GRISHAM OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN FOR CONGRESS

Speaks in Abilene, Outlining Views on National Problems and His Policies.

Judge R. N. Grisham of Eastland opened his campaign for Congress with an eloquent address in the presence of a large crowd Tuesday night in Abilene, in which he stated his views on national problems and pledged himself to represent all parts of the district faithfully and impartially, if elected.

The speech of introduction was delivered by Judge James Stinson, one of the best known men of West Texas. On the platform was the Hon. R. W. Haynie and former Mayor E. N. Kirby, while in the group that shook hands with Judge Grisham afterward were W. J. Cunningham, Harry Tom King and J. M. Wagstaff—who rank high in the growth and development of Abilene.

A number of Eastland county friends motored over for the occasion. Among them were County Judge Ed S. Pritchard, Frank Judkins, County Commissioner V. V. Cooper and C. F. Sheppard.

Judge Grisham spoke in part as follows: "More treaties of commerce will provide markets for our raw materials and prices more adequate to the cost of production will be obtained. The South is a great producer of cotton and will be when the last argument on diversification has been made. Treaties of commerce should enable us to carry that staple into the markets of every and where the sun shines and the wind blows."

PEACE FOREMOST
"We should have more treaties of peace. The Bryan treaties should be renewed from time to time and others made where and when opportunity affords. Blessed is the peacemaker" was written for nations as well as for individuals. Neutrality in European warfare is sound, intrench-

Sam Conner Has His Car Damaged, But He Is Unhurt

Young Sam Conner, son of Judge Earl Conner, had a narrow escape from being seriously hurt yesterday afternoon, when the Ford he was driving was struck at corner of Seaman and Hill Streets, a runabout Studebaker. Sam was on the wrong side of the street, in order stop at the corner of his home, and the other car was turning the corner at the right of South Seaman. Sam says he signalled, but thinks the driver did not see it.

The impact was heard inside the houses nearby. The wheels of the Ford were crumpled like pasteboard, throwing the car on its side on the curb. Sam cut a flying dash before alighting. Although badly shaken, he was not injured.

GRISHAM OPENS CAM-PAIGN FOR CONGRESS

Americanism intermeddling in Latin American affairs is defensible unless to protect American life or property.
When the President or the Secretary of State dispatches the army, navy or air service or any part of those branches to a foreign country to aid one faction against another, it should be grounds for impeachment or removal from office. Wars of aggression are inimical to the policies and traditions of our government. We have acquired much of our country by purchase—
the Louisiana Purchase, Alaska and our island possessions. If we need Canal Zone lands, let us buy them and pay the price in money—not in the blood of the American soldier.
Foreign immigration is an ever-recurring federal question.
Some great evangelists whom I respect and love discuss with fervor the indiscriminate admission of the heathen from every land
in order that they may be Christianized. But the commission is not to bring them here as a mission. The fostering of American ideals and their perpetuation requires restricted immigration.

That the 9-year-old controversy between citizens of Strawn, Ran-will be brought to a climax, was indicated Saturday when the Strawn Tribune gave notice that a mass meeting for citizens of towns living on the Bankhead highway from Winks City west through Cisco, would be held at the city hall at Strawn Wednesday night.

"The commissioners have decided," the statement said, "to give this land-buying crowd from Albany and Breckenridge a hearing and we want to select a delegation to represent us in Austin that can show the highway commission that this is only a selfish move on the part of those towns of the north loop of the highway. We want to be prepared to fight this matter out in the higher courts of our land before we will permit a bunch of outside people to come in and

The Breckenridge and Albany

chased land at Metolf Gap, the trickery. Then they hurried for Charles Evans Hughes, who was not quite so impressive owing to his '916 defeat. Hughes, realizing that he was weak in the west and that he apparently was in line for a job as a mere hitching post, ducked out. And then there just wasn't anybody to the east of Senator Frank Willis in Ohio. The old rule that "you can't beat somebody with nobody" worked inexorably.

Except for Coolidge, New England was barren of presidential possibilities. None of her senators would do; Governor Fuller of Massachusetts was cut because of the Sacco-vanzetti case and the fact that it wasn't smart politics
to nominate two Massachusetts governors in succession.

All the leading New York Republicans but Hughes had been beaten by Al Smith or some other Democrat and none had shown any ability to hold his own state. No Pennsylvanian was available for various reasons, especially owing to the unsavory reputation of the state's politics.

It was a very sad situation indeed, and while the bosses were wringing their hands Hoover walked in and grabbed up a lot of delegates.

Al Smith is the one big exception to the fact that the outstanding political personalities of this nation come from the west. Coolidge, of course, became president by accident. The parties just naturally can't seek their candidates
from New England.

ONE FALL EACH

Henderson Disqualified in Third Round and Referee Gives the Match to Straecener.

After Tommie Henderson, known as the Arizona Wildcat, and Tom Straecener, pride of the oil belt, had each won a fall in the wrestling contest at the Eiks club Tuesday night, Henderson was disqualified by the referee for using ju-jitsu methods and Straecener was announced winner of the contest. The hall was filled with a large crowd and many expressed to Promoter Hinton their appreciation of the entertainment and told him he had kept his promise faithfully.
Straecener won the first fall in 14 minutes and 53 seconds, using a body scissors and half-Nelson. Henderson won the second fall in 13 minutes with a flying head scissors and arm lock. The third fall had gone four minutes and 22 seconds when the referee warned Henderson against using ju-jitsu and a few minutes later he disqualified him to continue and gave the match to Straecener.
Promoter Hinton announced today that Kid Leon of Chicago, weighing 162 pounds would meet Straecener next Tuesday night, and promises that the match will be very interesting.

Old Folks Say Doctor
Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of herbs and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.
The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and the young, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?
A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal.

When A Girl Loves

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Nathaniel Dann, a struggling artist, gives a party at his Greenwich Village studio in honor of his fiancée, Virginia, beautiful daughter and heiress of Richard Brewster, Wall Street financier. Niel's model, Chiri, is jealous of Virginia and tells him that he will spoil his career if he marries the wealthy girl who cannot appreciate his art. He tests Virginia by showing her his studies in nude and then introduces her to the model, but her reaction is so whole some sweet that he is more in love than ever.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER II

Dr. Meyerling regarded Nathaniel with grave thoughtfulness before replying to his question. "Then he said quietly, 'Why do you ask me that?'" Nathaniel hesitated just a second. "That look on his face," he began uncertainly, "sort of fearful and—"

"You are engaged to Miss Brewster, I believe?" Dr. Meyerling broke in. "Yes? Well, then, I'll tell you that Mr. Brewster worried himself to death. I warned him often that it would come to this."

"What in the world did he have to worry about?" Nathaniel asked unbelievably.

"Money, young man; the thing that is at the bottom of most men's worries."

"I can't imagine Mr. Brewster in financial difficulties," Nathaniel remarked frankly, "but if it was as you say, could that have made him look as though he saw an assassin before him?"

"He did see an assassin. He saw Death, and this time he must have known that Death would be victorious."

"Still, I can't see why facing death could have marked him like that. Surely it must have been something more. I don't believe Mr. Brewster could have feared so greatly to die."

"He did not fear for himself, no, but he wanted to live so that the day when his daughter must learn that for years his fortune

As he walked home, the many blocks uncounted, his heart ached with pity for Virginia. In his studio he took a stiff drink from a bottle that he found on a side table. The guests were gone, the butler, too.

When he put down the glass Nathaniel seemed to view his surroundings with a new meaning. The table was somewhat disordered. He felt for the morning and sank down with his head on ed and the once temptingly-garnished patties and jellies were messy looking now. The orchids drooped and in the hollow stems of champagne glasses a pale liquid had lost its effervescent power. It seemed to symbolize the joy that had blossomed here, and died.

"My God!" he cried sharply, "Why didn't you go with the others?" he demanded of the girl who stood there, proffering a package of cigarettes.

"Good night," Nathaniel muttered, and Chiri understood she could go to Fell Harkness or anywhere else she liked had been rapidly dwindling away would be postponed."

Nathaniel uttered a sound of dismay, but was thinking only of Virginia, and Dr. Meyerling comprehended this.

"His only relieving thought was that his daughter was going to marry a man he believed in," he told Nathaniel warmly and put a friendly hand on his shoulder.

"I think it would be advisable to have Mrs. Pike—communicate with some of Miss Brewster's friends and get someone here as soon as possible," he went on, not waiting for Nathaniel to speak.

"I'll send in a nurse," but Miss Brewster will sleep for several hours. You'd better go home and get some rest. She will need you more than he and his guests had danced on a grave.

"Have a cigarette?" tomorrow. Nathaniel remained until a friend of Virginia's appeared. He thought the girl looked incapable of comforting her; Mrs. Pike assured him that she was Virginia's closest friend.

Strange he hadn't met her before. Miss Dean? Then he remembered. She had been in Europe for two years, but Virginia often had talked about her. He wondered why Virginia cared for her. The attraction of opposites, perhaps, he told himself.

her entirely in thinking of Virginia.

As early as he dared he was at her apartment that morning and for the next few days he remained at her side as much as he was permitted to. She had not been told about her father's financial troubles. He learned this from Dr. Meyerling, who had talked with Mr. Brewster's lawyer. The physician had advised against telling her until after her father's funeral.

Nathaniel dreaded the hour of disclosure for her. Its coming so close on the shock of her bereavement made him wonder if she could stand up under it. She was so pitifully near collapse as it was.

But he was to see a new side of Virginia's character when Mr. Gardiner the lawyer, intoned the bad news in an excessively grave voice. Nathaniel had been rather astonished at her abandonment to grief such as one expects only from less tortured persons. He had expected more self-control from her, but her love for her father was not of the ordinary filial kind. They had been truly devoted to each other. Nathaniel sensed the fact that Virginia's loss had terrified her.

It was different now, however, when she learned that she had lost a fortune as well. It seemed rather to bewilder than to hurt her.

"But I can't understand," she murmured, "how can you say that there is nothing left? We still have the house at Glen Cove and—daddy—never curtailed our expenses—"

"He ruined himself to keep up appearances," Mr. Gardiner explained bluntly. "All the property he inherited was heavily mortgaged long ago. Somehow he managed to keep the estate you speak of clear—until about three months ago. What he did with the money he obtained on it as that time I have not been able to discover. There are no receipts bills of any recent date. I fear, Miss Brewster, that there is an appalling number of accounts yet to be paid, and recollections on your property are sure to be immediate."

The man all but droned the words, doing his duty. He found it difficult, of course, but Virginia's attitude deceived him. She seemed so indifferent, except to Nathaniel, who sat close enough to watch her reactions coming and going in her grief-filled eyes.

Mr. Gardiner suspected it was possible she possessed some means unknown to him—ah, yes, the money her father raised on the estate at Glen Cove—no, no—that would not be like them. Richard Brewster hadn't known how to brake the toboggan of habit on which he was riding to financial doom, but his lawyer knew that he would not have planned to cheat anyone to whom he owed money.

Nathaniel felt that his voice could have been softer, his manner more gentle, and he was infinitely glad when it was all over.

"Guessed you'd get into a funk. What was it, Niel? Is her father dead?"

Nathaniel nodded. "Heart trouble."

"That's too bad for you. Now you'll have a rich wife instead of merely an heiress."

"No! Though it's going to be rough on Virginia, I won't have to play that role, Chiri. Mr. Brewster did not leave a fortune."

Chiri gasped. "Well, you found that out soon enough. She must be sure of your love to tell you."

"She—if you mean Virginia—didn't tell me. In fact, she doesn't know it yet; at least I believe she doesn't."

"Ah," Chiri breathed the word little head, had passed a new idea, one that she accepted with a satisfaction that took no thought of what it would mean to Nathaniel with its utterance she experienced an exhilarating emotion.

Quickly, through her scheming if the idea became a reality. Virginia Brewster, heiress to Richard Brewster's millions, could afford the luxury of a poor husband—but Virginia Brewster, deprived of those millions—? she might throw Niel over!

Chiri rose, having seated herself, and got the bottle from which she had seen Nathaniel pour his drink.

"Here, have another," she urged, coming back to him. It would not harm her newly-born hopes if she could send Nathaniel to Virginia with the effects of drinking showing on his features.

"At a time like this," she thought, "she'd hate it. Even I would if it were my father."

But Nathaniel had needed only one bracer. It was enough. He told Chiri so. She shrugged at the quick failure of her plan. After all, she shouldn't have expected it to work—Niel was too decent for that.

"Well, there's nothing more to offer you—except that I know you don't want, my loving comfort—so I'll get on to my downy couch. It hasn't been impressed with my dainty figure for two nights. I don't suppose you'll be working for some time. Mind if I go to Hark for his series? He won't finish with me very soon but when you're back at work again, you'll have to do the murals and let your illustrations go anyhow, so you won't need me."

"Good night," Nathaniel muttered, and Chiri understood she could go to Fell Harkness, or anywhere else she liked.

"I'll come in and make you some coffee," she promised. "What time are you getting up?"

"I'm going to bed, and don't bother, please."

"You mean you're going to sit up all night and soak yourself in grief over what's happened to Miss Brewster?"

Nathaniel glanced at his watch. "It's almost morning now."

"Then I'll make the coffee before I go."

"Never mind—" Nathaniel feared she would want to stay to drink with him. But she surprised him by leaving as soon as she had the percolator going and sugar at his elbow.

Chiri often did the unexpected. Nathaniel thought of that with gratitude as he drank the steaming black liquid. Then he forgot and he was alone with Virginia. He had something he considered very important to say to her before he left her this time. But he did not get to say it. They were interrupted by an unexpected caller whom Virginia would not refuse to see.

MRS. R. C. FERGUSON READS GIFT TO HER BROTHER

Mrs. R. C. Ferguson was surprised when she picked up the Dallas News of Tuesday to see a picture of her brother, Rev. George D. Durham, pastor of the Lakewood Methodist church, standing beside a handsome car, with the announcement below, that at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon a messenger brought a package of ice cream and a letter, which read: "Brother George Durham; we feel you are doing good work in the Lord's service, and know that you are handicapped in not having a better way to get around. In front of the Lakewood Grocery and Market, on Greenville Road, you will find a car, with license number given, which we ask that you accept, and suggest you sell your present car for whatever it will bring, and use proceeds to buy gasoline. With best wishes for the success of your ministry. Friends." Enclosed was the license, light test receipt, and keys.

The car was found as indicated. The pastor was unable to learn who made the gift. He has been a student pastor at Southern Methodist University, where he lacks but four credits of having his bachelor of arts degree, and has been in Dallas a few months.

In the picture of the car as shown in the Dallas News, is seated his wife and children.

ORDER OF EASTERN STAR HAS MEETING

The first business session of the Order of the Eastern Star, under the regime of new officers, found all at their post save one. The Chapter is actively engaged in preparing for the School of Instructions, to be held one day and one night, in Eastland, June 23, in charge of the Worthy Grand Matron of Texas.

It is a momentous event in the Star history, and generally brings a large number of visitors, wherever held.

bridge parties for the Elks and their families will be given tomorrow evening in the clubhouse, with J. L. Cottingham, chairman of hosts, who will assist throughout the evening in all ways possible in receiving, giving and taking and serving refreshments and all matters of hospitality.

Mr. Cottingham is presently looking after the invitations, and it is hoped there will be a prompt response and a large attendance. The women Elks are specially interested in knowing just how the men can better what the women have been doing, and the latter will doubtless show them.

Any Elks with out-of-town visitors in their families, bring them, and all should be there promptly at eight o'clock, in order to facilitate an early start and a late finish, with good eats, and a lovely line of prizes.
