BOB KIRK

David Edgin of 12 miles northwest of Littlefield, is leaving this week for Plainview to undergo a kidney operation at the Plainview Hospital.

Jeanene, Bob and Jerry Sanders, children of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Sanders, underwent operations at the Payne-Shotwell hospital Wednesday morning.

DALLAS, Texas, July 25 — All but three of Texas' 254 counties now have oil or gas activity, E. L. Smith, of Dallas, president of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, reported today after a statewide survey just completed by association statisticians.

Reflecting the readiness of the Texas petroleum industry to meet any demands of the U. S. armed forces, a total of 158 counties out of the State's 254 now produce oil or gas or both, Mr. Smith said. An additional 93 have land under lease for oil and gas exploration, making a total of 251 out of the 254 with oil or gas activity. Only Mason, Llano and Rockwall counties are not included.

"Twenty-four additional Texas counties were opened for oil or gas production within the past 18 months," Mr. Smith said. "There are now over 900 separate oil and gas fields in Texas, in contrast with around 20 in 1917-18 when Texas oilmen were called upon to furnish fuel for the army and navy."

Although the number of wells then is not recorded, it certainly was fewer than the 15,450 producers first reported in 1922. Now Texas has 93,630 producing wells scattered over the State. Production of all Texas oil wells in 1917 was 20,000 barrels a day. Today the State is producing around 1,300,000 barrels a day under the most rigid restrictions and could be opened up to produce several times this amount if necessary arose.

During World War days, Texas contributed only 6 percent of the oil produced in the United States. Last year, despite closely curtailed output, this State produced 38 percent. In 1922, first year oil reserves were estimated, Texas was credited with only 732,000,000 barrels in known reserves. Now Texas has 9,768,000,000 (billions), or over half of all proven unproduced petroleum resources of the Nation. Last year the State produced around 435,000,000 barrels, but new reserves discovered amount to 805,000,000.

 Your candidates were not at last Saturday, but they did one thing for people who took our minds off the war, and that was to give us a little news and a little fun. They covered front pages Sunday editions with election news, instead of the usual "rest" from reading about the war.

They will visit many points of interest in Arizona, California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and other western states. May Have Cows Tested For Bangs Disease

Farmers wanting to have their cows tested for Bangs' disease will have the opportunity soon. Information and contracts will be available at the County Agent's office on his service. If there is enough interest in the county to warrant, free testing may be obtained from the Bureau of Animal Industry. Before this free service can be obtained, the herd owner must sign an agreement to comply with the following regulations.

1. He must be interested in testing more than once or twice and continue testing until the herd is free.
2. He must agree to breed to a bull of the same status as his cows.
3. He must agree to dispose of all cows reacting to the test, according to regulations.
4. He must agree to have tested at his own expense all cows he buys or adds to his herd.
5. He must agree to comply to all sanitary measures recommended to prevent contaminating and spreading the disease in his herd or other herds.

The above regulations may seem too rigid for the average farmer to enter into, however, according to the Sanitary Livestock Commission the herd owner must do the above to free his herd of Bangs' disease. According to Mr. Porter, with the Bureau of Animal Industry, herds that have been cleaned of Bangs' disease, Mastitis also disappeared. The above test is for range cattle as well as dairy cattle. If the test described above is not wanted, a private veterinarian may be employed and the cost of testing will depend upon the number wanting the test, plus a laboratory fee. For further information see your county agent.

Tenant Purchase—

applications made last year must be renewed, if the applicant wishes to be considered for a loan this year. No information has been received in regard to the amount of funds for the carrying out of this program in Lamb County, so it has not yet been determined just how many farms will be purchased this year. The number of farms to be purchased will naturally depend both upon the amount of the appropriation and the price of the farms to be bought. Prices will be paid in line with actual land values and will be determined only after a fair and disinterested appraisal. Preference will be given to those farms with improvements in good condition, but, upon occasion, loans are also made to either repair existing improvements or to erect new ones on places bought under this program.

Borrowers under this program will be assisted by the PSA in practicing soil conservation, in planning and operating under a budget, and in keeping accurate records of farm and family business.

Selection of applicants will be made by the county committee on tenant purchase, which is composed of Norman F. Cleavinger, William E. Bentley, and Lester L. Massingill.

ting of a better market for cotton.

Cotton firms and cotton farmers of Lamb county and surrounding area have been called on by President Johnston for "100 percent allegiance in cotton's total war for increased consumption."

In a message addressed to local producers throughout the country, President Johnston declared that the raw cotton industry is arming as never before in its history to smash down the blitzkrieg of substitutes, surplus and foreign competition.

Lamb county 4-H Club boys will appear in a fifteen minute broadcast over KFYO, Lubbock, Friday, August 2 at 1:30 P. M., when Lee H. McElroy, assistant county agent, will introduce the boys and their subjects a follows:

ly with the National Cotton Council's announcement of a "universal service" plan to provide funds with which to carry on the fight during the coming year. The new plan, to go into effect August 1, calls for a defense fund of five cents on every bale of lint and three cents on every ton of seed, mobilized with the help of each of the five primary raw cotton interests.

Under the new plan, arrangements have been perfected enabling the producer to make his nickel-a-bale contribution at the first point of sale, either to the cotton merchant, large or small, or the ginmer or warehouseman acting as merchant. This contribution is carried on from merchant to compressor, who remits the accumulated funds to the Council when the bale is first compressed, or from merchant to textile mill which remits on uncompressed cotton.

Similarly, contributions on seed, which are made by the ginmer and crusher, are assembled and remitted to the war chest by the oil mills.

"For fifty years we cotton farmers have been talking about an organization like the National Cotton Council to defend our markets and find new ones through judicious advertising, intelligent research and organized opposition to restrictive legislation," said Mr. Johnston. "At last we have it, and in two years, equipped with modern weapons, it has accomplished more than any of us thought was possible in so short a period."

"Domestic consumption has been brought back virtually to the all-time high, with every indication that a new record can be set in 1941. Plans are ready for a vigorous attack on the acute problem of foreign trade. Council scientists are on the trail of new uses. A united cotton industry has gone to war."

Extension Of Time For Applications For Free Classing

Deadline Extended For South Plains District To August 25
Extension of the time limit for filing applications for free classification of 1940 cotton from August 1 to August 15 for that part of Texas east of the 100th Meridian and from August 15 to August 25 for the remainder of the state has been announced.

The 100th Meridian runs roughly from the eastern edge of the Panhandle south to the west line of Maverick County.

The August 25 date will thus apply to the South Plains cotton.

Under the Smith-Doxey Act, free classification of cotton and free marketing news services are offered to organized cotton improvement groups.

Applications for the service are received by county agricultural agents and forwarded to either the Dallas, Austin or El Paso office of the United States Department of Agricultural Marketing Service.

May Have Cows Tested For Bangs Disease

Farmers wanting to have their cows tested for Bangs disease will have the opportunity soon. Information and contracts will be available at the County Agent's office on his service. If there is enough interest in the county to warrant, free testing may be obtained from the Bureau of Animal Industry. Before this free service can be obtained, the herd owner must sign an agreement to comply with the following regulations.

1. He must be interested in testing more than once or twice and continue testing until the herd is free.
2. He must agree to breed to a bull of the same status as his cows.
3. He must agree to dispose of all cows reacting to the test, according to regulations.
4. He must agree to have tested at his own expense all cows he buys or adds to his herd.
5. He must agree to comply to all sanitary measures recommended to prevent contaminating and spreading the disease in his herd or other herds.

The above regulations may seem too rigid for the average farmer to enter into, however, according to the Sanitary Livestock Commission the herd owner must do the above to free his herd of Bang's disease. According to Mr. Porter, with the Bureau of Animal Industry, herds that have been cleaned of Bang's disease, Mastitis also disappeared. The above test is for range cattle as well as dairy cattle. If the test described above is not wanted, a private veterinarian may be employed and the cost of testing will depend upon the number wanting the test, plus a laboratory fee. For further information see your county agent.

The number of farms to be purchased will naturally depend both upon the amount of the appropriation and the price of the farms to be bought. Prices will be paid in line with actual land values and will be determined only after a fair and disinterested appraisal. Preference will be given to those farms with improvements in good condition, but, upon occasion, loans are also made to either repair existing improvements or to erect new ones on places bought under this program.

Borrowers under this program will be assisted by the FSA in practicing soil conservation, in planning and operating under a budget, and in keeping accurate records of farm and family business.

Selection of applicants will be made by the county committee on tenant purchase, which is composed of Norman F. Cleavinger, William E. Bentley, and Lester L. Massingill.

I THANK YOU FOR YOUR VOTE

To those who did not see fit to support me for the office as Justice of Peace of Precinct 4 in the first primary, I earnestly ask that you reconsider my candidacy in the run-off.

More Than 10,000 Drive Home Cars From Buick Factory

FLINT, Mich., July 27 — The Buick factories this year have been the mecca for more than 17,500 visitors from throughout the United States and 35 foreign countries according to records compiled by the Customer Driveaway and Factory Tour Bureau.

Hewitt Buick Company are the local dealers for the Buick automobile.

Americans Do Not Require Passports To Visit Canada; No New Restrictions

Whilst after July 1 residents of foreign countries adjacent to the United States require to be in possession of passports as a condition of entry to that country, there has been no change in the Canadian Immigration regulations. American tourists and visitors are cordially welcomed to Canada and do not require passports to enter the Dominion. Citizens of the United States still retain their pre-war freedom to enter and travel in Canada without any new restrictions.

In order to facilitate crossing the International Boundary in both directions, citizens of the United States by naturalization should be prepared to present their naturalization certificates, and citizens of other countries should be prepared to establish their legal admission to the United States either by record of admission or certificate of reentry. Citizens of enemy countries will, naturally, be subject to restrictions but these will not affect the movement of tourists from friendly or neutral countries, who will continue to be welcomed as they have been in the past.

The United States Department of State advises that, "The new (United States) regulations impose no additional requirements on United States citizens and they may, as heretofore, proceed to Canada and return to the United States without any specified documentation. They need have only as a matter of convenience the documentary evidence customarily carried in the past."

Bona fide American citizens should have no difficulty through answers to questions and otherwise in satisfying the Examining Immigration Officer. In case they are asked to show papers to establish their identity and place of residence, the possession of personal papers or other identifying documents would be helpful; for example, old passport, birth or baptismal certificate, voter's certificate, tax bills, letters of identification from a bank manager or responsible municipal official, personal letters, car license, driver's license or similar papers.

It is suggested that naturalized citizens carry with them their naturalization certificates.

Citizens of other countries, including Canadian citizens, who are permanent legal residents of the United States should secure a reentry permit from the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service before departing from the United States. Application for a reentry permit should be made approximately 30 days before departure. The fee for a permit is $3.00 and a separate application must be made for each person. A reentry permit is valid for only one year and may be used for only one entry to the United States. Should such a citizen leave the United States without a reentry permit, a new immigration visa, involving fees and documents, must be secured from the United States Consular Authorities before he can reenter the United States. Persons who visit Canada frequently should apply to the nearest office of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service for a border identification card.

FASHION for today

Corsetlike Waistline

If you want an unusually pretty style for summer cottons, choose 8634. It's such a charming thing, with corsetlike section that whittles your waistline to the diminishing point, a very full skirt and peasant-inspired bodice. Wear it around the house right now, and have two or three like it to take on your vacation. It has flattering qualities that will stand you in good stead when you meet critical strangers on your summer travels!

Choose checked gingham, flowered percale or chintz for this design, in colors as bright as the lines are crisp and youthful. And for street wear, with a big hat and wedge-soled shoes, a dress like this will be smart in spun rayon or flat crepe—with the braid omitted and the neckline bound.

Pattern No. 8634 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20.

Pattern 8642—Brief and chubby people with a lot of sand-digging and ball-rolling to do, will rejoice in the cool comfort of this sports outfit (8642).

The play suit has straps placed close upon the shoulder so that they won't slide off. The bolero, to put on when the sun is too hot on one's bare skin, has cool outstanding, pleated sleeves. The sun bonnet is comfortably eye-shading in front and air-conditioned in back.

Gingham, linen, calico and broadcloth are good sturdy materials to choose. All three tiny garments are easy to make.

Pattern No. 8462 is designed for sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years.

CHAPTER 5 SYNOPSIS

Len Rollins, tennis ace, dreamer of fame and glory when, as a member of the Davis cup team he would play for America. But he is in love with Grace Worthington, rich and socially prominent, and is willing to defy her family to marry her—if he gives up tennis. Fate intervenes. He injures his ankle and the doctors tell him he will never play again. He and Grace are married and live happily on the salary he earns as a salesman in a sporting goods store. As his ankle heals he is expected to return to the courts. He has agreed to play in a tournament on the Sunday Grace's family invites them both to the country for a week end. Grace is alone.

He could not sleep Saturday night. Sunday morning he tried to read, but Grace's condemning words were on every page. He took the book from him and turned on the radio. But the music failed to soothe him. He kept thinking that Grace were present so he could have it out with her and the subject finally decided. He thought of telephoning her, but decided against it; doing that would make him appear guilty. "Good God, he was guilty? Guilty as hell! It was an easy victory. So much for her, he reflected as he took his shower, than would be his consent over Grace. With her, he couldn't even sure—

He stayed at home all of Sunday evening, but she did not return. Finally he went to bed and fell into a restless, troubled sleep. When he arrived home from work the next day she was there. "Hello," her voice and the lips raised to his were cool. "Dick told me in from Easthampton. I made him stay to dinner." Len shook hands with Whyte. "Of course. Glad to see you." Whyte seated in the big chair near the window, was more acutely aware than before of the other's good looks, his poise, his social grace. "I hear you're doing awfully well," Whyte said. "Cracking the tennis world the way you used to crack a tennis ball." Len could not explain to himself why he resented Whyte. There was something in his tone, perhaps. "I've had one or two good ones, I guess," he replied with a smile. Grace said: "But he's still a tennis player at heart and not a business man, Dick. Aren't you, Len?"

Len bit his lip. What the hell was Grace doing—making sport of him before this other man? He was in the wrong; he knew that. But he'd been wrong before about things and she'd never acted this way. Was this her idea of punishing him?
Conversation during the simple dinner was for the most part friendly, but cool and restrained. At last they had cigarettes and coffee in the living room. Then Whyte took his leave. He thanked them for their hospitality, complimented them on the charm of the apartment and hoped they'd be out at Easthampton very soon.
Grace walked from the foyer back into the living room and switched on the radio. She sat in the big chair which Whyte had recently vacated. For some reason this bothered Len. But he kept his voice level, unexcited, when he spoke.

She sat on the hamper, sobbing quietly

"I want you to know," he said, "why I didn't tell you about my being scheduled to play yesterday afternoon. I meant to tell you that same evening you told me about the invitation to Easthampton. I let you know frankly and honestly how I felt about going out there. Then later I realized that if I mentioned anything about tennis it would appear—"
She nodded without interest, made no reply.
"All right," he went on, "all right. So you don't believe me?" She leaned forward in her chair. "No. Absolutely not."
He felt anger surging through him and groped for something to say that would hurt her. "You're leaning backward just because of your silly prejudice toward something I once loved as much as—"
He didn't finish the sentence, in his own surprise and discomfort at the words he had spoken.
Tears came into her eyes. He jumped up and switched off the radio. "Now we'll settle this thing once and for all," he shouted. But she rose and walked from the room. He followed her. She went into the bathroom, slammed and locked the door.
He went back into the living room. He couldn't remember when he'd ever been so angry about anything. Darn women anyway with their narrow, single-track minds! Why he had ever married was more than he could understand. Throwing freedom away in exchange for—what? Why, for practically everything he wanted to do he had to question himself first: "Will it be all right with Grace?" or "Will Grace be willing?" or say, "I'd better be sure Grace hasn't made other plans." That's the way it went constantly. Grace this, Grace that, Grace the other thing. Grace—
What the devil was she doing in there? She wouldn't be a little fool. Of course not. An argument—sure. But she wouldn't—Bathroom. The word bothered him. He didn't like it. It made him think of razor blades and iodine. Only yesterday in the paper he had read—he was at the bathroom door knocking on it loudly.

"Are you all right?" He rattled the knob. "I'll smash the door down if you don't answer." "I'm—all right," came in a small muffled voice.
"Then open the door or I'll—"
He threw himself against it. The lock turned over. He twisted the knob. Opened the door.
A great and overwhelming relief flooded him. There was neither razor blade nor iodine bottle in sight. She was merely sitting on the black and white hamper, sobbing quietly.
It was stock checking time at the shop and Len was counting and rearranging equipment. Perched ten feet above the floor he took the boxes Weir handed up to him stacking them on the stock room shelves. Another row and the ladder would have to be moved. He considered changing it even before starting the next shelf, but decided to reach the distance. By stretching, arms fully extended, he could manage. The first box was placed. The second one slid as he tried to put it on top of the first.

It happened even before he had time to prepare himself, to regain his equilibrium. The sharp intake of Weir's breath and his own short cry were simultaneous with the scraping of the ladder as it went out from under him. One thought flashed penetratingly clear in his mind as he felt himself whirling through space—the ankle! His hands flayed for something to hold to; his feet, legs and body prepared themselves for the shock they knew must come on collision with the hard cement of the stock room floor.
And then miraculously he was standing there, shaken, white-faced, breathlessly amazed that he was safe and Weir was inquiring solicitously if he was hurt.
He shook his head, still puzzled at the marvel that he had managed to land upright. That he had landed, the full weight and force of his six feet and one hundred and eighty pounds, almost upon the weak left foot. And the ankle had not given way!
Unbelievably, his breathing not yet regular, he trotted around, experimenting. Why, the ankle felt fine! Showed not the least bit of strain under the terrific jolt it had just withstood.
"That the foot that was injured?" Weir queried, his voice a little strained, his face flushed from the fright of having seen young Rollins come hurtling through space.
Len nodded. "Yes. Funny isn't it? They told me if anything like this ever happened it would—but it's funny. Very damn funny! I wonder"—he shrugged. "Shall—shall we finish up?"
Dr. Leopold Weingrat was a short, totally bald man with large owl-like eyes. The specialist listened carefully while Len told him everything; about the accident, the removal of the bandages, what the hospital doctors had said about his never being able to play again, of his fall from the ladder. Not once did Dr. Weingrat interrupt, but when Len had finished speaking he nodded thoughtfully. "So—" he said, then ordered Len to take off his shoe and sock.

The doctor placed the foot upon an ottoman under a dazzling white light. His fingers moved swiftly, surely, over the skin and flesh and bone. He slapped gently, twisted. "Hurt?" he grunted. Len shook his head. "That?" Another twist. "That?" Still another twist, the other way. Five minutes of this, then he growled, "We'll X-ray it—that is best. So far—" he shrugged his heavy shoulders.
"So far—what, Doctor?"
"All right. Perfectly all right. But I can't be sure, young man—yet." He wagged a finger. But I'm not often wrong, young man. No, not often." He crossed the room and wheeled the X-ray machine into position. Four pictures were taken—one from each side, one from the top and another from the bottom. "Come tomorrow at this time," Dr. Weingrat said unemotionally, "and I'll let you know."
"So," Dr. Weingrat greeted Len when he was ushered in next day, "on time, eh? Sit down." He came to Len with pieces of something that looked like photograph film in his hand. Then punctuated his speech with flourishes of the hand that held the X-ray revelations.
"Young man," his voice was gruff but kind. "Your case is a very strange one. There is a small bone in the ankle—" there followed a detailed scientific and technical explanation which Len somehow survived.
". . . and therefore," Dr. Weingrat concluded, while Len hung breathlessly on every terse word as it came from the specialist's thick lips, "there is no reason, none at all, why you shouldn't play tennis if you want to. That ankle you need never worry about again. It is as strong as—well, strong as that of a young horse."
The room was spinning. Len, trying to keep his voice from cracking, merely said, "I'll leave my name and address with the nurse so you'll know where to send the bill."
And then, in a daze he found his way out into the street. People were passing by and automobiles were humming along Park Avenue, losing themselves in the ramp that ran around the Grand Central Building. But Len was not entirely conscious of his surroundings. The people, the traffic, the sounds of the city, the heat of the day, his own moving body were vague. He was on a court, wide with perfectly chalked lines running parallel and others intersecting at given distances.

And over green grass gleaming whiteclad figures were swinging racquets as a white ball flew over a correctly sloping net, and there was applause that sounded like rain beating heavily on a tin roof. And one of the players was himself.
During the next month Len played at different clubs against men who were ranked in the first ten. Topnotch competition quickly brought back his game. He was, in fact, better than he had ever been before. Since his enforced retirement his stroking and service appeared to have improved both in power and skill. The newspapers gave him columns of space and mentioned him frequently in connection with the Davis Cup team.
There was a change in his relationship to Grace—subtle, but definite. She dined alone now when he was late instead of waiting for him and often was not home when he came in. No longer did she storm or plead with him about running off week ends leaving her alone. It seemed, after that first stormy scene when he had told her about Dr. Weingrat's diagnosis, that she had resigned herself to the inevitable.

But it was Frank Wheatley who first opened Len's eyes and then Len blamed Grace and not himself. He went directly home following a match to have it out with her, but she was not there. By the time she did arrive, he had exaggerated the truth a hundredfold.

Producers Will Receive Notice When To Report

A. A. A. Office Asks All Producers To Cooperate With Dept.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration office at Amherst is making preparations to sign 1940 applications for Cotton Parity payments. Each producer will receive a notice to call at the county agent's office when his application is ready for his signature.

Farmers of Lamb County are urged not to call at the office until they are notified by card. The AAA office asks that every producer cooperate in this respect, and they assure producers that every possible effort will be exerted in getting applications ready at the earliest possible date.

Due to the fact that compliance started at an earlier date in 1940 than it did in 1939, it is possible to begin taking applications for Cotton Parity payment at an earlier date this year. Ending July 27, 1940, 70 percent of the cultivated acreage in Lamb County has been checked for performance, according to K. W. Wells, County Performance supervisor. The splendid cooperation that the producers have given field men in checking performance is much appreciated by the AAA office.

The 1941 wheat allotment, yield per acre, and premium will be received by wheat producers within a few days.

All wheat producers who wish to insure their 1941 wheat crop may call by the AAA office and they will be glad to explain the type of insurance the producer may take out on his 1941 wheat crop.

August 31, 1940 or prior to the seeding of wheat, whichever is the earlier, is the closing date for insuring the 1941 wheat crop.

The following is an example of the amount of wheat that may be insured in 1941 on a farm:

Allotment	40 acres.
Yield	9 bushels.
Cost per acre	$1.80

If the operator on the above farm pays one-third rent, it will cost him 48 bushels of wheat, or $26.88 to guarantee him 180 bushels of wheat in 1941.

Irrigation has been set up as a special practice in Lamb County for 1941, so farmers practicing irrigation will be able to insure for a greater production at a lower cost than was possible last year.

Producers may feel free at any time to call by the county office and they will be glad to explain any phase of the program.

All Commissioners Returned To Office

The members of the Commissioners court were all returned to office in Saturday's Democratic primary. Jack Crawford defeated his opponent, Bill Yates, in Precinct No. 1. Crawford received 696 votes, and Yates 320 votes.

Paul Lewis, commissioner of Precinct No. 2, and G. M. Vann, commissioner of Precinct No. 3, did not have opponents.

M. D. Abbott defeated E. L. (Jack) Yarbrough in the race for commissioner of Precinct No. 4. Abbott received 570 votes and Yarbrough 440 votes.

Lamb County Gives Connolly Big Vote

Lamb county joined the rest of the state in giving a big majority in Saturday's Democratic primary for Senator Tom Connolly, candidate for re-election. In Lamb county, Senator Connolly received 3,125 votes. A. B. Belcher received 370 votes and Guy B. Fisher 208 votes.
