Pampa Board of Realtors begin revitalization project

Members of the Pampa Board of Realtors pushed up their sleeves and grabbed some paint brushes Friday and Saturday as they undertook their fall community revitalization project.

Purpose of community revitalization projects is to encourage private property and home ownership, with additional emphasis on care and appearance.

To accomplish these aims in this year's project, the board selected a home at 401 N. Dwight for painting and repairs.

About 30 Realtors turned out to completely paint the exterior, make porch repairs and install storm windows.

Supplies were donated by Alco, Handy Hammer and Wal-Mart. In addition, Gary Cumming of Gary's Pest Control donated a termite treatment.

Minister ticketed for giving away food to the homeless

FORT WORTH (AP) — It could cost a controversial minister $1,000 to give away food to the homeless.

But the Rev. W.N. Otwell said Sunday he is "guilty of love," and will not pay any fine that might result from a ticket from the city's health department.

The ticket, issued Sunday at the Water Garden in downtown Fort Worth, charges Otwell with operating a temporary food establishment without a permit. Jodie Collins, a sanitarian with the food section of the health department, said the maximum fine is $1,000.

Members of The Church at Fort Worth, Otwell's church, have been giving away sandwiches and other food items at the park in downtown Fort Worth for the past six Sundays despite repeated efforts by city officials to persuade the minister to comply with regulations on food preparation.

The food is given away at the end of a church service for the homeless.

"We'll be back next Sunday, the Lord willing," Otwell told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "We're not going to stop. I'm not going to pay it (the fine), and jail, we've been there before."

"I'm not trying to be hard-headed," the minister said. "All I'm guilty of is feeding the poor. I'm guilty of love. If they want to call me guilty, let them call me guilty."

The ticket was given after members of the church gave sleeping bags, winter clothing and homemade sandwiches to about 75 people.

City officials say they are trying to protect the people the church is feeding by making certain that the food is properly prepared.

The Rev. Otwell blasted city officials during a sermon at the park Sunday, saying he opposes regulation of church activities by city officials.

200 killed in Algerian rioting

By RACHID KHIARI
Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Soldiers shot protesters and army helicopters buzzed riot areas to quell unrest that killed at least 200 in coastal, desert and mountain areas hit hard by high unemployment and spiraling prices.

President Chadli Bendjedid prepared to address the nation tonight while the country remained under a state of emergency and a nighttime curfew was in effect in the capital, Algiers. Observers said he would likely appeal for calm in his 8 p.m. (2 p.m. CDT) message.

They suggested he could buttress this appeal by addressing the economic crisis which triggered the violence Tuesday — the worst in this North African nation since its independence from France in 1962.

Unrest hit the western port city of Oran to Annaba in the east. Rioting also was reported in a dozen provincial centers, including in the southern desert, said Interior Minister El Hadi Khediri, appearing on state television over the weekend.

"We have tried in vain to stop the troubles," Khediri said.

In Algiers, where the violence started, clashes between the army and rioters spread late Saturday and early Sunday as protesters defied a 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew and a ban on demonstrations.

Only brief volleys of gunfire were heard early today.

Kouba, on the southern fringes of Algiers, apparently suffered the largest number of dead and injured. Hospital sources reported more than 60 people killed when the army, according to witnesses, fired into a crowd after it repeatedly ignored calls to disperse.

Information compiled from hospital and police sources in various parts of the country indicated about 200 people killed and several hundred injured. It seemed likely the actual death toll was higher.

No official death toll has been issued.

The unrest began about 10 days ago with non-violent strikes demanding higher wages to keep up with inflation.

Algiers's annual unemployment rate is estimated at 40 percent and food prices have risen by at least 40 percent since January. But the government so far has vowed to stick to an austerity plan prompted in part by the falling price of oil, the nation's main export.

Bendjedid proclaimed a state of emergency Thursday. On Friday, the Military Command ordered soldiers to shoot if demonstrators failed to disperse.

At Mustapha Hospital in Algiers, physicians moved patients out of the hospital to make room for the hundreds of injured demonstrators.

"It's terrible. Beirut. Like Beirut. The same thing," said a Frenchman arriving Sunday in Paris on Air Algiers's only scheduled flight of the day. He was interviewed on French television. He was not identified.

Algiers was mostly calm Sunday as army helicopters armed with rockets flew at low altitudes, apparently to discourage the formation of crowds.

An Islamic fundamentalist group calling itself the Movement for Algerian Renewal on Sunday demanded removal of the president, Interior Minister Khediri and the head of the ruling National Liberation Front Party, Mohamed Cherif Messaadia.

Gypsies use superstition scam in Pampa

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A band of Gypsies have stolen several thousand dollars from low income Mexican-Americans in Pampa, using a scam that plays on superstition and fear, according to Pampa police.

A Saturday interview with one of the victims, who asked to remain anonymous out of embarrassment, revealed the Gypsies' standard procedure.

The woman was approached in a local store and asked if she spoke "Mexican." When she said she did, she was given a card that read, "Isabel. Healer. Do You Have a Problem? Are You Having Problems With Love? Do You Wonder About Your Luck? Consultant. I Will Help You Resolve Your Luck, Whatever Your Problem Is."

FIRE PREVENTION TIP

Smoke detectors take good care of us by providing early warning of a fire in the home, but only if we take care of our detectors first.

The steps are simple — testing the detector signal, replac-

"I have been having bad luck, but I was still not sure I should trust her," said the victim. "She told me to buy a tomato. She took me to her house and rubbed the tomato over my body and prayed over me.

"Then she had me step on (the tomato). There was a bone in the tomato and so I believed."

She said the Gypsy told her the bone was part of a demon that was living inside of her.

Pampa Police officer Katie Wallace said the story was similar to several she had heard.

"A lady was approached at the Wal-Mart ... she was told that she had problems and this woman could help. She thought the woman was a psychic, so she gave her money to them to exorcise demons from her," Wallace said.

Over the span of two weeks the woman gave the Gypsies over $200 to exorcise the demons, Wallace said.

"They took her into this house and in the back room was an altar. There were tall candles, a Buddha and a picture of Jesus. They rubbed an egg on her and when they broke it, a hairball came out with the raw egg," Wallace said.

The Gypsies told her that was part of the demon's hair.

"By this time the woman is hysterical. They ended up taking her money by painting her with it after they dipped it in 'holy water.' Then they said they should keep the money to pray the demons out of it," Wallace said.

Police went to the house at 1038 S. Sumner on Saturday, but found it had been vacated.

"What usually happens is that they will move to another town close to here, maybe Borger, and start the same thing all over again," Wallace said.

While no one is sure how many people were taken in by the sleight of hand tricks, which have been used for years to deceive people in the Philippines and other basically superstitious cultures, the woman interviewed by

The Pampa News said that people were lined up around the house waiting for exorcisms.

"I learned a lesson. It makes me angry. I had so many problems and the bone (in the tomato) made me believe they could help me," she said.

Instead, it cost her $460 that she was going to use to repair her pickup and pay off the furniture in her house.

"We think this thing has been going on since the 19th of September," Wallace said.

She added that while the hairball and bone tricks appear an obvious dupe, bands of Gypsies have been known to take advantage of senior citizens and people from superstitious cultures to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Police said that those bilked by the operation told them the Gypsies drove nearly-new cars. One was a Monte Carlo and the other a Buick Regal. One of the cars had an El Paso dealer's tag.

Communications Supervisor Roy Clark of the El Paso Police Department said the Gypsies are called Curanderas (healers) and are prevalent in that area.

Anyone approached by Gypsies is asked to notify police.

Privatization involves private sector and also volunteerism

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series on the privatization of government as a means to reduce taxes and increase public services. This article examines some of the privatization possibilities.

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Imagine a city with 40,986 residents (about twice the size of Pampa) with less than half as many city employees and as many or more city services. Sound too good to be true?

La Mirada, Calif., south of Los Angeles, is an extreme example of privatized government. While its neighboring city of La Habra (population 45,232) has more than 300 city employees, La Mirada has only 59.

Randall Fitzgerald, author of

When Government Goes Private, points to La Mirada as an excellent example of a city that keeps taxes low and services high by contracting out almost all city services.

Fitzgerald recently addressed a group of journalists in Washington, D.C., on the possibilities for privatization in every community in America.

"Since being incorporated in 1960, La Mirada has been a contract city relying on outside contractors to perform nearly every service normally provided elsewhere by city employees," Fitzgerald writes.

Of the 89 contracts the city awards, most would be considered unheard of in most municipalities. Police, fire, trash collection, transit, street sweeping, data processing, accounting, library and public-works inspections are all contracted.

Most of the 59 employees La Mirada still has, Fitzgerald told the journalists, are to monitor quality of service delivery and execution of contracts. The city owns almost no vehicles and therefore has little maintenance costs.

"During the period of 1981-86, with more than 80 contracts, only one contractor failed to perform adequately and had to be replaced," Fitzgerald said.

The city saved enough money to build a civic center, put medians throughout the city, create a $300,000 Dial-a-Ride service for the elderly and handicapped, and keep general fund reserves of over $5 million.

Fitzgerald calls La Mirada the envy of Southern California.

Pampa City Manager Bob Hart points out that La Mirada is in an enviable position, being in a highly urban area where many companies can provide services once only distributed by government.

"When we bid out our ambulance services, a lot of companies didn't want to come to a remote area. The same was true when we looked into privatizing the city landfill."

"A lot of companies will say they don't want to come in where they will foul with less than 200 tons of garbage a day. We take in about 115 tons," Hart said.

Fitzgerald offered several solutions.

"A really inventive, motivated person or company that is already in the area could make a lot of money and save the taxpayers too. Or several cities that recognized the benefits of privatization could get together," he said.

He pointed out that government officials must be willing to put aside the quest for power and political pettiness in an effort to truly help the community keep services up and taxes low.

Hart stressed the importance of remembering that all services are paid for, whether through taxes or user fees.

"Somebody has got to pay for these things. It's just a matter of saying how you want them paid for," he said.

The benefits of privatization, Fitzgerald said, is that when a company is operating on the profit motive, they will find ways to save money and operate more efficiently.

He said that small communities simply must be more inventive.

"In the town of Garden City, Georgia, (population 6,895), volunteerism is regarded as a way of life. Residents pay no property taxes, the fire and recreation departments are staffed by volunteers, and the mayor and city council, all serving without pay, often can be found with tools in hand helping other citizens to dig city sewers and pave city streets," Fitzgerald said.

"This almost too-good-to-be-true picture of American life was born of economic necessity, a city official said.

"If something needs to be done and there's not enough money in the city budget, we don't raise See PRIVATIZATION, Page 2

Minister of Dallas' second largest church resigns for 'improprieties'

By AMANDA BARNETT
 Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas' second largest Southern Baptist congregation is beginning the healing process after the church's pastor resigned because he had an extramarital affair.

The Rev. Billy Weber, 45, of Prestonwood Baptist Church told church deacons of some "personal improprieties" before announcing publicly that he had had an affair.

The former minister apologized and told church members in a recorded message played at Sunday night's sermon to "Remember me at my best."

"This is a case where Bill Weber failed God," he said. "But God has never and will never fail Bill Weber and his family and his church."

Church officials told The Dallas Morning News that the former minister chose to record the brief message earlier in the day rather than to deliver it personally to congregation.

"I want to apologize to you as an individual and as a part of the church for having disappointed you and having failed you," the Rev. Weber said.

"For those of you who asked why this happened to Bill Weber, why did this happen to Prestonwood, I can only say that Bill Weber is not perfect, as you well know," he added.

The former minister concluded the message by saying, "Please pray especially for me and just trust God to do some things for me during this time of faith and rejuvenation."

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following minor accidents during the 40-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

FRIDAY, Oct. 7

12:15 a.m. — A 1984 Toyota driven by Martin Berry, 2400 N. Hobart, collided with a 1977 Ford driven by James Ramos, 1601 Somerville, at the intersection of Hobart and Somerville streets. No injuries were reported. Berry was taken into custody and charged with driving while intoxicated, no insurance and disregarding a red light.

9:12 a.m. — A 1976 Cadillac driven by Velma Lemons, 2566 Chestnut, collided with a 1981 Lincoln driven by Fay Harvey, 1820 Holly, in the 1800 block of North Hobart. No injuries were reported. Lemons was cited for unsafe backing.

10:40 p.m. — A 1977 Sportsman driven by Robert Sutton, 112 N. Starkweather, collided with a trash can in 1700 block of Duncan. No citations were issued and no injuries were reported.

11:20 p.m. — A 1982 Dodge driven by James Tucker, 617 W. Browning, collided with a 1984 Chevrolet driven by Monica Jernigan, 421 Lowry, at the intersection of Francis and Purviance streets. No injuries were reported. Jernigan was cited for failure to yield right of way.

SATURDAY, Oct. 8
 1 a.m. — An unknown vehicle struck a homemade trailer at 1100 Crane Road. No citations have been issued.

1:32 p.m. — A 1988 Ford pickup driven by Charley Douthit, P.O. Box 413, collided with a 1969 Ford driven by Roberta Dunson, 101 S. Russell, in the 200 block of South Cuyler. Dunson was taken to

"I need not tell you that this is the most traumatic moment in the history of our church," said the Rev. Tim LaHaye, who delivered the Sunday morning sermon at Prestonwood Baptist.

"From this moment on, we can experience the healing of God," LaHaye said. "God is able to overrule in the affairs of man."

Church members echoed the sentiment as they left the services Sunday morning.

"My kind of feeling is that we're here to worship God anyway," Rose Keagy said. "The pastor is only human, and what he says about God is what counts, not his personal life."

"As I heard our pastor say, 'We are a family. We are not a corporation, we are not a business, we are not a club. We're the body of Christ,'" said associate pastor Bill Taylor.

But neither Weber nor church officials would disclose any details of the relationship.

Weber, founder of the 11,000-member church, met early Saturday with more than 120 Prestonwood deacons and "made a full disclosure to them of some personal improprieties while he was pastor," according to a church statement.

The statement reported Weber "asked their forgiveness and said he was sorry he had enormously disappointed so many people."

At an afternoon news conference, Deacon Newt Hamlin said Weber had tendered his resignation.

"This is certainly the most difficult decision of my life, but one I believe is in the best interest of the church, its future and its ministry in this community," Weber said in a statement.

"I have offered no excuses for my exercise in bad judgment — for there are none — and have sought forgiveness from the Lord, my family, church and community," Weber said.

Privatization

taxes, cut services or go into debt. We just get people together and go out and do it ourselves," said Garden City Mayor Ralph Kessler recently.

In Pampa, that spirit has caused the local United Way to do better than most fund-raising operations in the nation, according to Hart.

But there is a flip side. "I get frustrated when people say that they are not going to pull the weeds growing by the curb and the street. They say that is the city's job. If they did to it themselves, they would save themselves tax dollars in the long run," Hart said.

Harry Caudill, a former Kentucky legislator, summarizes the idea of privatization by condemning the opposite extreme: overt government influence in every phase of life.

"We have a medical condition down here called the Appalachian Syndrome ... chronic dependency, in which our people just give up. Will and brains ... give us those two things and we'd be rich. Without them the rest is superfluous," Caudill said.

Fitzgerald made it clear that the spirit that pervades Garden City, Ga., and most other heavily privatized towns was born from a private sector desire to eliminate government intervention and improve services.

He termed it "re-taking control of things we should never have surrendered."

In Lubbock, an advanced form of privatization has led to competing electric utilities that save consumers an estimated 33 percent on their bill.

The French philosopher Tocqueville explained that "those which we call necessary institutions are simply no more than institutions to which we have become accustomed."

Highs Tuesday 70s most sections to mid 80s lowlands of southwest. Lows tonight mostly 40s except mid 50s Big Bend.

North Texas — Sunny days and fair nights through Tuesday. Warm afternoons. Cool again tonight. Lows tonight 57 to 52. Highs Tuesday 75 to 83.

South Texas — Isolated to widely scattered showers and thunderstorms along the Rio Grande plains and coastal plains diminishing tonight. Fair skies otherwise. Highs Tuesday 80s except upper 70s along the upper coast. Lows tonight 40s north to mid 60s south except near 70 beaches.

EXTENDED FORECAST
Wednesday through Friday
 West Texas — A chance of showers in the south and southwest Tuesday, otherwise no significant precipitation expected. Temperatures will warm from below normal Wednesday to above normal on Friday. Panhandle: Lows mid 40s to low 50s; highs from the mid 70s to near 80. South Plains and Far West: Lows upper 40s to low 50s; highs mid 70s to low 80s. Permian Basin: Lows upper 40s to mid 50s; highs upper 70s to near 80. Concho Valley: Lows from the low to upper 50s; highs from the mid 70s to near 80. Big Bend: Lows in the 40s mountains and mid to upper 50s lowlands. Highs around 80 mountains and near 90 lowlands.

North Texas — Mostly fair and mild through the period. Lows mostly in the 50s. Highs in the 70s all North Texas Wednesday, 80s west to upper 70s east Thursday and Friday.

South Texas — Mostly fair with warm days and mild nights. Highs in the 70s to near 80 Wednesday and Thursday, in the 80s Friday. Lows in the 50s, 60s immediate coast and lower Rio Grande valley.

BORDER STATES
 Oklahoma — Mostly fair through Tuesday. Lows tonight low 40s Panhandle to low 50s southeast. Tuesday highs mid 60s northeast to upper 70s Panhandle.

New Mexico — Partly cloudy west and south through Tuesday and fair northeast. A few showers or thundershowers southwest third mainly during the afternoon and early nighttime. Highs Tuesday will be in the upper 50s and 60s mountains to the 70s at the lower elevations. Lows tonight will be in the mid 20s and 30s mountains to the 40s and low 50s at the lower elevations.

Global warming scenario poses disaster for Texas coastline

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Gulf coast could suffer significant flooding and disastrous hurricane strikes if the greenhouse effect causes global warming and a rise in sea level, experts say.

The Texas coast is particularly vulnerable to rising seas for a number of reasons, largely related to its flatness and location in the path that hurricanes take, said Stephen Leatherman, director of the University of Maryland's Laboratory for Coastal Research and chairman of the Climate Institute.

"Essentially, the Texas coast is one of the most vulnerable," said Leatherman, a coastal geologist and a leading authority on sea level rise. "The only other coast more vulnerable is Louisiana, because of its land-subsidence problems."

Warmer ocean waters resulting from higher air temperatures are likely to produce hurricanes that are stronger and more numerous, Leatherman said. "On top of that, as the sea heats up, the area where tropical storms originate will move northward and closer to Texas," he said.

The greenhouse effect is the term used to describe the warming of the Earth's atmosphere by the accumulation of carbon dioxide and other air pollutants.

One widely expected impact is rising seas, as water expands and melting occurs in polar regions. However, scientists say specific coastal changes from rising seas hinge on many variables, such as the amount of greenhouse gases that man continues to pump into the atmosphere.

Leatherman says some sea level rise is inevitable because of the lag between past and present emissions of those pollutants and the greenhouse warming they will produce.

"The direction is set, although we don't know how far the sea will rise," he said. "The point is, it's going to go up. If there's anything hot-wired to temperature increase, it's sea level."

"It's hard to envision a lot of benefits for Texas" from higher oceans caused by the greenhouse effect, agreed Jim Titus, the EPA's project manager for sea level rise.

"Projects to prevent or mitigate some effects of rising seas are all going to cost money," Titus told the Houston Chronicle. "People will have to ask, would we rather avoid global warming than have all these costs."

Leatherman's study covered the northern third of Galveston Island, the top of Bolivar Peninsula and a mainland area encompassing Texas City, La Marque and San Leon. Projected consequences of higher seas included:

- With a sea level rise of 7.8 feet by 2075, flooding now associated with a 100-year storm would occur at 10-year frequency with catastrophic damage.
- By 2075, a rise of three feet would place 94 percent of the study area in the 100-year floodplain, and a 7.8-foot rise would increase that to almost 98 percent. About 60 percent of the area is now considered susceptible to a 100-year flood.
- The 15-year floodplain, which now covers a fourth of the area, would grow to a third of the area with a three-foot rise in sea level. Half the area, including as much as four-fifths of Galveston, would be included with a rise of 7.8 feet.
- Virtually the entire San Leon peninsula, a residential area, would erode by 2075 with a 7.8-foot rise. Six percent of the whole study area would be lost to erosion by 2075 with a three-foot rise in sea level, and 12 percent would erode with a rise of 7.8 feet.

Titus noted in a 1984 book that the most obvious consequence of rising seas would be inundation of low-lying areas, accompanied by temporary flooding elsewhere, intrusion of salt water into some underground water supplies and a retreating shoreline.

Basically, Leatherman said, only three things can be done in response: People can move back from the coastline, letting it erode. They can armor the coast with structures such as the seawall built to protect Galveston. Or they can replenish beaches with extra sand, pumped from offshore to keep pace with the rising sea.

Galveston Bay and several other Texas bays are roughly perpendicular to the shoreline and are what geologists call "funnel-shaped" — a feature that amplifies a hurricane's storm surge. Essentially, Leatherman said, when a surge enters such a bay, "there's no place for the water to go."

In Texas, with a shoreline that is already seriously eroding in many areas, much of the impact will depend on how far the sea actually rises.

Bush, Dukakis prepare for final debate

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

George Bush and Michael Dukakis focused on strategy and studied for their second presidential debate as state polls across the nation indicated that the Republican nominee is solidifying his lead over the Democratic challenger.

The vice president spent several hours at his Washington, D.C., home Sunday morning preparing for the debate before traveling to Illinois where he marched in a Slavic parade and vowed never to forget the Soviet presence in Eastern Europe.

Dukakis was closeted for about six hours with a dozen advisers at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston where they discussed strategy for the confrontation scheduled for Thursday in Los Angeles.

The Democratic nominee was speaking at a Long Island high school today before marching with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo in the Columbus Day parade in New York City.

Bush was addressing a Knights of Columbus meeting in Trenton, N.J., where aides said he would discuss crime and the rights of victims. The GOP nominee's running mate, Dan Quayle, was campaigning in Detroit and Farmington Hills, Mich., in addition to Akron and Toledo, Ohio.

Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen was tending to Senate duties in Washington.

Statewide polls in Kansas, Ohio, New Mexico and Missouri showed Bush leading Dukakis while a survey of voters in 15 Southern and border states found the Republican nominee holding a 12-point regional advantage over his Democratic rival.

The poll of 2,102 registered voters, conducted last week by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, showed Bush leading Dukakis 49-37 percent with 12 percent of those surveyed undecided.

The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus two percentage points.

Bush led in every state, including Florida, where he held a 26-point advantage, and Texas, where despite the presence of Lone Star state Sen. Lloyd Bentsen on the Democratic ticket, the GOP nominee enjoys a 14-point lead.

Both are high-stakes Electoral College states. Florida has 21 electoral votes; Texas is the third biggest prize with 29.

The survey also included Alabama, Delaware, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Georgia, Kentucky, Arkansas and North Carolina.

With his support strong in the South, Bush turned his attention Sunday to the Midwest and the crucial state of Illinois, which has 24 electoral votes.

The vice president and his wife, Barbara, rode in an old-fashioned fire truck along a two-mile parade route between Cicero and Berwin, in the annual Houbly Day parade, a Czechoslovakian celebration of bountiful mushroom crops.

"This is the day we celebrate family, we celebrate faith and we celebrate freedom," Bush said in brief remarks before the parade began. "And none of us will ever forget there is not freedom in Eastern Europe, and I have pledged, as president, to never forget that."

Earlier, Bush prepared for the nationally broadcast, 90-minute debate scheduled for Thursday in the Pauley Pavilion on the University of California at Los Angeles campus.

The date had depended on the length of the American League baseball playoffs, but that series ended Sunday when the Oakland A's completed a sweep of the Boston Red Sox.

If, however, rainouts extend the National League series, the debate date could change, Dukakis spokesman Mark Gearan said Sunday.

The Bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates, which assumed sponsorship of the debate after the League of Women Voters withdrew, said Friday that the confrontation would follow the format of the candidates' first meeting in which Bush and Dukakis responded to questions from a panel of four reporters.

Conservationists renew call to preserve timber

BEAUMONT (AP) — Timber companies continue to harvest trees in the Big Thicket area of southeast Texas while Congress considers designating part of the region a nature preserve, conservationists say.

"This cutting proves our point," said Maxine Johnston of Batson, chairwoman of a TCNR task force on the Big Thicket.

"Homeowners who control 2 percent of the proposed area cannot protect the other 98 percent. Only preservation in the Big Thicket National Preserve can do that," she said.

Representatives for the Big Thicket Conservation Association, the Texas Committee on Natural Resources and the Sierra Club renewed calls for a moratorium on timber harvesting by Louisiana-Pacific Corp. and other companies along the scenic Village Creek area, now under consideration for addition to the existing preserve.

A bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, would allow the state to buy or exchange 14,000 acres in three areas along Village Creek in Hardin County, Big Sandy in Polk County and the Canyons in Tyler County and add them to the Big Thicket preserve, about 80 miles north-east of Houston.

Conservationists in September asked Louisiana-Pacific,

Temple-Inland and Champion International to hold off on timber harvesting in the areas while the bill was being considered.

The companies own 77 percent of the land in the proposed addition.

Last week, conservationists say Louisiana-Pacific workers began cutting a five-mile corridor through land the company owns along Village Creek.

Louisiana-Pacific officials in Conroe did not answer telephone calls Sunday by The Associated Press.

Johnston said a Louisiana-Pacific official told her the company is discussing the moratorium request and will consult other timber companies about their intent.

"If Louisiana-Pacific continues the destruction of these areas, they will be thumbing their nose at the U.S. Congress, at Rep. Charles Wilson and at the conservation community," Johnston said.

Bob Finch of the Big Thicket conservation group said evidence of cutting prompted a Sept. 15 moratorium request.

Wilson's bill passed the U.S. House of Representatives Sept. 26 but is not expected to clear the Senate in the final week of this Congress.

Wilson, who sent staffers to investigate the cutting, plans to reintroduce the bill in January if it dies in the Senate.

Dukakis still hoping to snare Texas win

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democratic officials spent the past several weeks watching in dismay as GOP presidential nominee George Bush pounded Michael Dukakis on gun control, crime and the Pledge of Allegiance.

But now, reveling in vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen's debate performance and citing a backlash against Bush's campaign, Democrats say the Lone Star state once again is up for grabs.

But the Bush camp says that boast is wishful thinking born out of desperation. Republicans say the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket is running aground in Texas, forcing a major decision on the Democrats: whether to go full bore in Texas or scale back and concentrate on California.

"They're making decisions about taking some of the money that they were going to spend in Texas and putting it in other states," Bush campaign spokesman Mark Sanders said late last week.

Democratic national party chairman Paul Kirk even concedes that Dukakis' state campaign suffered a "rope-a-dope" phase and was too timid in combating Bush's charges. But other Democrats say they have no intention of reducing efforts in Texas.

"That's the kind of rumor that comes from Republican campaign managers who must have been snorting something (Panama strongman Manuel) Noriega sent them," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

Dukakis campaigned in the state Thursday while Texans were blitzed with new campaign commercials rebutting a GOP attack on his crime stance. Bush says Dukakis is soft on crime, citing a Massachusetts prison furlough program that initially made first-degree murderers eligible for weekend passes.

The new Dukakis ads reverse the attack. They say a prison inmate who in 1981 raped and murdered a woman was staying at a Houston halfway house that Bush — then a Houston congressman — helped start and then touted in 1982 during White House ceremonies honoring volunteer organizations.

Some Texas Democrats say the new hard-hitting ads come none too soon after an otherwise dismal campaign effort.

"I think they've done a rotten job of it," said state Democratic chairman Bob Slagle.

"I think the Dukakis people have done a very poor job of rebutting the Pledge of Allegiance business and the 'soft-on-crime' business. I've never seen people in a campaign, where they were paid to give advice, dissipate a 17-point lead before. I think they were asleep at the switch in answering some of this stuff."

The new ads also criticize Texas Republican Gov. Bill Clements for trying to ease prison crowding by releasing dangerous inmates early.

Democratic campaign officials charge that Republicans planted the rumor of a Texas retreat by Dukakis forces because Bush is in trouble in the state he calls home.

Dukakis state campaign manager Tom Cosgrove cited Bush's Thursday visit to an energy forum in Midland. "We're forcing the vice president to spend money in Texas," Cosgrove said.

The day after the vice presidential debate, Dukakis and Bentsen — Texas' senior senator — headed a rally in Lone Star, a small East Texas town troubled by the layoffs of thousands of steel workers.

After the rally, Dukakis was asked about speculation that he would scale back his state campaign if new campaign ads did not produce higher poll ratings.

"We're going to win in Texas," Dukakis said. "That's why we're here."

Both parties have said Texas, with its 29 electoral votes, is a must-win state.

Since the debate, Bentsen has campaigned primarily in Texas. On Friday, he said during a Dallas speech, "This race is going to be close; it's going right down to the wire. If we can put Texas in that Democratic column, and I'm convinced we will, then we're going to win this election."

Cosgrove asserted Dukakis has been picking up momentum in Texas since before the first presidential debate Sept. 25. At that time, polls placed the Massachusetts governor four to 11 points behind Bush.

"People want to see issues debated on their economic future," said Cosgrove. He summed up Bush's campaign, saying, "He thinks we ought to have a referendum on gun control, abortion and the Pledge of Allegiance."

Pinochet concedes defeat but rules out call for resignation

By EDUARDO GALLARDO
Associated Press Writer

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet acknowledged defeat in a referendum on extending his rule but again rejected opposition demands for his resignation and vowed to stay in power for another 18 months.

A key opposition leader, meanwhile, was quoted Sunday as calling for talks with the military government on the nation's political future.

In a surprise television appearance from his country home at Bucalemu, Gen. Pinochet said Sunday, "I acknowledge the opposition's victory, but I am not going to change what the constitution says. March 11, 1980, is going to be the day that the government is handed over."

"The situation is very simple," he said. "We fulfilled the constitution that was set up... so now that the opposition has triumphed, why should we change?"

The comments of the 72-year-old commander-in-chief of Chile's armed forces came during a three-minute TV newscast. Pinochet was dressed in a short-sleeved blue shirt. He appeared relaxed and spoke clearly and firmly.

Nearly 7 million Chileans went to the polls Wednesday to vote on the armed forces' proposal that Pinochet remain president until 1997. Pinochet, who ousted elected Marxist President Salvador Allende in a 1973 coup that left Allende dead, lost by about 800,000 votes or a margin of more than 11 percent.

The vote was carried out under a 1980 constitution. That document also calls for elections for president and congress to be held in December 1989, with the winners taking office in March.

Opposition leaders have pressed Pinochet's military government to move up the date of elections and make other constitutional changes.

Their proposals include eliminating a constitutional ban on Marxist groups, and allowing the entire Senate — not just two-thirds — to be elected rather than appointed.

Opposition leaders also want to streamline the process by which future constitutional changes can be made.

"We will formally call on those holding power now to talk to reach an agreement," opposition spokesman Patricio Aylwin said in an interview published Sunday in the newspaper La Epoca. "We will take the initiative by making a proposal and call to the armed forces."

Aylwin is spokesman for the 16-party coalition that urged Chileans to vote "no" in the referendum.

A four-man military junta acts as the legislature of this South America country, which has been ruled by freely elected, democratic governments for most of its 178-year history as an independent nation.

The junta is empowered to change the constitution, but Pinochet said in a speech broadcast nationwide the night after the referendum that he had no intention of doing so.

Ricardo Lagos, a prominent, moderate Socialist, acknowledged that negotiations, if they take place, would take time. "The people are mature enough to understand that 15 years of dictatorship don't end in 15 hours."

But other Pinochet opponents already have served notice they don't intend to wait long or peacefully. On Saturday, a coalition of leftist parties publicly called for Pinochet's immediate resignation.

The situation sets up potential clashes between the government and its opponents. In the two days following the election, tens of thousands of Chileans celebrated Pinochet's defeat with spontaneous demonstrations in the streets of the capital and other major cities.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

What a comeback! The King for prez

The 1988 presidential race, currently dominated by two of the most pathetic candidates ever, will soon be jolted by a third candidate who is about to begin a last-ditch write-in bid to save our nation.

Like President Reagan, the candidate has a background in show business, and a stage presence even greater than the Great Communicator's. The candidate also has experience with the drug problem the country is now debating. He has traveled widely throughout the world and is loved by all nations and peoples. And the candidate was born in Tupelo, Miss., on Jan. 8, 1935, which will help him win the South.

The candidate is none other than Elvis Presley, the King of Rock 'n' Roll. He's alive. He's back. And he's ready to save America from the brink of disaster.

A recent issue of The National Examiner, the investigative weekly newspaper available at your local grocery store, provides incontrovertible evidence that Elvis is alive. Some sceptics may say that the photos of the King are a bit blurry. But doubters there will always be, even after the King is sworn in as prez next January singing "Love Me Tender" from the Capitol steps.

The newspaper reports that "a top photo expert contacted by the Examiner said there was no evidence of tampering" with the photos. "Said the expert: I'm convinced these photographs are legitimate. The shadows are in the right position and the men's hands in relation to each other are normal. You just couldn't fake that." So there. It's true. It's really the King.

How do we deduce that the King will soon announce his bid for the presidency? It's obvious. Elvis dropped out of sight — he "died" — in 1977, during the presidency of Jimmy Carter; the sight of the country being destroyed by his fellow southerner was too much for Elvis. The King sat out the Reagan presidency probably because he didn't want to compete with a fellow entertainer. But now Elvis knows it's time to come out to save the land he loves, in whose army he served in West Germany, and about which he sang "GI Blues."

The King knows that only he can deal with Mikhail Gorbachev. After the King sings "(Don't Step on My) Blue Suede Shoes," the Soviet strongman will back out of Nicaragua and Afghanistan and dismantle the Red Army. By singing "Jailhouse Rock," Elvis will clean up corruption in Congress.

And the King knows that only he can deal with the national debt. By holding a series of concerts around the world, singing "Let Me Be Your Teddy Bear," he'll make enough moolah to put the United States in the black fast. The foreign concerts will also help the trade deficit.

Elvis's campaign song will be: "It's Now or Never." He'll win in a landslide. Once in office, the King will remain popular by singing "Good Luck Charm."

He wants to saw off a rung

WASHINGTON — There across in the Senate a great weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, as liberal Democrats bemoaned the defeat of Edward Kennedy's bill to increase the minimum wage. The tears were mostly crocodile tears. The Democrats made out like bandits on this one.

Kennedy's bill was lovely politics. It permitted the Democrats to paint themselves as defenders of the downtrodden, benefactors of the lowest income families, apostles of compassion — all of that.

This left the Republicans to be depicted as hard-hearted malefactors of great wealth whose greatest pleasure in life is to grind the faces of the poor. In the less than five weeks remaining before the presidential election, we can expect to hear a good deal of harping on this theme.

The Democrats will be drawing political advantage from skewed economics. With a bare handful of exceptions, every student of elementary economics accepted this self-evident proposition: Kennedy's bill would hurt the very class it pretended to help. It would have hit hardest at black teen-aged dropouts by spinning them off the wheel of opportunity.

This was the proposal: The minimum wage, which has remained at $3.35 an hour since 1981, would rise to $3.75 next year, to $4.15 in 1990 and to $4.55 in 1991.

On paper, as Kennedy argued, such increases are plainly deserved. Over the past seven years the purchasing power of the dollar has dropped significantly. If $3.35 was fair in 1981, then $4.55 should be fair in 1991.

But fair to whom? The Kennedy bill would have directly and immediately benefited an estimated 5 million persons who are now employed at $3.35 per hour. Kennedy dwelt pathetically upon how much this would mean to "those who work full-time year-round at the minimum wage." Their gross annual income, before Social Security taxes, would go up from $6,968 to $7,800. The senator's calculations are largely hypothetical: Only an estimated 110,000 of the 5 million actually work 40 hours a week the year round.

Indirectly and prospectively the Kennedy bill would have benefited other millions who work by the hour. To increase wage rates at the bottom is to increase wage rates on up the line. This is the bump-bump-bump effect.

The result is to increase an employer's cost of doing business without increasing the value of his product. Thus the cost of goods goes up, and inflation erodes the value of the higher wages.

This is the least of the objections to Kennedy's bill. The senator is filled with good cheer for the $3.35 worker who would hold onto his job at $3.75. He has little to say about the $3.35 worker who gets fired. He ignores the inexperienced and barely competent person who will not be hired at all.

Estimates of this impact are all over the lot. The Wharton school predicts that 100,000 workers would be dropped from the bottom-level jobs they have now. The Congressional Budget Office puts the job loss at 250,000 to 500,000. The Council of Economic Advisors says more than 600,000 would be thrown out of work. A study from Clemson University places the figure at more than a million.

The worst of the impact would fall upon an unknowable number of persons, mostly teenagers living with their families, who are looking for their first job. If such a teen-ager is barely employable at $3.35, he is not likely to be more employable at $3.75. His opportunity to learn the disciplines of the marketplace vanishes. What is "decent" or "compassionate" about that prospect?

Various studies have been made of the 5 million persons who at any given time are working at the minimum wage. The data should be treated as roughly but not precisely accurate.

Generally speaking, two-thirds of these wage-earners are working only part-time for part of the year. They are not from poor families; 70 percent of them are members of families well above the poverty line. They are not likely to be sole earners and heads of families. Two-thirds of them are under 25 years of age.

The typical minimum wage worker, says economist Robert J. Samuelson, "is a teen-ager from a non-poor family working as a waiter or waitress." They are just starting their climb up the ladder.

The metaphor is apt. Some workers never will make it past the fourth or fifth rung. Those who are blessed with education, ambition and luck will climb higher. A fortunate few will make it to the top. But nobody gets up the ladder without getting up the first rung — and that is the rung Kennedy wants to saw off.

They don't vote, but sadists do

Charles Dickens, with his gifted pen, was able to throw open the child-labor sweatshops of England — however tediously. Imagine how much more promptly that humane objective might have been accomplished if he'd had a microphone.

In the forgettable days in our own country when humans were routinely bought, sold and enslaved, it took the gifted pen of Harriet Beecher Stowe to confront our nation with its own shame.

If somebody could have been there with a microphone — a voice for the voiceless — maybe our nation could have been spared having to be washed in blood by the UnCivil War.

And in 1918 when Americans came home from war to employment that offered many neither dignity, sanitation nor a living wage — had there been somebody present — some convincing voice for the voiceless — American labor would not have had to mobilize first under a Communist banner.

I was not there to be a voice for the horses that were misused and sometimes brutally abused in the days before they were emancipated by Henry Ford.

Paul Harvey

I was not there — but I am here now — and there are now unspeakable cruelties committed in the name of "science" or in the name of "commerce" or in the name of "religious freedom" against babies and animals.

Today, those who are frustrated by their inability to be heard — battered children and abused animals — should have the benefit of microphones and cameras as well as songwriters and literary artists to expedite evolution — to help us all to elevate our consciences.

Come on now, Paul Harvey, you are not going to be one of those crackpots who believes we should not swat flies nor bait our fishhooks with worms ...

Well, we now have studies affirming that worms do, in fact, feel pain.

But none of us can fight a thousand side-fights without losing the war. We cannot and must not get defeated by a too-huge agenda. What we can do is to confront the obvious inhumanities.

If there were a minority in our nation completely, absolutely dependent on friends in the majority ...

Let me say that another way; if there were some in our nation utterly at the mercy of the sometimes merciless — you would rise up in righteous wrath and demand help for those helpless.

There is such a segment bred and fed for morons who like to witness suffering: Pit bull fights, cock fights and redundant outdated mad-scientist experiments on 50,000 cats this year — and 180,000 dogs — many or most of which had been taught to love and serve us — along with other animals and birds subjected to 22 million agonizing deaths this year.

Needless suffering is neither morally correct nor strategically smart but politically tolerable as long as the victims can't vote and sadists can.

Civil disobedience ethics aren't so easy

By CHUCK STONE

The Massachusetts Mechanic and the Texas Tenderfoot can't make up their minds how they feel about abortion, and I can't make up my mind how I feel about civil disobedience.

One of my readers, Garry St. John in Fairbanks, Alaska, neatly capuled this dilemma of indecision when he wrote: "Why is it when I disagree with you, you sound so hot and emotional ... and yet when I agree with you, you sound cool and reasoned? Is the difference on your end or mine?"

Michael Dukakis and George Bush are equally dichotomous. In their debate, Bush's opposition to abortion included support for "penalties." After the debate, he tried to back away from that extreme position. Dukakis expressed distaste for abortion, but supported a woman's right to exercise freedom of choice.

I don't advocate abortion. I simply accept the supremacy of the woman's right to determine what happens to her body.

Freedom of expression is paramount. But this is where I get into trouble, because my support for freedom of expression seems to be predicated on my feelings about a cause's righteousness.

My position on civil disobedience should not be a function of ideology, but I still draw ideological distinctions. I consider apartheid one of the most barbaric crimes against humanity, for example. So I applaud the 143 white South African army conscripts who are refusing military service because it upholds apartheid. Their resistance represents the largest expression of defiance to date in the proliferating draft resistance by white South Africans.

The Yonkers, N.Y., councilmen who were fined after refusing to vote to build federal court-ordered low-income housing, were also practicing civil disobedience. But instead of applauding them for exercising their freedom of expression, I commended the federal judge who held their civil disobedience in contempt and levied enormous fines.

Anti-abortionists have been escalating their campaign to close down clinics where abortions are performed. The pro-lifers are practicing civil disobedience and exercising their freedom of expression by blocking clinic entrances, lying down on the sidewalks and getting arrested. But their freedom of expression results in the denial of others' freedom of choice, so I oppose it.

Civil disobedience depends on the practitioner's willingness to accept the penalty for breaking what he or she considers an unjust law. In South Africa, Yonkers and cities where anti-abortionists have been arrested, the ends may be different, but the means are the same.

Socrates drank the hemlock, rather than recant. Thoreau went to jail, rather than pay taxes that would support the Mexican War. Gandhi remained in prison, rather than accept British rule. Martin Luther King Jr. accepted prison, rather than comply with unconstitutional racist laws.

Are draft-resisting South Africans,

Yonkers city councilmen and anti-abortionists equal inheritors of the historical mandate of civil disobedience?

My head says, yes. My heart says, no. The distinction may lie in the ends they seek.

Draft-resisting white South Africans want to make their country more democratic.

Yonkers city councilmen want to make their city less democratic. ("Low-income housing" is a euphemism for black residents.)

Anti-abortionists want to do both — make society less democratic by restricting a woman's right to exercise freedom of choice, but simultaneously make society more democratic by protecting the rights of the unborn.

Just as my reader in Fairbanks can't reconcile his differences and agreements with me, I can't reconcile my differences and agreements with the practitioners of civil disobedience.

Ethics don't come easy.

Demand influences antique porcelain's value

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

It is sometimes hard to understand why one piece of porcelain is worth hundreds of dollars while a similar piece made by the same company is worth far less. The value of an antique is determined not only by its age, beauty, condition and rarity, but also by the demand for it.

Porcelains marked "R.S. Prussia," which were made by the factory of Reinhold Schlegelmilch in Germany from the late 1870s to 1914, are popular with collectors. The same mark was used by Erdmann Schlegelmilch of Suhl, Germany, from 1910 to 1956. This mark has been copied in recent years to fool collectors who want pieces from the old factories.

Although pieces with the "R.S. Prussia" mark printed in red have been preferred by collectors, price is generally determined more by the design on the front of the porcelain than by the mark on the back. The women known as the "Four Seasons" are popular with collectors because designs featuring attractive, semi-dressed women always sell well.

Even more expensive are the pieces picturing giraffes, lions, tigers, Admiral Peary or all four seasons pictured on one piece. Rare but less expensive are plates picturing fruit. Least expensive are floral designs.

Be sure to look carefully at the antiques in the shops and in the price books that give values. Sometimes a bargain price may not really be a bargain.

Antiques

Q. What can you tell me about the "Cries of London" prints? I just inherited several, including the milkmaid and a vegetable seller.

A. The itinerant street peddlers in 18th-century London who loudly proclaimed their wares were known as "criers." The Cries of London is a popular series of prints first made in 1795.

Francis Wheatley, a painter, had six paintings of street merchants or "criers" in the Royal Academy of London in 1792. He did 14 paintings, 13 of which were engraved and offered for sale by Messrs. Colnaghi & Co. They were issued in black-and-white, brown-and-white or hand-colored.

The prints were reissued many times, sometimes with slight changes. Other artists also pictured the London criers, and many sets were published. Modern photographic reproductions of the old prints are also available.

Q. My mother, age 91, has her mother's ironing board. I want to know its history. It is very heavy and awkward. The label "Rid-Jid Table" is on the ironing board.

A. An ironing board was originally a padded, sheet-covered board that was placed between a table top and a chair back. Manufacturers began making special boards, from 3 to 6 feet long and 4 to 16 inches wide, with a tapered end, and the first board with its own legs was made in 1898 by J.R. Clark Company of Minneapolis, Minn. This company eventually became the Rid-Jid Products Corporation.

The Rid-Jid board was issued its first patent in 1911, and it was for the folding three-legged style that is still in use. The board was offered in ads in 1928 as "the most appreciated Christmas gift that five dollars could buy."

Q. My 82-year-old aunt recently gave me a set of six carnival glass dessert plates. Each has an embossed windmill in the center surrounded by a checkerboard design. She thought they came in cereal boxes.

A. Windmill is a carnival glass pattern made by the Imperial Glass Company of Bellaire, Ohio. Carnival glass was often used as premiums and given away at fairs or in boxes of food. The Windmill pattern was reissued in the 1960s.

Q. My pewter bowl says "Flag and Homan Pewter" on the back. When was it made?

A. Asa F. Flagg was an Englishman who lived in Cincinnati and made pewter wares from 1842 to 1846. He later joined Henry Homan, and they worked together until 1854. Homan and Company continued working after that, but most of their later pieces were silver-plated.

TIP: Clean brass regularly with a solution of liquid dishwashing detergent and warm water. Rinse in warm water and then dry.

Educator says textbooks here to stay, despite videodisks

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The videodisk, with its ability to store vast amounts of visual information, is just another teaching tool and doesn't threaten to replace textbooks in the classroom, educators say.

They contend that textbooks are an institution that help structure what happens in the classroom. But textbooks are not the only way for a teacher to structure lessons.

"There's no imminent danger for the textbook. It certainly is possible today — not just with a videodisk, but with computers and software — to organize teaching and learning around something other than textbooks if you want to," said James Mecklenburger, director of the Institute for the Transfer of Technology to Education, a part of the National School Boards Association in Alexandria, Va.

"The question is, is having a lot of pictures and sound and data and text a good way to teach? If it is, we'll have many more ways to do that in the future," he said in an interview.

There's no indication of a revolt against textbooks. Few colleges of education teach prospective teachers how to use the new technology, he said.

And, of 2.5 million American teachers, he estimates fewer than 5 percent ever have seen a videodisk. He also estimates there probably are not more than 20,000 videodisk players in the nation's 100,000 schools, compared with an estimated 2 million microcomputers.

But videodisk use has increased significantly in the past two years. Mecklenburger said he has heard teachers say that the textbook is becoming less of a backbone and more of a supplement.

One firm in New Jersey has produced more than 20 educational videodisks since 1981. Its first was a compilation of photos sent back to Earth by Voyager II, now heading for Neptune.

The firm has more than 3,000 customers, mostly schools, colleges and universities, said Jim Donatelli, vice president for marketing and sales.

After teachers use videodisks for two or three years, they find they depend less on the book, he said.

Blatnik, who's starting his 18th year at Swanton High School, says use of new technology has revolutionized his teaching style.

It takes him less time to prepare lessons now and his students learn faster, he says. And, he's especially proud of the way students who normally do average and below-average work seem to be grasping the material.

Videodisk technology has mushroomed in the last two years, but it's hardly widespread in schools. The Ohio education department recommends its use.

"We believe the videodisk technology offers tremendous educational potential," said G. Robert Bowers, assistant superintendent for public instruction. Swanton is one of eight sites the department is observing for its "Classroom of the Future" project.

In the Springfield local school district, officials plan to spend $10,000 for a 38-disk Video Encyclopedia of the 20th century, which includes thousands of news and movie clips of major world events since 1900.

"It's a visual age," said George Tombaugh, Springfield's superintendent. "This is another resource that our staff and students should be utilizing."

Remember to replace home smoke alarm battery yearly

NEW YORK (AP) — The month of October, the start of the home heating season, is a good time to replace that smoke alarm battery.

A fresh alkaline battery will last more than a year in a typical alarm, but battery experts at Duracell advise changing it annually. They are promoting National Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 9-15, as a good time to do so.

Meanwhile, the Eveready people suggest a new battery on Oct. 30, the day the nation returns to standard time. Their campaign is "Change Your Clock, Change Your Battery."

The National Fire Protection Association of Quincy, Mass., says that most of the 25,000 fire-related deaths and injuries each year in the United States could be prevented with a fully functional smoke detector.

Drinking water is overlooked health hazard

DEAR ABBY: To ensure that the drinking water of all Americans would be free of chemicals known to cause cancer, birth defects and nervous disorders, The Safe Drinking Water Act was passed in 1974.

So what happened? Nothing. The problem was ignored. Today, only 50 water systems out of nearly 60,000 in our country use the activated carbon filter system that removes toxic chemicals from our drinking water! (Western Europe is way ahead of us in this regard.)

I have put the facts into a newsletter, telling citizens how to evaluate their drinking water and what to do if their water does not meet government standards.

The newsletter contains information such as: Where does drinking water come from, and how does it become contaminated? How is water made safe to drink? What can you do about contamination at the source? Bottled water — do you need it?

Abby, your column is powerful. Will you please use it to get this very important message to the public? I am enclosing a copy of the newsletter for your perusal.

RALPH NADER

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: To remind someone to buy you a gift is ridiculous. Remember, "A gift unfreely given is no gift at all."

Women, give your husbands the freedom not to buy a gift on all those special days. That in itself is a wonderful gift, which will come back to you in love and appreciation and generosity.

Abby, have you heard, "A woman who is not interested in diamonds is herself a gem"? Sign me ... WISE WICHITA WOMAN

DEAR W.W. WOMAN: No, but I have read: "Who can find a virtuous woman? For her price is far above rubies." (Proverbs 31:10)

A lack of interest in diamonds makes not a woman a "gem." Neither does an interest in diamonds diminish a woman's worth.

DEAR ABBY: You were asked, "Why do so many public speakers (who should know better) insist on speaking longer than the time they are allotted?"

I was reminded of an incident that took place 20 years ago. A local minister who had been invited to be the guest speaker at our Rotary Club asked the club president, Robert Proctor, how long he should speak.

Mr. Proctor replied: "You may speak as long as you wish, but everybody leaves here in 40 minutes."

SID ROSEN, BRANDON, VT.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the lady who didn't want her apartment sprayed for bugs because clearing the shelves was too big a job for her. (She was an older woman who also worked.)

Friends of mine just moved into the apartment of a woman who had never had her place sprayed for the same reason. They said they had seen roaches hiding in the cupboards, behind the wallpaper and in every nook and cranny, and those bugs were so used to people they were almost domesticated.

Isn't there a volunteer organization in her city that could send someone to help her clean out and restock her shelves?

JOE HOLM, LINCOLN

DEAR JOE: She didn't disclose her location, but any volunteer organization that provides that kind of service deserves to be thanked publicly. Who and where are they?

In the year ahead you are likely to spend considerable time in pursuit of new knowledge, furthering your hopes and ambitions. Profitable uses will be found for what you learn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, quickly dispose of matters that require your personal touch or some form of direct communication. You'll feel better once they're out of the way. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Adjustments can be made today that will provide you with greater financial leverage. If you study matters carefully, you'll see that you are in a stronger position than you may have realized.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be hopeful regarding the outcome of events today, regardless of whether you are working on something new and untested or something routine.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Things should have a way of working out to your advantage today, provided you don't put obstacles in your path. Don't rock the boat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Something that you are hoping for may sound like a pipe dream to someone else. However, there are factors that play on your behalf that could prove this person wrong.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Be alert today for a situation that could provide earnings from a seldom-tapped source. Its possibilities for generating funds are looking better and better.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Stand fast on a decision you've recently made. The position you have taken appears to be the right one. Time should later attest to this fact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you feel you are entitled to better compensation for something in which you are presently involved, this is a good day to call it to the attention of people who can do something about it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You should be fortunate today in two arrangements you have with close friends. One is a loyal, old standby, while the other is a more recent acquaintance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're capable of resolving critical matters today if you set your mind to it. Give priority to situations that should be finalized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is a good day to orchestrate something social that will give old friends a chance to meet your new ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You should be pretty good today at getting mileage from every dollar you spend, especially if you are shopping for household or family needs. Check your sources.

Rypien leads Redskins over Cowboys, 35-17

Cowboys' cornerback Ron Francis (38) blocks a long pass intended for Redskins' receiver Ricky Sanders (83) in the second quarter Sunday.

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Reports of the early demise of the defending Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins were greatly exaggerated, the Dallas Cowboys learned.

Washington rediscovered its old winning turnover formula Sunday to stay alive in the NFC East with a 35-17 defeat of the Cowboys. The win evened the Redskins' record at 3-3.

Washington cashed three Dallas turnovers into touchdowns as Mark Rypien won his first game as starting quarterback. He threw three touchdown passes and ran for another score.

Kelvin Bryant also made a big push for the starting tailback job with three touchdowns, two on pass receptions, and 118 yards rushing on 23 carries.

Washington came into the game with a minus eight turnovers, near the bottom in the NFL. The Redskins intercepted four passes and recovered a fumble as Dallas plunged to the cellar of the NFC East with a 2-4 ledger.

Dallas starting quarterback Steve Pelluer was intercepted three times and Washington showed no favoritism when he was replaced, picking off one of Danny White's tosses.

Rypien had lost two games as the starter since Doug Williams was injured.

"Believe me this will do worlds for my confidence," Rypien said. "I thought we should have won the other two games. After a while you begin to wonder if you are going to get one."

"We still have a ways to go before we can think about getting back to the Super Bowl but this definitely helps."

Bryant said the Redskins are back.

"It will probably be a tight race to the very end but now, at least, we're back in it," he said. "We have a good shot now. No matter what it took, we needed to win this one."

"This was one we had to have," said Washington coach Joe Gibbs. "We were in a hole and had to crawl out. We were due."

Gibbs said, "It was nice to get all those turnovers. We got the big plays when we needed them."

"Our defense was the key, our turnover ratio," Rypien said. "When the defense gave it to us we produced."

Interceptions by Monty Coleman and Alvin Walton led to touchdowns and another score was produced by Terry Orr's fumble recovery.

Landry said Pelluer was still his starting quarterback.

"Steve will be our starter next week against the Bears," Landry said. "We just needed to get White some work."

Rypien threw touchdown passes of 13 yards to Gary Clark and 10 and 24 yards to Bryant. He also ran 19 yards for a score.

Dallas' touchdowns came on a one-yard run by Timmy Newsome and Kelvin Martin's 35-yard reception from Pelluer.

Landry said the Washington earned the victory.

"You can't take anything away from the Redskins," Landry said. "They took it away from us. The turnovers hurt and were the key to the game. We didn't make the plays to turn the ball back our way."

Landry said Washington "also did a good job of shutting down our run. Washington gave us a different look on defense and some of the things we weren't prepared for. Usually they sit back in zones. Today they pressured the quarterback."

Herschel Walker was held to 51 yards rushing on 15 carries. He had 92 yards receiving.

Pelluer said it may have been his worst game as a Cowboy.

"I used some poor judgment," Pelluer admitted. "It's not a real positive thing for us. But I don't think it's going to hurt my confidence. I've got a lot of ability and I've proven it."

Oilers squeak past Chiefs

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Coach Jerry Glanville said the game was not beautiful.

Oiler defensive end Ray Childress even joined several players in calling it ugly. But Houston's 7-6 defeat of Kansas City Sunday was a form of justice for Oiler third string quarterback Brent Pease.

Booed by his own fans when he threw three interceptions, Pease rolled four yards for a touchdown on a naked reverse.

Pease, rarely used this season, was thrust into the game in the first quarter when starter Cody Carlson, himself subbing for injured Warren Moon, suffered a broken thumb.

Pease's first seven passes were incomplete and two were intercepted by Lloyd Burruss and Jayce Pearson.

He later yielded a third interception to Deron Cherry, the league leader with five thefts.

"I assess my performance today as very low, a C-minus or D-plus," Pease said. "I made some good reads but I threw the ball badly. I need a week of work with the first team."

The Oilers had to overcome their own mistakes to improve their record to 4-2. They committed 12 penalties, two of which wiped out touchdowns, for 121 yards.

"It was ugly if you look at the overall game but it was great from a defensive standpoint," said Childress, who had 2½ of Houston's five sacks.

"A 7-6 game isn't going to excite many offense-minded people. But we played well and pressured (Steve) DeBerg."

The Chiefs, 1-4-1, moved to field goals of 28 and 51 yards by Nick Lowery behind three consecutive pass completions in each drive by DeBerg for a 6-0 halftime lead.

"We had a lot of mad people in the locker room at the half," Oiler linebacker John Grimsley said. "It was a challenge to stop them in the second half but we handled it."

DeBerg completed 15 of 30 passes for 163 yards but he got only 60 yards in the second half as the Oiler defense stiffened.

The Chiefs had one last chance when they got the ball with 2:26 to play but despite a personal foul against Houston's William Fuller, the drive ended at the Chiefs 39.

"I really thought we were going to take the ball and go down and score and win the ball game," DeBerg said. "Everyone on the team thought the same thing."

The Oilers got the ball back and ran out the clock.

Mike Rozier gained 141 yards on 27 carries as the Oilers finally got their rushing attack doing against the Chiefs, ranked last in the NFL against the run.

"I'm tired of saying it is frustrating," DeBerg said. "We've got to put this game behind us and go on. There are a lot of games we should have won that we didn't."

Dodgers tie NL playoffs at 2 with defeat of Mets

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The bizarre is merely ordinary in the National League playoffs.

Picture this: — Orel Hershiser, the last available Dodgers pitcher, coming out of the bullpen to get a save, a day after throwing 110 pitches — his second relief appearance this year.

— Tim Lary coming in to start the 12th inning, his second relief appearance of the season, too.

— Dwight Gooden giving up a two-run, game-tying homer in the ninth inning to Mike Scioscia, who hit three homers all year and was 7-for-37 lifetime against Gooden in the regular season.

— Kirk Gibson homering off Roger McDowell to win the game in the 12th, Gibson's first homer since Sept. 11, his second hit in 17 at-bats and the first home run off McDowell since April 29.

And after 4 hours, 29 minutes of baseball on the edge of the absurd, the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the New York Mets 5-4 to tie the NL playoffs at two games apiece.

"We used every guy we had. (Hershiser) came out of the bullpen and that was crazy," Gibson said.

Jay Howell, Saturday's villain-martyr, was suspended for three days by NL President A. Bartlett Giamatti for using pine tar on his glove.

In his memory-honor, Los Angeles starter John Tudor inked the initials "JH" on his uniform sleeve, as did other Dodgers. Tudor's marker had more stuff than his arm, however. He was pounded for four runs and eight hits in five innings and left trailing 4-2.

But then the Dodgers pitched a tribute to Howell. The Mets got two hits and no runs in seven innings off Brian Holton, Ricky Horton, Alejandro Pena, Leary, Jesse Orosco and Hershiser — in short, every Dodgers pitcher except Tim Belcher, the starter for Game 5 today. He was back at the hotel.

"I would have gone long enough for Belcher to get a cab back here," said Hershiser, who watched the 11th in the clubhouse. "I knew (Tim) Leary was coming in and he was the last right-hander we had. I got my spikes on and got ready to go."

Leary, Orosco and Hershiser combined to pitch one wild 12th inning.

Mackey Sasser and Lee Mazzilli singled off Leary. Gregg Jefferies, who popped out attempting to bunt with a runner on first and none out in the ninth, flied to left and Orosco came in to face two lefties.

Keith Hernandez walked on a 3-2 pitch to load the bases. Darryl Strawberry popped out to second. In came Hershiser, who got Kevin McReynolds on a fly to short center that John Shelby caught after a long run.

"I got the outfield together during McReynolds' at-bat and said we should play one step in each," Gibson said. "We had been burned on (Gary) Carter's hit in Game One."

This time, the Mets were burned, primarily by their own failings. They stranded 10 runners, including three on third and four on second.

Sunday's game began like the rest of the series — with the Dodgers taking the lead.

Gooden gave up a leadoff single to Steve Sax, walked Mickey Hatcher and allowed a two-run single to Shelby.

The Mets got one hit in the first three innings and then New York's version of the Twin Towers went: Boom! Boom!

Keith Hernandez singled to open the fourth and Strawberry homered to right to tie the score 2-2. Two pitches later, McReynolds homered to left.

Gooden took a three-hitter into the ninth. He walked Shelby to start the inning — Gooden's third leadoff walk — and Scioscia hit the first pitch over the fence right, the Dodgers' first homer in 47 innings and the ninth homer off Gooden in 263 2-3 innings this year.

A's earn World Series berth with four-game sweep of Sox

By DAVE CARPENTER
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — Unsung heroes had played strong supporting roles, but Oakland's season-long stars dominated a familiar script the day the Athletics won their first American League pennant since 1974.

The A's success story was painfully familiar Sunday to the Boston Red Sox. The 4-1 victory was Oakland's fourth straight in the best-of-seven AL playoffs and the 10th home win in a row over Boston for the team oddsmakers snubbed at the start of the series.

Home-run leader Jose Canseco put the A's ahead with a homer, 21-game winner Dave Stewart allowed four hits in seven innings and major-league save leader Dennis Eckersley blanked Boston for the fourth game in a row.

Canseco offered an inside tip for prognosticators outside the A's champagne-drenched clubhouse.

"We'll be the team to beat (in the World Series) — the team with the better record, the team with the better balance," he said.

The A's slugger, who hit .313 for the series with three home runs, four runs batted in and one stolen base, has a good record on predictions in 1988. Last April, he correctly anticipated that he would be the first player in history to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases.

His line shot into the right-field bleachers in the first inning was his fifth homer in just 26 at-bats against Boston starter Bruce Hurst, a two-time loser in the playoffs. His homer also tied the AL playoffs record set by Kansas City's George Brett in 1985.

Stewart got into his usual early jam. But just as he had in Game 1, he escaped, fanning Dwight Evans with the bases loaded to end the first and retiring 11 consecutive batters.

To Stewart's mind, the series sweep brought sweet vindication for both the pitcher who was considered washed up two years ago and a team only recently accorded much respect.

"People can see we honestly deserved to win 104 games," said Stewart, already tabbed by Manager Tony La Russa to start Saturday night's World Series opener in New York or Los Angeles.

Manager Joe Morgan of the Red Sox agreed.

"We lost to the best team in this league," said Morgan, whose team roared back from fourth place at the All-Star break to win by a game over Detroit. "There's no doubt about it."

Unlike the first three games, when Oakland won two in the late innings and a third after trailing 5-0, the A's hung onto a lead all the way.

Walt Weiss, a hitting hero with Ron Hassey in Game 3, scored what proved to be the winning run in the third when he singled and came in on

Boston scratched out a run in the sixth on a walk to Marty Barrett, Wade Boggs' fifth hit of the series and a pair of ground-ball outs, with Jim Rice getting the RBI.

Mark McGwire, one of five A's with five or more hits in the series, drove in Canseco with an eighth-inning single as the A's added two insurance runs. Don Baylor, playing for a third straight different team AL pennant winner, followed with a sacrifice fly and a weary Eckersley replaced Rick Honeycutt in the ninth to get his record-setting fourth series save.

"I haven't pitched this much all year," said Eckersley, who notched a club-record 45 saves in the regular season. "I'm just glad we had a three-run lead — and that we're not playing tomorrow."

"It's been a dream season," he said. "I hope it keeps going."

Eckersley beat out Canseco to win the series Most Valuable Player award. He pitched six shutout innings, giving up only one hit.

The games were close, but the final numbers added up to total domination by the Athletics: a 20-11 advantage in runs, a .299 batting average and a 2.00 earned-run average against what had been the best hitting team in baseball.

"That's a darned good team," said AL batting champion Boggs. "They can do it all."

A's reliever Dennis Eckersley celebrates his fourth save in four playoff games as Oakland clinched the American League championship Sunday.

Loboettes down Lady Harvesters

In volleyball action last weekend, the Levelland Loboettes defeated the Lady Harvesters 15-3, 1-15 and 11-15.

After a convincing win in the first game, Pampa lost that winning touch, dropping the next two games and surrendering the match to the Loboettes.

"In the first game, we came out and executed our game plan,"

Pampa coach Mike Lopez said. "We knew what we needed to do, and it resulted in a win."

"In the second game, we didn't execute our game plan and Levelland defeated us soundly. By the time we decided to play in the third game, it was too late."

The Lady Harvesters, 4-4 on the season, fell to fourth place in the district standings.

"I felt that overall, the team did not show much emotion," Lopez continued, "and our floor play was poor."

The Pampa J.V. defeated Levelland 15-11, 15-10.

The Lady Harvesters travel to Dumas on Tuesday to take on the undefeated Lady Demons, currently first in district. J.V. begins at 6:30, followed immediately by varsity.

SWC at a glance

After five straight games at home, all of which have produced wins, the Arkansas Razorbacks venture out of state Saturday for a key Southwest Conference football contest against the Texas Longhorns.

Arkansas, 20th ranked nationally, could be on its way to the Cotton Bowl if it can beat the Longhorns on their own turf at Memorial Stadium in Austin.

The Razorbacks routed Texas Tech 31-10 in Little Rock, and their 5-0 record makes them the only unbeaten league team.

The Longhorns, who lost 28-13 to Oklahoma on Saturday, have always been the ultimate acid test for the Razorbacks, who have trouble in Memorial Stadium.

"We're right where we wanted to be," said Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield. "We never got too far ahead of ourselves."

Arkansas jumped to the top of the SWC ladder at 2-0 when the Houston Cougars ran into Texas A&M's on-a-roll football machine. The Aggies ripped the previously unbeaten Cougars 30-16 in the AstroDome as Darren Lewis gained 201 yards on 49 carries.

A&M also is 2-0 but the Aggies can't claim the SWC title or go to the Cotton Bowl because of NCAA probation.

In other games Saturday, Texas Christian downed Rice 21-10 and Baylor coach Grant Teaff won his 100th collegiate game with a 45-7 victory over Southwest Texas.

Arkansas hasn't been to the Cotton Bowl since January, 1976 but the Hogs have become an offensive terror with Quinn Grovey at quarterback.

"Our offensive line has been the big difference," Hatfield said. "It has been doing a super job."

Said Grovey, "We wanted to come off the ball and blast them back in and that's what we did. I feel a lot stronger and that's a credit to my line. They've kept people off me all year."

Texas is 1-0 in SWC play and the 'Horns played Oklahoma even except for critical mistakes.

"Maybe we learned something from this game we can take into the Arkansas game," said McWilliams. "I think we grew up a little bit."

The Aggies host Baylor this week as they continue their spoiler roll.

"A&M played with a lot of pride, knowing they have nothing to play for," said Houston coach Dan Reeves said. "The wind was a tremendous factor."

For Broncos kicker Rich Karlis, the wind fooled him once before he figured it out.

Karlis missed a 34-yard field goal attempt with two seconds remaining in regulation, forcing the Broncos, 3-3, into overtime for the second time in three weeks.

"I should have aimed more for the left post. I aimed for the middle, and that was my mistake," Karlis said. "I thought I hit it good, but it took off (right). This wasn't a day to hit a golf ball or kick a football, either."

But with 8:11 elapsed in the overtime, Karlis split the uprights with a 22-yarder to give Denver a 16-13 victory Sunday over San Francisco, 4-2.

The winning kick was set up

Lewis said A&M's game plan was simple.

"We just wore them down. The coaches felt they just needed to go to me more," he said. "That was fine with me."

There were 42,361 fans in the AstroDome, Houston's largest since 1983.

Lone Star roundup

By The Associated Press

East Texas State defeated preseason favorite Texas A&I in Lone Star Conference football over the weekend, while Abilene Christian and Angelo State remained unbeaten in conference action.

East Texas State beat Texas A&I 42-35 in Commerce Saturday night in a battle of NCAA Division II top 10 teams, while Abilene Christian rallied for a 24-23 victory over Central State, Okla., and Angelo State topped Eastern New Mexico 49-18.

Also Saturday, Cameron defeated West Texas State 56-29.

Mike Trigg threw three touchdown passes to Gary Compton in the first half as ETSU grabbed a 28-14 lead and never trailed. Jarrod Owens ran for 168 yards and one touchdown and Johnny Hurdon added 151 yards and two touchdowns for the 10th-ranked Lions.

Johnny Bailey led Texas A&I with 214 yards and two touchdowns. The Javelinas were ranked ed fifth in last week's NCAA Division II national poll.

Angelo State's league-leading defense intercepted four passes in its win over Eastern New Mexico. Henry Alsbrook picked off two passes, and Darren Kight returned one 30 yards for a touchdown. The Rams had just 302 yards of total offense, but ENMU never got closer than 10 points after ASU jumped off to a 14-0 lead.

For the second straight week, reserve quarterback Jim Gash came off the bench to give ACU a victory. He threw an 11-yard scoring pass to Sean Grady with 5:47 to play, and Dennis Brown kicked his 47th straight extra point to give the Wildcats a 24-23 win over winless Central State.

Robert Whitman ran for 100 yards and scored on an 18-yard run to lead Cameron to its win over West Texas State. Carey Johnson had two interceptions for WTSU against WTSU's league-leading pass offense, and Ben Ludwig returned an interception 34 yards for a touchdown.

Southwest Conference superlatives

By The Associated Press

Here are Southwest Conference superlatives from weekend football action:

BEST OVERTIME RUSHER—Texas A&M's Darren Lewis ran 40 times and gained 201 yards in A&M's 30-16 victory over Houston.

THE CENTURY MARK—Baylor coach Grant Teaff earned his 100th collegiate victory in a 45-7 triumph over Southwest Texas State.

RUNNIN' FOOLS—Arkansas gained 307 yards rushing against Texas Tech and A&M had 310 against Houston. But Baylor had 339 against Southwest Texas.

FUN RUN—Houston's Chuck Weatherspoon ran 70 yards on a play only to have A&M's Kevin Smith take the ball away from him and go 10 yards back the other way.

BEST QUOTE—TCU line-backer Paul Llewellyn on the 21-10 victory over Rice: "I thought we'd win something like 55-10. So, I'm not really satisfied."

BEST KICK—Texas' Wayne Clements had field goals of 44 and 48 yards against Oklahoma.

BEST NON-PASS—Texas' Eric Metcalf setup to throw a halfback pass then changed his mind and gained 29 yards against the Sooners.

Mother Nature smiles on Broncos

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

It was the elements — "the referees, Mother Nature and the wind," according to San Francisco tailback Roger Craig — that gave the Denver Broncos their overtime victory over the 49ers.

"It was as bad as I've ever seen it. It definitely altered our play-calling," 49ers quarterback Joe Montana said of the brisk, swirling winds.

"I thought it was a hurricane," Denver coach Dan Reeves said. "The wind was a tremendous factor."

For Broncos kicker Rich Karlis, the wind fooled him once before he figured it out.

Karlis missed a 34-yard field goal attempt with two seconds remaining in regulation, forcing the Broncos, 3-3, into overtime for the second time in three weeks.

"I should have aimed more for the left post. I aimed for the middle, and that was my mistake," Karlis said. "I thought I hit it good, but it took off (right). This wasn't a day to hit a golf ball or kick a football, either."

But with 8:11 elapsed in the overtime, Karlis split the uprights with a 22-yarder to give Denver a 16-13 victory Sunday over San Francisco, 4-2.

The winning kick was set up by an interception by cornerback Steve Wilson deep in San Francisco territory.

Steve Young, who took over at quarterback for the 49ers after Montana left with bruised ribs, threw a pass from his 3-yard line. The ball bounced off receiver Jerry Rice and into the hands of Wilson, who returned it seven yards to the San Francisco 5. One play later, Karlis made good on his second chance at a winning field goal.

In other games, it was Cincinnati 36, the New York Jets 19; Chicago 24, Detroit 7; Buffalo 34, Indianapolis 23; Houston 7, Kansas City 6; the Los Angeles Rams 33, Atlanta 0; Green Bay 45, New England 3; Seattle 16, Cleveland 10; Minnesota 14, Tampa Bay 13; Washington 35, Dallas 17; Phoenix 31, Pittsburgh 14; Miami 24, the Los Angeles Raiders 14, and New Orleans 23, San Diego 17.

Rams 33, Falcons 6

Jim Everett passed for three touchdowns and Greg Bell ran for 155 yards and scored once for Los Angeles, 5-1.

The Rams' defense, led by Kevin Greene, limited the Falcons, 1-5, to only 23 yards of offense until Atlanta put together an 84-yard drive that ended early in the fourth quarter when Greene intercepted a Steve Dils pass. Greene also had three of the Rams' nine sacks.

Seahawks 16, Browns 10
Curt Warner ran for a touchdown and Norm Johnson kicked three field goals for Seattle, 4-2.

Cleveland lost Mike Pagel, its third starting quarterback this season, with a separated shoulder.

The Browns, 3-3, moved the ball reasonably well in the first half until Pagel was hurt making a tackle on Paul Moyer's 62-yard return of a blocked field goal.

Cardinals 31, Steelers 14
Neil Lomax threw for 291 yards and three touchdowns as Phoenix, 4-2, defeated Pittsburgh for the first time in 19 years.

The Cardinals took the lead for good at 10-7 on Al Del Greco's 19-yard field goal 2:10 into the second quarter. A one-yard plunge by rookie Tony Jordan and Lomax's three-yard touchdown pass to J.T. Smith put the Cardinals ahead 24-7 at halftime.

Saints 23, Chargers 17

Bobby Hebert threw for two touchdowns and Morten Andersen kicked three field goals to give New Orleans, 5-1, its victory over San Diego, 2-4.

New Orleans, down 14-0 early, closed the gap to 14-13 at halftime. San Diego scored twice in the first six minutes of the game, the second TD coming when Vencie Glenn blocked Brian Hansen's punt and Roy Bennett fell on the ball in the end zone.

Dolphins 24, Raiders 14
Liffort Hobley's 19-yard return with a fumble for Miami's second score in an 11-second span of the second quarter helped the Dolphins, 3-3, defeat the error-prone Raiders, 2-4.

Jay Schroeder threw four interceptions for the second straight game as Los Angeles had five turnovers that led to 17 Miami points.

Vikings 14, Buccaneers 13
Anthony Carter scored one touchdown and set up another as Minnesota, 4-2, rallied to edge underdog Tampa Bay, 2-4.

Carter's diving 11-yard reception preceded Allen Rice's one-yard scoring run with 2:49 left in the third quarter, putting the Vikings ahead 14-10.

Tampa Bay's Donald Igwebuike was preparing to attempt a 38-yard field goal when time ran out.

Bengals 36, Jets 19

Three first-half touchdown passes by Boomer Esiason ensured Cincinnati of remaining the NFL's only unbeaten team after six weeks, matching the Bengals' best start in the team's history.

Communists impose emergency measures in Montenegro

By DUSAN STOJANOVIC
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Communist authorities imposed "urgent measures" in the capital of the tense southern republic of Montenegro today as thousands of workers and students took to the streets, defying a presidential order.

The state news agency Tanjug, carrying a statement by Montenegro's state presidency, said that the "urgent measures are being applied because of a sudden deterioration of the political and security situation and the possibility that it will spread."

Today, thousands of workers and students in the republic's capital Titograd and two other Montenegrin towns continued to stage rallies and a protest fast.

Without specifying what it meant, the statement carried by Tanjug said "the urgent measures are being introduced in order to prevent emergency measures" being taken.

"The measures will be of a restrictive nature, aimed only against those who are abusing the rightful demands of workers and other citizens," Tanjug said.

The language indicated police patrols would be stepped up and firm action would be taken against provocative public protests. But it suggested authorities would stop short of using restrictions like curfews, at least for the time being.

On Sunday, President Raif Dizdarevic's warned that emergency measures would be imposed if ethnic and economic unrest in Yugoslavia did not cease.

A national economic crisis, fueled by 217 percent inflation, a $21 billion dollar debt and 15 percent unemployment, has combined with tensions between Serbs and ethnic Albanians to fuel three months of protests and calls for an overhaul in the party hierarchy.

Dizdarevic

The statement carried by Tanjug today specifically attacked what it branded nationalist and anti-Communist demands voiced during a Titograd rally Friday that was broken up by club-wielding riot police early on Saturday.

On Sunday, residents reported a heavy police presence and roadblocks around Titograd. Riot police wielding clubs broke up an overnight rally there Saturday after thousands of demonstrators called for the ouster of regional Communist leaders.

This morning, in the north Montenegrin town of Niksic, several hundred high-school and university students rallied in front of a local government building, the state news agency Tanjug said.

Several thousand workers who downed tools at a local steel mill Sunday remained on strike today, rallying at factory management offices.

The continuing protests defied a warning made by Dizdarevic in a hastily scheduled speech on national television Sunday night.

Dizdarevic, who heads the nine-member collective state presidency which acts as supreme commander of the armed forces, appealed Sunday for calm, promised changes in the communist leadership and urged the government to undertake effective economic measures.

In his speech, Dizdarevic said recent Serbian nationalist rallies and worker protests "are seriously jeopardizing public order."

"There is a real danger that the actions which are imperiling constitutional order could continue and spread," he said.

Dizdarevic promised unspecified economic measures to combat 217 percent inflation, a $21 billion dollar debt and 15 percent unemployment.

He also said the policy-making Central Committee, which is scheduled to meet Oct. 17, will make changes in the country's leadership. But he did not say who might be replaced.

Meanwhile, Tanjug said the situation in Montenegro was "extremely serious."

In troubled southern Kosovo province, about 20,000 people rallied to press Serbian claims of harassment by the ethnic Albanian majority.

Police did not report any incidents, however, at the rally in Titovo Mitrova.

At dozens of similar rallies in recent months, Serbs have rallied against the ethnic Albanian Communist leaders in Kosovo, one of two autonomous provinces in the republic of Serbia. The mostly Christian Serbs have long been at odds with the Albanians, who are mainly Moslem.

To head off ethnic violence in Kosovo, Albanian Halit Trnavci told the crowd Sunday that Serbs and Albanians should protect links forged through the centuries.

About 10,000 other people rallied in Subotica, a town on the border with Hungary in Serbia's other autonomous province, Vojvodina, Tanjug said.

Indictments unveil teen-age sex scandal in San Francisco

By JENNIFER McNULTY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former top city official's indictment for allegedly patronizing a bordello with girls as young as age 14 pulled the covers from liaisons between wealthy, powerful men and young, drug-taking runaways.

Roger Boas, a 67-year-old car dealer prominent in local politics for nearly 30 years, was one of 14 people indicted a week ago today.

He is accused of visiting the bordello during a 2½-year period that included part of his decade-long tenure as the city's chief administrative officer and his unsuccessful mayoral campaign.

The bordello, in a nondescript, two-story building in a mixed residential-commercial neighborhood, housed part of a prostitution ring that served customers in three states and earned $20,000 a week, authorities said.

The grand jury indictment, issued after a 16-month investigation, contains 86 criminal counts against defendants including a city police officer and a locally prominent jeweler.

Eight of those charged were alleged patrons of the flourishing sex-for-pay operation. The others were charged with various counts of pimping and pandering.

Authorities reportedly learned of the ring in May 1987 through an anonymous tip. When authorities failed to follow up, the tipster tried again two months later, accusing police of failing to investigate because officers were among the patrons.

Vice officers put the building under surveillance in September. Five months later, the operation was shut down.

Although up to eight officers were under investigation by the prosecutor's office, police officials have consistently denied allegations that policemen were protecting the operation.

A grand jury began hearing evidence in the case in June, including testimony from several girls who worked at the bordello, said John Carbone Jr., assistant district attorney in charge of special prosecutions.

Some defense attorneys complain their clients are being victimized by an investigation targeted to get Boas.

District Attorney Arlo Smith denied that.

"I don't care who's involved," said Smith. "If we don't prosecute the case, I think it would be a scandal for the city. ... Just because you've been a prominent candidate doesn't give you immunity from your own behavior."

Boas, who has been married 30 years, has four children and won the Silver and Bronze stars in World War II, has been identified by five underage prostitutes as the regular client they knew as "George," authorities said.

He faces 19 counts of unlawful sex with a minor stemming from visits between November 1985 and last May.

Boas, released on $5,000 bail last week after surrendering, said he would address the charges "in the proper manner," but added:

"For my family's sake and for the sake of the many friends I have in San Francisco, I am truly saddened that someone in the criminal justice system tried to convict me in the media using leaks, rumors and innuendo — in advance of the legal process."

After the indictments came out, the San Francisco Chronicle published a lengthy profile of "Darlene," a 15-year-old former prostitute who said she earned $800 a day at the bordello. She reportedly became a key witness in the investigation.

A child victim of sexual abuse, the girl said she used to act young and innocent and would sometimes dress up as a schoolgirl to please customers, who according to authorities were from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Idaho and Washington state.

The girl said she and other young prostitutes would sit around watching soap operas between appointments, stirring cocaine into their coffee and smoking marijuana. Customers were offered a mint as they left, she said.

Smith dismissed as "absurd" speculation his office leaked information before the indictments were announced.

Palestinian leaders call for end to 'repression'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shot to death three Palestinians and swept through the occupied territories in search of suspects during a general strike marking the anniversary of 10 months of rebellion.

Also Sunday, underground Palestinian leaders called for world intervention to stop what they called Israeli repression in the territories.

Troops shot and killed two Palestinians in the West Bank on Sunday during widespread searches for suspected agitators, the military reported.

In the Gaza Strip, a border security guard killed a man who attacked him with a knife.

The army said eight other protesters were wounded Sunday, but Arab hospital officials put the number at 23.

The day's violence increased the casualty toll of the last three days to nine dead and more than 70 wounded.

The uprising has taken the lives of 294 Palestinians since it began in December. Six Israelis have also been killed. The revolt has become the leading issue in the campaign for Israeli national elections on Nov. 1.

The uprising against Israel's rule of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War, entered its 11th month Sunday. A general strike marking the anniversary closed stores and paralyzed public transportation.

A military spokesman said the army changed tactics by going on the offensive Sunday and entered West Bank towns and villages to search for suspects and arrest them.

"We took initiated action in over 30 villages with the goal of acting on days, such as strike days and anniversaries," said the spokesman on condition of anonymity.

Soldiers forced residents to whitewash illegal anti-Israeli slogans off walls and clear road barriers. Protesters have used the barriers during their clashes with police.

In the West Bank village of Yatta, a mob attacked troops with rocks, and the soldiers opened fire, the spokesman said.

Two residents were shot, he said. Army helicopters evacuated them, but they died while receiving medical treatment.

One was wanted by security forces, the spokesman said, but he would not give the man's name or what he was suspected of.

In Gaza, a 20-year-old resident was shot and killed by a civilian security guard he tried to knife at a border crossing, a military spokesman said. The victim, a university student in Egypt, had just returned to Rafah about an Egyptian bus with about 10 passengers, and the guard was questioning him, the spokesman said.

Palestinian sources identified the victim as Osama Ahmed Abu Dahi, of Rafah.

In an underground leaflet, uprising leaders called on U.N. organizations to act against Israel's closure of schools and universities in the occupied territories.

Israeli authorities have kept West Bank schools and most Gaza schools closed this academic year for fear classrooms would be used as rallying points for riots. The schools were closed most of the last academic year as well.

So A Chiropractor Is Really A Family Doctor?

Yes.

HERE'S WHY ... Most people think of doctors of chiropractic as specialists in treating health problems of the back and spine. And they are, for chiropractors have been extremely effective in relieving pain and getting people back on their feet without drugs or surgery.

But doctors of chiropractic do more. They diagnose to determine whether other illnesses may be related to structural problems, which often is the case.

Chiropractors take an interest in your total health and well-being. And if a problem is indicated which requires specialized treatment, the doctor of chiropractic will refer you to the appropriate health specialist.

You can depend on your chiropractor as a health advisor for every member of your family.
