LAND HAS WORKED OUT OIL COMPACT

By United Press
DALLAS, Feb. 16.—Gov. E. W. Clegg today announced that the oil states, offered what he called a "constructive plan" for all states compact.
The Oklahoma governor said he had given many months study to the question and believed his plan would cure many of the mammoth state's ills.
Governor Clegg's plan included the following points:
1—Creation of a cooperative oil producing agency to meet quarterly and to be composed of one representative from each participating state and the representative of the federal government.
2—The agency to find current oil requirements of the nation and to inform each state of its amount of its petroleum production.
3—Predetermination by the agency of the nation's petroleum needs.
4—Control of imports by the federal government.
At the opening of today's session, W. M. Downing, Colorado representative, introduced a resolution asking the president to enact legislation preventing "shipment of oil in interstate commerce which is produced in violation of interstate law."

Fight to Rescue 'Farm Anarchist'

A nation-wide campaign is being waged by liberals on behalf of Ward H. Rodgers, above, sentenced at Marked Tree, Ark., to six months in jail and fined $500 on conviction of anarchy. Rodgers, now free on appeal bond, was arrested for organizing tenant farmers against alleged injustice of landlords and ousted as FERA educational instructor.

METHODIST BANQUET IS BIG SUCCESS

The Methodist men of the Cisco District met for a banquet and pep meeting at Eastland Friday night, a regular feature at the end of each quarter, and one greatly enjoyed by all who attended.
Coming together at 7 o'clock the crowd of Methodist ministers and laymen had grown to nearly 150 by 7:30 when the ladies of the Eastland church announced everything in readiness for the banquet in the basement which was lovely with the colorful tables lighted by rows of candles.
After the invocation by Reverend Kenneth Pope, now of Georgetown but for the last several years of Breckenridge, the meal was served. Following the banquet the meeting was given in charge of Presiding Elder Rev. J. B. Curry, who called for a short report from each of the pastors concerning their work and their church during the past quarter. The reports were very interesting and were brightened in places by the wit of several in making their talks.
At the close of his report Rev. J. M. Bond, pastor of the Ranger Methodist church, challenged any of the towns represented to show as large an attendance present as that of Ranger. A count of hands in a roll call after all pastors had been heard proved that he knew his men in making the challenge, for Ranger had 20 present against 14 from the next largest group.
When all business had been finished Judge Hickman, toastmaster for the evening, took charge of the meeting in what he termed the Laymen's half. A quartet that was to have been on the program had sent word that they could not be there so in their stead Judge Hickman gave a highly entertaining account of one term of school he attended at Southwestern University at Georgetown. He then presented Mrs. Grady Pipkin who sang "I Have Heard of a Beautiful City," accompanied by Mrs. Bert McLamery.
The president of Southwestern University, Mr. King Vivion, was next introduced as the principal speaker of the evening. President Vivion, a comparatively young man for so important a post, is not only an interesting speaker but a man whose whole dynamic being is put into whatever he is doing and saying and his message will long be remembered by all who heard him.
Ranger men who attended the banquet were: Rev. J. A. Bond, pastor; S. P. Boon, A. N. Larson, R. V. Galloway, E. P. Weaver, J. H. Weaver, W. W. Paschall, Bob Smith, W. B. Crossley, B. H. Peacock, Mrs. B. H. Peacock, E. K. Smith, Bob Balch, Stanley E. McAnelly, C. P. Ashcraft, P. O. Hatley, A. J. Ratliff, B. A. Tunnell, C. D. Woods, L. H. Flewellen.

Wife on High Seas to Meet Byrd

The "stay-at-home" member of the Admiral Richard E. Byrd family, as she describes herself, here is shown as she left Los Angeles to sail for Dunedin, N. Z., to greet her husband, whom she has not seen for more than a year. The Antarctic explorer now is on his way to the New Zealand city, after a long stay in the South Polar wastes, and the pair will return to their Virginia home together.

MAY STRETCH RELIEF WORK ANOTHER YEAR

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Fear among certain senators government credit is being endangered, may influence the administration to spread its contemplated $4,880,000,000 work relief expenditure over two years instead of one, it was learned today.
Several senators expressed alarm at any precedent which would make it appear annual appropriations of $4,000,000,000 would be necessary for an indefinite period.
Corryington Gill, assistant FERA administrator, testified before the appropriations committee his estimate for putting 3,500,000 persons to work on projects were on the basis of 12 months.

Chosen Key Man In Work-Relief

Roosevelt choice for co-ordinator of his $4,880,000,000 work-relief fund is reported to be George L. Berry, above, pressmen's union president, prominent New Deal figure, and long an A. ### ESCAPE WITH ARMY RIFLES AND SUPPLIES

Pair Is Sought By Officers of Two States After The Robbery.

By United Press
BEAUMONT, Feb. 16.—Raymond Hamilton, fugitive from the death house and a swarthy companion today raided the Texas National Guard armory, bound up the caretaker and escaped with eight army rifles and 3,600 rounds of ammunition.
In an effort to conceal his identity, Hamilton had dyed his hair black, officers said. Otherwise, his description tallied with records.
A short time after the robbery an automobile was reported stolen at Silsbee, 20 miles east of here. The pair used a truck to haul their loot from the armory.
Hamilton was identified through fingerprints found on a wooden door of the armory, through which he and his companion gained admittance.
Their robbery was interrupted when G. T. Owens, the caretaker, entered the room as they looted the shelves of guns and ammunition.
Owens was seized and blindfolded. Hamilton and the swarthy one threatened to kill him if he made any noise or sounded an alarm. The killer, who fled from the Texas prison's death block last July, and his companion, loaded the loot into a truck and sped away.
Officers throughout Southeast Texas and Southwest Louisiana were notified.
It was known for some time Hamilton was hiding in this section but all clues as to his whereabouts had proved fruitless.

That reminds me...

More rain, more cold weather, and maybe snow—who knows? But that won't hurt. In fact, it's the very thing. However, cattlemen state that the sudden cold spells are no very convenient for cattle, which means that there is a little bit of bad in every bit of good. It would be nice, however, if all this cold weather would come in this month and then have it over with, but there have been times when blizzards struck way up in the end of March and played havoc with everything. At that we'll take it and like it, whatever comes.

NEW FEDERAL BUILDING IS NOW LIKELY

A telegram was received Saturday afternoon from Thomas L. Blanton, in which he expressed hopes that a federal building might be obtained soon for both Eastland and Ranger.
The telegram, which is self-explanatory, reads as follows:
"Have spent almost the entire day in conference with Admiral Peoples' office, procurement division, and with the fourth assistant postmaster general, Purdum, and his assistants in the post office department and believe I have removed all obstacles that have been causing delay and both Eastland and Ranger will be placed in the list of emergency federal buildings that are next to be designated for construction and as former appropriations for same have been used for relief purposes, funds for them will be provided in the president's construction measure. Order will be issued Monday for inspector to re-survey both Eastland and Ranger, hence have the chambers of commerce contact the inspector when he reaches there and explain why postal receipts have annually diminished. Signed: Thomas L. Blanton."

Two Sentenced To Die For Part In Death Plot

By United Press
CALCUTTA, India, Feb. 16.—Two men, one a leading physician, were sentenced to death today on a charge they conspired to murder a wealthy Indian by administering plague germs.
The case was one of the most bizarre ever heard here. It arose from the death of Amarendra Pandey.
Prosecution alleged that an attempt first was made to kill Pandey by rubbing deadly germs on the bridge of his spectacles. That attempt failed and germs were injected through his coat into his arm by means of a pin, it was alleged.
Dr. Tarantath Bhattacharya and Benoyendra Pandey, step-brother of the murdered man, were sentenced to death. The step-brother inherited a rich estate.

KENNAMER'S SANITY CRUX OF DEFENSE

By United Press
PAWNEE, Okla., Feb. 16.—The question of Phil Kennamer's sanity—the crux of his trial for killing John Gorrell, Jr., halted the case today—while counsel argued phases of the query on which the jury verdict will hang.
A. Moss, Kennamer's chief counsel, led to Dr. Karl Menninger, Poppa, Kansas, alienist, a question it took 35 minutes to question.
At the end of the question, in which Moss reviewed Kennamer's whole life and activities up to the night shooting of his friend, were these words:
"Taking all this into consideration, then, in your judgment, was defendant, on the night of the shooting, rational or irrational? Understand or know the consequences of his own act and be able to distinguish between right and wrong?"
Special Prosecutor J. Berry King requested an immediate answer.
Moss asked a recess and Moss continued.
The jury was sent out and court reporters began transcribing the question.

Two men were wounded by police during a fight in the courtyard of a huge apartment building.

'Forgotten Man' Still Under Dark Skies

Experts working for the Federal Emergency Relief Administration sat down not long ago to try to find out just who this forgotten man we have been hearing so much about really is.

Examining their records, they came to the surface at last with the following description:

He is between 45 and 65 years of age. He makes up about 27 per cent of the "employable" relief population; but there's a catch in the use of that adjective, because his chances of re-entering private industry are almost nil, 45 being accounted a sere and yellow old age in employment offices these days.

The forgotten man, further, has little hope of cashing in under any unemployment insurance scheme, and unless he is getting very close to 65 no old-age pensions will do him much good.

If the administration's $4,800,000,000 work relief schemes goes through, it may mean a job for him, but the job will be only temporary and it won't pay him any very princely sum.

All in all, he is plodding along under a pretty dark sky, and there is little indication that his sky is going to get much lighter. And his existence under such circumstances is one of the most telling indictments imaginable against our whole social system.

The man who has passed 45 ought to be just entering the age in which he can enjoy the fruits of the society in which he lives. The experience he has gained in his work ought to make him a valuable man in his job; his years of living ought to have ripened his wisdom so that he could get more human values out of his life than ever before.

Instead, in all too many cases, passing on into middle age is apt to take him over the deadline beyond which there is no secure place for him. We seem to have arranged things so that we have no use for him.

If he has a job, he must worry about losing it; if he loses it, he is pitched into a situation from which it is constantly becoming more difficult for him to extricate himself by his own exertions.

There is something both heartless and silly about such a state of affairs. One of the prime features of any proper "new deal" ought to be the discovery of some workable way to remedy it.

There is nothing in this life that returns so much in happiness for the investment required than a real home; a individual house built for the use and material comfort and convenience of your family.

"OUT OUR WAY" By Williams

SILKEN SPINDLES by Laura Lou Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY Gale Henderson, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

Steve Myers, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by Brian Westmore, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris to enter the mill. Gale disappears before he learns her name.

Vicky Thatcher, daughter of Robert Thatcher, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.

At noon one day Gale is summoned to the main office of the mill. Expecting to be discharged, she is amazed to find Brian Westmore waiting for her. He explains he wanted to see her, knew an other way to arrange it. Gale is so relieved she bursts into tears, is trying to comfort her when the door opens and Vicky appears.

Now go on with the story CHAPTER XXVII

Brian turned. He said, "Oh—hello, Vicky. Come on in, won't you?"

Vicky stood in the doorway. She was staring at Gale, whom she had never seen before. The blue uniform, of course, meant that this girl worked in the mill. A pretty girl. She had been crying and Brian had stood there with his hand on her shoulder. Or was his arm around her? Vicky wasn't sure of that.

She looked from Gale to Brian and back at the girl. Vicky was in black again today. She wore the tiny new black hat and the silver foxes and a bit of snow white showed at her throat. Her face had lost all color except for the stroke of crimson that was her lips. Vicky's eyes, dark now as the sootblack hat, flashed with anger.

Suddenly she remembered Brian had spoken. She shook her head and even managed a smile. She said, "Sorry. They told me my father was here. Since he isn't I'll have to look somewhere else. See you another time."

The door closed behind her. Gale said, with flushed cheeks, "I'd better go." She gave Brian his handkerchief.

He stuffed it into his pocket. "Please don't go yet," he urged. "Here—sit down." He moved a chair forward. "I'm dreadfully sorry I frightened you, but I hope you'll forgive me."

"Of course. It doesn't matter." "But it does. I didn't mean it—honestly! The other night you ran away without telling me when I could see you again. That's why I asked you to come here today. I wanted to know if we couldn't have dinner together this evening. How about it?"

Gale shook her head. "I couldn't," she said. "I'm the cook at home. And besides I'm always busy evenings."

"You couldn't manage—just once?"

"I'm afraid not."

An electric bell rang sharply in the corridor outside. Gale said, "Oh, I'll have to hurry! I can't be late."

She turned and fled. She hurried through the outer office without glancing either left or right. She did not see Vicky Thatcher, sitting near a desk at the far side of the room. Vicky, who had been elaborately busy with her vanity case, lowered the case as Gale crossed the room.

She said to the girl at the desk. "That's a pretty girl. Who is she?" The stenographer turned to look. Her name's Gale Henderson," she said. "She's worked here quite a while. Ever since I came anyhow. Do you think she's pretty?" I like blonds better myself."

She broke off, aware suddenly of Vicky's pronounced brunet coloring. "Vicky was busy with the vanity case again. She closed it and said, 'Well, I guess I'll go on. You needn't say anything to Father about my being here. It really doesn't matter.'"

She slipped the vanity case into her handbag, drew on her gloves and arose.

The stenographer, whose name was Gertrude Mullins, watched Vicky crossing the room. She wondered what that divine perfume Miss Thatcher used was called and how much it cost. Plenty, no doubt! Gertrude Mullins settled back to work. She thought "I'll bet they'll be surprised at home when I tell them about Miss Thatcher sitting here and talking to me, just as friendly as anybody. I'll bet that silver fox cape cost plenty, too."

Brian Westmore walked to the window and tapped the sill with restless fingers. That was a fool trick, he told himself for the dozenth time. His fault, altogether. Why did he always have to bungle everything? He'd have felt a terrific idiot if anyone else had happened to come to the door just then—Thatcher or Parsons or even Miss Young. The thing probably looked entirely different from what really happened. That was what bothered him. Gale Henderson must have felt the same way. Lord, what a dunce he was! Frightening the girl out of her wits and then embarrassing her.

He raised the window and drew a deep breath of cool air. Well, there was one thing that had been fortunate. If anyone had to come in and see him with Gale when she was weeping and he was trying to comfort her, he was glad it had been Vicky. Vicky was all right. She wouldn't misjudge the situation, wouldn't be curious. Or if she was, at least she wouldn't say anything about it.

Yes, Vicky was a good sport. Brian thought, "I've done a few favors for her, all right. She hasn't forgotten—"

But he would have to make some explanation to Vicky, just the same. He could tell her? Or would it be better to ignore the whole affair? Not to say anything about it?

Brian went to the closet where his coat and hat hung and took them out. A minute later he was in the outer office. He said, "Miss Young, if anyone calls tell them I'll be back in an hour."

Then he strode out of the building. Vicky took off her hat and tossed it on the over-stuffed chair where her gloves and purse lay. She took a step forward and stopped, frowning.

"Martha!" she called abruptly. "A middle-aged woman with gray hair and wearing a gray dress appeared in the doorway of the living room."

"Yes, Miss Vicky."

"Martha, look at those flowers! What do you mean, having half-wilted flowers around like that?"

"But, Miss Vicky, they were fresh this morning—"

"Fresh! They're half-wilted. Get them out of here at once. And call up Roberts' and tell them if they can't send flowers that stay fresh longer than half a day I'll find someone who can. Tell him I don't intend to pay him for wilted flowers. If it happens again, I'll find another florist!"

"Yes, Miss Vicky." The woman crossed the room and picked up the offending bowl of flowers. They were clear yellow jonquils with ruffled edges, and tulips—mauve, shading to bluish-purple—poised on tall, graceful stems. The flowers gave off a spring-like fragrance and each of the blossoms looked crisply fresh. Evidently, however, the housekeeper did not think it wise to make any further protest.

She said, "I'll tell them," and started for the door. She had almost reached it when Vicky's voice stopped her.

"What are those boxes?" she demanded, pointing to three gray boxes on a low table.

"They're from Bosworth's, Miss Vicky. The things you bought yesterday."

"Oh—"

Vicky picked up the box on top of the pile, snatched at the string around it and drew off the cover. From folds of tissue paper inside she drew an abbreviated garment of peach-colored silk and lace.

Vicky frowned. "This isn't what I ordered," she said. "It won't do at all! Look at this silk—sleazy stuff! Send it back. Call up the store and tell them to send out for all of this."

The housekeeper eyed the boxes which had not been opened. "Everything?" she asked. "You want it all to go back?"

"Yes. I won't deal with places that aren't reliable. I'm going up stairs now. If anyone calls, tell them I'm not at home. I'm not at home to anyone. You understand?"

The woman nodded. "Yes, Miss Vicky." She said it uncertainly, rather timidly.

The girl swept from the room. Upstairs in the peach and ivory bedroom with its heavy satin draperies, Vicky pulled off her frock and dropped it, crumpled, to the floor. She took a peach-colored velvet robe from the clothes closet and thrust her arms into it, slipped her feet into the silver sandals, and stalked across the room. Her eyes were blazing and her lips twisted with anger.

"A mill girl!" she said contemptuously. "A cheap, common little mill girl. And she thinks she can take Brian Westmore away from me, does she? Well, she can't! I'll show her—I'll show her what I can do—"

There was a dressing table made of mirror glass and shimmering wine-colored taffeta between two windows at the front of the room. On it were bottles and jars of crystal. Vicky strode to the dressing table, snatched up a crystal jar and hurled it to the floor.

"I'll show Miss Gale Henderson!" she snarled.

Suddenly she stood quite still. A crafty look came into the dark eyes. Vicky stared at the place on the floor where the shattered pieces of crystal lay, nodded her head slowly. "That's it," she said to the silent room. "That will do it. It's the very thing!"

She sank into a chair and smiled—a dangerous smile, cunning, triumphant.

Valentine Tea

The home of Mrs. J. M. Perkins glowed with beauty in the carrying out the valentine motif, and colonial flare, of the distinctive valentine tea, hosted by the Gadabout club with Miss Betty Perkins as house hostess, assisted by her mother Mrs. Perkins.

Receiving at the door was Miss Mary Frances Hunter and in line, with the president, Miss Jo Earl Utz, were Misses Betty Perkins, and Mrs. Perkins.

A charming pastel book for registration was presided over by Miss Kathleen Cottingham; callers were escorted to the guest rooms by Misses Joan Johnson and Margaret Fry.

A substrain of music obtained throughout the calling hours with Miss Clara June Kimble, in duet with either Miss Jennie Tolbert or Miss Jo Earl Utz, with intervening musical numbers by Miss Louise Chance.

In the tea room, the tea table was presided over by Miss Carolyn Bous and assisting in the tea room were Misses Bessie Kate Wood and Carolyn Cox.

The tea table laid in a chumy lace heart shaped cloth, was arranged in a valentine pattern; Peruvian grass and tulle bows fastened with ivory lace ribbons, outlined the lower edge of the lace ruffles of cloth.

Colored figurines filled with delicate clusters of flowers and a Dresden china tea service, with crystal and silver compotes formed a charming effect. The tea plate of chocolate iced squares, heart cakes, valentine shaped assorted sandwiches with pink spread; nuts, candy hearts, and tea, all formed a colorful arrangement.

Guest favors were colonial bouquets, lace encircled, charmingly arrayed on a table under valentine sweethearts, an appliqued background.

The club favors presented the girls by the hostess were tiny creases of Peruvian grass and baby breath.

The affair honored the mother of the Gadabout club, their special guests, the Sub-Deb club, and their mothers.

Other callers were teachers and a few close friends. Those attending, Misses Jo Earl Utz; Carolyn Cox, vice president; Carolyn Doss, secretary; Lewal Chance, treasurer; Misses Joan Johnson, Clara June Kimble, Margaret Fry, Kathleen Cottingham, Mary Frances Hunter, Jennie Tolbert, Bessie Kate Wood, Betty Perkins. Charles Leslie Has Thirteenth Birthday

One of the charming mid-week events, the dinner given by Judge and Mrs. W. P. Leslie, honoring the thirteenth birthday of their son, Charles Robert, was a double pleasure for the party, Ernest H. Jones Jr., Joyce Kelly, Robert Childress, Charles Robert Leslie, and Judge and Mrs. Leslie.

The dinner at 6:30 p. m., was preceded by games, and all were ready for the "birthday."

The table was centered with a big reflector, on which stood a large white iced birthday cake, topped with 13 tapers in rose holders.

Four tall white tapers in silver sticks, encircled the reflector.

The menu of roast lamb, candied yams, peas, molded pineapple and vegetable salad, had last course of a delicious cream frappe, served with the birthday cake, and Sanka.

After the dinner the entire party attended a local theatre.

Bridge Lodge
Mrs. Horton Hostess

Mrs. James Horton hosted a bridge luncheon at her home Friday, served at 1 o'clock with George Washington place and tally cards combined, indicating guest places at one large table, and a smaller one, laid in network maids, and centered with handsome bouquets of red carnations.

A patriotic motif in red, white and blue was carried out in the menu, and the service of blue porcelain, or white, as the course necessitated.

After the two-course luncheon, contract high score favors were awarded Mrs. Herbert Tanner, and Mrs. Ben Hamner, second high, each receiving a deck of cards, and one, a framed silhouette of Martha Washington, and the other, one of George Washington.

Favors were cherry boutonnières. Guests were Mrs. D. L. Kinnard, V. T. Seaberry, F. M. Kenny, Albert Taylor, Julius B. Krause, Herbert Tanner, Carl Hill, O. E. Harvey, Ben Hamner and E. Roy Townsend.

This happened to fall a gap in the proposed program on health, led by Mrs. W. B. Pickens, as those assigned topics for discussion were unable to attend.

The session opened with Mrs. F. M. Kenny, their president, in charge. Mrs. J. M. Perkins was called upon for description of the furnishings and arrangements of the permanent club home in Austin, and an account of her recent visit to Louisiana, the state of Huey Long warfare, existing even to having men sit in the doors of the cafes, with machine guns on their hips.

The report of the board meeting held in Austin was given.

Mrs. W. A. Martin presented a review of Dr. Wolf's "A Woman's Best Years," a physiological treatise now engrossing public attention.

A round table discussion on eugenics closed the program period. During the business the resignation of Mrs. I. N. Griffin was regretfully accepted and her appointment as historian was transferred to Mrs. Carl Hill.

Mrs. F. V. Williams was greeted with applause, as she signed the historians book, thus becoming a member of the club.

Little Boy and Girl Party

Several young people enjoyed a "children's party" Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. J. LeRoy Arnold, hosted by their daughter, Miss Barbara Ann, and Miss Wanza Thomas.

Pinafores, pictails, curls with big bows in hair, half socks, Mary Ann shoes.

The "children" played marbles, hop scotch, winkum, clap in and clap out, lining up with the blindfold game, when one had to pin a valentine heart on the right spot on outlined figure of a woman's body, attached to the wall.

The winner of this feat, Miss Edith Wood, presented a dancing clown. Every boy was given a red paper hat, and the din was increased by favors of balloon whistles.

A genuine old-fashioned candy taffy pull in the kitchen, and the added feast of red popcorn balls, fortified the group for their adjournment to the Cisco Country club dance.

Guests were Misses Marguerite Quinn, Ruth Hearn, Mairied Hale, Edith Wood, Shirley Ferrell, Frances Owen, Maurine Robinson, Ella Mae Taylor, Annabell Lohusch, Wanza Thomas, Laura Wilson of Cisco, Barbara Ann Arnold; Conrad Reeves, James Pipkin, Fred Scott, Carl Garrett, Walker Germany, Joe Simmons, Bobby Robinson, Odell Grubbs, Nick Crawford, and Willard Vaughn of Ranger, and his guest, Vernon Allen of Kentucky.

Movies of Mission Fields
Shown

Rev. L. R. Hogan of Fort Worth, who will fill the pulpit at the Presbyterian church at this morning's service, showed a moving picture Friday night at the church, of the mission work in the Indian fields, the mode of teaching them and their manner of life.

Dr. Hogan was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Sone during his Eastland stay.

Mrs. Earl Throne Hostess

An enjoyable afternoon was spent by the Sew Sew Sewing club Thursday with Mrs. Earl Throne at States Oil camp.

The refreshing drive to the home of the hostess was a part of the pleasure of the visit, that brought needlework, and knitting, and making of pretty garments.

At 5 o'clock the hostess served a dainty tea plate in pink and white motif, carrying out the valentine design in heart shape, of pink and white sandwiches, pimento cheese sandwiches, vegetable salad on lettuce with olive topping, coffee and small cakes.

Pretty valentines were plate favors for Mrs. L. M. Cawley, G. G. Lanier, O. M. Hunt, R. S. Harris Jr., Raymond Webb, and L. Horn.

Guests were Mrs. Lee Bishop and Joe Morgan.

COLLEGE DAYS RECALLED IN ENGAGING LOEW PICTURE
"The Band Plays On," opening today at the Lyric Theatre, is strictly a collegiate story. It is the story of the college, its trials and tribulations, its romantic interludes, its lighter moods and its spirit of youth.

It is enriched by a well-balanced and a well-known cast of young players who, individually, have always been known for their fine performances. Now, for the first time, they are brought together in one highly entertaining picture.

At the top of the cast stands Robert Young, in a character—as Tony Ferrera—with which he is thoroughly acquainted and which he handles with the assurance of a veteran performer who has advanced gloriously from his first important role with Helen Hayes in "The Sin of Madeleine Claudet" to the romantic lead in George Arliss' recent picture, "The House of Rothschild."

Betty Furness supplies the other half of the college romance. Although Miss Furness, one of the most promising of the younger actresses, has been seen in other pictures, her role as Kitty in "The Band Plays On" is her first leading part since joining the big Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer family.

Leo Carillo, remembered for his excellent work in "Viva Villa!" again gives his delightful accent as the comedy campus tailor, the bosom pal of the college boys and girls.

Stuart Erwin appears as one of the "Four Bombers," the sensational football backfield, and shares honors with Carillo in adding the lighter touches to the entertaining plot.

As for Ted Healy, now bereft of his stogees, he steps forth in a new and different characterization, as the "heavy" who tries to bribe the football stars into the "pro" team racket.

"The Band Plays On" also brings two new youthful personalities to the screen—graduates of M-G-M's laboratory school of dramatic training.

One is William Tannen, six-foot son of Julius Tannen, of stage fame, and who makes his screen debut as another football star in the campus picture.

The other is Robert Livingston, who tried his luck as a newspaper man before he accepted the screen as a career. Both proved their mettle in stage productions presented in Hollywood by casts composed of M-G-M junior players and as their reward Livingston and Tannen were given their first major screen roles in the collegiate picture.

Russell Mack was the director. A first-rate showman of the school that demands rapid-fire entertainment, Mack is remembered as the director of those two other college football pictures—"The Spirit of Notre Dame" and "All American."

Eastland Personals
