Don Bryant Seeks Office Of Sheriff Of Lamb County

Thanks Those Who Supported Him In Race 4 Years Ago

Don Bryant, who recently instructed the Leader to announce he would be a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Lamb County, issues the following formal announcement to the voters:

"TO THE VOTERS OF LAMB COUNTY: In making my announcement as Sheriff of Lamb County, I want to thank each and every one who made it possible for me to get the splendid vote that I received in the race four years ago, and to you who did not see fit to support me, I regard your decision with the highest esteem, and at this time ask you for a fair consideration of my candidacy.

"Should you see fit to elect me to this office, it will be my desire all times to carry out the problems that go with it to the very best of my ability and to the satisfaction of the people as a whole. As to my qualifications, I believe I had close enough connections with the routine of the office during my administration as County Commissioner to know how to handle the job. Also, I believe I know how to deal with people in a fair and impartial way. I believe that a good officer should be what the name implies, and think it far better to keep the peace rather than have to enforce it.

"Thanking each and every voter in advance for your support,
Sincerely,
DON BRYANT

South Plains Area Visited by Showers

Spotted showers fell over the South Plains the past few days. Friday moisture totalling 7-100ths of an inch with 21-100ths of an inch Sunday, brought the total precipitation for Littlefield to 28 hundredths of an inch. Muleshoe, Amherst and Sudan reported good showers, while Olton, Circle, Spring Lake and Hale Center also reported nice moisture Friday. About a quarter of an inch fell in most sections of the South Plains.

The Leader was proud to receive a letter Monday, dated April 16 from Pvt. Billie Qualla and Pvt. R. W. Stanfield from Australia, which was postmarked American Base Forces A.P.O., 922. These young men are apparently serving together, as Pvt. Qualla's number is 38067609, and Pvt. Stanfield's number is 38067613. Believing this letter is of interest to our many readers and friends of these young men, it is published below:

"April 16, 1942

"Dear Sir:

"Just a line to let you know we have received your paper. We are in Australia and having a large time. We were on the boat days. The first few days we were here we stayed in a town of about a million people. We had a nice time and was welcomed very cordially by all the people. The girls over here think that the American soldier is just the thing. Our meals over here most generally consist of mutton and potatoes for dinner and potatoes and mutton for supper. I don't think that I can ever look a sheep in the eye again. This money over here runs in pounds and shillings. I never know how much I spend, so when I buy something I just hold out my hand and let them take what they want. But I guess we can take it after all, we are fighting with the Aussies and if they can live here all their lives, we can stick it out a few months.

Very Sincerely Yours

Services Of The USO

The USO is made up of leading charitable and service organizations, which worked separately in the last war to give our fighting forces the relaxation and friendship they needed to keep their morale high. The combined efforts of these organizations means that a great deal more can be accomplished through the pooling of funds and energies.

The USO provides clubhouses near army camps and navy posts, with club rooms, shower baths, reading rooms, lectures, typewriters, motion pictures, writing tables, radios, telephones, and countless other services which the boys may feel free to use. LABOR RESERVE

Any shortage of labor in this country is mostly temporary, an analysis of our potential working forces indicates.

Even if we took as many as 10,000,000 men to build our army and navy, there is every reason to assume that our goals for the building of war materials as well as civilian needs could still be attained.

At the outbreak of the war, there were 53 million people in our country's labor forces. In addition, there were three million unemployed, the majority whom could work, as well as a million and a half young men between 17 and 19 who are not working, two million young women of that age who are in school or at home, two million childless women from 20 to 40 now engaged in home duties and an even larger number of women between 40 and 55 who are either childless or whose children are grown up.

Thus, among those not now employed, we have a potential working force of approximately 4,500,000 men and over 6,000,000 women who could be enlisted in war work if necessary.

Actually, however, it is unlikely that the nation will need to call on more than a fraction of these millions, for the greatest number and most experienced war workers will be enlisted from industry itself. With automobile workers no longer able to make automobiles and with the building construction industry practically eliminating its civilian enterprises, millions of men are available for war work from these two groups alone. Then there are the gasoline service men, the garage mechanics and countless other groups who are being practically forced out of business by war curbs but who can be valuable in war work.

The greatest contribution to war work will come from this type of diversion from civilian jobs to war jobs, and it is likely that we can outbuild the enemy and outfarm the enemy with the present labor force. But where scarcities of help develop, it is encouraging to know that we have almost 10,000,000 available workers in re-

WPB STYLED CLOTHES

If a woman is over 5 feet 8 1-2 inches in height in her stocking feet she can strut through the war period in any size dress or coat that she desires, but all other women—"stouts," "teen age," "tots" and "chubbies," are now limited to specific measurements set up by the war production board.

How the war production board, which is usually busy gathering together the steel for battleships and other heavy materials, happened suddenly to get mixed up in the detailed intricacies of women's clothes-making is somewhat of a mystery, although the shortage of wool and silk probably had something to do with it. At any rate, the freezing of style specifications is now so exacting that the dress and coat makers probably can use the government regulations in place of patterns.

The regulations tell exactly how long skirts can be for every size, how much hem is permissible, what sleeve lengths and circumferences must be, how wide and how long slacks can be legal and all other details which concern the amount of material used. Of course, since the government's only concern is in saving material, the regulations govern only maximum amounts of materials that may be used. So, if the dressmakers want to revise styles by making skirts shorter or dresses tighter, they will be able to do so.

The probability is that, in order to be assured of avoiding violations, the dresses and coats will be made at least a trifle smaller than the regulations called for. For there are few men in the dress manufacturing industry who would want to take the chance of being jailed and dubbed a traitor to their country because their dress company made a junior miss, size 9 dress 43 inches long when the law clearly limits the length of this size to 42 7-8 inches.

Erection Planned Of "Airfield Facilities" At Lubbock Field

Contract for the construction of "airfield facilities" at South Plains Army Flying School to be located at Municipal airport has been awarded to Cage Brothers and J. Floyd Malcolm, Abilene Contractors.

The award was "in an amount less than $3,000,000" it was said. Details were forbidden under War Department censorship regulations.

Information at Lubbock, however, was that there is no disparity in the amount mentioned and in the statement from the War department at the time Municipal airport was chosen as the site for the school that it would cost "in excess of $5,000,000."

The contract is one of several let, or to be let, in connection with the construction of the air school. That awarded to Cage Brothers and Malcolm is for the construction of groundwork, such as paving, concrete aprons, extensions of existing runways on Municipal airport and the like.

Still to be let is the contract for building construction. No information has been released as to the number and the kind of buildings. Lesser contracts already let have included those for water wells, electrical installations and part of a sewage system. Names of these contractors and the amounts of the contract awarded have not been announced.

BREAK O'DAY IRON

By Reginald Wright Kauffman

CHAPTER VII

SYNOPSIS

A man identified as Joseph Slinn is found drowned in the Hudson river near Albany, N. Y. Slinn was insured by the Protective Life Insurance company, and his beneficiary is a man named B. B. Twombly who lives in Troy. The company's Albany agent, Carlin, identifies the body, and the insurance money is paid to Twombly. But Jerry Glidden, suspecting that Slinn was murdered, has gone to Ironburg, a little mining town in Pennsylvania, to see an "Angela Slinn." She turns out to be an ugly recluse of a woman who lives in a shack near the abandoned "Break O'Day" iron mine. Rose Walker, granddaughter of the owner of the mine, runs the local store and post office. Jerry goes to Angela's shack, but she denies knowing Joseph Slinn. He is saved by Rose Walker when the ground at the side of the mine pit caves in. They start back to town, and in an old cemetery along the way Jerry finds a tombstone bearing the name "Horace John Twombly." Later, while he is eating dinner at the Rising Sun hotel a man arrives and registers as B. B. Twombly of Portland, Maine.

Did it appear a little labored? Try as he might and did, Jerry could recall few details of the Twombly signature extant among the records of the Protective Life Insurance Company's claim department. He was certain simply of a general resemblance between that hand and this—and of course he was in no position to wife Lightner for a photograph.

Jerry resumed progress with the resolution that had torn him from the peach pie. He would go upstairs and affect what might appear a chance encounter with the newcomer. If the waitress had indeed been overheard and done damage, a trifle of judicious deception might mend matters. Hassler he encountered in the hall.

"Business is booming," said Jerry. "I see I'm not alone in my glory any more."

Hassler nodded solemnly.

"Is Mr. Twombly here for some stay?" Jerry ventured.

"He says he is yet, ef he kin git quiet."

"I heard you mention his initials," Jerry made the best of the chambermaid's indiscretion. "I used to know a man named B. B. Twombly. From the slant I got at this one, I don't believe it's the same, but I thought I'd just run up to his room and mention it. It's quite a coincidence."

Hassler raised a protesting hand. "Please. Not jes' so quick a ready, Mr. Glidden. Let it come later and by luck kind of—down here. Effer since prohibition, my trade's something awful, an' I don't want to lose none."

It was positively a piteous appeal. Jerry acquiesced. He sought the hotel porch, which was comfortable, and invested in one of the Rising Sun's cigars, which weren't.

B. B. Twombly! What if the furtive fellow did register from Portland? When Maine was full of rest resorts, why should a citizen of that state choose far away Pennsylvania for a rest? And utterly unknown Ironburg?

Mere chance for a change of air? Possible—scarcely probable.

Of course, too, there was another change common among men having underhand work to do—change of name. And yet—

A lazy afternoon as observed from this none too shady porch of the now familiar hotel, very. The white turnpike shimmered. In the bordering fields, vegetation shriveled; behind them, the hills swayed in a hot haze. Even the bluebirds were at rest. Flies hummed, of course; now and then the more ambitious bit. Not a car passed—not a cart—never a pedestrian.

The door to Rose's store was open. Should he make his peace with Rose? No, he thought not. She had been sharp. Was doubtless still sore.

Besides, here was this pressing mystery behind him—

According to the rules of every business primer, Glidden's mind should not have begun to wander. Yet it did.

Jerry stretched himself—arose—succumbed. He'd take a hint from Twombly—take a nap. Jerry went in; he went up.

His front room, No. 1, stood exactly across this lateral hall from back room No. 3. The old flooring creaked under his heavy steps—loudly enough, he reflected, to disturb a nervous patient who objected to having the passage swept during his repose.

Nevertheless, as Jerry concluded his journey and ended his noise with his hand on the knob of his own door, he heard another clamor: A tremendous snoring from within B. B. Twombly's apartment.

"He's rattling the roof," thought Jerry.

He turned the knob. But he didn't enter. He was waking up now, was Jerry.

"Why didn't I hear that sooner? It sounds almost overdone. I believe it is."

This game wasn't necessarily solitary; two could play it. Jerry tore open the door of No. 1, then

"So it's you, Miss Slinn! You're looking so blooming."

banged it shut. But he didn't go inside; instead, he remained there in the hall, still gripping the knob.

He listened. For as much as a minute, those snores continued. No longer. They stopped, not in a general explosive convulsion such as marks the climax of a genuine snorer's somnolence; they just stopped.

Still Jerry listened. Soon he heard the groan of slats. A plump body was turning over in an old fashioned bed—or rising from it.

Came another and more stealthy movement. Glidden banged his door again as if, having hurried to his room for some forgotten object, he was now as hurriedly—and as carelessly—quitting it.

He looked quickly over his shoulder. Mr. Twombly, of Portland, had emerged into the hall, and he was fully dressed.

"I beg your pardon," said Jerry. Twombly's pasty face flushed.

He snorted; he tried to turn back, but Glidden was spouting speech—had even advanced the three yards' width of the halls.

"Oh!" the younger man appraised the elder's costume, which was no more than a little wrinkled. "I thought perhaps I'd wakened you. The proprietor told me you were all in and sleeping it off, but I see," lied Jerry, "you haven't been."

"I was," retorted Twombly in that shrill voice which Jerry had before remarked, unnecessarily emphatic.

The alleged Portlander began to back. Jerry had sold insurance in his day and was not easily dismissed. He had here found out something of what he wanted to discover, but just enough to whet his already sharpened appetite; moreover, there was that delayed explanation to be attempted. He didn't a bit mind playing the cheerful idiot; he followed.

"Then I do apologize. It must have been hot, though, with all your clothes on."

"Yes. I opened the door to get a draft." The disturbed sleeper stopped in his retreat, barring ingress.

"There'd be less noise and as much cool if you kept the door shut and undressed."

"Well, well," Twombly achieved a smile—"I'll try it."

This was dismissal. Said Jerry: "One little thing more, Mr. Twombly, if you don't mind. I think your initials are B. B., aren't they?"

Those narrow eyes narrowed further. "What of it?"

"Just a queer coincidence I used to know a man named that."

"Where?"

Had the waitress been overheard? There was no telling; but the manner in which the demand was snapped made Jerry divert a trifle from the yarn he had spun to the waitress. He wanted to allay possible mistrust, not create any.

"In Trenton, N. J."

"That couldn't have been any relative of mine."

"No? He was such a fine fellow."

Jerry grinned, "that I thought he might be some relation of yours—hoped so, anyway."

"Thanks, but that must be another tribe of Twomblys. My grandfather was Pennsylvania stock, and he took the family to Troy."

"Living in Portland, aren't you?"

"I moved my office a few days ago."

Twombly said no more. Jerry could think of only one thing more to say:

"So that's that. And you still feel like resting? I'm just going for a walk into Americus; it might do you good to come along."

"I don't believe so," replied the recipient of this invitation, shaking his red head. "I've been overworking, and my doctors advised against too much exercise."

"Well, I am sorry I bothered you, though."

"Never mind."

The later arrival retired and shut himself in. Jerry redescended the stairs.

There was no more sleep left in him, and he must, anyhow, maintain that fiction of having gone to his room on a merely momentary errand—had better, for he might be watched, keep up his bluff by walking into Americus.

As he plodded sweating down the road, he pondered:

"He's the bird, all right. Just the same I can't make it out. Why should that guy lie about taking a beauty sleep and next minute own up to have lived in Troy? And has he shifted to Portland? And why? Move to Portland when you've come into $50,000? I can't make out head or tail of it!"

An hour of walking. And enough. Jerry turned back toward Ironburg.

The recent interview, exactly because it was unsatisfying, provided a stimulant, and Jerry recalled the address of a possibly helpful acquaintance.

"Mart MacDowell!"

If Jerry had never known Twombly of Troy, he did know somebody else lately domiciled there. MacDowell was one of those not uncommon birds of passage who collect prospects for enterprising, and bonus paying insurance companies during their own frequent intervals of leisure between steady jobs. True, as much as a month had elapsed since Martin went there from the P.L.L., yet he might still adorn the collar and shirt city.

Telegraph him then. No telegraph office in Ironburg? No, but Rose ran the public telephone there, so the message could be transmitted to Americus. The plan became especially urgent because it supplied a legitimate excuse for parley with the offended Miss Walker. Jerry jogged to the store.

No Rose, though. He thought there was nobody—until a snarl greeted him from the shadows in the post office corner.

"So it's you, Miss Slinn! You're looking so blooming, I mistook you for the boss."

Angela was seated and didn't get up.

"What do you want here?"

"I'd like to have Miss Walker."

"Well, you can't."

"Then I'll gladly accept you as a charming substitute—and I'm pleased to see you've recovered."

"Hum," said Angie.

"Regained both health and spirits, haven't you?" pursued Jerry.

"All right then, I just want to phone a telegram to Americus. I'm sending a report to my firm on that genealogy book I told you about."

Angie looked at him keenly. She pointed to the wall where an open telephone hung.

"Haven't you a booth?"

"No."

"Perhaps there's a 'phone over at the hotel."

"They cut it off. Hassler hasn't enough custom to make it pay."

"Oh!" Jerry didn't well conceal his disappointment.

The woman got heavily up. "Well look here; if you don't want me to hear what you're going to say, I'll get out while you're saying it."

He thumbed the directory until her squat figure lumbered through the door—kept on thumbing it until he saw her in the road.

Thereupon he gave his entire regard to the telephone; he was compelled to, for the exchange girl at Americus audibly engaged in a flirtation with some more favored customer, and the Americus telegraph operator proved so dullwitted as to require two repetitions of his message.

ASKS PROTECTION OF INSURANCE RIGHTS OF WORKERS

Two proposed amendments affecting workers who have entered the armed forces and civilian employees of the United States Government have been recommended to Congress by the Social Security Board, according to a statement made by John D. Palmer, manager of the Lubbock office of the Social Security Board.

"The first of these two proposals," Palmer said, "Calls for the protection of the insurance rights of workers entering the armed services of our Nation. This may be accomplished according to the Board's idea by the 'freezing' of a worker's insurance benefits as of the date of his entry into the armed service. Another plan would be to extend the coverage of old-age and survivors insurance to include employment by the armed forces," Palmer said.

The second proposal which is considered of vital importance to workers applies to civilian workers in the employ of the Government. "While it is true these workers are receiving Civil Service rights, their rights under the old-age survivors insurance system are jeopardized since, under the present law, employment by the Federal Government is not covered. The Board has recommended to Congress that the law be amended to protect the rights of such workers while employed on Government projects.

It was emphasized by Palmer that neither of the above proposals has been acted on by Congress and it is not known when amendments to the Social Security Act will be taken up. "It is our hope," Palmer concluded, "that something will be done regarding these two proposals at an early date since many people are constantly making inquiries regarding them, especially the one affecting the worker who has joined the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps."

Notes From The H. D. Agent's Office

Homemakers canning fruit this year save themselves time and trouble if they do some advanced preparation before applying to their local rationing board for certificates. The questions the housewife will be asked are: How many quarts of fruit did you can last year? How many quarts of fruit do you plan to can this year? How many quarts of last year's fruit do you still have on hand? Another word of advise is: Keep a record of the fruit you can with your rationed sugar because your rationing board will ask for it when you apply for more sugar. Answering these questions will be relatively simple for the thousands of rural homemakers who have kept records and filled food preservation budgets as recommended by Home Demonstration Club women. Rural homemakers may stretch their sugar allowances by using thinner syrups for canning fruits and fruit juices and by using corn syrup or honey as substitutes in canning recipes. The homemaker should remember that saccharine, a coal tar product with an extremely sweet taste, cannot be used in canning because it becomes bitter when heated. Rationing regulations as they apply to sugar for canning are: You will get one pound of sugar for every four quart of finished fruit you are putting up, and you may can as much fruit as your family needs. You may have an additional pound of sugar for each person in your family to make a small supply of jam, jellies, and fruit butters.

SUGAR SUBSTITUTES IN BAKING AT HIGH ALTITUDE

The county home demonstration agent should like to again submit recipes to match the sugar ration. Plain Standard Cake With Honey 1/2 c medium thick honey 2 eggs 1 t baking powder 4 T Sugar 6 T milk 1 1-4 c Cake flour (measure after sifting once) 4 T butter 1-4 T Salt Cream the butter. Add sugar gradually while creaming. Beat in the egg yolks one at a time. Add the honey to the milk and stir well. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add about 3 t flour mixture, beat well, then add the milk and honey mixture alternately with the remaining dry ingredients, beating well after each addition. Lastly fold in the beaten egg whites. Bake in a sheet pan 11 in. x 7 in. which has been lined with greased waxed paper. Bake at 350 degrees F. Extract may be omitted as honey gives a distinct flavor to cakes. Let it stand in pan 15 minutes before removing. To substitute all honey in the above recipe: omit the sugar and use 3-4 cup of honey and reduce the milk to 1-4 cup. To mix: cream butter; add egg yolk one at a time and beat well. Mix honey with milk and add alternately with the sifted flour and baking powder as noted above. Standard Cake With Corn Syrup 2 1-4 c cake flour 1/2 c fat 1 t vanilla extract 1 1/2 t baking powder 1-3 c plus 1 t milk 1 t lemon extract 2 eggs 1-4 t salt 3-4 c corn syrup Sift dry ingredients three times. Cream fat, beat in syrup gradually until fluffy. An electric mixer, Dover beater or a spoon may be used for this. Add 1-4 of flour mixture and beat until blended, add eggs, one at a time, and beat in after each addition. Add flavoring. Bake in two layer pans lined with greased waxed paper. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 25 to 30 minutes or until done. Use orange or chocolate filling between layers and frosting on top and sides. Use when freshly baked as it dries out speedily. Variations: Spice cake—Add 1 1-4 t cinnamon, 1 t nutmeg, and 1-4 t cloves sifted with the flour. Omit vanilla and lemon extract.

ment within the camps and naval stations, free to the men, and using top-flight entertainers and bands. To the men serving on detached duty, the USO is especially valuable for it offers them mail services, refreshments, movies, and small games. If the troops are on maneuvers, they may be sure of finding writing materials, emergency sleeping accommodations, showers, and hospitality in homes if they but call at the USO center. The USO offers reading and writing materials, coffee and cookies, and friendly personal services to troops in transit. To members of the armed forces who are on leave, and traveling, it offers countless services over the country. The same services are rendered to those civilians who are traveling to and from army camps or naval posts. The work of the USO does not end in serving the armed forces, for it also works in overcrowded and overburdened war industry towns in helping keep workers fit to supply the armed forces.

AS AMERICAN AS OUR FLAG... No institution could be more truly American than the USO for it is a great help to our armed forces which are fighting to keep our land free.

In the camps, and in the towns near the camps, the USO has recreation headquarters where the boys may go to relax and enjoy themselves. All over the country the USO offers stationery, magazines, telephone services, and hot coffee to troops moving from camp to camp. On special days it supervises the inviting of boys to private homes for a family dinner. Could any service rendered our boys be greater than this?

Help put the drive for funds for the USO, in Lamb County, over the top this week. Your dimes and dollars will help.

Even The Parachute Troops Need The USO. On land, on sea, and in the air, the services of the USO help to keep our armed forces more content and in a finer spirit by helping them to have places for recreation, a greater fellowship among one another, and by giving a thousand little services that help to cheer them up.

This institution is proud to be of assistance in any way to the USO, for it feels that no finer work is being carried on. The services of the USO in giving troops in transit magazines, candy, post cards, or hot drinks, alone are extremely valuable, and when others are added the USO becomes something without which a soldier would be lost.

We are proud to urge each and every one of you to help in the raising of funds for the USO. This week a drive is being put on in Lamb County to raise $2,521.20 for this purpose. Let us all do our part.

MacARTHUR DAY -- JUNE 13

In Recognition of General Douglas MacArthur's gallant stand in the Phillipines, the Congress of the United States has passed a resolution designating June 13 as MacArthur Day, for this date marks the forty-third anniversary of MacArthur's appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point.

MacArthur's words speak so highly for themselves that there is little tribute we, ourselves, can express. We feel humbly thankful that there are men like him to lead our battle against the Axis.

USDA WAR BOARD URGES FARMERS TO SAVE WEAR ON TIRES

Asking your neighbors if they need anything in town or want to ride in with you is more than just neighborliness these days—it's good sense and a good way to save wear and tear on tires.

That's why the Lamb County USDA War Board is urging farmers in the county to work out neighborhood plans for making the best possible use of transportation facilities. As A. F. Chafin, board chairman points out, agricultural products must get to market if they're going to be sold and if the American people are going to eat, and tires are going to be mighty hard—maybe impossible—to get when the ones now on hand are gone.

Arrange with one or more neighbors to exchange trips," the board advises farmers. "Do all your regular hauling, so far as possible, on that basis. Form a little group on your road to do this in a systematic way. Pool your loads."

"If you have an errand in town, call up your neighbors and take everybody on the road who needs to go that day—let them do the same by you," Chafin continued. "Make similar arrangements for small partloads of produce. Don't make a trip alone with just a bushel of potatoes or a sack of grain, nor to get one or two small items of supplies. Double up. Co-operate with your neighbors."

Farm hauling is not subject to restriction under the Office of Defense Transportation order, Cha-fin pointed out, but farmers expected to comply with the order by making as many trips as possible.

With South Plains Men In U. S. Service

Walter Lee Dyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Dyer of Yellow House Switch Community, who left Littlefield in February, was sent to Fort Warren, Wyo., and after being at that camp two months, he was transferred to Tucson, Ariz. U. S. Army Air Base, where he has been stationed for the past two months. He is connected with the Quartermaster's division.

His parents received an interesting letter from him, recently, which will be of interest to his many friends in this section, and which is published as follows:

Tucson, Arizona
May 27, 1942

Dear Folks:
"I received the papers and the letter. I really enjoy reading the Littlefield paper. Thanks a lot Jack for the funny papers. Lil' Abner sure gets into lots of trouble doesn't he? And Pappy is about as bad. Patti Ruth I was glad to get the flowers you sent me. They were pretty badly wilted, though."

"We really had a nice trip on our convoy the other day. We went to the entrance of the Colossal Cave. It is a cave similar to the Carlsbad Cavern. We didn't go through because we didn't have time. We went down to a little town by the name of Tombstone. It was one of the toughest towns in its day. It was a mining town and lots of rough stuff went on there. It was typical of a town you see in western pictures. It had old bar rooms. Some of them were almost torn down. We ate near the cemetery. There was a boot hill there where cowboys had been buried with their boots on. There were graves of men who had been hanged and some shot on the streets. Some had been assassinated in some of the bar rooms."

"We went down to the Mexican border to Nogales. We didn't stay there long. We camped out Wednesday night about 20 miles this side of Nogales. We came back to an Indian Reservation near Tucson. There were quite a few Indians there. We visited an old Indian Mission that had been built about 150 years ago. It was sure interesting to observe the works of Art and sculpturing that Indians had done. The Indians spent 15 years building the mission. It was constructed entirely of clay and mesquite wood. It had statues of Bible characters carved out of wood and clay. It had one of Christ on the Cross and one of his weeping mother below. Pictures were carved into the walls and painted with the prettiest colors of paint. Most of it was all original but the colors had faded pretty bad. There was an Indian school there too. We had a lot of fun talking to the little school boys and girls."

"We ate supper near a little stream out there, then we came on back to camp. I wish we would go on a convoy every week. I enjoy them very much."

"This week we have been working on the motor pool. We have hauled gravel for the trucks to park on. It is just like a gravel road. We get the gravel about 15 miles from here in a river bed. This afternoon I went in swimming with some more fellows to a canyon about 10 miles from here. Two truck loads of us went."

"I went down town last night. I tried to find Mr. Sheffield but I couldn't find the street. I looked on a city map and found the street I thought was it but when I got there it was the wrong one. I will find it the next time I go to town."

I heard about 50 of my company was going to leave in a few days. I don't know whether I will leave or not. I would like to stay here now. I heard that some were going to the Mexican border. You can't tell a thing about what you hear. If the officers knew what we were going to do, they wouldn't tell us. Such as that is a secret."

I have told about all the news I know.

Mom, I suppose you hear a lot about the U.S.O. I have never mentioned anything about it I don't believe. It was one of the best organizations that has ever been organized. I guess they have one in almost every town in the U. S. They are a home for service men and the men really appreciate what the civilians are doing to help us enjoy ourselves while we are in the service. You know how it is when you go to a strange town and don't know anyone. There is no place to go to rest and read. The U.S.O. not only furnish a place for us to stop and rest, but they entertain us with games, radios, books and magazines."

The U. S. O. does many things, but to give you an idea of the contact I have with them. The first time I had much to do with them, the U.S.O. was at Cheyenne. I use to go there and play games with some of the other fellows. They had a piano there and song books. There was usually a piano player in the bunch. We would gather around and have an old time singing. There was a library there where I would go to read. They had a cookie jar that we could help ourselves to.

"On our trip from Wyoming, we stopped at Denver. We hadn't much more than got off the train until those women had us comfortably seated and entertaining us. They gave us cards and paper to write on. They passed out candy and cookies. The women at the U.S.O. are almost mothers to every soldier who goes there. They are as nice to you as if they were trying to sell you something but everything is free."

"It was the same way at Ft. Worth and every place I have been. They gave us sandwiches and coffee at Ft. Worth. We had to rush to make sure of our connections so they started stuffing candy and cookies in our pockets."

"The U.S.O. pays for entertainers for us. They are giving their swimming pools to the use of the service men. I had never thought to tell about the U.S.O. before. You probably knew about what they did but in case you might have had some wrong impression of them I wanted to convince you that they are alright and the men respect and help care for the equipment."

"I will close for this time. Answer again real soon."

Love,
WALTER

Pledging that he would pitch his campaign strictly on the written record, and not on personalities or abuse, Allred opened what he described as Chapter 1 of the "Book of Revelation" dealing with the record in Congress of the present junior senator.

Calling upon all Texans to unite in the war effort, Allred declared, "We must go into the factories, the stores, out upon the farms and ranches, everywhere, and work 24 hours a day, seven days a week until our boys return victorious to

PALACE FEATURES "IN THIS OUR LIFE" THIS WEEK END OPENING SAT. MIDNIGHT

In line with its policy of showing the finest of the new crop of film entertainment, the Palace Theatre will feature "In This Our Life," opening Saturday midnight, and continuing through Sunday and Monday. This picture is a Warner Bros. picturization of the successful novel by Ellen Glasgow. Bette Davis is starred in the film which opens locally today. As one of the most important pictures on the 1942 schedule, Warner Bros. have produced "In This Our Life," on a grand scale, sparing no efforts in making the brilliant, absorbing novel come to life on the screen. John Huston, whose deft artistry is well known to motion picture audiences through his handling of "The Maltese Falcon," directed the film.

From the brilliant starring roles played by Miss Davis, Olivia De Havilland, George Brent and Dennis Morgan down to the smallest character "bit," the film has been cast with minute care.

The story is concerned with the vicious behavior of Stanley Timberlake, played by Miss Davis, and the havoc she wrought in other people's lives; especially that of her sister, Roy, portrayed by Olivia De Havilland.

Stanley, wild, inconsiderate, persuades her sister's husband, Peter, played by Dennis Morgan, to get a divorce and run off with her, regardless of the fact that she is engaged to Craig, an aspiring lawyer, played by George Brent. Not content with having disrupted two lives, Stanley drives Peter to such depths of despair that he commits suicide. Stanley returns and finds that in her absence Roy and Craig have fallen in love. In her usual thoughtless but brutal manner she tries to break up the relationship, but fails. Not only does she fail, but in planning to win back Craig, Stanley meets a violent but just end.

"The Wife Takes A Flyer" Comes To Ritz This Week End

Funniest of the satires on Hitler and his cohorts to come out of Hollywood to date, "The Wife Takes a Flyer", at the Ritz Saturday midnight, continuing through Sunday and Monday is a riot of laughs, dealing principally with the story of an English flyer shot down over Holland and his adventures in outwitting the Gestapo and wooing a pretty girl at the same time. Franchot Tone enacts the role of the Briton, Joan Bennett that of the girl, and Allyn Joslyn does an outstanding portrayal of a German major. Others in the cast include Cecil Cunningham, Roger Clark and Lloyd Corrigan.

The picture differs from other anti-Nazi films in a number of particulars. It includes the Japanese and Mussolini as targets of its wit and scorn and it makes capital of the Russians' success in stopping the Nazis, employing dialogue on a number of occasions which refers to this Nazi failure in a manner disconcerting to the Nazi major who is at once the villain of the film and the butt of its comedy.

Tone, having landed in Holland, poses as the husband of a pretty Dutch girl who is divorcing her mate. A German major is quartered in her house and the plot deals with outwitting him, the Gestapo, and the courts in order to learn certain information and transit it

Hendricks Family Return Home; Mr. Hendricks Improved

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hendricks and daughter, Kay, returned home Friday afternoon from Dallas, where Mr. Hendricks has been taking treatment from a bone specialist for a leg injury for the past several weeks.

The Hendricks family took an apartment in Dallas, and since Mr. Hendricks has been released from the hospital they have been remaining in Dallas that he might make regular trips to the clinic for necessary treatment. The condition of Mr. Hendricks' leg is much better.

Every penny is a patriotic penny if it hastens the privileges of peace. Every dollar you invest in War bonds will shorten the months of the war. If your state meets its quota this month, peace may be a month closer.

Moths' Favorite Home!

How exasperating! How troublesome! How wasteful! We mean this thing of letting moths "move in" and take up residence in your favorite garments. Or any garments, for that matter.

Yet that's exactly what they're likely to do, unless you take steps to prevent it. Right now, it's easy for you to take those steps. All you have to do is send your cleaning to us. We will clean your garments thoroughly—remove every trace of dirt and grime—and then reshape them to original beauty. But in addition, we will treat them with MONITE—which absolutely keeps moths away—and insures you against moth damage for a period of six months—or until the garments are again cleaned.

Why run the risk of moths, when you can get this service at absolutely no additional cost? Send us all your clothes for cleaning today—tomorrow at the latest!

General Page stated, "is confronted with the dual responsibility of obtaining men for the armed forces and of retaining men in their war production and essential civilian activities consistent with the needs of our national war effort.

"We fully appreciate the problems of American agriculture in this emergency, but we are also faced with the fact that men in the armed forces are ever increasing numbers.

"There is a clear statutory prohibition against group deferments. The Selective Service Act and Regulations prescribe that each claim for deferment must be handled on individual merit. Full consideration will be given to the claims for deferment of men engaged in the agricultural field, but each case must be considered upon its particular facts. Such consideration will include analysis of the status of each man with respect to his agricultural production essential to the war program.

"It is believed that through these joint conferences with representatives of the Selective Service System, the agricultural interests of the state will gain a better understanding of the law and regulations under which the local boards must be operated, as well as a clearer picture of our country's manpower supply and needs."

The schedule of the regional meetings for Texas, as announced at Selective Service Headquarters, is as follows:

June 9, 9:30 A. M., Municipal Auditorium, San Angelo.

June 10, 7:30 P. M., Gymnasium, Texas Tech, Lubbock.

June 16, 7:30 P. M., St. Anthony Hotel, San Antonio.

June 17, 7:30 P. M., Nueces Hotel, Corpus Christi.

June 19, 7:30 P. M., Rice Hotel, Houston.

McDonald will personally represent the State Department of Agriculture. Representing State Selective Service Headquarters; Lt. Colonel John R. Roebuck and Co. will give to the 1st. place winner a registered Duroc Jersey Boar, to the second place winner 75 chicks and to the third and fourth place winners 50 baby chicks each. The gilts will be numbered and boys will draw numbers to see which boy gets which gilt.

The Chamber of Commerce of this city is also presenting the two outstanding FFA boys of the Littlefield High School for the past year, with two pure bred gilts Saturday afternoon in the vacant lot between Ware's Department Store and the Texas Utilities office. The boys are John Estle Willingham of seven miles southwest of Littlefield, and Wayne Jackson of Lum's Chapel Community.

These boys were scored on scholarship attitude, projects carried, supervised practice program, improvement and leadership.

Everyone is urged to be present at the presentation of these gilts and give the boys encouragement in their work, because they are certainly doing their part in producing food for victory.
