Sadat: War May Flare Up Again If Negotiation Fails

By United Press International
Egyptian President Anwar Sadat warned his people today of the possibility of a new war with Israel should the Middle East peace talks break down again. As he did, the Egyptian and Israeli envoys flew to New York for talks with U.N. mediator Gunnar V. Jarring.

Jordan, also a party to the peace talks, was in the midst of a crisis involving Palestinian guerrillas and there was some confusion as to who would represent Jordan in New York. The guerrillas oppose both the current cease-fire and the talks.

The cease-fire does not involve the Syrian or Lebanon fronts and the Beirut newspaper Al-Anwar said Israeli tank gunners attacked a south Lebanon village Sunday, damaging at least 15 houses. The report said Israeli tanks hit the village of Shebaa for five hours and killed a number of people.

There was no official confirmation of the attack.

Gaza Troubles
Israel still was having trouble in the Gaza Strip and a military spokesman in Tel Aviv said Israeli troops killed an Arab guerrilla near a Gaza refugee camp today after he hurled a grenade at an Israeli patrol. Another grenade was hurled at an Israeli civilian vehicle.

The Egyptian president already has begun a worldwide diplomatic offensive to explain Egypt's position in the peace talks. Today, Sadat journeyed to the town of Tanta, 56 miles north of Cairo, to explain his policies to the Egyptian people. "The next battle will be a full-scale one, not only at the battlefield," he told a rally of thousands of cheering inhabitants. "We shall face it in the field, in the factory, in the city, in the street, in every town, everywhere."

"We have become stronger economically, militarily and politically," Sadat said, "and although the enemy is still strong we shall enter the battle at whatever cost. The enemy must pay the price because we are not fighting for the sake of war but to regain our land."

1971's First Skyjacking Carried Out By Blacks

Stork Braves Snowy Landing With First Baby

In spite of the fog, blowing snow and below freezing temperatures early Sunday, Mr. Stork made his first 1971 landing in Pampa, with a little help from Dr. E. S. Williams, Pampa obstetrician.

The pair welcomed Kimberly Michelle Moore at 8:07 a.m. Jan. 3, 32 hours after the beginning of the New Year.

The newest citizen of Gray County is the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Moore of Lefors, and the first granddaughter of maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Harkcom, also of Lefors. She has been officially declared the "First Baby of the Year" for Gray County and is Lefors' first New Year's Baby.

Kimberly was a "first" in those areas, but holds the record straight on the paternal side of her family. She is the fifth granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Moore, Laverne, Okla., who are the parents of seven boys; Kimberly's daddy and six others!

She is also welcomed by an uncle, Richard Harkcom, Lefors.

Her mother is a life-long Lefors resident and her father is a member of Lefors Schools coaching staff.

The young lady and her mother will receive many gifts from Pampa merchants who are participating as sponsors of the "First Baby of the Year" contest.

Date To Be Set For Bids On Auditorium

A meeting of the architect's committee for the M. K. Brown Memorial Auditorium has been set for 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Commission Room at City Hall.

City Manager Mack Wofford said today the committee will meet with Herbert Brasher, auditorium architect.

A date for the city to receive bids on construction of the auditorium is expected to be set, Wofford said.

State's 62nd Legislature Session To Be One Of Busiest In History

One week from Tuesday, on Jan. 12, the 62nd session of the Texas Legislature will convene in Austin. It will be one of the busiest and most important in history because legislators must solve some of the toughest problems ever:

Taxes and the Texas economy, redistricting, welfare, judicial reform, prison reform, drug abuse, pollution, pornography, highway safety, education, election law reform, automobile insurance, crime fighting, water needs, abortion.

United Press International's capital bureau in Austin previously prepared a seven-part series on the major issues facing the 62nd Texas Legislature.

Now, the three leaders who will have the most influence on the legislature — Gov. Preston Smith, Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and House Speaker Gus Mutscher — have prepared first reports for UPI on what they think are the most pressing problems.

Gov. Smith: "The greatest and most perennial question, of course, will probably be what to do about Texas fiscal affairs over the next two years. Our objective remains constant: to provide the finest possible services to all the people of Texas at the least possible cost to taxpayers."

Lt. Gov. Barnes: The problem of environmental pollution has become quiet serious and must be attacked with strength and determination. New proposals to guarantee the quality of our environment will occupy the attention of the 62nd legislature and substantive action in this area is imperative."

Speaker Mutscher: "Although Texas can boast one of the lowest tax rates among major states, there is still need for reform. We need a broad based program to support the governmental services of our state rather than a 'pick and punch' taxation program which would justly deserve criticism."

The dispatches are designed as a three-part series, but may be used together on year-end political pages. They are for release at will and will begin moving on this wire later today.

Mexican-American Coalition To Hold State-Wide Meet

DALLAS (UPI) — A coalition of Mexican-Americans called La Raza Unida will hold a state-wide conference Saturday. A spokesman said the meeting would not be political.

Organizers said the conference will be held to discuss issues and needs of Mexican-Americans and will feature a cross section of Mexican-American leaders from across the state including politicians, educators, community organizers and migrant workers.

Rene Martinez, one of the conference's organizers, said the meeting would be non-political and not affiliated with the La Raza Unida party, a third party political structure organized by Mexican-Americans in South Texas.

Weiss said the pistol was a .28 or a .350 Magnum, and he held it "about a foot from my head all the way."

"The first thing we did was to check the fuel," Weiss said. "The hijacker said, 'You'd better have enough because if you don't we're going to land in the ocean.'"

Highway Traffic Fatalities Stay Within Expected Range

By United Press International
Traffic fatalities during the long New Year's holiday weekend stayed within the expected range, compilations showed today, but delayed reports could push the figure beyond the 500 mark.

A UPI count at 9:30 a.m. EST, showed 440 persons killed in traffic between 6 p.m. Thursday and 11:59 p.m. Sunday.

The National Safety Council had estimated the toll would be between 400 and 500. A council spokesman said that because of hazardous driving conditions in the closing hours of the holiday period, "the final toll will probably wind up surpassing the council's estimate."

Hijackers Go To Cuba With Their Wives, Children

97 Passengers On DC8 Plane Back In Miami

By MARTIN McREYNOLDS
MIAMI (UPI) — The first hijacking of 1971 came three days into the new year. The script has changed very little since the first hijacking almost 10 years ago.

In each instance, the craft was a National Airlines plane, the hijacker was armed and quickly took control of the flight. Sunday's occurred as a flight from Los Angeles prepared to land at Tampa.

"This man walked into the cockpit with a big cannon and said we're going to Havana—and that's what we did," said Capt. Carl Weiss, the pilot.

The DC8 jet carried 97 persons, considerably more than the National airliner with 11 persons aboard that was diverted to Cuba by an armed Cuban during a flight from Miami to Key West on May 1, 1961—the first hijacking.

Hijacker Is Armed
The hijacking Sunday was carried out by a Negro armed with a pistol, but when the plane landed in Havana, another black passenger waved a pistol and escorted two women and three children—apparently the wives and children of the hijackers—off the plane.

The passengers remaining in Cuba were listed only as Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Jones.

The Jones couple had children, 4 and 6, and the Johnson family was listed as having a non-ticketed infant.

The first gunman asked stewardess Dorothy Amato for a drink of water as the jet approached Tampa on a flight from Los Angeles to Miami.

Gun Underneath Cover
"When I brought him the water, he pulled a cover off his lap and he had a gun underneath it," she said. "He grabbed my arm and marched me up the aisle and got to the cockpit from Janice (stewardess Janice Lovelady) and went into the pilot's compartment."

Weiss said the pistol was a .28 or a .350 Magnum, and he held it "about a foot from my head all the way."

"The first thing we did was to check the fuel," Weiss said. "The hijacker said, 'You'd better have enough because if you don't we're going to land in the ocean.'"

The pilot said the hijackers gave no reason for wanting to go to Cuba.

The jet was in Cuba more than four hours while Cuban authorities questioned the passengers, who said they were well treated. It returned to Miami late Sunday morning.

Passenger Train Delayed 5 Hours In Pampa Today

Chicago-bound travelers on the Santa Fe Chief No. 2 braved blizzards through New Mexico last night only to experience another weather-caused problem early today in Pampa.

The unscheduled stop in Pampa became necessary about 20 minutes after the train developed boiler problems just east of Pampa.

The passenger compartments began cooling off when the heat conducting lines began to freeze co-operation and hospitality" temperature and cold winds.

After the stop, travelers were destined to a nearly six hour stay in Pampa while repairs were made.

Pampa restaurant owners took part in the dilemma by heating passengers and serving gallons of hot coffee and refreshments during the repair time.

The Santa Fe line placed emergency messages for the stranded travelers during the wait.

According to J. E. Langley, Amarillo, spokesman for Santa Fe, "When the boiler went out, the wind blowing under the cars froze the steamlines. We of Santa Fe would like to thank the citizens of Pampa for their co-operation and hospitality."

At 11:20 a.m. the train was still in Pampa, but officials expressed hopes that a noon departure was possible.

Nixon To Meet Press On Television Tonight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon scheduled a mini news conference for tonight with four television correspondents in what apparently was one of a series of efforts to widen contacts with the press.

The hour-long "conversation," announced last week, follows a surprise social get-together with a handful of reporters on New Year's Eve.

The television interview, billed as a discussion of the presidency "in depth and perspective," will be staged in the ground floor library of the White House, a new setting for television audiences.

Nixon will be questioned by Eric Sevareid of CBS, John Chancellor of NBC, and Howard K. Smith of ABC. A fourth panelist, Nancy Dickerson, will represent Public Broadcasting Service.

There will be no limit on the subject of the questions, but the White House was hoping Nixon would have time to philosophize about the presidency and his personal approach to decision-making.

Nixon's last television conversation was held July 1 at the ABC Studios in Beverly Hills, Calif., and was limited to questions about foreign policy. The newsmen were on that panel, but not Mrs. Dickerson.

The White House soothed the writing press by giving assurances that tonight's show would not be in lieu of a news conference. Aides hint he may hold more news conferences in the future, but made no promises of regularity.

The President returned to the White House shortly before noon Sunday after spending a long holiday weekend with his family and friends at Camp

David, Md. While at his mountain top retreat he signed several bills, conferred with key aides, and watched football games on television. He had more bill signings today, but no public appointments before his broadcast.

After spending more than 50 consecutive days at the White House, except for weekends at his nearby Maryland retreat, Nixon tentatively planned to visit San Clemente, Calif., probably leaving at midweek.

He planned to work on his State of the Union address which he is expected to deliver to Congress in person Jan. 22. He also was wrapping up his new federal budget for the 1972 fiscal year and preparing the Congress.

SEOUL (UPI) — Bishop Thomas Quinlan, an Irish priest who devoted his life to missions in the Far East and was imprisoned by the Japanese and Communist Chinese, died Thursday, according to reports reaching here today.

Quinlan, 74, suffered a heart attack Christmas Eve and his condition declined steadily until he died shortly before midnight on New Year's Eve, an official at St. Joseph Clinic in Samchook said.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Requiem Mass will be celebrated today for Joseph Lilly, veteran composer-conductor who scored numerous television musicals and motion pictures, including "Paint Your Wagon."

Lilly, 57, died at his home Friday.

North, West Texas Hit By Season's 1st Major Storm

By United Press International
The first major storm of the winter season left the Texas Panhandle blanketed with four inches of snow today, hundreds of motorists were temporarily stranded, phone lines were down and temperatures plunged toward zero.

The blizzard, far worse than original forecasts indicated it would be, began Saturday night and struck with full fury Sunday.

Major highways were closed, and for a time the town of Dumas—less than 50 miles from the Oklahoma border—was isolated.

Roads throughout the Panhandle, however, were either open or about to be opened early today.

"There were 40 motorists stranded for a time at a farm-house between Dumas and Hartley (near U.S. 80)," said Amarillo Department of Public Safety spokesman Kenneth White.

"The Sheriff's Department at Dumas transported those people into Dumas. 'There were lots of people who had to stay in Dumas and Dalhart because of the roads.'"

"We've got probably 500 stranded motorists in the town in private homes," said Mrs. Colleen Lawrence, a dispatcher for the Dalhart police department.

"The highway to Dumas was blocked, and most of the highways going into Oklahoma are still blocked. There is ice and snow on the roads, and it is packed and dangerous."

"We had only one minor injury that we know of, but things have been so hectic. And we had pretty wonderful cooperation in town. Churches have banded them down and people are in homes everywhere."

Travelers Not Discouraged
"Our only trouble has been in discouraging people from trying to travel on this morning. They seem anxious to try to travel." Heavy snow began falling again early today in the Guadalupe Mountains of West Texas, and travel in that area was discouraged.

The DPS in Austin said a 10-to-15 mile stretch of U.S. 80. The hardest hit section of traffic. At least four inches of snow covered Guadalupe Pass, and more was falling.

The hardest hit section of Texas Sunday, however, was that part of the Panhandle north of Amarillo.

Telephone service to the towns of Panhandle and Claude was knocked out because of snow on the phone lines. Schools in those towns, as well as in Dumas, were closed today.

The snow, which measured generally in the four-inch range throughout the northern Panhandle, was not the main cause of closing the major highways such as U.S. 87 and U.S. 287 along with dozens of smaller roads.

The chief trouble was the wind, which gusted to 45 miles an hour and sent snow blowing across the highways into two-foot drifts.

The low temperatures, along with the high winds, put the storm in the official "blizzard" category, and sent the chill factor in parts of the Panhandle Sunday down to 38 degrees below zero.

Amarillo and Dalhart both recorded low temperatures of 4 degrees above zero early today. The low in Lubbock was 9 degrees.

The Weather Bureau said the minimum in the northern Panhandle by early Tuesday could drop as low as zero. A slight warming trend was forecast in the area for Tuesday afternoon.

The freezing line dipped into Central Texas early today as the cloudy conditions began to clear over much of the state. The only evidence of clouds remaining was in South Central and Southeast Texas.

As the heavy snow fell in the Panhandle Sunday, Brownsville recorded a high of 74 degrees.

A severe weather watch was also issued in connection with the storm system in parts of North Central Texas Sunday. But although thunderstorms were reported south of the Red River and through the Dallas-Fort Worth area, there was no report of turbulence.

Worst Storm In 30 Years Blasting Midwest States

An intense storm blasted the Midwest today with heavy snow and high winds.

In Iowa the storm was described as the worst in nearly 30 years. Traffic there was at a virtual standstill. Businesses closed. Mail deliveries were canceled. Government offices were shutdown. Hundreds of motorists were stranded.

The Iowa Patrol and Highway Commission said the state's interstate roads were impassable. At least three deaths in Iowa were caused by the storm, authorities said. Two of the victims died of heart attacks after shoveling snow.

Additional snow amounts of more than 4 inches were expected from northeast Iowa through northern Wisconsin and Michigan. Travelers warnings were in effect from northeast Kansas and eastern Nebraska, through Iowa and portions of eastern Minnesota.

The new snow accumulation totaled 16 inches at Harmony, Minn.

The Nebraska Highway Patrol requested that Kansas close all roads entering Nebraska because of a "serious backup" of traffic, severe weather and road conditions.

AFTER SUNDAY BLIZZARD

Near-Zero Is Forecast In Pampa Again Tonight

By TEX DEWESE News Staff Writer A bright sun tried its best to...

Locally, there was an inch of snow that produced about 10 degrees of moisture after Saturday's blizzard.

The temperature dropped to near zero in Pampa early today after a high of only 23 Friday afternoon.

The weatherman says the snow is over, but the mercury is expected to skid down near zero again tonight.

The first real cold spell of winter moved in around Saturday midnight when the misting rain that had been falling changed to snow and then set in for a full day of blizzard-like conditions with the snow whipped by high winds.

Although winter's first attack hit Pampa hard and kept many people at home all day, it was worse north of the Pampa area where the snowfall was much heavier.

Schools were closed today in Dumas, Spearman, Dalhart, Gruver, and Sisseton in Texas and Liberal, Kan.

crews were out early to spread sand. City officials said the high winds cleared the streets and eliminated the problem of snow removal.

Police Chief Jim Conner said this forenoon no major problems were presented locally with the exception of a half dozen or so minor traffic mishaps.

Conner said there had been ten traffic accidents reported in the city since the first of the year and seven of them were during weekend storm.

Probably one of the cold weather happenings that affected most persons was the blackout of cable television during the Dallas Cowboy-San Francisco football game for the NFL championship late Sunday afternoon.

Cable TV went off the air about midway in the first quarter of the game and was off in all areas until nearly halfway through the third quarter.

Wayne Stedham, manager of Pampa Cable TV, Inc., said the interruption in service was caused by the severe cold weather.

"The extremely cold temperatures unplugged the main connector on Kentucky Street," Stedham said, "and put us completely out of business."

Stedham said a three-man crew worked for nearly three hours in the cold to make the repairs.

"It was just one of those things," Stedham said, "and of course it couldn't have happened at a worse time—right when the football fans were watching the big game."

Sixteen members of the Pi Delta Pi Chapter of the Junior Order Knights of Pythias were snowed in at Red River, N.M., where they had gone on a four-day ski trip.

The group left Pampa Thursday morning and was scheduled to start back Sunday. Heavy snow in the Red River area closed highways yesterday and they didn't get started back until about 10 a.m. today. They were due in Pampa this afternoon.

The snow and freezing temperatures turned Pampa's park areas, trees and shrubbery into a winter wonderland that held its picturesque through most of Sunday until today's sun erased most of it.

Fifty Three Dead In Texas Traffic

By United Press International Auto crashes in Texas kept a breakneck pace during the New Year's weekend, killing more than 50 people in any other state.

The Corpus Christi accident involved a caravan of cars returning to nearby Robstown after a New Year's Eve party. One car rammed another, knocking it into a 10-foot deep ditch and killing all four young persons inside.

Other violent deaths, including 11 homicides, two drownings and one fatality caused by the crash of a light aircraft, boosted the overall violent death toll to 67.

The city says it is not responsible since the slide was in Marin County, just outside the city. The county wants to know if the land owner is responsible.

At the time of the slide, the land was owned by Thomas Collier, who lives in Granada, Spain. Since then he has sold it to his daughter, Melinda Roweddo, who lives in Berkshire, England.

Senators Are Mapping New Assault Against Rules Allowing Slowdowns

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate leaders, frustrated by a series of filibusters that crippled the body in the closing days of the 91st Congress, are mapping a new assault against rules which allowed the slowdowns.

The move will trigger a new filibuster when the 92nd Congress convenes Jan. 21.

At least seven effective filibusters made a shambles of the late going in the 91st Session, which ended Saturday. Reformers have announced plans to reduce from two-thirds present and voting to three-fifths the number needed to choke off a filibuster.

The attempt will be countered by the usual filibuster by small-state conservatives and Southerners.

Early action has been promised by Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, on increases in Social Security benefits. The increases will be made retroactive to Jan. 1.

President Nixon's proposal for welfare reforms, which would include a $1,600 guaranteed income to every family, also has been promised early consideration.

Other important issues in the backlog of legislation include a plan to revamp the Selective Service System to provide an all-volunteer Army, import quotas, and revenue sharing with the states.

In addition, the administration is working on a new health insurance recommendation, Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Republican leader in the Senate, has said he would like the 92nd Congress to be known as the "health rights Congress."

Before the new Congress opens, House Democrats will meet to choose new leaders. Speaker John McCormack of Massachusetts retired at the end of the 91st Congress. His job will go to Rep. Carl Albert of Oklahoma, now the majority leader, who will not be opposed.

But there will be a battle for the majority leader position. Among the candidates are Reps. Hale Boggs of Louisiana, B.F. Sisk of California, James G. O'Hara of Michigan, Morris K. Udall of Arizona, Wayne L. Hays of Ohio and Edward P. Boland of Massachusetts.

There also may be attempts in the Senate to unseat Scott and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the Democratic whip.

Democrats in the House plan an attempt to take the chairmanship of the District of Columbia Committee away from Rep. John L. McMillan, D-S.C. It is part of a campaign against the seniority system.

Pampa Police Receive Three Theft, Vandalism Reports

Burglary reports were filed by Pampa Police Sunday following calls from two Pampa business operators.

Police were called to Jiffy Laundry, 721 W. Brown at 8:23 a.m. Sunday by J. H. Stansell, 125 E. 27th, after he discovered that two penny gum vendors had been taken from the north wall of the laundry.

The machines reportedly were owned by R. C. Rowden, 2200 N. Dwight. Value of the vendors and contents was set at $75. The laundry door was not locked at the time of the theft.

A. L. Leonard, operator of the Carpet Discount Center, 308 W. Foster, reported a break-in to police Sunday. Officers on the scene found that someone had used a large trash container for a step to gain entrance through a thirty by thirty inch window, 10 feet above the ground on the west side of the building.

The burglar's search of the building indicated that money was the object of the break-in, according to the report. Drawers in the office had been searched, but nothing has been reported missing by the owner.

A vandalism report at 8:12 p.m. Sunday sent officers to Ward's Mini Mart No. 3 on Perryton Parkway. The front window of the store had been damaged by what officers believed was a BB or pellet rifle. No damage estimate was made.

M. T. Harmon, 234 Duncan, reported theft of tires, tubes and wheels from a pick-up parked in his driveway to Pampa Police Sunday.

The complainant advised the investigating officer that the three tires, tubes and wheels were taken during his absence Dec. 27-Dec. 31. He placed a value of $315 on the stolen items.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Robert E. Lusk, former president of the Benton & Bowles Advertising Agency, died Saturday at his home in Manhattan. He was 68.

His mother explained that after watching the lad break a leg on the first Sundays of 1969 and 1970 "we just weren't about to take any chances. We're not superstitious—just cautious."

Three-Billion-Dollar Project Is Created To Renovate Houston

By DARRELL MACK
HOUSTON (UPI) — The real estate developments got so big in 1970 that they started measuring apartments in acres.

Three billion dollar projects were created to renovate the downtown Houston area and turn pastures near the Astrodome into parking, shopping centers, office buildings and apartments.

The most ambitious project is the $1.5 billion Houston Center which will transform a 74-acre area east of Main Street downtown into something out of the 21st century.

Another is Allen Center, a $1 billion project fathered by Trammel Crow of Dallas, will turn a 21-acre site west of Main Street downtown into a series of plazas, office towers and a 2,000-seat legitimate theater.

The third major project is the $1 billion Plaza Del Oro, a 525-acre area shaped like a half dome. This "city within a city" will be bigger than the highly-publicized century city in Los Angeles and cover about a much ground as New York City's Central Park.

It will consist of 146 acres of apartments, 158 acres of offices, 126 acres of commercial facilities, 45 acres of streets and utilities and 50 acres for a hospital.

The first construction, 35 acres of apartments, or 1,200 units, will start early next year. The "Plaza of Gold" is being developed by the Shell Oil Co.

Shell already has started moving its headquarters from New York to a 50-story office building, Shell Plaza I, the tallest building west of the Mississippi River, and will complete that move when the structure is finished next year.

New York City and Los Angeles in construction for the first 10 months of 1970 with $362 million in permits, a 2.6 per cent increase over 1969, when it was fourth behind Chicago.

The construction boom is so loud in Houston that it is building six times as much now as it built in the entire 10 years between 1940 and 1960.

And this total does not include any part of Houston Center and only one building in Allen Center. That is a 34-story tower under construction.

The center will have another matching 34-story tower, a 50-story office building and an 18-story hotel.

The Houston Center, which will be built in three phases over 20 years, will consist initially of a 70-story office building, a 55-story building and 50-story circular hotel. Construction of this phase will begin in 1971 in a nine-square block area. Most of the first five stories of these buildings will be tied together as a parking garage with a huge escalator leading from the sidewalks on the perimeter up six stories to the lobbies of the sky scrapers.

The sixth level will consist of a concourse of shops with a park and will be connected with moving, air conditioned sidewalks and electric trains in plexiglass tubes.

The entire Houston Center, conceived by Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., will be rimmed with a freeway and will have a covered expressway connecting the now decaying Central Railroad passenger station. The station is expected to be remodeled as the center of the city's mass transit system and the cover over the expressway will be a runway for short take-off and landing aircraft.

With an office building with a landing strip, made even Howard Hughes will come back home.

Ban On Cigarette Commercials On Television, Radio Goes Into Effect

NEW YORK (UPI)—The law banning cigarette commercials on television and radio went into effect at 12:01 a.m. EST Saturday after the tobacco companies took advantage of the New Year's holiday and saturated the bowl game telecasts with timeout commercials.

They continued without letup almost to the last minute, with three cigarette commercials in the final 15 minutes of the pre-midnight segment of NBC-TV's Johnny Carson Show. Virginia Slims signaled the end of an era with its "You've Come a Long Way, Baby" message that cleared at 11:59 p.m.

There was one more commercial before midnight, but that was used by a dog food company.

Philip Morris Inc., makers of the high-selling Marlboro, bought 25 minutes of network times on the last day. The man from Marlboro Country rode off at 11:48 p.m.

The broadcast media had been taking in about $250 million a year in cigarette advertising. Not all of it will go up in smoke, however. Pipe tobacco and cigar advertising still are permissible under the new law and some companies plan to expand their broadcast budgets for these products. The Television Bureau of Advertising expects other major companies to buy more time. Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s television budget for the first three months of 1971 is up 123 per cent, for example.

Cigarettes and their brand names will not be completely out of sight on television. Manufacturers are planning such events as auto race, golf and bowling tournaments with the sponsoring companies to get mention during broadcast coverage.

Whether the ban on commercials will result in people giving up smoking or not starting is debatable. Tobacco companies say that cigarette consumption has not been reduced in England, Italy and other countries that have restricted advertising.

Antismoking forces say the ban will mean less smoking among the young. They have petitioned the networks to continue antismoking announcements.

Window On The World

By United Press International
Communists Blame Themselves

Official Communist commentators are conceding that the party itself—which in the past could do no wrong—is in effect responsible for the recent riots in Poland which overthrew the leadership. With words such as "illness still exists in the (political) organism" and "there is no individual who does not make mistakes" the Polish political magazine, Polityka, admitted that faults do lie in the regime. It urged the new leadership to adopt a new style of decision making. The eventual response of those in power is yet to be seen, but the soul-searching is in itself a novel development that will certainly be followed with interest.

French losing influence in Africa: France's efforts to maintain cultural influence—largely undiminished in spite of its departure from Algeria, Tunisia and Morocco—is coming under growing attack from the three former French colonies. Local intellectual circles in Algiers claim continued teaching of the French language and civilization leads to a split cultural personality among students and they are demanding a major effort to "Arabize" completely the curriculae.

Romulo to carry on: Despite speculations about a revamp in Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos' cabinet, Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Romulo is expected to remain in his post. The 71-year old author-soldier-statesman-diplomat, is probably the most well-known Filipino overseas and is highly regarded. Current talk in Manila is that Romulo might be persuaded to return to his old post as ambassador to Washington, but reliable government sources say if there would be any cabinet changes, Romulo is not expected to be affected, mainly because of the prestige he packs in his job as foreign secretary.

TV In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—The big television event of the New Year's weekend was, of course, the disappearance of cigarette commercials from the home screen, in compliance with a government ban.

The cigarette firms naturally will allot their advertising funds to other outlets now. And they have made it known that, as an example, they will promote such happenings as sports events that will likely plug their brands in a way that video cameras could not help pick up.

But make no mistake about it, such promotions are strictly small potatoes compared with the body blow the cigarette industry suffered as a result of the television ban.

Past surveys in England, for instance, have made rather clear that a television ban on cigarette commercials is not too likely to cause most smokers to stop buying their favorite butts, although other later statistics indicate antismoking ads have had solid effect.

Americans Will Enjoy Eight Long Weekend Holidays

WASHINGTON (UPI)—This is the year Americans will begin enjoying those long, three-day weekends provided by Congress more than two years ago with a liberal juggling of federal holidays.

And 1971, the year the holiday-juggling law takes effect, is a bonus year. Four holidays Congress didn't tamper with already fall on or adjacent to weekends, giving Americans eight long weekends.

From now on, George Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Columbus Day—a new federal holiday—and Veterans Day will be celebrated on Mondays, regardless of the date.

The other four holiday weekends this year are for Christmas, New Year's, July 4 and Labor Day. Although the law only affects federal employees and federally operated and controlled institutions, most of the U.S. businesses were expected to go along with the plan. At least 45 state legislatures have created state holidays on one or more of the federal dates.

News Brief

TOO MUCH TRAFFIC. BUDAPEST (UPI)—More Danonkos decided traffic at a busy Budapest intersection was too much for him Sunday. He whipped out a long knife and began threatening pedestrians and forcing drivers to leave their autos.

LOTS OF WEATHER. DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI)—One shift at the National Weather Service Station here had to work 18 hours Sunday. The replacement crew members were snowed in at home.

"DON'T SPEND IT" KOBE, Japan (UPI)—Police who arrested Shoichi Fujita, 48, on a charge of shoplifting two cream puffs from a bakery found three million yen ($8,500) in a package taped to his stomach.

INCIDENTS CONTINUE. BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—A gunman fired four shots at a police van Sunday night in Belfast's Crumlin Road District, police said today. One of the bullets struck the vehicle but no one was hurt, they said.

Cut Your Own Taxes: 3

Dependent Deductions Up

By RAY DE CRANE
Enterprise Publications

Everybody who ever filed an income tax return knows that a new baby in the family is worth an additional $600 dependency credit. Right?

Not this year it isn't. For 1970, if you are filing a joint return, you, your wife, ever dependent child and any other person who qualifies as a dependent is worth $625 on that return.

From this you might assume that if several dependents appear on the return your tax will be substantially reduced from last year or that you will get a much bigger refund than before. You could be wrong again.

Beginning last July 1 new withholding tax tables were introduced reflecting this higher allowance. It probably resulted in a somewhat smaller deduction from your pay check for withholding tax purposes.

In effect, then, you have been enjoying your tax "cut" since last July and it probably will not make much difference now. You would be correct, however, in assuming that your total tax bill for this year will be smaller than it was a year ago. If income remained the same.

This reduction in total taxes also comes from another circumstance. A year ago you paid a tax surcharge of 10 per cent. This was reduced to 5 per cent beginning Jan. 1, 1970. It was eliminated completely on July 1. So, spreading it over the full year of 1970 you have an effective surcharge of 2½ per cent.

With the upping of the dependency credit to $625 also comes another change. Persons qualifying as your dependent are now permitted to make anything less than $625 before they are eliminated from consideration.

This limitation on income applies to every dependent except your children under 19 and other older children who qualify as students—meaning they attended school full-time for at least five months of 1970.

For those two groups—your children under 19 and older children who are students—there is no income limitation. This does not remove one other important requirement. You must furnish their chief support—that is, more than 50 per cent of their total support—before you are eligible to claim them.

Pen That Doesn't Write But 'Sees'

Science Today
By ELDON BARRETT
SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—A pen that doesn't write but "sees" has been developed at the University of Washington as part of a research project that may eventually revolutionize efforts to overcome the handicap of blindness.

The project appropriately is entitled SPECS, an acronym for "sequentially patterned electrocutaneous stimulation." Dr. Sam Sparks, an instructor at the school's center for bioengineering, has developed a reading pen which uses a photoelectric cell to enable the user to actually hear and feel the shape of a letter by scanning a printed page.

Pen is Stepping Stone
But Sparks says the pen is merely a stepping stone in the development of a pair of glasses which would transform into electrical impulses light patterns falling on the glasses. Shapes and shades would vary the intensity of the impulses which the wearer would feel through tiny electrodes in the bows of the spectacles.

The ultimate aim of the project is to overcome the three basic handicaps of the blind: Mobility, recognizing objects at a distance and reading printed material. Dr. Sparks stressed that the devices would not be designed to reproduce the visual sense, but rather to substitute the sense of feeling for vision.

By the Northwest Foundation for the Blind, other foundations and individuals as well as the university. The National Institute of Health also has been asked to obtain funds for further research.

Dr. Sparks' Aides
Aiding Dr. Sparks are Suzanne Anderson and Sandra Ruconich, both seniors from Seattle. They can read specially prepared block printing. Their first step was to learn the printed alphabet.

Hollywood In Review

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Every actor in Hollywood, and not a few in Italy, are scrambling for the role of "The Godfather" or the part of one of his sons.

Mario Puzo, author of the highly esteemed novel and screen-writer of the story as well, has said he will attempt to cast the major roles with Italians or Americans of Italian extraction.

Anthony Franciosa, Ben Gazzara and Sal Mineo are too young.

Anthony Quinn would make a fine godfather—you will remember him as the Italian mayor in "The Secret of Santa Vittoria." He is a possibility.

Best bet of all among American-Italians is Ernest Borgnine.

Borgnine, moreover, salivates at the thought of winning the role.

PATTERNS... RIGHT ON

Zig Zag knows where it's going, and it's heading up the '70's with a design that recalls the Thirties but is just right for the space age! Bates has taken stripes and given them a fresh viewpoint that says a lot about environment. Tones of pinks and purples are very much "new" for teens, while the brown combination will make any man a king. Best of all, Zig Zag is machine wash-and-dry, no ironing required, making every housewife a queen.

NEW YORK (ED)—What's hot in home fashions? Prints are hot, in smashing color combinations. Patterns have pizzazz and the finest homes are sporting them on walls, floors, beds and tables. Some of the patterns are big and bold, others are small and abstract, but all of them give a fresh, sizzling look to homes.

Prints are such an easy way to decorate a room. Just pick a print—any print—and then use the colors in it to do the whole room. The darker color will usually serve as the color for your carpet while some of the medium values are excellent for wall and drapery colors, plus upholstery. Save the light, bright values for accents such as lamps and other accessories like throw pillows. Just make sure you pick a print!

Can we tell your fortune, lady? Can we tell you that a Starshine tablecloth, complete with fantastic animals of the zodiac, will bring you much pleasure in the future? Bates' new table round also promises a carefree year with machine wash-and-dry and no pressing!

Danish Students Win Right To Democracy

By PATRICIA CLOSE
COPENHAGEN, Denmark (UPI)—Danish students have officially won the right to democracy at their universities but the battle has not stopped there. Everyone seems to have a different idea of what is meant by democracy.

On June 4, 1970, the Danish Folketing (parliament) passed a law on university government that one member of the legislature described as one of the most advanced in Europe.

For the first time students and non-professional teaching staff were given a say in the running of their universities—finance, curricula, research, administration.

It was the first such advance at Copenhagen University since the 15th century.

But instead of pleasing everyone, the law satisfied very few and touched off a controversy between the students and Education Minister Heige Larsen that a public debate, questions in parliament and arbitration have failed to resolve.

Denmark (population 4.9 million) has three universities—Copenhagen, Aarhus, Odense—with a total of 44,000 students. The Education Ministry wants direct democracy, that is, all students and staff annually to vote their representatives directly to the University senate and to their own faculties, research and working committees.

Law Gives Seats
The law gives the students one-third of the seats on each of these governing bodies. The teachers get two-thirds.

Students at Copenhagen and Aarhus reject direct democracy as an attempt to bypass the student councils. They want voting for places on the student councils to continue with those elected then, filling the places on the governing bodies from their own ranks.

"As in all politics it's a question of power," said Ernst Goldschmidt, an official of the education ministry. "The well established student councils want to maintain their positions and take all the student seats. So they're against representatives from outside the councils."

Boerge Klemmensen, chairman of the Copenhagen University student council, said: "We stand for the end to social discrimination in higher education in Denmark where very few students come from poor homes. Even our right wing agrees on this. We have demonstrated with young workers and we like to connect this with the ministers wanting to get rid of us."

Wants Politics Included
Klemmensen said they felt university business also should include issues such as Vietnam and other political questions.

Odense University has voted to accept the Education Ministry proposal.

But the dissenting Copenhagen and Aarhus institutions have the support of the Danish National Union of Students, The Civil-Service Graduates Union, among them most university staff, has officially kept out of the controversy as have most university heads.

Student elections are scheduled for later this year. Said Copenhagen Rector Mogens Fog:

"It is a very complicated question but it is between the students and the ministry. I have no comment, no opinion. I am passive and mute."

TEXTILE TOPICS
Creative Home Sewing

This year, as styles change and prices go up, up, up, more women will be turning to home sewing. After all, one way to make sure the price is right and the style is exactly what you want is to do it yourself.

Whether you're a beginner or an expert, consider these steps before you start sewing: Before you shop, look at your current wardrobe to see what you need most and also what you may want to wear with what you'll make. Go to the fabric counter with notes on colors and kinds of fabrics you want.

One of the most fashionable fabrics this year is a crepe made of Arnel triacetate or Fortrel polyester. These fabrics are excellent choices for elegant party dresses with the 30's look, short day shifts and luxurious blouses. Check bolt ends and hangtags for recommended care; some crepes may be washable but others will retain their best appearance if drycleaned. Here are some tips for sewing these crepes:

If slight shrinkage is expected to present a problem, shrink the fabric before cutting. This can be done by laundering, or if drycleaning is recommended, you can usually preshrink the fabric satisfactorily by pressing on grain with a steam iron.

Pin the fabric carefully on grain without stretching it. Use a cotton-covered polyester thread when sewing. Loosen the tension on your sewing machine, use a sharp, fine needle (#9) and a medium stitch (12-15 per inch). Use stay-stitching at the armholes and other stress points. When choosing lining fabric and tape, choose those which are compatible in weight, color, and care procedures with the crepe. After the garment is finished, steam press it on the wrong side. If you're pressing on the right side, use a pressing cloth to avoid glazing the fabric.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I do stenographic work in an office which employs 25 women. Last week, word came down from the brass in the front office: "Women are not permitted to wear pants in the office." Some of the women here wouldn't wear pants to work if they were permitted to, but that's not the point.

I believe in the democratic system, and think a vote should be taken, and let the majority rule. A word from you might help.

FOR DEMOCRACY
DEAR FOR: I'm for democracy, too, but a word from me wouldn't mean a thing to the brass in your office. (If you'll forgive the analogy, "the inmates are not running the asylum.") Most employers bust their britches to keep the help happy but since it's not that way where you work, hitch up your trousers and look elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in regard to your book entitled "Dear Teenager." It was for me an interesting and helpful book because I could see myself in those letters you got from teenagers. I think your advice was wonderful and I am going to try to live up to all the things you talked about, especially with my parents and boys.

THANK YOU FOR WRITING IT.
LUCY IN ASHVILLE, N.C.
DEAR LUCY: Your letter delights me, because I wrote "Dear Teenager" 10 years ago and now I am more convinced than ever that we don't need "new" rules to live by, we just need the common sense and strength to live by the old ones.

DEAR ABBY: I gave my husband a toupee for Christmas. (He had to go down to have it fit and cut, but I paid for it, and it wasn't cheap either.) I think it looks great on him and so does everyone else, but here's my problem: He wears it during the week, but he refuses to wear it on weekends. He says it's not comfortable, he just wants a rest from it for a couple of days. I think it's more important for him to wear it on weekends because that's when we go out together. If he really wants to leave it off for two days a week, don't you think he should pick two days when he is not with me?

The reason I bought him the toupee in the first place was because I wanted to be with him when he wears it.

LIKE HAIR
DEAR LIKES: What you say makes sense to me, but my advice to you is to stay out of his hair. Store-bought and otherwise.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you don't mind the dirt on this paper but it can't be helped because would you believe that I am sitting here in the jungles of Viet Nam writing this?

To tell you the truth, Abby, I don't have one big special problem, I just feel kind of lonely out here, and you're second best to my mother.

It is raining now and everybody is soaked to the skin, but the oldtimers tell me I'll get used to it. Maybe I will. I would like to make a wish that when this war is over, none of my friends or the new generation will ever have to go anywhere to fight.

Ge, I wish I were going to be home for Christmas.

Shopping Centers Provide Shoe Customers With Art

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER
LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Now you can take the children to buy shoes and offer them culture at the same time.

Fine art has come to the shopping center, courtesy of a firm which is establishing "people's galleries" in shopping centers all over Southern California and plans eventually to spread them across the nation.

The idea is borrowed from the colorful kiosks covered with posters which dot the sidewalks of Europe. Instead of the tube-shaped kiosks, however, the firm doing the galleries, Metromedia, came up with a three-sided design it dubbed the triok.

The trioks are seven feet tall and supported on a sculptured base with a 2000-pound weight inside. They are placed strategically around the malls of shopping centers.

Art & Advertising
On one side of each triok is an art work—a blown-up reproduction of a Rembrandt etching for instance, woodcuts from "Alice in Wonderland" or a painting especially commissioned from a modern artist. It is a rotating gallery with exhibits changed monthly.

On the other two sides of the trioks, there are advertising posters, most of them so attractive they could be considered pop art.

"This is an important and unique phase of our advertising contract," said Leonard Rubinstein, vice president and creative director of the "people's galleries." "All of our graphics must be approved to maintain the high quality."

Rubinstein said the trioks were designed "to blend in with the form and shape of various kinds of architecture in the shopping centers and to add color, form and charm."

Museums Cooperate
"It is a commercial art form. We are trying to blend the taste and quality of the European tradition of poster advertising with the dynamics of American drive."

Rubinstein's plans for future exhibits include turn-of-the-century advertising, which he hopes to combine with current ads from the same sponsors, posters for old melodramas, paintings from the Old West, and Japanese kabuki prints.

Rubinstein said museums have reacted enthusiastically to the triok-idea because they feel posters exposed to art in the shopping centers will want to go then to the museums to see the originals.

For the advertisers, it offers a method of publicizing their products in a dignified way, and for the centers, it adds dashes of color and added attraction for customers.

Traffic studies made at a shopping center in San Diego indicated an additional 8000 cars parked at the mall during the first week of the people's gallery exhibit, an increase in traffic of 30 per cent over the same week the year before.

FILE FASHION ACCESSORIES IN STYLE

NEW YORK (ED)—When have you seen such a flurry of fashion excitement over accessories? In scarves alone, there are enough new styles to let you give one dress a dozen different looks. From oblongs, squares and chiffon smoke rings, to the great big and bold prints that flout designers' names for all to see—scarves are in, in dizzying array.

Indeed, women have discovered the joys of owning a many-splendored scarf wardrobe; yet isn't it true that, sometimes, a fashion flurry can literally "snow" women, by bringing about new problems? For instance, while it's great fun to put on a neat new necktie—where in the world does one store all those new scarves? Or, all those new stockings and pantyhose, for that matter?

Here are several ideas: have a scarf-and-hosiery hang-up, and use skirt hangers for stockings; straight hangers for large scarves. If you have unused space on the back of a closet door, get an extra shoe bag and use it for hosiery and scarves. One of the best ways to solve accessory storage problems is with scarf boxes, sock boxes, bead-and-bracelet boxes.

Call them what you will—Rubbermaid has some ideal and inexpensive storage solutions for you, called Instant Drawer Organizers. Long, short or square—they interlock so you can arrange them in combinations to suit your drawer spaces and your accessory assortments. Really convenient, especially because you can see the accessories you want at a glance.

Separate your hankies from your hairbows. Stop digging for the shorter gloves, keep them in one compartment, long styles in another. Jewelry in a jumble? Organize bracelets in their very own bins; and the same with earrings, rings and pins. Beads, necklaces and chain belts stay untangled, too, in their own special sections.

And you don't have to stop with personal accessories. (By the way, makeup and sundries never had it so good and well-arranged as in these easy-to-get-to organizers.) Drawer storage problems can be solved all through the house: in desks, yours and the children's, there's no better way to make order out of chaos. At last—pencils, erasers, notebooks all have places of their own. Even game pieces, marbles, cards stay together, neatly.

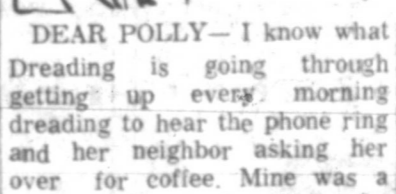

Instant Drawer Organizers also keep kitchen tools within fast and easy reach. Your notions and sewing paraphernalia find an orderly home in these two-inch deep boxes. In three interlocking sizes, they let you have fun creating your own special combinations.

So bring on the scarves, belts, hangers and beads and what-have-you. The accessory array has never been gayer—the storage solutions never easier.

FOR TRAVELING—A sideshow becomes the main event, with a dynel wig that travels anywhere and keeps its curl whatever the weather. It heads up Pat Sandler's double knit jumpsuit with matching midi cape.

POLLY'S POINTERS Neighborly Coffee Break Has Its Pros And Cons

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I know what Dreading is going through getting up every morning dreading to hear the phone ring and her neighbor asking her over for coffee. Mine was a new neighbor, so I accepted the invitation a few times. Before it went too far, I made excuses (not little white lies but honest ones) like "I am washing clothes" or "I am baking cookies and must be finished before the children get home for lunch." After that, the phone did not ring so often in the morning and we are still friends.

Polly's Problem
DEAR POLLY—I have a brass bedstead and hear they are "coming back." How should it be cleaned and polished? I do appreciate your helpful column.

MRS. F.S.J.

DEAR POLLY—If you are staying at a motel with children, it is sometimes difficult for them to find their way back to the right room. To prevent this trouble, I always hang a colored ribbon on the right door and tell the children to look for the ribbon.

To darn tablecloth or oven overalls, put embroidery hoops around the hole, remove the pressure foot from the machine and sew back and forth until mended.

Don't throw away that baby bathinette. It will make a handy sewing table. The pockets are useful for pins, threads, scissors, etc.

Your Horoscope

FOR TUESDAY, JAN. 2, 1973

Your birthday Tuesday? Your horoscope may have to be diversified—you get those things in the "more" part of the future. It's thus an excellent time for all acts of preparation, study of new disciplines. Emotional developments come clear and strong. Tuesday's natives are usually very astute at all types of recruiting, accounting, economics.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Let others do the talking—the probable need to have things go your way. Changes of living conditions come easier now—ask for what you really need.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will like much of what comes to pass today. Old hopes are encouraged. Your group finds a way to "kick" going. Entertainment fits Tuesday's mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An old friend's advice turns out to be right. Ask a good price for anything you sell or accomplish. Recent contacts stimulate "fling" ideas. Get busy while it's all fresh.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Begin early, get the attention of the most important people and make known your ideas of what should be done next. Take a "urge" of pace at night, find a lively party.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): You share a generous mood with nearly everybody. Arrange working capital. Friends offer encouragement—gracious, and thank them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Review your financial situation, earnings, savings, budgets, make changes, request improvements. Gather friends and loved ones for a social event.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your partner has better luck asking for things than you do today. People are surprisingly helpful, and you wonder why you didn't ask before—it's just that you're in the time.

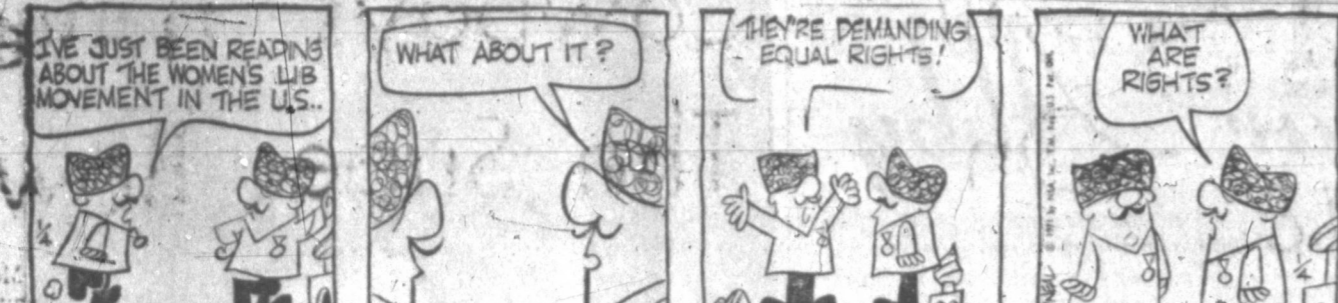

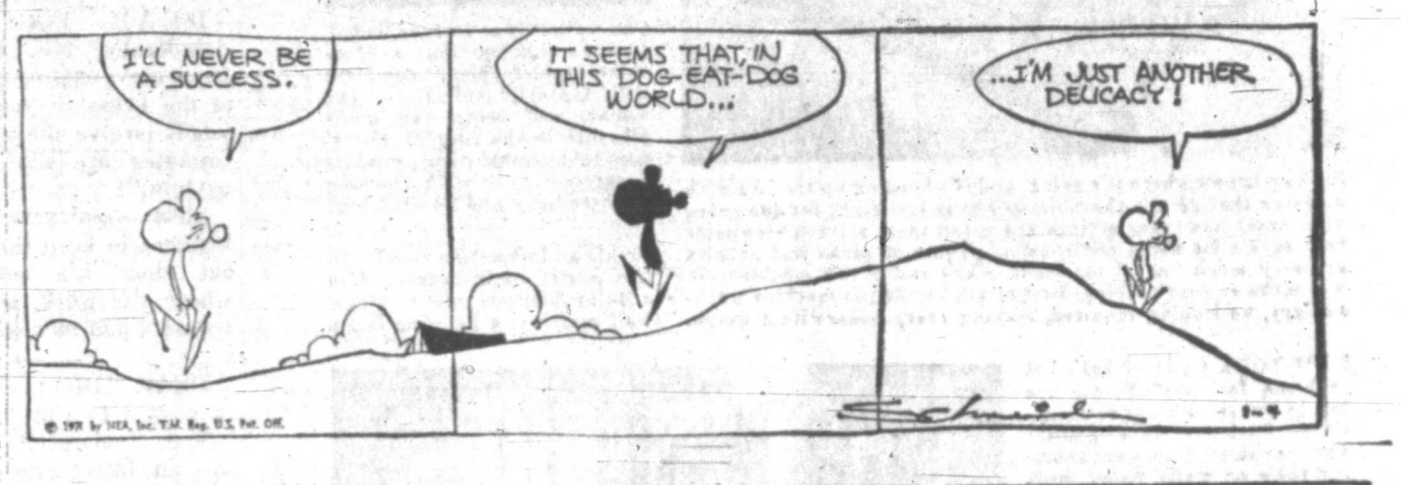

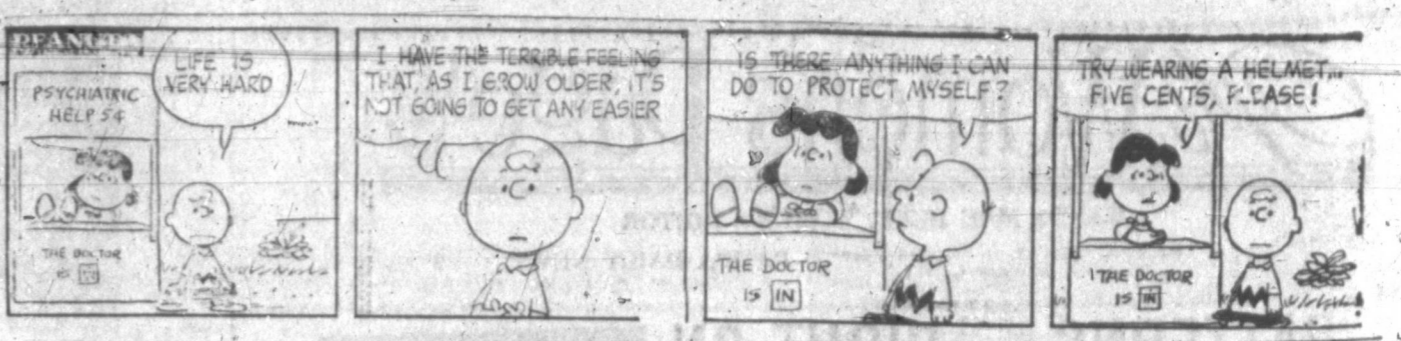

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Reach out, do something beyond your normal routine. You may be able to set up a good deal for yourself. Lump-sum payments are better than promises of installments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get discussion going on how to improve your earnings. Moderately speculative ventures show great promise. Compare notes with friends—perhaps find something to get into.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pay your own way. A passing triumph in the life of somebody near you is to be celebrated. There are unusually good bargains in items you've been seeking, but check the sources.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This is career promotion day. Present your work for improvements. The stimulus of being in strange places would help. The procedure is for social fun.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Arise full of good humor and enthusiasm. Ask an intelligent question, get a dependable answer. Consider your beliefs with actions. Your skills at selling are near their peak—use them.

Butkus Captures Title As NFL Defensive Best

DICK BUTKUS
LINEBACKER
CHICAGO BEARS
NFL DEFENSIVE
PLAYER OF YEAR,
1970

By IRA BERKOW, NEA Sports Editor
NEW YORK (NEA)—The image of Richard Butkus of the Chicago Bears as a ferocious animal is precarious. Last year, for example, Butkus made his celebrated record album on Shakespeare recitations. Yet Richard as haute culture has been a little slow catching on. It didn't help any when he was accused of biting a referee in a melee. And the denial didn't actually enhance his gentlemanly reputation either. "If I'd been dumb enough to bite a referee I'd have bitten his arm off," said Richard. So the specter of Richard the Lion-Hearted, instead of Richard the Rhyme-hearted, crashes on in the hearts and minds of his fellow bruisers. For the second straight year, Richard Butkus is recipient of the George Halas Cup as the outstanding defensive player in the National Football League. Butkus was well ahead of Johnny Robinson of Kansas City and Alan Page of Minnesota in the balloting conducted by Newspaper Enterprise Association of the 26 NFL squads, with the cooperation of the NFL Players Association. "It's an honor to get it again," said Butkus. "I had set my objectives to do it again. But you know, it's so common for a guy to have one good year and then suffer a letdown, or something else happens. I did have a little setback early in the year. First I pulled a hamstring in an exhibition game. Then against the Giants in our first regular season game I got blindsided pretty good and my knee kinda popped. "But I've just taped it up before every game and it's been no trouble. I just stuck it out."

Butkus at 6-8, 250 pounds is one of the largest middle linebackers around. He credits his pride in achievement and lust for cracking bones as prime movers of his success. He recalls one particular tackle against Charley Sanders, Detroit tight end, as one of his best plays this season. "I hit him pretty good," said Butkus. "I get my charge out of hitting people. We got this little thing going with Detroit and so it was rewarding to hit any of those guys pretty good."

Squared of shoulder pads, charcoaled of cheek bones, taped of mitts, spangled of smile, Richard Butkus declaims he has been too busy crunching people to have time for reading Shakespeare. He also promised, or half-promised anyway, he'd retire from football if Oakland won the Super Bowl game but that's all academic now because the Raiders aren't even going to be in it. "He'll be back next season," said one of his teammates after the licking by the Colts. "He'll be back unless he gets a head coaching job somewhere."

That sounds like the right dope. Door Still Closed Before they let the press in Sunday, while the door of Oakland's dressing room was still closed, somebody mentioned the Super Bowl game two weeks off and Blanda mumbled: "One of these days we're gonna win."

That's not exactly the comment of someone about to retire. The Raiders peeled off their dirt-stained, sweat-soaked uniforms in the same room which served as the Baltimore Orioles' dressing quarters when they won baseball's world championship less than 90 days ago. Only there was no champagne flowing in the room Sunday. And instead of Earl Weaver, the Baltimore manager, explaining how good he felt about beating Cincinnati, here was George Blanda sitting with only a towel across his midriff answering questions put to him by a West Coast radio man. "I don't like to ask this question, but I know a lot of people are wondering about it," said the radio man. "What about you coming back next year?"

Blanda Is Going To Super Bowl ... Alone

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (UPI)—George Blanda is going to the Super Bowl.

The rest of his team didn't quite make it. Technically, neither did Oakland's 43-year-old back-up quarterback because the Baltimore Colts beat the Raiders, 27-17, here Sunday.

That should've knocked Blanda out of the box for the Super Bowl. It didn't though. He already had promised himself he would go.

He also promised, or half-promised anyway, he'd retire from football if Oakland won the Super Bowl game but that's all academic now because the Raiders aren't even going to be in it.

The Raiders peeled off their dirt-stained, sweat-soaked uniforms in the same room which served as the Baltimore Orioles' dressing quarters when they won baseball's world championship less than 90 days ago.

Only there was no champagne flowing in the room Sunday. And instead of Earl Weaver, the Baltimore manager, explaining how good he felt about beating Cincinnati, here was George Blanda sitting with only a towel across his midriff answering questions put to him by a West Coast radio man.

"I don't like to ask this question, but I know a lot of people are wondering about it," said the radio man. "What about you coming back next year?"

"They said they had a great experience, although they are all disappointed," a ranger said. "All are in good condition. They said the rocks were covered with ice."

Nine of the climbers, dressed in bright red, were spotted climbing about 1,000 feet below the top before Petzoldt signaled they were giving up.

Radio contact was lost briefly with the group Saturday after they had been stranded for two days in snowdrifts carved near the Middle Teton Glacier.

Petzoldt told Rangers efforts to reach the top on New Year's Day were beaten back by winds that cut visibility on the mountain peak to zero.

Although they failed to reach the top, the climbers had a New Year's Day party of sorts. They huddled together and celebrated with a warm dinner of chicken soup, elk steak, mashed potatoes, hot chocolate and homemade bread.

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The Los Angeles Rams have a new football coach in Tommy Prothro, who is an expert at chess and bridge and a man who does not let sentiment stand in the way of results.

Prothro, 50, was announced as the new Ram coach Saturday and that, of course, left a vacancy at UCLA where the Tennessee native spent six years as head man. He compiled a 41-18-3 record at Westwood, sending two teams to the Rose Bowl and breaking even there.

George Blanda hesitated a second and scratched his back. "Right now I can't say," he said. "I don't know. I've enjoyed my four years here and I never really play for money itself, but I don't know right at this moment, I'm gonna have to think about it."

The radio man said he'd have to take a break for station identification and that afforded one of the waiting newsmen an opportunity to get a word in edgewise.

"Did you get tired out there?" the newsmen inquired. "Tired?" Blanda snapped, flicking the ash off his cigarette. "Why does everybody ask me if I get tired? Ask the young guys that, will you? I never get tired."

Then when asked he mumbled: "That last pass was 70 yards and he asked me if I get tired."

The radio man told Blanda they were back on the air again and pretty soon the interview was ended. Blanda scooped up the towel and walked about 15 feet to his locker where he began putting on his street clothes.

"You played well," a guy said to him. "Your statistics were better than Unitas'."

Next Question a Beauty "Statistics don't mean a thing," Blanda said. "We lost to a better football team and Unitas is the best there is."

The next question was a beauty. It was put to Blanda by someone who hadn't heard him doing the radio interview.

"Are you more tired than usual now?" was the question. Blanda looked as if he'd have a fit.

"That's a silly question," he barked. "If I was tired I'd have quit ten years ago."

It was pretty obvious George Blanda didn't want to be asked again if he was tired. It's also pretty obvious he is a bit sensitive about his age.

He really shouldn't be. No matter how old he is he's still a darn good quarterback, and maybe he doesn't know it, but Pablo Casals still plays a mean cello, the best in the world in fact, and he's a mere boy of 94.

Unitas lowered the boom with a clinching, 68-yard touchdown pass to Ray Perkins. The victory, worth $8,500 to each Baltimore player, puts them into the Super Bowl Jan. 17 against the Dallas Cowboys at Miami. It's something the Colts didn't expect to happen.

Unitas completed only 11 of 29 passes for 245 yards, including the touchdown, compared to Blanda's 17 of 31 for 271 yards and two touchdowns but Blanda was intercepted three times and he knew who won the battle.

"We lost to a better team," Blanda said. "You can't say enough about Johnny Unitas. He's still the best. He was great, absolutely great."

Blanda, 43, who came off the bench to rescue five games in a row for the Raiders during the regular season played 67 of the way after quarterback Daryle Lamonica, the AFC passing leader, went out in the second quarter with a pulled muscle.

Colts Shoot Ahead The Colts shot ahead, 10-0, on a 16-yard field goal by Jim O'Brien and Bula's run before Blanda went to work.

Dallas Cowboys Travel On To The Super Bowl

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Some time today it will begin to sink in. The Dallas Cowboys really have won a championship and now are headed for the Super Bowl.

"It's all so fantastic, so unbelievable," said Cowboys quarterback Craig Morton Sunday after he had helped pilot Dallas to a 17-10 victory over the San Francisco Forty Niners, a victory which capped an amazing comeback and put the Cowboys into the Jan. 17 Super Bowl opposite the Baltimore Colts.

"We hung in there like a rusty fishhook," said linebacker Dave Edwards, whose jarring tackle of Forty Niners quarterback John Brodie in the third quarter forced a poor pass and enabled teammate Lee Roy Jordan to make a key interception. "Now we really are going to the Super Bowl. Great Day!"

The Cowboys, who twice lost to Green Bay in title games and twice to Cleveland in playoff contests, have finally reached the pinnacle, and they did it the hardest way possible.

Famed oddsmaker Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder has tabbed the Baltimore-Dallas Super Bowl matchup as a "pick 'em" affair, but from the way the Cowboys are playing of late (won seven in a row) they should be favored by a wide margin.

They played their "usual" game against San Francisco Sunday, run, run, run on offense, and shut the other guys off on defense.

"This is the way we look most of the time," said coach Tom Landry, who never stopped believing in his team even after it had all but faded from view after the ninth game of the season with a 5-4 record. "We run well and we play good defense."

"You can't imagine how we feel. You just can't imagine how much we've suffered the last four years."

Landry, of course, was referring to those near misses against Green Bay and Cleveland.

"We're all a little numb right now," added Landry, "but it will sink in. We won the title and we worked hard to get it. Now we have to play Baltimore."

Landry, who plans to put his Cowboys back to work in Dallas on Tuesday and take them to Miami next Sunday, declined to talk about the Colts.

"We've played them before and we look forward to playing them again," was all he would say. "It should be a good game."

Rookie running back Duane Thomas and his running companion, Walt Garrison, drove the San Francisco defense crazy with their alternate rushes through the line and sweeps around the right side.

Between them they gained 214 yards running. Thomas picking up 143 in 27 carries and Garrison 71 in 17. That enabled the Cowboys to play their ball-control game and they made it pay off, but it took interceptions by Jordan and Mel Renfro to give them the breaks they needed.

Thomas galloped 13 yards for Dallas' first touchdown after Jordan's interception, going through and around the San Francisco defense and breaking four tackles enroute.

"He's an excellent running back, no question about it," said San Francisco coach Dick Nolan. "With his ability and the rest of their running game, he becomes a big weapon."

Renfro intercepted Brodie at the Dallas 19 on a "bomb" attempt to Gene Washington and ran it to the 38. Morton, bothered by a sore pitching elbow since mid-season, then took the Cowboys 62 yards in eight plays, flipping five yards to Garrison all alone in the end zone to cap the drive. That score stood up as the margin of victory.

Dallas' famed "doomsday Defense," which held San Francisco to 61 yards rushing, finally gave up a touchdown. Brodie got it by throwing 26 yards to Dick Witcher late in the third quarter after the Cowboys had taken a 17-2 lead.

It was the first touchdown given up by the Cowbo defensive unit in 24 quarters. Landry said it came on a zone breakdown.

"We got caught in a rotation," said the Dallas coach, a defense wizard as player and coach.

A 16-yard field goal by Bruce Gossett and a 21-yarder by Mike Clark, both coming in the first half, accounted for the game's other points.

Brodie, the NFC's Player of the Year, completed 19 of 40 passes for 246 yards, but the Dallas defense shut him off whenever the Forty Niners got close.

"I don't think anyone is going to shut Brodie off," said Landry. "Our plan was to keep him from burning us. We did it by keeping him under pressure all the time."

Morton hit on only seven of 22 passes for 101 yards but he said the figures don't mean a thing.

"As long as we win," said the former University of California star. "I don't care if I'm one for 100 or 15 for 16. It's been done all ways."

It has to be sure, and now the Cowboys have done it their way at long last. Next, the Super Bowl.

'Grand Ole Man' Has To Quit Attempt On Grand Teton Peak

MOOSE, Wyo. (UPI)—Paul Petzoldt, the "grand ole man" of Wyoming's 13,766-foot Grand Teton Peak, led his team of climbers down the side of the snowswept mountaintop today after failing in another New Year's Day effort to reach the top.

The 62-year-old man, who heads the National Outdoor Leadership School, radioed Rangers in Grand Teton National Park Sunday extremely icy conditions and temperatures of 30 degrees below zero forced him to give up the climb.

Petzoldt has succeeded in only one of six annual New Year's efforts to scale the northwestern Wyoming peak.

Petzoldt said he and the other 23 climbers in his party, ranging in age from 15 to 28, would remain Sunday night at the base camp at the 10,000-foot level before beginning the eight-hour trip back down to civilization today.

"They said they had a great experience, although they are all disappointed," a ranger said. "All are in good condition. They said the rocks were covered with ice."

Nine of the climbers, dressed in bright red, were spotted climbing about 1,000 feet below the top before Petzoldt signaled they were giving up.

Manning Will Be Playing In The Hula Bowl After Loss To Auburn

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)—It's on to the Hula Bowl for Archie Manning, the courageous Ole Miss quarterback who won the hearts of Gator Bowl fans Saturday in the Rebels' 35-28 loss to Auburn.

Manning, his broken left arm encased in a cumbersome plastic sleeve, rallied the Rebels from an early 21-0 deficit as he matched the faultless play of Auburn's Pat Sullivan in a game billed as a battle to determine the South's No. 1 quarterback.

Manning weaved his way 42 and 37 yards on breathtaking runs to set up the final Ole

Miss touchdown and then watched completely exhausted as reserve quarterback Shug Chumbler tried desperately to pull the game out in the closing minutes.

"I don't think that old hospital bed ever got off my back," said Manning. "I never really got my wind back after I went into the hospital with the broken arm after the Houston game, and I really felt it today."

Sullivan, a junior who finished in a dead heat with Manning in balloting for the quarter-back, smashed the Gator Bowl total offense record, hitting 27 of 43 passes for 351 yards and picking up 36 more on the ground.

Sullivan passed 13 and seven yards for first-quarter touchdowns and then rambled 37 yards on a quarterback draw as the Tigers sprinted to a 21-0 early lead. Auburn missed several other scoring chances in the first half as Manning rallied his team on a one-yard scoring loss and a 34-yard touchdown pass to pull Mississippi within seven points at halftime.

More offensive fireworks highlighted the second half with Auburn getting what proved to be the clinching touchdown on a 55-yard punt return by All-America defensive back Larry Williamson with nine seconds to go in the third period.

"Manning is everything I've heard he was," said acting Auburn Coach Paul Davis. "Pat had a great game, too, and I think they're the two finest quarterbacks I've ever seen."

Rams Have A New Coach In Tom Prothro

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The Los Angeles Rams have a new football coach in Tommy Prothro, who is an expert at chess and bridge and a man who does not let sentiment stand in the way of results.

Prothro, 50, was announced as the new Ram coach Saturday and that, of course, left a vacancy at UCLA where the Tennessee native spent six years as head man. He compiled a 41-18-3 record at Westwood, sending two teams to the Rose Bowl and breaking even there.

Baltimore Will Get A Reprieve In Super Bowl After First Loss

By IRA MILLER
UPI Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (UPI)—The Baltimore Colts, the first National Football League team to be embarrassed by a Super Bowl defeat, get another chance.

The man who made the trip possible is the same one the New York Jets embarrassed in Baltimore's last Super Bowl visit two years ago.

Johnny Unitas. Unitas guided the Colts to the American Football Conference championship Sunday, besting the Oakland Raiders, 27-17.

"He's smart, he's been around a long time," said cornerback Willie Brown of the Raiders. "He just sat back and did what he had to do."

What Unitas had to do was make the Oakland defense respect the Col's weak running game, which he did with another productive day by rookie Norm Bulaich, who scored two touchdowns and gained 71 yards.

Unitas Lowers the Boom Then, just when it looked like miracle worker George Blanda might rally the Raiders in the second half, Unitas lowered the boom with a clinching, 68-yard touchdown pass to Ray Perkins. The victory, worth $8,500 to each Baltimore player, puts them into the Super Bowl Jan. 17 against the Dallas Cowboys at Miami. It's something the Colts didn't expect to happen.

Pastorini Leaps From Shadows And Leads West To A Victory

OAKLAND (UPI)—Quarterback Dan Pastorini of Santa Clara played in the shadow of Stanford's heralded Jim Plunkett this season.

Saturday, he found his place in the sun by leading the West to a 17-13 triumph over the East in the annual Shrine Game.

West Coach Eddie Crowder called Pastorini "one of the most remarkable players I've ever seen."

The pro scouts among the 54,000 fans agreed. Pastorini, whose college campus is located near Stanford, was voted the game's Most Valuable Player.

Sandwiched in between college bowl games and pro championship contests, the East-West game could have been lost in the flurry of weekend football.

Fans Get Money's Worth But an explosive opening kickoff runback and a hair-raising finish gave the fans their money's worth. More importantly, the 46th annual charity game gave some needed funds to the Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children.

The West returned the opening kickoff on a 99-yard reverse for the first score.

Bottles And Beer Cans Fly After 49er-Cowboy Tilt

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Bottles and beer cans flew through the air Sunday as 20 persons were arrested and 12 injured in fights among spectators following the San Francisco Forty Niner-Dallas Cowboys football game.

"I don't know if it was camaraderie or disgust with the result of the game that started it," said Police Sergeant Dan Howard.

Trouble began when a group of 20 young men rampaged throughout the stands, touching off the barrage of full cans and whisky bottles.

Of the 12 persons treated at Park Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises, three were policemen and two women. Those arrested were held for investigations of disturbing the peace or resisting arrest.

Want To Be A 'Liberal'?

Everyone needs a good laugh, now and then, especially these days, when it sounds more and more like the opening lines of A Tale of Two Cities, i.e. "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, etc."

A new book by Victor Gold (alias Dr. Ernest Angst) is bound to tickle the funnybone of all those frustrated "conservatives" out there who have been dying to get even with the "liberals" for all those nasty names they have been called in the past 20 years.

Entitled "So You Want To Be A Liberal," the book is described on the dust jacket as "a revised and updated version of Dr. Angst's epochal primer and lexicon, offered to the SDS generation in the Nixonite Dark Ages as, if not a beacon, at least a bonfire. It remains, as Dr. Angst affirms, relevant."

This hilarious little book is written from a "liberal" point of view — except that Gold is a former Goldwater campaign press secretary.

Here are some definitions found in the book.

—Looting: Revolution of rising expectations.

—Little Old Ladies in Tennis Shoes: Rightwing counterpart to bearded young men in sandals.

—Last Refuge of Scoundrels: Liberal reference to patriotism.

—Mainstream: Wherever Nelson Rockefeller happens to be at any given moment.

—Meaningful: Negotiations; We got our way.

—Superpatriot: Also flag waving, jingoist, nationalist, crackpot, Texas-Orange County millionaire.

—Vigilantes: Right-wingers who take the law into their own hands, as opposed to Left-wingers who, while superficially doing the same thing, are actually responding to a higher law.

—Woefully inadequate: Liberal speaker's description of non-Liberal approach to nagging problem, for which he recommends massive program.

—United Nations: Last best hope for peace (if it could only collect its dues).

—United States: Merely one of 100-odd member nations of the United Nations.

—Implacable: Also, hardline, Old Guard, last ditch. Pertaining to Non-Liberal Zealotry, as distinguished from Principled, the approved description of Liberal implacability.

—Irrelevant: (1) Non-Liberal; (2) That which preceded Jan. 20 1961, e.g. "The congressional seniority system is irrelevant to modern times." Or, as used by Radical Liberals, "Congress is irrelevant."

Artistic Integrity: Creative Liberal's refusal to truckle to the crass commercial demand of capitalist technocracy, preferring instead to suffer the hardship of awaiting approval of application for $15,000-$20,000 per annum Ford Foundation grant to pursue studies in Italy.

The book is illustrated with some hysterically funny drawings of contemporary types.

It is highly recommended for bedtime reading, or any time, for that matter.

"So You Want To Be A Liberal" is available at your bookstore or from Arlington House, New Rochelle, N.Y.

H. L. Hunt Writes

NO VICTORY IN RETREAT

Our national leaders seem to be trying to retreat to victory. Geniuses who can win victories by retreating have been extremely rare in history. Victorious retreats in political and diplomatic life have been even more rare. Our leaders seem to be trying to combine retreats in military, political and diplomatic fields and then adding retreats in technological and economic fields as well.

Like an avalanche plunging down a mountainside, retreat, whether military or otherwise, gets to be a habit and proves most difficult to halt. The Fabian socialists, who take their name from a famed retreat, the Roman Fabius, actually do not use Fabius' tactics. The Fabian socialists are constantly on the attack, not retreating.

The communists of whatever stripe constantly attack. They attack on all fronts, military, political, diplomatic, economic and technological. To the communists, "peace" comes only when there is no more opposition to their enslavers. A truce is merely the period between military attacks, and during truces the Reds subvert and sabotage their enemies while building up communist power.

Now Red Russia is excelling in gas reserves and production. Before it is too late our national leaders should consider our plunge to second-rate status in naval power, rocketry and diplomacy, wherever the communists challenge us. As our leaders should learn from history, whenever we retreat from threats and reduce our defense posture, we invite attack from those who hate freedom and Republic USA, which is the only earthly entity standing between communism and world tyranny.

Question Box

QUESTION: A recent Question Box answer did not, I think, answer the reader's real question. Our young people are taught today that profit cheats the buyer and corrupts the seller, and that government non-profit businesses avoid both these evils.

Two facts should have been brought out in answer: First, the buyer also profits from the exchange, otherwise he would not buy. Second, government—having no check on its inefficiency—wastes far more than private business charges for profit. So government businesses either charge more than private ones, or more commonly they make up the difference by taxing non-buyers.

ANSWER: We said we believed "part of the answer" was provided in the material we quoted from economist Murray N. Rothbard. The double question asked was why we opposed the idea of government operation of business, and if government "not bound to the necessity of making a profit," was not in a better position to provide necessary services than private organizations.

Dr. Rothbard pointed out that the government's operation of business enterprises really makes no effort to see that the public is served, whereas business people must seek to please their customers. J.D.T. is correct that in all voluntary transactions, both buyer and seller expect to profit from the exchanges. He also is correct that, generally speaking, government has no check on its inefficiency and therefore it "wastes far more than private business charges for profit. Since government is able to levy a tax on non-buyers, there is no incentive for the political agencies to be efficient. The result is as Dr. Rothbard pointed out.

Special Training Offers Hope For The Handicapped

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA)—There are 10 million handicapped children in the United States...

Mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed, deaf or hard of hearing, blind or with other sight problems, crippled, chronically ill...

Seven million are of school age.

Only one of three is receiving some sort of teaching tailored to his special needs.

Numbers of the other 4.7 million will somehow find a decent future. But many, unable to get jobs or adjust, are headed for a lifetime of hospitals or on welfare. Or crime and prison. Or for a lifetime dependent on their families—or working and living far below their capacity.

As one mother puts it: "Facilities become upset when they must sit in a normal classroom where they can't function. They'll limp along until they are allowed to drop out of school... by then they have definite patterns of self-defeat and behavior..."

At what horrendous costs! Heartbreak to the individuals and their families—and what great cost to society.

Yet if the handicap is discovered early enough and a child given the special training he requires in his early years, some experts estimate that 90 per cent can live normal, productive, happy lives.

Many handicapped, in fact, have great innate ability. A deaf Californian, Lawrence R. Newman, was named the state's Teacher of the Year.

Judge Charles Stinson of the U. S. Tax Court, Washington, D.C., was born with impaired vision and has been totally blind since he was 14.

Dr. James R. Slagle, though blind, is known as a pioneer in computer technology at the National Institute of Health.

Two blind students, David S. Mischel of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., and James Winford Selby III of Tulane, who last year were graduated at the top of their classes, were congratulated by President Nixon at the White House.

A girl severely brain-damaged at birth is now 44 and when she speaks her body strains with effort, her jaw juts, her hands twitch. But she is a successful poet.

A severely disturbed boy went on to a doctorate at Harvard and is now the associate director of the institution in which he lived as a patient for eight years.

There is some evidence that early discovery of a handicap may be crucial—at least in many cases.

There is apparently a time in each child's life when, if he does not learn certain things, he never catches up.

One-and-a-half to 3 or 4 are the developmental years for language, and therefore critical for a child with inadequate hearing. The child with poor hearing and without language is cut off from learning during a crucial time of growth for the mind and the sooner therapy is prescribed the better.

Even 12 months is not too early an age for a hearing aid and for training from a special teacher or at least from the family at home. Yet a county-sponsored diagnostic center reports: "Most of our referrals from clergymen..."

In some localities early search for handicaps is routine in hospitals and in schools. But these are the exception.

In Roanoke, Va., for example, hospitals routinely test babies at birth for hearing defects. Many hospitals don't.

The pay-off is great in the prevention of human tragedies.

But there's also an economic pay-off. A handicapped but trained adult earning only $60 a week will in a 40-year work life contribute $120,000 to the economy. A handicapped man or woman who spends his life in a public institution will cost the taxpayers $150,000 to $200,000.

Little-Understood Facts About Varicose Veins

Dear Dr. Lamb—I have varicose veins on my leg. It looks awful. What do you think about having the veins stripped? Are there certain foods and drinks to stay away from? As I get older, will I have hardening of the arteries? I am 49. My daughter is 28 but already has varicose veins.

Dear Reader—Varicose veins are common in women. They don't always cause difficulty even though they may not look good. The large veins that only permit blood to flow upward toward the heart. When the veins are dilated in large varicosities, frequently the valves do not close completely, making it difficult for the blood in the legs to be moved upward to the heart.

Not all varicose veins have incompetent valves and even if the veins are unsightly the circulation works fine. The doctor can do a test to find out if the valves are incompetent or not. This involves putting a tourniquet around the leg and measuring the filling and emptying characteristics of the veins during standing, lying and walking.

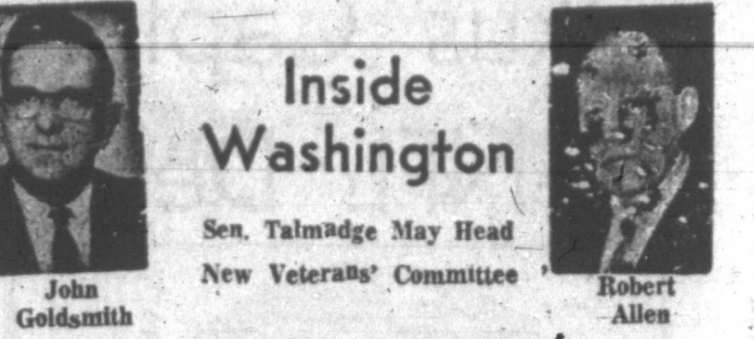

There are two sets of veins that may have incompetent valves—the veins deep inside the leg muscles that you can't see and those under the skin. If the valves are functioning adequately the doctor may feel that treatment is unnecessary. Varicose veins are associated with faulty valves in the veins, blood pools in the legs and causes swelling of the feet and ankles. As this gets worse, poor circulation may cause the skin to change color or even result in an ulcer around the ankle.

Unless an operation is desired for cosmetic purposes, many people can get along very well using elastic bandages or support stockings. If swelling and skin ulcers cannot be controlled this way, then stripping of the veins is indicated. This operation simply cuts the veins out in short pieces. In many instances support stockings or bandages are required after such an operation.

There is a tendency for varicose veins to occur in families. These types of varicose veins tend to occur in both legs and become apparent after a pregnancy or in the presence of obesity or in people who have jobs requiring a lot of standing. Any constriction, such as garters, makes the problem worse.

Varicose veins have nothing to do with hardening of the arteries or fatty deposits that develop in arteries with age. Most people, including women, do develop this problem though as they get older but from other causes.

There are no special foods that benefit varicose veins.

Sen. Talmadge May Head New Veterans' Committee

WASHINGTON — Senate liberals, who have long complained about the number of southerners who survive to become committee chairmen, may have another one to complain about when the new Congress is organized later this month.

Under the congressional reorganization law, approved in late October, a new Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs is to be created in the 92nd Congress. As matters stand, Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., has a good chance to be named chairman of the new committee.

Talmadge, son of "Gene" Talmadge, the shirt-sleeved Georgia spellbinder of the 1940s, came to the Senate in 1957. He is his state's "junior" senator—junior to Richard B. Russell, who tops the Senate seniority list. Talmadge is in his third Senate term.

In the seniority-conscious Senate, Talmadge is not quite the most senior Democrat who is not already a committee chairman. But he may well be the most senior Democrat who is willing to give up other committee assignments to get the new Veterans' Committee Chairmanship.

The House of Representatives has long had a standing Committee on Veterans' Affairs. In the Senate, legislation affecting veterans has been referred to the Finance Committee, (when it involves pensions and retirement benefits) or to the Labor or Services Committees. Talmadge is a member of the Finance Committee and, as subcommittee chairman, he has been influential in the processing of veterans' legislation in recent years. So his assignment as senior Democrat, and therefore chairman, of the new Veterans' Committee is both possible by reason of seniority and sensible in terms of his past experience.

Now 57, dark-haired and vigorous, Talmadge does not fit the stereotype of the aging southerner who, in the eyes of some liberal critics of the seniority system, has been elevated to a chairmanship at about the time he should be retiring.

Paradoxically, the same law which will create the new Veterans Committee, and the possibility of another southern chairman, will over the years tend to relax the tight hold of the much criticized seniority system. It will, in short, limit the number of committee memberships which a senator can acquire by reason of seniority.

PAUL HARVEY NEWS

Issue In Next Election

By PAUL HARVEY
President Nixon has promised to keep American forces in Europe in Europe. Despite earlier declarations that he wanted to phase out foreign involvements, now he has promised our NATO allies that United States forces will be maintained—indeed, will be improved—unless and until Russia becomes a lesser threat.

No, government extravagance is more debilitating to a nation than maintaining troops overseas; most of the billions thus expended never come home again.

You can waste money on space vehicles and yet those dollars continue to circulate through our own nation's economic arteries.

You send dollars overseas to maintain personnel overseas and that money is gone.

Each great nation-state, in turn, has learned the hard way that dollar domination of other nations is effective only until the dollars run out.

Each, in turn, has reverted to enlightened selfishness—in order to avert internal bankruptcy and resultant chaos.

Except us—U.S.

Might our President's continuing preoccupation with foreign involvement be "the key issue" in the next election? It might, indeed.

Necessity required to anticipate now what voters will be wanting two years from now is frustrating for a politician fascinated to an historian.

President Nixon might have learned from the last election

Under the new law, each senator will be allowed to hold membership on two major Senate Committees. In addition, each senator will be allowed to be a member of one from a of minor committees—minor Senate Committees, joint Senate House committees and the like.

The limitation will serve to open up the membership of the minor committees. Some senators, even some not too high on the seniority list, are now members of as many as half a dozen committees of one sort or another.

More importantly, the new law will permit membership on no more than one of the "Big Four" Senate Committees—Appropriations, Armed Services, Finance and Foreign Relations. That limitation will, as it becomes gradually operative, really spread Senate power and influence.

Several senior senators now hold membership on more than one of the "Big Four." For example, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., is a member of the Foreign Relations, and Appropriations Committees. Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Me., is a member of the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees, and there are others in the same category.

The new law will not force incumbents to give up committee membership. Incumbents will be protected under a "grandfather clause," so the effect of the limitations will be gradual for the most part. However, incumbents will not now be able to use their seniority to get new plums beyond what the law requires.

OTHER REFORMS—The new law will also regularize committee procedures, in the House and in the Senate, and reform some of the processes which have drawn fire from congressional committees over the years.

Television coverage of House hearings will for example, be permitted for the first time. Minority members of investigating committees in both the Senate and the House will have the right to call their own witnesses, in addition to those scheduled by the chairman and committee majority.

Committee votes, which have sometimes been kept secret, will be made public by congressional committees. Committee chairmen will no longer be able to delay or prevent committee action by refusing to schedule a meeting. The new law provides a system by which a majority of any committee can force the convening of a special meeting.

that the Silent Majority is more anxious about pocketbook issues than about Reds under the bed.

Yet the President's conspicuous preoccupation with foreign affairs prevails.

This President is not the first thus to divert his attention from the home fronts.

A leader can denounce the Russians without much fear of contradiction.

But on domestic issues, about the most he can safely do politically is to straddle the vital issues of labor-management, black-white, rich-poor, young-old and right-left.

In foreign policy historically, leaders have been able to rally the homefolks to close ranks in fear of some real or exaggerated outside enemy.

A presidential election ago, George Wallace sought with his candidacy to intimidate the major political parties on social issues. Remaining an interventionist in foreign policy—"We should win the war," he said—he left the isolationist no place to go, no reason to vote.

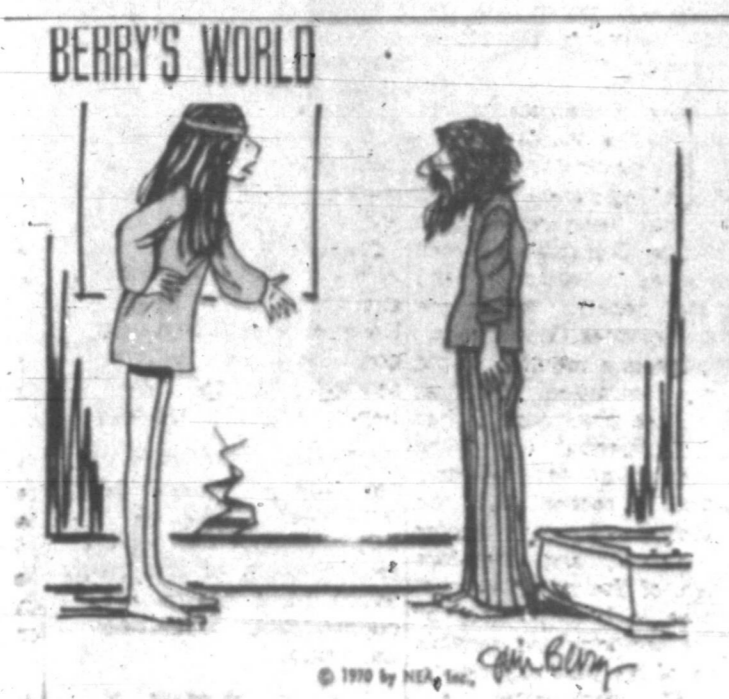

The United States in two years will be ready for disentanglement from the "foreign entanglements" which George Washington warned us about, ready for a candidate running for President of the United States—whose total preoccupation is with the internal strength of the United States.

I don't know if there will be such a candidate on the ticket; maybe our nation will not yet be sufficiently destitute—but in two years it could be.
