Pampa businessman sues state

Crossroads owner brings suit against prosecutor, state police

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

AMARILLO — A former Pampa salvage lot owner has filed a $2.4 million federal lawsuit accusing former Gray County prosecutor David Hamilton and a state investigator of ruining his auto salvage business.

Woody and Andrea Mitchell, 1105 Christine St., allege in the suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court that officials conspired to keep them from their property while Mitchell, 44, was charged with participation in an alleged auto theft ring stretching from the Panhandle to Dallas.

Named in the suit are former Assistant

District Attorney Hamilton, the Texas Department of Public Safety and investigator Larry Kocurek of the DPS auto theft division in Hurst.

In the suit, Mitchell seeks $2 million in punitive damages against the officials, $260,000 in actual damages and $100,000 in attorneys' fees.

Mitchell was arrested Dec. 24, 1985, and later indicted in Gray and Randall counties on charges involving the suspected ring. Authorities alleged that vehicle identification numbers were being stripped off wrecked vehicles at the salvage yard — Crossroads Auto Salvage of 120 S. Hobart St. — and placed on vehicles and vehicle parts reported stolen from the Dallas suburb of Garland.

In a court hearing a month later, Hamilton seized control of the salvage lot, claiming it was a "criminal instrument" used in connection with the alleged theft ring.

Mitchell eventually pleaded no contest to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in Randall County in exchange for a five-year deferred adjudication.

All charges pending in Gray County against him, his wife and Crossroads were dismissed by District Attorney Guy Hardin after Hardin fired Hamilton in December. Hardin said there was insufficient evidence to try the cases.

Shortly after the dismissals, Mitchell sent Gray County commissioners a letter demanding payment of $170,000 for 111 items he claimed disappeared from the salvage yard while prosecutor Hamilton had control over it. The letter claimed that Hamilton acted as an agent of the county when he took over Crossroads.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said Monday that representatives of an Amarillo law firm hired by the county to respond to the letter met with Mitchell's attorney, Robert Garner of Amarillo, and were told that the county probably wouldn't be sued.

In the federal suit against Hamilton, Kocurek and the DPS, the Mitchells allege that:

■ Kocurek seized four vehicles without checking to see if they were actually stolen.

■ Kocurek didn't notify Citizen's Bank and Trust Co. of Pampa, the lienholder on the vehicles, that the vehicles had been seized.

■ The vehicles have never been returned to Mitchell. Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts ruled in April that the vehicles rightfully belong to the Mitchells, but the

Area residents react to Mass with John Paul

SAN ANTONIO — While more than 300,000 people flooded a field west of San Antonio Sunday to celebrate the visit of Pope John Paul II, Pampa residents Bill Haley and Dan and Grace McGrath went to serve.

Haley, a member of the Pampa Knights of Columbus, was a volunteer usher for the Pope's Sunday morning Mass. It was his job to keep the paths clear for the popemobile as it pattered up to the altar, and to provide water for celebrants overcome by heat.

The McGraths joined their daughter and about 500 other Texas Catholics as Eucharistic ministers handing out communion wafers — or host — to the Mass goers.

After the multitude celebrated Mass with Pope John Paul II, Canadian physician Dr. Teddy Darocha and 1,000 other Polish Texans visited with the Polish pope, the former Karol Joseph Wojtyla Darocha joined Pampans Charles, Lorraine and Susan Albus; Groom's Henry and Ramona Urbanczyk and seven White Deer residents in a private celebration of the pope's Polish upbringing. John Paul II was the first non-Italian pope in 455 years.

Haley said he was one of the volunteers who responded when Amarillo Bishop Leroy T. Mathiesen called for volunteer ushers from the area Knights of Columbus.

The prospect of standing for six hours during the Mass intimidated Haley, but he got over it.

"The weather was quite hot," said Haley, who got a sunburn from the Mass. "But every minute and a half, you got a wonderful breeze that would come and pass. I didn't notice the humidity."

As usher, Haley was responsible for keeping other people from falling victim to the heat.

"I saw several people in my section, and I would come and pour water on their heads," he said.

Part of Haley's duties included grasping the hands of other ushers and forming a barricade to keep the crowd from blocking the pope's motorcade.

"I had to face the people as the popemobile passed," Haley said, stretching his arms out to show how the barricade was formed. "But I did manage to turn around and see the pope."

Haley figured the pope's car came within 10 feet of him.

He added that the pope took his little car — used to protect him from would-be assailants — through the crowd and waved.

Haley said the pope spoke in a broken English that "was interesting and fun to listen to."

Unlike other area residents, Haley did not spend the night in San Antonio. He went by

Pampa firm lands deal for instant french fries

A Pampa firm has signed a multi-million dollar contract that will bring vending machines for french fries and chicken nuggets to the Panhandle area, along with at least 80 jobs.

MetroTex Investments Co. announced it has solidified a $19.9 million contract with Kwik Fries International of Colorado Springs, Colo., to offer 217 franchises throughout Texas, including the Panhandle area.

The company, with headquarters currently located in Pampa, will be moving to Amarillo in the next 30 to 45 days.

MetroTex Vice President Mark Eastham said the franchises will provide at least 80 jobs in the Panhandle area and 600 throughout the state.

Eastham initially purchased the rights to 14 franchises in the Amarillo area and recently negotiated the purchase of other franchises in San Antonio, Houston, El Paso and Fort Worth. The five cities will be among the major distribution points in Texas, he said.

Kwik Fries plans to become a nationwide supplier to the vending machines that provide deep-fried fast foods. Kwik Fries has signed a contract with Micro Metals Inc., also of Colorado Springs, to build 2,500 vending machines in the next 10 months.

Eastham said each franchise includes 21 machines, a van and a portable computer for each selling area with a population of approximately 50,000 people. The vending machines provide deep-fried french fries and chicken nuggets, along with various condiments.

Franchises will be offered at a meeting at 7 p.m. today at the Sheraton Hotel, 1-40 West in Amarillo. Eastham said many of the 14 Amarillo-area franchises have already been contracted but others are still available.

Jim Henningsen, Kwik Fries finance consultant, announced the signing of the contract Monday in Amarillo. Henningsen said the new contract with the Pampa

Computer spits errors in Lefors property values

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

LEFORS — Despite a revised estimate of taxable property values received from the Gray County Appraisal District after the tax rate was set last month, Lefors residents won't see any increase in the city property tax rate this year.

The Lefors City Council in August had set the tax rate at 32 cents per $100 valuation, the same as the current rate.

But City Secretary Yvonne Pittman reported Monday night that the city had since received a revised estimate from the appraisal district, with corrected figures. She said apparently the first set of estimates had had some errors because of computer problems.

However, the revised figures, with updated and more correct information, hadn't changed the taxable property valuation by more than a few thousand dollars, she said. Consequently, the tax rate is not affected much at all by the revised figures, she told council members during their regular monthly meeting.

Pittman said the revisions changed the effective tax rate "just a little."

In the figures used by the council in August to set the tax rate, the effective tax rate had been set at 31.83 cents per $100. With the revisions, the new effective tax rate is 32.70 cents, Pittman said.

The effective tax rate is the amount that must be levied to produce the same amount of tax revenue as received in the preceding year.

The 1987 tax base is estimated at $7.7 million, down slightly from the $8 million listed by the GCAD for 1986. The 32-cent tax rate will generate approximately $24,500 in revenues for the city.

The owner of a home valued at $50,000 will pay $160 in property taxes to the city, the same as in 1986.

In other matters Monday, the council approved hiring Pampa attorney Rick Harris as the new city attorney. Harris replaces former City Attorney Mark Buzard, also of Pampa, who submitted his resignation to the council last month.

Harris said he is looking forward to working with the council and appreciates the opportunity for service to Lefors.

Pittman reported a Texas Railroad Commission inspector had visited the city last week. After his inspection, the RRC representative said he could not find any leaks in the city's gas pipelines. He said there was only a 0.6 percent loss of gas in the system.

Pittman said the RRC inspector did cite the city for two minor violations, but those are already being corrected.

The council was supposed to discuss matters concerning the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department's efforts to establish a morgue facility for autopsies in the city. But no department representative showed up to present the information on liability insurance that had been discussed in August.

Harris said he was aware that the department was planning to obtain the required insurance and that a contract regarding the facility is under negotiations with Gray County.

In other business, the council approved bills for payment.

Hemphill board rejects county appraisal offer

CANADIAN — Hemphill County Central Appraisal District board members refused to play what one board member called "political football" and bring the appraisal district under the control of the county.

The board made its declaration Monday after Hemphill County Tax Assessor-Collector Gladene Woodside reported that the county handle property appraisals for $125,000 — about $50,000 less than the $176,541 budget the district adopted Monday.

Woodside presented her report to the board at its regular meeting at the request of Hemphill County commissioners, who asked her in July how much money the county could save by taking over the district's appraisal duties. The district does property appraisals for the county, the Canadian school district and city, the Hemphill County Hospital District and Allison School.

Store clerk reports rape on north side

A convenience store clerk reported being raped at knifepoint in north Pampa late Monday.

The 22-year-old woman told police a man entered the store on North Hobart Street about 11:30 p.m. Monday, according to the report filed by Patrolman Robbie Brown.

The man pulled a knife and forced the clerk to walk with him to the alley between the 2000 blocks of Coffee and Hamilton streets, where he sexually assaulted her, police said.

The man then walked north from the area, police said.

The woman was taken to Coronado Hospital for examination, Detective Gary Boydston said. Volunteers from Tralee Crisis Center assisted.

Police described the suspect as white and about 24 years old. Boydston declined to offer a more thorough description, saying it could hinder his investigation.

No suspects have been arrested in the rape.

Auditorium board announces revue

The first performance of Pampa's Top O' Texas Revue is scheduled next month. M.K. Brown Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson told the auditorium's advisory board Monday.

The revue, made up of high school-age singers and dancers, will perform at a United Way check-in meeting in October, Parkerson said. He said performances also have been scheduled at a mall in Amarillo and the group has been invited to perform in Colorado next year.

Parkerson said he hopes to establish the revue as ambassadors for Pampa and the auditorium and is working with the Pampa Chamber of Commerce on tying the group in with tourism and convention efforts. "It's like a Six Flags show of entertainers, with special guests occasionally from around the area," he said.

Forty students auditioned for the revue, and 22 are still currently practicing with the group, Parkerson said. Eventually, he added, the group probably will be cut to 16.

Once the group is established, he said, he hopes to present a monthly revue show at the auditorium.

In other business, the board authorized Parkerson to charge for the use of the auditorium's new sound equipment. Non-profit groups will be charged $100 while for-profit groups will be charged $200, under the test policy, which will be in effect for six months.

Groups will be charged $50 to use the new equipment in the Heritage Room.

Parkerson said there still will be no charge to groups who use just a limited amount of sound equipment.

The board also:

- set lighting, leveling of outdoor patio areas and minor repairs to the auditorium structure as budget priorities in 1987-88;
- accepted reappointing Clotilde Thompson and Mary Wilson to the board; and
- heard a report on July 4 activities at the auditorium.

MetroTex, a recently formed landscape and apartment maintenance contracting company, is presently seeking a 3,000-square-foot building for relocating its headquarters to Amarillo.

Eastham said he became interested in acquiring the franchise rights for MetroTex following a visit to Colorado Springs in March. There he observed a Kwik Fries machine in an office building.

He first purchased the rights to the 14 franchises in the Amarillo master franchise region and later negotiated the purchase of four other master franchises in Texas.

The prototype machines, each weighing 1,300 pounds, are designed to produce individual servings of hot french fries and chicken nuggets within 40 to 60 seconds. The machines also allow for selection of condiments, including salt or ketchup for the fries and honey, barbecue or sweet-and-sour sauce for the nuggets.

Kwik Fries representatives say they will use choice suppliers to insure quality control on the potatoes and chicken nuggets dispensed from the machines.

held the wafers of bread that were served to the celebrants. They also kept the pendants they were designating them as servers. The pendants and the ciborium bore the symbol of two abstract hands supporting a human figure with a cross.

The McGraths believe these covered pots may be collectors' items and valuable heirlooms — too valuable to be used for everyday cooking or planting chores.

"But we can use these during Eucharist at church," he said.

McGrath recalled that each server at the Mass was to give 200 wafers.

"But we only gave out 50," he said. "We were sort of on the end."

He explained that the celebrants lined up to receive the Eucharist. "It took no more than 10 minutes."

The McGraths' bus arrived at the site at 5 a.m. Sunday.

"We had to go through a baggage security and a metal detector," he said, adding that they went another mile from the security checkpoint to their assigned places.

Mrs. McGrath recalled that the pope spoke in English and Spanish.

"A Cuban girl from Tech said the pope's Spanish was better than his English," she said, adding that "just hearing the sermon" was the highlight of the service.

To McGrath, the highlight was the entrance of the pope. "He got within 20 feet of everybody," he said.

For Darocha, the visit seemed like seeing a friend from his old neighborhood.

The pope visited with the Polish Texans to honor Panna Maria, considered the oldest Polish settlement in the United States.

"I was brought up in the same area, the same district that he was," said Darocha, a native of Poland. "I opened my practice here in Canadian in 1978, the same day he became pope. It was a good omen."

Although the coordinators of the Panhandle Polish delegation made reservations last year, Darocha was informed only a month ago that he, too, had been invited.

"I had two weeks to get ready," he said.

Darocha recalled that security was tight and "traffic was terrible."

The doctor found the visit, which included a series of Polish folk songs and a five-minute speech from the pontiff, a memorable event for three reasons.

"One, patriotic — as a Pole, I think he was a great leader," Darocha said. "Two — he's more and more popular."

"And then there is the present situation in the world," Darocha said. "There is a lot of unhappiness. The pope gets people to unite. He talks to the Jew, he talks to (Kurt Waldheim) the Austrian. The world needs someone like him."

duties for the county and the hospital district. City and school taxes are collected by the Canadian Tax Service, which is operated by Hemphill County Appraiser James McCarty.

City-school tax collection was not part of the county proposal.

Woodside, who was not one of the proponents of the county's idea, reported that her office would need to spend $37,379 in salaries and $870,020 in operating expenses to take on appraisal duties. She noted that she would have to hire a field appraiser at $15,000.

Abraham said there had apparently been a problem between the district and Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober.

"If we don't like James McCarty, let's fire him," Abraham remarked, adding that the district system should stay intact.

Gober attended the meeting but said nothing about the county proposal.

Precinct 4 Hemphill County Commissioner and appraisal board member Robert Forrest also said little during the discussion.

McCarty blasted the county figures.

"It's ridiculous to think the county can do what it takes four of us to do by hiring one additional employee," he said.

The reported "savings" also made no difference to Abraham.

Representatives of the city, school and hospital district who attended the meeting say they favored the current system. None spoke.

Auto workers still talking

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. and union leaders drew back from the brink of a walkout and agreed to continue discussing a contract for 104,000 workers after "substantial progress" was made just before the strike deadline.

United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber announced that the contract, which was to expire at 11:59 p.m. Monday, had been extended until midnight tonight and a decision on further extensions would be made each day.

Talks were to resume today.

"We wouldn't be taking this course of action if we didn't believe it was still possible to reach agreement within a reasonable period of time," Bieber said.

"This means that we have made substantial progress on our central issue of job security. It does not mean that there aren't major issues left to be resolved."

Peter Pestillo, vice president of the nation's No. 2 automaker, praised the UAW for its willingness to continue talks.

Neither Ford nor UAW national officials would say why they decided to continue talking, but Richard Downey, president of UAW Local 897 in Buffalo, N.Y., said he was told by union representatives close to the talks that Ford made a new offer on job security and it will take time for union officials to analyze it.

"It looks pretty decent," Downey said. "It will take that long to sift through it, but it looks pretty good." He declined to give details of the proposal.

The UAW's last strike against Ford, in 1976, lasted 28 days and involved 160,000 hourly U.S. workers.

FSLIC has more than $400 million in assets to sell

DALLAS (AP)—Need a skyscraper? Or perhaps a gracious Southern home? The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. said Monday that such properties — part of the portfolio of failed institutions — will be offered for sale soon at markdowns of about 50 percent. Prices range from $150,000 to $55 million, and sales will be on an all-cash basis. In a new marketing step, the FSLIC opened a center to sell more than $400 million in real estate and mortgage loan portfolios acquired from failed institutions.

The properties will be listed at the FSLIC Southern Regional Office in Dallas. Interested buyers can browse through a slide show at the center advertising the properties. "This marketing center represents FSLIC's intensified commitment to provide investors with improved access to, and information about, available properties and the process for acquiring them," said Mary Creedon, deputy director of the FSLIC. The center is FSLIC's first such marketing operation, according to a prepared statement released by the corporation. Despite Texas' softened real estate market, queries have been on the increase and there seems to be slight upturn in the market, said Tom Procopio, FSLIC southern region director. "When I got here in May last year we only had a trickle of inquiries for properties, but we are receiving about 400 inquiries a month and it's going up every month," Procopio said. More than 900 properties are available — including undeveloped land, housing developments and commercial buildings obtained from 16 failed thrift institutions located throughout the FSLIC's southern region — Ms. Creedon said. Approximately 70 percent of the properties are from Texas and the rest are from Alabama, Arkansas, California, Florida, Missouri and Nevada. FSLIC assets managed by private contractors and the Federal Asset Disposition Association also will be displayed in the marketing center. All together the 13,000 assets total about $1.5 billion, Procopio said. Nationwide the FSLIC has about $7 billion in assets, he said.

Buyers can obtain a list of available properties and make inquiries through a letter of intent or on a standard contract form. "We use sound business strategies to get the best price for each asset and to facilitate the process," Procopio said. "In the southern region, we have consistently obtained prices in excess of the appraised value of the properties." Procopio said the prices on the available properties have been marked down about 50 percent from their original market value to maximize the value of each asset.

MHMR and plaintiffs reach settlement in old lawsuit

DALLAS (AP) — Both sides in a dispute over conditions in Texas mental hospitals are pleased with a settlement to a 13-year-old lawsuit. "I think it's an agreement that will benefit the mentally ill citizens in Texas," said Dr. Gary Miller, state commissioner of mental health and mental retardation. Legal Services attorney Margo Michels, representing the plaintiffs, said the agreement appears to be a sincere effort by the state to improve conditions for patients in state hospitals. "We all felt very positive about this particular negotiation," she said. "We see it, and I think the state sees it as a victory." The agreement between plaintiffs and the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation also was signed by a special panel reviewing implementation of a previous agreement in 1981. As part of the agreement, filed here Monday with U.S. District Court Judge Barefoot Sanders, state officials agreed to increase staff at some mental hospitals. The agreement also stipulated transfers for mentally retarded clients who no longer need hospitalization. The transfer to a community facility would occur within six months of the time it is determined that the client does not need hospitalization.

In a statement released in Austin, TDMHMR said Sanders issued an order in which he stated the agreement appeared to address the issues raised by the review panel, and said he would act after receiving comments from the U.S. Justice Department and Texas State Employees Union. Kent Johnson, the department's director of legal services, said the plaintiffs had asked Sanders to defer action on a motion for contempt as a result of the agreement. The statement did not specify the amount of additional staff, but said those hired will be placed in units for clients with multiple disabilities, the department said. Also included in the court agreement are stipulations on hiring, training and peer review of doctors, nurses and other staff. The agreement stems from a 1974 lawsuit alleging that mentally ill and mentally retarded persons were not receiving appropriate treatment in Texas state hospitals. The review panel was named to monitor the original agreement approved by the federal court in 1981. "This was a hotly-contested agreement and there have been some negotiations, but they were all positive. We all hope it will bring this lawsuit to an end," said David Pharis, who served on the review panel.

Pediatrician says reports he is AIDS carrier ruined his business

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — A pediatrician said he will be forced to close his practice in this east Dallas suburb because of the hysteria created by reports he is infected with the AIDS virus. Since Friday, when it was revealed in media reports that he tested positive for the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus, patients have been calling to cancel appointments, Dr. Robert J. Huse said. Jennifer Skinner, the mother of two of Huse's patients, was unsympathetic Monday to the doctor's plight. "I want him crucified," Mrs. Skinner told the Dallas Times Herald. "I really don't care if it ruins his practice. I don't want him to go somewhere else to treat other little babies." Debbie McWhorter, another Mesquite parent who took her children to Huse, said she was "shocked and angry" after learning that her pediatrician had been diagnosed as an AIDS carrier in 1985. "He should have told us back in '85 he was carrying the virus," Mrs. McWhorter said. Mrs. Skinner and Mrs. McWhorter said they have been contacting the parents of Huse's patients in an effort to form a group that will seek a mandatory AIDS tests for doctors and a requirement that doctors must tell their patients if they test positive. Huse said his three-doctor practice has between 3,000 and 4,000 patients.

Huse said he was diagnosed as having HIV, a designation given the AIDS virus in July 1985, but never told his patients because he felt he wasn't a threat to their health. "I didn't feel I was contagious and I felt it was a privacy matter," he said. Huse said the disclosure has hurt him emotionally and professionally. "It has very much changed my life. I won't be able to continue in pediatrics," said the 44-year-old doctor. He published a letter in the Mesquite News asking his patients not to leave him. "I hope that my patients and their parents will not be irrationally fearful of coming back to me for pediatric care," the letter stated. But when only three patients had shown up by Monday afternoon and many more were calling to cancel, he said he decided he must go into a different medical field. He said he is considering working with AIDS patients. People with AIDS or carriers of the virus are greatly mistreated, Huse said Monday. "It shows a lack of compassion which is the hallmark of this country," he said. "People should remember the story of the good Samaritan." Huse sought a temporary restraining order last week against the Mesquite News after he learned it intended to publish a story on his attempt to stop a former roommate from spreading allegations that he is suffering from AIDS. A state district judge rejected the request.

Mattox says contest with Richards for governor will divide Democrats

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says if Treasurer Ann Richards runs against him for governor in 1990, it will divide the Texas Democratic Party. "I just think it would be an expensive, divisive-type matter," Mattox said Monday. "You have a set group of people that support people within the party, and if you have two candidates trying to get support, by definition it's divisive." Mattox, who has all but announced for governor, said he thinks Ms. Richards will change her mind about running. "I doubt very seriously if she's going to be a candidate, when all is said and done," Mattox said. "But ... if she wants to bring about that kind of confrontation in the Democratic Party, I guess that's a decision that she, of course, is able to make." Mattox declined to assess the threat Ms. Richards would pose as an opponent. "She's not an opponent yet," he said. "Until we get into a posture of an open campaign, I don't see any point in discussing the matter." Ms. Richards, who spent several weeks testing the political waters before telling The Associated Press on Sunday night that she will run for governor, said that only unanticipated developments could keep her out of the race. She said she has received "a lot of enthusiastic support." Ms. Richards became the first major-party candidate to declare a definite intention to run. Mattox said he probably will announce after the 1988 presidential election. "Some politicians get into races without having the support of the people, and I don't intend to do that," Mattox said. "I want to make sure the support's out there before I make any kind of official announcement." Mattox said he believes he now has the support to run. Lt. Governor Bill Hobby and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros were considered possible Democratic candidates until each recently announced he would not seek the job. Republican Governor Bill Clements has said he would not seek re-election in 1990. Ms. Richards said she would be happy to run on a Democratic ticket with Comptroller Bob Bullock, who last week announced for lieutenant governor. Mattox speculated that Ms. Richards decided to run for governor rather than lieutenant governor because "Bullock getting into the lieutenant governor's race has just made her unwilling to take on that responsibility for running in that office." Bullock said he saw Ms. Richards in a state parking lot recently, and she said, "Hey, Bullock. I want you to know the governor's race is not over."

Prison board tackling overcrowding problem

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — In an effort to curb inmate crowding, the Texas Prison Board gave the prison director the authority to make restrictions on admissions. The board Monday authorized director Jim Lynaugh to anticipate inmate crowding and implement new restrictions on counties that will reduce the number of inmates they send for admission. The restrictions probably will apply to the 10 most populous counties that account for most of the prison admissions, officials said. The Texas Department of Corrections has closed 21 times this year because inmate population exceeded 95 percent of capacity — a ceiling mandated by a federal court. The 27-unit prison system, the nation's third largest — behind California and New York — received about 475 inmates Monday in addition to the 1,100 it admitted Friday. Prison spokesman David Nunnelee said no new inmates would be accepted today. Population figures Monday showed 39,076 inmates, or 96.52 percent — 617 over the cap. About 134 inmates were released Monday, Nunnelee said.

Salt water, fuel oil being removed from the rusting Battleship Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 1.1 million gallons of salt water and fuel oil from the Battleship Texas is being removed in an effort to drain and refloat the rusting ship, officials said. Barges will be used to transport thousands of barrels of the fluid away, for disposal through industrial means, said Stratford Morris, director of the Battleship Texas Restoration Project. "They filled the fuel tanks and empty spaces, which we call voids, with bayou water to set the ship down hard on the mud of her berth so she wouldn't float into the shipping channel sometime and become a menace to navigation," Morris said. "This is really what's causing the internal deterioration now." The Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife expects the project, with the help of private interests, to take about three weeks. Once empty, the 73-year-old vessel, berthed for nearly 40 years at the San Jacinto Battleground State Historical Park near Houston, should rise several feet at dockside, he said. "When we remove the fluids, we expect the ship will have lifted between 3½ feet and 4 feet, and we'll be able to determine exactly from her draft what her stability characteristics are." Morris said draining the ship was the first step in a plan to ultimately see the dreadnought drydocked somewhere on the Gulf coast for structural repairs. "No shipyard on the Gulf has a lock on where we're going to go," said Morris.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Report shows sorry state of classrooms

Most educational studies have the staying power of Chinese food. But the recent report from the National Endowment for the Humanities regarding the sorry state of history and literature instruction in American public schools provides plenty of substance that ought to be digested by every school district throughout the nation.

Not since the spring of 1983, when the National Commission on Excellence in Education scored the mediocrity in U.S. public schools, has a report been so consistently on the mark as to their shortcomings and what should be done to correct their deficiencies.

NEH Chairman Lynne Cheney hits the ground running in the report's foreword when she notes that the humanities have been neglected in the educational-reform movement that has swept across the country during the last four years. She makes her case with a wealth of statistics that disclose an appalling ignorance among students concerning history and literature.

For example, more than two-thirds of the 17-year-olds surveyed could not place the Civil War within the correct half-century. Nor were they familiar with either the time or the significance of the Reformation or the Magna Carta. These students believe that Karl Marx's phrase: "From each according to his abilities, to each according to his needs" is contained in the U.S. Constitution. Likewise, most of them are unfamiliar with the works of Dante, Chaucer, Dostoevsky, Austen, Whitman, Hawthorne, Melville, and Cather.

How, Mrs. Cheney asks, can students who know virtually nothing about their cultural heritage make informed judgments about the present? The answer, of course, is that they cannot.

In order to reverse this ominous trend, she recommends a restructuring of anemic social studies and language-arts curricula to breathe some life into history and literature. She would begin by replacing courses that stifle the students' imagination with in-depth studies of the past and special emphasis on great authors. She would require that history and literature textbooks contain lively writing and original sources instead of the formulaic fare that is commonplace.

She would also give classroom teachers greater freedom to select the books used in their courses. This makes much more sense than leaving such decisions to educational bureaucrats, most of whom haven't set foot in a classroom in years.

Further, all teachers should be encouraged to earn graduate credits in their content area, instead of getting their tickets punched in pedagogy.

These are just some of the numerous highlights in the perceptive NEH report that should be required reading for anyone concerned about the worrisome state of public education in the United States.

Arms talks plod in uncertainty

With the end of the summer's congressional recess and presidential vacation, the Reagan administration is hoping the fall will bring some triumphs that will make its last months in office more than a footnote. One of those is a treaty with the Soviets to remove all nuclear missiles from Europe, which now looks like a solid bet.

This will be the main topic of conversation between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze when they meet Sept. 15 in Washington. If accepted by both sides, the deal will be the first major Soviet-American arms control agreement since SALT I was approved in 1972 (SALT II was never ratified by the United States). It will mark the first time that negotiations have led to actual shrinkage in the size of the superpower arsenals, instead of mere constraints on growth. It will defuse pacifist sentiment in Western Europe. Combined with General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev's domestic liberalization, and the impending election of a new American president, it may even inaugurate a new period of detente.

The accord could hardly be bad for the United States, because its crucial provisions were proposed by American negotiators and accepted only with great reluctance by the Soviets after months (and in some cases years) of wrangling. Almost every time a potential obstacle has arisen, it has been removed by a Soviet concession. Ideas that even the administration doubted would ever be accepted are now part of the draft accord.

But before euphoria sets in, some sobering thoughts are in order. The treaty is bound to be heralded by the president as a monumental breakthrough. It already has been denounced by conservative opponents of arms control as an unprecedented disaster. It is neither. It is a useful achievement that carries risks — tolerable ones, but risks nonetheless.

What are the pluses? The first is that the prospective agreement eliminates an entire class of arms in which the United States and its allies suffer a large disadvantage. The Soviets will have to dismantle four times as many medium-range warheads as the United States. The second is that by removing the American Pershing II, and thus erasing the possibility of a quick, "decapitating" strike against Moscow's command centers, it removes an incentive for the Soviets to strike first against a vulnerable weapon.

The negotiations also promise a potentially useful precedent. Getting rid of nuclear weapons is a good idea, up to a point. To the extent that this agreement proves that these stockpiles can be shrunk as well as expanded, it may facilitate a broader deal on strategic arms — which if wisely designed would not only save both sides money but dramatically reduce the chance that World War III will ever take place.

But the medium-range treaty contributes something to this end all by itself. It does so by reducing our dangerous and unrealistic reliance on nuclear weapons to deter Soviet attack. Though thousands of "battlefield" nuclear devices will remain at NATO's disposal, the scrapping of so many longer-range missiles will forcefully remind the allies that their only real security lies in conventional military power. Of course, if this deal opens the way to an agreement pulling back troops and armor from the front lines — as proposed by Senate Armed Services Committee chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga. — it would make a successful Soviet attack much harder.

The risks mirror the benefits. If our allies refuse to strengthen their conventional forces, and if the Soviets can't be persuaded to redeploy their troops in Central Europe, NATO will find itself more vulnerable to invasion — not much more vulnerable, but enough to notice.

The other major danger is that instead of encouraging an agreement on intercontinental systems, this treaty may release whatever pressure now exists. The chief value of a treaty to Ronald Reagan is that it distracts attention from his unbending devotion to his Star Wars plan, which has so far blocked any progress toward cuts in the arsenals that matter most. He is acceding to a modest arms control agreement in the hope of avoiding a truly important one. He gets to pose simultaneously as the champion of arms control and the father of Star Wars.

But neither risk is a good enough reason to reject the agreement. Western Europe has ample means to protect itself, and Reagan's grander schemes may be undone by a more prudent successor. The opportunity to put the superpowers on the road to arms reductions is too valuable to pass up. Coupled with realism and resolve on the part of the West, it would be a step toward a safer world.

IMMIGRATION SERVICE LACKS IRS "AURA OF FEAR" TO EFFECT VOLUNTARY COMPLIANCE—NEWS ITEM

Rev. Ike leads the scavengers

People often send me solicitations they have received from an evangelist hot on the scent for money.

Falwell "must" have your money in 24 hours or PTL will be down the toilet (where it belongs). Swaggart needs a million here and a million there or he's going off the air, and Roberts is up in his prayer tower doing another deal with God that he wants you to finance.

But the Rev. Frederick J. Eikerknoetter II — known to millions as the "Rev. Ike" — still has to be, according to his enemies, the Number 1 hoodwinker who ever stood behind a pulpit and looked at his Bible and saw dollar marks.

I wrote several months ago of Ike's "prayer cloth." You hung the cloth in your window, took it out the next day and sent it back to the Rev. Ike with your "seed offering" and somebody would be delivering your new Cadillac before you could say "aluminum siding."

Well, the Rev. Ike is back with a new, improved angle, a "prayer rug." A reader sent along the prayer rug he received in the mail.

It's not a rug at all. It's a piece of paper with a picture of what appears to be a bathmat. That's on one side.

On the other side is a drawing of someone the Rev. Ike identifies as Jesus. (Actually the individual looks more like a skinny Grizzly Adams, but let's not nit-pick here.)

Lewis Grizzard

The message to the recipient of the prayer rug goes like this:

"1. Look into Jesus' eyes. They are closed. But as you look at them, you will see them open and look at you."

(Not really. Whoever drew the picture drew the figure's eyes closed, and then put eyeballs on top of the eyelids. A 4-year-old could figure it out, but people who send money to Rev. Ike aren't that intelligent.)

"2. Decide what you want."
(I want a Lear, a million-seller, a new pair of Gucci's and Kim Basinger.)

"Then go into a room alone and either kneel or spread the rug over your knees. It must touch both knees.

"3. Place it in a Bible on Phil. 4:19.

"4. In the morning, please return it to me so I can mail it on to another Dear Soul that (sic) also needs a blessing.

"5. Place your seed offering on Jesus' picture. Just like you are investing in what the Bible promises to you. Please do not keep this. Another soul is waiting for it!"

I laughed at all that when I read it, and probably you did, too. But this individual raises millions with garbage like that.

Not only is he scary, but think how many people are walking around loose who are ignorant enough to fall victim to him?

What I can't understand is why somebody doesn't introduce legislation making such solicitations illegal. If what the Rev. Ike and others send out isn't mail fraud, then what is?

I know someone who went to jail for three years for mail fraud. He took in peanuts compared to the Rev.'s Flim-Flam.

If you receive a prayer rug from the Rev. Ike, don't send it back. Take it on your next camping trip to start a fire or for another use — which I can't mention in a family newspaper.

Workers band together to save company

By Robert Walters

CHICAGO (NEA) — For years, the secretive Stewart-Warner Corp. refused to publicly acknowledge that its mounting financial problems might be endangering the hundreds of jobs at its three manufacturing plants here.

For the company's workers, that position was intolerable because Stewart-Warner, an auto instrument manufacturer, is the last major source of blue-collar jobs on Chicago's Northwest Side — and its work force here already has shriveled from almost 3,000 in the late 1970s to about 1,700 today.

Instead of passively waiting for a plant shutdown, those workers and their union in late 1985 launched an unusual effort to protect the factories and their jobs.

They formed the Coalition to Keep Stewart-Warner Open. It, in turn, sought assistance from every available source, including government officials, churches, community organizations — and a unique Chicago-based organization called the Midwest Center for Labor Research.

The non-profit center, founded five years ago by labor activists, stresses the importance of planning positively to preserve jobs instead of merely reacting to plant closings.

Such planning produces not only satisfied workers but also "a more productive, healthy company," explains Dan Swinney, the center's executive director who lost his previous job when the factory in which he worked was abandoned by its owner.

Swinney and a staff of 10 conduct research, provide information and suggest strategies to employee organizations, union locals and community groups concerned about potential plant closings and other issues associated with the decline of the country's "smokestack" industries.

The center can be likened to a management consulting firm, although it differs in one important respect — its highest priority is keeping workers productively employed and appropriately compensated.

Corporations often blame financial problems on rising labor costs and think that closing a factory will improve their balance sheet. The center, however, can often show the company that such a move may not only fail to improve the company's competitive situation — but could make it worse.

Although the center is proud of its worker orientation, Swinney insists that it is "not simply pro-labor." Its commitment to professionalism is important, he says, to gain credibility with the owners and managers of companies whose operations it analyzes.

In one case, the union local at a Wisconsin auto plant turned to the center after managers insisted upon concessions from workers. After studying the situation, the center concluded that some employee sacrifices were necessary.

The center publishes an "Early Warning Manual" that identifies the precursors of plant closings, including ownership problems, declining sales, substantial job losses and management instability.

A number of those elements became apparent when the center examined Stewart-Warner. A lack of capital investment, for example, impaired the firm's ability to compete with other producers of motor vehicle instrumentation.

Net income, which exceeded $15 million annually throughout the late 1970s and early 1980s, dropped to less than half that in the mid-1980s. Although the company had not had even a quarterly operating loss in more than 40 years, it suffered a $1 million annual operating loss in 1986.

Stewart-Warner's patriarchal chairman and president, 77-year-old Bennett Archambault, repeatedly rebuffed the center's requests to discuss the company's future — until he had to confront his critics at the company's annual meeting earlier this year.

Since then, Stewart-Warner has displayed signs of a renewed commitment to maintaining and enhancing its Chicago operations. The Midwest Center for Labor Research may deserve credit for averting another round of plant closings.

Confusion preceded Northwest crash in Detroit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confusion over taxiways and radio frequencies marked the takeoff preparations of Northwest Flight 255 which crashed last month seconds after lifting off from the Detroit airport, according to documents.

Investigators are trying to determine whether the confusion caused the plane's two pilots to become so distracted from their routine pre-flight activities that they forgot to properly set the aircraft's wing flaps. The crash killed 156 people, including the pilots.

The wing flaps of the two-engine McDonnell Douglas MD-80 jetliner, bound for Phoenix, Ariz., were not in the proper takeoff position, inhibiting the plane's ability to lift, the government's investigation previously has concluded.

In about a half minute passed as the pilots and tower discussed a mixup in radio frequencies as Flight 255 was taxiing for a takeoff, according to a transcript of radio communications released Monday by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Neither the transcript nor the tape made clear which of the pilots was speaking.

The transcript showed a busy airport with controllers in contact with 52 aircraft flying into Detroit or preparing to take off during a 55-minute period. Weather conditions caused some departing aircraft to change runways which may have led to the radio frequency and taxiway problems for Flight 255.

According to the transcript, Flight 255 had been given a specific taxiway turnoff, "Charlie," to get to the new runway.

"I guess we went by Charlie. We're going to (runway) three-center, right?" the pilot asked the controller at one point. The controller, who was handling westbound traffic, acknowledged and provided new directions.

"Okay, ah we'll follow that heavy nineteen forty five," Flight 255 replied, alluding to a wide-body aircraft ahead of them.

"So long," the pilot added, indicating he understood he was being shifted to another controller, who was handling eastbound departures.

But the flight crew apparently did not change radio frequencies.

"Northwest two fifty five are you on the frequency?" the new controller, who was handling eastbound departures, asked Flight 255.

"Nobody turned us over til just now when I called him back," the pilot replied. He then asked whether he was supposed to have changed frequencies on his own or have waited for directions from the tower.

But the controller informed Flight 255 that the tower already had given directions several minutes earlier to change frequencies. "The controller (handling Flight 255 earlier) said he switched you over. Maybe another aircraft acknowledged," the new controller told the Northwest plane.

"We didn't acknowledge," the pilot of Flight 255 replied.

The transcript, however, showed that the original ground controller, indeed, had assigned Flight 255 a new frequency several minutes earlier, but that the acknowledgment was vague and the crew of Flight 255 may not have been aware of the change.

In all, the exchanges about radio frequencies took 32 seconds as Flight 255 continued to taxi to its takeoff position.

The transcript gave no indication as to what activities or conversations might have been going on during this time inside the cockpit of Flight 255. But aviation experts say this is the time the crew might have been occupied with going through a pre-flight checklist that would have included setting of the flaps.

Four minutes later the aircraft was ready for takeoff, but was given a three-minute hold from the tower, then cleared for takeoff. Flight 255 acknowledged and indicated it was about to depart.

It was the last to be heard from the aircraft as the controllers turned to other incoming and outbound traffic. Just over a minute later, the transcripts indicated something was amiss.

Doctor bills are blamed for big Medicare premium hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration blames skyrocketing doctor bills for a projected 38.5 percent increase next year in the premiums paid by the nation's 31 million Medicare recipients.

"We're looking at an increase of that magnitude, given the cost of doctor bills to the program," said Chuck Kline, a spokesman for the Department of Health and Human Services.

The premium increase in the Medicare "Part B" program is calculated each year by HHS under a formula set by Congress, Kline said Monday.

The calculated increase has not been approved formally by the department secretary, Otis R. Bowen, or the Office of Management and Budget, but the projected figure "is probably very close to what the final one will be, if not the final one," Kline said.

Kline said the final figure will be published in the Federal Register by Sept. 30.

The Medicare program was created in 1965 and now provides insurance for about 31 million people, most of them elderly.

Their monthly premiums would increase more than a third, from $17.80 to $24.80, beginning in January unless Congress alters the formula or makes an exception, Kline said. The annual cost to each individual would go from $214.80 to $297.60.

Bob Hardy, a spokesman for the Health Care Financing Administration, an arm of HHS, said the administration has no leeway in calculating the figure, which is based on the claims experience of the program.

"These are tentative figures; they still have to go through OMB," Hardy said. "But under the Medicare law, we must take a look at what should be charged."

Medicare recipients do not pay premiums under the other portion of Medicare, Part A, which pays for hospitalization, but they do pay a deductible for the first day of hospitalization. That amount is now $520 and Kline said he expects that to go up "a little bit."

The Washington Post said in today's editions the department planned to announce a $20 increase in the deductible.

Kline said the Part A increase will not be close to the magnitude of the Part B premium hike.

Mrs. Dole resigns as concern over safety, performance grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole is resigning at a time when her department is under fire from critics who are complaining about airline performance and safety.

Mrs. Dole announced Monday that she plans to leave her Cabinet post Oct. 1 and begin working full time for her husband Sen. Bob Dole's GOP presidential bid, kicking off her new task with a 12-state campaign swing through the South.

In a letter to President Reagan, she said the decision to resign came "with considerable soul searching" but that she no longer felt she could give her job top priority and still help the Dole campaign effort.

"I have always put the department first. ... Now I want to put the campaign first," Mrs. Dole, a soft-spoken, Harvard-educated native of North Carolina, told reporters.

Her departure creates a major Cabinet vacancy with only 16 months left in Reagan's term and as the Transportation Department has been in the spotlight this summer because of rising complaints from airline travelers and concerns about air safety.

Critics have blamed Mrs. Dole in part because the department has approved a string of airline mergers which has concentrated much of the industry in about a half-dozen large carriers.

Last month, the department announced new requirements for the airlines to disclose delays, but the effort was criticized by some members of Congress who vowed to pursue legislation that would impose broader restrictions on air carriers.

Meanwhile, the airline industry has sharply criticized Mrs. Dole for becoming too involved in the activities of the Federal Aviation Administration. The Air Transport Association, which represents the major airlines, has intensified a campaign to have the FAA separated from its parent

Executive director of AIDS commission resigns abruptly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The executive director of President Reagan's advisory commission on AIDS, Linda D. Sheaffer, resigned abruptly after the panel's chairman asked her to leave, government officials said.

A White House official said Monday that concerns about Sheaffer stemmed from friction between panel members and the commission's chairman, Dr. W. Eugene Mayberry, who had chosen Sheaffer for the job.

"Some of the commissioners have been a little put out as to what they perceive as Mayberry's heavy-handed running of things, so this may be a symbolic deal," said the official, who demanded anonymity. "There was grumbling about his hiring her without any input (from other commissioners)."

The official said some panel members also had criticized Sheaffer's work.

"I did hear a lot of complaints by committee members that they didn't like her work; they weren't getting enough chance for input on witnesses or where they would hold hearings," he said.

Sheaffer, a government health officer who had headed the federal Office of Organ Transplantation before she was loaned to the AIDS Commission, left the panel job Friday.

department. After Mrs. Dole announced plans for tighter restrictions on private planes, the Aircraft Owners and Operators Association put advertisements in major newspapers calling for her resignation.

Mrs. Dole this year called for the hiring of more air traffic controllers. But her congressional critics said she only did so after Congress made clear it would require more controllers to be hired anyway.

It is likely that James Burnley, the department's deputy secretary, will assume Mrs. Dole's job temporarily, although sources suggest he is unlikely to be appointed on a permanent basis.

With Mrs. Dole's departure, the administration has no women of cabinet rank. An early name to surface as a possible successor was Patricia Goldman, a moderate Republican who is vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Mrs. Dole has made no secret in the past that she enjoys her job as the country's eighth transportation secretary, the first woman to hold the post, and the highest ranking woman in the Reagan administration.

According to sources in the department and in the Dole campaign, Mrs. Dole, a greatly sought-after speaker, has been urged for some time to quit the department and devote more time to campaigning for her husband.

Mrs. Dole has traveled extensively this year, often in key presidential primary states. Last month she spent 21 days on the road, many of them on campaign trips for her husband.

She defended the purely political trips, saying they amounted to the equivalent of 11 working days — all either vacation or her weekends, which she considers her own time.

Dole, the Senate minority leader, is expected to formally announce his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination early next month.

NASA space station

Martin Marietta Corporation has submitted a proposal, shown in this artist's concept, to NASA to build the living and laboratory modules for the U.S. Space Station. Martin is competing for the contract to be awarded by NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center. The National Research Council said Monday that NASA's plan to construct an orbiting space station will be difficult and risky and cannot be done "on the cheap," but will require a long term commitment by the government.

Papal tour reaches America's largest diocese

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Pope John Paul II today carries his message of "one human family" from a tiny but devoutly faithful segment of his American flock to the country's largest Roman Catholic diocese.

He leaves Phoenix for Los Angeles with the memory of a unique demonstration of Roman Catholic faith by descendants of the original Americans. The pontiff called the encounter "for me and all of us, a deep experience."

He used the occasion Monday — a meeting and prayer service with representatives of American Indian tribes — to plead for brotherhood. American Catholics, he said, have not always lived up to their Christian responsibilities in the past but "we commit ourselves to overcoming their present effects."

In Los Angeles, he was to have the only two-day stay of his nine-city tour. More than 2.6 million Catholics, nearly 5 percent of all the Catholics in the United States, are concentrated in the three counties that make up the Los Angeles diocese.

To prepare for the visit, authorities made a pre-dawn sweep Monday to remove the homeless that inhabit the area around St. Vibiana's Cathedral where the pope will stay.

The cathedral is on the fringe of Skid Row, and the Union Rescue Mission next door — which feeds 2,000 destitute people a day — was ordered closed temporarily.

SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

U.N. chief detects moderation in Iranian stance

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who concludes his Iran-Iraq peace mission today, found Iran has moderated its stance toward a cease-fire in the 7-year-old war, a U.N. source said.

"There seems to be a certain like movement, maybe not enough but at least you can talk about things which a year ago when we were there (in Tehran) the first time we were not even able to discuss," said the source, who briefed reporters on condition he was not identified further.

Publicly, each country has called for the United Nations to punish the other. Perez de Cuellar arrived in Baghdad on Sunday after two days of talks in Tehran on a U.N. Security Council cease-fire resolution. He met with President Saddam Hussein and Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz Monday. Foreign Ministry officials said Aziz and the secretary-general held talks again today before the U.N. chief's departure for New York.

In the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq have observed an undeclared truce in their tanker war since Thursday, two Kuwaiti tankers with U.S. warship escorts moved north toward Kuwait today.

U.S. sources said military intelligence reports indicated Iran recently reduced the area threatened by its Silk-worm anti-ship missiles in the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, did not give details.

The U.N. source traveling with Perez de Cuellar said the U.N. chief had managed to "nail down the positions of the governments" of Iran and Iraq on the cease-fire resolution adopted July 20. He noted that Tehran's leaders had for the first time been willing to discuss a truce.

"There is at least some atmosphere which might start some (movement)," he said.

The resolution calls for an immediate, unconditional cease-fire, withdrawal of troops to internationally recognized borders and an exchange of prisoners. Iran would have to withdraw from Iraqi territory.

Hussein on Monday urged "punitive measures" against Iran for failing to embrace the resolution. Iraq has said the war can not end until the United Nations brands Iraq the aggressor and punishes it.

Iraq invaded Iran in 1980 after a series of border clashes. Iraq says the war began two weeks earlier.

The Reagan administration said last week that it would seek an international arms embargo against Iran if Tehran did not embrace the resolution promptly.

UN General Assembly opens today

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly, which draws a parade of world leaders to New York each year, opens its 42nd session today with a message from the secretary-general saying the "dynamics of peace are at work."

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar was not due back at the United Nations from his peace mission to Iran and Iraq until Wednesday. However, the 67-year-old Peruvian diplomat released a message to the assembly today, noting there were "many elements of profound and incalculable danger" worldwide.

"But the dynamics of peace are at work," he added. "There are hopeful signs of a realization that greater security can be assured with fewer weapons and more development."

Perez de Cuellar's mission to end the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war drew special attention at the world body on the eve of the new General Assembly's 13-week session.

"It is our fervent prayer that his journey is fruitful and that this sad episode in human history is finally concluded," Humayun Rasheed Choudhury, the foreign minister of Bangladesh, said Monday in a speech closing the 41st General Assembly, of which he was president.

Iran's president, Ali Khamenei, will be among a dozen heads of state who will address the General Assembly during a three-week general debate that starts Sept. 21. A visit by such a high-level Iranian official to the United States is rare, since Washington and Tehran have no diplomatic relations.

Khamenei speaks to the General Assembly Sept. 22. President Reagan addresses the body Sept. 21 and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze is scheduled to speak Sept. 23.

Choudhury closed the 41st session by calling on the 159-member United Nations to focus on two things: closing the gap between the world's rich and poor and achieving global disarmament.

"While some countries continue in their opulence, there are others in whom the pangs of poverty instill a numbing sense of despair," Choudhury said.

He said many people feared the Earth has become "an Armageddon of horror and destruction."

But he said he was optimistic about recent progress on arms control, including a proposed U.S.-Soviet treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

The 42nd General Assembly is expected to name Peter Florin, East Germany's deputy foreign minister, Choudhury's successor as president.

Perez de Cuellar is scheduled to deliver a report to the 15-nation Security Council this week on his mission to Iran and Iraq.

He is trying to get the warring nations to comply with a Security Council resolution passed July 20 that demands a cease-fire and calls on each side to return to internationally recognized borders and exchange war prisoners.

Four Canadian Chrysler plants idled by strike

TORONTO (AP) — About 10,000 Chrysler Canada Ltd. workers struck the company's four plants early today after the company refused in contract talks to agree to tie their pensions to the rate of inflation.

Their contract had expired at midnight.

Canadian Auto Workers President Bob White predicted a long strike. Analysts say that if it lasts 1½ weeks, the walkout would likely shut down Chrysler assembly plants in the United States.

The Canadian strike began as Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers drew back from the brink of a possible strike and agreed to continue discussing a labor contract for 104,000 union members. UAW President Owen Bieber late Monday announced the contract had been extended for 24 hours.

By 12:15 a.m., about 10 workers at Chrysler's plant in Ajax, outside Toronto, were walking the picket line. Workers at two assembly plants in Windsor, near Detroit, and a casting plant in the Toronto suburb of Etobicoke also set up pickets.

White said negotiators would continue to meet this week.

On Monday, he rejected a second contract proposal presented by Chrysler Canada's chief negotiator Bill Fisher, saying it included a cost-of-living indexation in pensions "so small that our retirees wouldn't recognize it if it happened."

"We're determined to make significant inroads on this issue. Unfortunately, it looks like we'll have to take a very long strike to do it," White said.

Fisher accused the union of making "radical" demands for indexing that would cost the company $35 million a year.

"The union is trying to get the best deal that it can and we are trying to hold on to what we have," Fisher said. "Why would we put ourselves in a position where we are less competitive?"

Chrysler Canada's Ajax plant makes hundreds of parts such as door panels, seat covers and other plastic trim, some of them exclusively, so a prolonged shutdown there would eventually close Chrysler's U.S. operations.

Chrysler's minivans and full-sized vans are produced at Windsor, Ontario. The company stands to lose about $75 million in weekly production at the two plants.

Surging auto demand boosts retail sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, bolstered by a surge in demand for autos, climbed 1.3 percent in August, the biggest increase in six months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that retail establishments sold $128.6 billion worth of goods in August, up $1.6 billion from the July sales level after adjusting for seasonal variations.

It was the biggest monthly sales increase since a 4.8 percent jump last February and it followed revised increases of 0.5 percent in July and 1.2 percent in June.

Most of the strength in August came from a rebound in auto sales, spurred by new incentive programs that automakers have been forced to offer customers in an effort to reduce huge backlogs of unsold cars.

Car sales shot up 4.5 percent last month, the biggest increase since a 13.7 percent rise in February.

Excluding autos, retail sales would have risen a much more modest 0.3 percent in August, down slightly from a 0.5 percent advance excluding cars in July.

Still, analysts were encouraged by the fact that retail sales have posted advances for three consecutive months. Earlier in the year there had been concern that high levels of consumer debt and sluggish income growth would force Americans to cut back on spending, especially for big-ticket items.

Since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of overall economic activity, economists were worried that even a slight reduction in spending could jeopardize the current economic expansion.

For August, sales of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, were up 2.3 percent. However, all of the strength came from the jump in auto sales.

Sales of furniture and home furnishings fell 1.5 percent, reversing part of a 2.1 percent increase in July. Sales at hardware and building supply stores were off 1.1 percent following a tiny 0.2 percent July decline.

Sales of non-durable goods rose 0.6 percent last month following a 0.4 percent increase in July.

Sales at department and other general merchandise stores rose a modest 0.5 percent following a 0.3 percent July increase.

Sales at grocery and other food stores rose 1.0 percent in August after declining 0.2 percent in July.

Officials: Public cost for papal trip worth it

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The final bill is still out on the cost of Pope John Paul II's visit, but the bottom line already has pleased some officials.

The city's cost will be at least $390,000 for 800 police officers to be on duty for crowd and traffic control at the Mass site and parade routes.

Jodie Kniejski, who coordinated Bexar County's effort for the papal visit, said her agency's bill could run up to $100,000 to pay for sheriff's deputies, support personnel and traffic control officers.

"After what I saw yesterday, I am convinced it was worth it," County Judge Tom Vickers said Monday.

He said the county would have no problem finding $100,000 in its $150 million total budget.

"What you justify it on is the public's safety," Vickers said. "You're going to have him in town and you're going to have hundreds of thousands of people and you're going to have to take care of them."

Karen Kliever, the city's inter-governmental relations director, said, "I think all of our people were very well prepared. My people at the command post were bored and that's what I wanted."

Ms. Kliever said the archdiocese would reimburse the city for some expenditures, including medical costs at the Mass site where 500 people were treated for heat-related ailments. She said the city's image from the event was worth the expense.

Television networks will give Constitution strong billing

By ERICH SMITH
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Who could play host for a television special on such a heavyweight topic as the U.S. Constitution? Who has the reputation? The clout?

At CBS, the answer was veteran newscaster Walter Cronkite, who will anchor a 2-hour, prime-time Constitution Gala Thursday, the 200th anniversary of the signing of the document that governs our government and so much of our lives.

ABC is throwing its efforts into Wednesday, the day before the big celebration, with a 1-hour show, Celebration of Citizenship, at 12 p.m. CDT, and the prime-time, 3-hour program, The Blessings of Liberty.

All three commercial networks expect to give the Constitution strong billing on their morning programs and on the nightly news. NBC will present a half-hour special at 10:30 a.m. CDT Thursday on President Reagan's address and the Philadelphia parade.

CBS' all-star special is produced by Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion, producers of the Opening Ceremonies — Liberty Weekend 1986 spectacular built around the unveiling of the restored Statue of Liberty.

The Constitution Day extravaganza begins with live coverage of the 18,000-strong "We the People 200" parade in Philadelphia. The march duplicates the Grand Federal Procession held in 1787 to celebrate the new Constitution and celebrates the people and institutions of America today.

"This will not be a typical variety show," Smith said in an interview at Philadelphia's Convention Hall, where more than 800 people will put on the program before a live audience of thousands. "It's a celebration, but it'll be pretty serious. I hope it will be entertaining, as well."

The gala will showcase entertainers such as Gregory Peck, Barry Manilow, Patti LaBelle, Robert Guillaume, John Schneider, Tom Wopat, Marilyn McCoo, Lloyd Bridges, Walter Matthau, Stephanie Powers and Eli Wallach.

In addition, it will have music by members of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, Peter Nero and the Philly Pops and performers of West Side Story.

Along with the singing and dancing, the show will feature impressionist Rich Little quoting some great Americans on the Constitution and dramatizations of important decisions by the Supreme Court introduced by Walter Matthau.

The gala is up against some tough competition from NFL football on ABC, and the top-rated The Cosby Show on NBC, so Smith is not expecting huge ratings.

ABC's afternoon show, Celebration, is built around a mass recital of the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag and Preamble to the Constitution. Reagan, former Chief Justice Warren Burger and other national leaders will gather on the west steps of the Capitol to lead schoolchildren around the nation.

The program, sponsored by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the Constitution, the American Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation and several education associations, is to be seen in 110,000 schools where the well-known words will also be recited.

ABC's prime-time The Blessings of Liberty is an in-depth look at six historic periods in the development of the Constitution and America over two centuries. The network brings out its heavy hitters for this one — David Brinkley, Peter Jennings and Ted Koppel.

Brinkley serves as historian to explain what the nation was like as significant changes were made in the government of America.

National Park Ranger Bill Ubil inspects the Centennial Bell at Independence Hall in Philadelphia. The bell, made in 1876 to replace the cracked Liberty Bell, will be rung Thursday along with bells around the world in commemoration of the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Hot off the press, almanac forecasts a colder winter

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — Americans should "get their woolies out" this winter, says the editor of the 1988 Farmers' Almanac, whose readers say they favor retaining "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem.

Midwesterners can expect to shovel more snow, and brisker temperatures will be the rule across much of the nation, according to the almanac's 171st edition, just off the presses.

The coming cold season will be "the first in a series of two to three fairly rough winters" said Ray Geiger, who has edited the folksy publication for more than half a century. "We suggest people get their woolies out."

The almanac's elusive prognosticator, who calls himself Caleb Weatherbee, bases his predictions on "sunspots, the position of the planets and the tidal action of the moon."

This year's almanac, with a circulation of nearly 6 million, contains the usual melange of calendar data, household hints, one-line jokes, inspirational messages, puzzles and recipes.

It also reports the results of a readers' poll that found "America the Beautiful" to be a strong contender to replace Francis Scott Key's "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the preferred national anthem.

About 34,000 readers' ballots showed 54 percent favoring "The Star-Spangled Banner," while 46 percent picked "America the Beautiful," by Katherine Lee Bates.

In a similar survey last year, USA Today found 55 percent voted to keep Key's anthem, while 30 percent preferred "America the Beautiful." The also-rans included "God Bless America" and Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A."

Most almanac readers marked their choices on post cards, but many wrote letters supporting their preference, Geiger said.

"There are no lukewarmers on this question," he said.

Partisans of "The Star-Spangled Banner" emphasized its powerful emotional grip on Americans and questioned the wisdom of tampering with tradition. Advocates of "America the Beautiful" claimed the music and lyrics were more pleasing.

Support for "America the Beautiful" was strongest in the North, while the South preferred the song penned by Key during the War of 1812.

Daughters of the War of 1812, through their South Carolina president, Lorraine C. McNair, cast 4,200 votes for "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Many schools conducted student polls and discussions, including the Leroy L. Wood School in Fairhaven, Mass., which mailed in 142 individual letters.

The almanac took no stance on the question, but its two top editors admit they disagree. Geiger likes "America the Beautiful," and his son, associate editor Peter Geiger, leans toward the official anthem.

Man charged with threats against pope

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Houston man has been charged in federal court in connection with a letter authorities said contained threats against Pope John Paul II.

Michael O. Bradbury, 40, was arrested Saturday in nearby Boerne after postal officials in New Caney reported a rambling letter with threats against the pope, who departed for Phoenix Monday after a 23½-hour stop in San Antonio.

Bradbury appeared before U.S. Magistrate Robert B. O'Connor on Monday and was charged with "willfully threatening to assault and murder Pope John Paul II, a foreign official."

He was held without bond until a hearing set for Sept. 22.

NOTICE OF VOTE ON TAX RATE

The Pampa Independent School District conducted a public hearing on a proposal to increase your property taxes by 8 percent on September 10, 1987 at 6:00 p.m.

Gestapo prison cells become Reich exhibit

BERLIN (AP)—Prison cells at the one-time headquarters of Nazi Germany's Gestapo have been unearthed and turned into an open-air exhibition of the Third Reich's brutal secret police tactics.

For 12 years, Adolf Hitler's dreaded secret police tortured and beat to death Nazi opponents at the infamous site in Berlin.

The basement-level cells came to light last year during excavation work at the site of the demolished buildings that once housed the Gestapo and SS headquarters and the chief office of the Nazi security service.

The desolate bloc runs up to within a few yards of the Berlin Wall dividing the former German capital into Western and Communist sectors.

The West Berlin exhibition has been drawing several dozen visitors a day since it opened in early July, following painstaking work by a five-member team. The exhibition runs through November.

In the project financed by West Berlin authorities, the team of experts spent a year picking up bricks and shoveling mounds of earth that for 30 years hid the foundations of the buildings that are part of an infamous past.

Often observed through binoculars of East German guards atop watchtowers just across the wall, the experts prepared the exhibition to mark this year's 750th anniversary of Berlin.

The Gestapo and SS headquarters were heavily damaged by Allied bombs and fighting at the end of World War II, and were blown up after the war. Only the damaged facades remained and were finally demolished in 1956.

"In the 1950s, people still thought that Berlin once again could become the capital of Germany. So, the former Gestapo and SS headquarters buildings were blown up and demolished," says Reinhard Ruerup, the history professor who is at the head of the excavation project.

"Then, people wanted to forget that chapter of history and what took place in those buildings," he told an AP reporter during a recent tour of the site.

"We thought that the year when we are celebrating the 750th anniversary of Berlin would be a good time to remind them what took place here," Ruerup said.

Many young Berliners and thousands of tourists passed by the site over the last decades without knowing what had once stood there. At one point, part of the overgrown empty lot was used as an auto-driving course, where thousands of Berliners first learned to drive.

One year ago, Ruerup and his assistants began removing the mounds of earth and wild growth that had sprung up over the years.

This summer, Ruerup's group opened the documentary exhibition in the unearthed cellar of a previously forgotten annex to the Gestapo's "inhouse prison," a chilling reminder of the torture and death that took place in the tiled cells.

The exhibition is entitled "Topography of Terror," and Ruerup says his group plans to continue their work through the rubble after the exhibition closes.

The exhibition is mounted in a specially constructed low building over the excavated cellar of the Gestapo annex, with stairs leading to the underground cells.

Although the existence of the annex was not generally known before, Ruerup does not believe the find has special historical value.

"But the find will help us in our efforts to reconstruct the history of the area and the horror it produced," he said.

The unearthed underground part of the annex consists of narrow brick halls and cells with white tiled walls.

The exhibition displays hundreds of photographs and documents illustrating the history of the buildings, the rise of the Nazis and their coming to power, and the extermination of Jews and others.

One section deals with the Wannsee Conference, where Nazi leaders worked out plans for the "final solution" and started the Holocaust which killed 6 million Jews.

Top-ranking Nazi official Adolf Eichmann worked at the SS headquarters, organizing the transport of Jews to death camps.

Old grist mill 'something to fool with'

By BONNIE LASITER
Palestine Herald-Press

GRAPELAND (AP)—Grinder's Junction: It's a place for health food enthusiasts and old-timers. Antique-lovers and people who love to eat enjoy it, too.

Bud and Neva Jones grind out fresh meal with an authentic stone grist mill at their home on Farm Road 1272 just out of Grape-land in Houston County.

"I don't do no advertising; it's just something to fool with," Jones said. He processes white and yellow corn meal, whole wheat flour and rye for customers all over the state.

"You see people from everywhere and you get news from everywhere," Mrs. Jones said. "You'd be surprised what they bring and want you to do." They even ground peas once for some customers who said they made patties from the flour and fried them. People who can't eat wheat flour often request the Joneses to grind rice to mix with rye flour.

"If it ain't wet, I'll grind it," Jones said. He bought his grist mill when he retired from the oil field about five years ago. He found the mill to buy after looking for one to get corn ground for him and his wife.

"We used to have two or three mills in town and Elkhart had one," Mrs. Jones said. "Seventy years ago, that's all you could get."

The Jones' mill originally was used in Alabama, but he purchased it in New Summerfield. "A guy came in here from Tyler one day and said, 'I'm proud to know where this old mill is. I've been looking for it for years,'" Jones said. He said the man confirmed what he had been told about the mill's history when he purchased it, but its age remains a mystery.

Up to 100 pounds of corn is put in the bin at the top of the mill. It moves down a chute and passes between two rocks. One is stationary and the other moves up and down, grinding the corn.

The mill runs on electricity, but originally was powered with water, Jones said. "I had it hooked to my tractor, but I had to unhook it and realign it every time I needed it," he said.

"This is the modern way you start the water," Mrs. Jones said as she flipped the switch that started the wheel.

Once outside the mill, the ground meal is graded in a sifter. The meal lands in the first box, the grits in the second, and the coarser bran in the last. One hundred pounds of corn yield 85 pounds of meal, Mrs. Jones said.

The mill can turn out a little over 200 pounds an hour. Years ago, the buyer had to sift his meal by hand. "You'd come home with all that bran, grits and meal together," Mrs. Jones said. "You could sift from now until then and not get as fine a meal as you can with a sifter."

People come from all over to Grinders Junction to purchase meal. "It's mostly old folks hunting cornbread like we used to have," Mrs. Jones said.

One customer comes each year from Centerville, bringing 1,000 pounds of corn with him.

The Joneses custom grind the meal for 10 cents a pound, but they also keep some in their freezer for people who just stop by. A five-pound sack of ground meal sells for $2.

They order the wheat and rye from Hereford, Mrs. Jones said, but they buy their corn locally. Most people who have wheat ground want the bran, she said.

Their business picked up this summer when peas hit the market. A lot of people came in for corn meal, Mrs. Jones said, because they wanted fresh cornbread to eat with their peas.

She has one word of caution for people who bring corn to grind: "Put your corn in cloth bags so it will be good to take the meal home in." Corn kept in plastic containers will mold because the plastic holds moisture in, she said.

The Joneses looked at modern mills when they were shopping for one to buy. "You can get them in all sizes, but they have metal housings," she said. Antique mills with wooden housings like theirs are common in the East, she said, because of all the museums. But old mills for sale are rare, he said.

"I know where there's a dozen or more, but you can't touch them. They're old family relics," he said.

Las Pampas DAR plans Constitution Week activities

Las Pampas Daughters of the American Revolution will be conducting activities to remind local residents of Constitution Week, Thursday through Wednesday, Sept. 17-23.

In honor of the week, Pampa Mayor David McDaniel recently signed a proclamation marking local observance of the occasion for the city.

The week has been designated as a nationwide observance by proclamation of President Ronald Reagan to renew appreciation for the U.S. Constitution and the country during the 198th anniversary of the drafting of the document.

Kathleen Anderson, Las Pampas DAR regent and chairwoman of the local Constitution Bicentennial Committee, said DAR members are urging residents to read and study the Constitution "so that you may understand its meaning and why this document has endured."

Programs on the Constitution will be presented to various local civic clubs, including Pampa Noon Lions, Pampa Evening Lions, Pampa Optimist Club, Top of Texas Kiwanis, Pampa Rotary Club, Pampa Kiwanis Club and Golden K Kiwanis Club. The programs will be given by Phil Vanderpool, attorney; Mrs. Mary L. Jones, Constitution Week chairman; and Anderson.

In addition, Pampa school students will be studying the Constitution in classes Wednesday during a "Celebration of Citizenship" day. All students will be invited to participate in essay contests sponsored by Las Pampas DAR. Certificates of Award will be given to the best essay per grade per school.

At 3 p.m. local time Thursday, area residents and churches are being asked to join in a bell ringing in conjunction with a nationwide activity that will be broadcast over television and radio.

Sunday has been designated as Constitution Sunday, with residents encouraged to go to their churches for a day of thanksgiving for the founding of the United States by God-loving, God-fearing and God-worshipping people.

The observances of Constitution Week this year have more significance as the nation and communities move toward the Constitution Bicentennial celebrations of 1989.

Anderson said more local activities and celebrations regarding the Constitution will be planned and announced as Bicentennial observances continue for the next couple of years.

Grapes grow well in Texas

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

WHEN DO YOU HARVEST PEARS?

Questions sometimes arise as to when to harvest a pear. When trees are loaded down, harvest needs to begin as soon as possible to avoid limb breakage.

However, early harvest leads to poor quality fruit. As a rule, harvest generally should be done in September.

Several criteria can be used to determine fruit maturity. These are firmness, color and corking of lenticels. While few homeowners have pressure testers, a crude measure can be done by hand. When the fruit changes from the firmness of a baseball to the feel of a softball, it is close to maturity.

The background color of a mature fruit will change from light green to a yellow color. Probably the easiest indicators of maturity are the fruit lenticels. These are small 'dots' or indentations on each fruit's skin. Lenticels on an immature pear are white; however, as cork cells develop, the lenticels become brown and shallow.

The brown color in the lenticels is a good indicator that the fruit is ready to be picked and will ripen without shriveling. After harvest, pears should be stored at room temperature until they soften. After softening, they can be canned, eaten fresh or stored in the refrigerator until needed.

TABLE GRAPES

The "new" grape industry in Texas has literally exploded with growth in the last 15 years. This new commercial industry has gone from about 300 acres in 1970 to about 3,500 in 1987.

To date, the major thrust of the industry has been on wine grapes, and they have performed extremely well in many locations. Of course, speaking from a homeowner's standpoint, Texas residents have been involved in "home" table grapes with their one- or two-yard vines since Prohibition took out the "old" grape industry in the early 1900s.

Mother Nature has also played a major role in the Texas grape industry, with 13 of the 26 species of grapes being native to Texas. Not only do these vines grow freely and profusely without many problems (some problems are the grape leaf-folder and skeletonizer), but they make grapes as well.

Many individuals can even make palatable wine and excellent juice and jelly from such berries, although it is a far cry from the exquisite Chardonnays and Cabernet sauvignons.

Still, the fact remains that certain grapes will perform extremely well in almost every location in the state. This probably has more to do with the homeowners' quest to grow a high quality table grape than any other factor.

When we say "high quality", we are talking about a large, seedless berry with a palatable skin and a crisp sweet flavor. When these limitations are enforced on the varieties, the field of varieties from which to choose are scaled down severely. For example, some very good table grapes can be grown in Texas, including Aurelia and Carolina Blackrose. However, these particular grapes have seeds.

So what is the story on high quality table grapes for Texas? Unfortunately there are many questions which still need to be answered. The #1 question probably is, what varieties should be planted?

In looking at the seedless table grape industry, there are generally three different types, including the California, New York and Arkansas varieties.

Most people are familiar with the California varieties since they have been around for a long time. Traditional varieties include Thompson Seedless, Perlette and now Flame Seedless, which has gained popularity in recent years.

New York varieties which have made a fair impact on the industry include Himrod, Suffolk Red, Lakemont and Romulus.

The Arkansas varieties, including Venus, Mars and Reliance, are relatively new but look promising in many areas.

After varietal selection, other problems to overcome in the table grape industry include disease prevention, size, color and general culture of the vines and clusters, including harvesting and packing.

Black rot is probably the most serious problem affecting grape culture in many locations due to high temperatures and humidity. Also, no disease damage can be tolerated on the clusters, since the berries themselves are being sold. Control has been achieved where a rigorous spray schedule with a rotation of chemicals such as Bayleton, Ferbam and Benlate has been practiced.

A major problem with many seedless table grapes is that of developing adequate size. Unfortunately, when the seed is removed, so is the source of hormone for large berry development. Therefore, normal cultural operations include GA (giberellic acid) applications and girdling older vines on certain varieties to increase size. GA sprays must be timed with specific berry development in order to obtain the full benefit from the spray.

Finally, there is the general culture of the vines and clusters. Since nice, uniform, beautiful clusters with eye appeal are important, the clusters should be free-hanging.

This allows for expansion of the cluster and air movement to reduce the incidence of diseases. This also means tendrils must be removed which could intertwine around the cluster.

Also, many times clusters should be trimmed to increase berry size and remove small, insignificant clusters. Damaged berries and other imperfections must be removed for best quality. So there is a large amount of tedious hand labor which goes into the production of high quality table grapes.

Currently a large number of California, New York and Arkansas varieties are planted in a demonstration vineyard at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Stephenville. Researchers are looking for seedless varieties that will perform well in Central Texas as well as compete in the marketplace. Unfortunately, the planting in Stephenville won't answer these questions for our area.

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you before. However, when I read the letter from "Crying in Monroe, Mich.," it brought back some terrible memories, as I had also lost a beautiful Siamese cat in a clothes dryer. I since have learned that many others also lost a cat that way, as cats go where it is warm. Everyone with a washer-dryer should always look inside before turning it on. All you hear is one thump. Thank you.

Computer aids in giving quick weather forecasts

NEW YORK (AP) — A new computerized weather system can digest over 5 million bits of information a second and is making it easier for meteorologists to provide fast forecasts that used to take hours to prepare.

The system, developed by Harris Corp., acts as the forecaster's researcher. It constantly monitors weather conditions and flags significant changes that could spell fair weather or disaster. A Florida meteorologist, for example, can program it to alert him to frost conditions during the orange-growing season. In Boston, it could sound an alarm at the earliest indications of fog.

Lendl wins third consecutive Open

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — No one was surprised Ivan Lendl won his third straight U.S. Open championship — except Ivan Lendl.

"I just can't believe I won this one," a flustered Lendl said after his 6-7, 6-0, 7-6, 6-4 victory over Mats Wilander Monday. "I was out of juice for the last 3½ sets. It was strength of mind and a little bit of luck."

And the most relentless game tennis has seen since Bjorn Borg was in his prime. "He's just steadier than anyone else," Wilander said. "If I don't play well the whole match, he plays the same and he wins."

Lendl joined John McEnroe as the only men to win three successive titles in the Open era. "It's something I never dreamt of, it's unbelievable," said Lendl, the top seed who dropped only the one set to Wilander in the entire tournament and won his sixth Grand Slam crown — he has three French Open titles. "If somebody told me three years ago that I would win three in a row after losing three straight finals here, I wouldn't have believed it. I would have said that person was crazy."

Anyone who suggested that Wilander, a classic baseliner from Sweden and the third-ranked player in the world, would attempt to serve-and-volley in the Open final might have been accused of the same thing. But Wilander felt "it was the only way I could win."

"I think I played the way I have to," said Wilander, 23, who has two French Open and two Australian Open championships. "I was the one who was attacking, but you can't attack all the time.... I don't have that good a volley and he passes so well."

Martina Navratilova, who won the women's singles for the fourth time, beating Steffi Graf on Saturday, added the women's doubles and mixed doubles titles on Monday. That made her the first player since Billie Jean King at the 1973 Wimbledon to win the triple.

Navratilova, whose three championships made her the only player to collect at least $1 million from the Open — it took her 15 years to do so — teamed with Pam Shriver for the doubles crown and Emilio Sanchez of Spain in mixed.

She has won 48 Grand Slam titles. Lendl didn't think he did anything particularly well, except survive. "I've been in bed, feeling lousy, for four, 4½ days," he said. "If this was another tournament, I would not have played Saturday (in the semifinals against Jimmy Connors) or today."

"I had no strength for almost 3½ sets. I played on emotion."

Lendl, 27, of Czechoslovakia, has been accused of lacking emotion on the court. "I tried to keep my emotions up because my strength was going up and down," he said. "I felt like I was falling over on two or three points ... then I felt stronger."

"When I lost my strength, I felt quicker and able to move better."

"I'm not as flashy as they are," he said of some of his tour opponents. "I don't have as much talent as others but I work very hard on my game and I'm steadier."

He proved that when he beat Wilander in the French Open final in June. He displayed it once again here.

"In this kind of match," he said after collecting the $250,000 first prize, "there is such little difference between the players." Actually, there is a wide gap between Lendl and the rest of the men's tennis world. He certified that by winning a major title despite being ill.

Young helps Astros snap 8-game losing streak

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An ankle injury to Billy Hatcher in July turned out to be a blessing in disguise for the Houston Astros. It brought them Gerald Young.

"Gerald Young can play," Hatcher said. "He's done a great job for us this year. He plays good defense, he makes contact, he's patient and he doesn't try to do too much."

Young did enough Monday night against the Los Angeles Dodgers to help lead the fading Astros to an 8-2 victory that snapped Houston's eight-game road losing streak.

The rookie leadoff hitter had his second four-hit game of the season, reached base five times to extend his streak of reaching base to 23 consecutive games, set a club record with four stolen bases and scored two runs.

"Being a leadoff hitter, my main job is just to get into scoring position, whether it be a hit or a walk," Young said. "I'm not going to hit the ball out of the ballpark, so I have to get myself constantly in scoring position for the big guys in the lineup."

Young set up one of those runs by stealing second and third base in the sixth inning. It made him the third player in the majors this season with four steals in a game. Vince Coleman did it twice for the St. Louis Cardinals and Rickey Henderson did it once for the New York Yankees.

"Any time you can get that many stolen bases in a game it's a combination of things, getting good jumps and getting good pitches to run on," said Young, who has 22 steals this season. "That's what happened tonight."

The 23-year-old center fielder, a fifth-round draft pick of the New York Mets in June 1982, spent the entire 1986 season in Class AA ball and made the jump to Triple-A this season. But when Hatcher was unable to play, Young was brought up and inserted in left field. When Hatcher returned, Young won a starting job in center field and 18-year veteran Jose Cruz found himself on the bench.

Astros Manager Hal Lanier closed the clubhouse before the game and tore into several players he felt weren't doing the job he expected of them. His ire was fueled by three straight losses in San Diego over the weekend.

"It was a combination of things," Young said of the meeting. "We got the air cleared, Hal jumped on a few people, and that's what it takes."

The Astros pounded out 16 hits, four of them by Bass, who drove in four runs with a two-run homer and three singles. It was Bass' fourth four-hit game of the season.

Nolan Ryan, 8-14, allowed one run and eight hits over 6-2-3 innings for his 261st career win. He walked two, struck out nine and fanned at least one batter in each of the first seven innings.

The right-hander retired 12 in a row after the Dodgers loaded the bases with no one out in the first inning. He escaped another bases-loaded jam in the sixth by striking out pinch-hitter Ken Landreaux, but was nicked for a run in the seventh on Franklin Stubbs' RBI single.

"The key to my game tonight was that I had a good changeup," Ryan said. "My fastball was good at times, but it wasn't consistent. I didn't get my curveball over. I got a few strikeouts on it, but that was because I was ahead of the hitters."

Ryan, who lowered his ERA to 2.70, was staked to a three-run lead in the first inning.

His teammates roughed up rookie Shawn Hillegas, 2-3, with run-scoring singles by Young and Bill Doran and a sacrifice fly by Craig Reynolds. The Astros put it out of reach in the fifth on Glenn Davis' RBI single and a two-run homer by Bass, his 18th.

Two fielding errors by ex-Astro third baseman Phil Garner led to a pair of unearned runs in the sixth against reliever Bill Krueger.

Pampa girls' volleyball team opens district play at Dumas

Pampa's Lady Harvester volleyball team opens District 1-4A action tonight at Dumas. Matches begin at 6:30 p.m. with the junior varsity playing first.

Pampa finished 8-8 in non-district play after placing second in the Vernon Tournament last weekend.

The Lady Harvesters won their first two matches in the tournament and met Snyder in the finals. Snyder prevailed 15-11, 15-13. Pampa opened the tournament with a 15-1, 15-7 win over Windthorst. The Lady Harvesters then downed Vernon 15-6, 15-10 to reach the finals.

"We were a little flat in the finals, but we played real well the first two games," said Pampa Coach Mike Lopez. "We had some excellent spiking and setting. We just didn't hustle as well against Snyder, but we made a good run at them."

Yolanda Brown and Tanya Lidy of Pampa were named to the all-tournament team. "I feel like our good play in the tournament gave us some momentum going into tonight's district match," Lopez said.

Dumas ended non-district play with an 8-10 record, but like Pampa, most of the losses came against Class 5A schools.

In their 4A clashes tonight, Lubbock Dunbar meets Hereford, Canyon goes against Borger and Lubbock Estacado takes on Levelland.

Bears rout Giants

By JOE MOOSHL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Tomczak, Dennis McKinnon and the Chicago Bears defense had something to prove. They did it with such vicious determination that they left the Super Bowl champion New York Giants dumbfounded.

Tomczak threw touchdown passes of 42 and 56 yards, McKinnon came off of a one-year layoff with a team-record 94-yard punt return for a touchdown and the defense registered eight sacks for losses of 53 yards in a 34-19 rout of the Giants Monday night.

The much-heralded battle of the two previous Super Bowl champions turned into an unexpected rout.

"Take away the blocked punt and the interception and what did they have?" said McKinnon, who sat out 1986 because of a knee surgery.

In explaining his punt return, which eclipsed the previous team record of 89 yards by Ray "Scooter" McLean back in 1942, McKinnon said "I crawled for 20 yards, made a move and hit the end zone. That play sealed the coffin."

It came shortly after Terry Kinard intercepted a Tomczak pass and returned it 70 yards for a touchdown that cut the Bears' lead to 24-13 and gave the Giants a brief ray of hope.

"They beat us real good," said Giants' Coach Bill Parcells. "We haven't been beat like that in a long time.... Their quarterback was excellent considering it was his first start in a game of this magnitude."

The vaunted Giant defense did little to harass Tomczak, while the Bears were all over Giants quarterback Phil Simms, who had his bell rung several times and twice had to leave the game to clear the cobwebs. Tomczak nevertheless was not sacked once and threw touchdown passes of 42 yards to Ron Morris and 56 yards to Willie Gault in the third quarter.

Tomczak also sneaked a yard for a touchdown just before halftime and finished with 20 completions in 34 attempts for 292 yards.

"The greatest thing about this game is we got the football season started," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka, who apparently had his fill of the hype that centered around the contest ever since the NFL first announced the 1987 schedule.

The Giants took the opening kickoff and Simms quickly put the offense into gear as the Giants marched to the Chicago 10-yard line. Then came a sack by Todd Bell and Simms fumbled with Wilber Marshall recovering.

The Bears were forced to punt, but it was blocked by Erik Howard and Tom Flynn recovered in the end zone for a 7-0 New York lead.

Kevin Butler kicked a 24-yard field goal for the Bears before the quarter ended and then the Bears took charge after that with the defense repeatedly sacking Simms.

An 80-yard drive which ended with Tomczak's 1-yard sneak with :08 left in the half gave the Bears a 10-7 lead.

On Chicago's second possession in the second half, Tomczak hit Morris with a 42-yard touchdown pass. The next time the Bears got the ball, he threw a 56-yard touchdown pass to Gault on the first play.

Simms, who was the MVP in the Giants' 39-20 Super Bowl victory over Denver, could have blamed his protection for breaking down. But he said, "a couple of times I should have gotten rid of the ball earlier. I would have liked to gone deep down the field."

Alabama pushing Humphrey for Heisman

By PAUL NEWBERRY
Associated Press Writer

Alabama tailback Bobby Humphrey is only two games into his junior season, but already the talk has started: Can he win the Heisman Trophy?
Coach Bill Curry thinks so.
"We're in the team business. We're not in the individual business," Curry said Monday. But "Bobby Humphrey is the kind of person who ought to be a Heisman Trophy winner. And, if there's somebody in the country that's better than he is and deserves it more — I have certainly not seen him this year."

Alabama, one of the winningest teams in college football history, has never had a Heisman Trophy winner. However, Humphrey started some talk this weekend with his performance against Penn State.

He rushed for 220 yards against the defending national champions as the Crimson Tide snapped Penn State's 13-game winning streak, 24-13, before a national television audience.

Humphrey can do it all: run (he's the Tide's fourth-leading career rusher), pass (his 57-yard toss against Penn State set up a touchdown), return kicks (he's the Alabama career leader in that department), and catch passes (three receptions for 60 yards and a touchdown in the season-opening victory over Southern Mississippi).

But it's the things that don't show up in the statistics that have drawn Curry's admiration.

"This guy shows up for the off-season program like an untested red-shirt rookie," he said. "He shows up for practice and wins the 'I Love To Practice' award. We have to drag him off the field."

"What you can't see is the unseen, powerful influence that he has on our team. And I think that's what the Heisman Trophy winner should be."

In the first quarter against Penn State, Humphrey broke loose on a twisting, 73-yard touchdown run in which he avoided six potential tacklers. Later, with the Crimson Tide leading 9-0, he threw a halfback option pass that Clay Whitehurst carried to the Penn State 2 to set up another score.

Then in the fourth quarter, Humphrey shouldered the load during a drive which sealed the victory, carrying six straight times as Alabama moved 35 yards to the Penn State 32. Two plays later, Humphrey ran 12 more yards to the Penn State 10 to set up Alabama's final score.

"When you play a good team like Penn State, and the way I performed (Saturday night), my chances of winning the Heisman go up," Humphrey said.

The 6-foot-1, 187-pounder from Birmingham appears certain to break Johnny Musso's Alabama career record of 2,741 yards.

Former high school stars reunited in college

By LOUIE AVERY
Denison Herald

DENISON, Texas (AP) — Three years ago, Denison High School won a state championship in football and even more glory appeared to be over the horizon for players Tony Brown and Phillip Pryor.

Brown, the leader of that championship team as a senior linebacker and fullback, was overlooked by most of the major schools that season because of his size (6-1, 200) and eventually signed with the University of Texas-Arlington.

Pryor, only a junior that season, was a first-team all-state selection the following year as Denison extended its winning streak to 29 games before losing in the state quarterfinals.

The 6-foot-4, 290-pound Pryor was also recognized by several national publications and eventually inked with Oklahoma State University after considering schools across the nation.

Texas-Arlington dropped football after Brown's freshman season, and he quickly signed on at Southern Methodist University, where he became a starter. Then when SMU's football program was scuttled, he was headed for Arizona State before academic problems set in.

So Brown went to Western Kentucky instead and is starting at running back. He has one more year of eligibility after this season, and there's a good chance that a year from now Pryor again will be blocking for him.

Pryor never got his chance to play at Oklahoma State and quickly became disenchanted. He left school last winter and got married this summer thinking college and football were behind him.

However, several major schools, including Texas, were still interested in obtaining his services. Longhorn coach David McWilliams had tried to recruit Pryor when he was at Texas Tech.

But Western Kentucky coach Dave Roberts got Denison lawyer Tom Redwine on the phone first and Pryor is now enrolled at the Kentucky school.

"I just wasn't happy with the way Oklahoma State treated me," Pryor said. "I looked at the linemen they had on the field and I felt like I could compete with them. They told me things that never happened. I felt like they should have given me a chance, but that's enough bad things said about Oklahoma State."

Redwine played a major role in getting both Brown and Pryor to Western Kentucky. The Baylor graduate had a telephone conversation with Roberts, and he was impressed by the Hilltoppers' third-year coach, he said.

"Tony and I are very close. I love him like a brother or a son," said Redwine. "I told him what Coach Roberts had to say and we prayed for a decision. He could have gone to Arizona State on probation, or attended Georgia College for a semester to get his grades up. But I was impressed with Roberts and told Tony I thought Western Kentucky would be a good choice."

Western Kentucky lost to Gardner-Webb in its season-opener, but Brown rushed for nearly 100 yards and caught two passes to earn the team's player of the week honor.

Redwine was in the stands to view Brown's first performance. That afternoon, he informed the Western Kentucky coach of Pryor's predicament.

"Roberts told me to tell Phillip to call him if he was interested in Western Kentucky," said Redwine. "They offered him a scholarship over the phone because they were so impressed."

Cowboys' Walker wants to play despite injury

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Herschel Walker says he played with a separated shoulder all three years he was at the University of Georgia and for two years in the now-defunct USFL and isn't about to let the injury keep him out of the Dallas Cowboys' NFL clash Sunday with the New York Giants.

Walker, the Cowboys' all-purpose performer, injured his left shoulder on a critical fourth-quarter play in Sunday's 24-13 opening loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.

On third and four at the Dallas 26 with 1:52 left and Dallas leading 13-10, Walker caught a short swing pass. St. Louis' Carl Carter knocked Walker out of bounds inches short of the first down.

Walker suffered a separated shoulder on the play. Instead of having a first down that would have let the Cowboys run out much of the clock, Dallas punted and the Cardinals rallied to win.

"I hurt my shoulder on the play," Walker said. "I thought I had the first down taken it on upfield. But I knew my shoulder was separated and I was just trying to step past the line."

Walker said he played at Georgia for three years with a separated shoulder and had the problem two years with the New Jersey Generals in the USFL. "It's something I'm used to having and I'll play against the Giants," Walker said. "I'll be ready to go."

Walker said he may make some changes in his shoulder pads. "I might make an equipment adjustment," he said.

The Cowboys listed Walker as probable for the NFC Eastern Division game in New York.

Listed as questionable for the game were safety Mike Downs with a sprained shoulder and rookie kick returner Kelvin Martin, who suffered a leg injury in the preseason.

Also listed as probable was quarterback Danny White with "an irritated right wrist, sprained right shoulder, and strained neck."

Walker, who had 152 yards rushing and receiving, came into the game worried about a knee he injured in training camp. Walker didn't play in the Cowboys' 1-3 preseason.

Brawl lands UTEP players in jail

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A witness to a bar room brawl that landed two University of Texas-El Paso basketball players in jail said a woman started the altercation by hitting Chris Sandle, 21, in the head with a bottle.

"After that, he got all mad. I probably would have done the same thing. He tried hitting her back and people tried to stop him. People tried to hold him back. Tables were flying. Everybody was trying to get out of the way," Phil White, 21, told the El Paso Times on Monday.

White said he was sitting about 10 feet away from the incident that resulted in Sandle being charged with misdemeanor assault for hitting two women and both Sandle and teammate Chris Blocker, 22, being charged with resisting arrest.

UTEP basketball Coach Don Haskins and Athletic Director Brad Hovious embarked on their own fact-finding mission Monday. Hovious said Haskins will decide soon on the fate of Sandle and Blocker, both seniors and starters for the basketball team.

"When dealing with a student and possibly his career and well-being, we don't want to make decisions in a snap. The coach is entitled to sleep on it," Hovious said.

"I try to let my coaches handle the discipline for the different squads," Hovious said. "Each team has different personalities and different ground rules for the players. So it's hard to put in a policy that would apply to every case."

Haskins could not be reached at his home or office for comment.

Blocker played high school basketball at Northeast Philadelphia (Pa.) High School and transferred to UTEP from the Junior College of Southern Idaho. Sandle is a native of Long Beach, Calif.

Sandle, 21, said in a statement released Monday by the UTEP sports information office that the brouhaha began after one of the women turned him down when he asked her to dance.

"At a local nightclub last Saturday night I asked a young lady to dance with me. This developed into a heated discussion and her sister threw a bottle at me hitting me in the face," Sandle said.

Oilers' overcome mistakes for win

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers offense didn't go into a shell after making several first-half mistakes against the Los Angeles Rams.

Houston's explosive fourth-quarter comeback lifted the Oilers to a 20-16 victory Sunday.

A year ago it might not have happened, Coach Jerry Glanville said Monday.

"If we threw a couple of interceptions last year, I might have buttoned it up more," Glanville said.

Instead, the Oilers opened up even more and Warren Moon responded with two touchdown passes, lifting the Oilers to their third straight season opening victory.

"Before the game, we said all we wanted was to be close in the fourth quarter," Glanville said. "We told them something big would happen against us, that someone would jam a finger in our eye, but if we were three in the fourth quarter, we'd really go after it."

The Oilers opened the 1985 season with a 26-23 victory over Miami and then lost five games in a row. Last season they beat Green Bay to start the season and then started an eight-game losing streak.

They've finished with 5-11 records the past two seasons.

"It's a legitimate concern, because two years ago we beat a heck of a football team here," Glanville said. "What made this one something special is a lot of people thought we were out of the game."

Ripken's streak ends

TORONTO (AP) — Cal Ripken Sr.'s reason for ending Cal Ripken Jr.'s consecutive inning streak at 8,243 was simple.

"I want to get everybody to stop writing about the consecutive inning streak," said the Baltimore manager, referring to the media attention generated by his son's iron-man string.

The younger Ripken said he was "somewhat" surprised to hear he would be replaced defensively by Ron Washington in the bottom of the eighth inning Monday night as Baltimore was getting bombed by the Toronto Blue Jays, 18-3.

"He said 'if you hit, then you're going to come out,' and I hit in that inning," Ripken Jr. said. "I said (to him), 'all right.'"

Ripken, who had an RBI double earlier, hit into a fielder's choice. He went into the clubhouse briefly, then returned to the dugout to watch the Orioles play.
