to be presented March 28 in the high school auditorium.

Henry Hartman falls in love with Polly's picture and sends Tom Lowell, a play boy, to check up on the original. Ted, the rascal, reported that Polly was homely and drank—and marries her himself! In his effort to keep Henry from seeing Polly, he tells one whopper after another and gets his friends in Dutch and his friends' jealous wife on the warpath.

By the time Polly and Henry meet each takes the other for a lunatic. The frivolous bunch is mixed up still further by a mischievous French maid.

Viralya Patrick has the leading feminine roll again and James Ware takes the leading male roll. The other characters follow: Truett Bales, A. V. Wood, Roy Hutson, Alayne Rucker, Jean McGee, Betty Walters, and Blanche Dunn.

Eight Balls of Fire and how they can travel!

If you like fireworks, and who doesn't, it's really too bad you can't see what goes on inside that sparkling big Buick FIREBALL eight that romps you so easily down the broad highway.

There you'd see eight busy cylinders, with pistons flashing up and down...

You'd see each fuel charge packed tight into a tiny bundle shaped like a flattened ball...

You'd see the spark leap, the flame spread, the piston thrust down with extra force as each furious fireball lets go its pent-up wallop.

You'd see all this happening as fast as thirty times a second in each of those eight cylinders—and we think you'd understand then just why there's such a special and exciting satisfaction in the way a Buick travels.

Gasoline gives up more of its power when it's packed as tightly as it is here.

So when you've got these eight balls of fire working busily under the bonnet, you really travel!

You travel farther on every gallon and you travel more pleasurably.

You travel—but, shucks! What's to talk when there's a Buick nearby waiting to show you how you travel behind a FIREBALL?

WE ARE YOUR Neighbor

We are the Texas petroleum industry. There are nearly 225,000 of us, living in every section of the State.

With our families, we make up one million Texans, nearly one-sixth of the State's population.

Each of us has his job. Together we represent almost every type of worker.

Some of us live and work in your community. Our children go to school with your children. We trade in your stores, attend your church, pay taxes and vote—as you do—for the betterment of our community and State. We operate an industry which pays 75 million dollars a year in taxes to our State and local governments and our schools.

We are your neighbors.

Zane Gray's "Western Union," Headed By Robert Young, Comes To Palace

Zane Gray's "Western Union," has been made into a memorable picture by 20th Century-Fox. Filmed in brilliant Technicolor and produced on a breath taking scale, it opens Saturday midnight at the Palace Theatre, continuing through Sunday and Monday.

Its brilliant cast, headed by Robt. Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger and Virginia Gilmore, brings to life all the colorful characters created by the West's greatest story teller in his latest best-seller. Others featured include John Carradine, Chill Wills, Slim Summerville and Barton McLane.

Romance, action, drama and thrilling adventure are all part of the spectacle in "Western Union," which pens in the roaring boom town of frontier Omaha — where the only law was a blazing six-shooter.

Dean Jagger, portraying Edward Creighton, the telegraph builder, starts a huge wagon train rolling out across the prairies. Their job is to build the telegraph over a West infested by renegades and savage Indians.

Randolph Scott as a reformed outlaw and Robert Young, as a tenderfoot surveyor from Harvard, leave with Creighton's men. Both are in love with the builder's charming sister, Virginia Gilmore.

First sample of the dangers ahead comes soon after the wagon train leaves Omaha. Vicious renegades attack without warning. Devastating forays by the savage Sioux follow.

But the plainsmen keep moving forward across the prairies, sinking telephone poles and stringing wires as death strikes swiftly and silently at about them. Thrill is heaped on thrill as the renegades plot complete destruction of the line. Cattle are stolen, wires cut down and worst of all, the Indians are incited to massacre.

U. S. Fifth Column To Be Shown This Week End At Palace

That the overwhelming majority of foreigners in the U. S. who have not yet become citizens are nevertheless steadfast in their loyalty and devotion to America is revealed in the latest March of Time film, "Americans All", which is now being shown at the Palace Theatre.

Although there is a small but dangerous U. S. Fifth Column hard at work in an attempt to undermine democracy and American institutions, the March of Time film shows, these groups are well-known and closely watched by the Army, Navy and F.B.I. officials. Pointing to the need for a tolerant spirit in America today, the film shows that the foreign-born have already come forward in every critical hour in the nation's history to preserve and defend their adopted country.

In "Americans All" The March of Time reveals the many contributions made by immigrant Americans toward the building of America and shows what the foreign-born are doing today to preserve the U. S. as the world's greatest democracy.

Please hand your renewal for the Leader to a candidate. If in arrears your name will be taken from list on conclusion of campaign. Your favorite candidate needs your subscription to win a prize. Hand it to her today.

Spanish Banquet Enjoyed By 39 Persons Friday Night

A Spanish Cabaret was a typical setting for the banquet Friday night; when members of the first and second year Spanish classes of the Littlefield high school and their guests "ate, talked, and played" in Spanish.

The banquet was held in the Homemaking department of the high school, and the Mexican food was served by members of the homemaking classes, through supervision of Miss Ernestine Cundiff, homemaking teacher.

Rooms were colorful, with brightly colored balloons hanging from the ceiling. Menus and programs were printed in Spanish.

The program included; a Spanish solo by Linda Beth Stokes; "Javabo Topio", tap dance by Alfred Manley and Linda Beth Stokes; and a playlet in Spanish, presented by Onita Ratliff, Hazel Holliday, James Ware and Ida Jo Brewer.

Students and guests were admitted to the banquet if they were dressed as señoritas and seniors.

Approximately 39 persons attended.

Envelope Pockets Are Smart

Pattern 8853—This pattern (No. 8853) will be just as good for your cotton shirtwaisters this summer as it is for your spring ones now. In silk print, in flat crepe, spun rayon or flannel it fits immediately into your wardrobe, and you'll joyfully repeat it later in gingham and linens. Crisp and classic in line, with slim skirt and bodice fluted out just enough by means of inside tucks, it fits beautifully, and is particularly good for woman's sizes.

The three envelope pockets represent a high spot of charm and newness—one of the simple bits of detailing that lift it out of the ordinary and give it distinction. This tailored dress is as easy to make as it is to wear, even for beginners. A step-by-step sew chart comes with your design.

Pattern No. 8853 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 7 7/8 yards of 39 inch material; 1-8 yard contrast for facing pocket flaps if desired.
