School officials apologize for self-esteem tests

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
and BETH MILLER
Staff Writers

Pampa school board president John Curry explained to a group of parents at Austin Elementary School Thursday night that since Dr. Harry Griffith has taken the position of school superintendent, the administration has changed from an autocratic system to one of consensus management.

The consensus of the more than 200 parents of elementary school students who poured into two school buildings Thursday night was that school officials went a step too far when they administered a $1,400 self-description survey to the students earlier this year.

Most parents who spoke at the meetings objected to the alleged "secrecy" surrounding the survey, the wording of the survey and the survey itself.

Pampa Independent School District administrators and board members repeatedly offered their apologies and assurances that parental input will be sought in the future.

At Travis Elementary School, about 125 people attended the two-hour meeting in the school gymnasium. At Austin Elementary School approximately 100 more people arrived for the meeting there.

For each meeting a panel of school officials had been chosen to answer a series of nine pre-determined questions concerning the self-esteem survey. The questions were derived from those posed to school officials during the past two weeks by concerned parents.

Each of the panels consisted of school board representatives, school administrators, a school counselor and three school principals.

Colleen Hamilton, PISD board of trustee member, said the self-esteem program began with the Pampa 2000 long-range strategic planning project. Hamilton, who chaired the At Risk Task Force, said it was learned that at-risk students frequently suffer from low self-esteem.

"If we can say where this (the self-esteem program) came from, it came from the community, it came from the school board because we all worked on it together. To have a successful student, we have to have self-esteem."

Dr. Keith Teague, another PISD trustee, said the Strategic Planning Task Force is probably the group that took action on self-esteem. "It was made up of 25 individuals in the community, and one of the objectives we came up with was self-esteem."

Teague said that a goal was set to raise self-esteem by 10 percent. In order to measure the progress, a survey was needed to find out what level the students were on.

All PISD speakers stressed that the results of the survey were never going to be taken individually but used collectively.

Terry Jouett, mother of six children, five of whom attend Woodrow Wilson elementary school, said she believed teachers are already trained to deal with their students' self-esteem.

While she was complimentary of the self-esteem program at Woodrow Wilson, Jouett said regarding the recent survey, "Slipping off and sneaking into parental authority, as a mother of six, I do not appreciate that."

PISD Superintendent Harry Griffith said in an apology to the people at Travis, "I am disappointed we haven't done this right. The survey was a mistake ... I recognized the error we made on the survey immediately. The school really doesn't have any business delving into what's going on at home. I agree 100 percent with that. That is very clear to me."

Griffith said the schools do need to provide the students with the opportunity to succeed and to provide an "inviting, open, loving program for every child."

The superintendent called for an advisory committee to the school board to deal with every aspect of the program to ensure there is a good linkage between the home and the school. At the meetings Thursday, 89 people signed their names to lists volunteering to be on the Citizen Advisory Council.

Griffith said this morning he believes the whole philosophy on the self-esteem program will change and a clear line will be drawn between the home and the school.

"Essentially, the school district is going to take all the self-esteem activities and submit them to the Citizen Advisory Committee for review and for advising the school board," Griffith said.

Tim Powers, principal at Lamar Elementary School, said the group who designed the survey, the Psychological Corp., a division of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc., is a reputable textbook company. The group also administers the Metropolitan Achievement Tests.

About 10,000 students in other cities have taken the self-esteem survey, Powers said, and up to this point, there has not been an objection. He also said the makers of the survey assured him it was age-appropriate for second- through fifth-graders.

One parent said, "I've been around kids enough to know if they've got a problem. You can tell by the way they act ... Personally, I think there was some covering up there."

Griffith responded that in no way was the survey intended to be a secret.

Pampa teen charged with murder in Wednesday night shooting case

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Seventeen-year-old Jeremy Allen Teakell was formally charged with murder in the first degree Thursday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts in the slaying of 20-year-old Roger Dale Miller.

Teakell is being held in Gray County Jail in lieu of $75,000 bond.

Teakell is accused of shooting Miller point blank with a .20 gauge shotgun Wednesday night in a parking lot at 500 W. Francis.

Witnesses told reporters the incident stemmed from a dispute over a girl.

During a press conference, Det. Sgt. Charlie Love said, "The whod-it seems pretty clear. We have four eyewitnesses."

Love said Miller was hanging out "on what the kids call the drag" when the shooting occurred. After being shot, Miller reportedly ran down an alley and to a residence at 300 N. West screaming for help.

He was taken to Coronado Hospital by Rural/Metro-AMT ambulance and then transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo where he died at 2:20 a.m. Thursday.

Witnesses said Miller ran from the scene of the shooting because, after he was shot in the abdomen, the suspect allegedly raised the shotgun to fire again.

They also told reporters they saw the suspect walk up to the car Miller was in, holding the shotgun behind one leg. They said when Miller stepped out of the car, the suspect raised the gun and fired. They did not report any words exchanged prior to the shooting.

Teakell was arrested by police around 11:45 p.m. Wednesday after he turned himself in at the Gray County Sheriff's office.

A police incident report showed a .20 gauge shotgun had been recovered by authorities.

A woman who helped Miller until paramedics arrived said she heard screams from inside her house and opened her front door to see what was going on.

"When it first started, I was sitting on the couch and my door was closed," said Brenda Bennett, who lives at 300 N. West. "I heard these loud voices. I went to see what was going on and there was this boy laying on the porch saying he had been shot."

Bennett said at first she thought it was a joke, but quickly realized the seriousness of the situation. She said a family member called police while she comforted Miller.

"He grabbed my hand and one of the boys' hand (who had apparently run from the parking lot to help Miller) and was saying he was hurting," Bennett said. "We got a pillow and tried to help him. I could tell he was hurt bad by the location of the gunshot."

She said three young men were trying to convince Miller to go with them in a car to the hospital, but she was insistent he was in too bad a shape to move.

"I said, 'He isn't going anywhere, he's hurt bad.'"

She said Miller probably ran to her house because her son and Miller were friends.

District Attorney Harold Comer said the case could go before the Gray County Grand Jury as soon as March 9.

"I think the grand jury will find there was probable cause for his arrest and I fully expect them to indict him on a first degree murder charge," Comer said. "I find nothing other than that it was premeditated murder."

Comer said if Teakell is found guilty, punishment could range from 5 to 99 years in prison or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

Funeral services for Miller will be 4 p.m. Saturday at Carmichael-Whalley Colonial Chapel with Rev. Gene Allen, pastor of Briarwood Full Gospel Church, officiating. Burial will be at Memory Gardens Cemetery.

Born May 6, 1969 in Pampa, Miller was a lifelong resident of Pampa and attended Pampa schools.

Survivors include his father, Dale Miller of Clarendon; his mother, Rosella Cowan of Amarillo; one twin brother, David Miller of Clarendon; one sister, Angela Miller of Clarendon; and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. O.H. Ernst of Pampa, Mary Miller of Amarillo and D.D. Miller.

County commissioners approve Lefors city marshal contract, review jail plans

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The city of Lefors received official approval to hire a full-time city marshal Thursday and Gray County Commissioners' Court continued working toward final blueprints on the new county jail at a Thursday meeting.

The Commissioners' Court and the city of Lefors entered into a contract at the meeting. The county will provide a $1,000 a month subsidy to the city for the employment of a full-time city marshal. Lefors has been without a marshal since October.

Lefors Mayor Gene Gee said Thursday that 11 applications were received for the position and six people were interviewed. A special meeting will likely be called early next week for the official hiring.

"We will be hiring someone and putting that person to work as soon as we can," Gee said.

Part of the contract between the two governmental entities includes the payment by the city of Lefors of $25 a day for any city prisoner kept longer than 72 hours at the jail. The city also agreed to "hold harmless" the county for any medical expenses incurred by a city prisoner.

The agreement is for about 10 months, until the end of December.

To provide the $1,000 a month funding for the remainder of the year, the Commissioners' Court unanimously agreed to amend the budget by $10,000 and take the money from the Highland General Hospital fund.

"You have the deepest gratitude on behalf of the citizens of Lefors," Gee said.

Lefors City Councilman Wendell Akins also expressed his appreciation to the Commissioners' Court for the funding.

In unrelated business, architects for the new county jail, Maxey and Associates Inc. of Austin, presented the first exterior drawings of the facility, which met the approval of the county with a few minor exceptions. The jail will be built on county-owned property at Russell and Francis streets.

Representing the architectural firm Thursday were Jeff Jacoby and Lawrence Janousek, who said the exterior of the building will reflect other downtown buildings, mainly the courthouse.

The building will be of concrete frame, filled with concrete block. Dark brown areas of the building will be of brick of the same texture as that on the courthouse, and lighter areas will be of a cement-type finish with plastic foam insulation below it.

The front of the building is proposed to face west and will have disc lighting. The design for the north side of the building was also presented. The Commissioners' Court suggested some of the windows be taken out or made smaller, due to the extreme temperatures in the Panhandle.

In discussions of the blueprints for the new 78-bed facility, Jacoby said that at a meeting last week with the Jail Standards Commission a lot of concern was expressed with the proposal to put the Pampa Police Department under the same roof as the Gray County Sheriff's Office.

Judge Carl Kennedy said that proposal was not likely to take place after recent discussions between the city and county. "I think that issue is resolved for Gray County and Pampa," Kennedy said.

Other issues concerning the blueprints discussed Thursday included possibly having to move inmate booking to the second level of the facility. The current drawings have the jail, kitchen and laundry on the second level and the administrative offices, dispatch and other office space on the first level. Also on the first level are holding cells, booking and detoxification rooms.

Jacoby said Jail Standards might require a full-time jailer on the first floor anytime there was someone in a holding cell.

Greyhound bus drivers go on nationwide strike

By JOHN A. BOLT
 AP Business Writer

Greyhound's 6,300 drivers went on strike early today at the nation's only nationwide bus company, stopping their buses outside terminals and stranding thousands of travelers.

The walkout over wages began after contract talks in Scottsdale, Ariz., between Greyhound Lines Inc. and the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions failed to reach an agreement by the 12:01 a.m. MST (1:01 a.m. CST) strike deadline.

No new negotiations were scheduled.
 "We went on strike because the company has refused to bargain in good faith, and we have struck because the company insisted on imposing" its original offer, said union spokesman Jeffrey Nelson.

Besides the 6,300 drivers, 3,075 maintenance workers, whose three-year contract expired at midnight, are on strike.

Dallas-based Greyhound carried 22 million passengers last year, an average of about 60,000 a day. Some customers stranded at terminals across the country complained that Greyhound hadn't warned them before they bought their tickets.

The union told its drivers to continue only as far as their next destination as the strike deadline passed. The company said it didn't know how many passengers were stranded, but estimated the number in the thousands.

Greyhound said it was operating a limited schedule today using replacements hired and trained during the past few weeks and any employees willing to cross picket lines. It said it hoped to offer full service by the end of the month.

"We are starting with our main line schedule first, and continue to add routes as drivers become available," Greyhound spokeswoman Liz Hale said from the Dallas headquarters.

The company normally runs 60 bus schedules in and out of Dallas. But at 6 a.m., 16 schedules were operating, said Ms. Hale.

"I have had some reports that it is even higher than that," she said. "That's about one-third of our service." Also, some Greyhound drivers have crossed picket lines, but Hale did not know how many.

After the blueprints are approved, the firm will go to the second phase of construction — design development. Under the current plan, the bidding would take place in July and ground could be broken in mid-July. The architects said the building would take about 12 months to complete.
 The architects also said the target cost set by the Commissioners' Court of $2.2 million was running a little high. The current projected cost is $2.6 million. The facility, on blueprints, is currently 25,000 square feet.
 Janousek said, "We're committed to getting the thing done. We're still struggling with this trying to give you the most amount of jail for the smallest amount of dollars."
 Kennedy said he would not want to start cutting things out of the plans now, because the bids might come in lower.

 "I have to believe we can come in under and not have to cut," he said.
 The architects are scheduled to get a revised drawing of the blueprints to the Commissioners' Court by late next week.
 In other business, commissioners:
 • Unanimously approved the sale of delinquent property at 530 N. Perry for $2,000.
 • Unanimously approved the payment of salaries and bills, totaling $146,762.56.
 • Unanimously approved the following transfers: $42,500 from the general fund to the salary fund; $80,000 from the general fund to the Highland General Hospital fund (repayment of a loan); $8,300 from State Indigent Health Care to Highland General Hospital fund (repayment of a loan); $3,300 from the Highland General Hospital fund to the courthouse and jail fund (loan).

 • Heard a report from the committee appointed to study office space at the County Annex.
 • Unanimously approved a request from Tralee Crisis Center to donate rent for a May fund-raiser.
 • Unanimously authorized the judge to sign an interlocal participation agreement with Texas Association of Counties for law enforcement insurance.
 • Unanimously approved an agreement with Southwestern Public Service to install marker balls on power lines at Perry Lefors Field. The county will pay $338.28 to SPS for the installation.
 • Unanimously agreed to provide office space in the County Annex building for the new Rolling Plains Conservation District agent.

of the questions were offensive.
 "The fact that the questionnaire was allowed to proceed through school authorities and be put before our children demonstrates questionable intent or irresponsibility. It is a gross violation of our trust," he said.
 "As parents we have a compelling obligation to protect our children. This questionnaire demonstrates that need: The potential for harm by the self-esteem program by far outweighs any intended value. The program is not worth the risk."
 "I'll tell you my feelings about this whole thing," said Glenn Jameson, an employee of the school district, who attended the Austin school meeting. "I feel that the school officials didn't feel the parents would approve of this survey so they went behind our back ... I feel like I've been stabbed in the back."
 Curry pointed out that he had been involved with Pampa's young people for more than 20 years. "You know that we are all people of good will. We wouldn't do anything that would intentionally hurt them. It cuts me to the quick to feel that someone would feel that way about us."

One parent asked why the children had to put their names on the survey. Powers said the name was so the parent could go over the survey if he wanted to with a school counselor.
 Austin Principal Bill Jones said the survey was written that way, so they told the children to put their names on the paper. He added that the results of the survey were not to be looked at individually, but that programs were to be developed to meet the needs shown by the overall scores of the survey for each grade level.

One parent at Travis commented, "The schools should be targeted with reading, writing and arithmetic; get back to the basics."

Many parents said their children could get self esteem from home, while another added, "If the student achieves good grades, self esteem is automatic. Let's teach the basics rather than focus on self esteem."

Another parent said, "You didn't do your homework (on the survey)." Griffith responded, "That's right, we didn't do our homework."

Assistant Superintendent Dawson Orr told those at the Austin meeting the 12 negative statements on the survey using such words as "hate" and "dumb" were on the survey to disrupt the answering scheme, according to the makers of the survey.

Barbara Hanks, a parent of children who took the survey said, "I feel your intentions were right, but it's a big blunder ... This was dumb and maybe it hurt some children, but it can be repaired. The question is 'What do we do now?'"

Hanks said she felt good that the school administration had made public apologies about the survey.

"We have a good turnout because we're mad. Let's talk about programs while we're here," Hanks said. "The test was a blunder. It's over, it's shredded, let's get on with it."

Diane Maestas, the mother of a child who took the test, pointed out another problem with the survey during the Travis school meeting. She said that on the Metropolitan Achievement Tests the school sends home a note to parents the night before the tests asking them to make sure the child gets a good night's sleep, a good breakfast and is feeling good in the morning.

"I believe these same factors will influence the results of the self-esteem tests," Maestas said, pointing out that no notes were sent home and parents had no idea the surveys were going to be administered. School officials there agreed.

Orr, responding to a similar comment at Austin, said he did not feel that a good night's rest and a good breakfast would affect a child's esteem.

At Travis, Sharron Hurst said she would like to commend the school board and administration for being responsive. "They're listening to our gripes," she said. "You just can't run it into the ground."

"We love our kids," Hurst said, adding that parents should get involved with school programs. "We have lots of committees that we should take part in. If we don't choose to participate, it's our fault."

Trustee Joe VanZandt said the school board was aware of the survey. "We did not see this as we don't see any other particular survey before it's given. We see the results. It's not our business to inspect and read over the surveys."

After VanZandt began to hear comments about the survey, he said he read the survey and although he "kind of wondered" about some of the words, he did not find it offensive on the first reading. "I read it a second time. I can understand why there is concern," he added.

VanZandt said the purpose of the initial survey was to guide the school district's programs and try to determine the weaknesses and strengths.

School counselor Cheryl Robbins invited any parents to come into her office and look over her materials. Robbins said that during initial planning for giving the survey there were "some concerns," but she refused to go into specifics of the concerns.

"When the counselors reviewed the questionnaire, what recourse did they have if they did object?" Hartssock asked Curry when the same matter came up at the Austin meeting.

Curry said there were no objections. "Are you saying then that any counselor or teacher would have the right to object to something they were told to do without any fear of reprisals?" Hartssock said.

"I would believe that," Curry answered.

Wilson Principal Ray Thornton said that the surveys were first administered to two classes at Horace Mann elementary school in January. After those tests, Thornton said the counselors met again and discussed the evaluations. He said there were no questions or problems raised at that time and school officials "assumed" it would be appropriate to go ahead with the survey.

Chris Butler, the father of a child who took the test, said, "I'd like you to prove you shredded the tests."

"I'd have to go dig through the city dump," Griffith responded.

Butler said, "I have no faith. You have lost credibility with me."

Venton Leakey, the father of a child who took the survey, said, "You have done something here you're not going to get away with. You know the mistakes you've made. You know you've been caught. I'll be watching you the next few weeks."

Barbara Bruce, grandmother of a Wilson fifth-grader, commented, "I've lived long enough to know that we all make mistakes. I can tell you right now that it's going to be difficult to trust you. But I'm going to try to trust you because I want to very badly. But I'm going to watch you very carefully through my fifth-grade grandson."

"I want you to know that the school district never intends to do anything behind your back," Jones said. "I hope there has not been a breakdown between the school and the home. If there has been, we will do our best to bridge that gap."

County seeks members for its Airport Board

The terms of the seven members of the Airport Board have expired and Gray County Commissioners' Court plans to re-appoint or appoint members at its March 15 meeting.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said anyone who would like to serve on the board should contact him or one of the four county commissioners.

Current members of the board are D.A. Fiveash, H.M. Veach, Lawrence Paronto, Wade Kirk, Jim Ashford, Jim Leverich and Vernon Stowers.

GOP gubernatorial candidates use kid gloves in latest TV debate

By DAVE PEGO
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Clayton Williams, the front-runner for the Republican nomination for governor, concedes he is looking ahead.

"I hope when I finish my eight years in the governor's office ...," Williams said in his closing remarks at a televised debate Thursday night.

But Williams was quick to explain after the debate, televised statewide, that he isn't counting his political chickens just yet. He said he only wants GOP voters to know that if he's chosen, he intends to serve two terms.

"That's my commitment to them," he said. And Williams wasn't approaching The Texas Debate like a man running out front. On his way into the studio, he handed out campaign brochures to police officers and bystanders. He was the only candidate to do so, the Dallas officers said.

Observers had expected the other top GOP contenders to directly challenge the Midland multi-millionaire on Thursday in what is expected to be the last head-to-head-to-head-to-head confrontation among the four men.

But lawyer Tom Luce, Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance and former Secretary of State Jack Rains chose kid gloves over boxing gloves.

"I don't think the public wants a Hulk Hogan wrestling match," said Luce, in explaining why he and the others thought it more important to stress their own priorities rather than trying to knock down those of Williams.

"We need to talk about issues and not personalities," Rains agreed.

Luce reminded the audience that he has been named in 12 of 15 endorsements issued by some of the state's largest newspapers, and said he doesn't believe Williams has a lock on things.

"It's not over until March 13," he said. "Daniel Ortega (the outgoing Nicaraguan president) led in the polls, too."

Hance said he thought he had done well in the candidates' showcase, and believes he will get the nod over the others because of "the experience factor."

"I'm ready to be governor," he declared in his closing statement.

Texas GOP candidates — from left, Hance, Rains, Luce and Williams — participate in a debate Thursday night in Dallas.

But on a night when studio lights glaring off his eyeglass all but obscured his eyes, much of what he had to say also seemed to get lost. What was clear, however, was his resolute opposition to raising taxes or restructuring the taxing system, and a mild swipe at Williams' intention to pay prisoners minimum wage for busting rocks in boot camps for young offenders.

"It's unheard of in this state, or any other state," said Hance, who spent most of the night tightly gripping his podium.

Rains was the most animated participant and uttered the most pointed lines.

"I'm running for the kids — mine and yours," he dramatically exclaimed in summary remarks, seconds after declaring, "We're in a state of crisis in Texas."

Asked about campaign reform, Rains said, "There's an odor coming out of Austin, and we need to deal with it."

Rains also said someone must start listening to teachers' complaints before the state's beleaguered education system could be improved.

"They're voting — with their feet," said Rains, explaining that Texas continues to lose quality educators to other states because of problems here.

Education was a key concern of Luce on Thursday night. He said he has been the only one of the four to come up with a detailed plan to improve funding among Texas' poorer schools.

"Are we going to equalize to excellence, or equalize to mediocrity?" Luce asked, then proceeded to explain he believes school pursestrings still should be under local control.

Luce said he doesn't believe the state needs a tax increase, pointing out that studies show things are on their way back already. "It (a tax increase) would put uncertainty into the economy," he said.

Conceding afterward he was more relaxed in this debate than a similar one in Houston, Luce seemed to make a concerted effort to punctuate some of his statements with dramatic hand flourishes. Unfortunately, most of them fell under the range of the camera, leaving only his thumbs jabbing into view at times.

"I'm learning how to smile," Luce said when responding to what he was learning about himself during the campaign.

Williams said charges that he has ducked the issues are false, explaining he has widely circulated fliers detailing his positions.

In the debate, Williams said he intends to slice away what he called "15 layers of management" in the state government to save money.

"I will call for a management study of all agencies," he said.

Williams was intent on making hand gestures as he made his remarks, and some of them were so animated at times it appeared he was talking in some kind of sign language.

Three Republican candidates — Ed Cude, Royce X. Owens and the Rev. W.N. Ottwell — were not invited to participate. None of three drew at least 1 percent support in a recent survey by The Dallas Morning News of potential voters.

Top Democratic gubernatorial contenders Mark White, Ann Richards and Jim Mattox will participate in a debate tonight. It also will be held at the Dallas studio of WFAA-TV and will be broadcast statewide.

The Texas Debates are sponsored by the Morning News, KERA-TV, Texas Monthly and WFAA-TV.

Jury convicts skinheads of civil rights violations

By DARRYL EWING
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A federal prosecutor who helped convict five white supremacists on charges of conspiring to violate the civil rights of minorities says "skinheads" can believe whatever they want, so long as they don't break the law.

The convictions are the first under a new federal crackdown on hate groups.

"This should send a warning across the nation that young racists cannot commit crimes of hate," said Barry Kowalski, a prosecutor with the U.S. Justice Department's civil rights division. "They can believe what they want and say what they want, but they better not vandalize or commit acts of violence."

An all-white jury deliberated for about four hours over two days before finding the so-called "skinheads" guilty Thursday of racially motivated hate crimes against Jews, blacks and Hispanics in Dallas.

The five were accused of defacing a synagogue and chasing blacks and Hispanics from a park named after a Confederate general in 1988.

Minority leaders say the convictions indicate "the average American is fed up with racist ignorance."

"We're gratified that the American judicial system is working and that the people have affirmed that they will not accept hate crimes, or violence directed at any group based on race or religious beliefs," said Morris Stein, executive director of the Jewish Federation of Greater Dallas.

"When the civil rights of groups are protected, the civil rights of all are assured," he said.

Skinheads, characterized by their closely shaven heads, generally espouse a philosophy of intolerance against Jews, blacks, Hispanics and homosexuals.

On Wednesday, Kowalski urged jurors "to tell these five men they can't conspire and stalk Dallas like racist spirits in the night."

Defense attorneys countered that the men were being tried for their beliefs. They said their clients merely were exercising free speech.

"It is very unpopular, the things they believe," said Leon Carter, a Dallas lawyer who defended Jordan. "But they have the right to believe it."

Carter, who is black, said he believes his client is innocent.

All five skinheads were charged in two counts of the indictment with conspiring to violate the civil rights of minorities in the synagogue and parks incidents.

A third count of the indictment charged three of them with firearms violations. One man, Michael Lewis Lawrence, 22, of Tulsa, Okla., was cleared of the firearms charge but was convicted with the others on the other counts.

The defendants are Jon Lance Jordan, 19, of Garland; Sean Christian Tarrant, 20, and Daniel Alvis Wood, 20, of Dallas; Lawrence, 22, of Tulsa, Okla.; and Christopher Barry Greer, 25, of Irving.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said the earliest possible sentencing date would be April 19. All five remained in custody.

Rabbi Kenneth Roseman, whose Temple Shalom in North Dallas was vandalized, praised the jury's verdict, but added, "just because five people have been convicted, doesn't mean there aren't more radicals and bigots around."

Don Robinson, president of the Dallas chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, agreed.

"Racism exists without a doubt. Most of it's been quiet and discreet," he said. "This (skinhead activity) was just an outward expression of the way some people secretly feel."

Prosecutors have called the trial — which began Feb. 20 — the government's first major assault against white supremacist groups. The term "skinheads" refers to the shortcropped hair worn by members to show unity.

They were accused of defacing a synagogue and Jewish community center in 1988 and chasing blacks and Hispanics from the Robert E. Lee Park in Dallas that same year.

During the trial, former skinhead members testified that the group, known as the Confederate Hammerheads, planned to pump cyanide gas into Temple Shalom in a chilling reminder of the Holocaust, in which millions of Jews perished.

Each of the charges carries up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Wood, Lawrence and Jordan also faced firearms charges.

Wood was previously sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $5,000 by a state judge for spraying swastikas and anti-Semitic slogans on the synagogue. After Wood's state court conviction, Dallas County prosecutors teamed up with the federal prosecutors and decided to pursue the remaining cases through federal courts, said Mike Gillett, Assistant Dallas County District Attorney.

"We selected a forum that we thought would be most advantageous to the successful prosecution of those responsible," Gillett said. "That ended up being the federal court."

Bentsen asks EPA to weigh rural concerns in landfill regulations

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is asking the Environmental Protection Agency to weigh the concerns of rural Texas communities when it issues stringent new regulations on municipal landfills.

Officials of sparsely populated communities in Texas fear severe financial problems, including higher bills for taxpayers, if forced to comply with the proposed rules. EPA is scheduled to publish final regulations governing municipal landfills in May or June.

While Bentsen agreed garbage disposal regulations must be "shored up" to protect the environment, he warned EPA Administrator William Reilly that if Texas is denied a role in establishing regulations that are effective and less costly for small communities, "we risk doing more harm than good."

According to Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport, the county and the city of Stanton could operate a landfill for an annual cost of $100,000 if variances are granted taking into consideration low average rainfall, soil conditions, and the water table.

"Complying with all proposed regulations could readily double this figure," Deavenport told Bentsen in a letter. "If convenient landfill facilities are not provided, it is very possible that we will see a return to the dumping of solid waste adjacent to rural roads and in isolated cache pits."

O'Donnell Mayor David M. Smith told Bentsen his city would be never be able to fund a landfill under the proposed requirements.

"I have researched the cost of garbage collection by private contractors extensively," he said. "Our citizens, many of whom are elderly, underprivileged and on fixed incomes, cannot pay residential garbage rates which might be in excess of $100 per month."

Bentsen, D-Texas, said more than 100 elected officials from Texas have sought his help in ensuring they would be able to meet the new requirements. A coalition of 48 counties and 35 cities, the Sparsely Populated Entities Coalition, has also been formed in response.

"They are concerned that the particular situations in their areas may make it difficult, if not impossible, to comply with regulations for garbage disposal that are being discussed," Bentsen told Reilly in a letter Thursday.

Bruce Weddle, director of the EPA's municipal solid waste program, said the agency is reviewing the concerns of rural communities and can allow some flexibility in areas such as landfill design or location of groundwater monitoring wells.

He said it is not clear whether EPA has the same flexibility on groundwater monitoring and the agency is attempting to determine how much latitude it has.

The proposed rules on groundwater monitoring have generated much concern in West Texas and other remote arid areas, where officials say it would be extremely costly to drill monitoring wells into a very deep water table.

"The diverse geology and low population of many counties of my state are sound reasons why Texas officials must have flexibility to structure effective, realistic landfill programs that meet the unique needs of our state," Bentsen said.

George Roberson and the Double Edge Band are scheduled to host a dance at the M.K. Brown Civic Center Heritage Room Saturday night from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Roberson, right, is widely considered one of the Panhandle's top musical attractions and is a regular feature at Amarillo's Krystal Palace. The band's song, "I Don't Believe I've Had the Pleasure," is being featured on KOMX radio and is already a hit in the European country music market. Tickets for the dance are available at the door.

Nicaraguan soldiers deserting

By DORALISA PILARTE
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Draftees in the Sandinista-controlled army are deserting their ranks and the military is reportedly hiding arms ahead of next month's swearing in of an opposition government.

Sandinista officials on Thursday acknowledged the desertions but denied weapons and ammunition were being squirreled away.

Also Thursday, President Daniel Ortega called on the United States to resume aid on the day he steps down to the opposition coalition that upset his leftist party in Sunday's election.

"The best that could happen would be for the Contras (rebel guerrillas) to be demobilized by April 25 and for the United States to lift the embargo and send the aid it has promised starting that day," Ortega told Nicaraguan journalists.

Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, who is due to succeed Ortega as president on April 25, has echoed Ortega's call for the Contras to lay down their weapons.

Her United National Opposition (UNO) and Ortega's Sandinistas are beginning to discuss the process of transition. The Sandinistas staked out a tough set of positions Tuesday, including the dismantling of the U.S.-supported Contra rebels from their Honduran jungle camps.

Honduran officials today were expected to join Sandinista and UNO officials on shutting down the Honduran rebels camps.

The Sandinistas, who receive Soviet and Cuban aid, have also demanded the army and the Interior Ministry security forces remain intact, at least until the U.S.-backed rebels disband.

The close link between the Sandinista party and army and security forces has been a source of strength for the Sandinistas, but the army's integrity was questioned as reports of desertions circulated.

The deserters — draftees doing two years of compulsory military service — apparently have decided not to wait for the inauguration of Mrs. Chamorro, who is committed to banning the draft.

"They took our weapons away on Monday and didn't give them back," Juan Carlos Medina, 18, told The Associated Press. "Maybe they didn't trust us."

Medina said 40 out of 60 young draftees in his unit, stationed at the main air force base in Managua, deserted this week. He said the officers seem to want to ignore the problem.

The desertions are "normal under the current situation," said Lt. Col. Rosa Pasos, Defense Ministry spokeswoman.

"We definitely don't want to have people who don't want to be with us," Ms. Pasos said. "And anyway, we're going to reduce the army."

The deserters also reported weapons stored by the military.

One deserter told of tunnels being dug in an army post in San Nicolas, near the northern town of Esteli, in which to hide weapons.

Wife receives second probation in sex-slaying trial

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

DECATUR (AP) — A state district judge Thursday sentenced Sharon Green to a 10-year probation sentence in a stabbing death, ordering her to serve the term concurrently with probation received in another murder case.

Mrs. Green had earlier received 10 years' probation in the hammer-slaying of an Amarillo woman. Her attorney said she agreed to the plea bargain's terms today because of fears a jury might sentence her up to life imprisonment in a second trial.

Judge John Lindsey accepted Mrs. Green's guilty plea to the second murder charge in the killing of Sandra Lorraine Bailey, 27, of Fort Worth.

Lindsey ordered Mrs. Green to submit to random drug testing and report to Wise County authorities to fulfill terms of her probation.

She must also pay for psychological counseling, the judge said.

Ms. Bailey was stabbed more than 30 times, hit with a blunt object and dumped in a Clay County culvert, authorities said.

Wise County District Attorney Pat Morris earlier announced that the agreement had been reached in the second case against Mrs. Green.

The 29-year-old woman was convicted of murder last Friday in the 1985 death of Betty Jo Monroe.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Let the automakers pick the dummies

Meet Sid, Biosid and Eurosoid. They are crash-test dummies used to make your car safer. The dummies are constructed of steel and plastic to resemble humans. They ride in cars, and when the cars are put into accidents they register how much damage would have been done to an actual human passenger.

In a sensible world, auto companies would find the best dummy and use it to make cars safer. But there's a problem so foolish that it would strike dumb even car-test dummies. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, a federal bureaucracy, likes Sid in tests that involve side crashes, while General Motors Corp. says Biosid is a much better dummy.

To make matters worse, NHTSA bureaucrats admit Biosid might actually be a better dummy in helping prevent some of the 8,000 side-crash deaths each year. Yet because Biosid hasn't been tested as much as Sid, the government wants GM to forget Biosid for now and stick with Sid.

NHTSA Administrator Jerry Curry says of Sid, "It'll be good enough." Let's remember that Mr. Curry's job is allegedly to advance traffic safety. Yet here he is rejecting a crash-test dummy, Biosid, that his own bureaucracy admits might be better than the NHTSA's favored dummy, Sid. In other words, NHTSA and Curry are willing to risk the lives of people who might die if GM is prohibited from using Biosid to make safer cars.

There are two more complications that make you wonder who are the dummies really are in this mess. A third dummy, Eurosoid, is used in Europe and may be better than both Sid and Biosid. And some people say GM is using the whole issue to stall on safety development. Curry charges that GM is moving "glacially" in testing Biosid.

But the government itself is a vast glacier. Sen. John Danforth, ranking minority member on the Commerce, says NHTSA has taken longer to develop new standards for side crashes than we took to put a man on the moon. In fact, NHTSA's current standard for side crashes doesn't even require tests that use dummies.

Curry says NHTSA may come up with a new side-impact rule by this manner. "I don't care what dummy is used," he says. "The idea is to get away from fighting over dummies and get down to rule-making." The rule currently being proposed might force GM (and other automakers) to use one particular dummy, or it might let them use any of the three.

There's a better way. It's not so much time for government bureaucrats to "get down to rule-making" as it is to let car companies get down to safe-car making. Motorists nowadays demand safer cars; they don't need a federal nanny to help them buy such cars. One reason Volvo can charge premium prices is because it bases both its engineering and advertising on car safety.

NHTSA itself has become a nuisance blocking safety advances. Competition, not government bureaucracy, builds the safest cars.

Berry's World

"Same ol' story. The poor are getting poorer and the rich are getting richer — except for DONALD TRUMP."

Playing around with civil rights

WASHINGTON — Between May 1 and June 22 of last year, the Supreme Court decided six civil rights cases. Now Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., have introduced companion bills to overturn the opinions. The effect of the legislation would be to tilt the playing field of employment decisions in favor of complaining employees and against defendant employers.

None of the six cases involved any landmark issues of constitutional law. These were statutory decisions, one of them involving a Civil Rights Act of 1866, five of them involving the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The Kennedy-Hawkins bill, if it passes, would not turn the world upside down, but it would shift burdens of proof and would instruct federal courts to interpret the Civil Rights Act "broadly."

The most significant provision would change certain ground rules laid down by the high court in Wilks Cove Packing Co. v. Frank Antonio. This was a 5-4 decision involving two salmon-packing canneries in Alaska. Justice Byron White spoke for the majority.

The record showed that the companies divided their summer work force into unskilled cannery jobs and more or less skilled non-cannery jobs. The former were held largely by Filipinos and native Alaskans, the latter mostly by white professionals.

The case turned on what is known in civil rights laws as the theory of "disparate impact." The theory prohibits employment practices that are "fair in form but discriminating in practice." White found that the statistical evidence established a disparate impact, but there was not sufficient proof that the companies intentionally had discriminated. To show racial imbalance in one segment of a plant does not establish a prima facie case of disparate impact in another segment.

Kennedy and Hawkins would lay a burden on employers to prove that such disparities "are required by business necessity." Their bill would relieve complaining workers of singling out specific practices that lead to racial imbalance.

The trouble with this change in the law is that prudent employers, if they wish to avoid costly litigation, would have no effective recourse but to go to racial quotas. This is an unmitigated evil that Congress should reject out of hand.

Another significant amendment would reverse the Supreme Court's opinion in Price Waterhouse v. Ann B. Hopkins, decided on May 1. Justice William Brennan announced the court's judgment, but he could find only Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry Blackmun and John Paul Stevens to join his opinion. The case involved the accounting firm's refusal to award a partnership to an aggressively successful woman.

There was no question in Price Waterhouse that Hopkins had offended her male associates by her brusque and "macho" personality. Sex to one side, the company contended that there were independent, legitimate reasons for denying the partnership to her. Brennan's opinion would require a company, in such circumstances, to prove that legitimate reasons, standing alone, would lead to the same decision.

Under the pending bill, an aggrieved employee would have to show only that sex (or race) was not "the" motivating factor but was simply "a" motivating factor. There would be no balancing of permissible and forbidden considerations.

In recent years attorneys have brought many cases under terms of an act of 1866. In Brenda Patterson v. McLean Credit Union, the credit held 5-4 that the act should be literally construed to apply only to the "making" and "enforcing" of contracts. Brennan in dissent called the interpretation "needlessly cramped."

Under Kennedy-Hawkins, the Brennan view would prevail. Discrimination would be forbidden not merely in making and enforcing, but also in all "benefits, privileges, terms and conditions" of a contract.

Under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, judgments generally are limited to back wages. Kennedy-Hawkins would authorize both compensatory and punitive damages. In effect, their bill would just about nullify the 1866 law; for all practical purposes (and especially for attorneys' fees) there would be little advantage in relying upon the Reconstruction statute.

Other changes in Kennedy-Hawkins are mostly lawyer stuff. What matters is the animating spirit behind the bill. Kennedy and Hawkins begin with a presumption that employers are by nature a bunch of sexist and racists. Employees are their persecuted victims. The attitude makes for great demagoguery but for very poor law. The real world is not so neatly black and white.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, March 2, the 61st day of 1990. There are 304 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 2, 1939, Roman Catholic Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli was elected Pope. He took the name Pius XII.

On this date: In 1793, the first president of the Republic of Texas, Sam Houston, was born near Lexington, Va.

In 1836, Texas declared its independence from Mexico.

In 1877, Republican Rutherford B. Hayes was declared winner of the 1876 presidential election over Democrat Samuel J. Tilden.

In 1899, Congress established Mount Rainier National Park.

In 1917, Puerto Ricans were granted U.S. citizenship.

In 1923, Time magazine made its debut.

In 1930, author D.H. Lawrence died in Venice, France.

In 1933, the motion picture King Kong premiered at New York's Radio City Music Hall and the RKO Roxy.

'B-bomb' is an explosive issue

There is no word in our American language equivalent to the French word "triage."

Webster with several sentences tries to define it — unsuccessfully.

"Triage" involves a priority selection process best described with an example.

In a hospital emergency room situation where many gravely injured patients arrive at one time, only those with a chance of survival are given immediate treatment. The painful choice involves "triage."

Or when a lifeboat is overloaded, and others seeking to climb aboard threaten to capsize the boat and drown everybody — those others must be sacrificed to save as many as possible.

Again that agonizing selection process involves "triage."

More and more nations of the world — already overpopulated — are beginning to turn away additional immigrants.

Even in Israel where immigrant Jews have been needed to help build the nation, now a mass wave of Jewish immigration from the Soviet Union threatens to create problems.

Paul Harvey

Israel's Finance Minister says his country's 1990 budget might not cover the cost of absorbing the 80,000 additional immigrants wanting in this year.

The world's poorest countries are overflowing and those population pressures are now being felt everywhere.

Arrivals of Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong soared 50 percent in January.

If total arrivals in 1990 top last year's more than 35,000 boat people, Hong Kong officials won't know what to do with them.

Inevitably, people in overcrowded camps develop cholera, other diseases, violent clashes.

Hong Kong wants forced repatriation; wants to force the unwanted to return to Vietnam. But Vietnam does not want them.

The exploding population in the world's poorer countries is increasing immigration pressures on the United States. The Population Crisis Committee projects legal and illegal immigration will total a million persons this year.

Low-skilled immigrant workers, almost half the total, depress Statewide wages and working conditions, pushing American workers into welfare. The estimated cost to taxpayers could be an additional half a billion dollars a year.

Eighty-five percent of legal and illegal immigrants are coming from the world's backward countries — Mexico, Philippines, Vietnam, India, Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Iran, Cambodia, Taiwan, Haiti and Colombia. All countries with runaway birth rates.

Too many babies have been described as a "B-bomb," infinitely more menacing than the A-bomb.

And while the American economy is currently creating enough new jobs to keep up — in any recession — the "B-bomb" becomes explosive.

South African talks won't be so easy

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

It seems clear that Nelson Mandela was released by the South African government in order to promote negotiations concerning the future political structure of the country.

That isn't quite the same thing as saying that Mandela, or his African National Congress, will participate in the negotiations, though they probably will. But various other important black political leaders — e.g., Chief Buthelezi, the Zulu leader — made Mandela's freedom a precondition of their own participation, leaving the government little choice in the matter if it wants to negotiate with anybody at all.

Meanwhile, there are rumors of understandings already reached between the Pretoria authorities and Mandela (who has had private talks with both State President F.W. de Klerk and his predecessor, P.W. Botha). More publicly, however, both sides seems to be playing the old game of "good cop and bad cop."

President de Klerk and his National Party warn that they are "reforming" South Africa as fast as it can possibly be done, pointing to the fact that the official opposition in the white parliament is the Conservative Party, which is far to the right of the Nationalists and opposes any concessions whatever.

Mandela, for his part, is depicted in the Western press as a relatively reasonable representative of the older and presumably cooler heads in the ANC, who are having trouble restraining younger black leaders like Cyril Ramphosa who allegedly don't want to negotiate with the whites at all, preferring to take over South Africa by force.

On the other hand, a recent statement by Mandela himself is absolutely appalling in its inflexibility. In it, he says bluntly: "No dedicated ANC member will ever heed the call to break with the SACP (i.e., the South African Communist Party) ... What man of honor will ever desert a lifelong friend at the insistence of a common opponent and still retain a measure of credibility among his people?"

As for negotiations, Mandela says they must address "the demand (of blacks) for majority rule in a unitary state," and "the insistence of whites on structural guarantees that majority rule will not mean domination of the white minority by blacks."

In a separate statement issued hours later, Mandela added: "The nationalization of the mines, banks and monopoly industries is the policy of the ANC, and a change or modification of our views in this regard is inconceivable."

Of course, all of those various statements, hints and ploys may be — indeed, probably are — simply maneuvers preliminary to the negotiations themselves: positions taken precisely for the purpose of being modified later on when the hard bargaining begins.

But on the basis of my own understanding of the South African scene, formed in repeated visits over the past 30 years, as well as in frank talks with representatives of almost every conceivable shade of opinion, I must warn my readers not to expect quick success in any negotiations that may take place.

The black revolutionaries in the ANC will not accept — will not, if it comes that, be allowed by their backers overseas to accept — much less than what Mandela has demanded: "majority rule in a unitary state." They might, magnanimously, offer to delay its fall implementation for five or 10 years, but that is all.

The South African whites, for their part — with considerable support from the "coloured" and Asian communities — will never agree to submit to the black majority. The only conceivable solution would be the creation of several separate sovereignities. But the blacks, with Western advice, will reject any such settlement, gambling that in the fullness of time the whole nation will fall into their hands.

So the outlook is for deadlock, enlivened by violence, with further economic sanctions by foreign nations. Not a pretty prospect.

Bankruptcy finding shows Texas Air paid unfair prices for Eastern assets

By MARCY GORDON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Air Corp. has agreed to pay Eastern Airlines more than $280 million to settle a bankruptcy examiner's findings that it bought the subsidiary's assets at unfairly low prices.

The findings released Thursday by examiner David I. Shapiro supported a key contention by striking Eastern workers, who claimed Texas Air stripped their company of its most valuable assets to bolster the parent's non-union carrier, Continental Airlines.

However, Shapiro did not agree with the union's request that Eastern be run by an outside trustee. The unions had sought the move as protection against further predations by Texas Air during Eastern's bankruptcy reorganization.

Texas Air rejected Shapiro's findings about the sale of assets but said it would make the settlement payment in order to help bolster Eastern.

"Texas Air and Eastern categorically reject any conclusions in the Shapiro report that intercompany transactions between Eastern and its affiliates formed the basis for any material liability," the two companies said in a statement issued after a court hearing on the report.

The statement said Shapiro's report is full of "faulty analyses, hearsay evidence, statements taken out of context and misstatements of fact."

Union attorneys said the report vindicated the workers' position, but they insisted that a trustee still needs to be named to run the company.

"The wrongdoers are simply to be slapped on the wrist," Bruce Simon, an attorney for the Air Line Pilots Association, told the hearing.

Approval of the settlement by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton R. Lifland could remove a main obstacle in the airline's effort to emerge from bankruptcy, because some of the compensation would help satisfy creditor claims against Eastern.

Lifland said the proposed settlement can be viewed, in some ways, as "Texas Air buying Eastern again."

The proposed settlement includes $150 million to $250 million that Eastern would recover from Texas Air for the transfer of the System One computer reservation system, and $61 million for Texas Air's acquisition of Eastern in November 1986.

In addition, Eastern would receive a 25 percent share in System One and the right to buy 40 Boeing 737-300 jets at cost from sister carrier Continental. The settlement's total value is estimated at more than $280 million and includes $133 million in cash.

Separately, Lifland approved Eastern's request that $60 million be taken from escrow funds to help finance its operations this month.

The funds contain about $550 million raised by the sale of Eastern assets since it sought bankruptcy court protection last March 9.

Shapiro issued his findings following a lengthy investigation into the dealings between Texas Air, Eastern and Continental as part of Eastern's Chapter 11 bankruptcy case.

The company sought protection from creditors five days after the beginning of a strike by machinists, flight attendants and pilots that virtually grounded it. Eastern has been reorganizing as a smaller carrier and has hired replacements for many of the strikers.

The pilots and flight attendants unions abandoned the strike in November but Machinists remain on strike.

In the 300-page report, Shapiro said that in 12 cases out of 15 there was substantial evidence Texas Air transferred assets worth between $285 million and $403 million from Eastern without adequately compensating the airline.

In Miami, where Eastern has its headquarters, President Phil Bakes said the settlement would help expedite the airline's emergence from bankruptcy court protection, which he expected by the end of June.

The unions had long demanded the bankruptcy court appoint a trustee to run Eastern instead of Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo, but Shapiro said in his investigation that the request might cripple the airline.

Nonetheless, Shapiro recommended the appointment of a special monitoring committee, with much less authority than a trustee, to scrutinize how Texas Air deploys assets among its businesses.

The examiner had been investigating Eastern, its finances and relationships with Continental and Texas Air since early September because of conflict of interest questions raised by the unions and Eastern creditors.

This issue became particularly significant after Eastern proposed a reorganization plan that did not include full repayment for its creditors.

If Texas Air had taken Eastern planes, routes and other assets from the airline and given them to Continental, they theoretically would be out of reach of Eastern's creditors.

Eastern sold the System One computerized reservation system to Texas Air in April 1987 for about $100 million.

Last week, Texas Air said it would sell half of System One to a General Motors subsidiary for $250 million, suggesting it was worth far more than what Texas Air had paid to Eastern.

As part of the settlement worked out by Shapiro, Eastern would get a 25 percent share in System One, with 50 percent to be owned by the GM subsidiary, Electronic Data Systems Corp., and the remaining 25 percent by Continental.

Senate takes up clean air debate after accord reached with Bush

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new agreement on sweeping air pollution controls is expected to ease Senate passage of the measure, although the accord with the White House is prompting criticism from environmentalists and industry — not to mention some senators.

Senate leaders and the Bush administration announced agreement Thursday on the most contentious parts of the bill, including controls on acid rain, automobile emissions and toxic chemical releases by industry.

"We have reached agreement on sound and comprehensive legislation that expands and strengthens the clean air laws and have done it in the most cost-effective way possible," declared Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

Mitchell said he plans to bring the bill to the Senate floor Monday.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole called the proposal a "giant step forward" in improving federal air-pollution laws for the first time in 13 years.

President Bush urged senators to move swiftly to pass the measure. He had called the original Senate clean air bill too expensive and at one point suggested he might veto it if Congress passed it.

"President Bush is extraordinarily pleased with the agreement. It is a milestone, an enormous step forward," said Roger Porter, the president's chief domestic policy adviser and head of the administration team that helped negotiate the agreement.

Although not as tough as the original Senate bill, the compromise calls for broad-ranging new air pollution controls on automobiles, factories and electric power plants. It aims to:

- Cut in half the acid rain pollutants from coal-burning electric power plants by the end of the decade.

- Annual sulfur dioxide releases would be cut by 10 million tons by 2000.

- Tighten automobile emission controls so that hydrocarbon emissions are cut by one-fifth and nitrogen oxides by nearly two-thirds. The two emissions are key components of urban smog.

- Require industry for the first time to install the best available technology to control the release of 192 toxic chemicals including a variety of carcinogens.

- Plants would have to impose further controls to meet new "health based" requirements if the cancer risks are at a certain level to people living near a plant.

- Require a broad range of industry to curb smog-causing pollutants.

However, environmentalists complained that the compromise weakened major portions of the original Senate bill.

"The back-room dealing has generated bad deals for the American people," complained Richard Ayres, chairman of the National Clean Air Coalition, which is lobbying on clean air issues for various environmental organizations.

Fred Krupp, executive director of the Environmental Defense Fund, added, "Powerful special interests have succeeded in rigging the game in their favor."

The agreement eliminated an automatic second round of tailpipe emission controls for cars, although such controls still could be used under some circumstances. It exempted thousands of small businesses from tougher smog-control requirements in the original bill, and it removed a provision in current law requiring the federal government to impose an air pollution reduction plan if local officials fail to do so.

There was criticism from the Senate as well.

"The agreement fails to require the controls we need to provide clean air in the nation and in New Jersey," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

Midwest senators were concerned about the high cost of acid rain controls, although some new provisions were aimed at holding down those costs.

CBS: Andy Rooney returning to '60 Minutes' on Sunday

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Rooney is bringing his weekly gripe session back to 60 Minutes on Sunday after CBS lifted his suspension early with the blessing of the NAACP.

"I'm very pleased," Rooney said Thursday after CBS News president David Burke reinstated the 71-year-old humorist, whose curmudgeonly commentary has been a show-ending 60 Minutes feature since 1978.

Burke on Feb. 8 had suspended Rooney for three months without pay after The Advocate, a gay magazine, quoted him as saying that blacks had "watered down their genes" — a remark Rooney denied making.

On Thursday, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said it believed Rooney was misquoted, didn't object to his return to work and considered the matter closed, spokesman James Williams said.

Rooney also had drawn fire from homosexuals for a Dec. 28 CBS special in which he cited "homosexual unions" as among things that cause "self-induced" death, and for a letter to The Advocate in which he said he found male homosexual acts "repugnant."

Burke said of the suspension, "Painful though these events have been, we have all learned a great deal about how sensitive and fragile our society is — how thoughts and words can be misunderstood."

He said Rooney "has consistently stated publicly that he is not a man who holds prejudice in his heart and mind towards any group in our society.

"Those of us who know him and work with him know two things — first, that is true, and second, it is time that Andy returned to his proper place on 60 Minutes."

Rooney, who said he would address the uproar Sunday on 60 Minutes, said it had sensitized him to some of the problems faced by homosexuals.

"I think they have really made their point," he said. "I believe they are in a more difficult position than I understood."

Seabrook workers Earl Chase, right, and Richard Young hang a large sign just inside the gates of the Seabrook nuclear power plant Thursday minutes after hearing the plant had been granted a full power license.

Seabrook finally obtains license to operate nuclear power plant

By DOINA CHIACU
Associated Press Writer

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — The Seabrook nuclear plant overcame two decades of protests, legal challenges, ballooning costs and the financial ruin of its chief investor to capture the ultimate prize: a license to operate.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission voted 3-0 Thursday to grant the $6.5 billion reactor a full-power license. But the appeal process will hold up the license for at least two weeks, and Seabrook opponents pressed on.

About 125 anti-Seabrook demonstrators waved signs, chanted and blocked plant gates after the decision. More than 70 were arrested.

At the NRC meeting in Rockville, Md., utility executives hugged each other after the ruling, and maintenance workers at the 1,200-plus employee plant hoisted a sign reading, "Startup '90: We Have the Power."

"It's a milestone in the lives of our employees, more than just mortar and bricks," said Edward Brown, president of Seabrook operator New Hampshire Yankee.

Seabrook, perhaps the nation's most hotly contested nuclear plant, became a symbol of the anti-nuclear movement, and its foes claimed a broader victory, contending that as a result of the long fight against Seabrook, no utility would risk the costs of trying to build and open another nuclear plant.

Conceived in 1968, it was proposed in 1972 as a twin-reactor plant costing less than $1 billion. Construction delays and cost increases forced the cancellation of one reactor in the mid-1980s and plunged lead owner Public Service

Co. of New Hampshire into bankruptcy reorganization in 1988.

The plant was held up largely by concerns over whether the area could be evacuated in an emergency. The NRC ruling ratified recommendations by its staff and several lower-level boards that the plant is safe and that evacuation plans would work.

"I would be happy to live within two miles of this plant and I wouldn't worry about it at all," said NRC Chairman Kenneth Carr.

The decision gives opponents seven days to file an appeal; seven days after the filing the license becomes effective unless a judge issues a stay.

If the appeal fails, ascension to full power could take two to three months.

Massachusetts Attorney General James Shannon and two environmental groups planned to ask for a stay of the license next week in the federal appeals court in Washington.

"It's correct to say there has never been a case where the court has overturned an NRC license, but it's also correct to say that there has never been a license issued which has been so legally vulnerable," Shannon said.

Those vulnerabilities include what opponents consider the NRC's violation of its own procedures in rulings on emergency evacuation plans for the densely populated New Hampshire and Massachusetts communities near the plant.

One of Seabrook's most prominent opponents, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, refused to submit emergency plans in 1986 after declaring that safe evacuation was impossible.

The NRC then accepted utility-drafted plans for Massachusetts. In Boston on Thursday, Dukakis held George Bush, who defeated him in the 1988 presidential election, partially responsible for the NRC action. Bush's support of the plant "has made a significant difference here," he said.

Bush supported Seabrook while campaigning for New Hampshire's 1988 presidential primary, with John Sununu, then New Hampshire's governor and now White House chief of staff, leading his campaign. Sununu is a staunch Seabrook supporter.

Overall, there have been more than 3,200 arrests in anti-Seabrook protests, which peaked in the mid-1970s during construction and picked up again last summer as the plant drew closer to a full-power license.

Carr on Thursday defended the commission's handling of the Seabrook license.

"We see nothing at present that persuades us that Seabrook cannot be operated safely," the NRC chairman said. "This is one of the most closely scrutinized and safely built plants in the world."

Jean Burson of Morningside, Md., washes "Tron" at Tri-Star K-9 Service, a self-serve wash for dogs in Clinton, Md., earlier this week. Owner Craig Jolly, in the background washing "April," said he opened the dog wash at his boarding kennel and obedience training school for the convenience of owners who want well-groomed pets without the fuss of bathing them at home.

Two nuns convicted of trespassing

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Two Roman Catholic nuns have been convicted of criminal trespass after refusing to leave the office of U.S. Rep. Solomon Ortiz while protesting U.S. military aid to El Salvador. A jury found Sister Alice Fairchild and Sister Norma Seni Pimentel guilty Tuesday of the Class A misdemeanor in County Court-at-Law

No. 1. Nine protesters seeking an end to U.S. military aid to El Salvador were arrested in the Nov. 21, 1989, protest when they refused to leave Ortiz's Brownsville office for an hour when a staff member for the congressman tried to go to lunch. Two of the nine have pleaded guilty.

At new 'dog wash,' customers say heavy on the suds, but hold the wax

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

CLINTON, Md. (AP) — Dog owners weary of lugging Bowser into the bathtub for his Saturday night sudsing are driving to Washington's new "dog wash," where the customers exit with hair ribbons instead of a slap on the bumper with a soggy towel.

At Tri-Star K-9 Service, which offers a sort of self-serve car wash for canines in the southern Maryland suburbs, it's heavy on the shampoo and flea dip and please hold the wax.

"At home, it gets so messy in my bathroom," said Jean Burson, who was grooming her freshly bathed Irish setter, April. "I was always drenched, and there was dog hair everywhere, clogging the drain."

"This is not April's favorite thing of the day, but it makes it a lot easier for me."

Tri-Star's owner, Craig Jolly, said he opened the dog wash at his boarding kennel and obedience training school in December for the convenience of owners who want well-groomed pets without the fuss of bathing them at home.

There's no heavy lifting here. Doggie customers climb wooden ramps that deposit them effortlessly into porcelain bathtubs equipped with overhead hoses.

"I know people who've gotten a bad back from lifting their 150-pound dogs into the bath," Jolly says. "A pregnant woman came in here recently with a 120-pound Rottweiler, so she sure didn't want to wash that dog at home."

The $9.99 price of the dog wash includes use of shampoos and dips, brushes, scissors, grooming shears, nail clippers and shoulder-harness blow dryers for the owners' use, along with plastic aprons to keep them dry.

Jolly also supplies spray colognes for pooches with stubborn body odors, and keeps a glass jar full of brightly colored hair bows to pin on poodles and other small dogs as they prance out the door.

Jolly got the dog wash idea from a trade magazine article about similar facilities that opened a few years ago in Chicago, then in California. But when business picks up in the spring, Jolly plans to add some luxurious touches worthy of a Beverly Hills spai.

"I'm going to get an exercise treadmill," he said, "and a whirlpool bath for arthritic dogs. And over against that wall, I'll set up a little dog deli with chewy bones and toys, liver treats, dog milkshakes and beef rawhides that look like hamburgers and link sausages."

Additional inspectors to patrol Texas border

DALLAS (AP) — The recently appointed head of the embattled U.S. Customs Service pledged better enforcement against commercial smuggling, which has taken a back seat in the battle against drugs.

"Yes, there has been great emphasis on the (drug) enforcement side," Customs Commissioner Carol Boyd Hallett said. "But I can guarantee you that enforcement and the commercial side will be balanced, and I'm working strenuously to see that that will happen."

Her comments came Wednesday during a Dallas luncheon with international business leaders.

Ms. Hallett, a former ambassador to the Bahamas under the Reagan administration, was named customs commissioner last November. She replaces the high-profile William von Raab, who zealously promoted the Customs Service's anti-drug-smuggling activities.

Von Raab instituted the controversial "zero tolerance" program under which customs agents seized cars and boats when only small amounts of drugs were found on the owners.

"The commercial side was neglected while the enforcement side was emphasized," Shaw said.

However, Ms. Hallett also announced Wednesday that an additional 175 customs inspectors will be added along the southwestern U.S. border this fiscal year to enforce drug laws.

She said the inspectors would cost more than $10 million. They will patrol a 2,000-mile region spanning from Brownsville through New Mexico and Arizona to San Diego.

"We are having to take some across-the-board cuts in our budget ... but any of those positions that would be cut from our inspector ranks would come from other locations," Ms. Hallett said. "It would not be a cut in our manpower along the border."

There are now 854 inspectors patrolling the border from Brownsville to Arizona, said Judy Turner, a spokeswoman in the Customs Service Southwest Region Office in Houston. Another 318 inspectors patrol the California-Mexico border.

The Customs Service will recruit inspectors through Sept. 30, Ms. Turner said.

"Their role will be not only for the responsibility of facilitating trade, but also for making sure passengers that are coming across the border are not violating our drug laws," she said.

Wal-Mart may expand into Mexico

LAREDO (AP) — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is looking into the possibility of expanding operations of the nation's No. 3 mass merchandise retailer into Mexico, according to a Mexican congressman.

Congressman Benjamin Clariond Reyes, a federal deputy from Nuevo Leon state and a leading Monterrey businessman, said Wednesday that Wal-Mart officials were in Monterrey last week on a fact-finding mission.

But a spokeswoman at Wal-Mart's Bentonville, Ark., headquarters said earlier this week that she could not confirm that.

"At this time, we are not announcing any new plans for any new stores in Mexico," she said.

The Wal-Mart group was headed by Rob Walton, a son of the founder of the chain that includes Wal-Mart, Sam's Wholesale Clubs and Hypermart stores.

"They are looking toward expanding to Monterrey, Chihuahua and Guadalajara," Clariond told the Laredo Times. "It is not a done deal because they are just going to begin a marketing study. But I feel they will come to Mexico."

Clariond also said Wal-Mart already has ties to a Chihuahua state businessman, Leopoldo Mares, and is associated with a Mares-owned store in Ciudad Juarez.

During the visit to Monterrey, Walton and the Wal-Mart officials visited a number of stores.

Join Us In Worship

In The Church Of Your Choice

GOD'S WILL

The greatest commandment is that we should love our God. This is a free choice that man has, but it is God's desire that all would seek Him. He is our heavenly Father, and desires only the best for us.

ATTEND CHURCH

The Church is God's appointed-agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Group to perform in concert Sunday

Highest Praise, an inspirational singing and musical group, will be in concert at 6 p.m. Sunday at the First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock.

The group, made up of seven young adults from Dumas, is led by Joe Kennedy. One of the featured singers is Mrs. Joe Kennedy, the former Benita Rogers of Pampa.

Highest Praise says its goal is exalting the Lord and blessing people. The group has appeared in many concerts in the area.

Pastor Albert Maggard and the congregation extend an invitation to the public to attend the concert.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: "Search me, O God, and know my heart; test me and know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. (Psalm 139:23-24 NIV)"

I fell a few days ago. I never manage to do such things privately, and this ungraceful splat was no exception. I entertained all the fine folks in a restaurant parking lot when I stepped up on a curb and missed.

As falls go, it was a good 'un. Somehow, I managed to hit most every body part on the way down, knocked both shoes off, and ended up smacking my face on the concrete and bending my just-paid-for glasses. If I'd been performing before judges, I'd have scored a 10!

My hand hurt for the rest of the day, and I watched it for signs it was cracked, but it didn't swell or turn purple. The next day when I woke up, my hand was sore, but better; however, the bed sheet seemed to be causing me some discomfort in the vicinity of my foot. When I pulled my foot from beneath the sheet, I saw that one toe was swollen and was black and blue. My hand had hurt so much, I hadn't even noticed I had hurt my toe!

One evening at a dinner party with friends, I made a tacky remark concerning a fellow Christian. As soon as the words came out of my mouth, I wanted to take them back.

My conscience hurt over the spoken words, and I told God I was sorry, but I sensed no forgiveness. Only after weeks of being spiritually sore because of my words did I notice the swelling pain in a deeper part of my soul. I had been so guiltily preoccupied with the hateful words, I hadn't even noticed I had a more seriously damaged attitude of heart.

Satan isn't at his most destructive with capering public wickedness; he wreaks his most damaging havoc on us with such subtlety we don't know what hit us!

Religion roundup

ATLANTA (AP) — The former president of the Southern Baptist Woman's Missionary Union has endorsed a moderate candidate for the denomination's presidency and said she's willing to run as his vice president.

Carolyn Weatherford Crumpler, who for 15 years headed the WCU until last year, endorsed the Rev. Daniel Vestal for the top post from the pulpit of his church in suburban Dunwoody, and said she was ready to run with him.

Fundamentalists have won the presidency of the 14.8 million-member denomination for the past decade, achieving majorities among trustees of the denomination's institutions and agencies.

Mrs. Crumpler, married last summer to a Cincinnati pastor after she left leadership of the women's organization, said she is concerned because a "takeover" group has muzzled denominational executives and the denomination's news agency, Baptist Press.

Vestal, who narrowly lost the presidency last year to the fundamentalist incumbent, the Rev. Jerry Vines, said he had asked Mrs. Crumpler to work with him and seek the vice presidency to bring reconciliation to the faction-torn denomination.

Its annual convention comes this June in New Orleans.

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Catholic Women, an organization advocating fuller women's rights in Roman Catholicism, urges the church to open its all-male priesthood to women and creation of a new seminary system to train them.

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — United Methodists gave $115.8 million in 1989 to support their denomination's domestic and international programs, up 9 percent from the $106.3 million in 1988, reports the church's council on finance and administration.

Frontline to sing Monday

Frontline, a contemporary ensemble representing Evangel College and Revivaltime, will appear in concert at 7 p.m. Monday at First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, according to the Rev. Herb Peak, pastor.

The public is invited to the concert. Frontline is featured on Revivaltime — radio voice of the Assemblies of God. Members of the group are from Evangel College, an Assemblies of God school in Springfield, Mo. In the appearance, the ensemble will present a gospel music program featuring a tight-harmony vocal section, an electric rhythm section, and a warm brass section.

Frontline's director, Nate Carter, holds a bachelor's degree in sacred music and a bachelor's degree in Bible from Central Bible College in Springfield, Mo. Carter is a musician, arranger and producer. He has served on staff at Central Bible College, American Artists (sound recording studios), and Bellevue, Neb., Assembly of God. His work has been published by Melody Music/Gospel Publishing House in Springfield, Mo., and by Homeland Publishing in Nashville, Tenn.

Revivaltime is heard on an estimated 600 releases worldwide and originates from Assemblies of God studios in Springfield.

Turner to be missionary

JEFFERSON CITY, Tenn. — Rollin Turner of Pampa, Texas, plans to spend his spring break as a missionary in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

A junior at Carson-Newman College, Turner is a member of the college's Special Projects Other Than Summer (SPOTS) team. Five SPOTS teams from Carson-Newman will travel from South Carolina to Massachusetts on spring break mission trips.

A Spanish and human services major, Turner is a member of the soccer and swimming teams, BSU, FCA, Sing & Share, and is a Samaritan House volunteer worker.

He is the son of Donald Turner and Donna Turner.

St. Mark sets breakfast

The men of St. Mark CME Church, 406 Elm, have scheduled a pancake breakfast from 8 to 11 a.m. Saturday at the church.

The men will serve pancakes with sausage or bacon, along with eggs. Coffee and orange juice will also be served. The public is invited and donations will be accepted.

Protestants credit 'Mom' for influence on faith

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ask 10,000 people what or who had the most positive influence on their religious faith, and the most likely answer for every age group, men and women, boys and girls, is "my mother."

That is among the findings of one of the largest, most comprehensive studies ever made of faith and its development among Americans.

A full report of the 31/2-year study won't be disclosed until a national conference March 24-27 in St. Louis, but some of its conclusions are being circulated and discussed.

While it turned up numerous previously indicated conditions, some of them, when laid out in hard, overwhelming statistics, come as a bit of a shock.

One of these is that only a third of U.S. Protestants have what is termed an "integrated faith" that embraces both basic beliefs and their practical implications in life.

Another somewhat surprising conclusion is that what matters most in building mature faith is not the commonly emphasized classes for the young — important as they are — but adult Christian education.

Further, this most important stage of learning is found to be widely neglected in the churches.

The huge, landmark study, involving completion of 374-questionnaires by 10,000 church people bringing out information never available before about beliefs and values, was made by the Search Institute of Minneapolis.

It was sponsored by six mainline Protestant denominations through a grant from the Lilly Endowment, Inc.

Titled "Effective Christian Education: A National Study of Protestant Congregations," the project also probed the methods, programs and activities of congregations in conducting educational work.

In addition, trained observers visited 54 congregations with exceptionally strong educational programs to examine and describe the techniques that are getting results.

Peter Benson, president of the institute that made the study, said it found that faith is not particularly well-developed "in many church members, and programs to develop it are 'less than effective.'"

"Unless this issue is faced head-on in the early '90s, members will increasingly drop away or seek spiritual nurture elsewhere," he writes in The Lutheran, organ of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

It and other denominations involved in the study have been declining in membership for about 20 years.

The others are the United Methodist Church, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), United Church of Christ, Episcopal Church and Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

The study also found that growth in mature faith depended not so much on the warmth and friendliness of a congregation, but on the degree to which it challenges thinking and encourages questions.

In a year's time, adults average a total of no more than 11 to 20 hours in Christian educational efforts.

Consequently, it scarcely got a mention when people were asked to choose, among 30 potential influences, the five with the most positive impact on their faith.

Below the top-ranked "my mother," men ranked their spouse, father, pastor and worship services, while women listed God's presence, worship, prayer, and their father.

Sister Cindy goes behind bars to worship with female inmates

By JOHN WALLS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LUBBOCK (AP) — It's 9 a.m. on a chilly Sunday and a smiling, petite visitor walks into the Lubbock County Jail.

She carries a portable black Yamaha keyboard on aluminum legs balanced against her right hip as she walks into the jail's waiting area. A Bible with a homemade lace cover rests atop the keyboard.

Cindy Hughlett is on her way to lead a one-hour worship service with female inmates.

Minutes pass while jail personnel work to get Mrs. Hughlett, 27, through the doors and to a crowd that ranges from two to 20 women inmates depending on the day.

"It doesn't matter how many there are," she said.

The jail personnel smile and say hello. She is escorted gently from the waiting area through the holding area — still holding inmates after a busy Saturday night — into a maze of steel bars and doors that lead into the bowels of the jail.

Mrs. Hughlett walks into an area used as a sewing room and a general meeting room. It is covered with leaflets and fliers from Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

The room has yellow cinder block walls with gray concrete floors. In the corner is a short rack of generic inmate shirts. The visitor prepares for her service, arranging gray folding chairs around the room.

Mrs. Hughlett began singing in the jail three years ago and included scripture reading and discussion during the past year, operating through the chaplain at Trinity Church.

She usually holds services three to four Sundays a month in the jail with her assistant, Blanche Swisher.

The women inmates begin to file into the room with their Bibles, pausing to stop and smile.

"Hi, Sister Cindy," says one.

The women inmates are clad in red, blue and white shirts — each with the word "JAIL" emblazoned on the back — along with standard-issue blue jail pants.

Sixteen inmates attend the service.

After a short prayer, Mrs. Hughlett says, "So how have y'all been doing?" The inmates nod and say, "Fine."

Mrs. Hughlett then begins to play her songs for the next half-hour.

The inmates, crouched in their folding chairs, follow along by reading the handouts she has prepared. Their heads move slowly from side to side as their voices rise in the small quarters.

One inmate raises her hand during the singing, while Mrs. Hughlett nimbly plays the keyboard.

After the song, a soft "Amen" echoes through the little room as the inmates shuffle from one sheet of music to another. Mrs. Hughlett sips from her pink plastic cup of water on the top of the keyboard.

During the service, women guards look on through a mirror in the control room, dividing their attention from the service in the little room to the screens monitoring activity in the inmates' wing.

Outside the room, muffled voices and the sounds of television echo down the corridor, while the harsh sounds of doors being mechanically shut occasionally provides background percussion to the service.

Mrs. Hughlett leads the women inmates in a half-hour of verse reading and discussion, focusing this week on John 14. She said she chose the chapter for its emphasis on encouragement and peace, the coming of Christ and the Holy Spirit, and the answer of prayer.

She leads the inmates as they take turns reading verses from the chapter. The women participate attentively, pausing occasionally to outline and underline passages. Their heads nod as Mrs. Hughlett talks about the scriptures.

An inmate fans herself with her makeshift songbook.

A woman guard motions from behind the window.

Mrs. Hughlett nods.

The discussion ends and the inmates get up from their chairs, cleaning the room around them.

Mrs. Hughlett leaves the hot room, keyboard in tow, and heads back through the dull corridor.

The procession with Mrs. Hughlett swings back past the holding area, where one man sits with his head in his hands. But the flow of traffic, including a guard and several visitors, sweeps past the cell.

Minutes after leaving the room of inmates, with fluorescent light as her guide, she moves through the jail's last door into a wave of sunlight.

She smiles. "I love it," she said. "They know. They know if you love them."

Afterward, Mrs. Hughlett said she hopes to expand her ministry and also go into other jails, including state prisons, in a full-time ministry.

The people behind the bars are her motivation, she said.

"It's where God called me," Mrs. Hughlett said. "I know that's where God wants me."

"I'm happier in there than anywhere else," she said.

Electronic Bible has capabilities of finding Scriptures with ease

By TERRY GOODRICH
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH (AP) — So there you are in Sunday school, feeling virtuous for having gotten up so early when the group leader asks you to read a passage from Zephaniah.

Feigning an air of nonchalance, you agree.

With mounting embarrassment, you flip futilely through the pages of your Bible. You pass Isaiah, the Jeremiah. You pass Daniel, thinking his experience in the lions' den could be no worse than you're feeling now.

There are Matthew, Mark, even 2 Thessalonians, but Zephaniah is not to be found.

Enter the electronic Bible, with a Scripture-finding ability that borders on the miraculous.

"You just punch in the Scripture you want — say, Genesis 3:4 — and within two-tenths of a second, it's displayed on the electronic Bible's screen," says Lisa G. Hindin, marketing director for Franklin Computer Co., the New Jersey company that makes the Bible.

At 11 ounces and a mere 5.6 inches square, the $300 burgundy Bible comes in both the King James and Revised Standard versions. Battery-operated and similar to a calculator in operation, it was introduced in June 1989 and distributed to retail stores shortly before Christmas.

Initially, company officials believed the hand-held computer would appeal mainly to scholars and seminary students. They've been pleasantly surprised to find otherwise, Ms. Hindin says.

"It's not just the scholars, but anyone at all with an interest in religion," she said. "The average person can gain access. A lot of Bible study groups are using it."

Besides quickly calling up a Scripture for its user, the electronic Bible does several other things, she says.

"One of the more interesting features is that it can help you if you don't remember exactly where a certain Scripture is found or even the exact phrase you're looking for," Ms. Hindin said. "It has the ability to search based on very limited information."

Thus, the person seeking some consolation may vaguely recall something in the Bible about God's presence through the valley of the shadow of death. Punch in the words "valley" and "shadow," hit "enter" and the electronic Bible summons up the 23rd Psalm.

An even more sophisticated feature the Bible provides is its thesaurus. Say you are seeking a biblical reference to a mirror in your King James electronic bible. If it finds no reference to a mirror, you can punch in a request for a deeper search. Then the Bible hunts down an old English synonym for mirror — looking glass — and directs you to look up the reference in Job 37:18.

"You can even misspell words — it has a phonetic spelling — and it will correct that" and search for your request, Ms. Hindin says. "It also has a built-in pronunciation guide."

The electronic Bible has received a good, if not overwhelming, response at area stores that carry it.

"There's been a lot of interest, but it's still kind of pricey," says Bruce Densford, assistant electronics manager for Service Merchandise on Hulen Street.

Lloyd Dabbs, merchandising manager for Dillard stores in Fort Worth and Arlington, says the stores have not had enough of the Bibles in stock to warrant advertising them. "But they're selling quite well not to have had an ad. It's just word of mouth that's selling it."

Mary Anne Mounger of the Tarrant Baptist Association said she considers the electronic Bible a plus for today's churchgoer.

"If something makes it easier for people to understand and know about God, that's good," she said.

Religion roundup

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An Episcopal diocesan task force on the relevance and meaning of the Bible in the modern world has completed its work after two years, concluding that the "Bible is the word of God."

A 45-page report steers clear of either liberalism or fundamentalism about the Bible.

Instead, the commission recommends a "narrative approach" which sets aside historical analysis to focus on the meanings inherent in the texts, letting the texts speak for themselves and taking the Bible at face value.

Bishop John Shelby Spong has endorsed the work, saying "this committee once more puts the church's book into the center of our life."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic leaders at an interreligious convocation urged more joint theological and community efforts to end what they called the "cold war" among religions.

"The creation of a world at peace is one of the foundation stones of both Judaism and Christianity," but their "cold war" undermines credibility of that message, said Rabbi A. James Rudin, interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee.

The Rev. John B. Cobb Jr., a United Methodist theologian of Claremont University, said a step toward ending the "war" was to bring out "new overlaps among our faiths" to inform public life and public schools.

He said American society "has not faced up to the difficulty of transmitting values apart from schools whose ethos is formed by particular religious traditions. What is needed is open interaction from which would emerge agreements on values that all can support."

He urged "rethinking of our theology so that the most wholehearted commitment to Christ will be the strongest reason for the full acceptance of Judaism as a companion in the service of God."

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Others won't appreciate your company today if you are too insistent upon doing everything your way. Be cooperative instead of difficult. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let friends do things for you today that you know for certain you can do better, because you might have to go behind them and clean up the mess they create.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is a likelihood you may get what you desire today, only to discover after you've gotten it that it really wasn't worth all the effort you had to expend to get it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Associates who usually show a willingness to cooperate with you might not be agreeable today, so to protect yourself, don't rely too heavily on their anticipated input.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be rather lucky today where your material interests are concerned, but you might not operate as impressively where your social life is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though someone is a close friend, don't attempt to pry into this person's business or financial affairs today and, by the same token, don't be too revealing about yours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It could be a grievous mistake to take things for granted today where your career is concerned, especially if you're attempting to negotiate a complicated deal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Some information from a usually reliable source may be passed on to you today, however, it shouldn't be taken for gospel. This is one of those times when the message may be distorted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This might not be a good day to take a financial risk on something where the control is in the hands of someone other than yourself. If it starts to go downhill, you won't be able to reach the brakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to avoid an arrangement today where another slips into a position where he/she makes decisions for you. It could turn out to be a bum set-up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If someone is performing some type of critical task for you today it might be wise to put your instructions in writing rather than issuing them verbally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Unless you have a definite limit in mind today, there is a strong likelihood you could spend too much money on frivolous activities while out on the town. Be budget-minded.

User groups give computer buffs a chance to talk shop

By LARRY BLASKO
Associated Press Writer

The personal computing program or gadget you bought is driving you nuts, and the salesperson's technical expertise seems limited to making correct change. Now what? A user group, that's what.

User groups are organizations devoted to solving the common problem that while all humans are smarter than computers, not all computers understand that. It's a way of sharing — in person or by telecommunications — the experience of personal computing so that each adventurer benefits from those who have gone before.

User groups can give you a quick and revealing critique of the latest hardware or software. Unlike computer magazines, they aren't constrained by early deadlines or limited space. And while all conscientious product reviewers try to write for the ordinary user, it's tough to be ordinary when you fiddle with a couple hundred software packages a year. Knowing that another hobbyist of similar experience likes a package is important.

Beyond the bargains of shared experience, user groups are great places to exchange homebrew software or shop for shareware, the commercial programs that you may try at low or no cost, paying only if you like the product.

Personal computers are still considered special enough to warrant user groups, so another benefit is meeting others who are special enough to work with the machines. If you think using a computer doesn't make you special, when's the last time you heard of a refrigerator or microwave user group.

The February issue of PC Resource magazine has a good overview of user groups, including a once-over-lightly listing, (necessarily so with an estimated 2,000 groups nationwide). Here's how to contact one large (30,000 members) group: Boston Computer Society, One Center Plaza, Boston, MA 02108. Phone 617-367-8080.

Once upon a time, maintaining corporate personal computers was easy — there weren't any. Now, with a welter of different PCs cluttering desktops throughout many companies, maintenance is complicated, often made more so by individuals who have customized the hardware and software of their desktop PCs.

The technical person summoned because the program froze or because some hardware is being stubborn often has to spend a lot of time with the cover off, just sorting out the quirky configuration before beginning to figure out why it isn't working. A program called System Sleuth by Dariana Technology Group Inc. can help.

System Sleuth, for $149.95, whips through the system and presents an accurate technical picture of who's doing what to whom and where as the software and hardware contend for system resources. In other words, it tells the technician where he is now — important information when you know where you want to go but are lost.

Installation is easy and the program comes with a straightforward manual and both 5.25- and 3.5-inch disks. It's not for the casual user, most of whom would identify an IRQ as a New York subway. (It's an Interrupt Request, a notice to the system to take care of pressing business and usually a recipe for trouble if two widgets are trying to make use of the same IRQ.)

The nice thing about System Sleuth is that it gives you some idea of the illness before you open the patient — and in some cases you may not even have to touch a screwdriver. For more information, Dariana Technology Group Inc., 7439 La Palma Ave., No. 278, Buena Park, CA 90620-2698. Phone 714-994-7400.

For CompuBug's 170-page book, "ABCs of Computing, a Plain-English Guide," send $10 to CompuBug, PO BOX 626, Summit, NJ 07901. Questions and comments of general interest are welcome at the same address.

Salvation Army reunites two sisters separated for 22 years

DEAR ABBY: Today I received a telephone call from a sister I had not seen or heard from in 22 years! We had lost track of each other through a misunderstanding, and neither one of us knew where the other one was.

You mentioned in your column about six months ago that the Salvation Army had a Missing Persons Locator Service, so I took a chance and contacted it. I was given a form to fill out, and all I had to pay was $5. The people at the service started their search.

It took them only six months to find my sister. She's living in Florida. They told her how to reach me, and she called me this morning. We both burst into tears!

Abby, please let your readers know about this wonderful service the Salvation Army performs. If I hadn't seen it in your column, I never would have known about it. God bless you.

MRS. JACQUELINE BOUCHARD, BIDDEFORD, MAINE

DEAR MRS. BOUCHARD: I'm glad I was able to help. That's what I'm here for.

Readers, the Salvation Army operates a Missing Persons Locator Service in the United States and 86 countries. This service is available to the public. Interested parties should be aware of the following basic guidelines:

1. The inquirer should be searching for a close relative.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Please do not request a search for old classmates, sweethearts, wartime buddies, friends or neighbors. And do not ask to find runaway adult children or someone who has left town owing you money.

2. The inquirer must be able to provide essential information about the missing person.
3. The Salvation Army reserves the right to reject any request for services that does not meet its standards.
4. The inquirer is asked to pay a $5 non-refundable fee.
5. To secure a missing persons inquiry form, contact the nearest Salvation Army office in your area. The addresses: 880 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60610-3392; 120 W. 14th St., New York, N.Y. 10011; 1424 Northeast Expressway, Atlanta, Ga. 30329-2088; 30840 Hawthorne Blvd., Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif. 90274.

DEAR ABBY: Please correct the large number of people (including people in the media — magazines, newspapers, television and public officials) who think that 1990 is the beginning of the last decade of the 20th century.

1990 is actually the last year of the ninth decade of this century. 1991 is the start of the last decade, and the year 2000 is the last year of this century.

Accurately speaking — counting 1990 — there are 11 years left in this century.

Let's not appear foolish before the world by celebrating the century change a year early — let's wait until Dec. 31, 2000, midnight — like the rest of the world.

11 AND COUNTING DOWN IN ALBANY

DEAR 11: According to the Information Please Almanac, you are correct. Since a decade is one through 10 — not one to 10 — we should not celebrate the beginning of the 21st century until the year 2001.

Calallen, Waco Midway clash in girls' 4A finals

AUSTIN (AP) — Since 1986, Calallen has stood by and watched as Levelland walked off with the Class 4A state championship.

Levelland finally was stopped in its quest for a fifth consecutive title, leaving Calallen to deal with Waco Midway, the team that eliminated Levelland.

The Lady Wildcats will try to shake a 13-year monkey off their backs Saturday when they enter into battle with Midway in the 4A finals of the 40th University Interscholastic League Girls' State basketball Tournament.

In Calallen's 13 trips to the final four, they have yet to claim the big prize despite appearing in the final game three times.

Midway, which won its 24th in a row to improve its season mark to 34-2, jumped out to a 21-point cushion early against tournament newcomer Mayde Creek and never looked back in a 51-42 victory.

The Pantherettes, who won their first state championship back in 1955 followed by four more in '69, '73, '75 and '76, counted on Judy Holcomb's 16 first-half points for the win.

Tasha Gordon and Missy Palacios each logged 10 points for Mayde Creek, which ends its season with a 24-11 record.

Calallen converted seven free throws in overtime, six by senior guard Stacy Sherman, to get past Dallas Lincoln Thursday night 68-62.

Sherman had 16 points to lead Calallen, now 38-1 on the season and winner of 27 consecutive games. Angela Aycock who came in averaging 30 points a game in the playoffs, rallied the Tigers with 32 points, 26 of those coming in the first half. Lincoln ends the year 24-7.

Abilene Wylie and Edna — two teams that ended 20-year droughts of state tournament appearances — will face off in the Class 3A finals.

Wylie, 31-2, used a 21-point cushion in the first quarter to roar past Groesbeck 68-42, while Edna, 31-3, stopped Canton's winning streak at 23 with a 64-52 victory.

Edna's last final four appearance was in 1965 when they won it all, while Wylie's last trip to Austin came in 1970 when they also won the state championship.

Missy Davis, finished with 26 points.

Melinda Ray led Groesbeck with nine points, 13 under her average.

Senior Laurie Hamilton sparked Edna to a 41-18 lead in the first quarter with 14 points and was perfect from the field on seven shots.

The 5-11 center finished with 17 points, behind Lisa Gerdes' game-high 20.

The trio of Christi Cox, Darra Stringer and Kathy Medley each hit for 10 points for Canton, 33-5, which lost to eventual state champion Hardin-Jefferson in last year's semifinal round.

The Nazareth Swiftettes will try for their third straight state championship and 11th overall Saturday when they face Moulton in the Class A finals.

Valvano under fire in wake of NCAA probes

By AL BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — At the moment, investigations of allegations of point-shaving at North Carolina State center on two men and their money: New Jersey Nets forward Charles Shackleford and New Jersey businessman Robert Kramer.

The outcome of the probes, which involve 11 states and will be turned over to prosecutors next week, could cost N.C. State almost $1 million.

"But many are not waiting for the investigations to end and are already calling for the ouster of Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano."

"The bottom line is, there are just too many unfortunate things that have happened during his tenure," university system Board of Governors member emeritus William Johnson told The Charlotte Observer. "I think in order to wipe away the stain, there's got to be a general cleaning out."

Johnson's wasn't the only call for Valvano's dismissal.

Some N.C. State faculty members began circulating a petition Thursday calling for the coach's ouster. The Technician, the student newspaper, planned a front-page editorial in today's edition calling for the same.

"Our editorial's going to say that we need to impose the death penalty on ourselves," editor Dwan June said. "As long as any remnant of Valvano remains, the university's reputation is shot."

Acting chancellor Larry K. Monteith wasn't ready to pass out judgments. But he said the school's basketball program is still under a review that began nearly a year ago and which has already forced Valvano to give up his job as athletic director.

The N.C. State basketball program has been under scrutiny since university and NCAA investigations uncovered academic abuses and NCAA violations involving players selling complimentary shoes and tickets.

During the investigations, former chancellor Bruce Poulton resigned and Valvano was dismissed as the university's athletics director. The university was placed under two years' probation by the NCAA.

ABC News, citing unnamed "inside sources," spurred the new investigations Wednesday night by reporting that as many as four Wolfpack players, including Shackleford, conspired to hold down the scores of four games for betting purposes during the 1987-88 season. Shackleford's lawyer and agent, Sal DiFazio of Bridgewater, N.J., has said his client never shaved points.

Last Sunday, after word had leaked that ABC News was working on the story, Shackleford told The News and Observer of Raleigh that he had taken money while playing for the Wolfpack.

On Thursday, DiFazio provided N.C. State with copies of two checks, saying the documents support their contention that Shackleford repaid money loaned to him. The News and Observer of Raleigh said.

One check copy, for $20,014.46, is dated Nov. 29, 1988, and made payable to Shackleford. It appears to have been endorsed over by Shackleford to Kramer.

The second check copy, for $40,000, is dated May 17, 1988, and made payable to Larry Gillman, a Connecticut sports agent who wanted to represent Shackleford when he turned pro, DiFazio said.

Gallagher leads illustrious field

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MIAMI — Jim Gallagher, not yet a winner in six seasons of PGA Tour activity, could be excused for casting some anxious glances over his shoulder.

Some of golf's more illustrious names are grouped within three strokes of Gallagher's lead going into today's second round of the Doral Open golf tournament.

There's Ben Crenshaw, Hale Irwin, Tom Kite, British Open champ Mark Calcavecchia, Greg Norman and Paul Azinger.

And the old Golden Bear himself, Jack Nicklaus.

"I'm pleased to see some results" from an unusually heavy practice schedule in recent weeks, Nicklaus said after a 4-under-par 68 that left him three behind Gallagher's opening 65.

"This was fun," the 50-year-old Nicklaus said.

Nicklaus played in the group with Gallagher and watched the late burst that put him in front.

"He just exploded," Nicklaus said.

"He made a couple of nice birdies on the 14th and 15th, then holed that (20-yard) bunker shot for the eagle on the 17th and all of a sudden he's seven under," Nicklaus said.

The burst was engineered with an old, familiar set of square-groove clubs Gallagher put back in his bag for the first time this year.

"I'd been using a new set when it looked like we were going to have to use the Vgrooves," Gallagher said. "Now, it doesn't look that way, so I went back to the old set."

Ben Crenshaw also used a more familiar feel to resurrect his putting touch and a 5-under-par 67 that he called "my best round this year."

"It's the first time this year I've had less than 30 putts in a round," said Crenshaw, long considered one of the game's great putters.

The problem this year, he said, was caused by a new grip he was forced to use on his putter.

Doral Open Golf

"The grip I'd used all my life was declared illegal last year," Crenshaw said.

So he changed grips on his putter this year. The results were terrible.

Earlier this week he taped the new grips so that "it feels like the old grip. It feels good. It gives me a little more confidence." The taping was inspected and approved by Tour officials.

Mike Hulbert came on with a bogey-free 66 in the ideal playing conditions and was second alone.

Crenshaw was tied with Irwin, a two-time U.S. Open winner, Clark Dennis, Phil Blackmar, Mike Reid, Bob Tway, Gary Koch, John Cook, Tom Purtzer and Fred Couples, winner of last week's Los Angeles Open.

Norman, Calcavecchia, Kite and Azinger were in the group tied with Nicklaus at 68.

Briefs

Golf

Volunteer workers are needed for a work party Saturday at the new Hidden Hills Golf Course north of the city. The workers are asked to report to the pro shop by 9:30 a.m.

Some surveying will be done, and work on the restrooms will be completed. Please bring a hammer, gloves and nail aprons if you have them.

Baseball

The Harvester baseball team opens the 1990 regular season today with a non-district game at River Road beginning at 5 p.m. The Harvesters will then host Dalhart in a doubleheader Saturday at noon.

The junior varsity squad travels to Canyon today for a 4:30 p.m. start and will play one game against the Dalhart J.V. on Saturday.

Softball

The City of Pampa Parks and Recreation Department will hold its annual organizational meeting for summer league softball in the City Commission Room at City Hall at 7 p.m. Monday, March 5.

Coaches and/or managers are urged to attend this meeting to obtain pertinent information concerning the leagues. Also, any players who would like to play but aren't already on a team are welcome to come and organize new teams.

Leagues involved during the spring/summer season are Men's and Women's Open League and Men's and Women's Church

Leagues

Roster forms, fact sheets and bylaws will be available at the meeting.

Fishing

The Pampa Bassmasters will meet Tuesday, March 6, at 7:30 p.m. in the Chamber of Commerce building at the corner of Ballard and Kingsmill.

The film Big Mouth will be shown during the program.

The public is invited to attend the meeting and visit with current Bassmasters members. For more information, contact Larry Parsley at 669-6461 or call Leroy Ogden at Ogden & Son.

Track

The boys and girls track teams continue early-season competition this weekend as each go on the road for the second meet of the year.

The Harvesters, fresh off a fourth-place finish at last week's Amarillo Invitational, will travel to Iowa Park Saturday for a one-day meet. They were originally scheduled to compete at Dalhart, but the meet was canceled.

The Lady Harvesters, who finished third at the Amarillo Invitational, will also journey to Iowa Park on Saturday.

Tennis

The Pampa High School tennis teams will travel to Borger Saturday morning to take on the Bulldogs at 10 a.m. See Sunday's edition for complete results.

Hornets beat Clippers in OT

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Charlotte Hornets, who have played like lambs this season, started March playing like lions.

The Hornets, losers of 17 of their previous 18 games, scored the last nine points of overtime Thursday night and beat the Los Angeles Clippers 118-109.

Charlotte already has as many victories in March as in February, when the Hornets were 1-11.

"I'm going to celebrate this one for the next 12 hours like it was a month," said Gene Littles, who is 2-12 since becoming the Hornets interim coach on Jan. 31. "But I'll be ready for practice at 10 tomorrow."

Rex Chapman and Armon Gilliam scored 21 points each for the Hornets, and Tyrone Bogues had 17 assists in a career-high 47 minutes.

"Our guys showed a lot of guts in overtime," Littles said. "We could have rolled over, but we didn't. We made the key stops and got the rebounds we needed at the end."

"We were so tired of losing that we turned it up a notch in overtime," said Chapman, who scored six points in the extra period. "We raised our level of play and did what it took to get the win."

In other games, it was Philadelphia 105, New York 100; Detroit 99, Washington 85; Sacramento 114, Orlando 100; Houston 112, Phoenix 104; Utah 119, Portland 102, and Denver 131, Cleveland 125.

Charles Smith scored 19 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter for the Clippers before fouling out with 2:06 left in overtime.

The Clippers scored two quick baskets in overtime, but did not get a point in the last 3:28. They missed their last five shots and committed two turnovers in the last 2:45.

Tom Garrick's layup with one second left in regulation tied the score 105-105 after Smith led the Clippers back from a 10-point deficit in the final period.

Rockets112

Suns104

Houston ended Phoenix's nine-game winning streak as Akeem Oluajun had 41 points, 14 rebounds and seven blocked shots.

The Rockets outscored the Suns 11-0 during a 3:40 span of the final quarter, giving Houston a 107-97 lead with 1:07 left.

Otis Thorpe had 24 points and 15 rebounds for the Rockets and Tom Chambers led the Suns with 23 points and 10 rebounds.

Pistons99

Bullets85

Detroit won for the 16th time in 17 games by holding Washington to a season low in points.

Isiah Thomas had 24 points for the Pistons, who are the first team in the NBA to be guaranteed a winning season.

Jeff Malone scored 19 to lead the Bullets, whose previous low for the season was 88 on Jan. 6 against Boston and again on Tuesday at Minnesota.

Spartans, Beavers closing in on NCAA tourney bids

By The Associated Press

Oregon State and Michigan State control their own destinies as far as getting automatic bids to the NCAA tournament.

No. 16 Oregon State earned the No. 1 seed in next week's Pac-10 tournament by defeating Arizona State 73-59 Thursday night.

"We're now the No. 1 seed in the Pac-10 tournament, that's the big thing," Coach Jim Anderson said. "We accomplished our goal."

Arizona can share the regular-season championship by defeating Oregon State in Tucson on Saturday but the Beavers have clinched the tie-breaker for the top seed.

Meanwhile, Steve Smith matched his career high with 36 points in leading No. 14 Michigan State to a 78-70 victory over No. 8 Michigan, giving the Spartans undisputed possession of first place in the Big Ten. Because the Big Ten doesn't have a postseason tournament, the regular-season champion gets an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

Michigan State (23-5, 12-3) has a half-game lead over Purdue, which was idle. The Spartans have won seven straight and ended a five-game losing streak against Michigan (20-6, 10-5).

"We're in the driver's seat. We control our own destiny," said Jud Heathcote, who coached the Spartans to the NCAA championship in 1979.

Gary Payton scored 22 points and Earl Martin had six of his 17 in a 24-8 second-half run as Oregon State (22-4, 15-2) clinched a tie for the Pac-10 title against Arizona State.

The Beavers trailed 29-28 at halftime and 34-31 with 16:23 to play before mounting their decisive run and beating the Sun Devils for the ninth consecutive time. Martin's 3-point shot gave Oregon State a 40-34 lead and his second 3-point shot at 55-42 with eight minutes left. Alex Austin had 23 points for Arizona State.

No. 14 Michigan St. 78, No. 8 Michigan 70

Smith scored 25 points in the second half and 13 in a 19-6 surge that put Michigan State ahead 67-53 with 7:01 remaining

Terry Mills, who valuated a career high in scoring 31 points for Michigan, scored 10 in a 13-2 run that brought the Wolverines to 69-66 with 2:47 left.

Matt Steigenga gave the Spartans a lift when he stripped the ball from Michigan's Michael Talley and scored on a dunk for a 72-66 lead. Two free throws apiece in the final minute by Steigenga and Mark Montgomery clinched the victory.

No. 2 UNLV 84, Utah St. 82
Larry Johnson scored 18 of his 31 points in the second half and David Butler added 24 points for UNLV, which survived despite missing 12 of 13 3-pointers. Utah State hit seven of 11 from long range, but led only once, 37-36.

The Rebels staged a 9-2 run and took their biggest lead of the second half at 72-64 on Greg Anthony's driving layup with 8:11 left.

No. 17 Minnesota 75, Indiana 70
Willie Burton scored 20 points, including nine of Minnesota's last 10. Minnesota led 62-56 with 7:22 to play. But Eric Anderson and Pat Graham scored five points each as Indiana went on a 10-1 spurt in the next three minutes.

Kevin Lynch had 15 points for Minnesota. Graham had 21 for Indiana.

No. 21 Louisville 86, Cincinnati 71
Seven-foot Felton Spencer anchored Louisville's inside attack with 16 points as the Cardinals clinched their fourth Metro Conference title in five years.

Louis Banks, Cincinnati's leading scorer with a 19-point average, had just one point in the first half and finished with eight.

No. 23 Arizona 84, Oregon 58
Sean Rooks ignited a 23-7 second-half run and was one of six Arizona players in double figures. Rooks scored 12 of his 15 points in the second half. Matt Othick made six of seven 3-point attempts and led Arizona with 18 points. Matt Muehlebach had 14 points as the Wildcats shot 58 percent.

No. 24 New Mexico St. 68, Pacific 55

Michael New led four Aggies in double figures with 16 points.

Pacific trailed 30-29 at halftime as Dell Demco scored 13 of his 27 points. New Mexico State pulled away with a 10-0 run early in the second half.
