'LEFT OVER' TURKEY

By Brenda Williams, CHDA
 "What a horrible feeling it is to be too full. But we never remember that until after our Thanksgiving dinner. Are you tired of eating Turkey?"

Do you still have Turkey to eat? Try spicing it up with this recipe.
Turkey Tetrazzini (served 12 people)
 1/2 lb. spaghetti, uncooked
 1/4 cup chopped onions
 2 cloves garlic
 1 T. butter
 2 cans mushroom soup
 1 cup water
 1/2 lb. shredded cheese
 1 lb. diced cooked turkey
 1/8 c. chopped pimento
 Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water until just tender but not soft. Drain. Cook onion and garlic in butter until tender. Blend in soup and water; stir until smooth. Add half of cheese. Cook over low heat until cheese is melted, stirring occasionally. Fold in turkey and pimento. Put spaghetti into greased baking pan and pour turkey mixture over it. Sprinkle on remaining cheese. Bake in 450 degree oven until sauce bubbles and browns.
 Now that we are looking forward to some cold weather and holidays, many of us will have unexpected guest to drop in. You may be caught without a refreshment. Something that is very easy to fix and most people enjoy is spiced tea. Prepare this mixture and then when company comes all you have to do is add hot water.
Instant Spiced Tea
 1 cup instant lemon flavored tea
 2 cups Tang
 3 cups sugar
 1 t. cloves
 1 t. cinnamon
 Mix together. When needed, measure 2 t. in a cup and add hot water. Stir.
 How many of you grandparents are pondering on what to get the grandchildren for Christmas? Have you ever thought about books? Better books made for better children. A one year old delights in recognizing familiar things in books. Selection of books for preschoolers depend on their age. For example, two and three year olds need clear, simple pictures and stories geared to his interests and to activities he knows and enjoys. The stories should have a good plot and reasonable characters.

 Four or five year olds are interested in the world about them. The books can be longer and the story more complicated with special interest in adventure, animals, nature, transportation, books about the way things work.
 Books should be of good paper and strong binding. Colors should be clear, intense and pleasing. Books influence a school-age youngster and are important to him. From kindergarten to adolescence a child's taste and interests mature and become more defined.

Mrs. Roy Dyson of Escondido, Calif. spent the weekend with her sister, Mrs. Myrtle Barker. They visited their mother Mrs. Mint Oswald in the Pampa nursing home and a sister, Mrs. Dick Crump in Pampa.
 The Doug Corse family spent Thanksgiving day with her mother and father, the Pierce Walkers and her brother, Jimmie Walker of White Deer was also there.
 Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Walker spent Thanksgiving day with her parents at McLean. Billie and Sindi Sherod, her niece and nephew of McLean spent the holidays with the Clifford Walkers.

In Memory of
Earl Miller
Dear Earl, we have tried for several years to prepare our hearts for today. But we have come to the saddest time, we have faced in a long time,
But we will have to stay awhile longer. But Dear Earl has gone on, he has crossed over Jordan's Shore. We cannot say we would want him to stay and suffer for we know how much pain and misery he has been through, for he has been sick so long. But we will miss him very much, no one else can take his place. And when we go to Earl's farm, no more will we see his face; but in our hearts he will live on, for we all loved him.

We learned from him many good deeds of life. For he was all ways ready to help people, and a truthful and law-abiding person.
So now we weep in sorrow of his passing on. But we will live in hope to meet our dear friend, Earl again though it breaks our hearts. But we have this to remember, the promises written in the word.
Today dear Earl is in heaven at rest with Jesus our Lord.

A New Look At Conservation

Ever since man has tilled the soil, he has had a management problem. All this time terraces, or some similar structures, have had a place in this management. Terraces are sometimes necessary to control soil erosion and to conserve water. For many years the use of conventional terraces has been practiced. They are good for control of soil erosion, but they are sometimes rather inconvenient to work.

In the last few years, engineers have developed a new type of terrace that is a great improvement over the conventional ones. This new type of terrace is called a parallel terrace. These terraces, because they are parallel to each other will do away with most of the point rows and odd areas between the terraces. Because of the amount of land leveling done between the terraces they will also greatly improve water distribution and eventually improve production. In some cases farmers will sow the terrace itself in small grain or sorghums and row crop the interval between the terraces. This practice makes the farming of the system even easier.

In many cases in order to obtain the best system of parallel terraces it will be necessary to install waterways. Vegetated waterways are tailored to direct water into a low lying area or water course without erosion. The waterway itself should be designed to size and shape according to the drainage area and the rate of slope involved. If at all possible water should be blocked out of waterways until vegetation is well established. If irrigation is available this will greatly speed up the establishment of a vegetated waterway.

With the establishment of waterways, a much better system of parallel terraces can be obtained. It makes it possible to vary the grade and with this method of construction, more terraces can be made parallel. This will cut down the number of point rows even more. These two practices, parallel terraces and waterways, work hand in hand to make the control of soil erosion and moisture conservation much easier.

Anyone desiring information on the application of parallel terraces or waterways may contact the technicians of the Soil Conservation Service that assist the Wheeler County Soil and Water Conservation District. Cost share on these and other practices may be obtained through ACP or through the Great Plains Conservation program.
