Star In Heavens Seen To Explode and Split In Two, But It Happened Long Ago

Astronomers, peering through a big telescope in Argentina recently, discovered the latest mystery of the heavens. "Nova Pictoris," a new star, found in 1925, had split in two. Word was flashed to the Union observatory at Cape Town. Scientists there trained a 26-inch glass on the star. They, too, saw the wonder.

The spectacle was without precedent, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The breaking of a star has never been seen before, according to Dr. W. H. Steaven, president of the British Astronomical Association. New stars like this appear from time to time, five having been observed in the last ten years. They flare up suddenly, glow with intense brilliance, may be for but a few hours, and then subside or disappear.

Not many years ago the phenomenon of a new star would have caused wide concern. The splitting of a heavenly body would have struck terror to the hearts of millions, but the astronomers went calmly black to their telescopes, for they knew that the break, whatever its cause, would not affect the earth—that it actually happened many years ago, anywhere from 300 to 1,000. Nova Pictoris is so far from us that it has taken light, speeding at the rate of more than 186 miles a second, centuries to reach us. The split was a new and wonderful discovery here, but to the heavens it long had been a matter of history.

"The skies are filled with mysteries as baffling as that of the new stars," said George C. Blacklee, who supervised the photographic work at Yerkes observatory. "One of the first impressions we gain of the heavens is a sense of the enormous distances involved. They are incomprehensible, but comparisons help to grasp them. We are living in a day of rapid travel. Suppose we wanted to take a trip into space in an airplane and the journey were possible. Flying at the rate of 200 miles an hour, night and day, it would take us six weeks and five days to reach the moon, fifty-four years to get to the sun, and 13,328,625 years to go to the nearest star. It takes light four years to reach us from this star and forty years from the Pole star. The light you see tonight from Orion started at about the time of the Crusades.

Many Stars Far Away.
"Millions of stars are so far away and the light from them is so faint that the unaided eye can never see them. The telescope has pushed the frontiers of the heavens back far beyond (Continued on page 6.)

The Elks clubrooms were thrown open to the family party Thursday night. It is the pleasure of the Elks Lodge to hold one each month. Many were absent on account of being out of the city, and several homes were represented by either the man of the house or the wife.

Six tables were prettily appointed for auction and supplied with bowls of colored confections throughout the evening. Mrs. W. E. Stallter and Mrs. Joe Stephen were delightful hostesses for the party and made every one happy, and the event a great success.

The discussion was closed by the hostess, with an original verse, entitled, "Friendship."

Individual small fan fans at each place, gave a glowing note of color, carried out by the immense umbrella shaped bouquet of daisies, that centered the table board, spaced with crystal sticks, holding green lighted tapers, and garlanded in tulle strands of yellow and green. Individual yellow nut cups held bright-hued mints.

Mrs. Nunn was presented as an honored guest with a souvenir, a vanity shaped like a book, in leather case, and Miss Frost's honor favor, was a crimson and gold enameled vanity in green satin case. Mrs. Scott Key presided at the opposite end of luncheon table.

The delicious menu in five courses could not be excelled in any hotel. Between courses, outstanding talks or toasts were given in response to Mrs. Jackson's request that our special guests be made acquainted with the progress the clubs have been making in Eastland, and concurrent news of literary activities and progress.

SOME WAYS TO TELL IF MEATS ARE ALRIGHT

Five Requirements Which Are Maintained With the Proper Refrigeration.

Careful purchasers have learned five requirements for good meat. It should be bright in color. It should be elastic but firm to the touch. It should have a clean and fresh odor. It should be juicy and streaked with fat. Last of all, it should be cut across the grain.

Proper refrigeration will retain the bright, natural color of the meat, will keep it firm but elastic and will preserve the clean freshness of its odor. If the meat is naturally juicy, automatic refrigeration will retain this desirable quality and will make the meat easy to slice across the grain.

Beef should have a bright red color, while pork should be a dark pink. Veal should be pink, but less firm than beef. These natural colors of meat can be preserved only in a constant temperature which is neither too warm nor too cold. After the meat leaves the market, the housewife should be sure that the care taken by the dealer to keep it properly refrigerated is not wasted by improper preservation after it reaches her home. The wrapping paper should be removed as soon as possible, and if the meat is to be retained for a time before cooking, it should be kept in a constant cold temperature.

Science Notes

Greater speed and accuracy in preparing air maps are anticipated with an aerial camera that has four lenses. It was recently subjected to field tests by army flyers before mapping an area of approximately 2,500 square miles along the east coast of Florida.

Exploration of polar regions by means of submarines is considered practical. Stefansson suggested the plan in 1918, and just recently Capt. George H. Wilkins endorsed the idea. He declares that a submarine should be able to cruise from Spitzbergen to Alaska and that the craft would be useful in making investigation of ocean currents.

Birds have exceptionally keen eyesight and the additional faculty of seeing an approaching person while apparently intent on feeding. Small birds will instantly discover a hawk, although it is so high as to be merely a speck to the human vision. The mystery is explained by the fact that the bird's eyes do not co-operate but each can focus on a different object at the same time.

Methods of predicting weather changes a week in advance, and with an accuracy almost as great as that for the daily forecasts have been developed by C. L. Mitchell district forecaster of the weather bureau. More time and preparation are required, but he considers the results worth the extra work involved.

Among the by-products from coal at a German plant is viscose artificial silk, several tons of which were produced this year. The amount is expected to be doubled when new factories are completed in 1929. Benzine has also been extracted.

That radio may be used indirectly in treating disease, is the possibility suggested by recent investigations into the effect of waves of low frequency upon the human system. It has been noticed that men working about a six-meter set in an eastern laboratory frequently fainted, or become ill. A fever was present in almost all cases of this kind, and experiments showed that it was induced by the action of the waves. In treating some diseases, fever is induced to kill germs that will not live at high temperatures, so it is thought that radio waves may be used for this purpose.—Popular Mechanic's Magazine.

Light, and plenty of it, is usually required in searching for visible flaws in any object, but the seventy-inch disk of optical glass recently made at the bureau of standards for the Perkins observatory at Ohio Wesleyan University, was subjected to its most exacting tests in darkness. The reason was that the internal condition of the big piece of glass is revealed by passing beams of light through it and then studying the patterns and colors that result. This can be done satisfactorily only in a dark place.

Potassium permanganate, applied as a 5 per cent solution to afflicted parts with a soft cloth or a bit of cotton, has been found an effective cure for ivy poisoning, the department of agriculture reports. It stops the itching in a short time and recovery is rapid.

In the morning, after a night's rest, the mind is well prepared for brief spurts of activity but is too restless for long concentration, experiments have shown. Mental tests on a number of students recently proved that the subjects achieved a 10 per cent higher score at night. As the day wears on, the brain appears to become better adapted to concentration.

Women do most all of the work in the fields and in the homes among the Bataks of Cumanra. Some of their farming customs and implements are unique. To loosen the soil for planting crops, long poles, sharpened at one end, are forced into the ground and then pried out. This crude method has been in use for generations and is always performed by women.

Sound waves of a frequency of 200,000 to 500,000 vibrations a second passed along a tapering glass rod caused the tip to bore a hole in a piece of wood and a plate of glass, a French experimenter discovered recently. When the waves were communicated to a glass thread about one one-hundredth of an inch thick and more than a yard long, the frictional effect was so intense that the flesh could be burned.

Since 1914 a clock in Dayton, Ohio, has been running without being wound by human hands. It is equipped with a thermal motor, consisting of a gallon tank filled with alcohol, a one-half-inch cylinder and piston with a ten-inch stroke. A rise in the temperature expands the alcohol, pushing the piston up with a series of weights weighing sixty pounds. A fall in temperature allows the weights to descend winding the spring in the clock movement.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

"Come out of it, Virginia," he begged in great distress. "I'm going to send you home in my car."

Virginia struggled to sit up. Between them, the secretary and Oliver, they got her back in her chair.
"Don't bother, please," she urged. "I'll be all right in a moment. I want to go on with our business now."

"Indeed we will not. I'll come up and see you this evening, or this afternoon, if you prefer. Staying with the Deans, aren't you?" Virginia shook her head. "Not any more," she said; then to the secretary who was standing by with a glass of water, "it won't happen again."

"That's all, Miss Evans, thank you," Oliver followed up in dismissal.
"Now Virginia, out with it.
What went wrong at the Deans," he demanded when they were alone. "I heard you were with them."

"You don't expect me to talk about it, Oliver? Clarissa and I seem to have drifted away from each other. Please let it go at that."

"All right, if you say so, but I've an opinion of my own.
Where are you now?" he asked absolutely.
"In a hotel," she thought it best not to name it at the moment.
"You ought to go to someone," he advised her. "If Jeanie were back from Aiken I'd invite you to put up at our place. I could move over to the club," he suggested on second thought.

"That would be a topic for bridge table conversation," Virginia exclaimed, laughing a little.
"I suppose so. Pity we can't do as we please."

"Well, I please to stay where I am, Oliver, with all appreciation of your kindness, but I'd rather have you help me in another way. I've got three hundred dollars and I want you to make it a hundred thousand."

"Oh good lord! Do I look like John D. If I were an alchemist would I be here or would I be fishing in Maine?"
"You have a year to do it."

"All of that? Well, that does make a difference. I think, though, it would save a lot of time if I lent you the money."

"I'll never have a hundred thousand dollars, Oliver, unless I make it, so it's out of the question to borrow."

"Well, let's see your three hundred. I suppose you brought it with you?" He was teasing but Virginia opened her bag and handed him the money she had gotten from "Uncle Simon."

"Poor little babes in the deep black woods of Wall street," he sympathized over the bills. Then catching sight of Virginia's forlorn expression, he laughed. "But I'll be their papa and bring them up right," he promised heartily.
"Don't you worry, mama. Come in day after tomorrow and I'll have news for you."

He was at the door with her before the thought struck him that this might be all the money she had.
"I believe I could do as well with two hundred," he said and started to separate $100 to give back to her.

"You mustn't risk it, Oliver, I've just got to have that hundred thousand. Perhaps I'll have more to bring you when the estate is settled, but please do the best you can with this money. Keep all of it, please."

"As you say, Virginia. See you day after tomorrow." She nodded and went over to his secretary's desk to thank her for her ministrations. Miss Evans was a capable-looking woman in the early thirties, and it came to Virginia as she talked with her that here was a person who could give her some helpful advice. Everyone else had driven her nearly distracted with their refusals to see her in anything but the social butterfly who should cling to her place even if she had to assume the role of little sister to the rich in order to hold it.

All except Nathaniel, of course, and he made it hardest of all for her to pursue the course she had set her feet upon, but she could forgive him because of his motive.

"I wonder if you would have luncheon with me?" she asked Miss Evans rather doubtfully. She was afraid the secretary might suspect her of a patronizing attitude. "It would be doing me a great favor," she hastened to add. "I want to ask your opinion about something."

"I should be glad to, Miss Brewster," Miss Evans assured her after a slight pause of consideration.

Virginia glanced at her wrist watch. Why, she had forgotten all about it at "Uncle Simon's!" "It's 11:30," she announced. "May you go now?"

"In five minutes," Virginia waited in the reception room, looking out over the rooftops of Manhattan. For the first time in her life the immensity of the city frightened her. What was her pitiful strength compared to the power that had built this great, roaring metropolis? Would the brains represented by these incredible piles of steel and concrete allow her to wrest even the comparatively small sum of $100,000 from them? Virginia shivered with awe.

But once on the street, tea room-bound with Miss Evans, her balance was restored. When finally they were ensconced in wall seats before them she turned to her companion with a thrill over the novelty of what she intended to do.

Series of Thefts In Young County Solved, Police Say

Giving away after a stiff three hours of grilling, Fred Stewart, 16-year-old Ranger boy, confessed to a series of burglaries in Young county to Chief of Police Jim Ingram.

The boy was turned over to Young county officers yesterday afternoon and was taken back to Graham.

According to the confession made by the youth, he and another Ranger boy were in the South Bend community and were trying to make some money. Stewart said that the other boy suggested they rob some houses "and get some money or find something to sell."

They entered one house, which Stewart designated as "over yonder," and procured a .32 caliber pistol. They then went to the home of Jim Jones and procured a fountain pen and a watch.
The home of Earl Gilmore was then entered and a .38 calibre Smith and Wesson pistol, two shirts and some pistol shells were taken. A 16 gauge shot gun and a 410 gauge shot gun were taken from the home of an aged "sheep herder," Stewart said.

Chief of Police Jim Ingram and members of his department were endeavoring to apprehend the other Ranger youth implicated in the confession.

Identification Cards To Be Given Immigrant Aliens

WASHINGTON — Identification cards will be issued to all immigrant aliens, except students, who enter the United States on and after July 1, George J. Harris, acting commissioner of immigration, describes the innovations as "a milestone in immigration practice." It is expected to provide a practical means of differentiating between those who enter the United States legally and the many supposed to be smuggled in.

Identification cards will be issued by American consuls at points of departure and will contain the name and description of the immigrant, with his photograph attached. They are expected to prove popular with all legally admitted aliens who have hitherto lacked a convenient means of proving their status.

On the other hand, the alien who has entered in violation of the American Quota Act will find his stay much complicated by the absence of such a card, immigration officials say. It has been estimated that more than 1,000,000 immigrants are now in the United States illegally.

The certificate system will not be made retrospective, but lack of a card in aliens claiming to have entered after July 1, 1928, will be prima facie evidence of illegal entry.

The new system is an outgrowth of past experiences. About 15 years ago the service issued certificates for the use of Chinese immigrants. Later, identification cards were issued to aliens living contiguous to cities on the border to facilitate crossing to and fro.
Last year indorsements were given for the first time to passports of those admitted as non-immigrants.
This left the largest class of all still uncared for, the quota and non-quota immigrants.

"The card," Mr. Harris said, "not only will be a ready means of identification, but it will also prove a valuable record and afford the government an unfailing index to the official files which contain all the data respecting the status of aliens."

Many Millions of Dollars Involved In Oil Land Suit

Special to the Telegram AMARILLO, June 29. — The claims of Ed Trigg of Amarillo and more than a score of other plaintiffs, nearly all residents of Northwest Texas, to approximat-ly 500 acres of oil land in Hutchinson county valued at several million dollars have been upheld by the verdict of a jury retruned Tuesday in the district court at Austin, according to information received here.

The property awarded to Trigg and others by the decision includes approximately $3,000,000 in cash.
The sum represents revenue derived from sales of oil, the money having been impounded during the pendency of the suit.

The verdict also awards to the winners all drilling apparatus and other property which had been placed upon the land by the Phillips Petroleum company and about 60 other oil companies, which disputed the claim of Trigg, et al, to the title.

Cause for the origination of the suit was given years ago, it was explained, when the approximat-ly 500-acre were adjudged by the state to be school lands and were sold as such to the plaintiffs. Oil eventually was discovered on the property, and oil companies which questioned the validity of the previous sales were alleged to have moved upon the property and to have started drilling operations which proved the tract to be one of the richest in oil in the state.

About eight months ago, suit was brought by the state asking that the oil companies be ejected from the land. The state property as school land was valid and that as a result, title belonged to Trigg and others. Three weeks were required for the trial.

An appeal will be taken from the finding, it was said.

Better Seed Argument Presented. Brings Better Crops and More Money

"Better seed, better crops, more money" is "Our Platform," says Frank A. Briggs, editor of Farm and Ranch. He gives the following reasons for standing four-square on this platform:

"Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6:7.

St. Paul made this text apply to the development of the mind, the body, and the spiritual life, but he took it from actual experiences in the field, and it is on this material phase of the truth spoken in the days of the apostles that Farm and Ranch is basing a campaign, if you wish to call it such, to increase income on the farms of the Southwest.

The seed situation in the States of the Southwest has become almost intolerable. There is need of a better understanding of the seed laws by breeders, dealers, and farmers, and a more adequate enforcement of them. Farmers should know the law and insist on the dealers complying with its terms. Bankers, merchants, landlords, and the men who actually produce should become convinced of the economy in good seed and join hands in promoting seed selection and in providing protection for those who would buy the best.

Reasons for Better Seed.

Texas, Arkansas, and other Southwestern States have seed laws which are fairly adequate, if enforced.

No Southwestern state has provided sufficient laboratory room and equipment or appropriated even a reasonable sum for inspection and enforcement of the laws.

Farmers, and no doubt many seedmen, are ignorant of the provisions of these laws, and farmers especially are unacquainted with the means provided for their protection.

The law is not obeyed by many seedmen and merchants who are familiar with its provisions, and instances are numerous where seeds are sold untagged, or the facts misrepresented on the tags used.

Grain seed containing Johnson grass seed, the seed of the careless weed and other weed pests, are being distributed in a careless and haphazard manner, to the injury of farmers who buy and plant them.

Cottonseed are distributed as "specially produced for planting", which, when traced back to point of origin, are found to have been purchased in bulk at the mill, partially cleaned, sacked and sold at a high price.

Many merchants handle nothing but cheap seed because the immediate profit is larger than if they handled good seed.

Farmers, many of them, have formed the habit of shopping for seed, and looking for bargains, only to find that the cheapest seeds are the most expensive.

There are many "ins" and "outs" in the seed business, depending upon the demand at certain seasons of the year. If the demand is good, because of scarcity of good seed, these men, many of them, buy at low prices and sell at fancy prices, without regard to quality.

There are not enough of the breeders of pure seed to plant 3 per cent of the acreage in cultivation in the Southwest, therefore the necessity for farmers to study seed selection in their own fields—or better yet, secure a small quantity of high-class seed and develop their own planting seed for the following season.

The exclusive use of good seed will increase farm income above the initial cost, a minimum of $100. If used on all farms in the Southwest it would increase farm income in this area more than $100,000,000.

Crime Against Agriculture.

Bad seed are a crime against agriculture. The man who knowingly distributes scrub seed, or seed with a large content of noxious weed seed or other pests, has robbed the farmers to whom he has sold of their labor and their investment. There is no law which prohibits the selling of any kind of seed, provided the buyer is fully informed of what he is getting, but to sell seed of undesirable character under some form of misrepresentation, whether it be on the tag, or by word of mouth, should be punished severely.

Farmers who buy poor seed because they are cheaper by the bushel, are without protection.

WILL BE TAKEN FROM HARBOR MUD

Earth Eroded By Rivers Believed Contain Much Metal.

The revenues of Cornwall, that is to say, the revenues of the Prince of Wales, may be increased by an amount to be started at about £100,000 a year. This is nothing less than the amount of the tin recovered from the harbor mud of the Cornish rivers. It is estimated that the Cornish rivers have furnished tin to the value of £100,000 a year. There certainly is a great deal of tin in the harbor mud, and it is whether it can be recovered.

Meanwhile the tin problem is entering on an interesting stage, as practically the whole of the world's supplies today are controlled by a small, hidden, Anglo-American financial group, in whose hands producers, consumers and shareholders and, of course, the smelters, now find themselves. As far as any control over the price is concerned, a monitor representative has learned that this control has been now perfected, the price is to be raised within the next few weeks to a figure more justified than is the present relatively low one. If this results in an unofficial stabilization of prices, consumers and producers will welcome it, as, with the metal jumping up and down wildly day by day, none of them know where they are.

The Anglo-Oriental Mining Corporation, Ltd., by its recent acquisitions of a whole series of Nigerian companies, just completed, now holds half the tin output of Nigeria, and negotiations are on foot for further extending this. This makes it also the largest alluvial producer within the British Commonwealth. It is about to equip an immense new area in Malaya with large dredges which for a time may, like others sent there by other companies during the past year or so, increase Malaya's output.

On this subject, however, cable reports received here of the speech of the chairman of the Federated Malay States Chamber of Mines, at its annual meeting held lately, quote a statement by him that 70 dredges were working, 21 under construction, and 25 on order; and that 99 should be working by the end of this year. These, of course, are mainly the new large dredges, which are able to treat large areas of low-grade alluvial mud of which it did not previously pay to work at all except when tin, as at the close of the war, was very high in value. Both this speaker and the chairman of the company quoted above laid stress on the serious state which shortage of tin must inevitably produce by 1930. Had not America reclaimed so much tin last year, in fact, the position even today would be very serious.

When Wykoff Defeated Paddock

Frank Wykoff, Glendale high school boy, pulled one of the big surprises of years and practically cinched a place on the American Olympic team when he defeated Charley Paddock, the "Fastest Human," in the 100 and 200-meter races at the southwest Olympic trials in Los Angeles. Wykoff beat Paddock by a yard in the 100 meter race and 10 3-5 seconds and his winning time of 20 4-5 in the 200-meter race equalled Paddock's world's record. In the picture above Paddock is shown congratulating the youngster.

THREE HUNDRED AIR SCHOOLS SHOW GROWTH

According to reports of the department of commerce, more than $6,000,000 is invested in air companies engaged in regular flying operations and there are now over 300 schools of aviation in this country, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Planes and engines valued at nearly $24,500,000 were produced in 1926 and 1927, and last year companies engaged in regular transportation by air flew 5,800,000 miles on scheduled trips and carried 8,500 passengers, 2,261,507 pounds of express and 1,554,454 pounds of mail.

Fast Mat Experts Matched for Bout Here July 10th

Jap Martin will meet Bobby Edwards in a finish match at the Elks Arena Tuesday, July 10th for the next wrestling match of the Elks and from the reports Jap is training hard for the bout. Martin is one of the fastest wrestlers in the game weighing close to the 147-pound limit of the welterweight division and is clever and very aggressive. He does not entirely specialize in one hold but wrestles every style. However, Edwards depends mostly on the "chiropractic" which is one of the most punishing holds in wrestling. The hold is applied with a headlock and is done by pressing the knuckles into the sensitive nerves of the head and will almost blind the opponent. This hold is barred on the Pacific coast and in all amateur matches but is permissible in Texas. On the same card will be "Schoolboy" Lowery and Young Hendrick for a finish match.

STUCK

A traveling man in a European hotel lobby had been talking at length about his own knowledge and ability. During a pause someone among the listeners said: "Now tell us something you can't do and I'll warrant I can do that." "I can't pay my bill," was the instant rejoinder.

STAR IN HEAVEN SEEN TO EXPLODE

the dreams of the earliest astronomers, but we owe a debt almost as great to the camera. Astronomy is one of the oldest sciences, but star photography is of comparatively recent birth. You might say it had its beginning with the introduction of the dry plate. Prof. Henry Draper of the University of New York made the first successful star photograph in 1840. A year later, at Harvard observatory, a picture was made of the moon. It was considered so wonderful that it was exhibited throughout the east and then taken to the Crystal Palace in London.

"Today we may be inclined to smile at this picture, for many for more complete and better in every way have been taken, but these early photographs are of inestimable value because they give us a tangible basis by which later studies can be compared and any changes noted. Taking pictures of the stars is a laborious and highly exacting procedure. For one good plate, hundreds may be failures. The star photographer endures the hardships of winter and the heat of summer, for his observatory dome must be kept as near as possible to the temperature of the outside air to preserve the accuracy of his instruments and so as not to distort the vision. Negatives must be developed with the utmost care and precision to insure accurate reproduction of every detail. The big telescopes must be nicely focused and kept in constant adjustment to compensate for the rotation of the earth. This is exceedingly important when long-time exposures are made, and practically all star photography falls in this class. A single plate may be exposed for hours and sometimes on two or more nights in order to record far-distant stars. Giving long time enables the camera to 'see' for us thousands of stars that our eyes could never detect. The faint rays of light keep 'tapping' away on the plate until they make their little mark, a dot that shows immense camera lenses, twenty tons, with a diameter a little less than that of a three feet, than can be accurately ten feet when attachments are used, an idea of the great telescope at Yerkes as it is used for work. In spite of its weight, the long slender and delicately adjusted and that it can be focused electrically by indicators. One of the prominent features is the mechanism which is the position of the telescope reference to the rotation earth. Its gears keep gears pointed exactly regardless of the earth. But in addition to this, an assistant along with the observer who photograph is being taken the telescope aimed with accuracy, according to one of the eyes.

In winter time, an add star photography observatory frequently dress as warmly as possible. Temperatures of grees below zero, and not uncommon in that rolls about on any any section of the sky posed to the glass.
