When Tommy Goes To Hospital, His "Scottie" Goes Along

"Scottie" doesn't think much of these appendicitis operations! He's never had one, but his master, Tommy Barber, underwent an operation last Friday afternoon at the Payne-Shotwell Hospital, and Scottie declares that he doesn't like that business. Tommy is the seven-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Barber. Scottie came along with the Barber family when they moved here from Haskell county three years ago. He saw Tommy carried into the side door of the hospital last Friday afternoon, and he knew something was up. So—he's still waiting at that side door for Tommy to be brought out. However, he runs home at least once a day to see the other children, but doesn't tarry long. He circled the building several times last Saturday before he located the window to Tommy's room. Then he sat on the grass under the window and whined. "Scottie is five years old, and is a brindle-colored, short haired, bull dog that is part coyote. He's mighty glad that Tommy's condition has been pronounced satisfactory by the doctors, and he will be glad when the lad can go home.

The Littlefield Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the organization of the sheep raisers in this section, and it is believed that the raisers will derive greater benefits through an organization, especially for the marketing of lambs and wool, the shearing problems, and the securing of rams for the flocks.

T. J. Jones Resigns From School Faculty; With Farm Security

Truman J. Jones, teacher of vocational agriculture in the Littlefield High School last year, resigned that position Monday to accept the position of Assistant Rural Rehabilitation Supervisor in this district. He began his duties with the local Farm Security office Tuesday.

During the past year under his supervision, boys in the agriculture department carried on about 65 projects, including growth of farm crops and livestock, with an approximate cash value of $800.

During the last year the F. F. A. Club won the silver emblem certificate for outstanding chapter work in the district. This certificate has been received and will be framed and hung in the agriculture laboratory of the high school. This achievement is a district honor since this is the first time the Littlefield Chapter has achieved it. Field trips carried on by the aggies last year included a trip to the Fat Stock Show at Fort Worth and a field day investigating the industrial area of Lubbock.

Improvements To School Property Include Walks And Redecorating

Approximately 1,625 pupils are expected to be on hand when the school bell rings on Monday morning, September first. This number, it is expected, will be distinguished in about the following manner: High school, four hundred ninety; Central School, five hundred thirty; Primary School, four hundred ninety-five; and Colored School ninety.

There have been few changes in the curriculum offering, except in the commercial department where a stronger emphasis will be placed. The stress placed on this department is in the light of the need at this time for clerical workers. Courses offered have been given heretofore and are fully accredited with the State Department of Education, but it is hoped that such courses as stenography, typing, commercial law, and Commercial Arithmetic will be boosted.

Band work will be continued in much the same manner as before, and Littlefield schools will comply with the state's recommendations in regard to allowing credit in applied music. According to the plan set up by the State Department of Education, academic credit will be allowed to those students satisfactorily passing state examinations on instrumental music taken from approved instructors. To date, those teachers approved by the local board are Mrs. Ivan Fowler and Miss Mary Ruth Boles. It is likely that other local teachers will be approved.

It may be observed that the lawn at the High School has been developed in keeping with the landscaping program set up in the spring, and concrete walks have been built parallel to the front of the building and to the walks at the curb, and intersecting the streets bordering the campus.

On the interior of the High School building the walls and woodwork are being redecored throughout, and includes window and door facings and the entire wall space in the auditorium. The Industrial Arts building is being converted into a vocational agriculture class room and laboratory and will be redecored on the interior by the opening of school.

SPANKING STILL POPULAR

We learned the other day that 71 per cent of the children of the United States get spanked.

When statistical studies reach the stage where even such subjects as spankings are covered, it would seem as though everything in the world must have been polled.

But the spanking survey, made by the Reed Children's poll, was actually a very interesting study—the first ever made, so far as we know, to find out what youngsters of eight to thirteen are thinking about.

For the poll wasn't just concerned with spanking. It covered even more serious subjects than that—if there are any more serious ones to a child of the spanking age.

One of the subjects it covered, in questioning 10,000 children, was their attitude toward war. It was found that 27 per cent of these children think the United States should go to war against Germany, which is a higher percentage than shown in most polls of adults. Furthermore, almost half of the boys and girls fear that the United States eventually will be attacked by Germany or Japan.

War, it was found, is definitely influencing the ambitions and thinking of a large number of youngsters. 20 per cent of the boys want to be airplane pilots, 10 percent want to be soldiers, 5 percent want to be sailors, and 19 per cent of the girls want to be nurses. Only 4 per cent of the boys, however, want to be President of the United States.

Another interesting revelation was the air-mindedness of the youth of today. 60 per cent of the boys and girls questioned saying that they prefer air travel to any other means of transportation.

The idea of analyzing the opinion of children should prove interesting and the Reed poll intends to continue its venture in this field. Strangely enough, even though the poll is conducted by the Reed Candy company, there wasn't a single question in it about whether they liked candy. But after all, that would be a foolish question to ask any child.

A HEALTHY GENERATION

When we hear about the great number of young men who are rejected by the army because of their health, it would appear as though the coming generation was a pretty feeble group. Heart trouble, tooth defects, and other maladies usually associated with old age, has been the cause of many rejections.

But the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, which has good reason to make exhaustive studies of the health of the nation, says that the health of the American people, including the young men for selective service age, is better than ever before in history.

Based on a study made of the rejections for poor health, the Metropolitan company points out that the chief reason for rejections is the drastic standards of selection.

"In 1917-18" says the report, "both the methods of selection and the organization of the draft were essentially emergency procedures, developed after we were already at war and committed to raising, arming and transporting a huge army in the shortest time possible. This situation tended to discourage too rigid standards of selection. Yet, despite the immediate urgency of the situation in 1917-18, approximately one-quarter of the draftees were rejected altogether and nearly one-third were unavailable for general military service."

"In contrast, administration of the present Selective Service Act was begun in peace time, and only the best and healthiest of American young men are being selected for service. Greater emphasis is being placed on weeding out those men who are unlikely to withstand the mental as well as the physical stress of modern war. Moreover, medical examinations are more complete and accurate, owing to the better training of physicians, and to the improvement and wider use of physical and laboratory facilities for diagnosis."

Judging from this report, a young man needn't feel that he isn't in good health just because the army doesn't pass him. It just means that he isn't a physical superman.

Lubbock Well Starts New So. Plains Pool

Swabbing an estimated 21 barrels of oil hourly, the L. C. Harrison No. 1. Nairn, oil test 3 1-4 miles northeast of Lubbock, was definitely pronounced a commercial producer by Harrison Thursday. The well was given 2,000 gallons of acid in its initial treatment and the swabbing of from 15 to 25 barrels of oil hourly was made in the 24-hour period. The oil was 31.5 gravity and sweet and was said to have a high octane value.

An overnight shutdown was said designated to gauge pressure of oil flow, which had not developed by heads.

Thursday afternoon and night's swabbing of oil went into two storage tanks at the rig and will probably be used again when the second treatment of acid is given the well, Harrison said.

The well is bottomed at 4,914 feet. Production was from a saturated lime formation estimated 15 to 17 feet in thickness and identified as the Clear Fork, lower Permian lime. It corresponds to the Tubbs horizon which produces prolifically in several West Texas fields.

Establishment of the well as a commercial producer gives Lubbock county its first oil well and opens up a new South Plains pool which undoubtedly will see much drilling activity within the next few months.

The Road to Bagdad

by GEORGE GIBBS

CHAPTER XIII

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Dean tours the East and becomes greatly interested in Ronald Barker—El Korah—mysterious leader of tribes in Palestine. In order to obtain information helpful to Barker, she accepts the attentions of Hassan Isar, but declines his proposal of marriage. Mohammed, the Syrian desert Camilla being across the Syrian desert Camilla is carried off by followers of Hassan and is taken to a Bedouin encampment. Ronald's tribesmen attack, and Hassan is killed.

Camilla rode in silence beside Ronnie for a way. As he had said, there was no time for sentiment—only a brief touch of fingers, a glance of eyes as they rode toward the moon. "You know the Saied Ahmal!" she asked, as they gave their weary horses a walk.

"I've seen him—as I said, another descendant of the Prophet. I wonder why I never thought of him before. I've got to pay him a visit."

"We," she corrected. "I'm going with you, Ronnie."

He smiled with a fondness she had begun to understand. "You're simply incorrigible."

"But how are we going to get there?"

"A plane, my dear, the one I flew from Jerusalem. This is a land of great distances. Barring mishaps we should be in Bagdad this afternoon."

"Wonderful man! The magic carpet of Ronnie al-Rashid."

From time to time, as they reached an elevation, he turned in his saddle to look backward. But there were no signs of immediate pursuit. Evidently the death of Hassan Isar had put a temporary damper on their warlike operations.

"But if they are so many, aren't you men afraid?"

"The Anazeh don't often cross the line of the Jebel Hauran. We have already taught them several lessons."

Rosy signals had already been sent up from the horizon before Jebel Hauran showed its exact proportions—a great hill aspiring to be a mountain rising out of a grove of palm trees. Men came reconnoitering. El Kerak's men, she found, and in half an hour they were in an encampment very like Hassan's but much larger and set in a cleft of the mountain which had grown bigger as they approached it and commanded a view in all directions. Here, she realized at once, were the headquarters of El Kerak, Ronald Barker's home in the desert, for there seemed to be an air of permanence in the setup of the tents.

He made her lie in a hammock outside his tent while he saw to the preparation of the plane for immediate departure. And then breakfast—a solid breakfast of eggs, native bread made into toast, and coffee. "Are you still game?" he asked her. "Or hadn't I better send you back to Beirut with some of my men?"

She grinned at him. "If I wouldn't go before when you asked me, why should I go now? As a good sportsman—"

"You want to be in at the death? Right! It's your hunt now as well as mine."

Ronnie had decided to take Yusuf with them and he entered the cockpit full of joy at the venture.

Camilla realized as they climbed the air that she had been less with Ronnie than with Hassan, and that here at last was Ronnie, and she had always thought of him, whether she was with him or not, sure, determined, cool, commanding, no longer the fantastic creature of the many disguises but a real individual of flesh and blood, to whom, in spirit as well as fact she had given all her friendship and all her affection. There had never been any other. With Ronnie beside her, that purposeful look in his eyes, it was Hassan who was now fantastic and unreal. She had wept a tear or two as she remembered his many kindnesses, but had dried them quickly when she remembered what had happened last night.

One event followed another so quickly that the remainder of her pilgrimage to Bagdad, beginning with the exaltation of her swift flight in Ronnie's plane was more like fancy than reality. And as she tried to remember what had happened, she saw a series of pictures, recalled a series of conversations, like the shifting colors of a kaleidoscope. The Syrian desert, unrolling like a tapestry beneath them, thrilling her with an alarming sense of the spaciousness of the earth, an infinite variety of patches of green that were oases; other patches, like black spots, that were the tents of the Bedouins; crawling worms of caravans that twisted and turned among the hillocks.

It seemed only a moment before the four tall minarets and the dome of the Kazernain came into sight against the distant background of the city, a shorter while again, before the nose of the plane tilted down and the earth seemed to come up to meet them with alarming rapidity.

"There's Kutah near-by, Camilla."

There wasn't much time to spare and having discovered that the two ancient men were alone in the house, Ronnie quickly pushed Osman Khali down upon the divan . . .

and here is where we land."

He did it skillfully in a flat place alongside the river which seemed to be a landing field. A few thank-you-ma'ams rather joyous than dangerous, and the plane taxied to a stop. Then, after one deep breath, as if in relief, it was silent.

The pictures became very definite now—mud houses and a plane or two under a roof of thatch, Yusuf getting out with Ronnie and talking to a man who seemed to be in charge of the place.

She remembered that Ronnie said something that made the keeper of the airport begin salaaming at once, and then, when Ronnie gave him money, led them around the huts to a dilapidated car of an early vintage in which Ronnie presently drove them along a good road toward a grove of orange trees which surrounded a house on a hill. There was a pretty little garden at the side where a man in white was sitting in a camp chair under the trees. When Ronnie came up the path with Camilla, mentioning the name of Gertrude Bell, the man in the camp chair seemed to uncoil himself and attain a great height, making salutations like a dancing cobra. He was well over six feet and his face was black with age, his beard scarlet with the stains of henna, while on his head a great green turban framed his head majestically like a crown. With the name of Gertrude Bell still upon his lips, he gave Camilla a toothless smile and led the way into a room where another man sat reading and smoking a narghile.

He was a little man with a round pot-belly, a scraggly gray beard, and watery eyes set in pouches of purplish flesh, partially concealed by spectacles which rested lightly on his little pointed hooked nose. He relinquished his water pipe with evident regret and rose salaaming to Camilla while Ahmal made the introductions.

This insignificant person, she found, was Osman Khali, the man whom all the trouble was about, the only true descendant of the Prophet, with a pure line, the mufti of Jerusalem, the symbol of the Moslem faith, and the leader of modern thought throughout the eastern world.

There wasn't much time to spare and, having discovered that the two ancient men were alone in the house, Ronnie quickly pushed Osman Khali down upon the divan and wrapped his head in his white robe in which he gasped and sputtered ineffectually while his hands clawed vacancy. The Saied Ahmal, taken completely by surprise, stared helplessly at Osman and Ronnie and didn't awake to the necessities of the situation until Yusuf, who had been waiting for this moment, had blocked the doorway. But the old man was game and struck at Yusuf with his bony fist, then, at the sight of a pistol sank feebly beside Osman on the divan.

"It's really a pity," Ronnie said, as he tied Osman's arms with a rope that Yusuf had brought, then tied the arms and legs of Ahmal, "for they are two very respectable old gentlemen."

By this time Osman was stricken with terror at the sight of Yusuf's gun and gave them no trouble whatever, yielding to Ronnie's persuasions as his hands were tied behind him. They needed his legs for purposes of locomotion.

"We are very sorry, Affandi," Ronnie said quietly, "that it was necessary for us to make this visit, but the presence of Osman Khali is most earnestly demanded in Jerusalem. If he gives us no trouble he will be treated with the utmost respect and consideration. As for yourself, Saied Ahmal, you will doubtless be released before we have been gone more than a few moments."

He thought it too ironical to wish that Allah be with them and so he merely bowed and walked out of the room with Camilla, peering before them for signs of enemies, while Yusuf came leading the descendant of the Prophet to the car. No one was in sight at the moment and Osman was so terrified at the sight of Yusuf's gun poking at his ribs that he sat quite peacefully while Ronnie drove away.

"I'm not much used to hijacking," Camilla gasped feebly. "What will happen when we get to the landing field?"

"That," Ronnie said, "is in the lap of the gods."

"But suppose," she insisted, "that the man there tries to prevent our flying away?"

"That might create a difficult situation," he replied calmly. "But there's always a way out."

As they sped back toward the landing field they were aware of a commotion from the garden where Ahmal, who had succeeded in releasing himself, was yelling and waving his arms so that his robes flapped in the air like the wings of some gigantic bird. The noise that he made was extraordinary and they saw people come running out of the fields from all directions.

Ronnie drove out on the flying field near his plane and helped Osman and Camilla up into the cabin. By this time the cries of Ahmal and his friends had reached the flying port and its keeper came running out to see what the noise was all about. As the plane began to move, a suspicion of what was happening seemed to come to him, for he rushed out and took hold of the wing of the plane. But when Yusuf fired a shot past his head, he relinquished his hold, stumbled, and fell into the sand. The plane gathered momentum and before Ahmal could reach them they were already off the ground and clearing the huts and palm trees. Shots were fired but Ronnie only laughed while he gave his plane the "gun," soared over the minarets of Kazernain, and squared away for the West.

He was afraid to stop at Hit for he knew the wireless would soon be busy and Moslem planes searching the sky. So, after a satisfactory glance at his gauges, he made directly west for Jebel Hauran. According to Ronnie, the party was not to be a complete success until the descendant of the Prophet could be securely placed behind bars in a British prison where no one would know his identity.

And so Camilla's pilgrimage successfully ended. They stopped at the camp of Jebel Hauran for a short rest and sleep and then they took off again for the distant mountains to the West where in a few hours she would be in touch with Josie and her friends in America.

"Is it to be Jerusalem?" she asked.

He nodded. "Jerusalem and then perhaps the fortress at Acre. My job's done. The camp at Jebel Hauran is to be broken up before the Anazeh can sweep down upon it. Elek Kerak, the sheik and robber baron, passes out of the picture and becomes again the name of a village. Syria will see me no more. I'll fold my tents like the Arabs and silently steal away."

"The death of Hassan Isar will make a commotion?"

"Naturally. I won't be coming east of the Lebanon for a while unless I find another identity. I'm afraid my usefulness for England in the East is gone."

"I suppose you'll think I'm selfish when I say I'm glad."

His glance questioned. "Just that there are other purposes, other utilities for a man of your talents, I might say another identity—"

"What?"

"Why not your own? Hasn't it occurred to you that you've taken enough risks for England—that you've a right to become Ronald Barker himself, a man with two countries instead of a man without one?"

"It would be safer for a while," he said quietly, as he watched the saw-tooth peaks of the mountains of Moab come out of the haze and beyond them the sea that showed the way to his country and to hers.

Report Of H. A. Collins Continued

July 30—We spent the morning looking the town of Edmonton over. It is the capital of Alberta, Canada, and a fine town of 92,000 population. As the paved road stops here going north, we turned west and drove 203 miles over some sorry country. Rough rolling timber country thinly settled and a lonesome place. Stopped at a gas station for gas and I told the lady that waited on us that this was a wild looking place, and she said yes. She said:

There was no justice in this land. I just got a divorce from my old man and I laughed and laughed at the courts decision. They gave him the children and they weren't his.

July 31—We drove 183 miles today—about 150 miles in one of Canada's parks. Saw some of the prettiest scenery I ever saw. Seen several deer and Moose. I never saw a crop yesterday. I never saw a Texas car yesterday. We spent the night in Golden, B. C., a lumber center. It has a saw mill that works 1000 men. It is cold here and we have been sleeping under wool blankets. What farm land we have seen in Canada ranged in price from $10 to $40. per acre, but I don't want any of it. The snow falls here in October and stays till May. I have paid as high as 41c per gallon for gas, and 15c for milk, but they give five quarts to the gallon.

August 1—We drove 194 miles today in the Rocky Mountains, all the livestock we saw was one cow and one calf, and two horses and not more than 5 or 6 houses where anybody lived. Saw one car from Texas. I put on my long handle underwear this morning and if I get as cold tonight as I did last night, I will buy me some wool clothes tomorrow. Drove 21 miles and missed my pocket book. It didn't take me long to drive back that 21 miles. They hadn't cleaned our room up and my pocket book was still under my pillow asleep.

August 2—Drove 140 miles today and stayed all night at Revelstoke. Drove up on a mountain 16 miles high the way we went. Picked huckleberries and blueberries. They said they were good to eat so we ate some but they tasted sharp. We drove by some nice orchards today and bought some fine apples and found land priced at $125 per acre, but was short distance and back into the mountains again stopped at Kamloops for the night.

August 3—We drove 111 miles today right down between two mountains just room enough for the highway and two railroads. Very little paved roads in Canada that we have not seen but train services is good. The people in this part don't have many cars. The people where we are tonight are Indians and Chinese, but they have a nice little town and two railroads.

August 4—We did not drive today we stopped for a day's rest. We have been in the mountains for five days and these roads are a strain on the nerve as well as the eye. Twenty or twenty-five miles per hour is good driving over these roads. They are worse than the road up Pike's Peak. We have seventy more miles mountain road to travel.

August 5—We drove 167 miles today and 60 miles was the crooked mountain road I ever saw and big high mountains on both sides. Found some rocks that had slide off of the mountains, I drove on one and busted a hole in my gas tank I could run my fist thru. It is so cool here the flies don't bother and there are very few screens used here. Haven't any watermelon stands on the road. We saw some little stands on the road side and stopped to see what they were selling and they were selling buttermilk and doughnuts. The buttermilk was fine but the doughnuts had holes in them. We stopped in a different spot tonight, raw land was selling for about $900. per acre. Chicken ranch and truck patch.

Aug. 6—We drove 88 miles today spent most of the day looking over Vancouver, B. C. Canada. One of the prettiest towns I ever saw. Has 30,000 population and pretty flowers, they grow them here.

August 7—We drove 267 miles today, drove over Seattle, Washington, a town of 51,000 population. The aviation plant looked like they were getting plenty of airplanes built for anything that might happen. We stopped in Astor Oregon for the night. The highway between Seattle and Olenphia, 114 miles was a 4 and six drive highway and most of the highways that crossed it was built up over it so you can imagine how much traffic there was on the road. We drove thru Fort Lewis and there were miles and miles of soldier boys in camp there. The black berries are ripe and plenty of them on both sides of the road. I picked a big pan full yesterday in fifteen minutes in the bar pit. They are wild and growing everywhere.

August 8—We drove 161 miles today. You can tell we are finding plenty to look at by the distance we are traveling each day. We are in Oregon on the coast and we visited an acquirium, a place where you can see fish that stays on the bottom of the sea. It is so cool I wore my coat all day. The cabin we are in isn't screened and we haven't seen a fly. We haven't seen a Texas car today.

August 9—We drove 237 miles today stopped over in California a few miles. We stopped today and visited a cave of sea lions, the largest in America. We saw about 250 all sizes. They said the largest weighed about 4300 lbs. I asked the guide if they were used for anything and he said no, but the Indians killed them and cooked the oil out of them a long time ago, and sold it to the saw mill for lube oil.

August 10—We drove 192 miles today visited a museum and saw some very old things. Saw the first gun that used powder, they said it was used in 1500. Saw 12 head of elks on the road. Saw the only place in the United States where they catch and butcher whales. They had just killed one and cut it up when we got there. Some of the whales have a heart that weighs as high as 500 lbs. and livers that weigh as high as 1500.

Wheat Growers To Vote On National Referendum

Lamb County wheat growers will vote in a national referendum before June 10, 1942, to determine whether or not they want to continue marketing quotas, according to Aubrey M. Bingham, secretary of the Lamb County AAA committee.

The announcement, which was made several days ago by Secretary of Agriculture Claude B. Wickard, gives farmers sufficient time to plan their 1942 plantings.

According to the AAA Act, a proclamation must be made prior to May 15 of any marketing year when it appears the wheat supply will exceed a normal year's domestic consumption and exports by more than 35 percent. The referendum must be approved by two-thirds of the farmers voting before quotas are in effect for that year's crop.

"The carry-over we will have on hand July 1, 1942, will be one of the largest on record since our exports have been reduced and we are harvesting an above-normal yield this year", the AAA official explained.

Wheat quotas, in effect for the first time this year, were approved recently by 94 percent vote in Texas. Lamb County wheat growers approved quotas by 94.6 percent favorable vote.

Since marketing quotas protect loan collateral, a government loan would not be made on the 1942 crop if quotas were voted down. Loans at 85 percent of parity are in effect on the 1941 crop because quotas were approved.

The purpose of wheat marketing quotas is to divide a limited wheat market equally among producers. Farmers planting within their allotments are called upon to adjust marketings.

The marketing penalty on excess wheat this year amounts to 50 percent of the basic loan rate. Since the national average loan rate is 98 cents, the penalty on excess wheat is 49 cents.

"Uncle Joe" as he was affectionately called by his friends, was born in Amite County, Mississippi, October 8, 1861 and was married to Miss Nancy Eudora Smith March 4, 1880. They moved to Throckmorton, Texas, in December 1880, where they lived until the death of Mrs. Newman August 27, 1935.

Twelve children were born to this union, five of whom preceded their parents in death. Surviving are Mrs. T. Fife, Aubrey D. and Grady W. Newman of Sudan, B. F. Newman and Mrs. Geo. Williams of Thornton, Mrs. Arthur Sheppard of Liberty Hill and S. T. Newman of Ralls.

He is survived by three brothers, W. M. Newman of Liberty, Miss., J. S. Newman of Mart and Rev. J. C. Newman of Mexia. Also he leaves 19 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Mr. Newman joined the Baptist Church early in life and was a deacon in the church for many years.

Thomas J. McFarland Is Now Attached To Asiatic Fleet

Thomas J. McFarland, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. McFarland of this city, is now attached to the Asiatic Fleet, and has already sailed to the Far Eastern Waters, according to a special release sent this newspaper.

Mr. McFarland is 24 years of age; enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps on June 1, last, at Dallas, and has completed his recruit training. The last week of this basic training was spent at the rifle range, where his qualifications were marked with both pistol and rifle, and expert with the bayonet.

After graduating from the Drummond High School, Private McFarland attended the Central State College of Oklahoma where he studied drama and radio production and with his hobby of fishing and hunting there was little time for other pleasures, but what leisure time he could spare was spent in writing.

Private McFarland has hopes of getting an appointment to Officers Training School when he has become eligible for such appointment. In the meantime he says, "My time will be devoted to becoming a good Marine which I realize is a job itself, but must be accomplished if I am to become an officer."

Government Cotton Stamps Distributed

Government Cotton Stamps went into circulation this week among farmers in Lamb County who reduced cotton production this year, and the farmers will have a great part in the cotton consumption program.

Approximately $40,000 in cotton stamps have been distributed to Lamb County farmers, V. F. Jones, county agent reported. Maximum in stamps that are being issued for any one farm is $25.

Merchants in the county are cooperating with the Agricultural committee, and are receiving benefits from the cotton stamp program.

The importance of the program to farmers and merchants was summed up by Jones this way: The farmer obtains the stamps and is able immediately to buy goods for which he would have to pay a higher price later. The merchant is able to relieve his shelves of more cotton goods and place more orders for goods. The consumption of cotton is increased, and benefits this area, an important cotton producing area.

"The quicker the farmer buys cotton goods the more value he will get from his stamps", the county agent continued, "for $25 in stamps now will buy more goods than it will 10 days from now or 20 days from now." Goods are increasing in price.

EXTRA SPECIAL Two-Row Binder News

We have been promised, but cannot guarantee, delivery on ten standard two-row corn binders. This is the type used in the Middle West and differs from the type we have been using in that it has an extra packer and ties the bundle further from the butt. In our opinion it is an excellent machine for the tall feed that we have this year.

Three of these machines have been booked already. We are ready to accept orders, with no guarantee of delivery, on the remaining seven binders subject to your cancellation if not satisfied with the machines on arrival and subsequent inspection.

It is our candid opinion that every machine will be sold before the arrival of the car.

Citizens Should Take Advantage Of Local Cannery

An urgent plea is made to people of Littlefield and surrounding communities who would like to can food for winter storage, to avail themselves of the use of the cannery.

According to government regulations the person who furnishes the produce furnishes his own containers and gets sixty per cent of the produce. Those who do the work furnish their own containers, and receive twenty-five per cent of the produce. The remaining fifteen per cent is turned over to the local welfare office for distribution to the needy during the winter.

Mrs. J. D. Dodger, superintendent of the cannery, states that in the face of prospective advances in grocery prices, it will be to the advantage of Littlefield citizenry to take this opportunity of helping themselves by storing up vegetables and fruits for the winter food supply.

Weeds And Grass Are Mowed On Local Golf Course

Golf players can at least find their golf balls on the Littlefield Golf Course, for the weeds have been cut, and the greens have been mowed, E. C. Cundiff, secretary of the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce, and one of the best golf players in town, reported Wednesday.

Since the numerous rains the past several months, the weeds and grass had grown so high that players had difficulty in keeping track of their balls; but Mr. Cundiff stated that they would have better luck now.

W. D. (Windy) Watkins still holds the honor for making the only hole-in-one on the local golf course.

VOLUME XIX LITTLEFIELD, LAMB COUNTY, TEXAS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1941 NUMBER 21

Nov. 30, 1941 Closing Date for Wheat Allotments

E. Bentley, chairman of the County AAA Committee, has advised by the state office that the closing date for accepting requests for 1942 grower wheat allotments, for farmers who have not planted any wheat for harvest during 1939, 1940 and 1941, but desire to plant wheat for the first time in 1942, is considered new growers. The allotment which new growers will receive is taken from a county reserve which in most cases, represents approximately 3 percent of the county allotment.

Farms receiving wheat acreage allotments for the first time this year, regardless of the size of the allotment, will be classified as non-allotment farms. Regulations also provide that the larger of the wheat allotment or 15 acres may be harvested without incurring deductions. Non-allotment farms will be eligible for either conservation or parity payments, but in case of wheat quotas are in effect loans may be made on that portion of the allotment in excess of the farm market quota.

Requests for new grower allotments should be filed in the county

Parents Should Spend More In Protecting The Eyes Of Their Children

Modern Life Increases Visual Tasks, Bringing Greater Need For Conservation efforts By Dr. B. W. Armistead

Each fall, mothers of this country spend approximately one billion dollars for clothing and other needs for their youngsters in preparation for their return to school, yet less than one percent (1%) of that billion dollars is spent for conserving the children's eyes—the most precious possession that they will ever have. A boy will have a fine suit, a girl a pretty dress, goes to school with neglected eyes. The average family spends more money a year on chewing gum than it does on conserving the eyes of its children, although vision is precious beyond price.

Children should be taught to develop good visual habits. Adequate lighting should illuminate without glare, and should be held at the proper angle before the eyes and at the proper distance in front of the eyes. Children should not read too long, especially when tired. Nor should they be permitted to read when slouched on the floor or the bed. With vision as with other things, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. If examination of a child's eyes shows that they are normal, they should be kept so. A good time to have a child's eyes examined is in the fall before he returns to school. At that time a mother looks over her child's wardrobe, for she knows that good clothes give the child confidence when school opens. Good eyes, however, are more important to the child than are good clothes.

If your children and my children are to grow up into happy people and useful citizens, their vision must be protected. They require, first of all, foods containing adequate vitamins essential for eye protection. Scientists tell us that to be healthy, eyes need ample vitamins. Lighting and other seeing conditions in the home and in the school should be adequate to ease the work of the eyes. Children should be taught the importance of caring for and protecting their eyes. Proper reading habits should be inculcated. And finally, there should be occasional trips to the Optometrist for a check-up. Eyes of children frequently change rapidly. Early detection of visual defects will permit their correction before serious impairment of vision takes place.

We owe it to our children to guide them along the path of eyesight conservation. Too many eyes are failing prematurely because of neglect by parents. Vision is a priceless heritage of the child. If it is impaired it may affect his entire life. Have you had your child's eyes examined and are you sure he is ready for another year of visual work in school? Vision is closely related to the physical, mental, and spiritual welfare of a child. His eyes should be right. It is the duty of a parent to see that they are right.

"Bride Came C.O.D." With Jas. Cagney And Bette Davis Featured at Palace

It's a laugh hit at the Palace! Living up to the intriguing promise of its exciting star combination, "The Bride Came C. O. D." with James Cagney and Bette Davis, easily walks away with top comedy honors.

The two stars have pooled their considerable talents to make "The Bride Came C.O.D.", hilarious entertainment. Cagney who had some practice in his recent hit "Strawberry Blonde", approaches his comedy role with an effortless savior faire that is a joy to behold. As for Miss Davis, playing her first light role in several years, she proves that comedy is just as much her forte as drama.

Briefly outlined, the plot concerns itself with a spoiled young debutante who becomes engaged to a band leader, planning to elope, they hire a taxi plane to take them to Las Vegas. The pilot, however, decides he can make more money by delivering the bride C.O.D. and unmarried to her father, who opposes the union. He captures the bride and flies off with her, but they are grounded in the desert. They find shelter in a nearby ghost town, populated solely by a philosophical old inn-keeper. From then on, it is a tug of war between the heiress and the aviator—with the girl trying to get back to civilization and her fiance, the man trying to keep her until he gets his plane fixed and deliver her to her father. During the battle they reluctantly fall in love with each other. The climax is refreshingly different and we won't spoil it by giving it away.

Feature "Tom, Dick And Harry" Comes To Ritz This Week End

A case of mistaken identity that catapults an imaginative little working girl into hilarious romantic entanglements provides the sprightly basis of Ginger Rogers' current starring film, "Tom, Dick and Harry." George Murphy, Alan Marshall and Burgess Meredith enact the title roles which comes to the Ritz Theatre Saturday midnight, Sunday and Monday.

The gay story presents the lovely star as a romantic telephone girl who has a steady boy friend. Her real "secret passion" however is a young scion of wealth who drives a swanky car, but whom she has never seen. She meets a good-looking garage mechanic who immediately asks for a date. Before the evening is over they are engaged.

With two affiances to her credit, the romantic young lady chalks up a third when she ultimately does meet the man of her dreams and carried away by his charms, happily accepts his proposal.

Mrs. Herbert Martin attended a luncheon as the guest of Mrs. Robert Kirk in Olton Monday.

SON BORN TO MR. AND MRS. FRANK HUNT AT ELECTRA

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hemphill have received an announcement of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hunt of Electra on August 15. The young man weighed eight and one-half pounds and has been named Frank Ross Jr.

His mother was the former Miss Dahlia Hemphill of this city.

BARN BURNS

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a barn at the H. A. Bledsoe farm, six miles northwest of Olton, early Wednesday afternoon of last week. Mr. Bledsoe had come from the field, put his tractor in the barn and had gone into the house to eat dinner. He had been in the house not more than 30 minutes when the fire was discovered. The fire had already burned through the north wall of the barn when discovered.

The tractor and two trailers were in the hallway of the barn. In getting these out, Mr. Bledsoe received painful, though not severe burns on his hands.

The barn and about 100 bushels of wheat were the main loss. Other losses included forks, lister bottoms and parts of a feed mill; and a few articles belonging to A. B. Cogdill who formerly owned the place.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Henderson and Mesdames Jennie Parker, Katie Green, and Ewing C. Thaxton, left Sunday for a two week's vacation. They will visit various points in California before their return here about Sept. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Moore and son, L. S., of Joshua visited their daughter and sister Ida Mae Moore, Monday night. Mrs. Moore and son were enroute home after a visit with relatives in New Mexico.

The SNOOPER SAYS . . .

The month of August usually means that it's time to have a family reunion, and church revivals.

Littlefield citizens are becoming more "Art" minded, and proof of this statement is the organization of an art class, which is held each Friday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arbie Joplin.

Mrs. Cecile Foster of Sudan, who has taught art for several years, and is widely known for her beautiful paintings and sketches, is instructor of the class.

Those in the class last Friday morning were; Mrs. Joe Krizek, Mrs. I. T. Shotwell, Sr., Mrs. Ewing Thaxton, and Mrs. Cal Harvey, and Miss Marjorie Clair Joplin.

Mrs. W. G. Street is "thinking about" joining the class, and others interested, are urged to let Mrs. Joplin know.

Lost—Borrowed—or Stolen— one "Sunday pair" of shoes, by a very prominent young woman of Littlefield, at the Palace Theatre, when she attended a show recently.

The young woman was relaxing as she witnessed the picture, and she took off her slippers to rest her feet, (as many of us do when we go to the movies). When the picture reached the place where she came in, she had to leave without her shoes, for they were no longer on the floor by her seat. Ushers assisted in looking for the shoes, but they were not there, and they didn't find them after everyone left the theatre.

To say the young lady was embarrassed is putting it mildly, as she walked from the theatre in her stocking feet!

Moral: If you remove your shoes in the theatre, be sure to keep at least one hand on the heels of them.

Latest Fashion Note: Miss Mary Eleanor Wiseman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Wiseman, received an abandoned parachute from her boy friend who is in Uncle Sam's air corps, for a birthday present. She made an evening dress from the parachute that is quite a novelty. Miss Wiseman has been attending college in San Antonio.

Several old-timers enjoyed recalling the days "way back when" there were only a very few stores on the main street in Littlefield, one day last week, when Thomas Darnell of Des Moines, Iowa, told of his first visit here in 1923.

Mr. and Mrs. Darnell visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. (Pop) Smith of one mile east of Littlefield, last week.

Mr. Smith arrived in this section before there was a town, back in 1910, and he was among the first real estate agents here. He owned the first tractor in this county, too.

Jim Douglass, who came here while he was still wearing knee trousers, John Kling (1912), Clyde Willis, and Mr. Darnell told some "tall tales" about those early days, and I am willing to bet that most of those "tall tales" were true!

Mrs. Darnell is the former Miss Helen Smith who grew up with Mrs. W. H. Rutledge and Mrs. Arbie Joplin.

Did you know? Cotton men here predict the 1941 crop will make approximately 60,000 bales, based on present conditions. They estimate a 30 per cent increase over the 1940 crop.

Among those "missing" about town are Mr. and Mrs. Orien Dennis, and children, who recently moved to Sundown where he will assume duties as principal of the high school. They are building a new house there, too.

Captain Eula Trummell, of the local Salvation Army Corps, for she has been transferred to San Angelo, after service in Littlefield since 1935.

J. E. Chisholm Jr. off main street, since he moved his florist shop to his brand new building out on East Fifth street, where he has a large new greenhouse.

We've been missing Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Melver for at least two months now, since they moved to Brownfield.

I've mentioned this before . . . But I'm determined to learn to write sports stories!

Someone reminded me that there is no room on a sports page for skirts . . . All Right . . . I'll get me a pair of boots and some trousers!

I only wish I could have played football in high school, as I would know more about the game, and be more capable of writing football stories. But, with the assistance of Coach Murphy, I'm trying it again this fall.

I'll have to watch those stories, though, for it will be hard to keep my mind on the football game, when I write society notes, personals, funerals, civic improvements, etc., and I'll try to keep my fingers crossed and keep these sports stories from sounding like a Boston Tea Party.

Some great man said that a person can do almost anything he makes up his mind to do.

In an article published in a current magazine Jimmie Stewart wrote of his Life In The Army. Many of us can not imagine the stalwart young man who thrilled the hearts of thousands of people in the movies for several years, now shouldering a gun.

But he writes, "All I know is that right now I'm cast in the greatest show on earth. And whatever I do, I have a hunch I'll be playing the part of my life!"

Well, Goodbye, Now. MARGIE.
