V. H. FISHER, POPULAR PASTOR- EVANGELIST FROM AMARILLO WILL DO REACHING FOR METHODISTS IN REVIVAL

Sunday morning the Methodist church of this city, will begin a revival meeting to continue following two weeks. Through the agency of the Baptist people these meetings will be held in that

V. H. Fisher, of Amarillo, will be the evangelist, and the music will be directed by Elmer C. Carter, of Littlefield, Texas.

Fisher has the distinction of being one of the best, if not the best, in the Northwest Texas section of the Methodist church. His work, both logical and eloquent, has carried the heart appeal deep into his congregations, producing definite results. High attendance and with 12 years' experience as pastor-evangelist, he is coming to Littlefield to put his best efforts in behalf of this little city toward a revival of the moral and religious life of the community. Rev. Fisher has been in Littlefield for three years, and during that time has increased the membership of the church from 100 members, and the salary has been augmented.

They now have a $40,000 brick building for the congregation. Many people of Amarillo consider him the strongest preacher of that city. Only last week he closed one of the most successful revival meetings ever held in Amarillo, doing all the preaching himself, as he has done for his church in revivals held the past three years.

Mr. Carter, who will have charge of the music during the Littlefield meeting, is well known throughout the state as a capable song-leader. He desires to meet all the singers of this city, and have them take part in the special music and general choir work during the meeting. Special attention will be given the Junior Choir, and all boys and girls of this age are urged to attend and become members of this body.

The pastor, Rev. Ed Sharp, and the members of the Methodist church extend a most cordial and urgent invitation to all Christian people, regardless of church denomination to join in this meeting, lending their cooperation toward making it one of the best and far-reaching in its results that has ever been held in Littlefield.

Editor Jess Mitchell, of the Lamb County Leader, will deliver the opening sermon of the revival next Sunday morning, at the eleven o'clock hour, speaking upon the subject, "Duties of Today."

GENEROUS OIL TESTS MADE THROUGHOUT THE PLAINS AROUSES INTEREST AND DRAWS OIL MONEY AND MEN TO SECTION

The discovery of a shallow well at Keagan No. 1 Mullican, 25 miles northwest of Littlefield, and with several other companies leasing heavily on the South Plains country, has drawn attention to the possibility of oil money being in this direction.

Mullican test down 423 feet and standing 200 feet in the hole, and northwest of the old Bledsoe well which went to a dry hole at several years ago. A well of oil at 400, 940 and 1,360 feet was found in the Bledsoe test.

S. Sims-Richter No. 1, located 6,000 feet from the old Bledsoe well, was spudded in last week and a large crowd.

Humble, Gulf, Sun, Texas, Southern Crude, Vacuum and other companies have geologists and formations in the northern part of the South Plains. Scouts from these companies and several others are now visiting the tests in the South Plains country.

Gulf, Southern Crude, Pure, and other companies and many individuals have been leasing thousands of acres in Yoakum county during the past few weeks. The Marland oil company has recently took a 7,000 acre lease in Garza county and the Brothers signed up a 3,500 acre lease near Post, recently.

Yoakum county has two new tests being started by the Exploratory company.

Boles No. 1, Sec. 1, Block G in Lubbock county is drilling now at around 1,000 feet in red bed and making a rapid progress.

Ellwood No. 1, on Wilbarger county school lands in Hockley county is now spudded in. The Myrick well No. 1, in Hockley county is down 1,410 feet. Brownfield No. 1 in Terry county, is down close to 2,000 feet and reported making good progress. W. L. Ellwood is also planning for several tests to soon be made in the sand hills north of Littlefield.

No definite progress has been made at the Mullican well during the past week. Latest information obtainable is to the effect that the pump has not yet been put on the discovery hole, so it is still conjecture as to the amount it will eventually yield. There is some talk of drilling it a little deeper and giving it a shot of nitro-glycerine before putting on the pump. Another report states, on account of the location, it will probably be capped and nothing further done with it.

Locations have been made for two other wells, work on which will begin as soon as rigs and machinery arrive. Leasing in that section has been quite active during the past week, much new land coming under lease, and other land changing hands at advanced prices.

$800 PAID TO THE LAMB CO. FARMERS BY FARM BUREAU

About $800 was paid to farmers of Lamb county, at the Palace theatre, in Littlefield, last Tuesday, when members of the Farm Bureau gathered here to receive refund of the one per cent reserve fund retained by the Bureau on the 1921-22 cotton shipments. Since cotton sold that year for an average of 19 cents, the refund amounted to about $1.00 per bale.

Some farmers having check due them were not present at the meeting, and it is thought by county representative J. W. Hammock, that on account of the lateness of the announced date through the columns of the Farm Bureau News, they did not receive the notice in time to appear. Mr. Hammock has all the undelivered checks and will be glad to turn them over to the proper parties upon their application for same.

Mr. Hammock states that the Farm Bureau will start this year with more than 500 members in Lamb county, and that conditions look favorable for a good financial year is concluded by the fact that already the Farm Bureau is advancing $60 per bale on cotton consigned to the organization.

INSTALL A ROUND PRESS BALE IN FARMERS GIN

An addition this week being put on to the building of the Farmers Gin to accommodate a round bale press, for farmers desiring that kind of service this fall.

The press is put out by Anderson, Layton & Co., of Houston, one of the largest cotton exporters of the country. It is said to be a popular form of bale in east and central Texas, and is now being installed here by the management of the Farmers Gin in compliance with many requests from cotton growers of this section.

LFD. SCHOOLS TO RECEIVE $17,880 1928 STATE MONEY

The apportionment of $15.00 per pupil state aid this year will mean much to Littlefield schools, according to Arthur P. Duggan, president of the local school board.

On the basis of 1,192 scholastics, according to the census last year, this will mean the Littlefield schools will receive $17,880 from the state for school purposes. This, together with the payment of delinquent taxes, will insure a full nine months term the coming year. The per capita amount of state money for this year is $3,200,000, derived principally from the new gasoline tax.

Another state ruling guaranteeing a six months term to all schools, is of interest to the smaller districts. The special requirements under this ruling are to the effect that such schools with one teacher must have not less than 20 or more than 35 pupils; a two-teacher school should be not less than 36 nor more than 65; a three-teacher school not less than 66 and not more than 95; a four-teacher school not less than 96 and not more than 125; and a five-teacher school not less than 126 nor more than 155 pupils. Schools which do not meet these requirements cannot share in the state aid. The new code is expected to result in the employment of more teachers at the expense of the state and thus equalize the burden imposed on the insufficient number of pedagogues.

THE LINOTYPE BALKED

In reporting the oil development of the well located near Hale Center, the Leader, at the very beginning of its article last week, stated the well was located 5 miles east of Littlefield.

In some unexplainable manner the figure 2 failed to drop on the linotype, and the missing numeral was not noticed by the proof reader. It should have read "25 miles."

LITTLEFIELD ATTORNEY SAYS ANCESTORS NOT NEARLY IMPORTANT AS DESCENDENTS

"Tracing one's ancestry is not always a pleasant job, and sometimes ends with disappointment," said Judge E. A. Bills to a Leader representative one day last week.

"A client one time hired me to trace his ancestry back for a certain period, and was to pay me $100 for the service," continued the Judge. "He was quite a fine fellow, came from good parentage and was proud of it. So far as he knew his family was composed entirely of people well known for their morals and high degree of character. He knew his ancestors originated in England, and had an idea they might have in their veins some of the blood of dukes, counts, lords and other notables—and they did. But when I got to digging up family connections across the Atlantic my client offered me another $100 to stop. Unfortunately we discovered some of his relatives who had been mixed up in one of the English rebellions some years ago, and following trial and conviction, had been banished to some convict island off the coast of Africa.

"I have often heard folks talk about their ancestors, and in a way, they are something to be proud of; but after all, in this day and age of the world, it doesn't matter so much where you came from as what you can do; who you came from doesn't weigh nearly so much in the eyes of the public as who your son and daughter came from.

"A good name means considerable to a boy or girl growing up today, and, while the chemical analysis of the blood from the knight and the knave may yield the same showing, yet there is within the blood of the one a mysterious something that marks the difference between human characters.

"Some of us may be able to look backward with considerable pleasure upon our more recent ancestors; but what they were a few hundred years ago is seldom known, and might just as well forever remain a mystery for all the good it will do present and future generations. I have studied this genealogy business quite a bit, and have discovered that there are lots of people living today who really have a common lineage if it were traced back far enough; but they don't know it.

"For instance," said the Judge, "there are plenty of people living today who could trace their ancestry back to William the Conqueror, who was at the height of his glory in the year 1066. Genealogical experts figure an average of 33 years for a generation. This would mean there has been around 26 generations since the time of William the Conqueror. Now just for the sake of mathematics, which is one of my hobbies, we will say that the first descendent of William the Conqueror had two immediate parents, four grandparents, and eight great-grandparents. Continue this doubling process of family relation down to the present day, and the calculations would show something more than 4 million ancestors since the time of William the Conqueror. Then granting one could trace their ancestry back 26 generations to Sir William, they would have such an insignificant and infinitesimally small portion of the Conqueror's blood no one but the Almighty would ever be able to find the trace of it. On the other hand, there would be 40 million descendants from the other side of the house to reckon with, and they might be an inextricably complicated mixture of genius and fool, celebrity and unknown, money-bags and mendicant, philanthropist and robber—all of whom had their simultaneous starting when the Conqueror was at the height of his power and glory.

"Once in a while one will come across a person who seems rather proud of this confusion of blood; I knew one time of a man who claimed he had traced his ancestry clear back to Charlemagne, a historical character during the early feudal days of Western Europe. He seemed quite proud of the connection; but there are others who doubtless looked upon it with a different view. One of the best men I ever knew was the son of a man who, years ago, had been banished to one of the English penal islands of the south seas, and whose reputation as a criminal would equal some of the worst of modern times. Yet this son was a highly respected and honorable citizen; probably took after his mother."

"Ever investigate your own ancestors," queried the Leader representative. "Not very much," replied the lawyer. "Never had much inclination that way, besides it takes about all my time keeping cases on my clients, constituents and personal progeny. So far as I know my parents, grand parents and great-grandparents on both sides of the house were all honorable people. It has always occurred to me if I should get to tracing back my ancestors and run across some one who was especially great or highly pronounced in some particular line, I might have to take the discovery as a confession of inferiority of some of their descend-

PERSONAL ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Street and family and Mrs. Lena Howard spent the fourth at Spade ranch the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Arnett.

H. J. Stephenson, of near Fieldton, came in Friday and renewed his subscription to the Leader. He stated he couldn't do without his home paper.

Miss Virginia Turner left Monday night for a few days visit in Borger. From there she will go to Tyler and enter the commercial school.

J. S. Hilliard returned Monday from a Lubbock hospital where he went for operation of bent septum and removal of tonsils. He is getting along O. K.

Mrs. S. J. Farquhar and daughter, Miss Lois, went to Sudan Friday to visit friends. Miss Vesta Weldon returned to Littlefield with them and is spending the week here as their guest.

Mrs. Eula Long and Miss Catherine Dunagin went to Tucumcari, New Mexico, Sunday, to meet Mrs. Long's small son, who has been visiting in Phoenix, Ariz., and remained there to spend the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gambrell, of Mineral Wells, passed through Littlefield last week from a trip to Colorado City. He owns land in Lamb county and while here renewed his subscription to the Leader, with the statement that he didn't like to miss an issue of the paper, as he has wonderful faith in the future of Lamb county and wants to keep up with the happenings here.

Sunday afternoon Miss Bessie Bellomy, accompanied by Misses Fannie Weaver, Norma Henson, Janie Dick, and Emma Ruth Jones, of Breckenridge, while driving on the highway near the ice plant, had the misfortune to overturn the car in which they were riding, a Chevrolet coupe, belonging to F. E. Bellomy, of Detroit, Michigan, and almost completely wrecking it. All the occupants escaped injury except Miss Weaver, who is suffering from a nervous shock. The girls claim they were crowded into the ditch by the driver of a Franklin roadster, who is said to live in Amherst.

Persons who had not fully lived up to the reputation of their forebearers, and I don't exactly care to make such admission, especially while my own children are growing up."

At this point in the conversation some one entered the reception room of his suit of office, and the attorney became nervous in anticipation of another client, and arising, indicating the interview was at an end, he opened the door for our departure. "Just tell the people who are around digging up the records of their dead folks that they might well be a little more interested in their own records. We lawyers know a lot of things we don't ever tell. Perhaps most of the ordinary run of human beings don't have any ancestry to boast of at all, but that shouldn't keep our children from being proud of their immediate parents, which as I see it, is the most important phase of the whole matter."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour.—1 Peter V:8.

The devil hath power to assume a pleasing shape.—Shakespeare.

FOOLISH FADS

This is a great country for fads. Let someone start doing or saying something different from what has been previously said or done, and it spreads like wild fire.

A few seasons ago some one pasted a sticker on the windshield of his auto, and then came a fad for "bathing beauties" and slogans plastered all over the car. Motorists are pretty much the same the country over, so Littlefield contributed her quota to the lot.

Now, however, some states prohibit stickers on windshields, and several states have special ordinances against cars being operated with anything on the windshield tending to in any way interfere with the vision of the driver.

Fads are harmless, as a general rule, but here is one that does not bring any real pleasure or enjoyment and does actually endanger the lives of others driving on the same thoroughfare as well as the life of the man sitting behind the sticker. This day and time a driver needs to have both eyes wide open every second he is at the wheel, and he needs a clear vision. Anything that will obscure his view for an instant must be classed as dangerous, and the windshield sticker is apt to do that very thing at the wrong moment.

Have your fads, if you wish, but don't follow the kind that carries even the smallest element of danger. The sticker is far more dangerous than it is ornamental. Discourage its use by refusing to put it on your car or to let anyone else put it there.

It's getting so the women seem to think the only thing it's a disgrace to show is their age.

SUMMER WHITE HOUSE

We've read a good deal of comment on the choice of a "Summer White House," and it is interesting to find that not one newspaper in the country has criticized Pres. Coolidge for electing to spend his vacation in the Northwest. In fact, we find one editor arguing that it would be a good idea to have a "Summer White House" in every section, with the president alternating his vacation among them. He argues that in that way the president could keep in closer touch with every part of the country and be in better position to render still greater service.

But that will probably strike the average Littlefield reader as going too far. He will agree, however, that Pres. Coolidge has, in spending his summer in the Northwest, set an example other presidents can follow in the future with profit to the whole country. There is too much of this country lying west of the Mississippi river to be neglected by even a president, and too much beauty he cannot afford to miss. It is the pantry of the nation and from it comes our meat and bread. It is entitled to a visit at least once a year from the highest official in the land; such visits serve to bring the people of the nation into a closer bond of friendship. Here's hoping that from this time on the "Summer White House" stays west of the Mississippi river.

For those who go to Paris for their divorce decrees, Lindbergh has shortened the time 33 hours and 9 minutes.

NO LABOR SHORTAGE

The movement to get congress, at its next session, to loosen up our immigration laws is coming in for renewed attention just now, since those back of the movement contend that strict laws like we now have are "hurting the farmers." And we note in our exchanges that a number of editors are taking stock in this argument, and printing publicity that is being sent out.

For our part, we believe the plan to throw open our gates to a greater number of immigrants than the law now provides for is a scheme hatched by certain interests that seek only a cheaper labor than they are now getting. The plea is a selfish one, if the truth were known, and not in the interest of those for whom the men behind the movement pretend to be pleading.

The American workman is entitled to protection and under the present immigration laws he is getting a fair share of it. The farmers themselves are not doing very much protesting and complaining. Until they do congress will scarcely be justified in listening to such pleas from any other source.

They say travel broadens, but after you have paid several vacation bills you'll probably agree that it also flattens.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

OUR NATIONAL DUTY IS OBVIOUS

A recent report to Congress for an appropriation for the Interior Department included some $750,000 for a dam in Arizona and some $2,500,000 for reclamation construction, with other items of similar character.

This is proper business for a government. It does not pay for a government to be paternal and to foster certain special interests, but it does pay for a government to engage in public works, the benefit of which will accrue generally to the people.

When the Lord made Adam and Eve it is said that he put them in the garden in order to tend and keep it. Man's work ever since upon the earth has been in improving upon the natural conditions of nature.

He is to reclaim the deserts, improve rivers, perfect harbors and make tunnels, etc., so that the earth will be a fitter place in which to live.

It is this kind of work in which the army should be engaged. In other words, be put upon constructive labor as well as to be in readiness for destructive operations.

Such a program might well call for the services of every boy and girl at some time in their lives, say from 20 to 22, when they would be required to give their services to the government. Everybody ought to be made to realize that the nation is greater than the individual and has prior claims upon a man, claims that come before his individual needs.

This would maintain an immense army of constructive workers who could be changed in a moment's notice to an army of defense against an enemy. If this plan were adopted I would be in favor of compulsory military training and in compelling boys and girls to be trained not alone in the bearing of arms, but compelling them at a certain period in their lives to work for the government.

The United States has vast stretches of land which need improvements. Much of the West is barren and needs only the proper use of its water courses in order to water it. Arizona might be as rich as Egypt if it were properly watered.

The use of the natural supply of water that is found in falling waters opens up tremendous vistas and in the application of this our youth might well be employed.

The making of good roads also is a contribution to the permanent welfare of the nation. Roads need to be constantly worked upon and new roads need to be built. Altogether it is quite proper for the government to go into the business of improving the natural resources of the nation.

should remember that the hen once laughed at the incubator.

If some Littlefield people didn't argue about doctrine you wouldn't ever guess from the way they live that they had any religion at all.

We've often wondered why the few blacksmiths left don't catch up with the style by calling their places of business "Blacksmith Shoppes."

A Littlefield mother is someone who looks in the left-hand corner of the upper dresser drawer and finds something the balance of the family have been looking for for two hours.

We remarked to a young Littlefield father the other day that a babe in the home brightens it up quite a bit. "Very true," he replied. "We have kept the electric lights burning every night since it was born." Quite so!

Paving Main street in Littlefield is really a matter of serious importance, and should be so considered by the citizen-property owners. Even under present financial conditions its cost would not be prohibitive, as some have assumed without investigation.

Next week the Methodist people begin a revival meeting. It is another means and movement for making a better town for us all to live in. It should have the hearty co-operation of all believers in purity of thought and good morals. Saints and sinners alike, should attend.

Littlefield was quite a dead town the Fourth. No doubt hundreds of dollars of our money was spent in other towns, when there might have been thousands of dollars of other people's money spent in our town with just a little work on the part of Littlefield citizens in arranging a celebration here.

LESS MOTOR TROUBLE

LITTLEFIELD BUSINESS INSTI-TUTION URGES CUSTOMERS TO JOIN THE FARM BUREAU

Strong endorsement of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association in its program of cotton co-operative marketing is contained in a recent letter from the Yellow House Land company, of Littlefield, Texas, thru Mr. Arthur P. Duggan, to the Association.
 "The results obtained by the farmers in this county in the marketing of their cotton through the Association last year were highly gratifying," he says, "and we strongly advise purchasers of land through us to join the Farm Bureau. That is the best evidence of our faith in it," the letter says. In full, the communication reads:
 "The results obtained by the farmers in this county in marketing their cotton through your association last year were very gratifying.
 "From the best information I can get, some 4,500 bales were sold from this community alone, and the additional price received was approximately $45,000 or an average of $10 per bale.
 "This is mighty well worth while to any community, and when the further fact is considered that the relations of the farmers individually with the association accorded is universally fair and honest, it makes, in my judgement, the best possible method for the farmer to market his cotton.
 "We have sold a great deal of land here and strongly advise our purchasers to join the Farm Bureau. That is the best evidence of our faith in it.
 "We wish you continued success in the splendid work you are doing."

MODERN GIRLS OF RESPECT ESCHEW PETTING PARTIES AND NECK CHEWING SAY FLAPPERS IN LOCAL POST OFFICE

The lady reporter of the Leader went out the other day on a still news hunt and promptly ran into a story that sounded loud. It all happened in the local post office, which recently has become quite a favorite gathering place for social conversation while the mail is being distributed.

On this particular morning the mail was extra heavy, necessitating a prolonged time in opening the general delivery window. Parked in the front window near the Leader mail box, were a couple of young ladies whom the lady reporter with just a casual glance took to be just an ordinary pair of flappers, judging from their dress. But catching a scrap of their conversation she promptly changed her mind.

"Yes, I ought to have a letter from him this morning," one of them was saying. "And believe me, he's a real man—no sheik there. He knows how to appreciate a real girl.

"Oh, don't you get tired of these ginks that are always trying to make love to you? Bah, they make me sick!" A little of that kind of stuff was a long way toward killing a fellow with no," replied the other young woman.

The lady reporter, after taking the mail from the box, looked up to see who was talking. She recognized one of them, and, smiling her sweetest smile, she spoke. The salutation was cordially returned, and a three cornered conversation ensued.

"I just overheard your remark about a gentleman friend you thought considerably of, and I was surprised at your manner of stating him. When I was a young lady that kind of rating was perfectly proper, but I have understood that in these latter days the young man who could make the most ardent and prolonged love was the one most generally sought after by the opposite sex."

"You're certainly dead wrong," replied the acquaintance. "Some of the teen-old girls enjoy that mash stuff for a little while, until they get their teeth cut, but even they soon get enough of it. All this maudlin kissing, neck-chewing, promiscuous man-handling and super-close proximity of the sexes is getting to be old stuff. What the young lady of today, who has any sense of decency and modesty wants of the average young man is for him to appreciate and respect her, and a young man who will do that will always stand as high in my estimation."

The lady reporter agreed that was right, and the custom during the days of her own palmy youth. "I've often wondered if the girls of the present time so really appreciate a true gentleman," ventured the inquirer.

"Why, sure they do," sneered both the young ladies, "and," continued one of them, "you can tell the world that the big thing in any girl's heart today is not LOVE, spelled in capital letters."

"The average girl of today is getting all fed up and worn on this indiscriminate petting. Wild times and rowdy parties and this 'self-expression' stuff is all getting stale. There is nothing to it. She may have a pretty good job, be perfectly able to take care of herself, and enjoy her personal freedom to the utmost, but deep down in her heart the one thing she craves more than any other is a home with the right man in it with her. You can tell the world for me, that the thing a real girl wants is a nice wedding and pure, clean love."

Just then the general delivery window opened and the young ladies joined the line of patient waiters in anticipation of love messages that might be handed them by the postal clerk. But the lady reporter had had an awakening. Her curiosity was aroused over the new interpretation of modern love which seemed just like the old-time affection when she was a girl.

She hadn't gone ten steps outside the postoffice before she met one of the ministers of this little city, who himself had raised a family of girls, and she made bold to seek the ministerial interpretation of modern love-making.

Requesting to him a portion of the conversation just finished, the minister replied, "The young ladies are right. A change of time is due to us and there are many signs that it is already coming. Petting is a passing phase of the big movement. Since the time of Adam and Eve, woman has loved home and children. Of course, her love children, too secondarily, and lots of women love men, too secondarily. Petting is a kind of superficial acquaintance that can't last always. It is the deeper things of life that abide. The most of our young people are still sound at heart. They are still out in the field of 'true love,' and know in their soberer and less flaming moments that no counterfeit article can really satisfy them."

"Salt water will not quench thirst, panned food in the city windows will not appease hunger, and the sentimentality of love will never satisfy the hunger and thirst of souls for that real understanding love and comradeship that real sense of belonging to one another which somehow is inherent in the human makeup. Lots of those girls talk with my girls, and, as their pastor, some of them sometimes come to me with their heart troubles. I know something of how they really think and feel. The young ladies in the post office are right and they are to be commended in their nobility for the pure things of life."

CRAIG SANDERS

Miss Geneva Craig was married to Charles Sanders, June 17th, at Abilene. Following the ceremony the newly weds left for a wedding trip, visiting friends at Santa, after which they will go to Amarillo to make their future home.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Craig, residing about 10 miles northwest of Littlefield. For the past two years she has been employed as accountant in the offices of the city clerk and the county tax assessor, at Littlefield. She is a very attractive and accomplished young woman, possessing a host of friends who extend their best wishes for future happiness.

Mr. Sanders, who is an electrical engineer, has for several years been in the employ of the Texas Co. About three years ago he was stationed in Littlefield, at which time the courtship sprang up resulting in the marriage last week. He is employed in Amarillo.

The Westinghouse Automatic Iron

Correct ironing temperature... always

Really a wonderful iron!

As much in advance of the electric iron which you may now consider the last word in safety and convenience, as the first electric iron was over the sad irons heated on top of the stove!

Imagine an iron that turns itself off before it gets too hot — that turns itself on again before it gets too cool!

What a help, and what a safeguard! You don't have to press and pull on fine fabrics to help out an iron that's unbalanced. You don't have to rush with fussy sheer things for fear your iron will get too hot.

Keeps them as flat as it should be, evenly distributed all over the generous broad surface of the iron, down to the very end of the tapering point designed especially for those hard-to-iron places.

Temperature is controlled automatically by the Million Disc Thermometer — a single bi-metal disc, nothing else wrong, nothing to get out of order.

Bring it in and let us demonstrate it today while our special price is in force.

Free with purchase only

With every Westinghouse Automatic Iron only 10¢ more we will give you a free 10" x 12" metal kitchen towel. $1.00 value. While supplies last. No cash back.

75¢ down

—with this wonderful automatic iron. Only $1.00 a month with your electric bill or your bank bill. No cash back. No cash back. No cash back. No cash back.

AMERICA'S VICTORY

"Ambassador Extraordinary" is the title especially adaptable to Charles A.
 Lindbergh, the intrepid young American airman, if one is to judge by the acclaim of foreign governments, kings and potentates.

It would be as futile as "carrying coals to Newcastle" to sketch the remarkable flight that will be inscribed in History's fair pages, and has added
 new honors to the flag of our nation.
 It would be needless repetition to attempt to describe the unprecedented ovations that greeted him in Paris, Brussels, London, Washington and New York.

It is almost impossible for the layman to grasp the significance of this victory of the air. That Col. Lindbergh assumed great risks in his daring flight, no one can gainsay. He gambled with death—and won. By his hard-earned victory he has added to the already brilliant record of American valor, and the deed will mark a new era in the progress of aircraft as well as adding fresh laurels to Columbia's crown.

The innate modesty and sincerity of this young man has gripped the European and American heart. His tender solicitude for the valiant airmen, Nungesser and Coli, together with his stirring words of admiration for the French valor, touched the emotions of the masses, and were glowingly reflected in the press.

Upon his arrival in France as well as in England there was a noticeable absence of petty envy and rivalry on the part of the assembled multitude.
 No reproaches against "Uncle Shylock" were heard. The composite figure of "Americanism" conjured up in the foreign mind by impressions gained from the debt settlement, and augmented by the attitude of wealthy tourists from the United States, had melted into thin air, and in its place stood a heroic figure of an American youth, who was destined to receive the crosses and medallions indicative of the highest honors that could be conferred by king or president.

Underneath the exterior antipathies of our French and English friends is a strong respect for gallantry. The sense of clean sportsmanship is easily brought to the surface, and Col. Lind-bergh's great deed, linked with his simple language and unpretentious conduct, won the hearts of the milling thousands where precise diplomatic procedure would have utterly failed to convince.

AUXILIARY MEETING

The women auxiliary, of the Presbyterian church, met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. G. M. Shaw, at the home of Mrs. W. G. Street.
 Mrs. C. A. Dugger had charge of the lesson, the subject being, "Pioneer Presbyterians in America." She was assisted by Mrs. Street, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Smith and others, and the lesson proved very interesting.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Robert Steen, served an ice course to the following ladies: Mesdames Hilliard, Logan, Bills, Steen, Miller, Cook,
 Albright, Street, DeWitt, Wiseman,
 Stockton, Smith, Dugger, Barber,
 Wright, Garrett, Tolbert and Miss Lulu Hubbard.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Robert Steen. The lesson will be the last chapter of the "Moslem Women," and the response to roll call will be a Scripture verse beginning with the letter "L."
