Severe weather threatens Panhandle

From Staff and Wire Reports

Funnel clouds dipped out of stormy West Texas skies Monday night, primarily in the Panhandle and in the Trans Pecos region where a twister virtually wiped out the town of Saragosa only three days earlier.

More than a dozen funnel clouds were reported Monday evening after the National Weather Service issued a tornado watch for a vast area of West Texas.

Meanwhile, officials cautioned that conditions again were favorable for tornado development this afternoon and tonight.

Damage Monday was limited to some roofs, out-buildings, a mobile home and an airplane hangar, authorities said. There were no reports of injuries.

One funnel cloud was sighted near Pecos, not far from the tornado-devastated town of Saragosa, where a twister roared out of a heavy thunderstorm Friday night, killing 29 people and injuring more than 120.

The National Weather Service said severe thunderstorms struck the region as a mass of moist unstable air met a line of dry air, presenting conditions favorable for tornado formation.

A tornado watch was posted Monday for most of the Panhandle, including Gray County and the surrounding area. That watch expired at 4 a.m. today.

Heavy thunderstorms pounded Pampa, beginning at 11:30 p.m. Monday, leaving about 0.50 inch of rain in their wake. Tornado spotters encircled the city and watched while the storm passed to the northeast.

No tornadic activity was reported in Gray County, but Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Vaughn said the storm brought 30 mph winds that at times gusted to 50 mph. The wind and strong rains reduced visibility to near zero at one point during the storm, Vaughn said.

Lightning struck an electrical power transformer in the 1900 block of North Zimmers shortly after midnight, but the Pampa Fire Department reported no serious damage or injuries. Vaughn said power was lost briefly in downtown Pampa.

A Pampa meteorologist offered little hope for a quick end to the severe weather, which has already dumped more than 10 inches of moisture on the area this year.

"It's looking very favorable for a couple of more days of this," said KGRO-KOMX meteorologist Darrell Sehorn.

Sehorn said the combination of large amounts of Gulf air, a slow-moving frontal system to the west and low pressure in the upper atmosphere over BALMORHEA — Prayers for the dead and the living were uttered today as more than 1,000 mourners filled the Balmorhea school gymnasium at a wake for the victims of Friday's tornado that obliterated the nearby town of Saragosa.

The families and friends of the 29 victims were led in saying the rosary by Bishop Raymond Pena and Father Ralph Barranger, the local pastor.

Seated on folded chairs on the gym floor, the mourners responded in turn to the prayers of the rosary, said in both Spanish and English.

The bishop already had visited with individual families spread through the school classrooms in private mourning parlors.

"As I went from room to room to join you in prayer tonight, I became increasingly more silent," said Pena.

"The persons who I saw I had seen many times. I feel like I'm a member of every family and I am sad," he said. "My heart is rent."

While the devastated Saragosa residents buried their family and friends, donations ranging from a little girl's piggy bank to a golfer's $10,000 are pouring in from Pampa to Canada.

Local relief agencies are seeking financial assistance, not donation of food or clothing. Said Lt. Carl Hughes of the Pampa Salvation Army: "We are really needing money more than anything."

Hughes said the Pampa Salvation Army is not directly involved in relief efforts, although residents have called to offer donations.

Gray County Red Cross Manager Joyce Roberts said the local chapter is standing by with assistance, but has not yet been called.

Roberts said the chapter will welcome "any financial assistance" residents may offer. Donors may bring checks to the Red Cross office on at 108 N. Russell or mail them to Box 1036.

"We are not encouraging donations of clothing," Roberts said. "We found in the past, used clothing is a problem to move."

"These people now have nothing but each other," Reeves County Sheriff Raul Florez said Monday. The tornado that struck Friday night in the west Texas town injured 121 people and did an estimated $1.4 million damage, destroying 70 percent of the town — including 55 homes, a church and a community center where 100 people were attending a preschool graduation.

"This town looks like photographs from Hiroshima," said state Rep. Larry Don Shaw.

The first funerals were for a 25-year-old woman and her son, who were buried Monday, a day after what would have been the boy's first birthday, in Pecos about 35 miles northeast of here.

Backhoes performed the grim task of digging graves for today's mass burial.

Among those digging was Reeves County Commissioner Ishmael Dutchover, who climbed down from a backhoe and said, "I know all these people. They're dear friends of mine."

Saragosa had been home to about 350 people, mostly Mexican-Americans, who owned their homes but had little if any insurance or savings.

"We can use all the help we can get," said Gabriel Canales, 33, whose parents' store was destroyed. "These people lost everything they had. They're homeless, they've got no money, and any personal belongings they've had they've lost."

Gov. Bill Clements said he would tour Saragosa today, and

Donna Rice tires of media attention

MIAMI (AP) — Donna Rice, who gained the national spotlight because of her relationship with Gary Hart, said she is fed up with all the publicity she has received.

"I feel like I've been used," Rice told free-lance photographer Bill Cooke on Monday. "I don't even watch the news anymore."

Rice said she feels the media victimized her by putting her face "on the cover of every magazine in America."

The latest Rice cover photograph is on the June 2 issue of National Enquirer, in which she is pictured sitting on the lap of a smiling Hart during what the tabloid called "a fun-filled weekend in the Bahamas."

Although Rice told Cooke she did not know about the Enquirer pictures, she had said in a May 4 interview that many tourists "made a fuss" over Hart in Bimini and may have taken pictures of them together.

Pampa widow files suit in fatal wreck

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The widow of a Pampa man who died in a traffic accident east of Groom last October has filed a $6.7 million lawsuit against her dead husband's cousin.

Steve Monroe Helton, 25, 2400 Rosewood, died Oct. 18 from injuries sustained when a 1985 Toyota pickup truck reportedly driven by his cousin, Justin Avery Helton, 21, of Pampa, rolled over on Texas Highway 70, 11.9 miles east of Groom. The accident occurred in Gray County, just south of Interstate Highway 40.

Justin Helton and passenger Tonya Parsons, 18, of Panhandle, were injured in the crash.

The suit filed by Steve Helton's widow, Toni, accuses Justin Helton of showing "heedless, reckless disregard" for the life of his cousin.

In an answer filed by Justin Helton's attorney, S. Tom Morris of Amarillo, the defendant denies each allegation and claims that his cousin was "negligent in failing to exercise reasonable protections for his own safety."

Morris declined to discuss the case today.

"I prefer not to talk about my cases that are pending in court," Morris said.

Helton also faces a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with his cousin's death. The criminal indictment was returned in 223rd District Court, where the civil action was filed. Last Monday, 223rd District Judge Don Cain continued the criminal case until July 20.

According to reports filed by Department of Public Safety Trooper Don King of Groom, the pickup was speeding northbound on Highway 70 when the younger Helton failed to negotiate a sharp left curve near the interstate overpass. Both Heltons were thrown from the vehicle and Parsons was pinned inside when it left the roadway, King's report says.

King later filed a complaint

Donovan tries to rebuild reputation after acquittal

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Calling his faith in justice renewed, former U.S. Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan emerged exultant yet bitter from his acquittal of charges that made him the first sitting Cabinet member ever indicted.

"Which office do I go to get my reputation back?" asked Donovan after a state jury found him innocent Monday of the larceny and fraud charges that forced him from office more than two years ago.

The jury found Donovan, seven co-defendants and two companies innocent of all charges that they stole $7.4 million in a Manhattan subway construction contract from 1979 to 1984.

The verdict, after 9½ hours of deliberations during two days, capped a complex and contentious eight-month trial at state Supreme Court. After the jury was dismissed, some jurors offered harsh critiques of prosecutor Stephen R. Bookin's case.

"There was no case. There was no evidence there. There was no proof," said Rosa Edwards, a 55-year-old postal clerk. She said of Donovan, "He should not have been brought down."

The case involved Donovan's position as co-owner of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J. While unrelated to his government service, it forced his resignation as labor secretary in March 1985, six months after his indictment.

"A 2½-year nightmare that began in September of 1984 is now behind us," Donovan said. "The jury has reawakened my faith in our system. It was shattered here for nine months."

Donovan, 56, a former seminarian, made the sign of the cross as the verdict was read by the jury's forewoman, Rosa Milligan. His wife, Catherine, seated behind him, wept into a handkerchief.

When it acquitted him of the last of the 10 counts he faced — one of grand larceny and nine of keeping and filing false business records — Donovan turned to the jury, nodded and silently mouthed, "Thank you."

Charged with Donovan were five other Schiavone executives and the co-owners of a minority-owned subcontractor: black Democratic state Sen. Joseph Galiber and William P. Masselli, a reputed organized crime associate.

The defendants and their families greeted the acquittals with emotion and glee. Several defendants' wives and one defense lawyer wept. When Justice John P. Collins thanked the jurors, the defendants and their lawyers applauded.

Afterward, Donovan spoke bitterly of the charges against him, which he had said from the start were politically motivated to embarrass President Reagan before the 1984 election. When asked if he would serve in government again, Donovan replied: "I will not."

Reagan, in Washington, voiced pleasure of the acquittal. "I have always known Ray Donovan as a man of integrity and I am happy to see this verdict," he said in a planned to request federal disaster funds.

If Saragosa is declared a disaster area, its people may qualify for benefits such as low-interest government loans to rebuild. But the declaration might not be enough, said Shaw.

"These people are so poor that they may not even qualify for low-interest loans," said Shaw. "But the big thing is to get them financial aid."

While government money is not certain, donations are coming in from as far away as Canada.

In Balmorhea, an American Red Cross disaster center has been getting offers from everywhere, said Susan Clowe, a Red Cross spokeswoman from St. Louis.

"One little girl brought down her piggy bank and gave 89 cents. One man brought in pennies in a paper bag," Red Cross volunteer Margaret Burton said. "People are digging deep and helping."

Golfer Chi Chi Rodriguez donated $10,000 of his $37,500 first-place winnings from the Silver Pages Classic seniors' tournament in Oklahoma City this weekend, said Dewanna Florez, the sheriff's wife. Pecos Jaycees attending their state convention in Corpus Christi passed the hat for $6,100.

At a convention in Odessa on Saturday night, American Legionnaires auctioned off a gold-plated eagle and raised $3,000 to send to the victims.

Shaw said his Austin office is coordinating the Saragosa Capitol Relief Fund, which is accepting money from state government officials and employees.

Pecos High School's senior class cancelled a graduation dance, instead giving the money it would have cost to the Saragosa survivors.

Meanwhile, vans, pickups, tractor-trailer rigs and station wagons continued to arrive at the disaster center with donations of food, clothing and household items. Among the items were baby formula and baseball caps.

Suit

with the Precinct 2 Justice of the Peace office, claiming the fatal accident occurred because Justin Helton was drunk at the time.

"I have determined as a result of my investigation, and discussing and interviewing witnesses, that Mr. (Justin) Helton was intoxicated at the time of this incident," King said in the complaint.

King's complaint was used as the basis for the involuntary manslaughter indictment that was returned by a grand jury in November.

In her wrongful death suit, Mrs. Helton also alleges that her husband's cousin was driving while intoxicated. The suit says Helton was negligent in failing to negotiate the turn.

Additional allegations in the civil suit claim that the pickup was traveling at 78 mph in a 40-mph zone and that Justin Helton was overdriving his headlights, made an improper turn, failed to keep a proper lookout, failed to properly apply his brakes, drove on the wrong side of the road and allowed Parsons to drive the pickup.

Mrs. Helton's attorney, John Warner of Pampa, said Friday that he expects to begin taking depositions from witnesses by the middle of next month and hopes for a fall trial date. He said he plans to request a jury trial.

However, Warner may have to amend his original suit, which mistakenly dates the accident Oct. 18, 1987, instead of 1986.

Mrs. Helton, who now resides in Oklahoma, is seeking $3 million in punitive damages, $1.1 million in loss of income, $1 million each for the loss of love and comfort of her husband and for mental anguish, $500,000 for loss of inheritance, $100,000 for the pain her husband suffered and roughly $3,900 for funeral expenses.

Rice

Another photo in the Enquirer shows the former Democratic presidential candidate and Rice standing with William Broadhurst, a friend of Hart's, and Lynn Armandt, a friend of Rice's who knew Broadhurst. Hart is holding maracas. Broadhurst is seated behind a set of drums and the women are holding microphones.

In both pictures, Hart is shown wearing a T-shirt that reads, "Monkey Business Crew," an apparent reference to the yacht on which the four sailed to Bimini in March.

Rice also has been on the cover of People magazine, prominently featured in Time and Newsweek, and Life will publish her story in its July issue.

Hart, 50, dropped his bid for the presidential nomination May 8 after revelations that Rice, 29, spent part of the preceding weekend with him at his Washington townhouse. Both denied being romantically involved.

Rice, who lives in Miami, said she has changed her phone number and doesn't know what she will do next, according to Cooke, who photographed her in 1984 for a department store advertising a swimsuit line.

He said Rice told him she doesn't trust reporters and photographers anymore. She said most of the photographs she has seen in magazines were test shots, photographs for a model's portfolio where no release is signed.

"Everyone I've tested with has put my face on every magazine in America," Cooke quoted Rice as saying.

statement. "I have never lost confidence in him."

The defense called no witnesses, arguing simply that no crime was committed and that Bookin and Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola had acted out of personal ambition.

At a news conference Monday evening, Merola called charges of political motivation "absolute nonsense."

"We have to accept the verdict," Merola said. "There's got to be winners and losers and unfortunately we can't win all the time."
Bookin, who spent 3 1/2 years developing and pre-sending the case, left the courtroom without comment.

Donovan's lawyers have said the defense of the Schiavone executives cost the firm more than $13 million, and the company lost business worth scores of millions.

"Who will reimburse my company for the economic jail it's been in for 2 1/2 years?" Donovan asked after the verdict.

Theodore W. Geiser, lawyer for Schiavone, said the company will press a federal lawsuit against Merola, asking that he pay for its expenses for a public relations firm to counter his comments at news conferences.

Court gives aliens defense claim City Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illegal aliens prosecuted for re-entering the country after being deported may defend themselves by challenging the validity of their initial deportation, the Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices rejected Reagan administration arguments that such tactics should not be allowed.

The court said that although immigration law does not provide for such delayed challenges of deportations, the constitutional right of due process requires that such tactics be allowed in some cases.

"Where a determination made in an administrative proceeding is to play a critical role in the subsequent imposition of a criminal sanction, there must be some meaningful review of the administrative proceeding," Justice Thurgood Marshall wrote for the court.

As the court invalidated criminal indictments against two Mexicans arrested in Lincoln, Neb., Marshall said, "Because (the men) were deprived of their rights to appeal... the deportation proceeding in which these events occurred may not be used to support a criminal conviction, and the dismissal of the indictments against them was therefore proper."

New Mexico are causing severe weather to remain in the Panhandle. He said Pampans can expect some relief by Thursday.

Pampa has received 4.58 inches of rain this month — compared with a monthly average of 3.3 inches — and has received roughly 2 1/2 more inches than the year-to-date average of 7.6 inches, Sehorn reported.

Both Sehorn and Vaughn said conditions are favorable for tornado activity in the area again today and tonight. Vaughn said he expects to have to call his tornado spotters out again sometime today.

Monday's tornado watch also included Reeves County, where Saragosa is located. Numerous funnel clouds were sighted amid severe thunderstorms, and at least one tornado touched down in neighboring Ward County but no damage was reported.

Funnel clouds also were reported near Amarillo, and, to the south, in Randall County.

A tornado reportedly touched down five miles southwest of the town of Hart and was moving to the northwest about 7:30 p.m., but "our officers never saw a tornado near Hart," a Castro County sheriff's dispatcher said. He said a funnel cloud was sighted elsewhere in the county but went back into the sky.

A tornado was seen dipping down from the clouds in Armstrong County, and then going back up, but the storm dissipated, said Tom Henry Miller, who takes calls at night for the sheriff's office.

Several tornadoes touched down near Gruver, in the extreme northern Panhandle, damaging a trailer home, an airstrip hangar and blowing the roof off at least one barn. Hansford County Sheriff's officers said.

Officials said there was some minor structural damage to some homes near the town of Waka in neighboring Ochiltree County.

Widely scattered showers were reported early today over parts of the Texas Panhandle and South Plains.

A ridge of high pressure was located early today over the eastern third of the third and low pressure spread across West Texas.

Forecasts called for a chance of scattered showers or thunderstorms over the Hill Country, Southeast Texas and over West Texas east of the mountains through tonight. A few of the thunderstorms may reach severe levels in the area of west Texas east of the mountains, forecasters say.

Elsewhere, skies will be partly to mostly cloudy through Wednesday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s except in the higher elevations of West Texas where readings dipped into the 50s. Extremes ranged from 55 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 81 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 66 at Amarillo, 70 at Wichita Falls, 73 at Fort Worth and Waco, 72 at Austin, 73 at San Antonio, 74 at Houston, 76 at Brownsville, 71 at San Angelo, 68 at Lubbock and Midland and 69 at El Paso.

Main Street surveys attitudes

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

The Main Street Project has hired Johnson, Moore, Kelley and Associates of Waco to conduct a community and a regional consumer attitude survey.

The firm is made up of professors from the Hankamer School of Business at Baylor who take an interest in the Main Street concept of business revitalization. Funding of the project has come from donations in the Pampa area.

In approaching the appraisal of a community's ability to revitalize the retail market, several major areas are covered. The surveys provide information that helps a community and its retailers spot the changing or emerging consumer preferences, attitudes and shopping patterns.

These changing patterns can influence the methods of merchandising, the physical structure, the concepts of pricing and other areas of marketing strategy in serving the community's and region's consumers.

Households will receive a survey the third or fourth week in June; 13,000 surveys will be sent out, with 6,000 geared toward the Pampa community and 7,000 going to households in the northeastern Panhandle region through the cooperation of the Berger, Canadian and Perryton newspapers.

Please take the few minutes required to fill out your survey. Postage is paid by the firm, so it's no cost to you. This is a means of voicing your opinion to better your community and what it has to offer.

Also on the Main Street agenda is the filling of vacancies on its advisory board. This year the board will provide assistance to the Main Street office by serving on the Retail Recruitment Committee, Facade Fund Review Board, Promotions Committee and Communications Committee. Terms on the advisory board are typically one year in length.

If you are interested in being considered for an appointment to the Main Street Advisory Board, please send a letter stating your interest to the mayor and City Commission.

You may send them directly to the mayor and/or City Commission, or you may send them to me — Bob Hart, P.O. Box 2499, Pampa, Texas 79066-2499 — and I will forward the letters to the mayor and commissioners for their review and consideration.

Negotiators hope for spending bill by Wednesday

AUSTIN (AP) — The chief House negotiator on the state budget conference committee says he hopes the panel can finish work on a spending plan by Wednesday.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said Monday he had discussed the scenario with Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple, chief Senate negotiator.

"He and I have discussed it thoroughly, and we both want a bill out by Wednesday," Rudd said.

Asked about the comment, Jones described himself as "guardedly optimistic." He said that "as a practical matter" it would be very difficult for the Legislature to take final action on the bill by the June 1 adjournment if the committee takes any longer.

The 10-member conference committee has been meeting to try to resolve differences between the Senate's $40 billion 1988-89 budget and the $39.4 billion House spending plan.

Rudd said he and the other House conferees decided the negotiating committee should offer some bill to the House and Senate before adjournment.

Reflecting the generally more-conservative House view, Rudd said they had agreed they would yield on some spending questions "without giving away the store."

"It was decided it was real important that we get through with the (appropriations) bill and deliver something to the House floor. That's what we're going to do. Not at any cost, but at a cost of probably going a little higher than we would (otherwise) choose to go," Rudd said.

A budget bill alone won't solve the state's financial crisis, however. To meet the constitution's balanced-budget requirement, a bill to raise taxes also appears necessary, lawmakers say.

But Gov. Bill Clements has vowed to veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion, and he said again Monday he doesn't believe the Legislature will meet his spending limit.

"In talking with some of the senators, and also the House members, I really don't have a sense of optimism about it," Clements said.

If no balanced budget is enacted by the mandatory June 1 adjournment, the governor would summon lawmakers back into a special session this summer. The state's budget year ends Aug. 31.

Clements said that before he calls a special session, a plan of action for lawmakers to follow is needed. He said agreement between himself, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis "would be highly desirable."

The governor said strategy-mapping has begun.

"We're already talking about that. We're trying to come to some conclusion about how we might approach the problem. I think we need to have an agenda, we need to have ... not just strategy but the tactics to accomplish the strategy," he said.

Clements said he thinks a final 1988-89 budget would spend about $27.2 billion to $27.3 billion from the state's major funds. Legislative plans topped $28 billion in those areas.

While lawmakers say a Senate majority generally favors higher taxes, the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee on Monday sounded pessimistic about getting such a bill through the 150-member House this week.

Clements seeks federal help

AUSTIN (AP) — A request from Gov. Bill Clements is on its way to the White House, seeking a major disaster declaration and federal aid for Saragosa and the survivors of the deadly tornado that nearly leveled the town.

Clements signed a letter to President Reagan on Monday that could, if approved by federal officials, trigger loans, grants and other assistance.

"I have determined that this incident is of such severity and magnitude that effective response is beyond the capabilities of the state and the affected local government, and that supplementary federal assistance is necessary," Clements wrote.

The signing came shortly after Clements announced plans to visit the tornado-ravaged West Texas town today.

Clements' letter asked Reagan to issue a major disaster declaration for Saragosa, where 29 people died, 120 were injured and homes, a school, a community hall and businesses were leveled Friday night.

"The tornadoes struck without warning in parts of Reeves County," Clements told Reagan. He signed the letter in his Capitol office with State Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, looking on. Sims' district includes Saragosa.

"There are no words that can soften the pain and anguish or replace the loss of the people of Saragosa," Clements said. "There is nothing that can replace loved ones or the lives and homes they shared with survivors who now must pick up and go on."

"But it is with heartfelt sincerity that I express sorrow for Saragosa's victims," he said. "It is no easy task they face, rebuilding lives from scratch. But with faith and perseverance, along with help from authorities, this community can once again abound with life."

The governor's division of emergency management said that state, local and federal officials assessed the damage Sunday in anticipation of a request for the disaster declaration.

Robert Lansford, state coordinator for the emergency management division, said the damage assessment "allowed those involved in the declaration process to have a first-hand look at the extent of the damage and collect data, which is necessary when making a recommendation to the governor or president."

His office said that for the state to receive federal disaster aid, Clements must ask Reagan for the major disaster declaration.

Modified homestead law would not be bad idea, study says

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Allowing homeowners to borrow against the equity in their homes, the study released Monday says, "and it seems out of character for a state that values free enterprise so highly to continue to impose government restrictions on the use of homeowners' wealth."

Every state except Texas permits homeowners to borrow against the equity in their homes, the study released Monday says, "and it seems out of character for a state that values free enterprise so highly to continue to impose government restrictions on the use of homeowners' wealth."

In other states, homeowners may obtain home equity loans to finance college educations, second homes, medical expenses and other large purchases.

Except for California in the early 1980s, evidence from other states does not indicate substantial increases in the risk of foreclosure, the study says. Other states have not found it necessary in their homestead laws to restrict homeowners' access to their equity to protect them from entering into unwise, misleading or deceitful loan agreements, the study says.

A constitutional amendment to permit borrowing against home equity is pending in the Texas Legislature.

"Most Texans favor the change, and there is little evidence that exists to support the concerns of those opposed to it," says professor Al H. Ringleb.

HENNARD

Wheeler honor graduates know where they're going

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

WHEELER — While many graduating seniors face an uncertain future, Wheeler High School honor graduates know where they're going.

Valedictorian Thomas Augusta Hennard III — better known as "Augie" — is bound for Texas A&M on a scholarship. There, he will major in chemistry on his way to a medical degree.

After that, Hennard hopes to return to the Panhandle to be a family practitioner.

Hennard, 18, believes his 12 years in the Wheeler school system have given him a good start.

The son of the late Dr. Tommie A. Hennard Jr. and Betty Jo Hennard, Hennard graduates with a four-year grade average of 96.83. He has been on the Wheeler Mustang basketball and football teams and is president of the National Honor Society.

His interest in writing earned him second place honors in class A at the State University Interscholastic League Academic Contest.

Salutatorian Tina Alvey will attend Angelo State University, where she will major in journalism. She hopes to become a political journalist.

She, too, seems to be off to a good start. Her term paper was on the Iran-Contra affair.

The 17-year-old daughter of Jim and Beth Alvey graduates with a 93.05 grade average. She has been a member of the yearbook staff and the Future Homemakers of America for four years, having served this year as the FHA vice president. She is also vice president of the National Honor Society.

Alvey has also been active in University Interscholastic drama contests, where she earned a spot on the District All Star Cast, and in journalism, where she competed in editorial and feature writing.

They believe that despite the limited number of classes available at Wheeler — no "honors" program or journalism classes — they have received sound preparation for college.

"The advantages far outweigh the disadvantages," Hennard said. "Anyone can get involved in athletics and you can have real close friendships."

Alvey said she was able to take "a lot of advanced courses."

While both students plan to get involved in college activities, they admit they will miss their friends here.

Authorities seize marijuana, cocaine

FALFURRIAS (AP) — Border Patrol agents confiscated marijuana and cocaine worth more than $23 million after stopping a tractor-trailer rig carrying onions, authorities said.

The refrigerated rig was stopped at about 11 p.m. Sunday night at the Falfurrias Border Patrol checkpoint, said E.J. Vickery.

After agents grew suspicious of the vehicle, drug-sniffing dogs were brought in and found 1,522 pounds of marijuana and 689 pounds of cocaine, Vickery said Monday.

Groups refining collider proposals

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials of the two groups whose proposals won the Texas competition for the "super collider" atom smasher say they are refining their plans for possible flaws before making pitches to the U.S. Department of Energy.

"We probably have about 10 times as much work to do as we did to get to the state competition," said Buck Jordan, of the Dallas-Fort Worth group.

Larry Milner, leader of the Amarillo group, agreed. "We started at 9 a.m. the morning after the (state) selection, triple-checking every statistic and every fact in our presentation," Milner said.

The two locations are the Texas entries in a national competition for the $6 billion super collider. When completed in the 1990s, the high-energy physics research project will probe the fundamentals of matter and energy.

Jordan is executive director of the Waxahachie Chamber of Commerce. The Dallas-Fort Worth group's proposal would have Waxahachie above the center of the atom smasher's 52-mile-long underground tunnel.

Milner is president of the Amarillo chamber, which is proposing to build the huge project in a covered ditch near Happy in Swisher County.

Both sites were selected earlier this month from a field of 14 prospects offered to the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission.

The super collider is expected to create several thousand construction jobs and up to 3,000 permanent jobs when completed. The Department of Energy will begin reviewing the state entries on Aug. 3, and it is expected to name finalists by December.

Prosecutor's trial to begin

AUSTIN (AP) — Trial was scheduled to begin today in the federal racketeering case against McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell.

The trial will be held before U.S. District Judge James Nowlin, who earlier rejected a defense motion to dismiss the charges.

Feazell, 35, was indicted last year by a federal grand jury that alleged he accepted money in exchange for his influence on pending criminal cases.

Feazell denies the charges and alleges that the 12-count federal indictment is an effort by the Texas Department of Public Safety to retaliate against him for his investigation into murder confessions made by Henry Lee Lucas.

Lucas once claimed responsibility for more than 300 slayings nationwide, but he later recanted and said the claims were a hoax to discredit law enforcement officers.

A McLennan County grand jury investigated Lucas' confessions and declined to indict Lucas in any of three Waco-area killings to which he once confessed.

Nowlin last week denied a motion to dismiss the charges against Feazell.

The judge also rejected defense requests that the trial be moved from Austin to Waco and that evidence found in searches of Feazell's home and office be suppressed.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Motorists will burn more foreign petrol

This is vacation time, and vacation travelers have hit the road or are planning to make trips. Chances are good that vacationers driving their own cars may discover that gasoline bargains have disappeared. The recent increases across the nation were in response to a slow climb in world petroleum markets.

The situation at the gasoline pump may be grounds for some pondering by American motorists. One of the things that Americans may be giving considerable thought is that the United States again faces dependence on foreign oil. One may refer to various statistics and learn that oil imports presently amount to a third of the total U.S. oil consumption.

One may in turn see that the amount oil imports again matches that recorded about the time of the 1973-74 oil embargo.

Americans are cognizant of the dilemma of the domestic oil industry following the country's rise from the energy 'crisis' of the last decade. The domestic industry reaped benefits from OPEC's past price increases, but the domestic industry's fall was steeper than its rise when OPEC later opened the spigot on cheaper crude.

While the current world price of oil naturally may lead to an increase in the per-gallon price one pays at the pump, there is another problem. Some states, Texas included, have increased their gasoline taxes, and motorists must pay this higher tribute at pumps in those states.

The higher taxes on gasoline only worsen problems related to dependence on foreign oil and a slumping domestic industry.

One may not linger long in thinking about the American dependency on imported oil before coming to the conclusion that more domestic production could answer that problem and other problems. The decline of domestic production resulted in many oil-related firms laying off personnel and cutting their activities. The decline in domestic production has been costly to America, in jobs and related taxes.

These are just some things for vacation travelers to think about as they enjoy the sights of America in the weeks and months to come.

A cool study of ship attack

WASHINGTON — The admonition dates to at least 1848 in the etymology of English slang, but it applies with contemporary meaning to the attack on the USS Stark: Let us not go off half-cocked.

As a Navy board of inquiry begins its investigation, the number of things we know are far outnumbered by the things we don't know. We know that at least 37 members of the Stark's crew died in the fires and explosions that racked the frigate a little after 10 a week ago Sunday night. We know because the Iraqi government has admitted it, that the fatal missile (or missiles) came from an Iraqi fighter plane. We know that the Stark was in international waters well south of the line that had been drawn across the Persian Gulf to confine hostilities. We know that the Stark did not return fire.

Beyond those rudimentary facts, we know very little. Was the attack an accident? Iraq says it was, and Iraq has apologized for it, but prudence suggests that the explanation be put on hold. There is much to indicate, though not to prove, that the Iraqi plane had the technological capacity to identify the Stark for what it was.

What, precisely, were the "rules of engagement" under which the Stark was steaming? Pentagon spokesmen insist that the frigate had the full authority to fire once it knew it was being fired upon, but it would surprise no one familiar with Navy regulations to learn that full authority is not always full authority. Since the days of Lord Nelson, orders from an admiralty have been characterized by ambiguity. It is a fair surmise that the ship captains in zones of belligerence are instructed to protect themselves on the one hand, but not to create international incidents on the other.

We know that the Stark had defensive armaments. Why were these not employed? In mid-week we heard tentative explanations, and these seem plausible. The frigate's officers had no reason to anticipate the attack; U.S. ships in the Gulf are often "locked on" by Iraqi or Iranian aircraft. As a safety precaution, the ship's awesome Gatling guns normally are kept in an "off" mode. It takes several minutes for them to be activated. The attack was at night, and only a few seconds elapsed between the firing and the impact. Before the ship's captain, Cmdr. Glenn R. Brindel, is pilloried, let us wait upon the evidence.

The board of inquiry will be headed by Vice Adm. Grant Sharp. I met the admiral during a visit to the Sixth Fleet in January and was much impressed by him. He is a seagoing man, soft-spoken, but with steel in his spine. He will be looking for facts, not excuses.

The board's investigation will take time; it cannot be hurried. Meanwhile, the attack may serve a useful purpose. It reminds us anew of the sacrificial heroism of those who serve in the U.S. Navy, whether in peace or in war. The 37 men who died in the suffocating smoke and flames were out there in the Persian Gulf, far from their loved ones, doing their lonely duty in the long tradition of men who man ships of the line.

It is nauseating to hear pipsqueak voices on Capitol Hill whining that the United States has no business patrolling the Persian Gulf. Even in an age when technology threatens to overwhelm vessels that cruise at 35 knots, a naval presence is vital to our national interest. The sea lanes of the world must be kept open to the commerce of the world, and these lanes cannot be kept open by mooring our ships in snug harbors at home.

The attack on the Stark coincided with a decision by the administration to put U.S. flags on 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers. It will be several weeks before the decision can be put into effect. In this period, Congress has every right to examine the wisdom of this protective move. Here, again, let us not go off half-cocked. Plausible arguments support the decision. Will this "flagging" heighten the risk of unacceptable involvement? We hear opinions pro and con. It is time for listening. At the very least, it seems to me, the administration should insist that our allies — notably Japan, France and Great Britain — should share the risk by a naval presence of their own. After all, they are the ones that benefit from Middle Eastern oil.

The temptation to vent undiluted outrage is strong. The Stark had done nothing to provoke the attack. Our men are dead. But before we raise the emotional hammer to full-cock, let us draw a long breath. If retaliation against Iraq is justified, suitable punishment can be imposed in time.

Bow tie shows square head

I have no idea who is going to win the Democratic nomination for president in 1988 at the convention in Atlanta, but I know for sure who isn't. Gary Hart for obvious reasons, and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, for this reason:

Senator Simon wears a bow tie, and I simply don't think America is ready for a presidential candidate, much less a president, who wears bow ties — especially in the 1980s.

I think of bow ties and I think of Jimmy Olson, cub reporter for the Daily Planet in the old Superman TV series.

And didn't Mr. Peepers wear bow ties? If not, he should have.

Bow ties have come back into fashion over the past several years, and a number of my friends are wearing them, but, although they are good friends, I don't think any of them could win the nomination for president, either.

Bow ties, for one thing, make men who wear them look like they have square heads.
Next time you see Sen. Simon on television notice how square his head looks.

Do you think the Russians could have respect for a man with a square head? Could Congress?

You see a man wearing a bow tie whose head looks square, and you immediately think, "What sort of vacuum cleaners does this man sell?"

Also, it's a real pain to tie a bow tie, and I assume Paul Simon's bow ties aren't the clip-on type. If they are then that's another reason he's not going anywhere in the presidential race. A man who wears a clip-on bow tie probably rolls his socks down to his ankles, too, like your grandfather did.

A man that has to get up every morning of his life and wrestle with tying a bow tie probably is completely worn out by the time he is finished dressing and won't be worth a dime the rest of the day.

I'm not certain you can completely trust a man who wears a bow tie either.
What are his motives for doing such a thing?

Is he trying to make a fashion statement? Or is he trying to make you think he's some sort of harmless dufus so that you'll think you're getting a swell deal on the used Plymouth he's selling you.

Neckwear says a lot about a man. You know not to get involved in anything with a man who wears even a single gold chain around his neck. This sort of man will try to talk you into going to work for him selling encyclopedias door to door.

A man with more than one gold chain around his neck probably is named Vito, smokes menthol cigarettes and is in the import business in Miami.

Also, beware of men in turtleneck sweaters (they could be terrorists, or, worse, dentists), Nehru jackets (unless they're riding elephants), or beads. (This ain't Club Med, Jack.)

I hope Sen. Simon gets this message and either drops out of the race before he wastes a lot of time and money or gets himself a regular tie like the other candidates, who are a bunch of squareheads, too, but have learned to hide it.

Flying giant hits pocket of turbulence

By Robert Walters

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (NEA) — Although airline passengers' "horror stories" have become common, few can rival the tale of the people who recently attempted to fly from Albuquerque, N.M., to Tucson, Ariz.

More than 100 travelers aboard an Eastern Airlines jet on a spring evening waited for an hour while the plane sat on the tarmac, then were told that the aircraft would not make the scheduled one-hour flight to Tucson because of a faulty fuel gauge.

No airline had any Albuquerque-Tucson flights scheduled later that evening, which, in earlier years, meant Eastern would have provided the passengers with lodging and meals that night and the next morning.

But the stranded passengers received little or no assistance from Eastern — and the airline refused to reimburse them for overnight expenses on the grounds that that would be an anachronism in an era of cut-rate fares spawned by federal deregulation.

The hapless travelers reassembled at the airport the following morning, boarded Eastern's only other scheduled daily Albuquerque-Tucson flight, waited on the motionless plane for 1½ hours — and were told that their trip had again been canceled, because of another mechanical malfunction.

An Eastern spokesman now says the "terrible situation" is the subject of a "very, very intensive investigation" — but the episode symbolizes the troubles the Houston-based Texas Air Corp. has brought upon itself.

A holding company that controls the largest commercial airline operation in the non-communist world, Texas Air is the parent corporation of both Eastern and Continental Airlines. Continental, in turn, acquired People Express, New York Air and Frontier Airlines in late 1986 and early 1987.

Its inability to cope with that rapid growth has given Texas Air the image of an organization with glowering customers, seething employees and insensitive executives.

Other airlines, especially those recently merged, have had their share of flight delays and cancellations, lost and misplaced baggage and other adverse experiences — but none can match Texas Air's abysmal record.

In each of the first four months of 1987, Continental was the subject of the largest number of passenger complaints filed with the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Eastern was several places back in the early months of the year, but in April it rose to second. This gave Texas Air the dubious distinction of being responsible for more than half of all complaints filed with the federal government against domestic air carriers.

In the weeks immediately following the merger, Continental was losing an astounding 150 pieces of baggage daily at Newark.

Continental now has launched an advertising and public relations program to improve its image, but that has only inspired a new dispute between the airlines and its pilots over how the company should be promoted.

Defense, budget on congressional agenda this week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress faces major decisions on defense spending, the budget and other money bills as lawmakers return from the Memorial Day recess.

The Senate is likely to vote for a fourth time on a motion to cut off a Republican filibuster which has blocked the Democratic-controlled chamber from even considering a proposed Pentagon budget bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

While Democrats try to round up the votes needed to end the filibuster, the Senate will consider a bill providing $9.4 billion in supplemental spending for a wide variety of government programs for the current fiscal year.

And the Iran-Contra hearings resume on Wednesday for a fourth week with testimony from Albert Hakim, the businessman who already has provided details of the secret financial network that handled the clandestine sale of arms to Iran and aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

At the same time, a House-Senate conference committee is preparing to meet to work out a compromise on an overall federal budget blueprint for the next fiscal year.

The House is scheduled to consider its version of the Older Americans Act.

The measure provides a number of services for senior citizens, including home-delivered meals, legal help, transportation, retirement counseling and adult day care.

The bill on the House floor would reauthorize the current law, which expires next year. The program now costs $1.18 billion, but the proposed law would provide an increase of 5 percent for each of the next four years.

The Senate has been bogged down by a GOP filibuster against the $303 billion defense bill for fiscal 1988. Republicans object to a Democratic-backed amendment which would limit President Reagan's policy option for his "Star Wars" anti-missile defense.

Democrats, holding a 54-46 margin, need a three-fifths majority, or 60 votes, to invoke cloture and end the filibuster.

The third and latest try ended up with 59 votes, including all the Democrats, and the chamber's leaders are hoping to pick up a sixth Republican vote to put them over the top.

The bill which eventually passes the Senate will have to be reconciled with the defense budget plan which the House has already approved. Even though Democrats control both chambers, there are a number of major differences.

When the defense bill does come up on the Senate floor, major fights are expected over a number of issues, including Star Wars, arms control, chemical weapons and new ships for the Navy.

The supplemental bill covers spending for this fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. The bulk of the bill — $6.7 billion — would go to the Commodity Credit Corp. to pay farm subsidies, while another $1.6 billion is for pay raises and new retirement benefits for federal workers.

The House already has approved its version of the bill, but Senate conservatives have blocked final action because they call the bill a budget-buster.

Stark victims return home

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — The remains of 36 sailors who died half a world away on the USS Stark were returned home today to be prepared for burial.

A C-14 carrying the bodies left Rhein-Main Air Force Base near Frankfurt, West Germany, at 10:39 p.m. EDT Monday and completed the sad journey at 8 a.m. today, said a Dover official.

The hangar known as Memorial Hall was ready for the arrival of the flag-draped coffins at this base, site of the nation's largest mortuary east of the Mississippi.

Later this morning, four seven-member teams of pallbearers formed from a Navy honor guard from Washington were to carry the coffins into the hangar, said Navy Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, a Pentagon spokesman helping staff a news media center here.

A ceremony honoring the men killed in the May 17 Iraqi missile attack in the Persian Gulf was to be held this afternoon, with the playing of the national anthem, an invocation, a benediction, hymns and a speech by Vice Adm. Dudley L. Carlson, chief of Naval Personnel, base officials said.

Thirty-seven sailors were killed in the attack on the Stark.

Thirty-five had been identified. The remains of the 36th sailor were tentatively identified over the weekend, said Woodhouse, who did not immediately know the victim's name. The 37th sailor, Terrence C. Weldon of Orlando, Fla., remains missing and is presumed dead, according to the Navy.

The family of one of the victims requested the immediate removal of the remains from the base, so only 35 coffins were to be taken into the hangar for the ceremony, said Capt. Walt Thorp, the base's chief of public affairs.

The remains were identified by forensic specialists at Rhein-Main.

On Friday, President Reagan, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Navy Secretary James Webb attended a memorial service at the Stark's home port, Mayport Naval Station in Florida.

The bodies will be prepared for burial at the base mortuary here, and it will then be up to the victims' families to decide where the coffins are to be shipped, Woodhouse said.

The mortuary here, built in 1968 during the Vietnam War, has been a witness to several major tragedies.

Millions may miss June 1 deadline for new W-4 form

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's one of those once-a-lifetime offers from the Internal Revenue Service that nobody can refuse. But millions are refusing, and the offer is about to expire.

The bottom line is this: The law requires every wage-earner to file a 1987 W-4 tax-withholding form by Oct. 1. If you file before midnight June 1, the IRS has volunteered, it will waive any penalty you might incur for having too little tax withheld from wages this year.

If you let the June 1 deadline pass, you still will be within the law by filing by Oct. 1. But by waiting, you run the risk of being penalized unless your withholding covers at least 90 percent of your 1987 tax liability.

Millions of people are waiting. In a survey commissioned by the IRS, the Roper polling organization concluded in March that just about half of the 100 million-plus wage-earners had filed a new W-4. The elderly, lower-income earners and those in the West are even slower than most in filing.

Although the figures obviously have risen somewhat over the last two months, the response has been disappointing to the IRS.

"The survey showed that some of the people who have been slowest to file are those that are most likely to be under-withheld," said IRS spokesman Wilson Fadely. He referred specifically to higher-income couples who are accustomed to itemizing deductions, investing in a fully deductible Individual Retirement Account and claiming the special writeoff for two-earner couples.

The new tax-overhaul law, most of which went into effect on Jan. 1, cut tax rates, boosted personal exemptions, repealed the two-earner writeoff, sharply reduced the number of workers eligible for fully deductible IRAs, and scaled back or eliminated some itemized deductions. Especially noticeable to millions of itemizers when they file next year for 1987 will be loss of the sales-tax deduction and the gradual ending of the writeoff for credit cards and other consumer interest.

Any person who used those targeted deductions to reduce tax withheld from pre-1987 paychecks stands a good chance of being under-withheld this year. And even if a new W-4 is filed to reflect the loss of those deductions, this year's withholding could still be out of kilter, depending on when the new form is turned over to the employer.

Pests emerge from ground after 17 years

BALTIMORE (AP) — After 17 years of lying in the dark and sucking tree roots, billions of cicadas are emerging from the ground and preparing for a six-week orgy. It's expected to be a noisy party.

The insects, often mistakenly called locusts, spend 17 years underground, feeding on roots. When they come out of the ground in mid-May, they climb tree trunks, shed their old skins, make a lot of noise, mate and die. The cicadas appear in the eastern United States annually, but by far the biggest brood is the one that last emerged in 1970.

Millions of the insects have been seen, but not heard, in Maryland this year. Trunks of some old elms in old north Baltimore neighborhoods are covered with climbing cicadas that have just crawled out of their old skins.

The empty, yellow husks remain stuck to the trees.

The cicadas will start making their distinctive buzz — like vigorously shaken maracas — in about a week, after their new skins harden, said Gaye L. Williams, a state Department of Agriculture entomologist.

The insects will congregate by the thousands on trees, where they will make a ferocious racket and occasionally fall to the ground, startling humans and their pets.

Ms. Williams says she has gotten calls of concern from people planning outdoor functions, worried about the red-eyed, black bugs dropping from trees onto their picnics.

"People are calling up and asking 'Should we have this picnic?'" she said. "They're asking the wrong person. People really are focusing on the nuisance factor, which is sad."

Because of fears that cicadas would prove disruptive, the College of Notre Dame planned for the first time in its 114-year history to hold commencement indoors, said Margaret Goldsboro, spokeswoman for the liberal arts school.

She said rain had chased the event indoors several times, but graduation had never before been planned for indoors.

An outdoor ceremony this year could be "total disaster," Sister Delia Dowling, the academic dean, explained in a letter to students and faculty.

"The cicadas could jump from gown to gown, tassel to tassel, with no regard to rank or degree," she wrote.

Tough delinquents were scared straight

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — When the documentary "Scared Straight!" made its premiere in 1978, viewers watched nine tough prisoners educate 17 young delinquents about life behind bars.

Nearly 10 years later, its producer has found that all but two of the young offenders have remained out of trouble. But of the five inmates paroled from New Jersey's Rahway State Prison, only one has remained free.

"The vast majority of the kids were, in fact, scared straight. The convicts, however, didn't seem to be able to take their own advice," said Sara Lesch, a spokeswoman for producer Arnold Shapiro.

Shapiro's sequel, "Scared Straight — Ten Years Later," is airing on independent television stations with actress Whoopi Goldberg as host.

American Ambassador to France Joe M. Rodgers, right, looks at the just unveiled commemorative plaque dedicated to WWI hero Sergeant Alvin C. York of Pall Mall, Tenn., Monday.

Monument dedicated to war hero

CHATEL-CHEHERY, France (AP) — Andrew Jackson York stood on a grassy knoll in the Argonne Forest, looking toward the spot where his father became the most celebrated hero of World War I by single-handedly taking on a nest of 35 machine guns.

"This would be the little creek that he talked about, and there's where he crossed around to slip up behind them," said York, who traveled from Tennessee for the Memorial Day unveiling of a monument to his father, Alvin Cullum York.

About 200 people, including U.S. Ambassador Joe M. Rodgers, gathered in this village 150 miles east of Paris for the dedication of a simple bronze plaque set in a polished granite base.

The plaque, inscribed in French and English and set in front of the tiny town hall, details the feat that earned York the highest French and American military decorations and made him a folk hero at home.

"Armed with his rifle and pistol, his courage and skill, he silenced a German battalion of 35 machine guns, killed 25 enemy soldiers and captured 132," it reads.

Gary Cooper starred in a 1941 movie about York, who died in 1964.

"I'd get asked if I was Gary Cooper's grandson," said Gerald York, 39, a U.S. army major stationed in Huntsville, Ala., who attended the dedication. He said he didn't really know how famous his grandfather was until a grade-school teacher showed him an encyclopedia entry about him.

Despite his fame as a fighter, Alvin York nearly wound up missing the war. A fundamentalist Christian, he registered as a conscientious objector and asked for non-combat duty.

His commanding officer, knowing of York's skill as a marksman, agreed — but asked him to go to the backwoods family farm and think it over for a few days.

American diplomats ambushed

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Unknown gunmen ambushed a station wagon on a busy highway south of Cairo today, slightly injured two American diplomats riding inside and then sped away, U.S. Embassy officials said.

A third American in the vehicle was unhurt.

One embassy security official at the scene said the attackers used a shotgun. Egyptian security sources said from 10 to 15 shots may have been fired but did not say what kind of weapon or how many firearms were involved.

The Interior Ministry said the two men were hit by flying glass from car windows in the shooting on the edge of the residential suburb of Maadi.

An embassy spokesman identified the wounded as Dennis L. Williams, the mission's acting security chief, and his assistant, John Hicke.

He said the attackers fired after failing in their efforts to force the Americans' station wagon to the side of the road.

It was the first attack on U.S. diplomats here in recent memory, although there have been occasional threats.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Laura Jehl said of the shooting: "We've heard about it. We're familiar with it. But we don't have anything to say about it at this point."

About five hours after the attack, a Western news agency in Cairo reported receiving a phone call from a man, speaking "perfect Oxford English," who said, "This is Egypt's Revolution. Have you received our statement? We are responsible for the shooting in Maadi."

Later, an Egyptian undercover policeman told The Associated Press someone handed a letter to an errand boy in the street outside the same news agency's office and fled.

THE EFFICIENT WAY TO WATER LAWNS, GARDENS, ORCHARDS, ATHLETIC FIELDS and MORE

Leaky Pipe is the sub-surface watering system that cuts costs, eliminates evaporation and run-off.

Leaky Pipe is a porous, flexible rubber pipe which sweats when placed in the ground. Soil draws water from the pipe to be used by trees, plants and turf. Leaky Pipe delivers water, oxygen and nutrients directly to roots and requires only a fraction of the water used by conventional irrigation systems.

Leaky Pipe helps stabilize foundations. Spring rains and summer drought cause some soils to expand and contract. A single line of Leaky Pipe will stabilize soil around the house and eliminate this foundation damage.

JOINT PROBLEM AND MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance.

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

The doctor of chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be needed.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

South Korean officials resign

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan dismissed his prime minister and seven other Cabinet members today in an effort to defuse a crisis over the death of a dissident student tortured by police.

Thousands of students demonstrated nationwide for a second day today to demand action in the case, and on at least two campuses the protesters fought police with firebombs and rocks.

Chun said he accepted the resignation of Prime Minister Lho Shin-yong and other key ministers after the entire 26-member Cabinet offered to quit to atone for the student's death. Official sources indicated the Cabinet members had been asked to submit their resignations.

The president quickly appointed replacements, all Chun loyalists, and the shake-up was expected to have little effect on policy.

National police chief Lee Yong-chang, who has been in his job since January, also submitted his resignation this evening to take responsibility for the torture death, officials said. It was not immediately known if it was accepted. Lee is not a Cabinet member.

There has been a growing national outcry over the death last January of student Park Chong-chul, who suffocated during interrogation when police pressed his throat against the edge of a tub.

Two police officers were charged at the time in the death, and the minister of home affairs and national police chief both resigned.

However, a group of Roman Catholic priests charged there had been a high-level cover-up over the number of officers involved. Officials announced last week that three more police were arrested, and over the weekend said five senior police officials were being questioned in the death.

At Ehwa Women's University in Seoul, about 200 students demanding action in the case hurled firebombs and rocks at police today during a two-hour battle. Police responded with tear gas.

Students also fought police at nearby Sogang University.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, said 7,000 students took part in protests today at 23 universities and colleges across the country.

Chun said the Cabinet changes would safeguard his plan to step down in February and ensure needed stability for the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul.

JFK recalled as 70th birthday approaches

BOSTON (AP) — John F. Kennedy, eternally young in the memories of millions, would have turned 70 on Friday.

"I wake up thinking of that all the time, you know, what might have been," said David F. Powers, a longtime Kennedy aide described as being closer to JFK than anyone outside the family.

Powers, 75, joined Kennedy in his first bid for political office 41 years ago, and was in the car behind the president's when Lee Harvey Oswald's bullets cut Kennedy down in Dallas in 1963.

Kennedy had big plans for himself after the White House, the former aide said in a recent interview.

"After four more years, he used to talk about (coming) back here. He loved Massachusetts. He would have come back to write and to teach. But most of all, he wanted to work with the youth of America," Powers said.

He also believes Kennedy would have been active as an elder statesman.

"President Kennedy used to wonder why former presidents weren't put to better use," he said. "I think Kennedy would have gone to the Soviet Union or wherever was necessary."

Powers is the official keeper of the JFK flame as curator of the Kennedy Library. His office is packed with photos, letters and other memorabilia, and he is the author of the book "Johnny We Hardly Knew Ye."

"It's a labor of love," he said. "I'm able now to do something for a man who did so much for me. In a small measure, I'm repaying all those great, great days I spent with him."

Powers is to join Kennedy's widow, Jacqueline Onassis; their children, John and Caroline, and brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, on Friday for the formal opening of a 5½-acre park in Cambridge designated as the official state memorial to the late president.

The $2.5 million park near the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University will include a memorial pool and fountain suggested by Caroline and quotes from a speech Kennedy gave in Massachusetts 10 days before his 1961 inauguration.

In Brookline, just outside Boston, the U.S. Parks Service is celebrating Kennedy's 70th birthday at the three-bedroom home where he was born in 1917. Events during the weekend include a special $2 commemorative post office envelope and cancellation and an essay contest for students at the Brookline elementary school Kennedy attended.

Powers, as a special assistant to the president, often was at JFK's side, swimming with him daily, playing games in the White House with the president's son and traveling with Kennedy.

Showdown this week in legal saga of sex, money and murder

FORT WORTH (AP) — Unless there is a settlement out of court, a big-money battle between Cullen and Priscilla Davis heats up this week in the form of wrongful death and personal injury civil suits.

Mrs. Davis, 46, contends her ex-husband was the man in black who wounded her and killed her 12-year-old daughter in a 1976 shooting spree at the Davis mansion. She is asking for millions of dollars in damages.

She is joined in the wrongful death action by her second husband, Jack Wilborn, the father of the slain child.

In 1977, an Amarillo jury acquitted

Davis in the death of Andrea Wilborn, his stepdaughter, but that verdict carries no legal significance in the civil suits.

Principals in the case said that Davis, 53, proposed to settle the civil suits for a total of $100,000. But Mrs. Davis and Wilborn rejected the offer as "outrageous and insulting."

Davis settled out of court last year with Bubba Gavrel, 33, who was critically wounded and permanently crippled in the shootings. Neither side disclosed the terms of that agreement, but the Dallas Morning News put the figure at about $1 million in land, cash and deferred payments.

In the Amarillo murder trial, a defense team headed by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston attacked Mrs. Davis' credibility through her sex life, her use of pain-killing drugs and her association with what Haynes called "suzzies and scalawags."

Judge rules Austin firm can conduct random drug tests

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge has ruled that an Austin high tech firm has the right to conduct random drug tests and fire employees who refuse to submit to the tests.

The suit, filed by Brenda Jennings, an employee of Minco Technology Laboratories Inc., was the first ever in Texas against a private corporation over the issue of employee drug testing.

State District Judge Joe Hart made the decision in the suit in which Jennings claimed that the company's proposed urinalysis tests were an invasion of her privacy. She had asked that the company be prohibited from administering the test.

"This decision should not be construed as a general endorsement of drug testing by urinalysis," Hart wrote in an 11-page letter to lawyers on both sides and made public Monday.

"It is, rather, a recognition, that, under the facts of this particular case, the tests are not unreasonable and the defendant employer has the power to require such tests," the judge said.

Corporation officials argued that the tests were necessary to improve declining productivity and said the random nature of the tests would not intrude into employees' lives. Many of the company's products go to defense, aerospace and medical fields.

Jennings, 27, still is employed by Minco. She has worked at the company since 1984, has received several promotions and has a good overall work record.

Texas Civil Liberties Union lawyer Jim Harrington, who represented Jennings, called the judge's decision "scary" and said he was "deeply troubled" by it.

"He's essentially said that you have no privacy in the workplace," Harrington said of Hart's decision. "If you want to go to work for an employer, you've got to surrender all your rights. He gives employers reasons to conjure up testing whenever they want."

"The big danger I see in it is that he is sending a green light to employers that their employees have essentially no rights," Harrington said. "I can't imagine that is acceptable to people in Texas. It's '1984' three years late."

Attorneys for Minco could not be reached by the Austin American-Statesman for comment.

Hart wrote there is no law against conducting urinalysis tests, "even if done without consent."

Jennings argued that she would be fired if she refused to submit to the tests, but Hart said that under Texas law, she could be asked to submit to such testing or be terminated.

"Generally, when the employer notifies an employee of changes in the employment terms, the employee must accept the new terms or quit," Hart said.

Elementary school students compete in music contest

A Baker Elementary School team took first place in the second annual Music Memory contest held Wednesday at Lamar Elementary School.

The six-member team correctly identified 12 classical music selections with the least number of identification and spelling errors to gain their school's listing on a traveling plaque.

Second place went to the Austin Elementary School team, with Lamar's team taking third place.

All six public elementary schools had teams entered this year, composed of music students from the fourth and fifth grades.

During the test, held in the Lamar gymnasium, students were given a 30-second selection from each music piece. Students then had to name the composer, the selection and, in seven pieces, also the major work from which the selection came.

The selections ranged from early Gregorian chants to classical symphony and operatic works to a jazz number by Louis Armstrong.

Five shorter numbers included on the test were "As Vesta Was Descending" by Weelkes; "Organ Fugue in G minor" by Bach; "Prelude in E minor" by Chopin; "The Moldau" by Smetana; and "West End Blues" by Armstrong.

Selections from longer works included "Introit" from Missa Gaudeamus, a Gregorian chant; "Third Movement" from Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 by Bach; "Hallelujah" from Messiah by Handel; "La ci darem la mano" from Mozart's opera, Don Giovanni; "First Movement" from Beethoven's Symphony No. 5; and "March" and "Arabian Dance" from Nutcracker Suite by Tchaikovsky.

In addition to correctly identifying the selections and their composers, the students also were expected to correctly spell the titles and composers.

Elementary music teachers have organized the contest to provide some friendly competition and to help students gain a better appreciation for classical music.

This year a traveling plaque was added, with the winning team being able to take the plaque back to its school for display and the chance to defend it the following year. All the public elementary schools participated in the second annual contest.

In addition to the plaque, each winning team member received a ribbon and all contestants received a participant's ribbon.

Teachers organizing the competition are Laura Stephens, Austin Elementary; Jennifer Scoggin, Baker Elementary; Donna Caldwell, Lamar Elementary; Wanetta Hills, Mann Elementary; Wathena Watt, Travis Elementary; and Edith Sayles, Wilson Elementary.

Doctor claims there's no blood like your own

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see a letter concerning self-blood donating, since this is an important topic few people know much about.

Many patients are nervous about contracting AIDS should they require a transfusion during surgery. Blood bankers worry more about patients contracting certain forms of hepatitis from blood transfusions than they do about AIDS because the sophisticated blood-screening techniques used today have greatly reduced the likelihood of AIDS transmission.

There are other good reasons for self-donation that you might like to let your readers know about. Your own blood is the safest blood you can receive during transfusion. It cannot transmit an illness to you, will not cause allergic or other transfusion reactions, and compatibility testing is not necessary. Even if you have been turned down as a donor in the past, you may still qualify for self-donation since ordinary donor standards don't apply in this case.

Readers facing an operation should consult with their surgeon ahead of time as to whether self-donation is recommended. Blood can be stored for 35 days, so plans for self-donation should be made with this in mind. Blood may be drawn up to five days before surgery, leaving ample time to ensure that more than one unit can be collected from most patients. Obviously, not all those undergoing surgery will require a transfusion, but when the possibility is anticipated, self-donation provides an important measure of safety and security for the patient.

Unser picks up Indy's biggest paycheck ever

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Al Unser's 500-mile ride from Skid Row to Victory Lane was worth more than a half-million dollars from the biggest purse in auto racing history.

The 47-year-old driver came to Indianapolis earlier this month without a job, without a car and, it seemed, without a future in the sport. On Monday night, he collected the biggest paycheck of his long career and a promise that he would have a ride in 1988.

"It was unbelievable," said Unser, who filled in for the injured Danny Ongais and, incredibly, won Sunday's Indianapolis 500 after runaway leader Mario Andretti and then Roberto Guerrero stalled in the closing laps.

It was Unser's fourth Indy victory, matching the record set 10 years ago by A.J. Foyt, and the first prize of $526,763 increased Unser's career record winnings at the Speedway to $2,317,579. Foyt, naturally, had some advice for Unser. "Get out while you're ahead, Al," said the 52-year-old Texan, who has driven in a record 30 consecutive races but stands second to Unser in career winnings at Indy with a distant $1,833,429.

The 33 drivers were honored at the annual Victory Awards dinner Monday night. All of them except 1986 winner Bobby Rahal and former world champion Emerson Fittipaldi attended the banquet. A record purse of $4,490,375 was distributed, breaking the former mark of $4,001,450 set last year, when Rahal earned a record first prize of $581,063.

Unser, who drove only five Indy-car races last year, was out of a job when his contract with the Penske Racing team expired at the end of the 1986 season. He came back to Indianapolis this month but was ready to go home to Albuquerque if he couldn't find a ride he felt would be competitive.

OSU's Robin Ventura extends hitting streak.

OSU gains series berth

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP)—Oklahoma State coach Gary Ward says his team has never had to fight so hard to gain a berth in next week's College World Series at Omaha, Neb.

The Cowboys gained entrance to the series by downing Texas A&M 11-9 Monday in the championship game of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Midwest Regional baseball tournament at Starkville.

"We're exhausted and extremely pleased. Of our seven trips (to the College World Series), this has been the most difficult and tedious. It seems as if we have done what we had to do. I think we will be as good as anybody going to Omaha," Ward said after Monday's victory.

Pat Hope pitched to two batters in the bottom of the ninth inning to halt a Texas A&M rally and give the Cowboys the win. His Monday appearance on the mound came less than 24 hours after he had pitched a complete game against Texas A&M Sunday night, leading the Cowboys to a 7-4 win and sending the tournament into a game 11 showdown.

Sunday was Hope's second complete game of the tournament and that combined with Monday's save earned the Oklahoma State sophomore the tournament's most-valuable-player honors.

Hope entered Monday's game with one on and the tying run at the plate, and after giving up a single, Don Wren forced Ever Magallanes to pop up, clinching the victory for the Cowboys.

In both the seventh and eighth innings Monday, the Aggies loaded the bases, but a strong Oklahoma State defense didn't allow anyone to score. "I'm pleased our guys kept fighting. They could have given up. We left a lot of men on base, but we hit the ball hard and that's all you can ask. When you hit the ball, sometimes it goes and sometimes it doesn't. Oklahoma State put the ball in play, and you have to give them a lot of credit," Texas A&M coach Mark Johnson said.

The Cowboys used the 16-hit attack to take the win and only trailed once in the game.

Robin Ventura opened the scoring with a solo home run in the top of the first inning. Ventura's homer extended an NCAA record hitting streak to 56 consecutive games, tying Hall-of-Famer Joe DiMaggio's 1941 record.

Texas A&M took the lead briefly in the bottom of the inning as the Aggies scored three runs during a two-out rally.

Scott Livingstone and John Byington both reached on singles, then Chuck Knoblauch singled home Livingstone, and Byington scored on a double by Terry Taylor.

In the second inning, the Cowboys scored four runs, chasing Texas A&M starter Darryl Fry, 8-5, from the mound.

Benny Castillo started the inning with a double, Ray Ortiz reached with a single, and a single by Adam Smith scored Castillo.

Anthony Blackmun walked to load the bases and a single by Ventura drove home Ortiz and Smith. Blackmun then scored on a throwing error by Texas A&M centerfielder Knoblauch.

Oklahoma State added three runs in the third inning, a single run in the sixth on a home run by Monty Fariss, and rounded out the scoring with a pair of runs in the seventh.

With the bases loaded in the fifth, Texas A&M's Livingstone hit into a double play that scored Maury Martin and left Wren at third base. Byington then hit a two-run homer to left field.

Texas A&M added a single run in the sixth, before scoring a pair of runs in the ninth.

Marv Rockman, 11-0, picked up the win, going an inning and two-thirds in relief. The starter was Jimmy Long.

Oklahoma State improves to 56-11, while Texas A&M ends its season at 44-22-1.

Oklahoma State had six players named to the all-tournament team: third baseman Ventura, catcher Smith, left fielder Ortiz, right fielder Castillo, and pitchers Hope and Rockman.

Mississippi State, which finished fourth in the tournament, followed with three players: first baseman John Mitchell, second baseman Burt Masters and shortstop Brad Hildreth.

The other two players to make the team were Western Carolina's centerfielder Skip Nelloms and Texas A&M's Byington, a designated hitter.

Tigers romp past Rangers 8-5

DETROIT (AP)—There are any number of rookies who break into baseball with as much talent as Detroit catcher Matt Nokes has, but few have any more character.

Nokes hit home runs in his first two at-bats and Lou Whitaker hit a three-run homer Monday night as the resurgent Detroit Tigers beat the Texas Rangers, 8-5.

"Nokes is a very classy guy," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "He's very much like Alan Trammell. He's his own man. He goes his own way. He never sucks up to the stars, like a lot of rookies try to do."

"He's got strong character. A guy's got to have ability, but the main thing he's got is character. Character is very important to me. I think you saw it with the Detroit Red Wings and I think you're seeing it with the Pistons."

The Red Wings, who were under .500 during the National Hockey League's regular season, took Edmonton to five games in the Stanley Cup semifinals before finally bowing to the powerful Oilers. The Pistons are dead even with the Boston Celtics after four games of the NBA's Eastern Conference finals.

Nokes, who raised his batting average to .311, attributed his early success to confidence, born of hard work.

"Everybody wants to hit home runs, but I just want to hit the ball hard," Nokes said. "It's a slot you get in. It doesn't have anything to do with power. It doesn't take power to hit the ball a long way. You just have to hit the ball right."

The victory was the 10th in Detroit's last 12 games and put the Tigers at the .500 mark for the first time since April 20.

"Getting to .500 really helps," Anderson said. "You have to get there. I mean, that's the magic circle. You don't have no chance to chip away if you don't get to .500. Then, if you get a streak, maybe you can sneak up on some people."

The Tigers, who were 10-18 on May 9, had a six-game winning streak from May 12-18 on the surge that brought them to 21-21.

"We're in a groove," Nokes said. "I just hope we keep winning."

After spotting the Rangers a first-inning run on Ruben Sierra's bases-loaded sacrifice fly, the Tigers scored four runs in the bottom of the first, keyed by Nokes' two-run homer, and four more in the third when Nokes and Whitaker homered.

"Nokes has a good swing," Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said. "There's no 'book' on him right now. I think the book's being written; not necessarily on what he can't do, but on what he can do."

Edwin Correa, 1-5, was tagged for four runs on four hits. He lasted only 1 1/3 innings. Correa, 21, the youngest player in the major leagues, last week lasted only 3 2/3 innings, giving up eight runs on eight hits to the Tigers in Arlington.

"I have to do something. I have to turn things around," a dejected Correa said. "I've never been like this. I've never been a loser."

Winner Frank Tanana, 4-2, gave up four runs on seven hits in 6 1/3 innings. Eric King pitched 1 2/3 innings. He walked the leadoff batter in the ninth and rookie Mike Henneman came on for his first major-league save.

"We're back to .500," Tanana said. "We've got good pitching and if the hitting continues, we can get back in this race."

The Rangers, last in the American League West, lost for the eighth time in 11 games and fell eight games behind first-place Kansas City.

"This is a young team, but we've got a game tomorrow," Valentine said. "It's a major league game against major league pitching. Our guys will get up for it. We don't pack our tent."

Taking a breather

Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson takes a breather following workouts. Tyson defends his WBC and WBA titles Saturday against Pinklon Thomas.

Arkansas meets Texas

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP)—University of Arkansas Coach Norm DeBrynn gave his Razorbacks Monday off in preparation for the College World Series. For one thing, the Razorbacks don't need a scouting report on Texas, their first-round opponent.

Texas beat Arkansas two out of three times in Fayetteville to capture the Southwest Conference round-robin championship and then whipped the Razorbacks twice in the conference tournament.

"I told our guys to relax and enjoy (the regional championship) for a couple of days," DeBrynn said. "Then we can start thinking about the World Series."

"I like our chances. These are the best eight teams left in college baseball, and any one of us can win."

Arkansas, 50-14-1, swept through the NCAA South I Regional, beating Clemson 6-5 in 10 innings on Saturday and then beating the same team 4-2 on Sunday. The Razorbacks had 56 hits in the four games. Second baseman Kelly Zane had 10 hits, including two home runs, in 17 trips to the plate and was named the outstanding player in the tournament.

John Cebuhar, who pitched 16 innings in four days, joined Zane on the all-regional team. Centerfielder Rod Moore, third baseman Don Thomas and catcher Andy Skeels also made the team. "All our guys did a great job," DeBrynn said. "And I definitely feel better about our pitching staff than I did going into the conference tournament."

a blue bandana headband, trudged up and congratulated the Argentine, then walked off court to a muted ovation.

De la Pena had lost to McEnroe 6-2, 6-4, in the second round of the Italian Open two weeks ago. That, too, was on clay, but the surface was about the only similarity between the two matches.

Now, McEnroe will hang around Paris for doubles. He also will wait to find out if the rulers of men's tennis suspend him for an outburst on court in Dusseldorf, West Germany, last Sunday.

Another American seed also lost today. Melissa Gurney, the 16th-ranked woman, fell to Nicole Provis of Australia 6-4, 6-2.

McEnroe eliminated in French Open

PARIS (AP)—John McEnroe, his serve-and-volley game in a shambles on the slow clay of Center Court, was eliminated in the first round of the French Open today by Argentina's Horacio de la Pena 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

It was the second consecutive Grand Slam tournament in which McEnroe was a first-round loser. He lost to Paul Annacone in the opening round at the U.S. Open last August.

McEnroe, the men's seventh seed, was given a lesson in clay-court tennis by de la Pena, the world's 49th-ranked player, who ran down shots and returned stinging cross-court groundstrokes throughout the three-hour match on a warm Paris afternoon. The booming serve and strong net play that made McEnroe No. 1 in the world up until late 1985 was never evident. His volleys usually landed in the net or far past the baseline, and the quickness that characterized his championship form also was missing.

De la Pena, his long hair held back with a white headband, won six games in a row, going from 4-4 in the third set to take that set and forge a 4-0 lead in the fourth. He broke McEnroe's serve for the eighth and final time to build a 3-0 lead, and had match point on the American's serve before McEnroe saved it in the seventh game.

At the end, de la Pena sent a forehand across court for a clean winner, then ran to the net. McEnroe, a scowl on his face beneath

Celtics' defense unstable

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—How can Boston stop the Detroit Pistons from scoring so many points? Better defense would help, but better offense would help even more, according to Celtics Coach K.C. Jones.

Until last Sunday, Boston had played 397 playoff games. Never had the Celtics allowed more than 140 points. But on Sunday, the Pistons prevailed 145-119 to even the NBA Eastern Conference finals after four games.

"It's more a result of our bad offense. We're letting the clock run down," Jones said. "We play pass in, pass back, pass in, pass back and then we wind up with the shot clock going down and they get the defensive rebound and they take off with it."

After winning the first two games at home, Boston was hurt by the Pistons' fastbreak in its road losses Saturday and Sunday. The best-of-seven series resumes tonight with the Celtics home again for Game 5.

"We get on rolls and we don't stop," Detroit guard Vinnie Johnson said.

Boston bogged down offensively during the weekend. The Celtics never led at the end of any quarter and the latest advantage they had in either game was 12-10 in Detroit's 122-104 victory in Game 3.

"There's a lot of illegal defense being played out there," Jones said, "but mainly we have not really moved the ball. We have not moved (our) bodies so we have to get a little more active (offensively) out there. ... We're not smooth at all."

Jones thinks guard Danny Ainge, who missed the first three games with a sprained right knee and came off the bench Sunday, may return to the starting lineup tonight. Ainge knows what the Celtics must do to avoid giving Detroit a chance to win the series at home in Thursday night's sixth game.

"We're allowing them to get easy baskets and second shots," he said. "We're not getting back on defense. To me, that's a sign of just lack of intensity, lack of aggressiveness and I think that's our biggest problem right now."

Aggressiveness may be Detroit's biggest weapon. Apparently hurt in the first two games by a five-day layoff after its Eastern Conference semifinal, the Pistons have regained their fire.

"During the layoff before this series, we forgot how hard we had been playing basketball," Pistons guard Isiah Thomas said. "We lost a little intensity. But we're going to the Garden with confidence because we feel we've gotten over that."

The last time Detroit won in Boston Garden was on Dec. 19, 1982. It has lost 16 consecutive games there. The Celtics are 34-1 in their last 35 games in the building.

"I think the pressure will be on us," Johnson said.

"To win, we'll have to play good defense, keep our concentration level high and shoot the ball well," Pistons center Bill Laimbeer said. "Then we'll have a good chance."

Laimbeer has virtually no chance of being applauded tonight. In the fourth quarter Saturday, he knocked Boston's Larry Bird to the court with a hard foul and Bird began punching at him. Both players were ejected and Laimbeer was fined $5,000 by the league, Bird $2,000.

Davis sparks Astros past Pirates 7-2

HOUSTON (AP)—Glenn Davis is out of his hitting slump and that's bad news for opponents of the Houston Astros.

It was bad news for the Pittsburgh Pirates as Davis and lefthanded pitcher Jim Deshaies provided the hitting and pitching to lead the Astros to a 7-2 victory over the Pirates Monday night.

Davis drove in three runs with his eighth homer of the year, a double and a sacrifice fly. After being mired in a long slump, Davis now has a seven-game hitting streak in which he is 13-26. The streak includes four doubles, four homers and eight RBI.

Deshaies, 3-2, weathered a shaky first inning in which he allowed the two Pirate runs, but he recovered the pitch his first complete game of the year. It was only fourth complete game by an Astros pitcher this season. Cy Young Award winner Mike Scott has the other three.

The Pirates knew what they had to do to solve Deshaies, but they didn't do it. "If you don't lay off his high fast ball, he (Deshaies) is tough to beat," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland. "You have to make him bring the ball down in the strike zone. We didn't do that. As a result, he got a lot of pop fly outs and fly outs in the game."

The Pirates either popped or flied out 14 times.

Deshaies allowed only one base runner after run-scoring doubles by Johnny Ray and Jim Morrison netted the two Pirate runs. He retired 24 of the final 25 Pirate batters and finished the game by allowing only four hits while walking one and striking out three.

"Tonight I was able to hit my spots after the first inning and get them to hit the ball in the air a lot," said Deshaies. "It is great to contribute to a win."

Leyland complimented Davis' hitting. "Davis is swinging the bat real well right now," said Leyland. "I thought the sacrifice fly was another home run."

The first two batters in the Houston lineup managed to get on base six times, giving Davis runners to advance.

SEATTLE (AP)—Michael Cooper can't remember the Los Angeles Lakers ever playing better.

A devastating 22-5 blitz in the second quarter of Monday's 133-102 victory over Seattle gave the Lakers a sweep of the NBA Western Conference finals and sent a strong message to the Detroit Pistons and the Boston Celtics, who are tied 2-2 in the Eastern Conference finals.

"That was about the best I've ever seen us play," Cooper said. "This is about the quickest team, man for man, that I've ever played on."

"They've got so much more energy than they had last season," said Seattle's Maurice Lucas, who was with the Lakers last season. "They're at least two steps better."

second quarter.

Nothing worked.

Worthy, who led the Lakers with 26 points, scored five points as did Scott. Magic Johnson, 40-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and A.C. Green each had four points in the back-breaking spurt.

"We tried everything we could," Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "But they had an answer for everything we tried to do. The Lakers are the best team in professional basketball."

Johnson had 21 points and 12 assists while Green and Scott each finished with 19 points. Tom Chambers led Seattle with 20 points, 15 in the first half.

By winning their 11th of 12 playoff games this season, the Lakers advanced to the championship series.

The finals will start either Sunday or June 2, depending on whether the Celtics-Pistons series goes six or seven games.

It makes a difference to Cooper who wins the Detroit-Boston series, though. He wants to meet archrival Boston, led by nemesis Larry Bird.

"I could lie to you but, yes, I want to go back and play Boston," he said.

The Lakers led 46-40 with 6:51 left in the second quarter after a 10-3 run by Seattle. Then came the Lakers' spurt in a 5:48 span that put the Sonics away.

The Lakers made nine of 10 field goal attempts during the run, including seven layups, a dunk by James Worthy and a 3-point field goal by Byron Scott for a 68-45 lead with 1:03 left in the half. The Sonics could get no closer than 17 points in the second half.

"We are a team of spurts," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "We just got a good run going."

Beaten by a total of 14 points in the first three games of the series, the Sonics did everything they could to stop the fast-breaking, ballhawking Lakers in the Billy Hatcher walked three times and had a single and Bill Doran had a single. Hatcher scored three of the runs.

"This is our brand of baseball. When Hatcher and Doran get on base, we are in good shape," said Astros manager Hal Lanier.

"Our team has to manufacture runs," said Hatcher. "All the other teams have been putting pressure on us. Tonight it was nice to put the pressure on them."

After tying the score at 2-2 off Pirates starter and loser Dorn Taylor, 1-1, with Davis' double and an infield groundout by Terry Puhl in the first inning, the Astros took the lead for good when Davis slammed his home run leading off the fourth inning for a 3-2 lead.

Davis added a sacrifice fly in the fifth. Craig Reynolds tripled in Alan Ashby in the sixth and Hatcher scored on a double play ground ball in the seventh before capping the scoring with a single in the eighth driving in Denny Walling.

Glo-Valve, Dyers lead Bambino leagues

Greg Moore's bases-loaded double in the bottom of the sixth inning gave OCAW a 6-5 win over Dixie in National League Bambino action Monday night.

Moore was also the winning pitcher, giving up seven hits while striking out seven and walking five.

Moore had two doubles to lead OCAW's attack while Chris Gilbert had a double. Will Winborne a triple and Bret Queen a single. Moore's winning hit came with two outs in the final inning.

Gilbert made some outstanding plays in center field and also scored two runs for OCAW, now 4-2 for the season.

Dixie, also 4-2, was led at the plate by Danny Hendricks, who had three singles. Jimmy Fossett had a double while Tommy Moen, Dennis Graham and Bobby Polson each had singles.

Moen pitched for Dixie, striking out 11, walking eight and giving up five hits.

Glo-Valve swept into sole possession of first place in the National League with a 5-1 win over Duncan Insurance last night.

Mitch Spence, who struck out 14, walked six and allowed only three hits, was the winning pitcher. Adam Smith took the loss for Duncan.

Smith scored Duncan's only run and led his team with two hits. Jay Hunter picked up Duncan's other hit.

Gavin Porter, with a double and single, and Jeff Tidwell, with two singles, paced Glo-Valve. Chad Dunnan contributed a double and Dale Noble a single to round out the hitting for Glo-Valve.

Glo-Valve improved its season record to 5-1 with one game to play in the first half. Duncan fell to 1-5.

Glo-Valve plays Cabot Corporation today in a game which was moved to 7:30 p.m. because of the elementary track meet.

Going into Monday night's game, Dyers and Dunlap Leasing were tied with 4-1 records in the American League Bambino League.

However, Dyers drastically ended that deadlock with a convincing 9-1 victory.

For Dyers, Clarence Reed pitched six innings, giving up six hits, walking four and striking out 11 for the win.

Dyers erupted for seven of its nine runs in the second inning.

Collecting hits for Dyers were Matt Clark, double and single; Micah Brooks, two singles; Duane Nickleberry, Ross Johnson and Reed, one double each. LaMont Nickleberry blasted a home run over the fence for his second of the season.

Dyers turned in outstanding defensive plays throughout the game. LaMont Nickleberry made an over-the-shoulder catch at shortstop while Brandon Kitchens snared a line drive to take a base hit away from Jason Warren.

Johnson and Clark turned in a game-ending double play. Johnson picked up a grounder, tagged the runner going to second and flipped to Clark for the final out.

Carlos Regalado led Dunlap in hitting with three hits. Rene Armendarez, Jason Warren and Todd Black each had one hit. Rene Armendarez scored Dunlap's lone run in the fifth inning.

Officers escort Singleton from his apartment.

Crowd forces parolee to move

RODEO, Calif. (AP) — An impromptu demonstration by hundreds of angry residents forced a newly paroled mutilation-rape victim to don a bullet-proof vest and flee his apartment under guard of police officers in riot gear.

Monday's development was the latest in a struggle between state authorities, who decided that Lawrence Singleton should be paroled to Contra Costa County, and the Northern California county's residents and officials, who have vehemently opposed his presence.

Singleton was moved to an undisclosed location after the demonstration, which began Sunday night and did not end until about 3 a.m. Monday. The protest built up again later Monday when 400 people carrying homemade signs that said "Drop Dead" and "Get Out of Town, Bud" massed outside the modest 20-unit apartment building.

About 3:40 p.m., Singleton, a 59-year-old former merchant seaman, was surrounded by police officers in riot gear and taken from the rear of the building into a waiting patrol wagon.

"I'm ecstatic," said Janet Callaghan, president of the Rodeo Citizens' Association. "They thought they could sneak him in under Rodeo's nose — they were wrong."

Audrey Anaya, 34, who lives about 1 1/2 blocks from the apartments, said she joined the demonstration after hearing announcements over a loudspeaker. "Nobody wants him here," Anaya said. "Nobody wants him anywhere."

"I have (two) little kids and I'm scared for them, that they're going to get mutilated, that my little girl will get molested," she said.

Singleton was released from prison April 25 after serving eight years of a 14-year sentence for raping a 15-year-old runaway and using an ax to cut off her arms at the elbows.

His parole drew immediate protests, and some communities went to court to have the state barred from placing him in their cities. Eight counties took action to ban Singleton, but the state Supreme Court cleared way for his placement in the county where he was living before 1978 arrest.

Contra Costa County Assistant Sheriff Warren E. Ruff criticized the Rodeo demonstration, saying it had the potential for violence.

"The potential is very real," Ruff said. "And in fact, I'm embarrassed that it occurred in my county."

He said police, obligated to protect Singleton, took him to nearby Martinez and put him under the supervision of state parole officers. He said the sheriff's office does not have to be notified of Singleton's whereabouts until there is a permanent change of address. As of now, that address is still Rodeo, Ruff said.

Firecrackers mistaken for gunshots

FORT WORTH (AP) — Several people were injured when concertgoers mistakenly believed that exploding firecrackers were gunshots and began running, authorities say.

About 5,000 people were attending a Memorial Day weekend concert Sunday night at Harmon Field when some firecrackers exploded in the crowd. Rumors quickly spread, witnesses said, that someone had a gun and was shooting at people.

MedStar Ambulance President Tom Morgan said two people, who were not immediately identified, were taken to local hospitals for treatment of apparently minor injuries. Others suffered minor injuries, mostly scrapes and bruises, but were not taken to hospitals.

"Everybody started running and we ran with them," said Kenneth Turner, 26, of Waco. "It was wild and we didn't want to take no chances."

Fort Worth Police Capt. K.R. McDonald estimated the crowd at the free concert at about 5,000 and said it was "too many for this park."

When the stampeding crowd had left, witnesses said they left behind mangled lawn chairs, shoes and even a wig. Several people returned to look for lost items, including keys.

A 3-year-old child became temporarily separated from her parents, but was reunited with them a short time later.

Lewis Tension, 20, of Fort Worth, said he did not hear any gunshots or see a gun.

"I was talking to a friend and looked up and people started coming at me," he said.

Tension said he was knocked down, but suffered only a scrape on his arm.

There were early reports that someone with a gun had been on the stage, but Terry Deews, a security coordinator for Roger and Zapp, one of four bands playing at the concert, said that was not true.

Catholics asked to fund visit

HOUSTON (AP) — Area adult Roman Catholics are being asked to contribute $10 each to defray the estimated $2.5 million it will cost to bring Pope John Paul II to Texas this fall.

There are more than 600,000 Catholics in the Diocese of Galveston-Houston, but it is uncertain how many appeal letters were mailed.

The letter, signed by Bishop Joseph A. Fiorenza, said the Sept. 13 visit to San Antonio is a "rare occasion for us to extend a gracious and warm welcome to our Supreme Pastor."

"I am asking each adult Catholic to donate at least $10," Fiorenza said in the letter, which also was printed in Spanish.
