NEWSPAPERS LEAD IN ADVERTISING

A very informative survey was recently made by the Better Business Bureau of Tulsa, Okla., who conducted an exhaustive inquiry into the various forms of advertising used in these modern days, among its citizens. Over 1,000 letters were received. In answer to the question: "What form of advertising influences you most in making your purchases?" 817 or 80 1/2 per cent stated that newspapers were the best medium; 1 1/2 per cent said billboards; 10 1/2 per cent said radio; 1 per cent said house to house circulars and not a single one approved of automobile cards and circulars.

Out of thirty business executives queried, nineteen said newspapers were the best advertising mediums and they obtained the best results from their use; only three of the thirty believed in house to house circulars and only two in direct mail advertising.

Out of people answering the questionnaire 778 said they read only 12 1/2 per cent of the cards and circulars received.

The majority of those answering the bureau's queries stated that the practice of distributing circulars from house to house was annoying and should be stopped by law.

The bureau simply gathered the data; submitted it without comment to the Tulsa business firms for their information—Canyon News.

AWAKENED WOMAN

by ELINORE BARRY

First Installment

When before she opened her eyes, she was aware of being in a strange place. For the moment, however, she still too drowsy to make any effort to move, a dull ache throbbled her head. Her whole body felt weighed down by an insistent tide.

When other sensations asserted themselves, her fingers, moving languidly, sent her drowsy brain the message of some sort of cool silken material under their sensitive tips. She kept her eyes shut while she tried to think things out. . . . She was taxi going to the Hotel Blackstone in Chicago. It was sleeting, and she saw traffic another machine skidding suddenly and crashed into them. . . . Then they had brought her—

She didn't smell in the least like a hospital. And the bed was softer than she had ever felt.

Suddenly she was afraid to open her eyes. Completely awake now, she gazed with curiosity, filled at the same time with a foreboding of strange, frightening revelation.

Where could she be? . . . She could stand the uncertainty no longer. Without moving she rolled her eyes and stared straight at her. Her first look showed a bed of large oranges hanging in golden balls in the sunshine against a background of cloudless blue changes! She had never seen oranges actually growing. Still without rolling her eyes from one to the other, they traveled up to her hands, lying inert on a satin cover. Suddenly she became aware of three separate facts soiling in their significance that they were heart to pumping and paralyzing her muscles.

She could never tell which shock the first to register; the circle of diamonds on the third finger of her left hand; the rumpled condition of the other side of the bed; or the rufal masculine whistle coming from somewhere in the house close to her!

A hot wave flooded her face and she felt her heart quieted. She relaxed a trifle, breathed deeply, and tried to bring her whirlbrain back to normal.

It's the most incredible thing I've ever heard!" she thought, gratefully, fighting against a feeling of faintness. "It must be a dream! I landed in Chicago in November dark, cold, snowy afternoon; got a taxi and . . . something bumps the taxi and . . . I wake up this morning and find that it's summertime and that . . . I'm . . . I'm fed! How could it have happened—?"

The whistle seemed to come a little nearer. Joyce clutched at the bed-sheets in a suddenly renewed panic. If it were not a dream at this instant, then what had happened while she was unconscious?

Suddenly a telephone bell rang. The whistling stopped abruptly. She heard the click of the receiver being lifted. . . . then "Yes?" in a deep pleasant voice. She listened tensely. "Oh, Laurine? Hello! . . . She's still asleep, I think. No. Doc says it's nothing serious, but it sure was lucky it wasn't worse. . . . Yes, you're absolutely right—What? . . . Well, I ask her last month not to ride that brute, but you know how she is. . . . I'm leaving in a few minutes. . . . Yes. Got to get to Chicago for a conference. . . . Come over sometime today and see how she is, will you? I hate to go off like this but I'm just going shoulders. "Why, what's the matter, dear? Head pro? Oh, I say, did I hurt you poor kid!" He drew back a little. Joyce had involuntarily flinched when his hands touched her. The thought flashed into Joyce's confused mind that if he fancied she were really ill, he might after all not go away. . . . She must have time to recover from the shock and decide what to do. She must be left alone. She would have to speak; everything depended on her making this effort. "Oh, I'm . . . I'm all right," she stammered only above a whisper.

"The sound of steps approaching her bed sent her pulse hammering" to have time to make the date. It's something I can't sidestep. . . . Yeah? Well, tell Paul to be a good boy while I'm away. So long, Laurine. See you all in 'bout two-three weeks."

Click. Steps across the floor. The sound of steps approaching the bed sent her pulses hammering. Curiosity and fear mingled in her feelings as she looked up. She was so frightened that it did not occur to her to pretend to be asleep.

She saw a man of medium height . . . thirtyish . . . ruddy . . . blue eyes and blue tie . . . tan face and tan suit . . . light brown hair combed back smoothly . . . face rather wide across the jaw . . . short . . . mouth cut in clean curves . . . like a girl's . . . Nothing villainous in the man's appearance.

"Hello, Honey. How do you feel this morning?" He was smiling down at her with complete kindness. Joyce swallowed hard, unable to answer. Under the sheet she clenched her hands, trying to still the trembling of her body.

A worried look dimmed the smile on the man's face. He sat down on the side of the bed and leaned toward her, putting his hands on her

A look of relief came into the face above her. "Why, but you gave me a scare, Pills," he exclaimed. "Sure you're right? Doc's coming over today. . . . take another look at you. . . . Stay in bed and get a rest. If you're really all right, I've got to go to the city to get my train for Chicago. But I won't go if you're not. You don't seem just right."

"Oh, no, really, I'm all right," she said hastily. "I just have a headache. It'll be all right."

"You're sure? . . . Good! . . . Well, good-bye, honey. Take care of yourself. You can always reach me at the Blackstone, you know. I'll expect to hear from you."

He leaned over, took her face between his large firm hands and kissed her. After he had kissed her twice, while Joyce tried furiously to recall the blush she felt burning her face, he added, hesitatingly, "Look here, Frills, I wish you'd . . . go a little easy while I'm away, will you. I'll be worried about you all the time if I think you're . . . pulling any more reckless stunts, you know. And—"

"Oh, no, don't worry about me!" interrupted Joyce, wishing he would stop kissing her and go away. "I won't do a thing, I . . . I know I'm going to feel like being very quiet for . . . for awhile."

This sort of answer was evidently unexpected, Joyce decided, when she saw the surprise in his face mingled with relief. In speaking before, his voice had revealed a note of apprehension, as if he were afraid of the way his words would be received. "What sort of disposition can I have had?" she wondered.

"Well, good-bye, honey," he said once more, and kissing her again, he stood up. "I've got to hop off, I'll wire today from somewhere along the line."

Joyce lay and listened to his steps receding inside the house. Then she drew a long breath and sat up suddenly. "So that's my . . . my husband. He has a very nice voice, and I don't feel exactly afraid of him. I think he's got a— a kind, pleasant look on his face. . . ."

Her thoughts paused in confusion. What did it mean? Gradually her sense of dizzy panic gave way to puzzled curiosity. Lying there in the sweet scented sunshine her mind grew clearer and she tried to fathom the situation unemotionally. But it was no use; the pieces didn't fit; she had nothing to go on. . . .

Swinging her feet over the side of the bed, she found a pair of high-heeled satin bedroom slippers which she put on, and then stood up and stretched cautiously. She felt somewhat stiff and lame, especially all down the side, shoulder, elbow and knee.

"Ouch! That must be the side I fell on. To think that I always wanted to learn to ride horseback and now I've done it and had a bad fall besides—and I don't know a thing about it!"

She went over to the big window of the sleeping porch and stood for a few moments in the warm sunshine, gazing out eagerly. Beneath her lay a terraced garden, full of a blaze of flowers. A high hedge surrounded the garden, down one side of which grew a row of slender Italian cypresses, stiff and dark and theatrical looking. Beyond the hedge stretched a huge orchard of fruit trees. Joyce stared down at it in amazement. She had never seen such an enormous orchard in her life. The rows of white-blossomed trees seemed to run for miles and miles over a flat valley, like a drift of snow across a huge plain. Along the farther horizon undulated a line of strange, puckery, treeless hills against the sky. As her glance followed them to the right, she saw that beyond the low hills rose high mountains.

She turned reluctantly away from the view of the sunny garden and the open country, and entered the house. She found a large bedroom with flowered cretonne curtains and cushions. . . . ivory-tinted wicker furniture . . . a little pile of silk underclothes at the foot of the big smooth bed . . . luxurious dressing table with a low seat in front of it . . . a partly open door at the right giving a glimpse into a closet full of cothes . . . at the left a wide-open door into a spacious white tiled bathroom.

Suddenly, as she stood motionless on the threshold, feeling like an intruder entering some one else's bedroom, she caught sight of a girl with short wavy hair, clad in a delectable mauve pyjama suit. With a gasp of surprise she realized in one of the two full length mirrors which flanked the dressing table!

"Well! . . ." She moved hastily up close to the mirror and examined herself with interest. Fascinated, she examined her face more closely and smiled suddenly with pleased surprise at the image in the glass. "You look really a whole lot . . . prettier than you ever did in Philadelphia, I must admit!" The bathroom was another exciting discovery. It was a large, square room, elaborately tiled, with magnificently modern fittings and fixtures. Joyce gasped with pleasure as she looked.

Through the big open window at the left, the sun was streaming in, bringing with it that indescribably sweet odor which had greeted Joyce on her waking. Part of it must come from those acres of trees in bloom beyond the garden, part of it from the waxen blossoms of the orange tree.

In spite of the mystery, in spite of the complications she was about to meet, it was impossible, after a two-year-long diet of Mrs. Lowrie's boarding house, for Joyce not to feel a thrill of pleasure at finding herself in these lovely surroundings. With a little hop of sheer excitement, she crossed the big bathroom and pushed open another door which she noticed stood just slightly ajar.

"Oh? His . . . his dressing room, I suppose," she murmured, hesitating on the threshold. She entered shyly, crossed to the dresser, and took from it a large photograph in a heavy silver frame. Her own face smiled out at her.

It was her own; but Joyce felt, nevertheless, that she must be looking at her double. "Of course, it's touched a lot, and the horn hair and the pearls and the evening gown make a difference. But I . . . don't know . . . there's something so assured and sophisticated and daring about it that it doesn't look like me, not like Joyce Ashton. . . ."

A Need for All

Hundred-car trains, carrying 2000 tons, have become common practice.

This chiefly caused the need for trucks. Not everyone can ship or buy in carload lots, nor wait for big trains to be made up.

Merchants need quick shipments of small quantities, to obtain quick turnover, insuring fresh goods, better assortments, lower costs. Trucks overcome many handicaps of businesses with small capital.

Producers of farm products and live stock need to transport quantities in less than car loads, but cannot afford the higher rates for small shipments.

Probably the trucks have brought the railroads more business than they have taken away from them. Certainly the railroads of Texas had their greatest revenue growth during the years that truck registrations have increased most rapidly. For 1931—a depression year—the gross earnings of Texas railroads was $162,014,947, compared with $116,460,375 for 1913, their best prewar year.

It's not the trucks that have hurt railways. It is a combination of depression business and boom-time financing that cause their present embarrassment. Should Texas shippers be denied economical use of their own trucks on their own highways because of railroad errors? to grant a transportation monopoly. For Texas industries to grow and producers to get adequate returns for their products, every form of transportation should be maintained and required to render its service at lowest possible cost.

No form of transportation should be required to conform to the practices of one less flexible. In this time of distress Texas cannot afford Let truck regulation be in the interest of the shipping and travelling public alone, without handicaps designed merely to prevent economical operation.

Interesting News From the County Seat

GRAND JURY MAKES FINAL REPORT; RETURN EIGHT BILLS, ALL FELONIES

Following is the final report made by the grand jury of the present term of district court to Judge Charles Clements:

1. We wish to thank all of the officers of our county for their assistance rendered to us in our deliberations. The cases have been well prepared, and much time and money has been saved.

2. We want to thank the County and District Attorney for the help they have been to us.

3. We appreciate the courtesy and assistance of the District Judge to us, and his help has been of great benefit to us.

4. The officers of the neighboring counties, who have been witnesses before us, and who have worked with us, did so at some personal inconvenience to them, and we want them to know that we appreciate their efforts.

5. In the course of our deliberations, we find that the young people of certain of the communities of the county seem to be allowed, by their parents, to roam the streets at night. We feel that there should be more restraint on the part of the parents regarding this practice, and that the officers of our various towns should do all they can to keep our young folks off the streets. Constant loitering on the streets of any town is not good for young people, and can only lead to trouble.

6. We have made an inspection of the courthouse and jail, and the grounds surrounding the same, and we find them well kept and in good sanitary conditions, except the jail, and it is in as good sanitary shape as can be kept due to its condition. The jail is not sufficient to keep a prisoner in, and is a firetrap for prisoners.

7. We find that the courthouse seems to be in need of some minor repairs, and we recommend to the Commissioners Court that they have these repairs made at once, if funds are available. To do so will give employment to some workmen, and at present rates, should prove very economical to the county.

8. We have diligently inquired into all matters of law violation that have come to our knowledge, and have returned a total of 8 true bills, all felonies, and having finished our labors we ask that we may be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLARD PHILLIP,

Foreman for the Grand Jury

eful players have always referred to them with a farther bid there is no real change to be made in the method of such players.

careless, unthinking player will have to be on his toes from now on to catch these situations.

ential forcing situations arise when the responding hand has no trumps, either at once or after partner's bid after partner's bid of one in a suit; or when pending hand having raised partner's suit bid, the original re-opens the bidding in a new was not foolish. Dummy may not word or act suggest a lead or play or call attention to opponent's revoke or lead out of turn, or warn declarer that he is leading from the wrong hand or tell him unless questioned which hand has the lead. Otherwise he has all the rights of any player. He may question his partner as to whether he has no card in a suit, in which he is failing, unless he has looked at one or both of the opponent's hands. If during the play dummy leaves the table, the opponents may not claim the penalty for an established revoke by declarer unless one of them has questioned him before the revoke became established. Dummy cannot revoke.

Isa Oleta Little Passes Away Sunday; Ill Only Two Days

Isa Oleta Little, aged 20 years, 4 months and 11 days, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Little of Anton, passed away at her home about six o'clock Sunday morning.

Deceased had only been ill a short time when the death angel visited her, having taken sick Shursday evening last.

Funeral services were conducted at the Church of Christ, Anton, by Rev. Allen, pastor of the Church of Christ, Littlefield, at 2 p. m. Monday afternoon, and interment took place in the Anton Cemetery under the direction of Hammons Undertakers of Littlefield.

Deceased, with her parents and brothers and sisters, had been living in Anton for the past four years, having come there from Johnson county, Oklahoma. She had attended high school in Anton, and had a very large number of friends in that section, as was evidenced by the mass of people who gathered at the church to pay their respects, and the large number of floral offerings.

Besides the host of friends to mourn her passing she is survived by her parents, and seven sisters and two brothers.

When taken to the hospital she was running a temperature of 106, and though it has moderated a little, she is still in a serious condition.

New Chevrolet Standard Six Is Announced

Chevrolet's new entry in the automobile market, The Standard Six, went on public display Friday at the dealers showrooms.

Featuring air-stream styling, the new car resembles in external appearance its companion series. Three body types are offered; coach, coupe and coupe with rumble seat, all with bodies by Fisher and all featuring the new Fisher no-draft ventilation system. The new car has a wheel base of 107 inches.

Powered by a valve-in-head six cylinder engine, the new motor develops sixty horse power at 3,000 R. P. M., and is said to have a top speed of 65 to 75 miles per hour. It the same basic design as the six first introduced by Chevrolet in 1928 and now used in the Master series.

While certain features are identical with the Master series, a company statement emphasizes that the new Standard Chevrolet is an entirely new car, and not a smaller version of the Master nor a resurrection of an older model. It is the result of two years of development work, the company states, and is a companion car to the Master series. The new standard Six, the company claims, will deliver more miles per gallon of gasoline than any other full size car now on the market, and is ideally adapted to the needs of the fleet user and the commercial traveler.

Lamb County Council Elect Officers for The Ensuing Year

The Lamb County Council of Parent-Teacher Association met in its regular quarterly meeting on Saturday, March 4th, at Sudan. About seventy five representatives from the county, Littlefield, Amherst, Spring Lake, Spade, Olton and Sudan, enjoyed an enthusiastic meeting. Pending legislation at Austin which concerns schools was discussed and officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Roy McQuarters, Spade; Vice-President, Mrs. Marvin McLarty, Sudan; Secretary, Mrs. Cloninger, Littlefield; Treasurer, Mrs. Drake, Spring Lake; Reporter, Mrs. S. D. Hay, Olton.

The "school beautiful" contest is to be continued for the summer and all schools are urged to enter now and compete for the loving cup which is to be given to the winner.

A number of readings, given by Sudan talent, were greatly enjoyed and twenty-five ladies, members of the Ladies' Choral Club of the Amherst P. T. A. gave a beautiful musical number which inspired the rest of the council to "go home and urge our P. T. A. to sing."

After the program a social hour was indulged in and the home economics girls served punch and cake to all. The next meeting will be held at Spade school house on Saturday, June 3rd, at 2:30. Keep the date in mind.

THE CHURCH HAS SOMETHING FOR YOU

YOU HAVE SOMETHING FOR THE CHURCH

You and the church are interdependent. Without the church, your community would degenerate into a materialistic group of selfish individuals. It is the church that provides a background of ideals, and unity of purpose. The church is the source of countless benefits that you take for granted and enjoy daily.

Without your support, in turn, the church would cease to exist. Your duty to the church, therefore, and to your fellow men, yourself and your God, is to give your support by regular attendance. Go to church Sunday.

at 5 1/2 per cent, to be deducted when the advance is made. All notes are due October 31, 1933.

Charging a fee for the preparation of a borrower's application is expressly forbidden this year. Also a law calls for the conviction of persons making false representation for the purpose of obtaining any loan or to assist in obtaining loan, or to dispose or assist in disposing of any crops given as security for any loans made.

First Lien Required

An absolute first lien on all of the crops grown by the borrower in 1933 is required. In counties where fertilizer is not commonly used, the rate of loans must not exceed $3 an acre for general field crops, and $12 an acre for truck crops, including potatoes. Not to exceed $1 an acre of loans made at any of the rates may be used for repairs and miscellaneous expenses of crop production other than seed, feed for work stock, and fuel for oil for tractors.

In addition to the reduction required this year in acreage of cash crops, borrowers must agree to plant a garden for home use and a sufficient acreage of feed crops to supply feed for their livestock. Acreage taken out of cash crop production may be planted to any soil-building crop.
