Wilson Twins Make Ideal Team

Carol and Connie Wilson, twin son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Wilson, of one mile south-east of Littlefield are perhaps two of the most versatile young people in this section.

Besides their school work, required of their sophomore year, each have profitable interests.

Carol has realized a nice profit from a ten acre patch of cotton which is yielding a bale per acre. The land was prepared and planted by Carol and the accompanying picture is proof of how well he kept down the weeds.

The cotton rows are the usual three feet apart and at the time of planting Carol stated that the ground was so wet that the planter plates would spin causing skips in (Continued on back page)

LARGE HOLIDAY CROWD EXPECTED TO SEE CUBS AND WILDCATS BATTLE FOR DISTRICT TITLE; GAME STARTS 2:30 P. M.

By WILSON BRAZZIL

The undefeated and untied Brownfield Cubs, with another district football trophy within their grasp, will trot out on Seely field at 2:30 this afternoon with high hopes of making short work of Coach Abe Murphy's Littlefield Wildcats, the only hurdle that remains between them and the championship.

The Wildcats, still free from injuries after weeks and weeks of relentless grinding, are "hot as a hillbilly's pistol" after a feud" and eagerly awaiting a crack at the Cubs, who won the South zone championship without a sweat.

Littlefield, who was tied with Slaton for the North Zone title, was awarded same by the district executive committee which met at Leveland Monday night and therefore were designated to play Brownfield, the south zone champions for the district title.

Slaton's only conference defeat was at the hands of the Muleshoe Yellowjackets in their opening game of the season, 14-0. Slaton had defeated Littlefield, 6-0, on a muddy field at Slaton.

Except for the Wildcats' loss to Slaton, they are undefeated and hold victories over two district championship teams. Earlier in the season the Wildcats defeated Hereford, now District 1-A Champion, 36-6, and Floydada, now District 4-A titleholder, 9-7.

The Cubs won the south zone title without trouble, running up at least five touchdowns on each of six conference opponents. This is the fourth straight zone championship for Brownfield, and in addition, the Cubs won the district title in 1937 before it was divided into zones.

Much pre-game enthusiasm has been evident among Littlefield fans, and practically the entire town participated in a gigantic pep rally Wednesday night. A huge bon fire was built on the vacant lot adjoining the Dennis Jones Service Station, with the Littlefield high school band and pep squad in charge of maneuvers. A torch parade down Phelps Avenue, which was led by the band, furnished the grand finale.

Littlefield's first real chance for a championship team has at last materialized and every Wildcat fan in the north zone, and especially those in Littlefield, are urged to be in the stands supporting the local aggregation when the opening gun sounds promptly at 2:30 p. m.

Brownfield fans are expected to follow the Cubs in droves to Littlefield for the game and large delegations from other points over the district are also expected to attend.

Tickets may be purchased before the game at all downtown drug-stores.

Last Rites For Father Of W. T. Lemond Tuesday

Passes Away At Home In Hale County Monday Night At 94 Years

Last rites for Robert West Lemond, 94, father of W. T. Lemond of this city, and last surviving Confederate veteran in Hale County, were conducted at the residence Tuesday afternoon, with Rev. Donald Harris of Jacksonville, former pastor of Littlefield and Hale Center Presbyterian churches, officiating.

Mr. Lemond died in his home Monday night after ill health of several years.

"Uncle Bob" as he was affectionately known to hundreds of West Texans, was born in Tippah county, Miss., March 21, 1847, but was taken to Gonzales county, Texas, when his parents settled there in 1850. He married Mrs. Mattie J. Price Spath there in 1874, but she died four years later after they moved to Coleman county. Children surviving that union are Mrs. Cornelia Lemond Claxton of Dallas and Robert West Lemond, jr., of Dallas. Another daughter was the late Kate H. McWhorter of Lubbock.

On July 17, 1883, he was married to Miss Lena Hale in Honeywell, Tenn. Their children are Walter T. Lemond of Littlefield and W. Howard Lemond of Hale Center. The widow also survives.

Uncle Bob had been a resident of the South Plains since 1892, when he purchased a ranch four sections in area in northwest Lubbock county.

He moved to Hale county in 1898, settling near the pioneer towns of Epworth and Hale City which later were combined into the present Hale Center.

In the Civil war, Uncle Bob served first with Ford's brigade and later with company E of the First regiment of Benavides' Texas cavalry, with which he fought in the (Continued on Back Page)

SENSATIONAL FILM ON HITLER'S "NEW ORDER" TO BE SHOWN AT PALACE

In conjunction with "Nothing but the Truth" the Palace Theatre will present Saturday mid-night, Sunday and Monday, in one of the most sensational sequences it has presented since its well-remembered film, "Inside Nazi Germany," produced in 1938, the March of Time, in its latest issue entitled "Main Street, U. S. A.," shows what life would be like in America if Hitler were permitted to impose his well-advised "New Order" here. In this specially "acted" sequence included in its story of America's current civilian defense efforts, The March of Time shows young storm troopers putting into effect the kind of repressive decrees under which millions of Europe's people are now living — underscoring pictorially the terrible price of being conquered.

How the "New Order" regulations reach into the personal lives of every man, woman and child is vividly acted out in the film against the backdrop of an American town.

U. S. newspapers, radio stations and even the mails are shown in operation under the supervision of "New Order" officials. Transportation and communication systems are for the exclusive use of the party and its military machine.

Finally, the film shows what happens to those who have the courage to protest against the new tyranny. Americans are seen in concentration camps, and hostages are lined up before firing squads.

Although the U. S. people are already familiar with Hitler's "New Order" and its effects upon the conquered nations of Europe, March of Time's dramatized sequence showing Americans how they could expect to live under totalitarian rule will enable them to visualize sharply what they are fighting to prevent.

Former Littlefield Boy Is Football Ace

Ramey Wilson, former Littlefield high school letterman, has played a large part in the dire of the Southwestern Tech football team to one of its greatest seasons. Wilson, a guard, has seen action in every game and distinguished himself against the Emporia, Kansas, Teachers by blocking the punt that set up the winning touchdown.

In addition to his football prowess, Wilson is sports editor of The Southwestern, Tech college newspaper, and is considered one of the better students of the school.

He is also a graduate of the college aviation school and holds a civilian pilot's license. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wilson, now living at Springdale, Ark.

Jean Darlan Is Placed In Control

Gen. Maxime Weygand regarded as lukewarm to collaboration with Germany, was "retired" recently as delegate-general and military commander of French North Africa, and that strategic area was placed under the direct control of the pro-German Vice Premier Jean Darlan.

The 74 year old Weygand, who commanded the final unsuccessful Allied stand against Germany in France, sent this farewell message to his African army and colonial heads: "Remain faithful to your magnificent traditions and to Marshal Petain."

Lieut.-Gen. Alfonse Juin, 53, released by the Germans from a prison camp June 16 was sent to North Africa to command the troops there amid indications of increasing French-German commitments.

Farmers Are Asked To Buy Needed Milk Pails Now

Word that priorities officials in Washington have granted a preference rating to manufacturers of dairy equipment has been received by E. R. Eudaly, dairy specialist of the Texas A. and M. College Extension Service.

The rating applies to such hot-dip tinned and tin-plate products as milk cans, pails, strainers, and cream cans.

Steel is so necessary to defense needs that civilian use of the metal is being sharply restricted. The priorities officials, however, apparently realize the importance of milk in the Food-For-Freedom campaign.

Only enough steel will be allocated to produce the 1,340,000 milk cans needed for normal replacements plus a 6.8 percent increase to handle the additional eight million pounds of milk called for in the U. S. Department of Agriculture's national production goals for 1942.

"I don't usually like to holler 'buy now'", Eudaly commented, "but this is one time the defense agencies want farmers to figure out their needs and to buy or order as soon as possible. Seems that will help manufacturers to estimate their steel needs."

Manufacturers will be required to get the cans and utensils to the milk producers before next spring, according to the terms of preference order.

Loosens Up Thick Choking Phlegm of BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

Spend 45c today at Madden Drug Store or any drug store for a bottle of Buckley's CANADIOL Mixture (triple acting). Pour yourself a teaspoonful, let it lie on your tongue a moment then swallow slowly. Feel its instant powerful effective action spread through throat, head and bronchial tubes. Start at once to loosen thick choking phlegm making breathing easier.

No claim is made that Buckley's is a cure for Chronic Bronchitis or Asthma but sufferers often find Buckley's CANADIOL Mixture (the largest selling cough medicine in all Canada) starts right in to quiet coughing spasms and loosen up that choking phlegm which seems to clog the tubes and makes breathing difficult. It helps many to get a better night's rest.

To Vote On Cotton Referendum Dec. 13

Cotton growers will vote in an Agricultural Adjustment administration referendum Dec. 13 on whether they want rigid marketing quotas continued on next year's crop. Wheat producers will ballot in a similar referendum next spring.

Under quotas, the AAA tells farmers how much they may sell. Products sold in excess of a quota are subject to stiff penalty taxes, which this year were 8 cents a pound for cotton and 49 cents a bushel for wheat. Quotas must be approved by two-thirds of the farmers voting.

This will be the fifth time that cotton farmers have voted on marketing controls, wheat growers the second. The quota proposals always carried, usually by top-heavy majorities. But it has been conceded by both supporters and opponents of the AAA system that there was little economic reason for rejection of quotas.

Past cotton and wheat referenda were held at times when prices of these crops were considerably below levels demanded by farmers. Tied in with the quotas were government commodity loan programs which lifted and pegged prices at levels higher than would otherwise have prevailed. Consequently it was easy for AAA officials to convince farmers that they would secure a larger income with quotas than without.

The situation is different now. Averaging above 16 cents a pound, cotton prices this season have been the highest since 1930. This average is virtually the parity price goal of the AAA programs. While not quite as close to the parity goal, wheat prices have been the highest in many years.

Many farmers, traders as well as officials believe these prices will go higher. This belief is supported by administration requests for price-control legislation. There has been much talk in Congress and among officials concerned over the possibility of inflation that cotton, if not subject to price ceilings, might go to 20 or 25 cents a pound. Likewise there has been talk of wheat going to $1.50.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard himself has implied, through support of the administration's price-control bill, that he fears farm prices may go to levels unfair to consumers and not in the best interest of agriculture.

In testimony urging price controls, Wickard told Congress that one of the surest methods of preventing inflationary prices was bountiful production. Some farmers have since suggested that perhaps the AAA production and marketing control program for cotton and possibly wheat should be discontinued in 1942.

AAA officials contend that the marketing quota system and the price-supporting loans are the principal factors in the present favorable price situation. They argue that discontinuance of the quotas and loans next year would result in a sharp drop in prices.

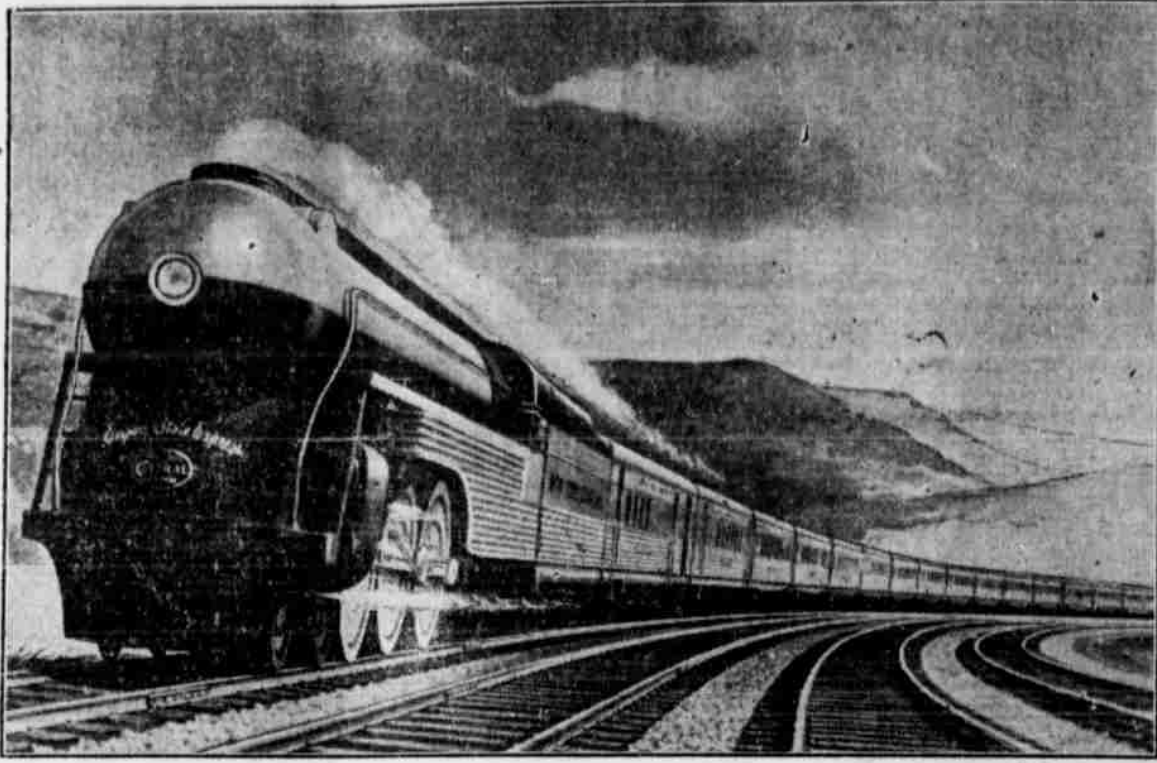

I. W. Duggan, director of the AAA's Southern division, says he believes that without loans and quotas cotton would tumble to between 7 and 8 cents a pound.

Under the AAA act, loans may not be offered in years when quotas are rejected. In other words, farmers must take the restrictive quotas in order to get the price-supporting loans.

Thus, farmers are caught between publicly expressed fears that cotton and wheat may rise to excessively high levels and official warnings that the bottom may drop out if controls are not kept in force.

Greatest opposition to the cotton quotas appears to be centered in

The 'Empire'—Latest In Streamliners

FIRST picture of the new Empire State Express, New York Central's new super-streamliner to be placed in service within a few weeks between New York, Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit. Its 32 stainless steel cars are now nearing completion in the Philadelphia shops of the Edward G. Hailed as the world's most modern day train, it will be operated each way daily in two sections of 13 to 16 cars each.

Oklahoma and Texas, where many farmers have had to operate under both cotton and wheat quotas. Complaints have come from this region that Northern and Mid-western corn-hog, dairy, beef and poultry farmers are being urged to produce all they can, while Southern farmers are being restricted not only on cotton but tobacco as well.

AAA officials reply that the Southern farmers also may increase production of hogs, beef cattle, chickens and dairy products. They agree that many Southern producers lack the equipment, stock, feed and finances, however, to expand production of these food products.

When ever it is possible, Southern farmers are being urged to double their peanut acreages.

There is small foreign demand now for American cotton and wheat.

Last Rites Held For H. E. Gholston At Sudan Sunday

Funeral services were held at the Church of Christ church in Sudan Sunday afternoon for H. E. Gholston, 54, of the Circleback community.

He died a few minutes after the automobile in which he was riding with a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elmo Gholston and her 18 months-old daughter, Jerry, was in collision with a truck in front of his home at 4:00 o'clock Friday afternoon.

The victim was taken to a local physician's office in Sudan but was reported dead five minutes after arrival there.

The young Mrs. Gholston and daughter were rushed to the Payne-Shotwell Hospital in Littlefield where both were reported to have body bruises. They were released from the hospital late Saturday afternoon.

The deceased is survived by his wife, and the following children who were all present for the funeral: Mrs. J. R. Phelps, Carbon, Texas; Mrs. Howard Fitzgerald, Aspermont; E. C. Gholston, Sudan. A sister Mrs. Jack Adams, Haskell, and brother, R. E. Gholston of Aspermont. A Nephew, Rupert Adams and wife of Weinert were also present for the rites.

Gas Poisoning In Baby Turkeys

Pink lungs reveal carbon monoxide poisoning in baby turkeys and chicks. According to Geo. P. McCarthy, poultry husbandman of the A. and M. College Extension Service, a grower may actually gas his turkey poult or baby chicks with a sooty brooder stove and bad ventilation. Deaths from this cause might be attributed to other reasons.

Investigators by the Denver branch of the pathological laboratory of the USDA into the high percentage of loss among baby turkeys delivered in good condition from hatcheries to poultrymen showed no external symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning, even when it was suspected. Chemical tests, however, were conclusive and physical examinations confirmed the positive cases by revealing the abnormally pink lungs which result from this type of poisoning.

McCarthy recommends that turkey growers provide good ventilation in their brooder houses without exposing the young birds to the hazard of drafts. Before placing baby chicks in brooder houses it is important to clean coal, wood and oil burning brooder stoves in order to remove all soot which might clog the burners and help form the dangerous gas.

Training For Aides At Housekeeping On Tues. And Wed.

The WPA Housekeeping Aides project is having training in the center for the aides on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week now instead of Tuesday and Thursday heretofore, so is having to rearrange work in the homes accordingly. Miss Elsie B. Green, supervisor, reported.

Recently in the center the aides have made a "chuck wagon" desk by making a cabinet on shelves on a wall and hanging a large solid board to the front of the bottom shelf that serves as a door for the cabinet when closed and as a table or desk top when lowered to rest on a leg placed on front of it. This leg is so arranged as to serve as a decorative design.

The Lay Committee for the project will have its next meeting 10:00 A. M. on Thursday morning, December 4th.

persons who voted had not been residents of Littlefield for sufficient time to legally cast their ballots. The reply of the City of Littlefield takes exception to the paragraph declaring "for the reason that said paragraph and allegations do not allege grounds for contest of any votes."

For exception No. 2, contestees (City of Littlefield) "except to said petition and especially to paragraph 10 thereof, wherein it is alleged that certain persons therein named were qualified voters and that they were denied the right to vote at the election, for the reason that the petition no where alleges that said persons had duly rendered their property for taxation, or that their property had been placed on the tax rolls, and of this the contestants pray judgment of the court."

One of the outstanding issues in the two elections held in connection with the proposal to build a municipal plant, the last election carrying by a majority of 35 votes, was whether or not the City of Littlefield could use the revenues from the proposed municipal light plant for any other purpose than to pay off the revenue bonds and interest.

At the municipal light plant election on October 14, the City of Littlefield also conducted an election to determine whether the citizens of Littlefield, Texas, should adopt the provision of chapter 18, General Laws of the State of Texas, passed by the 43rd legislature of the State of Texas at its Fourth Called Session in 1934, as amended by Chapter 74 of the General Laws of the State of Texas passed by the 45th legislature of the State of Texas at its Second Called Session in 1937, relating to the annual transfer and appropriation of income and revenue of public utilities systems owned and operated by certain cities and towns.

The contestants claim that the above law did not apply to the City of Littlefield at the time of the October 14 election, and that numerous citizens did vote for the municipal light plant because they were led to believe that revenue from the light plant could be used for other civic purposes.

The City of Littlefield, in filing its reply, declares in part as follows:

"That the District court does not have jurisdiction in this election suit to determine the legality or illegality of the special election relative to the diverting of revenue from the light plant to other civic purposes;

"That the voters who cast their ballots at the October 14 election knew or were supposed to have known the law relative to the use of revenue from the light plant for other civic purposes;

"That the City of Littlefield had the right to call the special election relative to use of revenue from the light plant for other civic purposes;

"The City of Littlefield, continuing the reply to the contestants, denies all charges and allegations of threats and intimidations in order to obtain votes for the municipal light plant.

"The City of Littlefield also denies any knowledge of misconduct by election judges" and deny generally all and singular the allegations in said petition.

In New York city's Union square, usually the battlefield of fireworks, air raid patrol workers staged a realistic battle of incendiary bombs in the first outdoor demonstration training. Traveler To At Spring School Dec. 4

World traveler, will Spring Lake Independent Thursday, December 4, m., according to an announcement by H. L. Minor, superintendent of the University of California had immense educational institution before Delbert Harter entered it a few years ago—but the competition of this great university didn't keep this enterprising young man from making the football team, being prominent in social and school activities, and from finally being graduated.

An insurmountable urge to travel shook young Harter loose from the parental haven to the extent of three trips around the world, the last just after graduating from the university. This urge was not so much "wanderlust" as a keen interest to know what folks in other parts of the world were doing and thinking. Del Harter wanted to find out for himself rather than read second hand reports from foreign correspondents. To be practical, his work at the university was outlined so he took the course which would be of value to him in not only helping him get around the world but in having a background to understand what he was seeing.

In working his way through U. C. L. A. he sang with a dance orchestra—later he earned meals singing in Egypt; he "slung hash" on sorority row—later he earned many, many meals doing the same in dozens of countries; he did commercial deep-sea diving on the Frisco Bay bridge construction; he piloted a plane for dusting farm crops—later he was offered a job flying in the Spanish army but declined; he even tried a parachute jump at the Sacramento airport. An all round athlete he played football, boxed, rowed on the crew and high jumped with the track men. His versatility came in handy of course when he was making his way around the world.

Delbert Harter has been in fifty-eight foreign countries and possessions during two and a half teeming years in world history. He saw Christmas in Bethlehem; watched Schuschnigg's historic meeting with Mussolini in Venice; saw the Ethiopian expeditionary force return from Africa; witnessed the coronation of King George VI in London; traveled 2,500 miles across Russia; witnessed weird rites in India; saw the famous ruins of Angkor-Vat; was on a train which was bombed going into Hong-Kong, and had a thousand other thrilling experiences which he interprets into an understanding of the kinship of all men.

Because he expected the other fellow to treat him well and because he, Del Harter, expected to so treat the other fellow—he got along with a minimum of difficulty. Courage he had to have of course; ingenious he had to be on many occasions, but it was the humanness of this splendid youngster which eased his way around the world.

Handsome, exceedingly able, a splendid speaker, Del Harter is as modest as a young man could be. He has been enthusiastically received by leading schools in the North, East and West.

Harter brings an interesting exhibit of items collected on his tours.

"Cotton Christmas" Being Sponsored

The 1941 "Cotton Christmas" Committee for Texas has been named by Burriss C. Jackson, Hillsboro, General Chairman of the State-Wide Cotton Committee, sponsors of the annual event.

"The purpose of the 'Cotton Christmas' movement is to increase the consumption of cotton," Jackson said, "and that is done by getting the public to purchase gifts made from cotton. There are dozens of highly attractive and very suitable cotton items in thousands of Texas stores."

H. H. Williamson, College Station, Director of the Texas Extension Service, will head the "Cotton Christmas" Committee for this year. Fifty of the State's cotton leaders, retail and wholesale merchants are serving on the committee, who will make plans to carry the message on be-

THE needs of the defense program decide how many Buicks we can build for you in 1942.

But there is no limit on how well we may build with the materials at our command.

So we invite you to look upon this car not as you would any ordinary new model, but as an unusual vehicle built to square with unusual times.

Check into the strength we have forged and hammered and wrought into the frame, the chassis, the drive.

Look into the everlasting comfort which is provided in soft, all-coil springs.

Dig into the engine, and see how resourceful engineering has stepped up the efficiency of valve-in-head design with Domite pistons and FIREBALL compression — how it also enables you to conserve fuel while actually getting more power through Buick's exclusive Compound Carburetion.

BUICK BUILDS FOR DEFENSE
Our assignments Building Pratt & Whitney valve-in-head aircraft engines for defense use.

You may have little interest normally in things like connecting rods and main bearings and wheel rims.

But it is of utmost importance now that Buick knew how to strengthen rods for heavier duties without increasing weight — that Buick found a way to oil-finish crankshaft journals so as to double bearing life under equal loads.

Little of this special ruggedness shows in the suave outward look of this trim and steady-rolling Buick—the beauty you see there is merely the garnish on the solid substance beneath.

But examine such structural details and we believe you'll quickly discover one fact:

While there may be a shortage of cars and of materials from which to make them, there's no shortage in stamina in the cars Buick builds.

And what is more important in any car these days?

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

The Christmas shopping season is on.

Business analysts all predict that it will be one of the biggest and busiest Christmas seasons in the history of this country.

The tragedies abroad, the increasing threat of war for this country and labor difficulties will continue to be of deep concern to the people of this nation.

Americans never have let anything interfere with Christmas and Christmas giving. Even during the height of the depression, Christmas was a big spending season.

ANALYZING THE VOTE

An analysis of the House of Representatives' vote on the scrapping of the Neutrality Act shows:

For repeal: 22 Republicans; 189 Democrats.

Against repeal: 137 Republicans; 53 Democrats.

Once again the vote clearly shows that the majority of the Republicans are the "isolationist" party.

Some of the Republicans may have voted against the measure in order to force President Roosevelt to take a firm stand against strikes in defense industries.

A careful analysis of each vote would probably be most discouraging to the public, for it would show, in a great many cases, that the congressmen were not really voting on the main issue at all.

These are times when every congressman should look far into his conscience and dig deep into his mind for the answer to our nation's problems before casting his vote.

HAS ACRE OF ORANGE TREES

McALLEN, Tex., Nov. 22—(UP)—Mrs. H. F. Ferry has an acre of orange trees, but townsfolk don't call it her orchard. They refer to it as her gold mine.

The one acre grove of 8-year-old trees this year produced 27 tons of oranges which brought $25 a ton, a $675 harvest.

Production has not fallen below 20 tons since 1928 and in 1933 the yield was more than 40 tons.

CHAPTER VI

SYNOPSIS

Harley Longstreet, broker, dies on a ferry from poison scratched into his hand by a needle-perforated cork in his pocket. He and his guests were on their way to celebrate his engagement to Cherry Browne, an actress. The other guests were his partner, DeWitt, DeWitt's wife Fern—with whom Longstreet had an affair—Jeanne, Longstreet's daughter and her fiancé Christopher Lord, Cherry's vaudeville friend Julius, Ahearn, friend of DeWitt, Imogene, middle-aged Latin, and Michael Callias, brewer's Irishman. Questioned, each member of the party seems unshakably toward the dead man. Bruno Thumm, investigator, thinks DeWitt and Longstreet had a sinister hold on him. Drury Lane, retired Shakespearean actor, says he knows who the murderer is, but will identify him only if Mr. X. One night the investigators and Lane go to the Weehawken Ferryhouse in answer to an anonymous note. A man is murdered on an incoming boat. He is identified as Charles Wood, conductor of the murder car—writer of the anonymous letter. DeWitt denies being to Wood, but in Wood's pocket is a cigar bearing DeWitt's private mark. Wood, motorman of the murder car, identifies Wood by an ugly scar on the forehead. Hicks, a ferryman, says Wood always smoked Cremos—and that he and Wood had seen DeWitt on the boat an hour before DeWitt admits being there. DeWitt, DeWitt offers no explanation.

"Look here, Mr. Lane," said Thumm. "I think it only fair to tell you that Bruno and I both have our hands set on DeWitt."

"Indeed? Let me earnestly advise you, however, to take no special action against DeWitt at this time."

Drury Lane sat before a triple mirror. A brilliant bluish-white soap suds directly on his face. Quacey knelt on a bench facing his master, leather apron smeared with soap and speckled with powder. A table to his right were scores of pigment jars, powders, putties, eye pots, mixing pans, delicate brushes, bundles of vari-colored human hair. Lying on the table was a photograph of a man's head. One wall was strung a thick net, from which depended fifty pieces of different sizes, shapes and colors.

"It's done, Mr. Drury," Quacey added the actor's shins. Lane nodded his eyes.

Five minutes later Mr. Drury rose and another individual altogether. He stamped across the room and switched on the main light. He was wearing a light overcoat and had jammed a gray fedora on his differently arranged gray hair. His lower lip thrust forward, Quacey howled.

"Well Dromio I'm ready. Get on your feet."

In the tone of his voice had a note of defiance.

That afternoon Inspector Thumm stepped on the ferry in Weehawken. He looked about, nodded curtly to a Jersey policeman on guard at the entranceway to the ferry, and strode through the waiting-room out into the street.

He began to climb the steep hill which led from the wharves and docks to the town. He finally found the crumpled house which was his destination. Number 2075—squeezed between a dairy and an automobile garage. A yellowed sign above the porch-ports announced Rooms for Gentlemen.

He pressed a bell marked Household. There was a shuffle of feet; the door stirred inward and a caricature nose peeped from the crack. "What'd ye want?" demanded a peevish female voice. Then a titter and the door swung open, revealing a stout, middle-aged woman, an attendant as her establishment.

"Inspector Thumm! I'm sorry—I didn't know... We've the awfulest time! Reporters with big cameras all over the place all morning! We—"

"Who upstairs?" demanded the woman, her chatter up my carpet with his cigarette-ashes," the woman shrieked. "Were you wanting to see that poor man's room?"

"No, ma'am, I'm looking for Mr. Murphy?" he asked.

"Your shirt on. It's me," Thumm said. The man grinned. "See you good at first. Glad to see you, Inspector. Dull work."

"Nothing stirring since last night?"

"Nothing," he led the way to a rear room. An old-fashioned bedstead, a chest of drawers, a marble-top table, a wire chair and a clothes-closet with the furnishings. Thumm hesitated. The Inspector opened the door to the double doors. Inside were worn suits, two pairs of shoes, a hat, a pair of gloves, a pocket watch, a pair of shoes and hat, and a discovery of nothing of interest. His heavy brows contracted.

"You're sure," he muttered to the detective, who stood in the doorway watching him, "that nobody touched anything in here since last night?"

The detective shook his head. "It's just as you left it."

On the carpet beside the closet was a cheap brown handbag, its handle, broken, dangling by one end. The Inspector opened the bag; it was empty. He stood in the center of the room, legs apart, and frowned about, then started pacing off the floor, slowly, feeling along the skeleton carpet with one foot. A slight elevation in the flooring at one point, near the border of the carpet, caused him to strip back the carpet, only to find a badly warped board. When he came to the bed he hesitated; but he dropped heavily to his knees and crawled underneath, feeling about like a blind man. The detective said: "Here, Chief—let me help you," and sprayed the beams of a pocket flashlight beneath the bed. Thumm muttered with elation: "Here it is!" The detective ripped away the carpet corner, and Thumm pounced on a thin yellow-covered little book. It tabulated numerous deposits of a savings account several years old; there had never been a withdrawal; no deposit had been for more than ten dollars, and the majority were for five; the last entry showed a balance of nine hundred forty-five dollars and sixty-three cents. In the bankbook was a neatly folded five-dollar bill, obviously a last deposit prevented by death.

Thumm pocketed the bankbook and turned to the detective. "When do you go off duty?"

"Eight bells. Relief comes on at that time."

"Tell you what," the Inspector scowled. "Tomorrow about half-past two call me at headquarters. Remind me that I've got something special for you to do here. Get me?"

"Phone at 2:30 prompt. Right!"

Inspector Thumm descended the stairs and out to the street.

Back in New York, Thumm went to the offices of the Third Avenue Railway System and inquired for the Personnel Manager.

"Checking up," Thumm said, "on Charley Wood."

"Yes. Terrible thing. Can't understand it—Charley Wood was one of my best men. Quiet, steady, reliable. He worked every working day since he took over the job. He never took time off, always preferred to work out his vacation and earn double pay. We're always getting requests for pay-advances. Not Charley Wood! Saved his money—showed me his bankbook once."

"How long had he worked for this company?"

"Five years. Here, I'll check that up." He was back in a moment with Wood's record-sheet. "He came with us a little over five years ago, starting on the Third Avenue run; was transferred with Pat Guinness, his motorman, at his own request to the Crosstown three and a half years ago."

Thumm looked thoughtful. "What about his personal life? Friends, relatives, pals?"

"He was chummy with the men but he never went out with 'em, as far as I know. Here—" He turned the record over. "See that? Next of kin—none."

Ten minutes later a lean, grinning chauffeur yanked the rear door of a long, black limousine open. Inspector Thumm glanced quickly up and down the street, then climbed in. Crouched in a corner, more gnome-like than ever, Quacey was dozing serenely.

The car purred off into traffic. Quacey opened his eyes, popped awake. He saw a very thoughtful Inspector Thumm sitting beside him. Quacey's face suddenly dripped with smiles, and he stooped to open a compartment built into the floor of the car. He sat up, a little red, holding a large metal box, the cover of which, inside, was a mirror.

Inspector Thumm shook his broad shoulders. "A good day's work, Quacey, all things considered." Dipping his hand into the box, he began to attack his face with a creamy liquid. Quacey held the mirror before him, offered a soft cloth. Soon there was the smiling physiognomy of Mr. Drury Lane.

The next morning the long black limousine rolled through West Englewood and pulled up before a small, well kept estate. Lane, in his inevitable cape and black hat, gripping his blackthorn stick, got out and beckoned to Quacey.

He wore a derby, a black overcoat and brand-new sparkling shoes that seemed to pinch. Groaning, he followed Lane up the walk to the portico.

An old man in livery escorted them to a large sitting-room in exquisite Colonial taste. Lane sat down, Quacey hovering behind him. "And you are—?" beamed the actor.

"Jorgens, sir. Mr. DeWitt's oldest servant."

"The very man. I owe you an explanation. Mr. Bruno, the District Attorney in charge of the Longstreet case, of which you know, has kindly permitted me to act in the capacity of independent investigator. I—"

"I beg your pardon, sir, but surely you don't have to explain to me. If I may say so, Mr. Drury Lane is—"

"I appreciate your enthusiasm, Jorgens. Now a few questions, and I should like exact answers. Mr. DeWitt—"

The animation went out of Jorgens' face. "If it's anything disloyal to Mr. DeWitt, sir—"

"Bravo, Jorgens." Lane's sharp eyes studied the man intently. "And again—bravo. I should have assured you that it is in Mr. DeWitt's best interests that I am here. Did Longstreet visit here often?"

"No, sir. Very rarely."

"And why was that, Jorgens?"

"I don't exactly know, sir. But Miss DeWitt didn't like him, and Mr. DeWitt—well, he seemed oppressed by his presence, if I make myself clear."

"Oh, quite. And Mrs. DeWitt?"

"Well, sir..." The butler hesitated.

"You would rather not say?"

"I would rather not, sir."

"For the third time—bravo. Would you say Mr. DeWitt is a companionable man?"

"Well... no, sir. His only real friend is Mr. Ahearn, who lives near by. But Mr. DeWitt is really a very pleasant man, sir, when you know him well."

"Then this menage does not customarily have guests?"

"Not very often, sir. Of course, Mr. Imperiale is staying here now, but he's a special sort of friend. Otherwise, Mr. DeWitt rarely entertains."

"I gather, then, that the few that do stay here occasionally are clients—business guests?"

"Yes, sir. For instance, there was a business gentleman from South America staying here about a month ago."

"What part of South America was he from?"

"I don't know, sir, but his name was Felipe Maquinchao."

"Did Mr. Longstreet visit here while he was in the house?"

"Yes, sir. Often. The night after Mr. Maquinchao came, Mr. DeWitt, Mr. Longstreet and he were closeted in the library until well after midnight."

"Can you describe Senor Maquinchao, Jorgens?"

The butler cleared his old throat. "He was Spanish-looking. Tall and very dark, with a little black military mustache. He did not stay at the house much during the month he was here. He took very few meals with the family, and did not fraternize, so to speak. Some nights he did not return until four or five in the morning; others he did not come in at all."

Cotton Farmers May Insure 75 Percent Established Yields

Cotton crop insurance is the next big issue for Texas farmers, according to Donald L. Cothran, state cotton insurance supervisor.

Taking precedence over cotton insurance this fall have been rush orders for 1942 special allotments for Food-For-Freedom pledges throughout the state, Cothran explained.

When increased production of foods in the national defense program were called for, county AAA offices faced the gigantic task of issuing 1942 cotton, wheat, rice, peanut and Irish potato allotments to Texas farmers by Nov. 1. Special allotments under AAA farm programs usually reach farmers by early spring, Cothran said in pointing out that all decks had to be cleared for Food-For-Freedom pledges which got underway in Texas Nov. 1.

County listing sheets establishing preliminary crop yields and premium rates are being received in the state office with more expected shortly, the insurance supervisor explained.

After county data have been approved in the state and regional crop insurance offices, Texas cotton farmers will be in position to take out insurance on next year's crop, he said.

Under the program, cotton farmers may insure 75 percent or 50 percent of their established yields against all unavoidable hazards. Total losses will be paid when they occur and partial losses after picking, Cothran explained.

HORSE PEERS IN WINDOW AT AMARILLO

AMARILLO, Tex., Nov. 24 (UP)—When a "big pair of soft brown eyes blinking out of a very long face" peered in the window of Mrs. T. J. Thompson's home, she called the Globe-News.

"A horse," she informed the reporter who answered the phone, "is looking in at my window."

"That so," answered the reporter, "What did it say?"

"Nothing," said Mrs. Thompson. "He's just looking."

"Where did he come from?"

"I don't know. I just looked up and there he was standing looking in at my window."

"Did you pull the shade?"

"No, he's a nice horse. Pretty, too."

"A saddle horse?"

"No, he looks like he might be a work horse. He's kind of bony."

"What are you going to do about him?"

"Well, I've called the pound. Oh, say, he's going over and looking in somebody else's window now."

The reporter sighed and both hung up.

Turkey Show At Plainview Dec. 3

PLAINVIEW, Texas, Nov. 11 — The eighth annual Southwestern Dressed Turkey Show will open here on Wednesday, December 3, for a two-day exposition of prize birds from flocks in several states. The show will be officially opened at 10 a. m. Dec. 3 and judging of dressed birds will begin thirty minutes later. During the two days there will be demonstrations on latest turkey dishes, as well as the traditional serving; a banquet for growers, special program for breeders and the show will close with the annual auction of dressed birds. In addition to the dressed show there will be an exhibit of live birds. Prize money for the two exhibits totals $400 and entries are eligible from anywhere in the United States. Miss Lucille Shultz, Hale county home demonstration agent, with assistance of club women will contribute to the show program with an exhibit "Starring Turkey", showing how the bird is transformed from "turkey in the straw" to turkey on the table", Miss Shultz said. The first demonstration will show a bird properly dressed, the next the fowl stuffed and skewered and the final step will show the turkey baked and ready to serve. W. A. Painter, president of the Hi-Plains Turkey Improvement Association which, with the Plainview Board of City Development, sponsors the turkey show, said fewer

'Powder Kegs' Dominate Map of Pacific Area; Britain Warns Japan Against War With U. S.

Saburo Kurusu

Premier Hideki Tojo

With Japan warned by Winston Churchill that if the United States is forced into a war in the Pacific, Great Britain will join against Nippon "within the hour," the situation in the Far East became increasingly serious. Map above shows the area where hostile action would more than likely be centered in a S-British clash with Japan. Shown are the all-important Dutch East Indies, which furnish bulk of rubber supply to the United States; French Indo China, where large concentrations of Japanese troops are quartered; Singapore, the Philippines, Australia and Guam among other points that can be listed as probable "powder kegs." At right above is pictured Saburo Kurusu, dispatched from Tokyo as a special Japanese envoy to deal with the United States as the situation grew more serious. Tojo is Japan's new premier, Hideki Tojo. With his selection came a new turn in Japanese foreign policy, especially towards the U. S. against which he has taken a firmer stand.

Most of the Eastern output of tungsten, excepting China, is going to Great Britain, Dr. Hancock said. But it is believed Britain soon will release some of its sources to the United States.

Only a small trickle of tungsten is flowing from South China, Burma and the Shan States. Dr. Hancock's job is to investigate the possibility of increasing production in these areas and to give technical advice to miners. He also will arrange for transportation of ore to ports where American ships can pick it up. At some points in Burma, where the strategic materials are brought for shipment, there are no port facilities. Ships anchor off shore and native barges are used to haul the ore out to the vessel.

In Iran, Dr. Hancock will study the possibility of developing Persian ore resources for export. He will not confine his study entirely to tungsten, the chief reason for

U. S. In Search For Tungsten To Carry On Defense Program

The increasing demand for tungsten to carry on the United States defense program is sending Dr. Sam Hancock, San Bernardino, Calif., mining engineer, through six countries in search of additional supplies.

Dr. Hancock, who arrived in Singapore recently, was sent to the Orient by Washington to purchase strategic materials and to investigate the possibility of obtaining additional tungsten output for the United States from Malaya, Burma, the Shan States, China, southern Tibet and Iran.

At the present the United States is purchasing almost the entire tungsten output of China. But the rapidly expanding national defense program has made it necessary to find new sources of the strategic ore. Tungsten is used in shipbuilding and the manufacture of all armaments and war materials in which steel is used. Only one per cent of tungsten is used to 99 per cent of steel. But the scarcity of tungsten ore is proportionate.

SUSPEND ASSISTANCE TO FRANCE'S NORTH AFRICAN COLONIES

The United States Thursday suspended economic assistance to France's North African colonies, and broadly hinted that diplomatic relations with the Vichy government might be severed because of increasing Nazi domination of French affairs.

In announcing that "American policy toward France is being reviewed," Secretary of State Hull made it clear that the attitude of the United States would be determined by France's future action toward Hitler's schemes "to take over by force or threat of force the sovereignty and control of the French empire."

Connally Again Asks Legislature To Eliminate Strikes

Believing that the real spirit of the mass of American labor ought to be and is "Defense and not Defiance", and believing that the time has come when the Senate and House must decide who is running the country, John L. Lewis or the Congress and the President, Senator Tom Connally last week introduced legislation to assist the President in stopping strikes affecting the national defense.

The bill represents a continuation of Senator Connally's effort to bring a halt to strikes slowing down the country's production of defense material; in June the Senate adopted the Connally amendment authorizing the President to take over plants halted by strikes, but the amendment was knocked out by the House of Representatives.

Connally requested that this bill go to the Judiciary Committee, of which he is a member, where hearings on the bill have already begun. The Texas Senior Senator was named chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the legislation.

The bill provides that whenever plants, facilities, or mines are impeded or hindered by strikes or labor difficulties the President shall have authority to take them over. It further provides that when the Government exercises such power the labor conditions, excepting wages, shall be frozen; a labor board would be set up to see the workers receive a fair wage for their work in plants operated by the government.

Provisions are already on the law books for the government to take over when employers refuse to operate their plants for our national defense.

In introducing the bill, Senator Connally stated to the Senate, "I do not believe that the great mass of the laboring men in the United States sympathize with the effort to use the strike as a weapon against the government in this critical hour of the nation's history, at a time when other men are being called to training camps at $21 per month."

The first commander in chief of the Army and Navy to hold divine services on ship board was President Roosevelt.

Theaters can be fined $500 discriminating against a man in Navy uniform in the District of Columbia or any U. S. Territory.
