There are four offices in Lamb County where canning sugar may be obtained. The office in Littlefield is in the City Hall; in Amherst at the office of the Amherst Reporter; in Sudan at the office of the City Secretary, and in Olton at the Courthouse.

Next Red Cross Membership Drive In March, 1943

Will Not Conduct Fund-Raising Drive This Coming November

The month of March, 1943, has been officially designated—with the approval of President Roosevelt—as the period for the next membership and fund-raising appeal of the American Red Cross, F. A. Hemphill, chairman of the Lamb County Chapter, announced today, upon advice from Norman H. Davis, national chairman.

"I have been advised by Mr. Davis," Chairman Hemphill states, "that the decision means the American Red Cross will not conduct a membership Roll Call this November and instead will hold a combined appeal for memberships and funds for wartime needs next March."

"The decision also means that the Red Cross will make its war fund and membership appeals directly and separately to the people and that it will not participate in any joint fund-raising effort." Copies of correspondence between Mr. Davis and the President, in which the basis for this decision is outlined, have been received by the local chapter.

RECITAL FRIDAY TO OBSERVE PRESENTATION OF PIPE ORGAN

Lewis Muckelroy To Be Organist For Occasion

Required Six Weeks To Install Organ, Which Originally Cost $7,000

The newly installed Wurlitzer pipe organ at the First Methodist Church here will be heard publicly for the first time with the presentation of a recital Friday night at 8 o'clock.

Lewis Muckelroy of Tucumcari, New Mexico, and organist of the First Methodist Church there, will be the recital organist. Although he is only 22 years of age, he is an organist much in demand and Littlefield is indeed fortunate to secure his services. Mr. Muckelroy has maintained and taught a regular piano class since he was eight years old. In addition to his duties as organist at the Tucumcari church, he is a radio staff organist and broadcasts daily.

The recital, which will be an hour in length, will include such numbers as Handel's "Largo," "Going Home" from the New World Symphony, "Barcarole" from the Tales of Hoffman, and "Abide With Me." The program will be opened with the congregation singing "God Bless America," accompanied by Mr. Muckelroy. The doors of the church will be opened at 7:30 o'clock Friday night, and the recital will begin at 8 o'clock.

The installation of the organ was made possible through the work of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Sharp, and the generosity of Dr. I. T. Shottwell, Jr., Dr. C. E. Payne, Jess Elms and A. Hendricks.

The organ is of a very modern design and is the 2 manual and pedal type. It has a tonal representation covered by flutes, strings, diapasons, cathedral chimes and the harp. The console is detached and both divisions of the organ are completely under expression. The organ was originally priced at $7,000, and the shipping weight was around 6,000 pounds.

The organ was purchased from, and installed by C. J. Miller of Albuquerque and Denver. It required six weeks to complete the installation.

General Rains Fall Over Area

Farmers and merchants alike are rejoicing this week over the beneficial rains which covered the Littlefield trade territory Monday night.

Falling slowly, the rain was absorbed by the earth and will be a great help to the growing crops. About a half an inch of rain was recorded in Littlefield by the West Texas Cottonoil Mill.

In other parts of the county more rain was reported than fell in the city. At Olton, Earth, Amherst, Spring Lake and Fieldton, three-fourths of an inch fell. At Spade and Sudan an inch of moisture was received, while northeast of Spade about two and a half inches was recorded. A good shower fell at Beck's Gin and at the Yellowhouse Switch three-fourths of an inch fell. Half an inch of rain was received at Morton and Enochs, and over that section.

On Saturday night a strip a mile and a half wide and about five miles long, southeast of Sudan, was damaged by hail. Hail was reported at the Raymond Nix, the Bill New, George Springer, and Doyle Baccus farms in that vicinity.

"Learning To Live Together" Theme of Rotary Convention

Local Delegate Reports 56 Geographical Areas Represented At Toronto

F. A. Hemphill, President-elect of the Littlefield Rotary Club, returned Monday from Toronto, Canada, where he attended the annual convention of Rotary International. Upon his return he reported that the convention, the 33rd of its kind since the founding of Rotary International, was attended by more than 7,500 men representing 56 different geographical areas of the globe. The general theme of the five day session was "Learning to Live Together."

The Littlefield delegate reported further that the program of the meeting greatly emphasized one of the foremost objectives of the Rotary organization—"the development of international brotherhood"—in light of the present day need for the winning of a just and lasting peace.

Speakers direct from England, Peru, Cuba, Canada, and the U.S.A. all directed their remarks toward the importance of unselfish cooperation on the part of free peoples in order to forever erase the threat of militarism and international lawlessness. "Only where people are free and the dignity of the human soul is respected can human beings reach their goals," said T. D. Young, who flew directly from Europe to address the convention.

J. E. Dryden Seeks Office Of County Attorney Of Lamb

Has Been Resident Of Sudan For 18 Years; Asks Office On Record

J. E. Dryden, attorney, well known throughout Lamb County, instructed the Leader Saturday to announce his candidacy for the office of County Attorney, subject to the action of the voters in the Democratic primary, July 25.

Mr. Dryden, who is engaged in the practice of law, insurance and farming, has been a resident of Sudan for 18 years, moving there in December, 1924; has served one term (in 1931-32) as county attorney, is well and favorably known by most of the people of Lamb county, and favorable expressions from many have been heard upon his entry in the race for county attorney.

Mr. Dryden has released the following statement to the voters of the county:

"TO MY FRIENDS AND VOTERS OF LAMB COUNTY:

"I take this opportunity of announcing to you my candidacy for the office of county attorney for Lamb county. First, I want to express my gratitude and appreciation to you for once having elected me to serve you in this office, and I hope that I did not disappoint you in the way in which I conducted the office at that time, and I am basing my claim for the privilege of again serving you upon the record made during that term as county attorney.

"It is my desire to see as many of you and solicit your vote personally during the campaign as circumstances and conditions will permit, but the world-wide war emergency which has brought about a critical shortage in rubber, will prevent this desire from being fully carried out.

"While I do want the office of county attorney, I am not unmindful of the fact that my personal desire should not—and will not—be placed above the duty of loyalty to my government in the conservation of tires and the following any other practice that will help in bringing (Continued on Back Page)

National Yield Of 219,000 Tons Said To Be Not Enough

Local Oil Companies Collect 123,500 Lbs. Up To Wednesday P. M.

President Roosevelt on Monday extended until midnight, July 10, the scrap rubber collection campaign which has disappointed him with a national yield of only 219,000 tons up to June 27.

Mr. Roosevelt acted on the recommendation of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes and William Boyd, chairman of the petroleum industry war council.

The disappointing scrap rubber yield is blamed on "hoarding" by certain people.

The collector figure of 219,000 tons excluded scrap rubber turned in to filling stations since June 27 and also excluded rubber now in the hands of approximately 20,000 junk dealers. The Senate disclosed that the army is facing a 250,000 ton rubber shortage by the end of 1943.

Texas' part in this nation-wide drive has been only 4.74 pounds of rubber per capita turned in up to June 25.

The Littlefield drive has been successful, an estimated 123,500 pounds having been turned in up to Wednesday afternoon. Local independent and major oil companies are still carrying on the drive, offering a cent a pound for all scrap rubber turned in, and urging everyone to make a thorough search of their homes. Certain rubber articles may have been overlooked in the first search, or perhaps not even recognized as rubber so they urge that you look again.

The Magnolia Company, with John Porcher as agent; the Texas Company, with Walter LeMond as distributor; the Gulf Company, with L. C. Grissom as agent; the Phillips Company, with W. E. Heathman as agent; the Continental Oil Company, with Geo. R. Sandidge as agent; the Sinclair Refining Company, with Oscar Wilemon as agent; and the various service stations of these companies; and the independent oil companies, including Morris & Son, McCormick Bros., and the Littlefield Oil Co., are all cooperating in the drive to salvage every available pound of scrap rubber.

Bridge Tournament Will Be Held To Raise USO Funds

Although the campaign for funds for the USO in Lamb County was scheduled to end Saturday, July 4, the campaign time has been extended to July 8.

Lamb County is still short about $515.94 on its quota of $2,521.20 and this necessitates the extension of the campaign.

On Wednesday, July 8, a bridge and domino tournament will be held at the American Legion Hall for the purpose of raising funds for the USO. Mrs. Ed. Hewitt is in charge of the tournament which will start at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and last until 10 or 11 o'clock that night. A nominal charge will be made for participation, and all proceeds will go into the local USO fund.

Organize Woodworking Class Monday Night

The Woodworking class sponsored by the local schools in cooperation with the Federal Government was organized Monday night, June 29, with eight present. Several others expressed interest but were unable to attend the meeting due to rain.

The first meeting of the class was held Wednesday night, July 1, at 8 o'clock, in the shop on the northeast corner of the bus shed. Classes will meet three hours per night for five nights a week. A certificate will be given anyone attending the course for 120 hours, and may be used to help secure a job in the defense industry. Anyone interested can still be enrolled in the class and may do so any time this week.

Pins And Needles

Speaking of the straw that broke the camel's back—it has now been determined that economy in the use of pins and needles can be of help in winning the war.

Pins are made of brass, copper and steel. Needles are made of high carbon steel essential for war use. Although it would take the material for a large quantity of pins and needles to make an instrument of war—the number of pins used in this country in a year is even greater than the number of pennies in our national debt.

Actually many tons of vital materials can be conserved if we watch our pins and needles. Saving pins may make it possible to turn out that extra shell which will put the finishing touches on winning the war.

Good To The Last Drop

The next thing to save is household cooking fats.

During July, each housewife will be asked to keep every drop of fat available, keep it until she has at least a pound, and then turn it in at a meat or food store.

The reason: quantities of glycerine are needed for explosives. Glycerine is made from fats. Most of our fats and oils have been imported from the Far East. But, it is estimated, two billion pounds of cooking fats are ordinarily thrown away each year. If these two billion pounds can be collected, our glycerine problems will be solved.

Every kitchen can aid in this phase of the war program. You may even be paid a cent a pound or so for the fats turned in, but that's beside the point. If fats are needed for explosives, every woman will want to turn in every last drop.

Wm. C. Heinen of Camp Abilene, accompanied by Mrs. Heinen spent from Friday until Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Heinen.

Wm. Heinen has been connected with the Medical Replacement Training Center, Camp Barkley, since November last, and says he likes his work.

"We have a language all our own in the Navy," he writes. "After you have been in the Navy a while you take on a Navy accent. It is a mixture of all the accents and brogues over the whole nation. They all call me 'Tex' up here, and it sure makes me proud of my nativity."

BREAK O'DAY IRON

By Reginald Wright Kauffman

CHAPTER X
SYNOPSIS

A man identified as Joseph Slinn is found drowned in the Hudson river near Albany, N. Y. Slinn was insured by the Protective Life Insurance company, and its beneficiary is a man named B. B. Twombly who lives in Troy. The company's Albany agent, Carlin, identifies the body, and the insurance money is paid to Twombly. But Jerry Glidden, suspecting that Slinn was murdered, has gone to Ironburg, a little mining town in Pennsylvania, to see an "Angela Slinn." She turns out to be an ugly woman who lives in a shack near the abandoned "Break O'Day" iron mine. She denies knowing Joseph Slinn. Rose Walker, granddaughter of the owner of the mine, runs the local store and post office. When a man registers at the Rising Sun hotel as B. B. Twombly of Portland, Maine, Jerry wires a friend in Troy and learns that Twombly has moved to Maine. He has already seen Twombly with Rose Walker, and again at Angela Slinn's shack, so he is not surprised to discover that Twombly is trying to buy the "Break O'Day" mine.

Not till he had closed the gate could he be more explicit.

Even in that balmy July night a little chill shot down Jerry's spine. For all her apparent knowledge of the world, this girl would be clay to such hands as Twombly's were showing themselves to be.

"Five thousand? And you—you accepted it?"

"Oh, I haven't yet!"

"Then don't." Jerry breathed partial relief.

"Why not?"

"Well, why didn't you?"

"That was simple enough." Elbows on knee and her chin in her cupped hands, she regarded a swaying foot. "You see, I'm in business, and so I have what they call the business outlook. I'd have sold that land to anybody for anything—till somebody wanted to buy. But the minute somebody wanted to buy, I thought I might get a raise by pretending I wasn't anxious to sell."

He chuckled—turned serious. "And so you created a fictitious competition. Come through, now—Rose! You told friend Twombly he wasn't the only person interested. You told him I was, that I'd let her slip how the mine could be drained."

"I didn't!" she indignantly retorted. "I don't know who she has't any commercial value anyway." He just asked about you, and I said all I knew was you'd nearly killed yourself snooping around out there. I'm sorry if—"

"The wait—"

"What?"

"Never mind. Go on."

"You're mighty mysterious, Jerry. I was just going to say I was sorry if I got you in wrong with him."

"Got me in wrong?" Jerry seized her hand and shook it. "I'm as much obliged to you for that as for rescuing me today. He's no idea who I am, and now he thinks I'm here to buy this land. You've given him an explanation of me that I wish I'd had the genius to think up. I'd like to be in business with you!"

"I asked you—"

"Come on home."

The distance was scarcely a hundred yards. Traversing it, he maintained his secrecy. Not till he had closed between them the gate to her lawn could he be more explicit, and then all that he vouchsafed was:

"Perhaps I'll talk to you in the morning. When I first went to work, my boss gave me a Christmas present. It was a card, like one he had framed in his office. That said, 'Do It Now.' I did it then, but it never got me anywhere. Tonight I'm going to give it one more try."

On that, he left her. He turned toward the hotel, yet, as soon as he heard her door shut, he wheeled and, weary as he was, headed toward the Break O' Day mine.

Within a quarter-hour he had reached that point at which the overgrown track to the tableland made its junction with the pike.

He had no wish to encounter Angela; none to meet Twombly, if the latter had returned to the shanty. Jerry did not keep to the track. He took to the trees and followed its course under their shelter.

As he approached the open country, he went more and more carefully. At school, his geology textbook, never enthusiastically studied, contained a supplementary chapter or two on mineralogy, but he had forgotten most of it long ago. Not only would he not be able to tell good iron ore from bad; he wouldn't know any sort of ore if he fell into a heap of it. Still less did he understand the collection of specimens. But he believed that, if he could get somewhere near where the last burrowings were made into those cliffs, all his purposes would be solved by filling his pockets with casual clay and pebbles.

He reached the treeless area. The stars burned clearly, yet their light was insufficient to send down more than a ghostly radiance.

The pine clump, far over there, showed merely as a fringe of shadow.

The shanty was a black mound in the plain, magnified by the semi-darkness until it resembled a tumulus where some prehistoric warrior might be buried.

All around, the inky hills faded into the inky horizon. With them for background, any moving figure would be as good as invisible.

One comfort, though. If any guard or prowler was hidden from Jerry, Jerry was equally well hidden from prowler or guard. Still creaking to the surrounding trees, he began to circle the barren waste.

He had to go slowly, for fear of giving some alarm. He was unskilled in such progress and his best efforts were none too successful. Inevitably, twigs snapped under foot. To his high-keyed nerves, the reports sounded as loud as pistol shots. Once he sprawled flat over some obstruction and stayed long quiescent, eyes straining into the night to detect any movement from the hut which the noise of that tumble evoked none.

He began to speculate upon what might, after all, have happened there.

How Angie had reappeared so suddenly at the store was beyond his explanation. He must ask Rose about it. He scolded himself for not having already asked her.

But if Twombly had pretended to Angie his own return to Ironburg ahead of her. If he had concealed himself somewhere here among these trees, gone back to that shanty when the coast was clear, waited for darkness and her final return? If he had then attacked her when she least expected attack?

In memory Glidden saw the brown arm that was like a serpent poised to strike. He saw the hovering hand, the crooked fingers. Whatever was the cause of that strange enmity which separated those two people otherwise held together by some stronger bond, there was no doubting the malignity of one of them.

Well, that would have to wait. The night was still young. Jerry got up and determinedly forced his aching legs into the direction of the cliffs.

Safely he reached them. Safely he progressed along and around them and safely descended to the scene of his morning's swim.

He slipped out of his clothes, then put his coat back on; he would need his pockets. There was the post of that old derrick. He launched it with a loud splash, sat astride it and paddled it through the chilly water toward a wall that he recalled as having shown the least ancient signs of any digging.

Each stroke of his arms set echoes flying from cliff to cliff, but noise could no longer be avoided, and he should be far enough at last from any human ears save his own. Many degrees more frigid than it had been this morning, the water was not any longer turquoise. It was pitch black except where, here and there, a floating disk of silver turned out to be some stellar reflection.

He was in an ebon shaft and could see nothing around him; could see nothing above except spatters of stars.

He understood finally how small were his chances. He wondered why in the world he hadn't had the patience to postpone his crazy quest until dawn. He must surely lose his watery way.

If unprecedented good fortune got him where he wanted to go, he couldn't see anything when he arrived there.

He arrived somewhere, anyhow.

His queer craft's prow bumped against earth or rock. The shock nearly sent him overboard, but he regained balance and edged forward.

He groped. He touched clay and stones. The log's forward end was overweighted. It began to slip. Jerry had to work back, more amidships, and paddle his vessel broadside to the unseen shore. Again he clawed at the dark wall.

A thousand to one, he was getting nothing but useless dirt between his groping fingers, but he scraped and scooped a few handfuls if only from an impish hatred of that giant cliff. He filled his pockets.

He was about to reverse the log and return to the farther shore. He was at a moment's pause. Its quiet was broken. Something had moved. Where? It must have been far overhead, in the blackness at the cliff-top. It came again. With it came a soft patter as of rain on the water. Rain—or falling earth. Another landslide?

A rush of descending wind cut short all calculation. Like the sweep of a monstrous eagle dropping on its prey, what seemed a derelict tree trunk crashed downwards.

The derrick shaft had gone. Jerry struggled against water, under water—deep water.

His first thoroughly apprehended emotion was dread lest he should be caught again by that hideous current which coursed into the lake's subterranean outlet. To escape this, he swam in what mere mad conjecture declared a safe direction. He came up for breath, but sank when he found his head in a disk of earth. Swimming vainly, however, he did eventually and quietly make land at the dark spot from which he had embarked, and there he jumped into his clothes.

"The dirt didn't slip out, anyhow," he muttered as he patted the pockets of his wet coat.

He stood rigid and listening. He had resolved to ascend the cliffs by the way he had come, but even more cautiously and then, surprising or overtaking his enemy, to fight the thing out, but the quiet of the night brought wisdom. If his life had been attempted, it was far better to let the would-be murderer proceed in false security, under the belief that he had been successful, until one conclusive piece of evidence as to motive—as yet lacking—should be secured.

Somehow or other, Jerry was convinced, Twombly had murdered Joseph Slinn, intending, with the smallest possible part of the $50,000 insurance money, to buy this deserted ore bank, of some value of which Angela Slinn, or Joseph himself, or it might be, one of Twombly's own ancestors, had given the astute broker special knowledge. Now the dead man's sister, somehow smelling out that crime, was—horrible as it might seem—levying blackmail as the price of holding her tongue regarding the shedding of her own brother's blood. But before a capital charge could be placed in the hands of the police with any hope that they would pursue the investigation, there must be some proof that the iron mine was worth its purchase for even so small a sum as five thousand. Jerry wouldn't go back tonight to Ironburg.

Instead, he struck down the valley that opened into the lake—struck at first gingerly, but at last boldly, across the lowlands, assured that somewhere there he must find another road to Americus. Nor was disappointment his reward. A group of fields passed, he came to a byroad; it brought him to a highway. By knocking at the door of a farmhouse and arousing from sleep to wrath its Pennsylvania-Dutch proprietor, Jerry learned that a certain crossroad would conduct him to Americus.

A LETTER TO UNCLE SAM

Dear Unc,

The priorities around this house are simply terrific. What a time I had getting at the typewriter to make up this letter of thanks.

You see, it's this way. Every Sunday, and after dinner weekdays, Dad used to take Mother and me for a ride. And did we dread it!

Mom said Dad used to drive like a maniac... no regard for my tender feelings and stomach. He'd honk and fight his way through traffic, missing fenders by an eyelash, at a speed that made my heart bump my tonsils.

Now, boyohboy what a relief!... Dad heard a Phillips news broadcast say that Uncle Sam wants every motorist to Care for his car—For his country. Then he saw a Phillips ad which said that any Phillips Service Station man would be glad to show him how to do it. Well, to make a long story not too long,

Low Income Families Increase Net Income

Texas' low-income farm families have increased their annual net income by 103 per cent and have more than doubled food production for their own use since receiving rehabilitation loans from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, according to information received here by Pegue W. Houston, FSA supervisor in Lamb County.

The gains registered by Texas' farm families were above the national increases of more than one-quarter million FSA borrower families.

Mr. Houston's information came to him in a report by C. B. Baldwin, Farm Security Administrator, which was prepared by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard.

Pointing out that these increases are particularly significant as a contribution to Food for Freedom, the FSA administrator told Secretary Wickard these gains "support in a striking manner your recent statement that on all these small farms with their supply of home labor lies a real opportunity today for a high percentage increase in wartime production."

"This family progress report," said Mr. Houston, "shows greater increases than in any previous year of FSA operation. This proves the willingness and ability of low-income farm people, when properly assisted, to do their share toward meeting the nation's food goals."

The Texas phase of the national report shows that the annual value of home-used production per family had increased from $166 to $378, or 128 per cent since farmers in this state first received help.

Texas FSA borrower-families increased their annual net incomes an average of 103 per cent, from $470 to $953, during the time they received assistance. They increased the amount of fruits and vegetables canned by 127 per cent, from 121 quarts in the year before they got loans to 275 quarts per family in 1941. They increased their milk production for home use from 347 to 545 gallons or 57 per cent. They increased meat production for home use from 233 to 457 pounds or 96 per cent. Last year, they stated, in addition, 18 bushels per family in fruits and vegetables and produced and used 143 dozen eggs and 11 gallons of lard for the average family.

Since Pearl Harbor even greater emphasis has been put on food production and loan requirements have been broadened by the FSA to enable a large number of eligible farm families to contribute to the food production goals.

Mr. Houston said the administrator has instructed Texas Farm Security officials to expand the community and cooperative services program to enable small farmers to make maximum use of available machinery and tools and also to develop facilities through which their increased food production can flow readily to centers of distribution.

The FSA office in Littlefield is located in the City Hall.

JULY 4TH 1942

.. and once again we're fighting to keep AMERICA free

What is America? America is Americans . . . you and I . . . people who were going along with their everyday cares, and then suddenly found themselves transformed into a nation at war. Now the cares are no longer ordinary, personal ones for a fighting spirit has come up in our hearts and souls and we have our minds centered on one great thought . . . VICTORY!

On July Fourth we are pledging an even firmer allegiance in our America . . . pledging that we will redouble our efforts to win this war . . . pledging that we will buy another bond today, no matter what we have to do without, and pledging that we will put that extra "something" into our wartime job, for Freedom is too precious to be dealt with carelessly.

On July 4, 1776, a free country was established . . . and on July 4, 1942, Americans with the same blood in their veins, the same spirit in their hearts, and the same will in their minds as their ancestors are fighting to keep America Free.

New Credit Regulations Now In Full Effect

County citizens had better be saving their budgets so that they can pay that old bill who owe open accounts bought prior to May 31 of 1942, or they must pay them by July 10 or their credit will be cut off. The new says so.

New Credit Regulations
Credit regulations now in effect that merchandise purchased any calendar month must be paid by the 10th of the second following month, or no more credit will be given.

The regulation became effective on May 6, so that restrictions already in effect, except the first payment date is July 10. People incorrectly assume a customer now delinquent 30 days cannot be extended account credit. This is not the new regulation clearly. A charge account shall not be in default because failure to make payment for merchandise purchased therein, prior to July 10, 1942, unless such article has been paid for in full by July 10, 1942.

Supposing purchases of articles from a department store not shown as "listed article" were made in April or May (For example, drugs and canned food.) Will all these goods have to be paid for in full by July 10?

Answer: A charge account shall be deemed to be in default of any article, whether "listed" or unlisted, for which credit was extended, if not paid for in full, on or before the 10th day of the second calendar month, following the calendar month during which such article was sold. This means that all goods purchased on the account anytime during the whole month of May, or previously, must be paid for in full by July 10, or the account transformed into an installment account.

What is meant by "default" and "cure"?
Answer: If the account isn't paid in full by July 10, it is a "default account." A "cure" means any one of three ways by which the account can be restored to good standing, or can be used again.

1.—By paying it up.
2.—By signing a written agreement in good faith with the store that the account will be paid in installments for a period of not longer than six months, by monthly payments of not less than $5, or if weekly, by not less than $1.25.

3.—By filing a statement of necessity supplied by the federal reserve banks or by the states, stating inability to pay except on monthly installments with a year to run.

If a default has been "cured" by placing it on installment basis after July 10, can charge account privileges be resumed?
Answer: Yes, while the old account is being paid off in installments, the charge account is available for use, provided it is handled according to the regulations on open account. (That is, for example, any purchases during the calendar month of June must be paid for by August 10.)

What restrictions are placed on the customer who "cures" his open account by an agreement to pay in installments, resumes his purchases on open account, then does not pay the installments?

Answer: There is nothing in the new regulation to prohibit the customer from doing this very thing. The agreement to pay in installments must be made in good faith, but it would be difficult to prove bad faith if the customer resumed his open account purchases and falls down on his installment agreement. This is one of the most urgent reasons why all merchants extending credit should clear all inquiries through the credit bureau and should not fail to furnish the credit bureau with full information relative to the customer's paying record. A record of past experience and past paying habits of individuals in the bureau's files is the best, and in fact, the only way for merchants to control this particular matter.

If a customer does not pay his charge account on July 10 and buys merchandise on his account on July 11 and takes it with him before the bookkeeping department or the credit department of the store has had an opportunity to record the defaulted account, is the store responsible, and what is the remedy?

Answer: If the charge sale is made in good faith by the store without knowledge that the customer's charge account is in default, the store has not violated the regulation. However, upon discovery that such charge account is in default, and later charges have been added, the store is required to request the immediate return of the merchandise from the customer, or immediate payment in full for the article sold.

Although the regulation specifically mentions "floor authorization" of $5 and less under the above rule, an opinion of the federal reserve bank is to the effect that this also applies in the case mentioned above in which it is physically impossible for the bookkeeping department to record all payments between the close of business July 10 and the opening of business on July 11, or even for a day or so thereafter.

If a defaulting customer at one store attempts to open an account elsewhere or has other charge accounts at other stores, is there anything in the regulations to prevent other stores from handling the customer's charge business?

Answer: No, there is no restriction except that it certainly is good business for all merchants who extend charge accounts to know with whom they are dealing, and to the best of their ability to secure full information as to the paying habits of their customers. No merchant can afford to open a new account with a customer who is in default at other stores.

Many merchants close their books on the 25th of each month in order to get their statements in the mail by the first of each month and consequently the last 5 day's purchases do not show on the statement. Can this practice be continued in view of the new regulation?

Answer: Apparently not. The regulation provides that unless all purchases on charge accounts during the entire month of May and previously are paid in full by July 10, the account is in default. This would require that the statements show every purchase up to the close of business on the last day of the month. Throughout the regulation, the calendar month is spoken of as the period of time, and not a breaking off during any particular month.

What will be the status of 90-day accounts in which the purchaser pays one-third in 30 days, another third in 60 days, and the balance in 90 days, as for example, suits, wearing apparel and overcoats?

Answer: The regulation has definitely eliminated this type of credit selling. Any account which the purchaser undertakes to pay in two or more scheduled payments is now classified as installment credit and requires in the case of clothing, a one-third down payment. The maximum time can be 12 months, although it may be much less at the merchant's discretion. But no monthly payments can be less than $5, not any weekly payment less than $1.25.

What merchants are required to take out licenses?

Answer: All firms which took out a license under previous regulation are automatically covered by the new revisions of May 6 and need not secure new ones. However, all merchants and firms which extend open accounts and have not heretofore been required to have one, must now be licensed. The federal reserve banks in each district have these licenses and should be asked for "application form PR-563-a." The license is free.

What are the articles and goods that now come under added restrictions, both in installment selling and on charge account sales?

Answer: The new regulation lists 46 articles, goods, materials, and their derivatives which fall under the regulation. A copy of these listed articles may be obtained directly from the federal reserve bank in your district by asking for a copy of "Consumer Credit, Regulation W, as Revised May 6, 1942."

Since the various community meetings in the County explaining the 1942 Triple A program, there have been a few changes in the regulations, according to J. C. Smith, County Administrative Officer, Muleshoe, who sends the following information for publication:

"Soy beans cannot be planted for soil-conserving acreage if the soy beans will be harvested for hay or for seed (if the seed are harvested by mechanical means). In other words, the only way that soy beans could be harvested would be to pick them by hand. We have talked to several producers that were of the opinion that soy beans could be used for soil-conserving acreage if they were cut for hay; however, according to the regulations this is not possible.

"Originally cane, sudan and millet could be cut green for hay provided a strip one rod wide was left standing between each five rod strip harvested; however, the regulations have been amended permitting the harvesting of all of the particular crop (cane, sudan, millet) in question provided such crops are cut green for hay and a 12 inch stubble is left on the ground. The 12 inch stubble is measured from the top of the ground and that portion of the stalk under the ground cannot be included to make up the 12 inch stubble. In the event a producer does not desire to leave a 12 inch stubble on his conserving acreage he may cut green 5 rods and leave 1 rod standing, as was provided in the original regulations.

"In interplanting cotton and soil-conserving crops, the soil-conserving crop has to occupy a strip 13 feet from cotton to cotton—in other words, in order for the strip of soil conserving crop to be permitted to be used as soil-conserving land it must consist of at least three 40-inch rows.

"Sudan, millet, and rye grass may be pastured and such acreage will be considered as soil-conserving; however, sweet sorghums (cane) cannot be grazed and be considered as a soil-conserving crop.

"In previous years home gardens have been used as soil-conserving acreage. In 1942 home gardens will not qualify as soil-conserving crops.

"Several producers have requested to know if they exceed their cotton allotments if they would be permitted to plow up the excess cotton and get into compliance. Our interpretation of the regulations on this point is that a producer may be permitted to plow up cotton until it reaches the stage of growth at which bolls are first formed or not later than 10 days after a notice has been mailed to the producer from the county office advising that such producer has exceeded his cotton allotment.

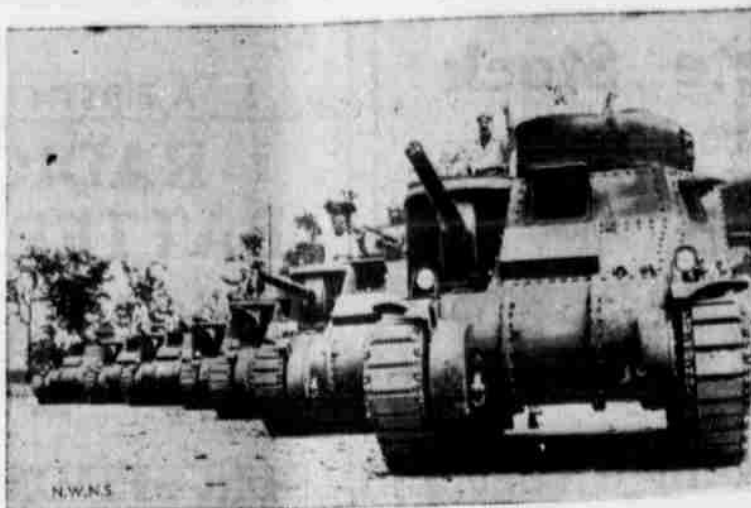

"Producers with farms on which there will be some sod broken out in 1942 should bear in mind that the sod land cannot be devoted to a special allotment crop and also cannot be used for minimum conserving acres (government acres). Sod land should be devoted to a general soil-depleting crop such as maize, hegari, kaffir, etc. Planting the sod to a general crop does not in any way effect a producer's compliance. Persons operating an entire sod farm will not receive payment under the 1942 Conservation Program; therefore, such farms do not need to have 20 per cent of their land devoted to a soil-conserving crop. A producer with a sod farm should plant his permitted cotton acreage and the rest of the land could then be devoted to a general soil-depleting crop if desired and such farm would not need any government acreage.

"You are cautioned to be sure and show all share croppers and other persons interested in the crop at the time the compliance reporter calls at your farm to check performance, inasmuch as failure to do this will disqualify you for your soil conservation checks and any other checks that may come due, and you will possibly be liable to the United States Government for fraud.

"Persons interested in securing jobs as performance reporters (measuring men) should make application to the county office immediately, inasmuch as compliance will begin the first part of July.

"If you are a wheat farmer and have not made arrangements for storage space whether in an elevator or on the farm you should make immediate plans to take care of your wheat, inasmuch as we have been informed that all available elevator storage is occupied and it probably will be impossible for you to put your wheat in storage and obtain a Government loan; however, it will be possible for you to store the wheat on the farm and obtain a farm storage Government loan, provided, of course, that you have an approved granary to store the wheat."

Davis, robust American citizen of Butte, Montana. Datus Proper of San Antonio, Texas, was elected a member of the Board of Directors and will represent the zone in which Littlefield is situated.

The new board of directors has a membership which indicates the international spirit of Rotary having members from seven different countries among its total group of 12.

Mr. Hemphill stated that the citizenship of Toronto extended a cordial hand to the convention and that he found a warm regard for the U.S.A. and the program of Rotary among the Canadian citizens with whom he came in contact.

Rotarians in attendance were impressed that such an organization as theirs could accept a large share of the responsibility in the development of understanding among the business and professional men of the entire world after the war has ended. Not a single speaker of the 27 international figures who addressed the assemblies indicated any opinion but the utmost confidence that the Allies would win a substantial victory but only after a long and costly war. The Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, told the delegates that to win the war will be a great task but that to overcome the mistakes we made before the war will be second in difficulty.

The 1942 convention of Rotary International dedicated its whole program for the coming years to the unselfish devotion to the cause of free men and to the recognition of the dignity of the human soul above the material wealth of the earth.
