

Eight arrested in attack on police officers

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Two of Pampa's police officers were hurt and eight people were jailed following an attack by partygoers at a Pampa home in the early-morning hours Sunday, according to police reports.

About 12:47 a.m. Sunday morning, the police dispatcher received a call from a resident in the 100 block of North Nelson complaining of a loud party. Officers Chris Lockridge and Mark King responded to the call.

Police records say they were verbally, then physically, assaulted by several of the party-goers.

According to a report issued by the police department, one officer had seen a girl throw down a beer can and run into the house as the officers arrived on the scene. While officers Lockridge and King were attempting to talk with a resident of the house about the volume of noise coming from within, one of the party-goers began yelling and swearing at the officers and then "swung at the officer", the report said.

Several other persons then reportedly joined the attack on the officers. They called for reinforcements, who arrived and helped control the crowd.

According to the reports, both Officers King and Lockridge were treated and released from the hospital emergency room. King was reportedly knocked unconscious and is suffering with a cracked bone. They were released from duty for the remainder of the shift.

Four juveniles and four adults were arrested as a result of the altercation.

Mark Kotara, 19, of 112 N. Nelson where the party took place, Anthony Richardson, 21, of 317 Rider, and James Parker, 22, of 641 N. Nelson were charged with assault and resisting arrest. Richardson and Parker were also charged with public intoxication. Cecilia Kotara, 17, also of 112 N. Nelson, was arrested and charged with interfering with arrests.

The four adults were released after posting a total of $1,315 in cash bonds and fines.

Lebanon leaders talk reconciliation

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Lebanese national reconciliation conference, opening today after weeks of tense negotiations, brings together a collection of men who in some cases have been feuding bitterly for decades.

Their task is to try to end Lebanon's internal conflicts, and the pressure on them has increased since the Oct. 23 truck bombings in Beirut which killed at least 287 U.S. and French servicemen in the multinational peacekeeping force. The four nations comprising the force have hinted they might reassess their roles unless the reconciliation talks yield significant results.

One of the key participants is leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, who over the weekend warned of a new civil war if Lebanon's Christians balk at making concessions to the Moslems at the conference.

Jumblatt said the outcome of the talks will hinge on the Christians' willingness to grant "to the majority of the population the concessions necessary to lead to a modern Lebanon."

"If they do not wish to do so, there will be a new war," he said.

Jumblatt's Druse militiamen and their leftist allies battled the Lebanese army and Christian militiamen in September's three-week civil war.

"The real problem facing Lebanon is to get Israeli forces out of Lebanon and get Syria and the Palestinians to get their forces out of Lebanon so the Lebanese will have a chance to work out their differences and to control their destiny like everyone else," Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem said Sunday.

He said the conflict which has raged in Lebanon since 1975 was fueled by instability elsewhere in the Middle East.

"For eight years, Lebanon has paid a heavy price because it is a democracy, because it is free, because it is different," Salem said. "Now the Lebanese people more than ever are united behind the government to disentangle itself from the crisis in the area."

Israeli troops invaded Lebanon in June 1982 to force out Palestinian guerrillas and are still there. Syrians, permitted to stay in Lebanon as peacekeepers after the 1975-76 civil war, also are still there.

Sitting in the same room in a Geneva luxury hotel this week will be men who in some cases blame one another for attempts on their lives or for assassinations of relatives and followers.

In some cases, men allied with one another today were once arch-enemies. The history of their bloody entanglements, shifting alliances and headline power brokering underscores the difficulty they face trying to end years of factional strife.

For example, former President Suleiman Franjeh was once allied with fellow Maronite Catholic Pierre Gemayel on the Christian right. But Franjeh broke with his fellow Christians in May 1978 over their increasing ties with Israel and hostility toward Syria.

One month later gunmen from the Christian Phalange party, founded and headed by Pierre Gemayel, killed Franjeh's son Tony, his wife and infant daughter.

Gemayel, father of President Amin Gemayel, came to the conference as co-chairman, along with former President Camille Chamoun, of the Lebanese Front, an umbrella organization which includes the Phalangists.

But relations between Chamoun, remembered as the president who requested U.S. intervention to restore order in 1958, and the Gemayel family have not always been harmonious.

Militiamen of Chamoun's National Liberal Party performed well alongside the Phalangists during the 1975-76 civil war. But when the war tapered off, the Phalangists clashed with Chamoun's militiamen in a series of bloody battles in the summer of 1978, reducing the Liberal Party's power.

President Gemayel's opponents at the conference have had their share of feuding too.

Although Jumblatt lives in Damascus and received Syrian backing during the September civil war, many Lebanese blame Syria for the 1977 murder of his father Kamal Jumblatt in an ambush.

'Miss Lillian' dies of cancer at 85

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, the spry and forthright mother of former President Jimmy Carter whose full life spanned politics, the Peace Corps and the limelight of her son's White House years, is dead at the age of 85.

Mrs. Carter, affectionately known as "Miss Lillian," died of cancer at 5:05 p.m. Sunday at Americus-Sumter County Hospital.

The former president and his wife, Rosalynn, were at Mrs. Carter's bedside when she died, along with her other son, Billy, and her daughter, Gloria Carter Spann, said hospital administrator James Griffith.

Dr. Paul Brown said Mrs. Carter, who underwent a radical mastectomy in 1981, died of cancer after a period of declining health.

A graveside service was scheduled for 3 p.m. Tuesday at Lebanon Cemetery in Plains.

During her son's tenure in the White House, Mrs. Carter traveled the world, but was fond of returning home to Plains "to get barefoot."

She once advised a congressional committee interested in the problems of hunger and population planning, "Don't retire until you have to. And if you do retire, find a hobby and just keep on living. Don't get in a rocking chair and rot out."

As a 67-year-old widow, she joined the Peace Corps in 1966 and went to India for two years as its oldest volunteer.

The wrinkles of age, her silver hair and thick Southern accent lent charm to her outspokenness. But the president's foes were her foes, and she made no bones about that.

Campaigning in New Hampshire in 1979, she drew an embarrassed silence and a few catcalls when she told an audience she hoped no harm would befall U.S. Sen. Edward M.

LILLIAN CARTER

Kennedy, then challenging Carter for the nomination.

A campaign spokesman explained that the president's mother meant the remark only as "an honest expression of concern."

Grenada defenders' guns silent; Marxist general said captured

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Grenada's citizens began restoring order to their battle-scarred island today as defenders' guns were silent and the leader of the short-lived Marxist military regime was reported in custody.

The American death toll in the Grenada campaign rose to 16, with 77 wounded and three missing.

A man who claimed to be Gen. Hudson Austin and was carrying Austin's identification papers was captured by U.S. paratroopers, the Pentagon said Sunday. Austin was chairman of the 16-member People's Revolutionary Council set up after the Oct. 19 killing of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

Austin had been reported on the run in various locations across the 133-square mile Caribbean island since the U.S.-led invasion last Tuesday.

Some reports said he had with one or more women hostages, and he reportedly made at least one abortive attempt to escape from the island on a yacht.

On Saturday, U.S. Marines in the suburbs of St. George's, the capital of Grenada, captured Bernard Coard, another architect of the bloody coup that ousted Bishop. Coard, a Marxist economist and deputy prime minister, led a faction that believed Bishop's pro-Cuban regime was not radical enough.

In St. George's, there were no reports of further fighting Sunday and reporters were allowed to walk the streets without military escorts for the first time.

"There is no life-threatening situation at the present," said a report issued by U.S. representatives of the Agency for International Development.

Reporters saw smashed windows and empty store shelves as a result of looting after the invasion. The only restaurant open in the area was selling beer, but no food.

Patrols of soldiers and sailors from the 400-member, seven-nation Caribbean security force were serving as police.

"We see the real truth about Americans and we see how they're interested and we see the real truth when they arrived because they didn't want to see us get communistic," said Benedine Charlotte, carrying a two-week-old baby.

In an address to the nation late Saturday on state-run Spice Island Radio, the British-appointed governor general of the island, Sir Paul Scoon, urged stores and schools to open and government employees to report to work today.

In Barbados, high-ranking police said a contingent of U.S. Marines captured an undisclosed number of Cuban resisters Sunday on Carriacou, a 13-square mile island dependency of Grenada to the north. But there was no official word from military spokesmen.

The Pentagon on Sunday said the Cuban government's count of Cubans on Grenada — a total of 784 — may have been correct, despite previous military estimates ranging higher. Nearly 700 Cubans are being held as prisoners.

At the time of the invasion, U.S. military intelligence estimated there were about 600 Cubans on Grenada, most of them construction workers building a new airport. However, after U.S. Marines and Army rangers took Grenada amid fierce fighting, the Pentagon said there were up to 1,200 Cubans, many of them well-trained soldiers on the island.

In Washington, U.S. intelligence sources said Sunday there was no clear evidence any of the 1,000 Americans on the island were in danger of being taken hostage. President Reagan said fear of an Iran-type hostage situation was a motivation for the invasion. About 700 people, most of them American students at St. George's University School of Medicine, have been evacuated from Grenada.

County will discuss juvenile budget again

The Gray County Commissioners' Court will once again discuss a budget proposed by the Juvenile Probation Board at the regular meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday in the county courtroom.

The county had previously rejected the proposed juvenile probation budget, which called for about $21,000 for operating expenses and $5,000 to pay for legal expenses should the county deny the budget request.

At the last meeting of the juvenile probation board, the members voted to delete the $5,000 allocation for legal fees.

The juvenile department's proposed 1983-84 budget includes an annual salary of $19,500 for the probation officer, Bill Leonard, and a starting annual salary of $1,3740 for the department clerk. The clerk's starting salary would be $540 more a year than the senior secretary's in any of the county offices. Leonard reportedly told the board he didn't need a clerk, but was told by one of the board members "that's how the state wants it."

In other business, the commissioners will see a demonstration of the new vote tabulation machines. Doris Thielepape of Hartgraphics, Austin, will teach a class tonight (Monday) on the operation of the machines. County Clerk, Wanda Carter, said the public is invited to attend the class which will be held at 7 tonight.

The public testing of the vote tabulators will be held at the beginning of the Commissioners' Court meeting Tuesday.

Included on the agenda is consideration of an application for a computer system for the Extension Service of Gray County.

Consideration will be given to submitting a grant application to the Texas Aeronautics Commission for improvements to a runway at Perry Lefors Field.

Police offer to check treats

The Pampa Police Department has offered to help parents determine if their trick-or-treat goodies are safe tonight.

Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said concerned parents may bring their children's treats by the police department to have them checked with metal detectors for foreign objects.

The chief again urged caution for trick-or-treaters and suggested parents require their children to make rounds before it gets dark.

REV. JESSE JACKSON

Jesse Jackson says he'll try to become first black nominee

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, demanding a "new covenant" linking blacks to the Democratic Party, organized labor and big business, says he will seek to become the first black presidential candidate nominated by a major party.

The civil rights leader said he is running for the 1984 Democratic nomination because blacks have an investment in the Democratic Party, "and we want a return on our investment."

Sunday, in a speech at Morehouse College in Atlanta and in a taped television interview, Jackson said he would formally announce his candidacy on Thursday.

"We have a dual mission," he said. "One part is to remove the repressive Reagan regime. The other is to achieve parity."

"Our position has been that we have been an unofficial candidate in the Democratic primaries," Jackson said. As of Thursday, he said, "I expect to become an official candidate."

Many of the country's black political leaders have said they will not support Jackson, fearing such a campaign would be divisive. But in an interview on the CBS television program "60 Minutes," broadcast Sunday night, Jackson said, "No candidate can expect to have unanimous support from any given community."

Asked if he would choose a female running mate if possible, Jackson replied: "There's no doubt about it."

The 42-year-old Jackson, a disciple of slain civil rights leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., heads Operation PUSH — People United to Serve Humanity — a Chicago-based organization that concentrates on registering voters.

"We want a new covenant," Jackson said in his speech at Morehouse. "We who must vote want a new covenant with the Democratic Party. It has no right to run an all-white slate over an integrated voting bloc.

"In the labor movement," he said, "trade unions have locked us out." He said every slum needs tradesmen, architects and developers. "We can end the slum and rebuild America and put America back to work."

Blacks need their fair share of the jobs, at all levels, and their share of ownership in corporate America, he said.

Black leaders applauded Jackson's announcement, but didn't rush to endorse his candidacy.

"I think he'll be a welcome addition to the race and will ensure that the concerns of black Americans are heard by all the candidates," said Julian Bond, a black Georgia state senator who made a brief presidential bid in 1976.

However, Bond has endorsed former Vice President Walter Mondale, and said Jackson would not win the nomination.

Claims marines had warning

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Shiite Moslem leader today claimed the U.S. Marine command in Beirut was forewarned of possible attacks against the American peacekeepers but failed to take adequate precautions prior to the Oct. 23 truck bombing.

Ghassan Sibli, a high-ranking leader of the Amal militia, also joined other Shiite leaders in warning the United States and France not to stage reprisals against his community for the twin bombings that killed at least 287 U.S. and French peacekeeping troops.

Sibli and Akel Haidar, head of Amal's political bureau, said U.S. troops would meet stiff resistance if they attacked the Shiite-dominated suburbs of south Beirut.

Sibli, in a statement published by the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar, said the Marine command "was given warnings from two security quarters in Lebanon a few days before the attack that a big operation might be staged against them."

But Sibli, a political bureau member of the Shiite sect's dominant militia, did not say who had warned the Marines of a possible terrorist assault on their base at Beirut's international airport.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan has acknowledged that the American contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force received periodic warnings of attacks and took whatever security precautions were deemed appropriate.

But Jordan would not say whether the Marine command received any warnings specifically connected with the Oct. 23 bombing.

On Sunday, Beirut was reported calm, and the Marine sequestered themselves in their airport compound after an exhausting week of digging out comrades killed by the bomb. Two Marines were wounded by a rocket-propelled grenade in skirmishes Saturday.

Congress debates troop deployment: for how long and are they safe?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, confronted by dramatic military events half a world apart, focused its attention today on two questions: How long should U.S. troops remain in Grenada and how safe are the Marines in Lebanon?

In the House, the agenda was headed by a scheduled vote on invoking the War Powers Act of 1973, which could require President Reagan to bring home the Grenada invasion force within 60 days.

On the Senate side, where the War Powers Act was invoked in a vote last week, the Armed Services Committee was hearing from Gen. Paul X. Kelley, the Marine commandant whose troops have been in Beirut for 13 months as part of an international peacekeeping force.

Today's scheduled House debate on Grenada centered on a resolution that would hold Reagan to the letter of the War Powers Act. The act says he cannot keep troops in hostilities, or facing the threat of hostilities, for more than 60 days unless Congress approves.

It allows him an extra 30 days if he certifies the time is needed to get the troops out safely.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved the resolution 34-2 last Thursday as all of the panel's Republicans joined most of its Democrats. Sources said the Democrat-dominated House was likely to endorse the action.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved an identical measure Friday by a 64-20 vote.

Much of today's Senate questioning of Kelley was expected to focus on how a suicide attacker could penetrate the Marine compound at the Beirut airport with an explosives-laden truck and devastate a headquarters and barracks building filled with sleeping servicemen.

More than 225 men died in the Oct. 23 blast. Two days later, U.S. Marines and soldiers invaded Marxist-run Grenada in a 6,000-man operation in which more than a dozen Americans were killed.

Kelley is just back from an inspection trip to Beirut, where he said he thought adequate provisions had been taken for the Marines' security.

Many in Congress disagree. In a resolution passed last week, Senate Democrats declared that "Marines occupying sentry positions reportedly were not allowed to carry loaded weapons; and the security for the Marines was obviously inadequate."

"When a sentry is not allowed to pull the bullets in his gun, that does not, in my view, constitute adequate protection," Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia told the Senate.

As Congress began what leaders hope will be the final three weeks of the 1983 session, the lawmakers faced a midnight deadline for extending the national debt limit. Unless legislation is enacted by then, the government will be unable to borrow money.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has said that even if a debt-ceiling bill is not enacted by midnight, the government probably has enough cash on hand to pay its bills and employees for a brief time.

Bodies of U.S. servicemen honored

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — A plane carrying the bodies of 15 American servicemen killed in the Beirut bombing landed at Dover Air Force Base early today, following a weekend of memorial services for others killed in Lebanon and Grenada.

Sgt. Daniel Devine said the plane, which carried the bodies of 13 Marines and two sailors from Frankfurt, West Germany, landed at 1:57 a.m.

One week after the terrorist attack on the Marines' headquarters took the lives of more than 225 U.S. servicemen in Lebanon, 15 of those men, as well as seven killed during action in Grenada, were honored Sunday in a military ceremony at Dover Air Force Base.

Navy Chaplain Conall R. Coughlin prayed, "Lord, our prayer today is not for these fallen... It is for those who remain to continue the efforts of reconciliation. Make us your instruments that we may replace hatred, injury, doubt and despair with love, pardon, faith and hope."

A 38-foot American flag provided a backdrop for eight Marine and six Army escorts who stood at attention in ceremonial dress behind 22 flag-draped coffins in a huge hangar on the base.

The base will continue to be used for ceremonies honoring those killed in Beirut, and a service honoring the 15 servicemen whose bodies arrived today was planned for later this morning.

At Sunday's ceremony — the second to be held at the base — a color guard stood by as the Marine Band played "Eternal Father," "The Navy Hymn," "America, the Beautiful" and "The Marine Hymn."

FDA investigates equipment malfunction

DALLAS (AP) — Federal investigators are examining dialysis equipment at the Dallas Kidney Disease Center where three dialysis patients died of heart failure within minutes of each other last week.

"What we are concerned about is if there is any problem with the device and that the public be protected," said Dr. H. Frank Newman, regional medical officer for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Newman said a recall of dialysis equipment was unlikely, because kidney patients' lives depend on the machines.

Center officials said an electrical malfunction caused a backup heating system to begin operating at the same time as the main one, overheating the saline solution flowing into the patients' blood.

"It apparently is a simple wiring defect that resulted in the equipment failing," said Newman. "The principal concern we have is that other machines built by the manufacturer are inspected to make sure there aren't similar defects."

Center officials said the problem was corrected and the center reopened on Saturday, the day after the deaths.

Newman and two other FDA inspectors said Saturday they would require the system's manufacturer, Milton Roy-Extracorporeal Inc., to inspect its machines in other parts of the country.

National Medical Care, Inc. of Waltham, Mass., which owns the center, issued a statement Sunday expressing regret over the three deaths.

"Electrical malfunction caused by faulty wiring... as received from the manufacturer caused the temperature of dialysis fluid to become overheated," the statement said.

Extracorporeal's dialysis units have been recalled twice before — for faulty tubing and bypass valves, said the Health Research Group, a Washington-based branch of Ralph Nader's consumer organization.

An initial report by Extracorporeal, a Johnson & Johnson subsidiary, said electrical wiring of equipment that regulates the solution cleansing patients' blood was installed improperly when the unit was manufactured seven years ago, said Dr. Tom Parker, director of the center.

But a spokesman at the company's headquarters in King of Prussia, Pa., said the center's addition of a gas heater to electric heaters normally used with the system may have caused the deaths.

"We have learned that a gas heater was hooked up to our central delivery system at this dialysis center," Extracorporeal spokesman Ed Watson said in a statement. "Our equipment only has an electric heater. The addition of a gas heater may be an important factor in these deaths."

Dialysis machines filter wastes from the blood of patients whose kidneys are incapable of removing the impurities. The process usually takes about three hours and is usually done about three times a week.

Pathologists performed autopsies on the three victims Saturday but did not specify the exact cause of death, pending further examinations.

"We all will agonize over the tragedy that happened," Parker told a group of 30 patients about to go on dialysis Saturday. "It's an awkward position since you depend on these machines to live. It's not as if you have any options."

School trustees to meet Tuesday

The Pampa school board will cast its 2,550 votes for one or more of the nine candidates for the board of directors for Gray County Tax Appraisal District and award a bid for paper products for the school district at its regular meeting Tuesday.

The school board of trustees will meet at 5 p.m. in the Carver Educational Service Center board conference room at 321 W. Albert, in Pampa.

One of the policies under consideration is one dealing with hiring an attorney to represent the school district's "interest in connection with collection of delinquent taxes."

Racial bias charges will figure in trial

DALLAS (AP) — A young black engineer who came to Texas to work in the nation's defense industry says he's a victim of racial prejudice, not the "recreational robber" that prosecutors claim.

Anthony Williams, 25, of Swansea, S.C. could be sentenced to life in prison if convicted in connection with last summer's armed robbery of a suburban Dallas convenience store.

The race issue and the police procedures that linked Williams and a former roommate, Lenell Geter, to a series of robberies have drawn national attention to Williams' trial, which was to begin here today.

Williams' lawyers argue that the charges are rooted in racial prejudice and a tainted identification process.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade has been asked by NAACP lawyer George Hairston to drop the charge, or delay the case until Geter's conviction in another robbery is reviewed by a higher court, but the prosecutor has refused.

Wade's office claims it has solid evidence to back up the case against Williams and claims it is treating this trial no different than any other armed robbery case.

Prosecutors have attempted to depict Williams and Geter as "recreational robbers" who lived on both sides of the law. Both men worked at $22,000-a-year jobs in Greenville, 50 miles east of Dallas, at E-Systems Inc., a large U.S. Defense Department contractor.

Geter, 25, of Denmark, S.C., was convicted last October in the armed robbery of a Balch Springs fast-food restaurant and received a life sentence, despite the testimony of E-Systems employees that Geter was at work when the robbery occurred.

Civil rights groups have charged that he was the victim of inaccurate detective work and a victim of mistaken identification.

The two men were among about a half-dozen young black engineers E-Systems brought to Texas from South Carolina.

Williams' and Geter's cases have drawn national attention, including investigations by CBS' "60 Minutes" and exposure on Phil Donahue's syndicated talk show.

"If we win this one, Geter will get out," said Lee Bowers of Estill, one of at least four lawyers assisting in the case. "But if we lose, it's going to be hard to recover."

Edwin M. Sigel, Geter's court-appointed Dallas attorney, said the FBI is looking into allegations of police misconduct and perjury by Texas authorities.

Meanwhile, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has agreed to a request by South Carolina Attorney General Travis Medlock to review Geter's case, which is under appeal.

Williams and Geter were recent graduates of South Carolina State College working at E-Systems when they came under investigation for robbery by the Greenville police department.

A woman later called police Lt. James Fortenberry and gave him the license number of a car she had spotted about 2 miles from the robbery scene.

The license number was later traced to Williams and Geter. Photographs of the pair were later identified by victims of separate robberies.

Planners of ceremony run into trouble

DALLAS (AP) — Local Democratic leaders Plans say they're still looking for someone to speak at a ceremony to mark the 20th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

So far, three people have been asked to address the Nov. 22 gathering but none has accepted the invitation.

The planners have run into other problems, too. As of Wednesday, only 117 of 2,000 tickets to the $15-a-plate luncheon had been sold, and most of the other dignitaries of national stature who have been invited have either declined or not responded.

But Bob Greenberg, chairman of the Dallas County Democratic Party, said he was still optimistic.

"Who comes and who doesn't come doesn't have anything to do with the success of the event," Greenberg said.

Former first lady Lady Bird Johnson, U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill and U.S. Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, had all been asked to deliver short speeches at the ceremony.

But Mrs. Johnson already has said she can't be in Dallas that day and O'Neill has given "no firm commitment," Democratic officials said. A spokesman for Bartlett said the congressman has not yet received a formal invitation to speak.

Invited to the event were President Reagan; Vice President George Bush; the entire Congress; the members of Kennedy's cabinet; former Texas Gov. John Connally, who was wounded in the attack on Kennedy; Kennedy's widow, Jacqueline Onassis; his surviving brother, U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, and Pope John Paul II.

As of last week, Reagan had not responded. Bush, Connally, Mrs. Onassis, Kennedy and the Pope had declined. No cabinet members had accepted and only a handful of congressmen — mainly the two Democrats from Dallas — had said they would attend.

Democratic presidential candidates Walter Mondale, John Glenn and Ruebin Askew have said they are interested in attending, but have not confirmed, Greenberg said.

"I'm not worried about the event," Greenberg added. "The only thing indefinite is what named persons are going to be at the event."

Drought reduces cotton crop to 'next to nothing'

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Agriculture officials in West Texas are predicting higher prices on some cotton goods because of a drought that has drastically cut production already reduced by a federal program.

The West Texas crop — mostly short-staple cotton used in denim jeans and work shirts — is "absolutely next to nothing" this year, said Don Richardson, Howard County agriculture extension agent.

Cotton farmers are reporting yields of as little as one-tenth that of a good year because of the drought and the federal Payment in Kind program that offered them commodities in exchange for not planting much of their land.

The PIK program was instituted to help reduce a national surplus that threatened to drive down the farmers' income from their crops.

Richardson said only about half of his county's 110,000 production acres were planted and he expects only about 10,000 bales this year, compared with 70,000 to 80,000 bales last year and a top production of over 100,000 bales.

A bale weighs 500 pounds.

While drought plagued the crop during its growing season, a late rain finally fell earlier this month, serving only to discolor the cotton, decreasing its value, the farmers say.

Bill Crockett, the Plains cotton market reporter for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, says healthy harvests nationwide, plus a large surplus, will make up for the small West Texas crop.

But Crockett says even so, he expects the price of cotton products to increase because of higher labor and production expenses.

"They always have," he said. Crockett expects the nation's cotton harvest to be between 7 million and 7.5 million bales, compared with 12 million last year.

The nation has a large surplus of cotton — about 8 million bales — that the federal government is trying to deplete through the PIK program, Crockett said. The surplus cotton, easy to store because it does not deteriorate rapidly, is from four or five harvests, he said.

Richardson says cotton prices have gone up across the country because of the drought and the PIK program.

Larry Shaw, a long-time farmer from Knott, said he planted about 475 acres this year, setting aside about 35 percent of his land for the PIK program.

He said that with snowfall last winter, he received only between 5 inches and 6 inches of rain.

When the harvest is completed, he hopes to have between 200 and 250 bales of cotton from his non-irrigated fields compared with the almost 450 bales he harvested last year. Shaw expects to make between $250 and $300 a bale.

Shaw's story has been repeated throughout West Texas, though irrigated cotton farms south and west of Midland County haven't faced quite as severe problems, but they produce far less cotton.

Shaw said a strong U.S. dollar hasn't helped cotton farmers, either. In West Texas, about 75 percent of the crop is exported, he said.

Because the dollar's value has gone up in the world market, foreign nations can't buy as much as they once did.

Three more Texans among Marines killed in Beirut

By The Associated Press
The waiting has come to an end for two more Texas families, who have learned that their sons were among the more than 200 U.S. servicemen killed in last week's terrorist attack in Lebanon.

Master Sgt. Matilde Hernandez Jr., 37, of Austin, was placed on the official casualty list Saturday, and the name of Lance Cpl. David Brown of Conroe was added Sunday.

A native of Arlington, Marine Pfc. Stephen Bland, 23, of Midway Park, N.C., was also put on the casualty list Sunday.

Hernandez' sister, Defina Arriola, said her brother had written of his desire to leave Lebanon in seven letters his relatives received Oct. 24, the day after the bomb attack. He was due to come home Nov. 17.

Hernandez, who lived near Camp Lejeune, N.C., with his wife Mary and their four children, 9 to 15, joined the Marines during the Vietnam War and served a short time in Vietnam until he was injured, Mrs. Arriola said.

The Marines sent Hernandez to Beirut in May. Initially he was a guard at the airport, but later was moved to an indoor job.

The first deaths of Marines in Beirut prompted an increase in his letters home. Mrs. Arriola said. "He wrote to us about it. I don't think he wrote to my parents about it, but he did to us. He saw some of the guys that were killed, how they looked. He was very anxious to leave."

Brown's mother, Patsy, said she broke down and cried when Marine officials informed her Saturday that her son had died in the Oct. 23 bombing.

"We're a close-knit family," she said. "We meant so much to each other. There were these thoughts going through my head — like it was happening to someone else, that it was on TV, that I was dreaming and I would wake up in a minute."

Despite the pain, Mrs. Brown said she was relieved the waiting had ended.

"I had an inner peace I can't explain. It was a relief when the Marines came ... because we had waited and waited and waited," she said.

Marine officers said it could be up to two weeks before their son's body is returned home.

"We want a military funeral for David," Mrs. Brown said. "We want everything the military has to offer. We want honor guards. I think this is appropriate because he was a good Marine."

She said she hoped her son did not suffer when a truck packed with explosives crashed through barricades into the Marine headquarters in Beirut.

"I like to think that David didn't know what hit him. I like to think he was sleeping and that he has gone and is now sleeping with the Lord," she said.

Mrs. Brown said she still is behind President Reagan "100 percent."

"I'm not bitter," she said. "But I still don't quite understand why our boys had to die."

The telephone number for Bland's family in Arlington was unlisted and they could not be reached for comment.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The real lesson of Vietnam

I wonder how many years it's going to take before we are able to put Vietnam behind us? Consider the following:

Merv Griffin, the former big band warbler, whose syndicated talk show is among the most successful on TV, had as his guest in late September none other than President Reagan.

It was an interesting show, as talk shows go. But probably not as interesting as it would have been if Pia Zadora or Victoria Principal had been living up the tube.

What impressed me most about Griffin the interviewer was that he didn't attempt to get cute, the way the Sam Donaldsons of the world do. He asked the kind of questions that are probably on all of our minds.

Along the way, Griffin asked the president about U.S. involvement in Lebanon and Central America. Shouldn't we be concerned, he asked, that the U.S. might get caught up in another Vietnam?

The president replied by pointing out that the real tragedy of Vietnam was that the U.S. sent troops there with no intention of winning. A few, then a few more, and then more and more U.S. men and women in uniform were sent to fight and die, but the government remained unwilling to take the steps necessary to defeat the enemy.

If American political behavior around the globe is going to be dictated by the lessons of Vietnam, it's time to recognize that those lessons from that conflict which have been used in Central America have been the wrong ones.

The real danger is not significant U.S. military involvement; it is that the U.S. will allow itself to be slowly sucked into the conflict, without having the will to take those steps necessary to successfully confront Soviet - Cuban aggression in the Hemisphere. The real danger is that some in Congress (and even within the Reagan administration) appear to seek only a negotiated settlement that accepts Marxist totalitarian rule in the region.

Fortunately, some in the Reagan administration seem to have learned the same lessons from Vietnam as President Reagan. Describing U.S. objectives in Central America during a recent speech in Baltimore, Under Secretary of Defense Fred Ikle declared: "As long as Congress keeps crippling the president's military assistance program, we will always have a policy shy of success."

Ikle criticized the arguments of those who claim that dialogue with the Soviet - and Cuban - backed Marxist guerrillas should be the administration's goal. "We can no more negotiate an acceptable political solution with these people than the social democrats in revolutionary Russia could have talked Lenin into giving up totalitarian Bolshevism," Ikle said. Rather, declared Ikle, we should "seek victory for the forces of democracy."

The Salvadoran guerrilla movement, like the Viet Cong in South Vietnam, poses a threat to the Salvadoran people only because it receives outside support from Cuba, Nicaragua, and ultimately the Soviet Bloc. After all, if the rebels were agrarian reformers, as the Left in this country suggests, they must have grown the hand grenades, bazookas, submachine guns and other weapons they are using to terrorize the Salvadoran countryside?

One of the bitter lessons of Vietnam was learning what happens to a friendly government and its people when U.S. military aid is given not with victory as the objective, but merely to insure that the country hangs on long enough so that "I don't catch the blame." The slow death of El Salvador and other independent Latin American nations will just as surely result if we follow the same pattern. That's what Vietnam should have taught us.

Holding the line on taxes worked

When 1983 ends, we may be able to savor the best year of economic health in America since 1972. Inflation is lower than at anytime in 15 years, growth in GNP is a robust five to six percent, and more Americans - 103 million - are working this year than at any time in our history.

The good news gushes forth during a year - not coincidentally - when Americans received the first real cut in personal income taxes in many a year - the 10 percent cut July 1.

It would not, however, be entirely accurate to call 1983 the beginning of a "supply - side" boom. Supply - side economics has yet to be tried in the modern American economy. The aggregate effect of Reagan's 1981 Economic Recovery Tax Act was merely to halt the relentless growth in the federal tax burden since 1965.

While the growth in the federal tax burden has stopped, to call the 1981 tax changes a "tax cut" would be misleading. True, the 1981 tax bill should lower taxes on the American people by $960 billion during the years 1982 - 87. The only trouble is, Social Security tax hikes tax hikes and bracket creep will take back about $660 billion of that. The "Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act" of August 1982 reclaimed for Congress another $228 billion. The nickel hike in the federal gas tax will remove an additional $16 billion from our pockets during that time.

What's left is a supply - side stimulus of $55 billion spread over five years. For a family earning $30,000 a year, that's a cut in their tax bill of $100 annually. Nothing radical there.

Of course, this is no argument that the Reagan program had nothing to do with the recovery of 1983. If the 1981 tax changes had never passed, the ensuing built - in $900 billion increase in taxes between 1982 and 1987 would have markedly slowed the economic growth that began this year.

If five percent growth, three percent inflation and record employment can be brought about, in part, by merely holding taxes steady, think what could be produced by a genuine cut in taxes. Rep. Jack Kemp, the architect of the original Reagan supply - side - oriented tax bill, has proposed lowering the top marginal income tax bracket to 25 percent. Others have proposed a uniform 10 to 20 percent rate on all taxpayers, with a personal deduction but few others.

Any long - term growth in the U.S. economy, however, would have to be accompanied by a reduction in federal spending. We cannot long thrive with the federal government laying claim to a quarter of the nation's economy - either through taxes, Treasury borrowing or inflation. All three damage the private economy.

Economic growth, as we are seeing in 1983, proves to be a wonderful tonic for virtually all that ails the U.S. economy. Unemployment drops, poverty declines, new industries spring up and old ones - autos and housing, no name two - undergo vigorous recoveries.

As an even year approaches and campaign rhetoric intensifies, the American people should listen for those who advocate the pro - growth policies of lower taxes and reduced federal spending. To act otherwise is to endanger the economic recovery underway and to threaten to turn us back to the economic dark days of 13 percent inflation, 21.5 percent interest rates and rising unemployment.

A straight course-- to somewhere

The U.S. Navy is getting a real workout. Just the other day the captain of the aircraft carrier "Snail Darter" was carrying out exercises in the Indian Ocean when his communications officer came in with a radio message.

"Washington has ordered us to proceed immediately to the coast of Nicaragua and stand by to interdict any ships bringing arms to the Sandinista government. At the same time we're to let through any boats bringing arms to Honduras, but we're to stop and search vessels approaching El Salvador to make sure they are not supplying the rebels."

"Left rudder right, steady as she goes."

Two weeks later. The communication officer wakes up the captain. "Sir, urgent dispatch, top secret from NAV ATLANTIC. Disregard taking up situation off Nicaragua and proceed immediately to Sea of Japan and stand by in South Korean waters to guard against sneak attack by North Korean planes. Patrol entire area on 24 - hour basis."

The captain said, "Tell them message received and make course for South Korea."

"How do we get there, sir? The carrier's too big for the Panama Canal."

"I guess we have to go around the tip of Argentina. We better refuel in Brazil."

Three weeks later the navigation officer comes on the bridge. "We should be off South Korea tomorrow night, sir."

"Good."

"Sir, message from White House Situation Room."

"Read it."

"Proceed maximum speed to San Diego, pick up 2,000 U.S. Marines and then sail to Beirut and stand off Med to give air cover to peacekeeping troops. Further orders forthcoming as you approach station."

"Good grief, don't they know where we are?"

"Yessir. I told them our position, but they said this is priority one."

"Turn the damn thing around, helmsman, and let's see how we can get to Beirut from here."

Four weeks later.

"We're going through the Strait of Gibraltar, sir."

"Notify NAV Naples. Tell them we should be off Beirut in three days."

"Just got a rocket from NAV MED flagship, sir. We're to alter course and head direct for the Strait of Hormuz."

"Do they say why?"

"Apparently the French have sold fighter planes and Exocet missiles to the Iraqis, and the Iraqis are threatening to close the strait and cut off Mideast oil. Our mission is to make sure they don't do it."

"Do we have any up - to - date maps of the Strait?"

"Washington is sending them out by special messenger. They should be here in 24 hours."

"Now hear this. This is the captain speaking. This ship is not going to Beirut. We are proceeding to Iran. The Iraqis may try to close Strait of Hormuz. Unfortunately they are flying American planes we sold them when the shah was there. So make sure when you shoot down aircraft it's one of their guys and not one of ours. Also don't shoot down any French planes unless they shoot at us. Good hunting, men."

A week later. "Telephone call for you, captain, on scrambler."

"Ted, this is Beetle in NAVOPS. There seems to be some sort of dustup in the Philippines, and Marcos could fall. We have to get a carrier there as fast as possible to show the flag. This order comes straight from the top. Full power, Ted, and don't zigzag."

"For God's sake, Beetle. Tell them I'm sailing as fast as I can."

Control of Senate at stake

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Political control of the Senate following next year's elections could be determined by the decisions made in the next several months by two Democratic governors and two Republican women.

Candidate recruitment by the Republican and Democratic parties' national organizations is controversial because state and local party officials perceive it as an usurpation of a political function that traditionally has been their prerogative.

But both national political organizations have been preparing for the 1984 campaign with efforts to lure their strongest candidates into Senate races whose intensity has seldom been matched in the past.

That's because most politicians believe control of that chamber might shift from the Republicans, who currently enjoy a 55 - 45 majority, to the Democrats, who are virtually certain to retain control of the House.

Leaders of both parties generally believe that the best the Republicans can expect is a reduced majority in the Senate - perhaps as a few as one or two seats - while it is possible that the Democrats might emerge from the election with a slim majority.

The Republicans' relatively gloomy prospects are widely attributable to two factors - a number of GOP incumbents seeking re - election could be vulnerable to defeat and the Republicans must defend 19 of the 33 Senate seats to be contested next year while the Democrats must protect only 14 seats.

To enhance their prospects, Republican leaders have turned to two GOP women who they believe would be the strongest candidates against a pair of potentially vulnerable Democratic senators seeking re - election.

In Rhode Island, Rep. Claudine Schneider is being importuned to challenge Sen.

Claiborne Pell. In Michigan, Peace Corps Director Loret M. Ruppe is being pressed to run against Sen. Carl M. Levin.

The task of recruiting female candidates has assumed unprecedented importance among Republican Party leaders determined to close the "gender gap" - the relatively recent phenomenon in which more women than men are highly antagonistic to the GOP.

(In Michigan, for example, Mrs. Ruppe is being recruited by GOP officials even though former Rep. James Dunn, R - Mich., has declared his candidacy for Levin's seat.)

Meanwhile, Democratic leaders are pressing two governors to enter races against a pair of incumbent Republican senators seeking re - election who are believed to be susceptible to strong challenges.

In Mississippi, Gov. William F. Winter is being recruited to run against Sen. Thad Cochran. In Maine, Gov. Joseph E. Brennan is being encouraged to declare his candidacy against Sen. William S. Cohen.

With Republican and Democratic slates remaining uncertain in those and a relatively few other states, four contests already have emerged as major 1984 battlegrounds for Senate seats - and in each instance the Republicans are on the defensive.

In North Carolina, Democratic Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. and Republican Sen. Jesse A. Helms have been immersed in an intense political struggle for more than two years.

In Iowa, Democratic Rep. Thomas Harkin is challenging Republican Sen. Roger W. Jepsen.

In Texas, the Democrats have a chance to pick up the seat being vacated by retiring Republican Sen. John G. Tower.

Halloween safety ensures night of treats, not tricks

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: It's Halloween again and time to remind you that ...
Somebody's child will be seriously injured or killed in a Halloween-related traffic accident.
Somebody's child will be badly maimed or fatally burned due to a flammable costume.
Somebody's child will become violently ill or die after eating poisoned candy or an apple containing a razor blade.
Somebody's child will be coaxed into an automobile or lured into a secluded area and sexually assaulted.
To make sure that child isn't yours, here are some tips to ensure the safety of your children:
— Use flameproof costumes only. If costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.
— Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use makeup instead.
— Accessories such as swords, broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc., should be made of cardboard rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dangerous.
— Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively no lighted candles should be carried!)

Counselor's Corner

Dreams may be brain's clean up

In the beginning, the One who created this world seemed to have some things measured in an exact way. Distance is one measurement, time is another. Direction is constant, and necessary nourishment enables us to have good health.
Most of us live by time. Seldom are we on time, but we usually know what hour it is and what is the date — another exact measure. There are clock watchers who probably waste time. A time piece is an expensive item.
Not as expensive as the time it tries to keep, however. People today try to get rid of work time because of its demands on them. Others try to save time for creative living, and for enough time to enjoy life.
One thing to remember is the fact that we have the same amount of time to spend as we wish. Eventually, we will fall asleep, whether we want to or not, and we will awaken on the similar alarm system. We are timed. Sooner or later we will die, making way for another person to occupy our space in time.
So much time is spent in busy pursuits, hurrying to get anywhere, only pausing at stop signs, quickly accelerating to continue moving. This constant flow of activity causes confusion sometimes; it keeps us from being attentive to the things going on about us that give meaning and purpose to our lifestyles. We get tired and lay down to relax. Sleep usually consumes us.
Then there are dreams of which we recall only a minute fraction. Some of them I only want to recall a minute fraction; yet there are others I enjoy remembering and hang onto for awhile.
There's value in unremembered dream activity because its reverse learning erases certain false or nonsensical memories. With numerous distractions and imposed interruptions each day, it's important to be able to forget so that upon waking our minds are clear to perceive uncamouflaged reality again.

Dreams are a dampening out process of the mind; a natural part of evolution to eliminate mental activity that might interfere with rational thought and memory. Francis Crick and Graeme Mitchison, famous dream analysts, believe that "we dream in order to forget" since there is so much brought to our awareness, we need to filter some of it.
Crick writes: "Every night, adults experience REM (rapid eye movement) sleep for a total of 1½ to 2 hours, occurring in approximately four sessions that begin about every 90 to 100 minutes. These sessions increase in length as the night goes on, from about 10 minutes to perhaps 30 minutes or more. The longest spell of dreaming usually precedes morning wake-up, but the dreamer rapidly forgets its content, along with most of the other dream episodes."
Even though we have a feeble ability to recall our dreams, there is great importance to them. Those we do recall may mean we have not completed our responsibility with reality. Dreams are the mental process of finishing business. The maintenance of chemicals of the mind clear out that which is unnecessary for human survival and leave us refreshed for today's encounters.
In biblical and classical times, dreams were interpreted as prophetic. Daniel, Pharaoh and the apostle Paul dreamed, or had visions. Some people believe that today — prophecy comes from dreams.

There are people who believe that dreams are visions of another reality, parallel to the waking world. Pioneer psychiatrist Sigmund Freud believed dreams express unconscious impulses or as Freud's student, Carl Jung suggested, provide an avenue of communication between the unconscious and conscious mind.
One researcher believes the dreamer may be unusually open to telepathic influences. Still others believe dreams help consolidate memories. A few neurological investigators believe dreams are mere incidental products of the sleeping brain and therefore mean nothing.
Certainly aspects of REM sleep are needed or else the person will compensate by having greater — than — normal periods of REM sleep on succeeding nights of undisturbed sleep. This is common to most mammals and birds.
Freud had three possible theories: first, dreams make sense, are intelligible and can be inserted easily into our mental life; second, a normal brain cell dreams as a necessary part of the sleeping process; third, some dreams seem disconnected, confused and meaningless and may be this way since some of our thinking and behavior is parallel.
Dreams, according to Freud, are meaningful relative to life, a part of sleeping we need to be mentally healthy.
Dreaming is important. Perhaps it's best not to remember them, if you go by the theory that dreams are the brain's way of forgetting the unnecessary, or is a filtering process which prevents contamination of normal thinking.
Interpreting dreams: may be a handicap to their usefulness. We corrupt various aspects of reality by distorting the true picture. If dreams clear the chambers of the mind for normal functioning, it's best to let the process do its job. Dreams have been around longer than any one of us. They must serve an important purpose.

They must keep us measured to normal satisfaction. The mental eraser does us a good job. It's best not to tamper with it like we try to manipulate time. Dream on. It's a good encounter with reality.

Jewels & Gems

A closed or bezel setting is among the most commonly used settings for cabochons and irregularly shaped stones. The bezel consist simply of a band of metal that fits around the gemstone and is soldered to the base jewelry. It is usually curved but can be square. Bezels can be made with or without a seat or bearing that fits inside to support the stone. Seats are used when there is no metal backing to which the bezel is attached, as in the case of a pendant. Or, a seat may be used to lift the bottom of a convex stone away from the base metal so that it sets firmly.

NFL leaders run into trouble

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Pride was the motivator and the San Francisco 49ers were the victims.

Playing a virtually mistake-free game, the struggling New York Jets knocked off the high-powered 49ers 27-13 in one of three major National Football League upsets that caught division leaders Sunday.

In other news, the St. Louis Cardinals outscored the Minnesota Vikings 41-31 and the Seattle Seahawks whipped the Los Angeles Raiders 34-21.

"Our motivation was embarrassment and the fact that we are much better than a 3 and 5 football team," said New York defensive lineman Marty Lyons. "We put pressure on the quarterback and our defensive backs did a great job covering their receivers."

Lyons' thoughts of "embarrassment" was a reference to last week's 27-21 loss to Atlanta after the Jets had built a 21-0 lead in the third quarter.

Meanwhile, comeback efforts by Pittsburgh and Cleveland continued the frustrations of the league's two winless teams, as the Steelers beat Tampa Bay 17-12 and the Browns tripped Houston 25-19 in overtime.

In other NFL action, Dallas hammered the New York Giants 38-20, Atlanta tripped New England 24-13, Baltimore edged Philadelphia 22-21, Detroit walloped Chicago 38-17, Buffalo outlasted New Orleans 27-21, Miami tripped the Los Angeles Rams 30-14, Cincinnati crushed Green Bay 34-14 and Denver edged Kansas City 27-24.

In the Monday night game, Washington visits San Diego.

Richard Todd hit 20 of 28 passes for 291 yards to lead the offense and the Jets' defense shut down the San Francisco running game to key their triumph over the National Conference West Division leaders.

Cornerback Jerry Holmes ran back an interception 43 yards for a touchdown in the final minute to seal the victory for the Jets, now 4-5 after snapping a three-game losing streak.

Cardinals 41, Vikings 31

Neil Lomax fired two touchdown passes to Roy Green and one to Pat Tilley, and Otis Anderson ran for 136 yards and a touchdown, leading St. Louis' upset of Minnesota, the NFC's Central Division leaders.

The Cardinals, 3-5-1, the NFL's most error-prone team, stayed away from fumbles and interceptions until the final period. St. Louis' Neil O'Donoghue, who missed three field-goal tries in a 20-20 tie with the New York Giants the previous game, made good on attempts of 52 and 47 yards.

"The key to our success was our balance," said Cardinals Coach Jim Hanifan. "We wanted to knock them off the ball, and I think we accomplished it."

Falcons 24, Patriots 13

Rookie linebacker John Rade returned a fumble 16 yards for a touchdown as Atlanta's defense forced four critical fumbles in the Falcons' victory over New England.

"I never even had an interception," Rade said of the score that came after rookie Mike Pitts stripped the ball away from New England quarterback Steve Grogan during a nine-yard sack. "I was fired up, and I was lucky. 'I just happened to be there when the ball was ripped out.'"

Colts 22, Eagles 21

Raul Allegre's fifth field goal of the game, a 30-yarder with 2:07 left, carried Baltimore over Philadelphia. The Eagles had taken a 21-19 lead on an eight-play, 44-yard drive capped by quarterback Ron Jaworski's 6-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Harold Carmichael. Lions 38, Bears 17

Eric Hipple passed for 216 yards and one touchdown and Leonard Thompson scored on a 40-yard reverse to lead Detroit over Chicago. Hipple hit Jeff Chadwick with a 21-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter and completed at least one long pass in each of Detroit's first four touchdown drives.

Bills 27, Saints 21

Joe Ferguson threw four touchdown passes, including two to Mike Mosley, and Buffalo survived a late New Orleans rally to beat the Saints. Ferguson ended the game with 13 completions in 25 attempts for 173 yards, while Saints starting quarterback Ken Stabler left the game at the end of the first quarter after taking a shot in the ribs.

Dolphins 30, Rams 14

Rookie quarterback Dan Marino ran for one touchdown and passed for two and Tony Nathan burst 18 yards for a key third-quarter score as the Miami beat Los Angeles.

Eric Dickerson, the Rams' sensational rookie, rushed for 101 yards to boost his yardage for the season to 1,096, the first player in the NFL to pass the 1,000-yard plateau this year and the 17th rookie to do so in NFL history.

Bengals 34, Packers 14

Fullback Pete Johnson rushed for 112 yards and two touchdowns in his first start of the season, and quarterback Turk Schonert threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score as Cincinnati crushed Green Bay.

The Bengals scored four first-half TDs while taking advantage of the NFL's worst defense statistically.

Broncos 27, Chiefs 24

DeBerg shredded the NFL's No. 1 pass defense for 350 yards and a touchdown, and fullback Nathan Poole added two short-yardage scores to lead Denver over Kansas City.

"I feel like our offense is improving each week," said DeBerg. "The thing we did well today was eliminate what Kansas City does well — rush the passer. They get an excellent pass rush from the ends, but (tackles) Dave Studdard and Ken Lanier did a great job of keeping them off me. Consequently, we were able to throw the ball effectively."

Steelers 17, Buccaneers 12

Frank Pollard ran 2 yards for a touchdown with 31 seconds left as the Steelers overcame seven turnovers and an NFL record 42 carries by Tampa Bay's James Wilder to beat the 0-9 Buccaneers.

Hurricane waiting for Nebraska?

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

There may be a hurricane warning in Nebraska's quest for college football's national championship.

The No. 1-ranked Cornhuskers haven't had to weather many storms in ranked their 9-0 record and the long-range forecast is for clear sailing past Iowa State and Kansas.

That would bring them to the regular-season finale against No. 14 Oklahoma on Nov. 26, with the Big Eight championship on the line, as usual. And if they get past the Sooners, they may have to face hometown heroes in the Orange Bowl.

The Miami Hurricanes are high on the list to be the visiting team on their own field and provide the opposition for the Big Eight champion on Jan. 2. The seventh-ranked Hurricanes knocked No. 12 West Virginia out of the major bowl picture Saturday with a 20-3 triumph, their eighth in a row.

"This team is on the threshold of greatness," Coach Howard Schnellenberger said after Miami held West Virginia to only two yards in 29 rushing attempts. "The next two weeks (East Carolina and Florida State) will be the real tests, but we are delighted to be in the position that we are."

The Orange Bowl's policy is to invite the highest available team in the Associated Press poll. Miami figures to jump past third-ranked North Carolina and No. 5 Florida, both losers over the weekend. Runner-up Texas seems headed for the Cotton Bowl, while fourth-ranked Auburn and No. 6 Georgia meet on Nov. 12. Barring a misstep, the Hurricanes should move past the loser of that game, with the winner likely Sugar Bowl-bound.

"We know we've won eight straight," said Miami linebacker Jay Brophy. "We can win two more straight. We know what we can do when we put our mind to it."

While Miami's defense was throttling the Mountaineers, freshman Bernie Kosar threw touchdown passes of 19 yards to Glenn Dennison and 5 to Keith Griffin and Jeff Davis kicked two 36-yard field goals.

"Boy, Miami is good," raved West Virginia Coach Don Nehlen. "Their defense ate us alive. You can't win if you can't run. We knew Miami had a good defense, but they didn't allow us anything."

Provided Nebraska doesn't stumble, the visiting berth in the Orange Bowl had figured to be contested among North Carolina, Miami and West Virginia. But Carolina's 28-26 loss to No. 13 Maryland may have cost the Tar Heels their chance.

North Carolina fell behind 10-0, led 17-10 at halftime, then surrendered two touchdowns — on Boomer Esiason passes of 14 yards to Rich Badanjek and 24 to Sean Sullivan — and a field goal in the third period and trailed 28-17.

The final quarter produced a Carolina field goal and a 1-yard touchdown run by Tyrone Anthony with 22 seconds left. But the Tar Heels had to try a two-point conversion and Maryland linebacker J.D. Gross pressured Scott Stankavage into a hurried pass.

Cowboys' White measures up

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — By his own standards, Danny White measured up as a quarterback.

"The measure of a quarterback is: Did he orchestrate the defense to the point where he could put points on the board?" said White.

The Dallas Cowboys quarterback orchestrated the New York Giants' defense so well Sunday that he tied a club record with a career-high five touchdown passes as the Cowboys improved upon the National Football League's best record with a 30-20 victory.

But White said his play "wasn't indicative of a record performance" because he felt he "made a few bad decisions."

"I made the plays we needed to win, but I like to play as close to perfect as I can," said White, an eight-year veteran who hit 15 of 33 passes for 304 yards, with two interceptions.

White's five touchdown throws — two to wide receiver Tony Dorsett, Doug Cosbie and Drew Pearson — put him alongside Eddie LeBaron, Don Meredith and Craig Morton in the Cowboys' record book. All of his touchdown passes capped long drives.

"There was a time when teams feared playing against the Giants' defense. It just seems to me a lot of teams have lost respect for us," said New York's inside linebacker Harry Carson, who returned to action Sunday after missing five games with a knee injury. "They're using us as a stepping stone."

The Cowboys' defense forced New York quarterback Jeff Rutledge into six turnovers — three fumbles in the first half and three interceptions in the fourth quarter.

Rutledge, who threw for 325 yards and had touchdown passes to rookie tight end Zeke Mowatt and fullback Rob Carpenter, left in the fourth quarter with a dislocated left knee cap and tissue damage, leaving the Giants with only one healthy quarterback in Scott Brunner, Rutledge, who was third-string until second-stringer Phil Simms went down with a knee injury three weeks ago, replaced Brunner as the starter last week.

"We've been pleased with the turnovers (we've forced) all year. Turnovers have gotten us where we are," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, whose team bounced back from last week's 40-38 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders to boost its record to 8-1.

"We're better off won-loss wise than I thought we'd be. We still have to continue to improve if we're going to win the Super Bowl," Landry added. "Today in the NFL you have to score points. If you don't score the points, you're not going to win."

The Cowboys broke the game open after White's 7-yard pass to Pearson on the first play of the fourth quarter put the finishing touch on a 76-yard, 10-play drive.

White, whose first touchdown pass was a 21-yarder to Hill to tie the score 7-7 in the first quarter, closed out the scoring with 6:02 to play on a 58-yard pass play to Hill, who had five receptions for 106 yards.

Dexter Clinkscales, Dennis Thurman and Bob Breunig intercepted fourth-quarter passes by Rutledge to thwart drives by the Giants, who fell to 2-6-1.

In the first half, Rutledge was sacked four times and lost the ball three of those times on fumbles. The Cowboys sacked Rutledge six times.

"We're a very confident team," said Dorsett, who hauled in a 14-yard scoring pass from White to give Dallas a 14-7 lead in the second quarter. "We know we're capable of doing some things. As long as we have time on the clock, we can make things happen."

"We can't afford to lose games we're supposed to win, like this one," added Dorsett, who also gained 94 yards on 22 carries to give him 819 yards rushing on the year.

Houston's Gifford Nielsen on the run Oilers have to swallow another tough defeat

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns' Coach Sam Rutigliano wasn't too pleased about barely winning, and Houston Oilers' Coach Chuck Studley was downright upset about barely losing.

"It's difficult to accept," Studley said after his Oilers lost their 16th straight National Football League game Sunday, a 25-19 overtime decision. "After every close game you sit down and try to analyze it. It's hard. Last week, we had an opportunity to win and couldn't. Each week, it becomes more difficult, more oppressive."

The loss was the second straight in overtime for the Oilers, 0-9 this season, who lost 13-10 to Kansas City a week earlier.

Cleveland, 5-4, which snapped a two-game losing streak, needed a last-minute field goal from Matt Bahr to send the contest into overtime. Rookie running back Boyce Green, who finished with 107 yards rushing — all in the second half — booted 20 yards for the winning touchdown with: 26 left in the extra period.

The run was designed to move the ball into good field goal position after Mike Whitwell had intercepted Houston quarterback Gifford Nielsen on the previous play. But Green, an 11th-round draft pick from Carson Newman, slipped through a hole at the line and then fought his way to the end zone.

"The guy's got great vision," said Browns' Coach Sam Rutigliano. "I think this guy is something special."

Green's play was one of the few things

Rutigliano liked about the game. He disliked having to gamble on three separate occasions — twice when the Browns ran for first downs on fourth-down plays in their own territory, and once when they faked a field goal and scored a touchdown to tie the game 10-10 late in the first half.

"I don't like to play football like that," Rutigliano said. "But sometimes you have to."

"We were very lethargic (in the first half), like a team that was trying to be Houston's first win."

Rutigliano tried to awaken his club by having quarterback Paul McDonald — substiting for the sore-armed Brian Sipe — throw a 14-yard TD pass to tackle Doug Dieken on the fake field goal with 25 seconds to go in the first half. Dieken, who scored the first touchdown of his 13-year career, was lined up as a tight end.

"I wanted to spike it or throw it into the stands, but that would have cost me $50," he said. "Being an offensive lineman, I couldn't afford that."

Bahr hit the first of his four field goals, a 37-yarder six minutes into the game, to put Cleveland up 3-0. The Oilers, playing without injured fullback Earl Campbell, came back on the first of two scoring receptions by Mike Renfro, a 19-yarder with four minutes left in the period.

Houston's Florian Kempf, who would later miss a key extra point, booted a 19-yard field goal to put Houston up 10-3 in the second period.

Four-birdie finish gives McCumber closing victory

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Mark McCumber became golf's eighth two-time winner this season in the Pensacola Open, but the fond hopes of three players were denied in the season-closing event on the PGA Tour.

"I'm proud of the way I won," McCumber said after he solved a multiple-man scramble Sunday with a closing six-under-par 65 on the 7,093-yard Perdido Bay Country Club course.

He should have been. He came out of the pack with birdies on four of the last five holes, including the last three, to join Fuzzy Zoeller, Hal Sutton, Gil Morgan, Lanny Wadkins, Cal Peete, Seve Ballesteros and Jim Colbert as the game's double winners this season.

For the first time in tour history, there was not a three-time winner. (Two team events remain on the schedule. But they do not count on the official statistics.)

McCumber won his second of the year, and third of his career, with a 266 total, 18 under par. The victory was worth $45,000 from the total purse of $250,000 and boosted his season's earnings to a career-high $368,294.

"I have mixed emotions," he said. "I'm glad it's (the season) is over. It's been a long year."

"But I'm 35 under (par) for my last eight rounds. I've finished second and first. In a way, I wish there were a few more tournaments."

But the book was closed on the 1983 season. And it closed with Fuzzy Zoeller, Calvin Peete and Lyn Lott on the outside looking in.

"Disappointed? No," said Zoeller, who took his aching back into the final event of the season as the only man with a chance to overtake Player of the Year Hal Sutton — who did not play in Pensacola — as the season's leading money-winner.

Zoeller needed a finish of four or better to make it. He won $1,908 in a tie for 25th on a score of 71-298, and finished the year at $417,597. Sutton, the PGA champion, won the Arnold Palmer Trophy as the year's leading money-winner at $428,668.

Peete, the defending champion at Pensacola, came in needing a total score of 269 to go past Ray Floyd in scoring average, which determines the Vardon Trophy. He missed. Just Barely. Peete required a score of 65 in the last round to win it. He shot 67. Floyd won the Vardon with a 70.61 average. Peete, after 6,144 strokes for the season, had a 70.62 average.

Mark Lye, who led through the first two rounds, and Lon Hinkle came on to tie for second in the tournament at 270. Lye had a closing 65 and Hinkle 68. Peete was next at 271.

Redskins face Chargers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back John Riggins returns to the Washington Redskins' high-flying offense tonight against the battered San Diego Chargers, a team on the brink of disaster.

Coach Joe Gibbs said Riggins, out last week with a back injury, will replace Joe Washington as the starter in Washington's one-back offensive formation.

The Redskins, defending Super Bowl champions, need a victory to stay on the heels of the Dallas Cowboys, leaders of the NFC Eastern Division with an 8-1 record.

Washington, 6-2, is rated a three-point favorite over the Chargers, who are 3-5 and likely to be without All-Pro quarterback Dan Fouts for the second week in a row.

Fouts has a strained muscle in his right shoulder and a club spokesman said it is "99 percent certain" he won't play.

With Fouts out, four-year pro Ed Luther would make only the second start of his career. Last week, he was unable to produce a touchdown in a 14-6 loss at Denver.

"We've been getting ready for Fouts and that's what we'll continue to do," said Gibbs. "We'll make adjustments for Luther during the game if he is the quarterback."

Fouts is just one of San Diego's key casualties. Running backs Chuck Muncie and James Brooks are questionable and wide receiver Wes Chandler was sidelined earlier in the week with a bruised kidney.

The Chargers have not scored a touchdown in six quarters, but Luther is convinced that can't go on for long.

"I know what kind of potential is on this team," he said.

Luther has completed 32 of 63 passes for 299 yards and one touchdown. His efficiency rating is a lowly 43.3, compared to Fouts' 92.2.

The Redskins have won six of their last seven games and 14 of 16, but are 0-2 in Monday night games this year, losing to Dallas 31-30 and Green Bay 48-47.

But this time Washington, the league's highest scoring team, is facing the NFL's third-worst defense, a young unit that is coughing up 28 points per game.

THERE'S MORE TO DO THAN JUST EAT

"What do you want to do, Marty?"
"I don't know, what do you want to do?"
That's the way the conversation goes, and that's where many of our obesity problems start and are nurtured. Most likely our two conversants will decide that there really isn't too much to do except go out to dinner. After a good deal of discussion about the merits of various local gourmet palaces, they will decide on a restaurant. Then they will go and eat far more than they need...even when they are not really hungry.

Dining out is a popular social custom in an affluent society. In most cases, the restaurant has become the center of good conversation and happy companionship. But it is also a place where food is served. Food is hard to pass up when you are a compulsive or unconscious eater.

The appetizers look good, the entrees smell great, the sauces are delightful, and, the desserts are delicious. So it is easy to get fat, because you're taking in nutrition that is far beyond the requirements of your activities.

Doctors of chiropractic are certainly not against eating out. As one of the many fine restaurants we have in this country. But they do recommend that you avoid eating just to be eating-as so many of us have gotten into the practice of doing.

Divert your activities into outlets of a more constructive nature. Exercise that is recreational is an effective answer to the problem. It can be a very sociable activity, and at the same time provide a means for achieving tension release, improved muscle tone, better posture, better elimination, gladder regulation and a general balancing of the total body function.

See about activities. You will find that there is more to do than just eat. Once you stop consuming food just to be sociable and eat only when you are hungry, you will have less trouble with your weight and find that you will enjoy your food a great deal more.

This coming year you might meet a very unique individual who doesn't welcome many into his or her inner circle... allow others to do all of the thinking. Use your own judgment where decisions are called for. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Even though you are inventive and adventurous, it would be wise today not to tackle tasks which you lack the experience to handle. Let the experts do it. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Steer a distant course today from the complex financial problems into which a friend may try to draw you. You both could go down with the ship. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Indecisiveness could cause you complications today when dealing with others. Try to take a firm stand and hold to your position. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Much valuable time may be wasted today daydreaming or rationalizing. Strive to be realistic and practical when sizing up important matters. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your judgment in financial and commercial areas might not be up to par again today, so tread cautiously in these fields. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Disappointment is likely today if you expect others to drop what they are doing in order to cater to your whims. Be independent. Fend for yourself. County snubs help offer

DALLAS (AP) — A group of businessmen who serve on a citizens crime committee want to do something about thousands of unserved arrest warrants held by the Dallas County Sheriff's Department, but county officials say nothing can be done about the backlog — unless the warrants are dismissed.

The warrants committee of the Greater Dallas Crime Commission has been monitoring a growing number of outstanding warrants in the county for the past several years.

Officials said that there were 37,000 unserved criminal warrants in late 1982. By last month, the number was 54,000, according to sheriff's department records.

County commissioners say the number of unserved warrants has been in the tens of thousands for at least 10 years, but that the numbers are blown out of proportion because they represent incidents, not individuals.

A professional hot-check writer who writes 25 checks in Dallas County will have 25 warrants out for his arrest, commissioners said.

"This so-called backlog of warrants has been a political hot potato for too long — people really haven't analyzed it; they just get all upset and talk about 50,000 criminals on the streets when it's just not true," commissioner Jim Jackson said.

He recently wrote a letter to the crime commission to state the county commissioners' position on unserved warrants. Jackson was responding to telephone calls and letters from several crime commission members who have demanded that commissioners take immediate action to lower the numbers.

The state commission is a nonprofit organization of about 200 individuals and corporations who work in committees on issues affecting public safety.

"I think the response of the court basically is that they understand the complexity of the issue and they cannot concern themselves about the numbers," said Joseph Stedman, chairman of the board of Texas Commerce Bank Casa Linda.

"I appreciate that, but if you have 50,000 unserved warrants out there, someone should be concerned about that."

A sheriff's department breakdown on the types of warrants shows that 46,277 — or 86 percent — have no workable addresses. The violator has moved, has left the state or has lied about his address or the law enforcement agency has not taken the proper information, sheriff's officials said.

Felony warrants account for 16 percent of the total, and of those, more than half are warrants for people who are wanted on more than one offense, officials said.

Misdemeanor warrants account for the remaining 84 percent of the unserved warrants, records show, and half of those are also for people wanted on more than one offense.

Jackson said that a great number of misdemeanor warrants are for hot checks and have been forwarded to the sheriff's department after various precinct constables have been unable to serve them.

"We are the dropping place for all local law enforcement agencies," said Maj. A.D. McCurley, in charge of warrants for the sheriff's department. "And when they can't serve them, we usually can't serve them for the same reasons. And we have them here for years, until the district attorney's office authorizes us to drop them."

Panel says war on airborne drugs fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's war on airborne drug smugglers has turned into a kind of Keystone Cops operation because surveillance equipment is outmoded and law enforcement agencies aren't working together, a congressional study has concluded.

"Efforts to date to respond to drug smuggling have been uncoordinated, inadequate and temporary," said the report released over the weekend by the House Government Operations Committee.

The report was prepared by a subcommittee chaired by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla.

The administration has placed special emphasis on battling drug smugglers along the southern U.S. border, last year establishing a special anti-smuggling task force in South Florida and this year extending the effort nationwide through creation of a National Narcotics Border Interdiction System (NNBIS).

The committee said the NNBIS "has tremendous potential" but that, so far, "the drug smuggling threat has overwhelmed this nation's capacity to contain it."

The Customs Service, which plays a major role in intercepting drug smugglers, "lacks leadership and coordination at the national level" and is not given sufficient support by other agencies, the committee said.

Of the 63 aircraft operated by Customs, some "are barely airworthy" and only 15 are suitable for use in spotting and catching drug smugglers, it said.

In the Houston region, a jet used to intercept smugglers has a special radar but "this radar has no parts supply inventory, so when parts are required" it is often necessary to wait long periods "for the part to be manufactured," the committee said.

In the same region, which stretches from Louisiana to California, Customs "frequently deploys its (ground) radars in the same locations, thus allowing all but the most uninformed smuggler the advantage of knowing the area to avoid," the report said.

It also said that the nation's drug intelligence center in El Paso, Texas, provides insufficient tactical intelligence on smugglers. During one visit to the center, committee members saw operational maps that "displayed information four and five years old," the report said.

In New Orleans, a hangar for anti-smuggling aircraft "has large holes in the roof covered with cardboard," it said. "During inclement weather, Customs personnel have to cover their files with plastic trash bags to keep their records dry."

In South Florida, the Navy last year promised to provide sophisticated E2-C reconnaissance aircraft 50 hours a month to help spot smuggler aircraft. But hours the planes spent on "stand-by" at their base in Norfolk, Va. were also counted toward the total and officials at Customs headquarters "were unaware that the E2-Cs were not actually flying," the committee said.

It said that "because of poor coordination between the Navy and the Customs Service, there were some months in which there was no coverage at all, and others in which there were only a few hours flown."

In the Bahamian Islands, the United States provided officials with 12 high frequency radios to set up a communications net to help snare smugglers but "these radios were of Korean War vintage, and only one ever worked," the committee said.

The State Department also "had offered the Bahamians a 40-year-old aircraft to be used to move bust teams, but the Bahamians wisely declined the offer," the report said.

The Air Force has been making AWACS surveillance aircraft available to assist Customs but "there has been a significant failure in coordination between these two agencies which has resulted in the non-use" of the aircraft, the committee said.

It said the Air Force had set up meetings to maximize use of the AWACS but that "the Customs Service chose not to routinely attend those meetings."

The military has shown increased willingness to help in anti-smuggling efforts but its "potential for participation remains far greater than its contribution to date," the committee said.

It also said that Customs has not received enough assistance from the federal Drug Enforcement Agency, which has primary responsibility for developing intelligence on smugglers.

The DEA "must rearrange its foreign investigative priorities," the committee said.

Texas shrimpers are expecting poor harvest

HOUSTON (AP) — Inclement weather and Mexico's 200-mile territorial waters jurisdiction will contribute largely to a decline in Texas' shrimp harvest, experts say.

Preliminary projections based on total catches through September indicated shrimpers will net about 40.5 million pounds, or 20 percent below the amount industry experts consider a good season for the Gulf of Mexico.

Prices also have dropped, with large shrimp selling off the boat for about $5 a pound. Last year, the price ranged from $6 to $6.50 a pound.

"There's no real optimism from the economic point of view that it's going to be a good year," said Ralph Rayburn of the Texas Shrimp Association, which represents 425 of the 2,000 shrimpers and about 100 shrimp-related industries.

Texas shrimpers last year netted 44.5 million pounds of shrimp and sold it for $175.6 million. The catch in 1981 was a near-record 60 million pounds, but it sold for only $165.3 million.

This year's catch through September was 32 million.

"We see catches of 150 to 200 pounds a night," Rayburn said. "Shrimpers reach the break-even point with an average catch of 150 pounds a night."

Experts say inclement weather and the 200-mile territorial water jurisdiction claimed by Mexico are largely responsible for the decline.

About 350 shrimp boats worked in Mexico's waters until 1976. Until then, many American vessels "worked the Mexican waters when the catches were down on the U.S. side," said Kenny Vandergrift, owner of a Freeport-based shrimping fleet.

"We know that there are a lot of shrimp there. When you move that many boats into the Texas-Louisiana coast, it has to have an impact," Vandergrift said.

"We've offered to use Mexican crewmen, that Mexico share in the catch. We've offered technology and parts — 80 percent of their shrimping fleet is inoperable," he said.

However, opponents claim that the offers are only aimed at exploiting Mexican waters when American shrimpers are in a bind.

Man scavenges a home

DALLAS (AP) — Robert Bellamy holds fragments of his memories within the walls of his eastside home: a bit of recycled ceramics here, some scavenged bricks there and even a few bicuspid.

cost," said Bellamy, the owner of Exterior Designs Landscape Co. "I do like recycling for recycling's sake. But junk for junk's sake really appeals to me."

Bellamy bought the property about a year ago, after the main house had been torn down, leaving only a garage apartment at the rear of the lot, which he decided to renovate.

"See this piece," he says, pointing to a smooth cement chunk. "I got this from Central Expressway."

Politicians aware of unused 'rocks'

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the stump speech he's been delivering across the country, black leader Jesse Jackson has a metaphor about "rocks just laying around." Every astute politician in America is aware of these "rocks."

They are the untapped black vote. For effect, Jackson calls the roll and compares the number of unregistered blacks with Ronald Reagan's winning margin in key states.

Alabama, carried by Reagan with 17,000 votes, has 287,000 unregistered blacks. Arkansas, Reagan's by 5,000, has 87,000. South Carolina, where Reagan won by a margin of 11,000, has 328,000 unregistered blacks. New York, carried by Reagan with 165,000 votes, has 915,000 unregistered blacks.

Jackson says these are rocks some David can hurl at some Goliath.

Whether or not all those blacks register to vote, the numbers are registering in people's minds. And the effects are making themselves felt even outside the political arena.

No surprise there.

It may be a sign of the times that in 1983 a black man went into space, a black woman was crowned Miss America, a black leader will be memorialized with a national holiday and Jackson is weighing a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Radical party puts an end to Peronist era

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Raul Alfonsin of the centrist Radical Civic Union won the presidential race in elections to replace Argentina's 7-year-old military regime, returns today showed. The victory ended the Peronist Party's four-decade domination of national politics.

With more than 80 percent of ballots counted, Alfonsin, a 56-year-old lawyer and former congressman, had 52.6 percent of the popular vote compared to Peronist candidate Italo Luder's 39 percent.

Alfonsin captured 6,155,234 votes of a total of 11,701,347 in returns from 52,184 of the 67,561 polling stations. Luder, a former senator, received 4,565,991 on behalf of the labor-based Peronists.

Candidates of 10 other parties trailed far behind. Oscar Alende was third in the balloting with just 278,042 votes, or 2.4 percent.

The final count, with more than 14 million ballots cast, was not expected until later today.

A jubilant, banner-waving crowd of thousands of supporters cheered Alfonsin as he arrived early today at the Radical party headquarters.

Alfonsin leads a left-of-center faction in the Radicals, a middle-class, fundamentally social democratic party.

In a speech from the party headquarters' balcony, he called on Argentines "to raise the flag of national unity, the flag of democratic coexistence and the flag of social justice."

"We're setting out for a new Argentina that is going to struggle for human dignity," he also told supporters.

The six-year presidential term is scheduled to begin Jan. 30. But military president Gen. Reynaldo Bignone has acknowledged the date may be moved up.

Luder conceded a "a winning tendency of the Radicals," but said he would not definitively concede defeat until all the returns were in. He said he had no immediate plans to meet with Alfonsin, but pledged that Peronists "will support democracy, whatever party wins."

Projections gave control of the 254-seat Chamber of Deputies to the Radicals. The 48 senators comprising the National Congress' other house are to be elected by provincial legislatures on Nov. 25.

Earlier, a bitter Peronist Party vice president Lorenzo Miguel had accused election officials of manipulating the disclosure of returns to hide a Peronist lead.

Miguel effectively heads the Peronist Party. Titular head Isabel Peron, third wife of party founder and three-time President Juan Domingo Peron, lives in self-exile in Spain.

The Peronist Party had won every previous election in which it was allowed to participate since it was founded in 1945.

Early today, thousands of Radicals celebrating around a 150-foot-tall obelisk in city's downtown were joined by columns of Peronist and Intransigent youths in a harmonious celebration of the impending return to democracy. The youths chanted, "Argentina, Argentina."

Marine hostage in Iran family waiting again

SEAFORD, Del. (AP) — A pair of clean Marine camouflage pants hangs on a line in the back yard. Inside, wood crackles in the fireplace, an old movie is playing on TV, and a mother waits.

The phone rings often, always shrilly. Jackie Persinger always answers. But not one call has brought news of her son's safety.

She is just one mother of one Marine who left Camp Lejeune, N.C., last week to join the invasion of Grenada. But she has waited before — for 444 days, when her son and 51 other Americans were held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Iran three years ago.

The name of Sgt. Gregory A. Persinger, 25, hasn't appeared on any list of missing or wounded in Grenada, and he may already be among those Marines pulled out of the Caribbean and sent to Beirut.

She worries, "but so do all the other mothers," she said Sunday at the family's home. "Of course it's tough. But it's tough for everyone. Greg is not any kind of special hero. He's just a Marine, one of many doing their job."

Politely, evenly, she tells callers she hasn't heard from her son. No phone call. No letter. But she says little else, keeping her own counsel during a week that has shocked the world as the Iranian hostage crisis once did.

"I'm proud of him, but I'm not the only mother of one of those boys," she explained.

Her husband, Lawrence, notices the strain. "She's here all day with the phone ringing. By the time I get home, she's a bundle of nerves," he said.

"With all that's going on in Beirut and Grenada," Greg's father said, being the parent of a Marine "isn't easy. I'll tell you."

Only 30 miles away, in Dover, other parents gathered Sunday for one of the first memorial services for soldiers killed in Beirut and Grenada.

Not all of the calls to the Persinger home have been kind. One anonymous caller "said he wished Greg was dead because of all the attention Greg's gotten," Mrs. Persinger said.

Greg Persinger became a local celebrity, as did all the hostages in Iran, when he returned to this southern Delaware community of 5,000, the Persingers' home for 20 years.

Persinger signed up for another four years with the Marines and was assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Indonesia before his transfer to Camp Lejeune. His mother doesn't regret Persinger's decision to risk his life again in assignments often far from home.

"It's what he wanted to do," she said. "He's an adult, and he can decide these things for himself."

She may one day have another Marine in the family. The camouflage pants hanging out to dry belong to the youngest of the family's five children, 18-year-old David, a college freshman.

"In about two years, I'm going to sign up for the Marines," David said. Asked why, he shrugs. "They're the best."
