opportunities that four lucky Texas persons are going to be sent with all the glamour and excitement of full and complete screen tests by regular Metro-Goldwynis going to have an inning. And so are seventy four other "unknowns" from other Texas cities, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is making a veritable hunting ground of the whole state of Texas in an intensified search for new talent. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is sending its crack test crew of cameramen, technicians and makeup artists into Texas to make these tests under the expert direction of C. Edward Carrier, MGM test director who will make the tests and from the seventy five persons of whom he makes his voice and screen tests, will select four to be sent to Hollywood with all expenses paid.

Remember, this is not a beauty contest or a prize contest of any sort. It is a legitimate search for talent. If it were not the Telegram and Chronicle would not lend its pages to the enterprise.

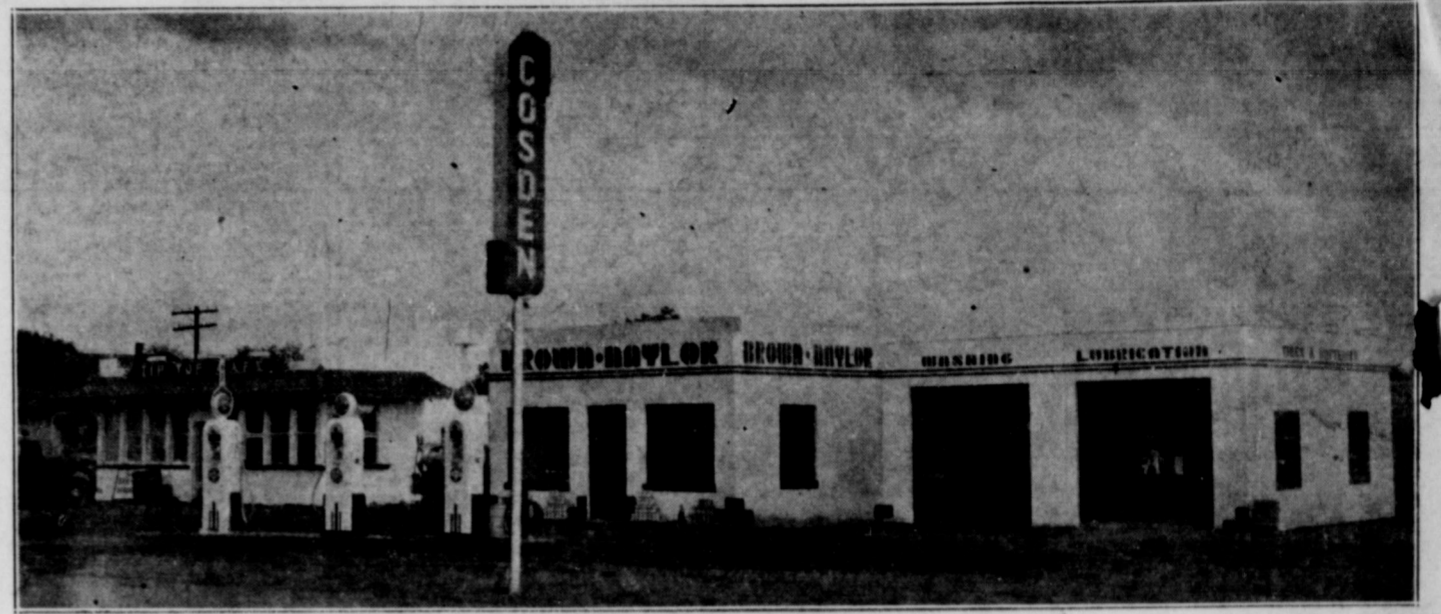

There is no red tape to go through. Merely clip and fill out the coupon appearing in this paper and mail it, pasted to the back of a recent photograph and send to the MGM Search for Talent editor of the Telegram and Chronicle. It will be only through such organized handling of applicants that proper selections can be made for the additions which will take place on the stage of the Connellee theatre Oct. 6 and 7.

Mayer test crews, with all expenses paid. More . . . seventy one more . . . all Texans, are going to be given complete screen tests right here in Texas.

All this will happen through the backing of the great Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, world's greatest motion picture producing company, which company in association with the Eastland Telegram and Weekly Chronicle and the Connellee theatre offers persons in the circulation area of the Telegram and Chronicle the golden opportunity to win one of these glowing prizes. Countless thousands have gone to Hollywood, only to meet with disappointment and more often than not, out and out hardship. Hollywood is generally pretty cruel to "unknowns." But in Eastland the "unknown"

Klan Case Discloses Lax Political Morals

Perhaps the most discouraging thing about the case of Justice Hugo Black and the Ku Klux Klan is its revelation of the defective standard of public morality current among politicians.

A senator of considerable service and distinction, Mr. Black is nominated to the Supreme Court and duly confirmed. Then comes the charge that he was, and still is, a qualified member of the Klan. Immediately a whole host of brother politicians come forward to give testimony on the case, pro and con; and in all of their talk you can notice one peculiar thing.

They joined the Klan, many of these men, not because they believed in it or felt that its policies and ideals were sound, but simply because it looked like the politic thing to do; and they assume that Mr. Black joined it, if he did join it, for the same reason.

That is to say that according to the prevailing code in politics, a candidate for office may join any group under the sun and subscribe to the most fantastic of creeds without actually committing himself to anything, if he has reason to believe that a fairly substantial block of his constituents are interested. It is taken for granted that he will do such things with his fingers crossed; that his "oath of allegiance," if he gives it to a fraternity, club or political group, means nothing more than a vague gesture of good will.

It is precisely this widespread acceptance of a lax, easy-going way of dealing with things which ought to be matters of definite conviction that is so discouraging.

Now the Klan, in the days when it had its health, advocated a most rigid and uncompromising set of principles. No man could be neutral about it. You either believed in the things the Klan advocated or you actively disbelieved in them. If you were a man of honor—as non-politicians understand the word—you could not conceivably pretend to believe in them when you actually did not believe.

All of which makes some of these politicians' remarks about the Black case almost incredible. Why, they say if Black joined the Klan, he did it just because everybody was doing it; he didn't believe in the Klan's program—in fact, he was a good friend to the Catholics and Jews in his state. We all joined the Klan in those days, and it didn't mean a thing.

Which is where they are wrong. It did mean something. It meant that in the world of politics we have developed a moral code which would shame a Botany Bay exile; that the men who make a profession of seeking and holding public office have built up an atmosphere in which the very nature of truth and simple decency get lost to view.

That such an atmosphere exists is even more disheartening than the prospect that we may get a Supreme Court justice who holds a passport in the Invisible Empire.

Builders Given Higher Values In Home Construction

CHICAGO. — Home building costs today are reasonable and the residential builder is giving high value for the building dollar, declares Bernard L. Johnson, editor of the American Builder. He points out that the time to build a home is on a rising market when rents are advancing, employment increasing, real estate activity on the upturn—all of which conditions are now present.

"Do not be misled by false and sometimes vicious propaganda on building costs," he declares. "Today's home is more than the sum total of the raw materials used. The home buyer is and should be concerned with the complete unit for livability, comfort, security and style, and not with the board foot price of lumber or the cost of a sack of cement."

W. M. U.'s contribution to the annual church letter was read. Those present included: Mrs. P. L. Parker, Mrs. W. S. Poe, Mrs. Frank Lovett, Mrs. E. E. Layton, Mrs. Overton, Mrs. L. J. Lambert, Mrs. Elmo Cook, Mrs. Spurgeon Hood, Mrs. Roy Pentecost, Mrs. C. H. O'Brien, Mrs. W. S. Adamson, Mrs. R. A. Lerner.

Mother-Teacher Club Annual Election Officers:

The Mother-Teacher club of Eastland High school held their annual election of officers, at their Wednesday afternoon session in the school auditorium. Mrs. Beula B. Connellee, retiring president, conducted the meeting.

Officers elected to serve 1937-1938 presented, Mrs. N. N. Rosenquest, president; Mrs. Frank Crowell, 1st vice president; Mrs. L. C. Brown, 2nd vice president; Mrs. J. Frank Sparks, 3rd vice president; Mrs. George Cross, secretary; Mrs. Dixie Williamson, treasurer.

raw materials, the efficient builder of today is delivering a better home for less money because his operating methods and his construction materials have been greatly improved.

"Of course, the raw materials of home building have risen from the panic lows of the depression," he declared, "but so has practically everything else. Houses, like stocks and most commodities, a few years ago were dirt cheap but practically no one bought them then. It is not fair to contrast today's costs with those of 1932. We believe the 1926-29 era is more typical, and by that standard the home of today is indeed a good value."

Quoting facts from a nationwide survey of building costs and values made by American Builder for its October issue devoted to this subject, Johnson points out the far-reaching improvements in the 1937 homes over those of the 1926-29 era. Although the home of 1937 has such new developments as air conditioning, insulation, streamlined bathrooms, semi-modern kitchens, copper and brass pipe, lifetime construction the total cost in most communities is 25 to 40 per cent less than it was in the 1926-29 era.

Analyzing the whole picture of building costs and values, Editor Johnson lists ten favorable factors that enable builders to produce a better home today at less cost than in 1926-29, as follows:

1. Lower financing costs under a single long-term mortgage in place of the old short term first second and land contract system.
2. Building sites priced for use not for speculation.
3. Construction costs cut thru increased use of factory-produced units of materials and equipment.
4. Labor costs cut through increased operating efficiency due to modern tools and power equipment.
5. Lower costs from use of simplified house designs, planned for stock sizes of materials and parts and elimination of useless ornament.
6. Economies arising from present vogue for smaller, more compact houses with multiple use of space for sleeping, dining and "living."
7. Savings in fuel costs from use of insulation and other present high standards of construction.
8. Savings in upkeep and maintenance costs from better design and use of proper long life materials.
9. Lower sales costs on houses built by operative builders, and smaller profit margin by contractors.
10. Lower tax costs through "out to the suburbs" and "into the

CAST OF CHARACTERS
PRISCILLA PIERCE—heroine, young woman in apartment.
AMY KERR—Cilly's roommate and murderer's victim.
MR. KERRIGAN—Cilly's father.
HARRY HUTCHINS—Amy's strong suspect.
SERGEANT DOLAN—officer assigned to solve the murder of Amy Kerr.

Yesterday, Mrs. Wheeler, the landlady in Apartment 4-B, told Cilly that she had found the murderer's fingerprints on the ink blotter in the apartment.

CHAPTER XV
CONTRARY to Cilly's expectations, the funeral services for Amy Kerr were well attended. She had asked that they be held in the smallest parlor, and now the room was almost crowded.

Harry Hutchins was there, of course, and Harvey Ames. With Mr. Ames was his partner, Mr. Wakefield, and four others whom Cilly recognized as employees in the realty office. Obviously they held Amy in high regard, despite her short association with them.

Immediately following the service Cilly noticed that the steps of the funeral home were lined with photographers. For the first time she realized that the newspapers were playing the case. The murder of a young girl was always meat to the public interest. Thus for the reporters had secured very valuable information, either from Cilly or the police. There was, after all, little to tell of Amy, and there were no photographs.

Tomorrow's papers would probably strike a new theme. "Is the Murderer Among These Who Mourn Amy Kerr?" they might inquire, with innumerable question marks. There would be these pictures of the small group leaving the funeral parlors, with appropriate arrows to indicate Miss Priscilla Pierce, who shared the apartment with the victim. . . . Mr. Harvey Ames, employer of Miss Kerr. . . . Mr. Harry Hutchins. . . . Probably he had foreseen this. But no, Harry had foreseen this. Harry had foreseen this photograph taken at the smarter places, linked with the notables, Miss Gloria Harmon in particular.

It was not much more than an hour later when Cilly returned from the cemetery. She turned into the entrance of the Bayview, she heard, through the open window, the ringing of her own telephone. She hastened her steps. It was Sergeant Dolan.

"Say, Miss Pierce," he said abruptly.

"I'd like you to come down to headquarters as soon as you can. Something I'd like to talk to you about."

"I'll leave immediately," Cilly assured him. She hung up, a little fearful.

She went into the bedroom to freshen her make-up. She combed her hair and set her tiny little black hat at a more rakish angle. It strengthened her self-assurance.

Half an hour later, she sat opposite Sergeant Dolan in a small private office down at police headquarters.

"Any news of your boy friend?" Dolan asked her, almost before she was seated.

He flung the question at her abruptly, starting her for the moment. Her self-assurance weakened perceptibly. "No, of course not," she said, "not since—"

She stopped, realizing that she was about to say: "Not since his postcard yesterday." It was just one such little slip that Dolan hoped for.

"Not since when," he asked, instantly alert.

"Not since Sunday, of course. But I did discover something very important."

"Let's hear about it."

BRIEFLY, but in detail, Cilly told him how she came to find the Bluefields newspapers in the incinerator: she showed him the sections she had reclaimed. She told him of her visit that morning to Mr. Johnson, and of his peculiar literary tastes.

"Another thing," she said, "Detective Martin apparently forgot to consider Mr. Johnson yesterday when he was collecting alibis for all the tenants. He might very well have been up there on the roof—he goes up every night to lock the door—and he was the only one who came out of the front door after Amy was killed."

"Did you see him come down the stairs?"

"No, I didn't. I assumed that he came up from his rooms in the basement. I was looking at Amy—not at the front door. I only know that he was the only one who came out of the house before the police arrived."

Sergeant Dolan shrugged his wide shoulders.

"It doesn't look to me," he said slowly, "as if you have much of a case on Johnson. After all, if a man chooses to read up on insanity in his spare time, that doesn't make him a murderer. It doesn't even make him insane. Anyway, from your own story of the newspapers, you're ready to believe that someone upstairs is implicated."

"YES, I do," Cilly admitted. "Don't you think whoever threw away the papers knows a great deal about Amy's death?"

"Well, I'll admit it would seem so. Bluefields, Utah, is a small place. I'm willing to check more thoroughly on the tenants. . . ."

"If it's not too late,"

"What do you mean?"

"You told me yesterday, Sergeant, that we were all to stand in readiness for a summons to police headquarters. Was that order for me alone, or was it given to every tenant?"

"Martin gave every tenant the same instructions."

"Nevertheless, Mrs. Wheeler in 4-3 left hurriedly this afternoon with two large suitcases. I don't think she'll be back for a while."

Dolan picked up a phone from the desk. To someone at the other end he ordered: "Have Martin check up on a Mrs. Wheeler in Apartment 4-B at the Bayview. See if there's any indication that she skipped."

Replacing the phone, he turned to Cilly: "There's something peculiar in that," he said, "I particularly gave orders that no tenant was to leave the vicinity without special permission. . . . Well, we'll see about Mrs. Wheeler. Now what else did you have to tell me, Miss Pierce?"

"Nothing else, sergeant," Cilly said calmly. "But I do believe those three incidents have a tremendous bearing on the case."

"Perhaps you're right." He sat still for a moment, strumming on the table with the tips of his fingers. His eyes were calculating as they stared uncompromisingly at Cilly. Under his steady gaze, she became restless. It was with tremendous control that she remained her composure.

"Nevertheless," said Sergeant Dolan finally, "Let's get back to this friend of yours—Kerrigan. How much haven't you told me about him, Miss Pierce?"

Cilly straightened. "I've told you all there is to tell," she said with dignity. "Mr. Kerrigan and I are very good friends. I am sure you will find his character and his habits entirely above reproach. You're wasting valuable time trying to cast suspicion on him."

"Did Mr. Kerrigan ever tell you," Sergeant Dolan asked, with maddening deliberation, "that out in Bluefields, Utah, his father is serving 10 years in prison for theft?"

Ranchers Fighting Packs of Wild Dogs

ROUGH VALLEY, B. C.

Banded together like their brothers, the wolves, wild dogs are carrying destruction through the ranch country killing livestock over a wide area. Ranchers report killing of turkeys, cattle, sheep and pigs by the canine raiders. They keep their firearms handy to shoot on sight. The packs are made up of dogs which have run away from farms of the district, or been disowned.

Starving, they have banded together. At first they raided by night, but have now become so bold that George N. Wilson, manager of the Twyn Waters Ranch, reports a daylight raid on a herd of ponies.

Led by a huge mongrel dog, the pack of seven rounded up the pony herd and drove the horses to the doors of the farm buildings. Separating, they blocked the ponies from seeking refuge, then prepared for the death spring when Wilson charged them with a pitchfork. One rancher reports loss of $7,000 worth of stock through the depredations of the wild dogs of Rouge Valley.

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Harry Hopkins, Chief of WPA, author of "Spending to Save," is Number One Man among the president's advisers today—the only real "general adviser" in the sense that Moley and Tugwell were. A keystone of this current Comptroling policy is the idea that the economic system can be controlled and adjusted through use of taxation. The administration would like to break up monopolies and "huge concentrations of wealth and economic power" by a tax system which also would skim off profits from big corporate and individual incomes for the benefit of the "lower one-third," whose increased purchasing power theoretically would help keep the economic system in balance.

Coyne, closely associated with Eccles and others mentioned, is believed by some to be writing the enduring economic philosophy of the New Deal. Business men seeking to learn administration trends should read his recently written "Why Pay Taxes?" which follows his "Brass Tacks" and "Age Without Fear."

ROOSEVELT and all the real New Dealers, one is frequently told by insiders, are behind the general policy often referred to, for brevity, as "the purchasing power theory."

SPORTS EDITOR, NEA SERVICE
THEY say that a really great man is one who, at the top of the ladder through his own hard work and the boosts of his friends, reaches down and gives other scalers a helping hand.

Such a man is Wallace Wade, whose record as a producer of outstanding football teams, first at Alabama, and now at Duke, puts him at the peak of his profession.

Wade is a typical southern gentleman—a true son of the south with an ancestral background that starts with William Wallace and Robert Bruce, those great figures in Scotland's history.

Wade's life, love, and all is football. He believes that it is a man-building program, which properly conducted can be of incalculable worth to a player in future life.

Wade is a good-looking man. His facial features are well-formed, and when he smiles sun wrinkles around his eyes are noticeable. His face is bronzed from frequent exposure to the southern sun, and one of his favorite expressions is "I'd give the freckles off my neck to win this one."

DIXIE's foremost gridiron guide speaks softly and with a Tennessee cadence, yet his voice sounds as if amplified on the football practice field. It is one of those carrying voices.

Wade does not permit practice to become boring. Every 15 minutes, the student manager blows a whistle and something else is started. No time is lost.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox

NEA service staff writer
WHAT'S an extra egg or two for Sunday's cake? And what would Sunday be without lots of extra fancy frosting on the cake? So roll up your sleeves and start in getting ready for big eating on Sunday afternoon.

Ambrosia Layer Cake
 (3 eggs)

Two and one-half cups sifted cake flour, 2 teaspoons combination baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoons grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 2-3 cup butter or other shortening, 1-2 cups sugar, 3 eggs, unbeaten, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 5 tablespoons orange juice, 2 tablespoons water.

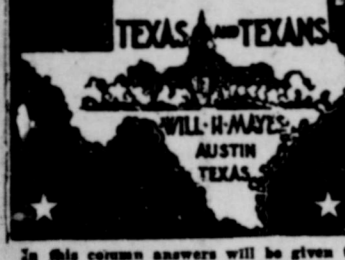

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Add lemon and orange rinds to butter, and cream thoroughly; add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each. Add flour, alternately with combined fruit juice and water, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 20 minutes, or until done. Spread Orange Cocomoat Filling between layers and Seven Minute Frosting on top and sides of cake. Arrange sections of 1 orange, free from membrane, on top of cake, and sprinkle 1-2 can moist, sweetened cocomoat over top while frosting is still soft.

Orange Cocomoat Filling
 One cup sugar, 5 tablespoons cake flour, dash of salt, 1-2 cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 4 tablespoons water, 1 egg or 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten,

Seven Minute Frosting
 Two egg whites, unbeaten, 1-1/2 cups sugar, 5 tablespoons water, 1-2 teaspoons light corn syrup, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Combine egg whites, sugar, water and corn syrup in top of double boiler, beating constantly with rotary beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary egg beater, and cook 7 minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from boiling water; add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two 9-inch layers.

LET'S KNOW TEXAS—TEXANS

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayo, Austin, Texas.

Q. How did the Hasainai Indians early manifest their cooperation with their white friends?

A. When the Frenchman, De Lisle was shipwrecked on Galveston Bay in 1690 and held captive by coast cannibal Indians, the Hasainais rescued him and took him to the French fort at Natchitoches and delivered him to his friend, St. Dennis.

Q. What was the last place in which the Nauvoo, Ill., Mormon colonists who came to Texas in 1839, lived?

A. After leaving Banderia, they located on the Medina River at a place now covered by the waters of Medina Lake, from which place they scattered, some returning to Illinois and others settling in different Texas localities.

Q. When was the dam constructed that forms Medina Lake on Medina River?

A. In 1913.

Q. What first efforts were made to establish schools in San Antonio?

A. Records show that as early as 1746 Cristobal de los Santos was teaching there and that some years later Don Ignacio de los Santos Coy (probably the son of Cristobal) became sacristan and taught a parish school. Doubtless these were largely for religious and church instruction and hardly such as would now be classed as educational.

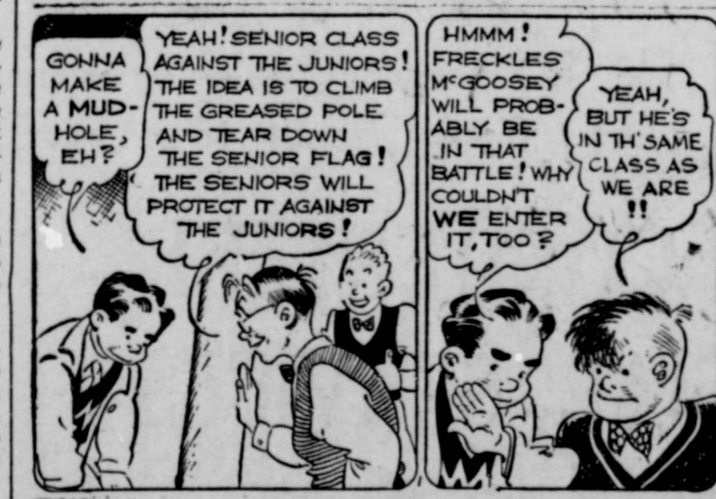

Q. What early efforts were made for compulsory school attendance?

A. About 1802 Gov. Juan Bautista Elguizabel issued a decree for the alcaldes to require parents to place their children in schools where school were maintained and to impose heavy penalties for failure to do so. This decree was but indifferently observed.

Q. Who was first to seek official or public recognition of school work in Texas?

A. On May 1, 1789, Don Jose

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

Francisco de la Mata applied to the cabildo (town council) of San Frenando (afterward San Antonio) for official recognition of private efforts to teach the children, this being done to check parents who unduly interfered with his educational methods and discipline. This request was granted by the cabildo and the action was ratified by the governor. Don Francisco agreed to teach until 1795—six years.

Q. Where is the "Skin Out Mountain range and how did it get its name?

A. It is a range of hills ten miles west of Anson. Tradition says that a man fled to these hills from Indians and when he saw following him up the hills he made another run for safety. When asked what he did when chased by the Indians, his answer was, "I skinned out." After that the mountains were called "Skin

Shooting Code of G-Men Calls For Quick Fire At the Stomach o Shatter Aim of Gunmen Foe

By ALLEN DIBBLE. United Press Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON—I was in the custody of G-men for more than two hours in a thrilling experience that lasted from the time a special agent sent more than 25 shots spattering from his "tommy" gun with deadly aim until they rolled my tense fingers across a pad to record my prints.

Fortunately, it was not punitive custody. I became one of the legion of Washington visitors who make the inspection tour of the crime laboratory established by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

It is the nerve center of crime enforcement in the United States. Hundreds of clerks—so many, in fact, supervisors use a public address system to facilitate the work—sort fingerprint identification records from 10,500 agencies in this country and 81 foreign nations. Nearly 500 records are received daily.

Within 36 hours after a criminal record is received at the bureau, it is started on its way back to the contributing agency—destined to play an important part in the fate of the person held in custody. It may set him free; it may implicate him further.

Criminal careers are checked through files containing more than 7,000,000 prints. Additional checks are provided through the single prints of the nation's outstanding desperadoes, nicknames and modus operandi files. Maintained in separate files are more than 350,000 records in the civil identification group in which my prints were placed.

Guides impress upon you the futility of attempting to mutilate the telltale whorls, deltas, etc., by showing you the record of ill-starred John Dillinger, Hoosier desperado, whose death prints retained 300 out of a possible 600 distinguishable characteristics despite an operation. It usually takes only 12 points of identification to obtain a favorable jury reaction.

Although less than 5 per cent of the investigative duty of Federal agents involve armed conflict with desperadoes, their ability with weapons of all types, from pistols to the deadly .357 magnum rifle, is kept at top score.

A G-man riddled a target on the range in the basement of the Department of Justice building.

"We shoot at the stomach," the agent explained, fingering the trigger of his "tommy" gun. "That doubles 'em up and they can't aim."

"We don't like to shoot at the head for two reasons," he continued. "First, if the shot should miss that would leave the criminal standing to fire the next shot with his best aim. Second, a head shot is more deadly."

The agent nicked the target's shooting arm with three well-placed shots, adding, "that's another reason why he won't shoot back."

A trip to the gymnasium showed why Hoover is youthful at 42. His co-workers are similarly equipped with fine physiques and bodily stamina.

"Each special agent and supervisor assigned to the Washington division exercises for one hour at least three days a week," the guide explained. "Men in the training school take daily exercises."

Man, 86, Arranges His Own Funeral

By United Press. NUNDA, N. Y.—Although he has never been sick a day in his life, 86-year-old Leonard Roberts isn't taking any chances. In a tiny room off the kitchen of the house in which he lives alone Roberts keeps a casket. "I made this casket with my own hands," he explained, "and I will keep it until I finally rest there forever. I have also arranged my own funeral."

Goiter Is Curbed In Lakes Area

By United Press. CLEVELAND—The number of goiter sufferers in the so-called "goiter belt"—the area surrounding the Great Lakes—has been reduced tremendously during the past 13 years by the simple use of iodized salt at the dining table. Dr. Oliver F. Kimball, Cleveland physician, has reported to the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Kimball's report was based on surveys made in schools in Cleveland, Detroit, and other parts of Michigan, regions in which soil and food stuffs are known to lack iodine.

In 1924, when Michigan began a campaign to educate people to use iodized salt as a preventive to goiter, a survey showed 39 per cent of 65,000 school children suffered from the disease in some stage, Dr. Kimball reported.

Effectiveness Is Proved
After iodized salt had been in use four years only 10 per cent of 50,000 children examined were affected by goiter. In 1936 a re-check of 47,000 children who had used this method of treatment consistently showed less than 3 per cent sufferers.

Dr. Kimball's surveys in Cleveland schools likewise showed a decrease in the disease since 1924, when 30 per cent of the students examined had goiter. In 1936 fewer than 8 per cent were afflicted with the disease.

Although contending use of iodized salt was not harmful Dr. Kimball cautioned against use of all brands labeled "iodized." He urged that city health departments be alert for brands not properly treated.

Interest Needs Stimulation
Dr. Kimball urged that the department of health continue its advice on goiter prophylaxis at definite intervals. "Otherwise," he said, "interest in this measure will die because of the ease and simplicity of prevention."

"Attempts to interest and educate the public need not be aimed solely at deformity of the neck. One should think of the cases of feeble-mindedness, of the many boys and girls who do not mature normally through puberty, of the many cases of cretinism and myxedema and of the thousands of large tumorous goiters with an occasional cancer, each of which is only a sequel of endemic goiter."

Pet Skunk In Cafe Causes Near Riot

By United Press. DICKINSON, N. D.—Evelyn Stradinger walked into a restaurant here and ordered a cup of coffee and a bowl of milk. And this seemingly innocent act nearly caused a walkout of employees. Customers sought refuge in extreme corners of the cafe. Employees ducked behind counters or scampers into the kitchen. The turmoil broke loose when the girl produced the intended customer for the bowl of milk—a baby skunk.
