

Appraiser Answers Local Tax Questions

Exemptions, Penalty, Interest Discussed

The Bailey County Appraisal District Board of Directors is made up of members from each taxing entity in the district. In this case being: Jack Lane, representing Three Way Independent School District, Paul Wilbanks, representing the City of Muleshoe, Jim Shafer and Ronnie Holt representing the Muleshoe Independent School District and R. L. Scott, representing Bailey County.

Dale F. Jones is the Chief Appraiser for this district, and recently, he attended meetings in Austin which were designed to help him and other chief appraisers interpret the state taxing laws, review and have explained to them, items of great import to the citizens of this district.

To promote John Q. Citizen's better understanding of some of these tax laws, this Journal reporter took the opportunity to avail herself of the information offered and will share it with the readers in this and other upcoming articles.

Of prime concern to every taxpayer in this district is the new penalty and interest rates enacted on all taxes.

"Gone are the days of the one and one-half percent penalties and interest," said Chief Appraiser Jones. "That taxpayer who forgets to pay his taxes in January will have a sharp reminder in February, since the new penalty and interest rate, if paid in February will add seven percent onto actual taxes." Jones also was anxious that taxpayers should know that this is a state law and penalty; and not done by any local entity.

"It is of utmost importance that the taxpayers of this (or any other) district be informed about these new penalty and interest rates," said Jones.

"Whereas, a taxpayer who was only faced with a two percent penalty and interest in March last year, will now see a nine percent penalty and interest charge in March this year." The rates for these penalties and interest continue to escalate by two per cent each month until July, when the rate jumps to 18 percent and will continue to climb if these taxes are not paid. Last year's taxing penalties and interest in July was 11 percent; so, the timely payment of assessed taxes becomes even more important money-wise, to the taxpayer.

Another item of great importance to the farmers and ranchers is that of the 1982 exemption on farm and ranch implements. Chief Appraiser Jones says that until such time as a final ruling is issued by the state attorney general, a one hundred percent exemption will be applied to farm and ranch implements if-and therein lies the key word--the farmer or rancher in question, signs the application for exemption form. Then, and only then, will be become eligible for this tax exemption. Partnerships and corporations are excluded from this exemption by law.

In answer to questions regarding the definition of which property is eligible for this exemption, Jones replied, "Implements are Cont. Page 6, Col. 3

Local Ag Movement Schedules Meeting

According to local reports brought back from the American Agriculture Movement's National Convention recently in Saint Louis, Missouri, new ideas have been derived to raise the net farm income.

United States Department of Agriculture figures show that the 1980 net farm income was $19.9 billion; the 1981 forecasted net income is $22 billion. However, the 1982 forecast net farm income is dropped back some $7.5 billion to the figure of $14.5 billion.

In order to find out what farmers may do to combat this serious decline, the local American Agriculture Movement is urging all businessmen, bankers, farmers and other interested citizens to attend a local meeting to be held on January 26, Tuesday, at 7 p.m. in the Muleshoe High School cafeteria.

Wayne Cryts, a fellow AAM member from Missouri, will be on hand to discuss the 25% set-aside program and the function of the political action committee. Both of these items were endorsed for support at the National Convention.

Ted Godfrey, Texas delegate to the National AAM will be present to discuss the new marketing actions that the American Agriculture Movement is planning to take.

As an agricultural community, all of these issues are of vital importance to local economy and the entire county is urged to participate in this meeting.

Toss out that bottle of red ink! At least one economist sees optimism and black ink for cattle producers this fall. The livestock marketing specialist from Kansas State University, notes the grim figure of a $65 per head shortfall from production cost return over the past 27 months. However, he believes that situation is going to change. He notes larger feed grain and protein supplement supplies during the coming year. These lower feed costs, he says, along with anticipated declines in interest rates, will push an estimated breakeven price for the fall quarter in the $64 to $66 cwt. area, as opposed to $67 cwt. during July to September. His analysis also included indications of cyclically declining pork production and a stronger economy which should help strengthen the beef industry.

Muleshoe 4-H Club Keeps Busy

During the month of December Zanna Huckaby, Kristi Taylor, Shelley Sain, Britta O'Tay, Tina Pierce and Mandy Plank represented their club and county in the district food show in Lubbock.

Also, at the December meeting, several members presented the Christmas story in a play. This was meaningful for all 4-H'ers.

As the new year approached, 4-H'ers made preparations to enter the Bailey County Livestock Show. Muleshoe Club

A spokesman for the group said "If anyone is interested in 4-H they may call 272-4583 and get involved in any number of worthwhile projects."

The Prathers attend the First Baptist Church in Vinita and presently live on Route One, Vinita.

 Manager duties. During this time, he was directly responsible for organizing two highly successful "Open House" projects attracting 50,000 people each. Freeman received commendations from the Air Force Thunderbirds, the Navy Blue Angels, American Cancer Society, the State of South Carolina and other civic and military authorities for his organization and leadership abilities.

His last assignment brought him to Cannon Air Force Base (Clovis, N.M.) where he flew the F-111D for several years and again he was selected to work on a general's staff. Freeman completed his final two years as Chief of Airfield Management and supervised all runway and road construction on the airfield.

A native of New Hampshire, Freeman decided to retire in Muleshoe. He moved here after retiring in 1976 and married the former Evette LaParche of Duncan, Oklahoma. Mrs. Freeman is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and was also involved in the Viet Nam war as a flight nurse, participated in the "Baby Lift" out of Saigon and in the Battle of Kontain Island where she helped evacuate wounded marines. He also has three daughters, one attending Texas Tech as a freshman, one at home, and the youngest in South Carolina.

Freeman's training and experience as a manager and leader make him amply qualified to fill the post of county judge. He says, "I believe it's time to revitalize the county with fresh new ideas, modern management and budgeting practices and get more of our younger citizens interested in county government. There is too much apathy among our young people and they need to become involved. After all, it will only be a few years and the responsibility will fall on their shoulders. I will do my best to see that they inherit a growing, progressive and solvent county."

"I was raised to give my best in everything I did. I've lived that way and it's basic to how I'll continue to work and live."

Bailey County has had a Veterans Service Officer continually since World War II. And it has rendered a valuable service to the veterans of the county.

At the time Mrs. Turner was appointed County Treasurer, she volunteered to also serve as Veterans Service Officer, but she does not draw any additional salary.

It is necessary for a Service Officer to attend certain training seminars, so as to better understand the available benefits, procedures, and laws. For that reason, Mrs. Turner will attend the seminar in Austin and will of necessity be out of her office the week of January 25. Upon her return she will be happy to assist the veterans, what-defined as any article used in the production of that planted and harvested crop; or in the maintenance of grassland, or livestock. Livestock is 100 percent exempt under this law and no application is necessary. These applications may be filled out and the exemption applied for any time between January 1, 1982 and May 1, 1982. "In other words," Jones said, "a plow, a tractor, a stock trailer, a grain trailer-- yes these would be exempt. A farm truck or pickup, no. A farm truck is a self-propelled vehicle and not made expressly for the planting or harvesting of that crop."

These applications for exemption are to be filed annually with the appraisal district.

Since the attorney general has not yet endorsed the final percentage of exemption, the appraisal district board members elected to use the 100 percent exemption. If, and when, that figure is changed, if it is changed prior to the issuance of tax rolls, the district will adjust their figure to coincide with the state law.

"We urge the taxpayers of the district to visit us and discuss any problems they might have. We have an open door policy and will be here to serve the people of this district," Jones said.

In the next article scheduled, Dale Jones, Chief Appraiser for Bailey District, will elaborate on such things as the homestead exemption tax exemption and agricultural land exemptions.

He has been active in Boy Scouts in the past, especially with the Webster group and was a senior member of the Texas Tech Judo Club, engaging in interscholastic competition. He is a licensed scuba diver and has held national and international ranking as a rifle shooter. He has been active in Kennel Club activities and enjoys working with animals. He likes exploring in the mountains and enjoys hunting, fishing and tracking in the wilderness.

Dee says he is running for this position because he feels that the community's best interests would be served by a person who has lived and worked in the community and knows the needs and desires of the citizens of this county in the area of law enforcement.

Free Enterprise/Career Day Deemed A Big Success

The Free Enterprise and Career Day held at Muleshoe High School January 19 was considered highly successful by those attending. This special day was sponsored by the Marketing and Distributive Education and the Free Enterprise Departments under the direction of Jean Allison and Lola Pylant. The Free Enterprise Appreciation section was held from 8:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. in the auditorium, with career presentations being held throughout the day in individual classrooms.

Seniors from Muleshoe High and Sudan High, as well as interested townspeople attended the events, joining in with underclassmen in the afternoon for the career day presentations.

The Free Enterprise program began with the Pledge of Allegiance and a prayer led by Jan Whitt. Lupe Rosales then gave a welcome to those in attendance. Sherri Ellard then introduced Mr. Dan Law, president and co-owner of Fields and Company of Amarillo and Lubbock. Law described our free enterprise system and explained what it took to be successful in the business world, giving some examples of opportunities and challenges in the free enterprise system.

Dick Laird, executive director of students in Free Enterprise at Lubbock Christian College, was introduced by Trini Lopez. Laird enlightened the audience concerning the international situation by using foreign jokes. He then introduced a group of students from L.C.C. who presented a puppet show entitled "The Little Red Hen" which illustrated how free enterprise works. Each student gave a short presentation about some phase of our economic system, such as competition, minimum wages, government regulations, etc.

Jan Whitt introduced M. D. (Brue) Harvey of San Antonio, who spoke to the group in the absence of Dr.

C. L. Kay, who was stranded in Oklahoma by an ice storm. Harvey has developed a free enterprise course for elementary students which is now used in a number of schools. He explained the importance of the free enterprise system to our country and challenged all to appreciate what this system has done for our country.

Students were then divided into groups for a short discussion concerning questions to be asked of the panel of guests. The panel discussion was moderated by Wayne Precure, and proved to be a lively session, with thoughtful questions being asked of the panel.

Career Day presentations with outstanding representatives from various business areas were given one hour sessions during the day in individual classrooms. Each presenter described how he got into his particular field of endeavor the qualifications necessary and/or disadvantages of the occupation. The students gained first hand information on various careers.

More News From Norway

Because so much interest was shown and so many people have commented on enjoying the letter written from Muleshoe's Rotary Exchange student to Norway, Stacey Campbell, the Mule's Tale editor Jan Whitt and the staff are sharing this letter also:

Well, I've been here for five months now. Life is proceeding normally -- I almost feel like I've been here all my life. I just spent a fantastic Christmas here, one that I will never forget. I'll tell a little about it and then I'll tell about some interesting differences in the Norwegian culture to sum up my article.

We celebrated Christmas on the 23rd and 24th of December, but a lot of preparation was done beforehand, of course. In the weeks before Christmas, we made seven different types of cookies, a cake house, and gingerbread hearts to hand up all over the house. My Norwegian mother spent hours making Christmas ornaments -- all from handmade ornaments and greenery from the garden. She also wrapped tons of packages with paper that had been on last year's gifts. She's a little unique in that she saves nearly every inch of wrapping paper, so when we open our gifts, we have to do it carefully with scissors.

We didn't put up the tree until the 23rd of December, or "Little Christmas Eve" as Norwegians call it. It was a little on the scraggly side so "Far" (my father) glued or tied some more branches to it. My brothers and Far put on the strand of lights, which were white instead of colored. (Norwegians never decorate with colored light as they think it is artificial looking.) Then the rest of the family put the ornaments on, which consisted of felt hearts, stars made from straw and other handmade gadgets. We also hung many colorful birds on the tree and a big star on the top.

One special custom Norwegians have is to make a big pot of porridge and put an almond in it. Whoever ends up with the almond receives a marsipan pig, which is special Norwegian Christmas candy. My brother had it, but he slipped it to me under the table, so I ended up with it!

Everyone eats a lot around Christmas, even more than Americans -- in my opinion. For example, we have a three course meal where everyone has second helpings, followed by coffee and cake, and then wine and fruit. Many families have a 'juleboard' which is a smorgasbord type meal where a table is heaped with all sorts of food.

The main celebration was on Christmas Eve. First we visited two graveyards and placed candles and greenery on the graves of loved ones. Then we went to a Christmas Eve service in a 700 year old church. It was so beautiful the walls were covered with old paintings and the pews were closed at the end with little gates. Before the service we listened to an amateur band play Norwegian Christmas carols. The usual prayers were said, the Christmas story was read, and then the preacher gave a sermon that was directed mostly to the children of the congregation.

After coming home and eating a turkey dinner, we joined hands and sang Christmas carols around the tree. I sang one English song, "Silent Night" and hummed along with all the rest.

The next thing to take place was a visit by the 'julenissen,' or Santa Claus. I was a little surprised, though, because he was wearing a cowboy hat and cowboy boots. He said he had just come from Texas and he was complaining because it had been so hot.

After he left we spent five hours opening gifts. Each gift was opened one at a time, so everyone could see what the other one received. I received tons of presents because every member in my Norwegian Rotary Club gave me something, plus I received gifts from my family and friends here and in the U. S. I received a number of special Norwegian articles and a lot of warm clothing. The whole evening was simply wonderful, and I shall never forget it.

Being an exchange student is a fantastic experience. I'm being exposed to such an interesting life-style and I learn new things every day. I've been through a number of stages, from excitement and awe to listlessness and depression. But now I'm settled in. I will share some of my observations with all of you.

I'll start with the weather. Since half of Norway lies above the Arctic Circle, one must assume that it gets pretty cold. The temperature stays anywhere from -20° to 20° F. The cold is nice and fresh, so I don't mind it. Plus Norway doesn't have that biting West Texas wind.

We've had snow since the first of November and all the trees are laced with white. We also have very short days. On December the 21st the sun rose about 9:15 and set about 3:00.

The main sports in Norway are skiing and football. Of course many other sports exist like orienteering, sailing, basketball, ice-skating, volleyball, etc. and the Norwegians are extremely competitive.

There is no baseball or American football played here, and absolutely no professional sports.

Most of the food is similar to America's, but there are a few differences. For breakfast we usually eat bread with cheese, jam, salami, or some kind of spread. We eat lots of cheese, especially "gjettost," which is goat cheese. For lunch we eat basically the same thing. We always eat our sandwiches open, never closed as Americans. For dinner we eat lots of fish and sausage. We have boiled potatoes with every meal and rarely eat green vegetables. When we do have vegetables, they are fresh or frozen, never canned. I've tried many new types of food, from cow tongues and whipped raw eggs to sour cream porridge and blood pudding. The meals are nearly always three courses -- the entree, the salad and the dessert. We never eat on paper plates or with paper napkins. Everybody has their own cloth napkin and napkin holder. Norwegians also set the table with the spoon above the plate instead of to the right of the knife. In addition we hardly ever eat out. I guess I've eaten dinner at a restaurant twice with the family since I've been here.

We have one T.V. station and one radio station in Norway, but we can get two T.V. channels from Sweden if we have cable, plus a number of radio stations from all over Europe. You can't turn on the radio and listen to a variety of music, though, as you can in America. Norway's television programs are mostly educational, but one or two entertainment programs are on late in the evening. Besides offering Norwegian programs, they offer shows from the U. S., England, France, Germany Czechoslovakia, Turkey, and other countries as well. All have Norwegian sub-titles. It's interesting to see all the different cultures.

The cars here are all very small, and so are the roads. Big American cars have a hard time making it around all of the sharp little turns. Cars aren't an absolute necessity here, though, because Norway has a fantastic mass transportation system. I thought I would really suffer not being able to drive, but hardly any of my friends do. Norwegians can't get a driver's license until they are 18 years old, and when they do, the driver's education is very expensive. The main source of transportation is our feet. If something is extremely far we take a train, bus, or taxi. The taxis are very clean and new looking, and all are Mercedes. The buses are also very clean and well cared for. In fact, Norwegians take very good care of their automobiles; I hardly ever see an old rusty car. They all look brand new, but that is probably because I'm not familiar with the older European car models. One reason the cars are so well cared for is because they are very expensive. A car in Norway is from two to four times higher than a car in the U. S. Gas is just a little more expensive here, but the difference is that over half of the money paid for gas goes to the government. All the taxes are very high in Norway because it has socialist government. I guess some of the wealthier pay up to 80% of their income to the government, if not more.

One of the signs of socialism in this country is the lack of poverty. I have not seen any slums since I have been here. On the other hand no one is extremely wealthy either. Everyone has about the same standard of living, which is fairly high because Norway has lots of money from their oil in the North Sea. Most families have a vacation cottage or a sailboat. The family I live with has a summer cottage, a winter cottage and a sailboat. Norwegians really know how to have a good time and enjoy life.

Houses in Norway are basically all the same. They don't have the variety of homes that people in the U. S. have. Their homes are made of wood and are usually two-storied. They usually have carpet only in the bedrooms, but huge handmade rugs lay in their sitting rooms. The bedrooms are small in comparison with the average American bedroom because they're only used for sleeping or activities such as reading or studying. My room is probably 9 x 7 feet. The bathrooms are a little different; they often have the toilet in one room and the shower in another. The commodes here even flush different, you pull a little knob on the top.

Shops here are much the same as in America. Most, including grocery stores, are full of American products with Norwegian instructions. The people here don't have the convenience of a sacker--they have to sack their groceries themselves. Norway is full of little kiosks which are stands that sell magazines and candy.

The music here is nearly all English. Teenagers here listen to the same music as American teenagers. Most of the movies here are also American, with Norwegian subtitles. The only difference here is that movies come out much later over here. I'm still waiting to see "Endless Love."

People in Norway dress much the same as Americans, but of course, I wear about three times as much clothing. The girls are more natural here; only half of them wear make-up (which is very little) and very few roll their hair. People aren't so preoccupied with appearances. They wear their clothing as long as possible before washing them. I was a little surprised when a teacher wore the same thing to school every day for the first week of school. But now I'm used to it.

Norway has a lot of farms, but because of the mountainous countryside, they are very small. The tractors and other equipments are much smaller also. Another strange thing is that the farmers pray that it won't rain instead of that it will. They had a lot of problems with the harvest this year because the rain flattened the grain stalks.

Politics are very important to Norwegians, and a major topic of discussion among teenagers. Most are either to the far right or the far left. I'm constantly defending the United States and President Reagan. I also read news magazines and an English section of the newspaper to keep up with all the news. I feel like an absolute fool if I don't.

Norway has a state church, which is Lutheran. As a result, religion itself is an obligatory subject in school. Religion doesn't play a major role in a Norwegian's life, though. I would guess 5% of them attend church regularly, and the majority of the rest attend a service on Christmas Eve. I have never met so many atheists in my life. People tend to ridicule the religious ones.

The social gatherings are mostly private parties because it is so expensive to go out. They don't have a dating system as America does; kids tend to go out in groups with each paying his own way. Kids also bring their own liquor or soft drinks to parties. Often they bring money to cover food costs if it is a large dinner party. Norwegians have a lot of formal gatherings also as they live to dress up and bring out their guest things. At parties we usually talk, eat and dance. They are lots of fun.

Norway has lots of interesting customs, but two that are especially interesting are the sayings -- "Skal" and "Tak for maten." "Skal" is special though because Norwegians constantly use it and have a special manner of saying it. "Tak for maten" means "Thanks for the food." Norwegians say that after every meal and the statement is directed to the host or cook.

I am very lucky in that I live only thirty minutes drive from Oslo, Norway's capital. Oslo is a very interesting city with an enormous amount of culture. It is over 1000 years old and has a population of nearly 500,000. Norway's king lives there in a huge castle. Oslo also contains the Norwegian parliament and many fine museums and parks.

I've had lots of humorous experiences here like taking freezing morning baths in a lake by the cottage and walking in the boys dressing room at school. I've also learned how to knit, kayak and windsurf. I've learned how to ski better and how to speak another language. In addition, I've learned how to be patient and live in a completely different environment. I know as a result of my experience that all people are basically the same; they have the same goals in life, but each person has their own way of getting there.

My stay over here hasn't been one big vacation, though, as some may believe. It's been tough at times trying to adjust and always straining to understand and speak the language. But I've survived and I've gained a lot of knowledge and self-confidence. My mind has broadened tremendously. Throughout it all, I'm convinced that being an exchange student is one of the most rewarding opportunities a young person can have.

ATTEND THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

For Whom Toll The Bells?

The bells of the church steeple are an ancient part of Christian practice, but for whom do they ring? Is the worship of the church just for those who are members? Is it for only one segment of society or only one class? No, that can never be. So when you hear the bells ringing never wonder for whom they ring; they ring for you and for every person on this earth, calling us to worship the one true God who is Lord of all. The bells call all persons to come to the Lord that they may drink from the water of life which He alone gives and which, if a man drink, he will never thirst for salvation, for verily, his is the Kingdom of Heaven.

The bells of the church ring an invitation to you, "come, let us worship and bow down before the Lord our God."

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency to this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without will long progress and the freedom which we build so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it is with the truth alone that life, death and glory; the truth which alone will set his free to live as a child of God.
