

J. W. HAYS ADDRESSES FARM ASS'N SATURDAY

HAYS PURPOSE OF ASSOCIATION NOT TO BEAT DEBTS, BUT SEEKS CHANCE TO MEET OBLIGATIONS

J. W. Hays, of Hale county, prominent in the Farmers' Holiday association of this section, repeatedly emphasized that the new organization was not formed with intentions of beating just debts, but only to seek necessary legislation that would give the farmer an opportunity to meet his just obligations without the loss of his life's savings, in an address before a large group of farmers at the Littlefield City Hall Saturday afternoon.

CRYSTAL WILL ESTABLISH ICE STATION HERE

Construction Is Underway; "Cotton" Dobbs Will Be Manager

Construction is underway by the Crystal Ice Co. of Lubbock in the building of a modern one-story ice station at Fifth street and South Nichell.

The new station will be refrigerated, will have a 20-ton vault, and will be equipped with a scoring and packing machine.

The new station will occupy a portion of a lot 50 by 150 feet, purchased by the Crystal Ice Co., which is owned by W. Paul Faulkner of Lubbock, and A. G. Winn of Sweetwater.

With an increase in business the company plans the building of an ice manufacturing plant. In the meantime ice will be brought in from Lubbock by truck.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD SUNDAY FOR MRS. CARRIE SMITH

The First Baptist Church of this city was filled to capacity Sunday afternoon, when friends from far and near gathered at three p. m. to pay their last respects to Mrs. Carrie Smith, who died at two o'clock Friday morning, April 14, at her home in the Daugherty community, near Baydada, following an illness of three weeks. Pneumonia was given as the cause of her death.

Mrs. Smith was the mother of Mrs. M. Hutson and Misses Virgie Mae and Dovey Smith.

Rev. J. F. Grizzle officiated at the funeral services, and interment took place immediately thereafter in the Littlefield Cemetery, under the direction of Hammons Funeral Home.

The pallbearers were: Pat Boone, E. Norman, J. C. Houk, B. L. Cogill, D. G. Hobbs, and Roy Shotwell.

Deceased was a resident of Littlefield for three years, coming here from Hereford, Texas, where she had lived for five years. She only moved to her farm home at Daugherty about a month ago, where she was making her home with her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Todd Day.

She was born November 27, 1877, making her fifty-five years of age at her death. She was the widow of W. E. Smith, her husband having predeceased her three years ago.

Deceased had been a member of the Baptist Church for many years, and was a member of the First Baptist while in Littlefield.

She was survived by three sons and three daughters; D. A., of Mesa, Arizona, and Ernest and Gene of Daugherty, Mrs. Hutson and Misses Virgie Mae and Dovey of Littlefield, three sisters, Mrs. Day of Daugherty. (Continued on Last Page)

LARGE NUMBER OF CHILDREN TAKE PART IN EASTER EGG HUNT SUNDAY

Police Take 12 From Freight Train For Investigation

Twelve men were taken from a freight train in Littlefield Monday afternoon by officers and taken to the Littlefield City Hall for investigation.

This investigation was carried out by officers as part of the program in the search for the men who robbed the Muleshoe bank. All those who were investigated here Monday were found to have had no connection with the Muleshoe robbery and were immediately released. Deputy Sheriff L. Walraven was in charge of the local investigation. He was assisted by John Blair and B. L. Cogill.

Mr. Hays was introduced by C. W. Smiley, president of the Littlefield unit of the Farmers' Holiday association who presided at the meeting.

Seek Better Markets

Among the many purposes of the association, pointed out by Mr. Hays, is the establishing of a stable market for the farm commodities that would assure production and a fair margin of profit for the producer.

He also stated that the larger companies of the United States were using lobbyists successfully to bring about legislation that would protect the larger corporation's interest even at the cost of the farmers and small town business man by additional taxation.

"Some of the major companies," Mr. Hays continued, "are guaranteed as much as six per cent profit on their investment by the government, at the expense of debt and tax burdened farmers and small town business men, while according to statistics, 72 per cent of the children in cities under 10,000 population are undernourished. And this happens in a nation with a vast surplus of farm products."

Mr. Hays also urged the farmers to "stand behind the local merchants, bankers, newspaper and business men," pointing out that they were spokes in the wheel of the community.

Given Temporary Relief

In a letter from Arthur P. Duggan, senator from this district, the various farm organizations of this section were informed that a bill declaring a moratorium on all county sales for 30 days was passed early in April.

Mr. Duggan's letter reads in part: "This law was given for such a short time for the reason that it is expected that both the Federal and the State government will enact some permanent measure that will save the homes by the time this law expires. If not, it will simply be extended again. I think you, and the other farmers and home owners in that section may depend upon it that the Legislature will give you ample protection before it is through X X X."

"I am very hopeful that this legislature may enact into law some real protection for the home owners, before the session is over, and I believe it will."

American Legion And Auxiliary to Have Chicken Supper

At a meeting of the local unit of the American Legion and Auxiliary Monday evening, April 10, it was decided to entertain with a chicken supper Monday evening, April 24.

A special program is expected to be arranged for that evening, and all members of the Legion and Auxiliary are invited to be present.

Claude Clark, Mess Sergeant, will have charge of the eats.

WORK UNDERWAY IN DRILLING OF NEW CITY WELL

Will Put City in Position to Get Three Per Cent Insurance Cut

Work is underway by the city in the drilling of a new water well north and east of the present wells, according to City Commissioner Carl Arnold.

This new well will give the city a per capita water supply in accordance with state requirements, and will put the city in a position to get a three per cent reduction in the insurance key rate.

The new well will be a 12-inch type.

Several Littlefield Women Attend Club Meeting at Hereford

Both the Woman's and Junior Study Clubs of Littlefield are being represented at the Seventh District convention of the Women's Federated Clubs, which is being held in Hereford Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week.

Mrs. Pat Boone, who was elected delegate at the club's meeting on April 5, to represent the local Woman's Study club, left Wednesday morning for Hereford, accompanied by Miss Lora Ann and Mrs. Jack Johnson, as delegates from the Junior club. They plan on returning Friday afternoon.

Mrs. W. H. Gardner, president, and Mrs. J. H. Barnett, treasurer, of the local Woman's club, plan on attending the meeting Friday.

Mrs. F. G. Sadler, chairman of the American Home Department of the Seventh District, left Littlefield Wednesday morning, joining several club women in Lubbock, enroute to the meeting in Hereford. Those who accompanied Mrs. Sadler to the convention were: Mrs. Bob Higgins of Hereford; Mrs. W. Y. Burden of Wellington; Mrs. C. E. Duke of Tulsa, Division Chairmen; Mrs. A. T. Biggars, president of the City Federation of Lubbock; and Mrs. James H. Goodman, president of the Twentieth Century Club of Lubbock. Mrs. Sadler will serve as Resolution Chairman at the convention.

Grass was seen growing on a downtown street in New York city the other day and a newspaper commented upon the fact.

Leader Moving To New Location

With the publication of the next issue of the Lamb County Leader, this paper will occupy its new location at 412 Phelps avenue, next door to the Enoch Land company.

Workmen will start moving the machinery to the new location Thursday morning. However, this will not interfere with the Leader taking care of your printing requirements, promptly and rendering efficient service to the public.

FIRE DESTROYS DUPLEX APARTMENT TUESDAY MORNING

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the Jock Henry apartments, a short distance south of the city hall, about three o'clock Tuesday morning.

The fire was discovered by W. J. Chesher, and when the fire department reached the scene a few minutes later, the entire house was in flames.

Mrs. F. E. Beard and daughter, Margaret, the only ones occupying quarters in the house at the time of the fire, were out of the city Tuesday night. Part of their furnishings, which were saved in the fire that destroyed their home a few weeks ago, were destroyed in the fire Tuesday morning.

A total of $2250 in insurance was carried on the house and furnishings, it was reported.

In need of money, a New York woman decided to rent her phonograph records. She is doing well.

BROWNFIELD GOLFERS DOWN LOCALS SUNDAY

Littlefield to Meet Lubbock Country Club In Next Match

The Littlefield Golf club lost their second match in the South Plains golf tournament Sunday afternoon when they were downed by a team from Brownfield by a final score of 13 to 10. The locals lost the first match of the tournament to Slaton, Sunday, April 2.

Bob Badger, of the Littlefield club, took the major match of the Sunday match by winning over his Brownfield opponent on the 23rd green.

Littlefield is scheduled to meet the Lubbock country club team in their third match of the tournament Sunday, April 30, at Lubbock. This promises to be Littlefield's most difficult contest of the entire tournament, with Lubbock already victorious over both the Lubbock Meadowbrook and Slaton clubs.

Will Take Over Duties in Few Days; Succeeds Homer Hall

James G. (Jimmie) Singer has been appointed acting postmaster of the Littlefield post office, according to a letter received Tuesday by Mr. Singer from Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Announcement of Mr. Singer's appointment also was made in news dispatches from Washington.

Will Assume Duties Soon

Mr. Singer will take over his duties within the next few days. He will succeed Homer Hall, Littlefield business man, who has served as acting postmaster since October last.

Mr. Singer is receiving congratulations on his appointment from a large number of the citizens of Littlefield and district.

"I fully realize the trust which has been placed in me by the government, and I will at all times strive to serve the people of Littlefield and district efficiently and aggressively," said Mr. Singer.

Active Civic Worker

Formerly one of the owners of the Littlefield telephone system, and for a number of years connected with the Southwestern Associated Telephone Co. in this city and district, Mr. Singer is well and favorably known.

He is a member of the Littlefield Rotary club, the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce, and the Masonic lodge, and is active in civic work.

LIQUOR MEASURE DELAYED IN HOUSE

A resolution proposing an amendment to the Texas constitution to legalize the sale of intoxicating liquors, regardless of alcoholic content, was withdrawn from consideration of the house of the state legislature Tuesday when its sponsor, Weaver Moore, of Houston, and opponent, Harry Graves of Georgetown, almost tangled when Graves presented a statement made by Moore.

The house already had passed to the senate and the upper branch committee on constitutional amendments had recommended favorably a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to permit the sale of beer of not more than 3.2 per cent alcoholic content.

Moore brought the amendment up and proposed that it be considered on August 26, the same date set for a vote by the electorate on the proposition whether beer should be legalized.

Feeder's Day to Be Held at Spur Experiment Station

Since the establishment of the Spur experiment station in 1909 through the act of the Texas Legislature, much attention has been given to the introduction, development and growing and utilization of feed crops for the drier sections of the west. Development and growing of feed crops make much faster progress than utilization. With this thought in view the Spur experiment station adopted, a number of years ago, as one of its major activities, a study pertaining to the utilization of West Texas feeds on the farms where they were being grown.

Farm feeding in Texas, and West Texas in particular, is rapidly becoming one of the leading sources of farm revenues. Feeding facts developed in carefully conducted experiments, have done much to reduce the risk element in feeding and to convince the skeptical that the sorghum grains and forces are excellent for production of pork, mutton, beef, butter and eggs.

"Feeder's Day" will be held at the Spur experiment station on May 5, at which time the final feed lot results of 168 days feeding tests on five pertinent feeding problems will be announced:

- (1) Which is the best variety of bundle feed?
- (2) Does it pay to grind bundle feed for yearling steers?
- (3) Can cotton seed be profitably substituted for cotton seed meal in the fattening of ration.
- (4) Is trench silage more profitable in the ration than cured bundle feed?
- (5) Is it profitable to add oyster shell flour to the ration of fattening steers?

85 head of steers divided into 8 feed lots are doing their part to answer these questions. Their answers in terms of pounds gained at the finish, and cost of grain is exceeding interesting.

A day at the Spur experiment station inspecting the feed tests and other experiments, and swapping experiences with other feeders from other sections should be profitable and enjoyable. Advance reports indicate representative delegations from 40 to 50 West Texas counties will attend. Representatives from the Texas A. & M. College, Texas Technological College, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and other institutions and industries will be in attendance. Also those interested in farm problems are invited.

A Great Opportunity for Service

WE'RE WISER NOW

The average Muleshoe citizen has learned in recent months that the great financiers, whose names have for so long been spoken in awe and with abated breath, are not supermen after all, but merely money handlers. Their feet are of clay, the same as other people's.

There never again, at least in our time, is going to be the confidence in the forecasts and predictions of the nation's so-called "eminent financiers." Why, we used to think the big fellows knew all about finance, and that they had a knowledge of money that the ordinary man could not acquire. They were above the clouds and out of reach of the common, ordinary man. But we've changed our minds lately, and today all of us are convinced that they are no more able to handle great projects involving the use of large sums of money than the ordinary back country banker, not a bit.

The way big financial leaders, men like Kreuger, the match king, and Insull, the power magnate, have folded up and faded out of the picture leaving a trail of bankrupt companies and people behind them, has made us see things in a different light. The superman in finance has shown what he is, and only the most gullible will ever again be deceived by his loud claims to the possession of great financial ability. The common, ordinary citizen has been dumb about money matters for a long time, but he has to cut his wisdom teeth now. In future the forecasts and predictions of "eminent financiers" will go right in one of our ears and out the other. Mr. Average Citizen is going to do his own financing in the future. And the worst he can do will be as good as the so-called "experts" have been doing.—Muleshoe Journal.

Our only comment: "Amen, Jess."

LET'S GIVE THEM A CHANCE

Have you ever observed the vast amount of talent Littlefield possesses in music and other arts?

Has it ever occurred to you that greater opportunities should be afforded for the use and development of this talent?

Excellent qualifications for participating in the providing of various forms of entertainment are possessed by a large number of Littlefield residents from the tot to men and women who can look back on many years.

Too much cannot be spoken and written in commendation and appreciation of these talented people. Properly encouraged and supported these residents are capable of becoming the "life of the town."

When music and other arts are given an opportunity for development, a great contribution to the good of the community has been made.

What are we going to do with our talented people? Are we going to encourage them, work with them and for them in their interests, our interests, the interests of our city and community, or are we going to let these people just drift along?

It is a civic duty to encourage those finer things which are very much a part of good citizenship.

When we have nothing to say it's best to say nothing, but few of us can do that.

The best of all shock absorbers is a sense of humor.

If you can sleep soundly and digest your food painlessly, you're in pretty good condition.

SYNOPSIS

The bleak November day Joyce Ashen, poor stenographer, was in a skidding taxi-cab in Chicago. Next thing she remembered was two years later when she woke one morning to find herself in a luxurious house in California, with a wedding ring on her hand, and a pleasant young man, addressing her as Frills, telling her to be careful after her fall from her horse of the day before. Her husband was Neil Packard, rich fruit packer. Confused and troubled, she tried to find out more about herself and from letters in her desk found that she had been a heartless, frivolous young woman and had become involved in a serious affair with a man named Maitland. Later, when he came to see her, he was hurt and surprised when she tried to repulse him, but he finally left her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Before the stranger reached her, she had time to see that he was a thin, unimpressive type with reddish hair and tiny sandy mustache, neatly clipped. His features were small and his blue eyes twinkled. His plain gray business suit, which lacked all trace of style, was in need of pressing and his wide commensense shoes were dusty and scratched.

"Well, Frills, how's the beautiful bean feeling today? Golly, you women are lucky, the way you get thrown around and not get hurt! Now a man, who has to use his head, would have been just the fellow to get a crack that would put him out of business completely."

Joyce smiled up at him easily. This man was not in love with her, she knew instinctively. He was friendly enough, but impersonal.

"Oh, is that so?" she retorted. "Well, the Lord must have thought women's brains more important than men's, if he protected them so much better."

"Ha! Well, I haven't time for any arguments on the equality of the sexes now, just dropped in to see what you looked like so I can send Neil a wire that everything is O. K."

"Of course! This was the doctor!"

"Well, I'm all right," she replied, and then it occurred to her that she had better not be too well if she wished to stave off the hordes of friends who were trying to draw her back into their activities. "But it shook me up and I'm going to cut out some of the Jazz for this week anyhow . . . You might tell people it's by your orders."

"Ha! You don't expect anybody would believe that you were obeying any orders of mine, do you? When have you ever taken my advice, young lady?"

He stared at her with such a sudden keen searching look in his blue eyes that Joyce blushed deeper than ever.

"Advice comes natural to a doctor, Frills," he went on. "If you are going to take advice, I wish you'd take some I've given you long ago. Quit this excessive smoking! Look at the way you fidget."

"But I haven't smoked since day before yesterday," retorted Joyce triumphantly, "so it can't be that."

"It can't? Whew! No wonder you are nervous! Don't you know you can't cut it out all at once? Not a girl with your highly strung nervous system, who's been smoking at the terrific rate you have! Use a little commensense. Here, take this. If you white kid walking slippers. From the top of her head to her feet, Mrs. Paul Packard was immaculately well dressed and well groomed.

"If she affected Frills one-half as unpleasantly as she does me," thought Joyce, "she wouldn't be on speaking terms with me now, or at least Frills would have put the fear of God into her."

"You escaped a very serious injury," went on the visitor. "Have you had Dr. Ellison make a thorough examination?"

"No, I haven't," replied Joyce. Her welcoming smile faded out, and sitting down again, she puffed at her cigarette, waiting in defensive silence. If this was Laurine, deliver her from any more in-laws!

"Well, I should certainly think he would have done it . . . I do wish you would consult him. I feel certain he would think a thorough internal examination the only safe thing to do after such an accident as yours . . . A stitch in time saves nine."

Joyce wanted to add, "And an apple a day keeps the doctor away," but

Maitland has two separate apartments in the city, not just the one where the men have their stag parties.

want to cut out smoking, do it gradually." He handed her a cigarette with a decisive gesture which made refusal impossible.

Joyce took it, her hand shaking. But before she had even raised it to her mouth, they were interrupted by the arrival of Roxie. "Dr. Ellison, the Gates Hospital wants to speak to you, sir."

The doctor jumped to his feet. "Thanks, Roxie, just tell them I'll be right there. Good-bye, Frills, I'll drop in again later," and he was off without a backward glance.

Joyce drew a breath of relief. "Another one killed off! That message was sheer luck. I couldn't light this cigarette with him looking on," she murmured.

She successfully lighted the cigarette and puffed at it daintily. After a few moments, however, her attention was suddenly distracted by the approach of a woman. In her renewed agitation, Joyce swallowed a mouthful of smoke, which to her surprise she found herself expelling through her nostrils and mouth without any sensation of strangeness. Automatically her breathing apparatus was performing a familiar operation!

Fortified to meet another visitor, she rose to her feet and smiled greeting at the newcomer.

"Well, my dear Frills, what a fortunate child you are!"

Her caller, who seated herself without waiting for an invitation, was a woman about forty years old with a delicate skin still fine in texture. She had large pale blue eyes, a straight little nose, and a thin-lipped mouth whose corners dropped with a petulant, complaining expression. Her feet were shod in beautiful fitting she kept quiet, wondering how much longer Laurine would stick to this particular subject.

Laurine changed the subject. "Delphine sent her love to you and hopes you're feeling quite recovered from the accident, and Paul said to tell you he'd probably run in some time today. He's having lunch at the club with Otis Clark and a business friend from the city, and they're going to play golf all afternoon, with Art Belmain to make up a foursome."

It was nearly an hour later when Mrs. Paul Packard rose from the marble bench. She had touched on a multitude of subjects, ranging from the newest cold cream and its wonderful effects, to the details of the recent confinement of a Mrs. Williams.

The effect of this call on Joyce was a wearily annoyed feeling that she had suffered more than the net results in the way of enlightening facts were worth.

"By the way, Delphine told me that she saw Arthur Maitland one night having dinner at the Palace with what she called a 'jazz baby' in a vermilion evening dress. And I heard from someone else, though I won't repeat the name because if there's one thing I pride myself on, it's not spreading scandal or gossip—but it's a woman who spends a lot of her time in the city, and you know her almost as well as I do—that Maitland has two separate apartments in the city, not just the one where the men have their stag parties. I think you ought to know those things because you're so careless about appearances and it's a crying shame the way you run around with a man like Arthur Maitland."

In the midst of the resentful fury that seized Joyce at the nerve of the woman for mixing into her private affairs she could not help feeling admiration for Laurine's courage. She had thought of Frills as a dynamic being who would not for a moment have tolerated the rebuke or advice of such a complacent upholder of middle-aged conventionalities. She herself was speechless, wholly unprepared, and no match for Laurine's methods of attack. It occurred to her, however, that this information of the second apartment might be used later in her handling of Maitland, and she could not help being a little grateful to Laurine for furnishing her with any weapon.

Laurine, not waiting for the scarlet-faced Joyce to reply, went on calmly. "When you're a little older, my dear, and have had as much experience as I have of the world, you'll realize it's foolish to put any trust in a man who is so lacking in principle that he can deliberately compromise a married woman. Nine times out of ten, he won't be faithful to her, and when she's been made a fool of she'll find that she was only one of a number of other silly women. Arthur Maitland is no different from the rest. Well, I must run along now. And do come over soon, my dear. Paul and I are always glad to welcome you, and no matter what happens, you must feel you have a refuge in our simple home . . ."

Joyce was left alone again, plunged into another whirl of emotions. "I'm getting so many new things to think about, so many anxieties all at once to this business of being Frills Packard, that it makes me dizzy trying to fit them together. Whew, but Mrs. Paul Packard is a fearful and wonderful female! I'll bet all I have that she's telling everyone she knows about Arthur Maitland's other apartment. If it weren't that it helped me find out more about life here, I should have been bored to death by Laurine. . . ."

She picked up the letters again and re-read the ones from "Sophie" with a growing longing to see the baby. Fired by this feeling, she went into the house to hunt for Sophie's address. But there was no Sophie in the little pigskin book.

She had wandered out onto the sunny sleeping porch still pondering Laurine's conversation, when she heard the rattle of a machine which sounded like a Ford driving into the grounds. She ran downstairs, our across the terrace and around to the garage. Yes, there was Sam just getting down from the machine, and in his arms was a little black and white dog. "Here you are, Mrs. Packard, the Marches were glad to get a home for Dickie," and he set the wriggling bunch down on the ground, and laughed as it strained its leash.

"Oh, thank you, Sam, he's a darling!" exclaimed Joyce, stooping to pat the chunky little square head.

Dickie wriggled as Sam released him from the leash and responded amiably to her patting but after a moment he looked about excitedly, dashing away from her a few feet and barking sharply, then returning again. "What does he want, do you suppose, Sam?" asked Joyce, mystified by his behavior.

"He's looking for a stick," explained Sam. "That's what you want, isn't it Dickie?"

Sam picked up a smooth, round piece of wood, showed it to Dickie who jumped frantically for it, and then threw it as far as he could. Dickie dashed after it tumultuously. Then he came romping back to Sam, who commanded, "Go take it to Mrs. Packard, Dickie, that's your lady now. Go on, give it to Mrs. Packard."

Dickie, his wide pink-lipped mouth clamped tightly over his precious stick, rolled his expressive brown eyes up at Sam in a speculative sort of way. Then he turned and trotted over to Joyce.

"There, that's enough stick for a while. You're all out of breath. Come with me, darling, and get acquainted with your new home," said Joyce finally, "thank you, Sam, I'm ever so grateful to you for getting me such a perfectly sweet dog as Dickie."

There was a look of puzzled surprise in Sam's face as he answered, "Oh, that's all right. I'm sure glad you like him, Mrs. Packard."

When Joyce sat down in a comfortable lounge chair on the terrace, Dickie came to her side and, resting his blunt chin with his queer, soft drooping lips on the edge of it, looked up at her pleadingly. She was delighted that he accepted her so promptly, and her spirits rose when she thought of having his companionship. She felt less alone in an incredible world. With Dickie she need never pretend to be Frills Packard.

When Roxie came to find her and announce that her luncheon was ready, Joyce was amused to see the distrust with which she eyed the sleeping Dickie. She did not look surprised, and Joyce knew that she had probably, with Marcia, been watching the game of stick out in the garden. Just as Joyce left the dining-room she heard the whir of a motor outside the door, and before she could decide whether to retreat through the kitchen or make a dash for the stairs, two young women entered the house and greeted her loudly.

"Hello, Frills, how are you? Say, you don't look so bad!"

WE'RE WISER NOW

The average Muleshoe citizen has learned in recent months that the great financiers, whose names have for so long been spoken in awe and with abated breath, are not supermen after all, but merely money handlers. Their feet are of clay, the same as other people's.

There never again, at least in our time, is going to be the confidence in the forecasts and predictions of the nation's so-called "eminent financiers." Why, we used to think the big fellows knew all about finance, and that they had a knowledge of money that the ordinary man could not acquire. They were above the clouds and out of reach of the common, ordinary man. But we've changed our minds lately, and today all of us are convinced that they are no more able to handle great projects involving the use of large sums of money than the ordinary back country banker, not a bit.

The way big financial leaders, men like Kreuger, the match king, and Insull, the power magnate, have folded up and faded out of the picture leaving a trail of bankrupt companies and people behind them, has made us see things in a different light. The superman in finance has shown what he is, and only the most gullible will ever again be deceived by his loud claims to the possession of great financial ability. The common, ordinary citizen has been dumb about money matters for a long time, but he has to cut his wisdom teeth now. In future the forecasts and predictions of "eminent financiers" will go right in one of our ears and out the other. Mr. Average Citizen is going to do his own financing in the future. And the worst he can do will be as good as the so-called "experts" have been doing.—Muleshoe Journal.

Our only comment: "Amen, Jess."

LET'S GIVE THEM A CHANCE

Have you ever observed the vast amount of talent Littlefield possesses in music and other arts?

Has it ever occurred to you that greater opportunities should be afforded for use and development of this talent?

Excellent qualifications for participating in the providing of various forms of entertainment are possessed by a large number of Littlefield residents from the tot to men and women who can look back on many years.

Too much cannot be spoken and written in commendation and appreciation of these talented people. Properly encouraged and supported these residents are capable of becoming the "life of the town."

When music and other arts are given an opportunity for development, a great contribution to the good of the community has been made.

What are we going to do with our talented people? Are we going to encourage them, work with them and for them in their interests, our interests, the interests of our city and community, or are we going to let these people just drift along?

It is a civic duty to encourage those finer things which are very much a part of good citizenship.

When we have nothing to say it's best to say nothing, but few of us can do

A COMMON SENSE REMEDY TO HASTEN THE RETURN OF PROSPERITY

This sound philosophy of that great American, BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, is worth reading and following:

"What signifies wishing and hoping for better times? We may make these times better if we bestir ourselves. Industry need not wish and he that lives upon hope will die fasting. There are no gains without pains . . . .

"Industry pays debts, while despair increaseth them. Diligence is the mother of good luck, and God gives all to industry . . . .

Sixth Installment

SYNOPSIS
 bleak November day Joyce Ash, poor stenographer, was in a skid taxi-cab in Chicago. Next thing remembered was two years later when she woke one morning to find herself in a luxurious house in California, with a wedding ring on her hand, and a pleasant young man, addressing her as Frills, telling her to be careful after her fall from her perch of the day before. Her husband, Neil Packard, rich fruit packer, refused and troubled, she tried to get out more about herself and from her desk found that she had in a heartless, frivolous young man and had become involved in a serious affair with a man named Maitland. Later, when he came to see her, he was hurt and surprised when she tried to repulse him, but he finally left her.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Before the stranger reached her, she had time to see that he was a thin, impressive type with reddish faced tiny sandy mustache, neatly combed. His features were small and blue eyes twinkled. His plain gray business suit, which lacked all trace of style, was in need of pressing, and wide commensurate shoes were dusty and scuffed.

"Well, Frills, how's the beautiful man feeling today? Golly, you women are lucky, the way you get thrown around and not get hurt! Now a man, who has to use his head, would have been just the fellow to get a crack at would put him out of business completely."

Joyce smiled up at him easily. This man was not in love with her, she knew instinctively. He was friendly enough, but impersonal.

"Oh, is that so?" she retorted. "Well, the Lord must have thought women's brains more important than men's, if he protected them so much better."

"Ha! Well, I haven't time for any arguments on the equality of the sexes now, just dropped in to see what you looked like so I can send Neil a wire that everything is O. K."

"Of course! This was the doctor!"

"Well, I'm all right," she replied, and then it occurred to her that she had better not be too well if she wished to stave off the hordes of friends who were trying to draw her back into their activities. "But it shook me up and I'm going to cut out some of the Jazz for this week anyhow. . . . You might tell people it's by your orders."

"Ha! You don't expect anybody would believe that you were obeying any orders of mine, do you? When have you ever taken my advice, young lady?"

He stared at her with such a sudden keen searching look in his blue eyes that Joyce blushed deeper than ever.

"Advice comes natural to a doctor, Frills," he went on. "If you are going to take advice, I wish you'd take some I've given you long ago. Quit this excessive smoking! Look at the way you fidget."

"But I haven't smoked since day before yesterday," retorted Joyce triumphantly, "so it can't be that."

"It can't? Whew! No wonder you are nervous! Don't you know you can't cut it out all at once? Not a girl with your highly strung nervous system, who's been smoking at the terrific rate you have! Use a little commonsense. Here, take this. If you want to cut out smoking, do it gradually." He handed her a cigarette with a decisive gesture which made refusal impossible.

Maitland has two separate apartments in the city, not just the one where the men have their stag parties.

Joyce took it, her hand shaking. But before she had even raised it to her mouth, they were interrupted by the arrival of Roxie. "Dr. Ellison, the Gates Hospital wants to speak to you, sir."

The doctor jumped to his feet. "Thanks, Roxie, just tell them I'll be right there. Good-bye, Frills, I'll drop in again later," and he was off without a backward glance.

Joyce drew a breath of relief. "Another one killed off! That message was sheer luck. I couldn't light this cigarette with him looking on," she murmured.

She successfully lighted the cigarette and puffed at it daintily. After a few moments, however, her attention was suddenly distracted by the approach of a woman. In her renewed agitation, Joyce swallowed a mouthful of smoke, which to her surprise she found herself expelling through her nostrils and mouth without any sensation of strangeness. Automatically her breathing apparatus was performing a familiar operation!

Fortified to meet another visitor, she rose to her feet and smiled greeting at the newcomer.

"Well, my dear Frills, what a fortunate child you are!"

Her caller, who seated herself without waiting for an invitation, was a woman about forty years old with a delicate skin still fine in texture. She had large pale blue eyes, a straight little nose, and a thin-lipped mouth whose corners dropped with a petulant, complaining expression. Her feet were shod in beautiful fitting white kid walking slippers. From the top of her head to her feet, Mrs. Paul Packard was immaculately well dressed and well groomed.

"If she affected Frills one-half as unpleasantly as she does me," thought Joyce, "she wouldn't be on speaking terms with me now, or at least Frills would have put the fear of God into her."

"You escaped a very serious injury," went on the visitor. "Have you had Dr. Ellison make a thorough examination?"

"No, I haven't," replied Joyce. Her welcoming smile faded out, and sitting down again, she puffed at her cigarette, waiting in defensive silence. If this was Laurine, deliver her from any more in-laws!

"Well, I should certainly think he would have done it. . . . I do wish you would consult him. I feel certain he would think a thorough internal examination the only safe thing to do after such an accident as yours. . . . A stitch in time saves nine."

Joyce wanted to add, "And an apple a day keeps the doctor away," but she kept quiet, wondering how much longer Laurine would stick to this particular subject.

Laurine changed the subject. "Delphine sent her love to you and hopes you're feeling quite recovered from the accident, and Paul said to tell you he'd probably run in some time today. He's having lunch at the club with Otis Clark and a business friend from the city, and they're going to play golf all afternoon, with Art Belmain to make up a foursome."

It was nearly an hour later when Mrs. Paul Packard rose from the marble bench. She had touched on a multitude of subjects, ranging from the newest cold cream and its wonderful effects, to the details of the recent confinement of a Mrs. Williams.

The effect of this call on Joyce was a wearily annoyed feeling that she had suffered more than the net results in the way of enlightening facts were worth.

"By the way, Delphine told me that she saw Arthur Maitland one night having dinner at the Palace with what she called a 'jazz baby' in a vermilion evening dress. And I heard from someone else, though I won't repeat the name because if there's one thing I pride myself on, it's not spreading scandal or gossip—but it's a woman who spends a lot of her time in the city, and you know her almost as well as I do—that Maitland has two separate apartments in the city, not just the one where the men have their stag parties. I think you ought to know those things because you're so careless about appearances and it's a crying shame the way you run around with a man like Arthur Maitland."

In the midst of the resentful fury that seized Joyce at the nerve of the woman for mixing into her private affairs she could not help feeling admiration for Laurine's courage. She had thought of Frills as a dynamic being who would not for a moment have tolerated the rebuke or advice of such a complacent upholder of middle-aged conventionalities. She herself was speechless, wholly unprepared, and no match for Laurine's methods of attack. It occurred to her, however, that this information of the second apartment might be used later in her handling of Maitland, and she could not help being a little grateful to Laurine for furnishing her with any weapon.

Laurine, not waiting for the scarlet faced Joyce to reply, went on calmly. "When you're a little older, my dear, and have had as much experience as I have of the world, you'll realize it's foolish to put any trust in a man who is so lacking in principle that he can deliberately compromise a married woman. Nine times out of ten, he won't be faithful to her, and when she's been made a fool of she'll find that she was only one of a number of other silly women. Arthur Maitland is no different from the rest. Well, I must run along now. And do come over soon, my dear. Paul and I are always glad to welcome you, and no matter what happens, you must feel you have a refuge in our simple home. . . ."

Joyce was left alone again, plunged into another whirl of emotions. "I'm getting so many new things to think about, so many angles all at once to this business of being Frills Packard, that it makes me dizzy trying to fit them together. Whew, but Mrs. Paul Packard is a fearful and wonderful female! I'll bet all I have that she's telling everyone she knows about Arthur Maitland's other apartment. If it weren't that it helped me find out more about life here, I should have been bored to death by Laurine. . . ."

She picked up the letters again and re-read the ones from "Sophie" with a growing longing to see the baby. Fired by this feeling, she went into the house to hunt for Sophie's address. But there was no Sophie in the little pigskin book.

She had wandered out onto the sunny sleeping porch still pondering Laurine's conversation, when she heard the rattle of a machine which sounded like a Ford driving into the grounds. She ran downstairs, our across the terrace and around to the garage. Yes, there was Sam just getting down from the machine, and in his arms was a little black and white dog. "Here you are, Mrs. Packard, the Marches were glad to get a home for Dickie," and he set the wriggling bunch down on the ground, and laughed as it strained its leash.

"Oh, thank you, Sam, he's a darling!" exclaimed Joyce, stooping to pat the chunky little square head.

Dickie wriggled as Sam released him from the leash and responded amiably to her patting but after a moment he looked about excitedly, dashing away from her a few feet and barking sharply, then returning again. "What does he want, do you suppose, Sam?" asked Joyce, mystified by his behavior.

"He's looking for a stick," explained Sam, "That's what you want, isn't it Dickie?"

Sam picked up a smooth, round piece of wood, showed it to Dickie who jumped frantically for it, and then threw it as far as he could. Dickie dashed after it tumultuously. Then he came romping back to Sam, who commanded, "Go take it to Mrs. Packard, Dickie, that's your lady now. Go on, give it to Mrs. Packard."

Dickie, his wide pink-lipped mouth clamped tightly over his precious stick, rolled his expressive brown eyes up at Sam in a speculative sort of way. Then he turned and trotted over to Joyce.

"There, that's enough stick for a while. You're all out of breath. Come with me, darling, and get acquainted with your new home," said Joyce finally, "thank you, Sam, I'm ever so grateful to you for getting me such a perfectly sweet dog as Dickie."

There was a look of puzzled surprise in Sam's face as he answered, "Oh, that's all right. I'm sure glad you like him, Mrs. Packard."

When Joyce sat down in a comfortable lounge chair on the terrace, Dickie came to her side and, resting his blunt chin with his queer, soft drooping lips on the edge of it, looked up at her pleadingly. She was delighted that he accepted her so promptly, and her spirits rose when she thought of having his companionship. She felt less alone in an incredible world. With Dickie she need never pretend to be Frills Packard.

When Roxie came to find her and announce that her luncheon was ready, Joyce was amused to see the distrust with which she eyed the sleeping Dickie. She did not look surprised, and Joyce knew that she had probably, with Marcia, been watching the game of stick out in the garden."

Just as Joyce left the dining-room she heard the whir of a motor outside the door, and before she could decide whether to retreat through the kitchen or make a dash for the stairs, two young women entered the house and greeted her loudly.

"Hello, Frills, how are you? Say, you don't look so bad!"

Miss Maurine Harvey And Gordon Roberts Wed at Frederick

The marriage of Miss Maurine Harvey and Gordon Roberts was solemnized Monday afternoon at Frederick, Oklahoma, by the Rev. Mr. Stickler, pastor of the First Baptist church of that city.

Miss Fleeta Eagan accompanied the party to Frederick and witnessed the wedding ceremony.

The bride is the charming and popular young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Harvey; and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Roberts, all of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts were graduates of the 1932 class of the Littlefield high school.

After the ceremony the happy couple returned immediately to Littlefield, but left Saturday for Estelline, Texas, where Mr. Roberts is employed, and where they will make their home.

MISS GARLINGTON MAKES HONOR ROLL AT TECH COLLEGE

Evelyn Garlington of Littlefield made the winter term honor roll at Texas Technological College with an average of B plus on 18 term hours work.

DR. AND MRS. COBB MOVE TO AUSTIN

The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. M. V. Cobb will regret to learn that the doctor moved his household effects, etc., to Austin Friday last, where Mrs. Cobb has been for the past few weeks.

The doctor called at the Leader office to have the address on his paper changed to Austin, but said he planned on practicing his profession at Lockhart, Texas.

BRIDE HONORED AT TEA AND SHOWER FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Misses Mary Nell Keithley, Mary Ruth Newngt, and Fleeta Eagan entertained at an afternoon tea and miscellaneous shower Friday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Roberts on East Seventh Street, complimenting the bride, Mrs. Gordon Roberts.

Tea was served from three until five, and the honoree received many beautiful and useful gifts, including silverware, linens, dishes, bedding, etc.

The guest list included Mesdames John Harvey, Sarah Hart, Lynn Dobbs, C. W. Hill, Ray Bench, Lawrence Thornton, Zack Isbell, C. L. Harless, Herbert Martin, L. W. Jordan, Misses Prudence and Pauline Courtney, Fern Thornton, Olga Benson, Jewell Glover, Virginia Teal, Dorothy Newgent, Addie Mae Hemphill, Eva Gertrude and Louise Chisholm, Lucille Aven, Noreen Wiseman, Irene Hobbs and Margaret Crawford of Denton.

Contract Bridge

Submitted by Mrs. C. E. Cooper

One of the most difficult things for the beginner in contract bridge to learn is to be satisfied with a part score. More rubbers are lost because of the effort made by so many players to bid a game at every round of bidding than from any other cause—stretching the strength of the hand to bid just one more, if partner has vigorously supported, even when there is absolutely no added strength upon which to do this. This error, which is truly a serious one, must be overcome if the player expects to become a good player. It probably comes from playing the progressive game at social gatherings where a bonus is given for every game in hand. Speed the day when Littlefield players will turn from progressive to duplicate contract!

The next greatest loss comes from the timidity which prevents a player who has been supported by his partner from bidding again because he has shown every bit of honor-strength in his hand. He forgets that only eight out of the thirteen tricks are taken with honors.

There is no excuse for either of these errors because the scale of rebids is as quickly and easily learned as the honor-trick count and the assisting trick count. Here it is. Learn it and use it and your winnings will mount rapidly.

Count the number of total tricks in the hand, deduct four from it and bid again for each remaining trick. Remembering that only honor-tricks and long tricks are counted in the declarer's hand and that each card in the trump suit in excess of four counts one full trick while each long card in a side suit counts one half trick.

If the declarer has opened with a bid of one in a suit and the responding hand has bid two in the same suit, the declarer does not rebid with only one extra trick because if his partner has shown his full strength at his first response, as he should do, there is no game between them, but if the declarer holds one and one half tricks in excess of his opening bid he bids once more because his partner may have had one full raise and one optional raise which he reserved.

Do not guess at the strength of your hand—count it.

Answers to Questions

No. 1.—The "demand bid" is a convention of the official system. It is, "two clubs," and shows about the same honor strength as the Culbertson forcing two bid. The negative response to it is "two diamonds."

No. 2.—The cost of the electric bridge table is $25.00.

No. 3.—I do not know that anything can be done in the case you mention. A player who habitually holds up all other players in a progressive game and inconveniences her hostess is at least very selfish and thoughtless of others. A reasonable time is always permitted for the study of a hand but a player who is such a slow thinker as to disturb the entire company should play in rubbers not in a progressive game.

CHILDREN ARE ENTERTAINED AT EASTER HUNT

Mrs. Ira Woods, Miss Lula Hubbard and Mrs. J. S. Hilliard, teachers of the Primary Department of the Presbyterian Sunday School, entertained the young folks at an Easter egg hunt Saturday afternoon.

They were ably assisted by Mrs. John Street, Mrs. J. G. Singer and Mrs. Arbie Joplin.

The children gathered at the church at 3:30 p. m. and were taken in cars to the Duggan Addition, where the hunt was enjoyed.

SEVERAL CIRCLES W. M. U. MEET AT FIRST BAPTIST

The different circles of the Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church met at the church Monday afternoon at two o'clock, for prayer meeting.

Twelve ladies were present for prayer, after which twenty-five visits were made by the ladies to the sick and strangers in the city.

HART'S CAMP 4-H CLUB GIRLS MEET

The Hart's Camp 4-H Club girls met April 12th at 10:45, with nineteen members present.

A large per cent of the girls had their work for this meeting. The assignment for this time was the doll dress, the patch, darn and work boxes.

Miss Ruby Maahburn discussed the choice of colors in selecting materials of any kind, which was enjoyed by all. The club adjourned at 12:00.

CHURCHES

THE METHODIST CHURCH
Sunday, April 23rd

Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. It is very important that the teachers be prompt. If you are not here when the school opens, you lose only a few moments, and you have lost that much of the lesson, and the pupils lose interest—so come and meet your class for the full time.

Proaching at 11:00 a. m. Subject, "Beginning at Jerusalem." Last Sunday was a great day with us, a fine attendance at Sunday school and preaching—let's make it even better Sunday.

Remember that our District Conference will meet with us May 2nd and 3rd, and there will be some two hundred members of the Conference, besides others who will attend, and we are looking for a great Conference, and each member of the local church will be expected to help make it just such a conference.

There will be no preaching at 8:00 p. m. Let me call the attention to the meeting at the Baptist church, and may each of us give our prayers and help in every way that we can, that there be a great REVIVAL come from this meeting to the town of Littlefield.

P. H. GATES, Pastor

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH Sunday, April 23

Our revival started last Sunday morning. Good crowds came for both services and our Sunday school reached another record in attendance. We want our friends to give us their assistance in the meeting and assure you that every effort will be appreciated. We are having service this week as follows:

Mornings: Ten to ten-fifty. This will give us time to leave our homes promptly at ten o'clock and get into the service for the opening. It will also give us time to stay through the entire morning service and get back to our homes by eleven o'clock.

Evenings: Prayer meetings starting promptly at 7:50, closing at 8:12. The song service will start promptly at 8:15. Sunday services will be as usual.

9:45—Sunday school. Efforts are being put forth to keep the numbers climbing. If you are not in some Sunday school, we invite you to become a part of this school.

11:00—A program of songs we love to sing. You are invited to take part in this part of the worship.

11:30—Sermon.

7:00—B. T. S.

8:00—Evening service.

Is it time for a revival in Littlefield? Do we need a revival in Littlefield? Do you want a revival in Littlefield? If so, we are anxious for you to give us every possible assistance. Come help us.

JOE F. GRIZZLE, Pastor

Church of Christ Meeting Draws Large Crowds

Much interest is being manifested in the protracted meeting now in progress at the Church of Christ at 9th Street and Park Avenue.

Leland H. Knight of Booneville, Ark., is doing the preaching, and is eloquent and powerful in his denunciation of wickedness and plea for true Christianity.

Many have been baptized already, the new baptistry recently constructed in the building being exceedingly convenient for this work.

The house is being filled almost to its capacity, and especially so last Sunday, many being there from Sudan, Amherst, Tulsa, Ralls and Lubbock, and many others from surrounding towns and communities are expected from time to time.

Everybody is invited to attend any or all of these services, which are at 10:30 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. each day until Sunday night, April 23.

Notice to the Public

Effective Sunday, April 23rd, it is to be noted that there will be a little change in the schedule of our mail trains. The northbound train now due at 3:59 p. m. will be something like 20 minutes earlier, thereby necessitating the closing of the mail a little earlier. Hence, to get last mail into that dispatch you will have to mail a little sooner.

The southbound train now running at 12:11 p. m. will be several minutes later towards Lubbock and the east.

For the benefit of the rural patrons who may have mail for the west and north, the rural carrier will endeavor to arrive in pretty weather a few minutes earlier to meet that dispatch, thereby going over the course of the route a few minutes earlier than now, effective Monday, April 24th, 1933.

Please tell your neighbor of this.

L. L. REESE,
Acting Postmaster, Anton, Texas.

Improvements to Be Carried Out At Tourist Camp

 Miss Ruby Martin is spending the week with Mrs. Roy Wroten while her husband is away.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Clark and Misses Maude and Foy Pepper attended the Texas Panhandle-Plains Dairy Show at Plainview last Wednesday.

The Ruby H. D. Club
 The Ruby club met in regular session Thursday, April 13, 1933, at the home of Mrs. R. N. Carpenter. The weather being so unfavorable we had only nine members and three visitors present.

We had a lengthy business session followed by our lesson on "County Money and its Expenditure in Texas." [We missed our last meeting because of the Meat Show, so had no program made out, but our Council members were able to present the lesson from notes and literature obtained at the last training school.

After adjournment a contest, "A Motor Romance," followed. Mrs. Carpenter won the prize for having the most nearly correct paper. Then flower and vegetable plants and seeds were exchanged.

Our next meeting will be with Mrs. A. Clark, Thursday, April 27, 1933, beginning promptly at 1 p. m. Miss Mashburn will be with us and make Foundation Patterns.

Roosevelt to Get Woolen Suit Made At Tech College

President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his two sons are to receive white woolen suits made in the textile department of Texas Technological College from wool produced on the Plains.

Two Tech students, Leonard W. Curfman of Electra and Malcolm Martin of Lorenzo, both outstanding members of the Matador football squad, purchased the wool from a Lorenzo farmer, and they have scoured, carded, and woven it into yarn.

They are weaving the yarn into white suiting which will be sent to Hart, Schaffner and Marx to be made into suits of the most approved style.

The raw wool sufficient to make the three suits weighed 170 pounds. After being thoroughly cleaned it weighed only 55 pounds.

Curfman and Martin are majoring in textile engineering.

Dairy Association Oppose Reduction In Texas Colleges

The Texas Panhandle-Plains Dairy association at their annual business session held Wednesday evening of last week went on record as opposing "rampant reductions in Texas colleges teaching vocational and technical subjects."

Mrs. Jim E. Rigler, wife of a Hale county dairyman, introduced the subject and brought in county farm and demonstration work, which was included in the resolution.

Roy B. Davis, former county agent in Gaines and Hale counties, and now engaged in the creamery business in Plainview, offered the motion to pass the resolution and Mr. Rigler seconded it.

Pioneer Railroad Man Passes Away

Avery Turner, 82, an employee of the Santa Fe railroad for 58 years, died at his home in Amarillo early Friday, April 14.

Mr. Turner has many friends in the Littlefield section, having visited here on various occasions, his last trip being on the occasion of the opening of the new Santa Fe depot, when he attended the banquet given in honor of the Santa Fe.

Turner, who had held almost every job connected with railroad operation from the building of right-of-way fences, to the office of vice-president and general manager in charge of the old Pecos Valley division, had seen 62 years of active railroad service.

Wheat and Cotton Advances on Spring Market; Other Gains

Wheat advanced 1 3-8 to two cents a bushel, corn gained more than a cent, and cotton jumped $1.00 a bale Thursday last.

Markets were somewhat sluggish in the morning, but a brisk upswing developed in the middle of the day.

The stock market pushed up $1 to $3 or more in many leading issues, and the turnover exceeding 1,650,000 shares was with one exception the busiest day of the month.

Western Drug Co. Improve Premises

Considerable improvements have made at the Western Drug building, in order to accommodate in these quarters two medical doctors and a dentist.

Dr. C. I. Holt, county health officer, will occupy two rooms; while Dr. J. Sparks, well known in this territory, but recently returned here from Muleshoe, will use two rooms, and Dr. Lewis, dentist of Muleshoe, will still remain in the drug store building, as he has for the past year making his appointments every Wednesday.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE WAX MUSEUM" WILL BE SHOWN AT PALACE THEATRE

In "The Mystery of The Wax Museum," the Warner Bros. production which will be shown at the Palace Theatre Saturday Midnight, Sunday and Monday, the producers feel confident that they have achieved something far off the beaten paths of motion picture entertainment. It is calculated to startle the most sophisticated theatregoer, and stir the most jaded palate.

Even among chronicles of crime and mystery this picture strikes a new and radically different note. Lovers of the unusual will find an eerie fascination in watching a gentle gifted but crippled Russian sculptor struggling to create a group of wax statues that will startle the world when his little wax museum opens its doors to the public.

Then a series of strange, inexplicable crimes throws the metropolis into an uproar, the police and the press take up the hue and cry and a young newspaper woman finds herself called upon to solve, singlehanded one of the most baffling mysteries of modern times.

Nothing has been spared to make "The Mystery of the Wax Museum" one of the most lavish and realistic pictures of the year. A modern wax museum, with more than a hundred life size wax figures was created for the production. Photographed in Technicolor, these famous historical

Home Demonstration Notes

By MISS RUBY MASHBURN Home Demonstration Agent

First scoring of the fifty-two demonstrations being conducted by the demonstrators in fifteen clubs was done last week by Mrs. Jay McGee and Mrs. Deb Knox of Amherst. These demonstrations are: Improved bedroom, yard, and wardrobe class one and two, one demonstrator in each for each club. The second scoring will be done when the demonstrations are completed.

The winners in the Farm Food Supply Demonstration for 1932 are as follows: Mrs. H. A. Sheffield, Spade club, first; Mrs. L. D. George of the Sand Hill club, second. These women preserved enough food to furnish their families one year with a balanced diet. In addition to this they had good storage space, containers and shelves labeled to save time in planning meals, and emergency personages in their gorgeous costumes, form a striking audience for the present-day drama enacted before them within the walls of the wax museum.
