The Stinson-Detroit monoplane's motor was unvarying in its roar as it circled the airport during the afternoon. An emergency oil transfer apparently was made in time to prevent the engine from fouling.

At 2:40 p. m. (CDT) the ship had been in the air 526 hours.

An urgent order for oil, evidently needed because of the thinning effect of gasoline leaking past worn pistons, was sent down at 1:30 p. m. CDT.

While the Big Ben was maneuvering for position ten minutes later the City of Chicago ended its 525th hour aloft.

CHICAGO, July 3—

The flying Hunters stopped strumming their ukelele today and began firing a series of notes to the turf of "Sky Harbor," begging the ground crew to help them maintain harmony.

John Hunter complained of "plenty of trouble" with his younger brother, Kenneth, because of a note referring to Kenneth's weariness.

The disagreement became known as the airplane City of Chicago neared the end of the 22nd day in its record endurance flight.

At 12:30 p. m. (CDT) the plane had been in the air 524 hours.

The fifth attempt to broadcast from the City of Chicago failed at noon when a ground wire was broken in the hangar. The army bomber lowered a microphone to the endurance plane and the Hunters' brothers spoke but their words did not go on the air.

Legion Airport Drive Reaches Total Of $1,100

The amount of collections made in the American Legion drive for funds to finance the purchasing of the emergency landing field had reached $1,100 at noon today with the commitment still working toward the goal of $3,000.

"The prospects of raising the required $3,000 before the drive is completed is bright," Russell Jones, chairman of the airways committee of the American Legion, stated this afternoon. "There are many who should donate large amounts who have not as yet made a contribution, but they are expected to do their bit before the close of the campaign. The people who are able to give only small amounts are more interested in the drive than are those who will eventually benefit from the field's most. This is indicated by the fact that they are looking up the members of the solicitation committee and making their donations while those who are expected to give larger amounts are holding back."

Hoover Will Ask Huston To Resign

WASHINGTON, July 3—

President Hoover is expected to take a hand in the situation revolving around Claudius Huston, chairman of the Republican national committee, and intends shortly to demand Huston's resignation, it was learned today.

When Huston called a meeting of the organization's executive committee and chairman of the senatorial and congressional campaign committees for next Monday, it was rumored it might be for the purpose of presenting his resignation.

It has been discovered by Republican leaders, however, that Huston had no such idea, but intended to go ahead with plans for the coming congressional campaign as if he were to continue in active charge throughout the summer.

Huston's attitude since the senate lobby investigating committee testimony which linked him with Muscle Shoals lobbying and stock market deals has been that he would give up the chairmanship at any time Mr. Hoover asked for his resignation. The President has been unwilling until now to do this, but rather than see a breach within his own party, it is understood he now has decided upon definite action to obtain Huston's retirement from party politics.

The President has been casting about for a successor, but as yet it is understood, has reached no definite decision.

A Plea For A Safe And Sane Fourth Of July

AUSTIN, Tex., July 3—Care in handling fireworks and in eating and drinking were urged today by Dr. R. C. Anderson on the eve of Independence Day and its probable casualties.

"Real patriotism on July 4 consists in celebrations that will put nobody in the hospital or the cemetery on July 5," he said. "The toll of shattered hands or limbs, mutilated bodies, powder burns, and the like causes the death rate to mount after a holiday that has too long been coupled with fireworks. Celebrate by all means, get away from your usual duties and have a day of freedom, but don't behave in such a manner that you and all your friends will be called upon to retrace our original Independence Day."

Mindful that many would seek the country roads on the holiday, Dr. Anderson warned against certain kinds of food and drink.

"Gorging on chicken salad sandwiches and highly colored carbonated drinks offered at every crossroad will hardly be conducive to a happy July 5," he said.

while Parr was finding trouble. It all began at the fourth green when Parr's short approach shot went over the carpet, into trouble. He suffered the same fate during the remaining holes of the outgoing nine, finding trouble at every turn.

As at the start of the first nine they halved the opening hole of the second trip around the sports nine-hole course. However, this time it was done with five, one over par. Out of bounds shots by each brought the extra stroke.

On the short eleventh hole, Meredith laid his tee shot on the green, while Parr was to the left. Meredith ran the putt down for a birdie two and the match went down.

Parr missed a putt for a par on the twelfth hole and he conceded Meredith the hole and with it went the match.

Meredith won his way into the finals with a 5 and 4 victory over H. W. Myers, Electra, Wednesday Morning. Parr eliminated L. T. (Bobby) Burns, Wichita Falls, 3 and 2.

Flatwood Meet Was Big Success

Eastland merchants carried their trade extension campaign to Flatwood Wednesday evening when more than 150 citizens of the town, accompanied by the Eastland Booster Band, went to Flatwood and assisted the progressive citizens of that community in putting on a picnic. The county candidates for office also took part in the program, each one present making a short talk. Eastland merchants auctioned off the proceeds from furnished merchandise which was the sale going to defray the expense of a boy and girl from the Flatwood 4-H club to the annual A. & M. short course in July.

The Flatwood meeting was the third one held in which the Eastland merchants have taken a prominent part.

Everyone who attended the Flatwood meeting was more than pleased with the manner in which the program was handled. Flatwood citizens are said to have been very highly pleased.

Several hundred copies of the Eastland Telegram, carrying write-ups of Flatwood club work were distributed at the meeting.

The high altitude court session was suggested by Kenneth, known more intimately as "Beans" when the Hunter's new manager, B. L. Majewski, reported that the judge might insist on their appearance before him on July 8. Two-way

Flatwood Meet Was Big Success

Eastland merchants carried their trade extension campaign to Flatwood Wednesday evening when more than 150 citizens of the town, accompanied by the Eastland Booster Band, went to Flatwood and assisted the progressive citizens of that community in putting on a picnic. The county candidates for office also took part in the program, each one present making a short talk. Eastland merchants auctioned off the proceeds from furnished merchandise which was the sale going to defray the expense of a boy and girl from the Flatwood 4-H club to the annual A. & M. short course in July.

The Flatwood meeting was the third one held in which the Eastland merchants have taken a prominent part.

Everyone who attended the Flatwood meeting was more than pleased with the manner in which the program was handled. Flatwood citizens are said to have been very highly pleased.

Several hundred copies of the Eastland Telegram, carrying write-ups of Flatwood club work were distributed at the meeting.

Named after John Marshall, then Chief Justice of the United States, the city was founded in 1836 by Stanley Ketchum and soon then grew steadily. Today it is said to have more wealth per capita than any city in the state and frequently is called the state's most beautiful city. But in 1874 when it was still a relatively small, struggling, Middle-Western community, a party of four Kentucky slave catchers visited Marshall and thereby gave the town an opportunity to make history.

Some years before this, Adam Crosswhite, a runaway slave had come up from the South to Marshall via the "underground railway" and there had settled down and raised a family. When the slave traders, one of whom was his former master, came to claim him, public opinion sided with the hard working, quiet-natured Negro, and the citizenry of Marshall refused to allow the Southerners to carry the Crosswhite family back to servitude.

Negro Is Given Death Penalty

BEAUMONT, Tex., July 3.—Saved three times from an angry mob that wanted to lynch him, Rainey Williams, negro, today was under the death penalty for criminally assaulting Joyce Kellar, negro.

Surrounded by officers determined to protect him from violence, Williams was tried in the Beaumont school building yesterday. Not a witness was offered by the defendant.

The progress was brought into the temporary courtroom on a stretcher and identified Williams as her attacker.

The jury was out only 15 minutes.

Sheriff W. W. Covington of Beaumont kept vigil for several days last week when the mob tried to take Williams from him. After three failures, the attempt was abandoned.

Williams is under seven other indictments for assault to murder, attempted criminal assault and robbery with firearms.

Kansas City Leads Chicago For '29 Crimes

PER CAPITA AVERAGE IN MISSOURI METROPOLIS AHEAD OF ILLINOIS.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 3.—Stabbing, shooting and slugging its way, Kansas City has passed Chicago as a city of violent deaths in its murder rate based on population.

Ninety-seven victims who fell by gun, knife and blackjack in 1929 earned this City sixth place in the record of the country coroner. The police department lists only 63.

Establishing a new record in filming every scene of the picture on the exact site of the story, even to the interior sequences, "The Arizona Kid" is an unusual piece of entertainment. The splendor of the production, and old "ghost city" two miles from the present Rockville, was completely rebuilt as a setting for village scenes.

Mona Mar's, the Argentine beauty who scored so heavily in "Roma of Rio Grande" opposite Baxter again his leading lady in the film, and the supporting cast headed by Carol Lombard, Mrs. Jimmie, Ralph Block, the original story and dialog, the remarkable photography by Glenn MacWilliams, with Glenn Everett responsible for the reproduction.

Where Chicago traces many of its 406 murders to gang warfare, only 12 of Kansas City's total are officially accounted for by that strife. Ten of these were "hot on the spot," while two fell in duels between two men.

Four of these were negroes, believed to be the casualties of warfare between Piazza and Joe Vicenti, two New York gangsters, known here as "The Palmers," met when they are alleged to have attempted to "horn in on the corn sugar racket." Their bullet riddled bodies were found in lonely country roads.

Another case where gangsters settled their own difficulties was when Clay G. Kennedy, alias Ben Barrett, a Chicago gangster, and Arthur Zeitman, St. Louis gunman, were mortally wounded in a battle over gambling concessions.

The annual report of the police department indicates, however, that only 14 to the 93 slayings listed remain mysteries.

Besides the 18 unsolved gang slayings, including the six outside the city, the Cliff Drive murder, in which Paul L. Odell, 29, was shot to death, and Miss Ruth McLaurin, 21, was killed in a fatal fight with a gun, has never been cleared. This double murder occurred the night of August 29.

Four of seven slayings by bandits also were unsolved.

The coroner's records include a killing of 11 bandits by police or the intended victims of a slaying of a burglar by a home-owner, and two accidental killings. The records do not include deaths of three firemen in an alleged arson plot, although one man has been convicted on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the crime.

WARNER BAXTER ACTING HIT IN TITLE ROLE

Imbued with the real spirit of the Old West, "The Arizona Kid" Alfred Santell's great outdoor romance in Movietone, opens at the Lyric Theatre today with the incomparable Warner Baxter in the title role.

To the many who hailed Baxter's gallant outlawry in "In Old Arizona," this new picture will come as a joyous piece of screen reincarnation. For Baxter again plays the part of a reckless and amorous bandit, whose love affairs with a dance-hall girl and a gambler's wife, together with his imprudent use of an alias to defeat the officers seeking him, serve to motivate the swift moving and gorgeously photographed story.

The picture's bawling "plants" the widespread search that is being made for the affable "Arizona Kid" in Rockville, a little Utah village, the "Kid" is living under the name of Chico, a somewhat mysterious but highly respected citizen. His shooting of a highwayman who holds up the Rockville stage further boosts his reputation, and his affair with Louisa, the queen of the dance-hall entertainers, is one of the town's favorite conversational topics.

GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIX

She turned her head slightly toward Gideon, who reached for her, his smile turning to a frown as he saw her companion. "Steyne is coming with us," Steyne, quietly belligerent, had arranged a little gathering for her. "You are laughing nervously, and, against her will, walked behind the young man toward the Gideon followed, his bull and large ears very red, his eyes wild with rage. "I am under the impression that Grant is coming to have a supper with me," he said. "Think not," Alan replied. "I had reached Chummy and the Jenks, who looked at them with surprise. Chummy, a moment later, shrang back as she became aware of the passions let loose. "First, original quarrel of Alan and her—the quarrel of men about a woman. Of which she did not understand it. She simply saw that Alan was put and that Gideon had an ugly look on his face. "I am always apt to lose her under excitement, was laughingly uncontrollable. "What a fuss!" she managed to say between two almost hysterical attacks. "Come, Clarissa!" said Alan. "I am going with Mr. Gideon," she said. "I was near to tears now—of furious indignation at being called 'like a kid,' as she had to have said. "You are coming with us," he said. "I also was beside himself, but as a ghost and quiet as a stream. Judy stamped her foot. "I'm not, then! I'm not!" "That finished it. The two men stared glances, and the young man hurriedly beaten. "Judy and Gideon went out to waiting car. Clarissa, crimson with shame, hurried out into the street. Clara Jenks, secretly high-minded, waddled after her.

Clara was in wonderful spirits tonight. She had just secured first really promising engagement on the stage, to play in a revue with a famous comedian in an untown theater. Her part that of a drunken but good-natured landlady, and she was going to revel in it. "I was quick as lightning in powers of observation, Clara taken in a good deal more of meaning of the little scene had Chummy. She sided with Dan and thought Mr. Steyne had quite ridiculously overheard. "As if Judy didn't know her about! If she wanted a good ride and a ride in a comfortable car, who was to blame her? Chummy and Alan were just a way ahead. "Oh, Alan, was it necessary to quite so cross with poor Judy?" she asked. "You thought I was wrong, Clara. I made me feel uncomfortable. After all, Judy can take care of herself, and Mr. Gideon had her first." "It's not a fit man for her to marry," said Alan curtly. "I want to talk to you about it. It is a fact. I wish you would do everything you can to prevent her going about with Steyne. He is so earnest that she was impressed. Her love heart leaped in revolt at the sight of any unpleasantness coming between them. "I will, of course," she said. "I don't think you need be afraid. Like all girls, I think this man must be all right. He is rich." "I am speaking with almost vicious passion. Chummy was so taken that she said nothing, but she hid behind and stopped a motor for Clara Jenks to catch up with them. "The three boarded a bus and their way to the Cafe Tur-

MOM'N POP

Dan's light, gay voice was not heard that night, singing the favorite Italian songs. The General himself served his guests, with the assistance of a small boy he had borrowed from a neighboring establishment.

Dan had gone to Italy, he informed his customers, to bring back the body of his mother. Where he got the necessary amount of money was a mystery that he had refused to divulge.

Everybody missed Dan. As the General said, without him and Miss Jude—e he might as well put up his shutters.

Steyne could not disguise the fact that he was on wires. Bastien Dumont came and joined them. In the absence of Judy, the young man made himself agreeable to Clara—too agreeable, it is to be feared, for her snub face lit up, her lips smiled without the usual twist, and her round, gray-blue eyes rested on his handsome features without being able to disguise their admiration.

Poor Clara, it was a hopeless business! Bastien had not a thought for her, except of camaraderie. It goes hard with a horn woman comedian when she falls in love. Clara was made to keep people in fits of delicious laughter, and in some way or other every living creature, man or woman, managed to make her aware of this.

When they broke up that night, her heart felt very light. She walked home arm in arm with Bastien. At their door he pressed her hand. It had not occurred to her that Judy was not here. In fact, Judy had quite vanished from her mind.

Chummy had not forgotten her friend, however. She was tired, but she did not go to sleep until she heard Judy come up to her room. Judy was singing a little song under her breath. She must have had a good time, then.

It was well after midnight when Gideon's big car glided away from their door.

Neither Chummy nor Judy was aware that Alan Steyne had patrolled the street until he saw Judy drive up in safety, shake hands gaily with Gideon, enter the house, and run up the stairs.

It was more than a fortnight later, and spring had suddenly burst upon the earth in a great flood of color and scent.

Judy had lived in a kind of whirl since her first visit to the Russian ballet. There had been many hours of solid, hard work—a "regular grind," she called it, and it came easily to her. Then there had been a great deal of gawdy, part of it organized by her artist friends of the cafe, but more by Gideon.

She could not have counted how many times she had seen "Mr. Punch" that fortnight. She had ceased to count them. She had drifted—that was how it was, Luxury was having its inevitable effect on her. Motor cars and good food and plays and ballets and music—she was beginning to think that these things were life.

She had seen very little of Chummy, who was also hard at work. Steyne had gone up to Maine again for a week or two. He had been present at the artists' ball at the Lemon Grove, but at the last moment Chummy had de-ful taste, particularly in matters of art.

She continued to see Gideon surrounded by people who deferred to him. She saw him with cross-grained mouth set in a tight line, and all the world offering gifts to propitiate him. There were two or three men he now and then allowed to have meals with him when Judy was present, and they always seemed to be trying to cajole him into a good temper.

And yet, to her, no one could have been, figuratively speaking, more consistently on his knees.

Never once had he treated her in any way differently from the women of his own world. She was quite sure of that. He had never attempted to make love to her. He dwelt constantly on the all-absorbing theme of her career.

One afternoon, when Judy arrived at Vincent Stornaway's, she was shown into the studio, and the servant informed her that his master had a visitor with him. He did not say who it was.

Stornaway had one possession that Judy coveted more than anything in the world. It was the skin of a very large polar bear, which lay on the studio floor, in front of the open fireplace where, summer and winter, wood burned on the beautiful old pierced-steel fire-dogs.

Judy simply loved it. It meant all beauty and all luxury to her. She had made up her mind that if she ever became a great dancer, the first thing she would buy would be a counterpart of it. She loved to kneel down on it and to bury her little hands in its snowy fur. She loved its silky softness and the resilience with which it started away from her touch.

She sank down on it now in the uttermost content, laying her bright head for a second on the squat, stuffed head of the animal. She looked like a child as she lay there.

The studio was rather dark on this particular afternoon, some of the curtains having been drawn over the big skylights. Outside the sun shone brilliantly. Just at the back of a couch by the hearth was a tall, many-folded screen of old Spanish leather, which entirely shut off that part of the enormous room.

Judy heard voices presently—first a murmur from the adjoining room; then they came nearer, and she recognized Bruce Gideon's soft tones mingling with Stornaway's. So he was the artist's guest! That probably meant that he had lunched here. He would go now, and Stornaway would settle down to several hours' work. She sighed, for she was very tired, and she had rather hoped for a short sitting.

It's True — GASOLENE can GUM-UP YOUR VALVES

"What's the matter?" asked the motorist. "Sticky valves," answered the repair man. "What's the reason?" was the next question.

We'll tell you—gum in gasolene! Cities Service experts were among the first to discover the harmful effects of excessive gum in gasolene—and to provide a remedy.

The remedy is Koolmotor Gasolene—a gas that is free from harmful gum. Extra care and extra refining—known as the Cities Service mini-gum process—have reduced the gum content in Koolmotor Gasolene to a harmless minimum.

This superior motor fuel is powerful and clean burning. It is eager to go—full of speed—provides mile after mile of smooth, knock-free performance. It keeps your valves clean, free moving—it guards against loss of compression and power.

Don't burden your motor with sticky, gummy, clogging gasolenes. Insist on Koolmotor Gasolene, the original high test, anti-knock green gas. Then your motor will be free to do its best.

Greyhound Lines Traffic Increases

Roundtrip passenger traffic over the entire state-wide network of Southland Greyhound Lines has increased 200 per cent since inauguration of summer excursion rates, according to officials of the motor stage concern.

The excursion rates were introduced May 15, last, and are still in effect. The sweeping reduction entailed gives passengers the benefit of 33 1-3 per cent less on the round trip from all points on the lines to San Antonio, Waco, Laredo, Houston, Fort Worth, El Paso, Dallas, Beaumont, Austin, Corpus Christi, Abilene and Eagle Pass.

The reduction, one of the greatest ever announced by a motor stage system, is providing a big boost for cross-country travel.

The round trip increase since inauguration of the excursion amounts to 200 per cent and effects a decrease of only 5 per cent in one way trips, disclosing 195 per cent new traffic.

The excursion rates come as further encouragement simultaneously with announcement of revised schedules and close connections with other lines in other states leading to practically every point in the United States. Heavy travel is reported from Lake Charles, La., eastern terminus of the Southland Greyhound Lines and connection point with the Texas lines, the latter serving the southeastern section of the country. Cross country passengers from the Teche lines are carried across Texas by the Southland to El Paso and other western boundary cities to connect with the Pacific Greyhound and Pickwick Greyhound. These systems serve California, Oregon, Colorado and other western states.

BEST SELLER AUTHOR FAILS TO GET ROYALTY

COLORADO SPRING, Colo., July 3.—One of the best selling books in the world next to the Bible has failed to bring its author—the Rev. Charles Monroe Sheldon of Topeka, Kans.—any remuneration.

Dr. Sheldon, who is visiting here for the summer, said that more than 33,000,000 copies of "In His Steps" have been sold in this country and abroad, but because of a flaw in the copyright he never has received a royalty check.

The book first was published 34 years ago and since then 16 American publishers have brought out the volume. More than 60 European publishers also have issued the book.

"In His Steps" is an account of the hypothetical reappearance of Christ in present day surroundings and what would befall him under present conditions of life.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—The close of every session of Congress demonstrates all over again and more clearly than ever the fact that there is no real difference between the two major political parties, that one is the party in power and the other the opposition and that when they actually line up against each other there is nothing discernible in the situation except a row between the "ins" and the "outs."

The Republican party has been normally in and the Democratic party normally out. So when an election year comes along and the jobs are at stake and the two factions of the politicians' union start slamming away at each other the Republicans begin taking credit for all the good things that have happened to the country and forgetting all the bad things. And the Democrats, of course, forget all the good things and harp on all the bad things as they point accusingly at the Republicans.

As far as national politics are concerned, there isn't much more to it than that. The party in power boasts and defends itself; the party out of power sneers and condemns. The Republican party is attacked not because it stands for anything in particular, but for the way it does things when in power—the way it revamps the tariff, the way it enforces or doesn't enforce prohibition, the way it helps or doesn't help the farmers, the way it stimulates or doesn't stimulate business and employment.

Each party claims certain fine, high-sounding principles for its own, but neither has an honest, clear-cut or fundamental issue. Once there was a rather common popular impression that a real cleavage existed between the two parties on the question of the protective tariff. The Republicans were supposed to be high tariff and the Democrats low tariff. And it is true that the Democrats have seized on the Hawley-Smoot tariff act as the big issue in the congressional campaign of this year.

But where were the Democrats in 1922? Straddling the fence and assuring the country that they, too, believed in the protective tariff. Promising the country, in effect, that the Republican rates of duty as fixed in the Fordney-McCumber act of 1922 were good enough for them and that no one need fear a Democratic assault on the tariff walls in case the nation chose a Democratic administration.

Candidate Al Smith's position was that the tariff must be taken out of politics and that a scientific, non-partisan tariff commission could do just that. Well, today President Hoover and other Republicans are echoing the same thought and Mr. Hoover has said that the flexible provision in the new tariff law can be used to take the tariff out of politics.

The Republican spokesmen are forced to take credit of blame for the new tariff, but again and again they have been trying to make the Democrats share it. They are able to point out that all but one Democrat in the Senate voted for one duty increase or more and against various decreases and the Democratic record in the House is about the same. Five Democratic votes passed the bill in the Senate.

proposed for Texas would jeopardize property values, the former senator declared.

JACKSONVILLE, Tex., July 3.—Former Congressman James Young told a crowd of listeners here Wednesday that the people of Texas are being misled about what would be done with the proceeds of the proposed $350,000,000 road bond issue.

No refunds to counties for links they have built in state highways is contemplated, and taxpayers need not expect it, he said.

Young said there is no use of paying five percent interest on money to build highways when the highway department's income already is sufficient to carry out an extensive road building program.

FORT WORTH, Tex., July 3.—Amidst the 10 other candidates for governor to "look over for my laundry wagon," C. C. (Soapy) Moody, Fort Worth laundry wagon driver, opened his campaign Wednesday night with an address over station NTAT.

"Get all your laundry into one basket," Moody urged his listeners as he took up current problems one by one and prescribed a cure for all of them.

"Soapy's" court reform program would be to put "half the criminal lawyers in the penitentiary with their clients," and he would relieve the farmer by getting the "bucket shops off his back and the ticker tape" from around his neck so he can fight the boll weevil.

Moody would hire a highway commission to build roads with plows, scrapers, long-eared mules and Texas labor, and take the rural citizen out of the mud instead of "boobys for cigarette peddlers, chocolate bar salesmen and bottled-in-bond bootleggers to speed over and rich millionaires to go over to their game pre-

The wet and dry of the political campaign will have its apotheosis at Waco on July fourth, when speakers will participate in celebrating the opening of the Lakeview-Lacy reservoir.

A five-foot air mail letter has been sent to Gov. Dan Moody inviting him to attend the big air races in Chicago late in August.

George Terrell, commissioner of agriculture, has announced steps to be taken by three agencies of government that will mean much to one important mid-Texas industry. That is the turkey grading school to be held at San Angelo.

This, sponsored by the federal government, Texas A. & M. and the department of agriculture, will set up standards by which turkeys will be graded for sale.

Nobody would think of paying for bolles the same as for fine long-staple cotton, yet present practice now actually puts a premium on poor-grade and off-grade turkeys. Their growers get the same price as the capable grower who builds up good quality and proper grades in his product. Thanksgiving to lots of the country would be like Christmas without Santa Claus if it were not for Texas turkeys. Constructive action such as proposed will mean making the turkey industry a safer, sounder one of surer return. In a few "objectors" out of future sessions. It should set up lawmaking bodies

Keeping Tab On The State Candidates

DALLAS, Tex., July 3.—The state wide road bond issue plan of Ross Sterling, chief target of the most of his opponents; was defended by the highway commission chairman in a statement issued Wednesday from his headquarters here.

Sterling said that Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller lacked sufficient knowledge of the subject to criticize the plan.

If Texas citizens live to see a real highway system, a bond issue that will provide from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually for new construction will be necessary, Sterling declared.

DENISON, Tex., July 3.—Former Sen. Earle B. Mayfield assailed the ad valorem tax system, the proposed road bond issue, and the public utilities and chain stores in a fiery address here Wednesday.

The utilities and chain stores are not paying their share of the taxes, and neither are busses and trucks that use the highways, Mayfield said.
