APOLLO 14's lunar target is the Fra Mauro area, a rough crater formation originally selected for the aborted Apollo 13 mission. The actual landing site is a valley between two ridges which, scientists believe, may be formed of debris thrown out billions of years ago, when a meteor struck the Sea of Rains, 300 miles to the north and the site of the Soviet unmanned landing last November of Lunokhod-1, first wheeled vehicle on the moon. The first American vehicle is scheduled to reach the moon aboard Apollo 15, next July. Previous American manned landings were Apollo 11 (July 20, 1969) and Apollo 12 (Nov. 19, 1969).

Apollo 14 Crew Prepares To Wind Up Trial Countdown For Flight

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The launch crew prepared to pump 736,000 gallons of frigid propellants into the Apollo 14 rocket today to wind up a critical trial countdown for the Jan. 31 start of the nation's fourth moon-landing mission.

The week-long launch pad test was scheduled to stop just short of engine ignition at 3:23 p.m. EST.

Because of the risks involved with a fully fueled Saturn 5 rocket, astronauts Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell did not participate in today's exercise. They will run through an abbreviated countdown Tuesday after the rocket's propellants have been drained.

The astronauts, living in isolation here in an attempt to keep healthy, passed four-hour physical examinations Saturday and were pronounced "perfectly normal" with no medical problems.

They gradually are slowing the pace of training for the ambitious nine-day mission. They relaxed in their quarters Sunday and watched the superbowl game on television.

The countdown rehearsal, known to engineers as the countdown demonstration test (CDDT), began last Tuesday and proceeded through the weekend without a hitch. It was designed to check the major systems in the Apollo 14 rocket and spacecraft and to make certain they mesh smoothly with ground supporting equipment.

"The fact that we're in the CDDT itself shows that we're in good posture leading into the actual countdown," said launch director Walter J. Kapryan midway through the exercise.

"The hardware is in good shape and the modifications required for the spacecraft and launch vehicle as a result of Apollo 13 have been made and validated.

"Contingent on the completion of the normal tasks before us, the Kennedy Space Center is ready to go for launch."

Apollo 14 must be launched by 7:12 p.m. EST Jan. 31 or the mission will be delayed until March 1. The lone launch opportunity this month was caused by the fact that the astronauts have only one moon-landing site, and sun-lighting conditions there permit only one landing a month.

The plan is for Shepard and Mitchell to land in a valley on the geologically interesting Fra Mauro formation at 4:17 a.m. EST Feb. 5 while Roosa remains in lunar orbit. After two moonwalks, Shepard and Mitchell will take off from the moon Feb. 6 and the three are due to splash down in the South Pacific at 4:01 p.m. EST Feb. 9.

U.S. Bombers Continue Striking At Foe's Antiaircraft Batteries

SAIGON (UPI)—Two U.S. fighter-bombers struck at North Vietnamese antiaircraft batteries they thought were preparing to fire at American B52s bombing the Ho Chi Minh Trail, the U.S. Command said today.

The action Sunday was the third straight day of "protective reaction" against North Vietnamese positions.

An F105 "Wild Weasel" fired a single Shrike missile at a Soviet-built SAM 2 antiaircraft missile battery 20 miles south of Dong Hoi, North Vietnam, in the first incident, while another F105 fired two Shrikes at a similar SAM 2 battery 23 miles west of Dong Hoi. The command did not say whether the Shrikes, missiles designed to home in on such ground batteries, hit the targets.

In Cambodia, the high command said government troops reached the Pich Nil Pass dominating Highway 4, Phnom Penh's road link with the sea. Communist forces have held the pass since Nov. 21, cutting off supplies of oil and gasoline to the capital.

The command spokesman, Lt. Col. Am Rong, said the pass was "practically taken" and that some troops already were through the pass, which is 60 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

Cambodian and South Vietnamese forces are carrying out a two-pronged attack to open Highway 4, and military sources in Saigon said today U.S. Army AH1 Cobra helicopter gunships are supporting them. The helicopters are flying off a U.S. Navy amphibious transport cruising in the Gulf of Thailand, the sources said.

The situation in Phnom Penh, where gasoline and electricity has been rationed because of its isolation by the Communist forces, got some relief when a heavily guarded convoy carrying more than half a million gallons of gasoline and oil arrived in the Cambodian capital Sunday after a 15-hour trip up the Mekong River from South Vietnam. Four earlier vessels had tried to make the trip but were destroyed by Communist gunners.

In addition, the convoy—guarded by both South Vietnamese and Cambodian troops—carried Cognac, beer, cigarettes and automobiles.

Authorities discounted any political overtones to the kidnap attempt despite its involvement of Lee and Mrs. Lindsay.

"I don't think legislators were particularly involved," said Sheriff Jack Weatherly. "I think it was the rich people they were planning to hold for ransom."

J. P. Strom, chief of the state Law Enforcement Division, said further investigation was needed before he could establish a firm motive for the abductions Saturday night.

"Ransom was definitely involved in it," he said.

Weatherly said Bennett and Scales, a former Bennettsville resident, first drove their van to the home of Wayne Chavis, a barber. They tied up Chavis, his wife and their four children and placed them in the van.

Then they went to the home of Lindsay, who was away, and abducted the senator's wife, Frances. Next they went to the home of another wealthy resident, who also was away, so they went next door to Lee's home.

Phone Company Plans Expansion For Pampa Area

Three major telephone construction projects to improve and expand telephone facilities in Pampa are scheduled during 1971, George Newberry, manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. said today.

The telephone manager said the job provides for expanded rural telephone facilities in the area north of Pampa. Two other jobs will provide for expansion of the main feeder cables serving the north and south sectors of the city to meet expected telephone growth.

"These projects are aimed at helping the telephone company keep up with the increasing communications needs created by our growing city," Newberry said, "and telephone growth is a good indicator of a city's overall growth rate."

For example, he said there were 12,515 telephones in Pampa at the end of 1960. In December of 1970, there were 15,521 telephones in the city, an increase of more than 19 percent in the decade. A total of 264 telephones were gained in 1970.

"It appears that the number of telephones will continue to climb and expansion will remain a way of life here for quite awhile," he said. "We expect to have 17,400 telephones here by the end of 1974."

Newberry noted that Pampa residents dialed 74,358 calls on an average business day in November, a two percent increase over the 74,219 averaging during November, 1969.

He said Southwestern Bell has announced plans to spend a record $114.1 million on land, buildings and equipment this year in the San Antonio administrative area, of which Pampa is a part. The area covers roughly the western half of Texas.

Albert of Oklahoma who will be elevated to speaker, Albert faces a nominal last-minute challenge from Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., but has no real opposition.

In the Senate, conservative challenges were being weighed against Democratic Whip Edward M. Kennedy, by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and against Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, by Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. Senate liberals of both parties meantime were plotting their semiannual opening attack on the filibuster, an event guaranteed to set off a talkfest of the kind they would like to bring under control.

Attempted Kidnapers Surrender

BENNETTSVILLE, S.C. (UPI)—The second of two gunmen who tried to kidnap this tobacco town's wealthiest families in a van and hold them for ransom surrendered on Columbia Sunday night after evading a 150-man posse.

The Marlboro County sheriff's office said Grover L. Bennett of Charlotte, N.C., turned himself in at the headquarters of the state Law Enforcement Division in the state capital, about 85 miles southwest of Bennettsville.

Bennett's companion, Charles L. Scales, also of Charlotte, was wounded in a shootout with one of his hostages, former state Rep. Jaimie F. Lee. He was hospitalized along with another hostage the wife of state Sen. John Lindsay, who was wounded in the neck, shoulder and leg by her captors.

Authorities discounted any political overtones to the kidnap attempt despite its involvement of Lee and Mrs. Lindsay.

"I don't think legislators were particularly involved," said Sheriff Jack Weatherly. "I think it was the rich people they were planning to hold for ransom."

J. P. Strom, chief of the state Law Enforcement Division, said further investigation was needed before he could establish a firm motive for the abductions Saturday night.

Lawmakers Return For Foundation Work For 92nd Congress Opening

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Revolutions in the air today as lawmakers returned to map major decisions on conduct of the 92nd Congress opening Thursday.

The legislative outlook got little attention among early arrivals, and weeks may elapse before much gets done about major issues facing the new Congress.

These include such sticky problems as what to do about extending the draft, reforming welfare, curbing textile imports, improving medical care, and reducing troop strength overseas, as well as easy ones like how much—not whether—to raise monthly Social Security checks.

President Nixon will outline his plans and requests at a joint House-Senate meeting, nationally televised, at 9 p.m. EST Friday. But first comes organization, always a time-killer at the start of a Congress, and this year loaded with controversy on both sides of the Capitol.

The congressional seniority system was under sharp attack in both parties—formally in the House and at unofficial hearings which opened today in the Senate. Modest changes in the system already were assured in the House, and Democratic liberals at a caucus today pushed for major revisions including a possible eight-year limit on committee chairmanships.

In another break with tradition, a reported 70 House members signed a letter urging replacement of a veteran South Carolina committee chairman, Rep. John L. McMillan, whose management of a committee handling District of Columbia matters long has drawn liberal fire. They want him replaced by Rep. Charles C. Diggs, D-Mich., a black.

A delegation of "regular" democrats from Mississippi was on hand seeking a denial of party status—and thus committee standing and chairmanships—for the entire Mississippi House delegation plus Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., all of whom were elected in November on their own independent state party ticket.

Five House members were locked in battle for election Tuesday as House Democratic leader to succeed Rep. Carl

Promises To End War In Viet Immediately

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (UPI)—Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota announced his presidential candidacy today with a call for a "second American Revolution" and an ironclad pledge to withdraw every American soldier from Vietnam.

Charging President Nixon with deepening "the sense of depression and despair in our land," McGovern predicted the next president would be a Democrat and offered himself as "uniquely qualified" to lead the nation in these times.

McGovern also said his nomination in 1972 "offers the best chance of heading off a fourth-party movement by Democrats still fuming with impatience over the mistakes of past leadership."

The South Dakota senator announced his long-anticipated candidacy in a statewide television and radio broadcast (5 p.m. EST) and in a letter mailed to 275,000 potential contributors to his campaign.

Beating the traditional timetable for presidential declaration by many months, the 48-year old senator got an early jump in what is expected to be a free-for-all for the Democratic nomination and a chance to run against Nixon.

McGovern, who plans to enter every primary, is sure to run into Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, the acknowledged frontrunner for the nomination.

Other possible candidates include Sens. Birch Bayh of Indiana, Harold E. Hughes of Iowa, Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, William Proxmire of Wisconsin, Henry M. Jackson of Washington, and Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, plus former Attorney General Ramsey Clark. Waiting for a deadlocked convention could be former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

In assembling his campaign team, McGovern recruited people who worked for Humphrey, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy in 1968.

In addition to working them into his personal organization, the South Dakota senator announced the formation of the National Citizens for McGovern Committee with Blair Clark, McCarthy's campaign manager in 1968, as a vice chairman.

Soviet Lunar Robot Returns To Mothership

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union's rolling moon robot today drove back to its Luna 17 mothership to complete "one of the planned experiments" of its moon exploration, Tass said.

The Soviet news agency did not specify why the eight-wheeled vehicle made its way back to the landing stage or what it did next. The Luna 17 ship, carrying the Lunokhod machine piggyback, landed Nov. 17 in the moon's Sea of Rains.

"The apparatus turned in its tracks about half a kilometer from the landing area," Tass said. "For some time the old track showed clearly on the television screen and the controllers of the Lunokhod used it for guidance."

The agency called it an historic feat.

"For the first time in the history of cosmonautics there was a solution to a practical navigational problem: The return of the self-propelled apparatus to a preplanned point at a preplanned time on the surface of a different celestial body."

Largest Arab Guerrilla Organization Threatens To Join Jordanian Troops

By United Press International

Al Fatah, the largest Arab guerrilla organization, says it will join Jordanian troops in fighting militant guerrillas if the militants violate a cease-fire and engage in antigovernment violence.

The cease-fire last week ended fighting between guerrillas and government troops but members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) have said they are not bound by the agreement.

King Hussein's government and Al Fatah issued separate statements Sunday warning they would use military force against the PFLP if the group carries out its threats of violence against Jordan.

Political sources said the Palestinian resistance movement was in danger of a serious split.

Israeli Deputy Premier Yigal Allon predicted in Tel Aviv today the indirect Israeli-Arab negotiations under U.N. mediator Gunnar V. Jarring in New York would be lengthy.

"We should have steel nerves because the negotiations are not likely to end in a hurry," said Allon, who had just returned from a three-day speaking tour in the United States on behalf of the Israel bonds fund-raising drive.

Jarring has under consideration separate proposals from Israel and Egypt.

The progress of the Jarring talks was the top item on the agenda in talks between Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny in Cairo today.

Podgorny reiterated his pledges of support for Egypt in a speech in Alexandria Sunday, telling shipyard workers: "The Soviet Union has stood and will stand by the United Arab Republic and the Arabs' side in their struggle against Israel."

Sadat said "if they (the Israelis) want peace, then we are ready for peace based on justice, but we will not surrender and there's no force on this earth which can force us to give up one inch of our land."

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahrar criticized the Iraqi government for reportedly withdrawing its troops from Jordan and Syria.

"It is every Arab's right to raise the question what does the Iraqi withdrawal from Jordan and Syria mean at a time when other Arabs are marshaling themselves for a battle of destiny," Al Ahrar said. "The partisan regime in Baghdad is bound to pay eventually for its stance towards the battle with Israel."

Mothers March Set For Tonight

The Mother's March, sponsored by the Gray County Unit of the March of Dimes, will be staged beginning at 6:30 p.m. today.

Over 500 volunteers will be ringing door bells, making collections to aid the MOD drive against birth defects.

Mrs. T. W. Williams, chairman, advises that porch lights should be left on in the Pampa area, marking homes where donations will be made and assisting the volunteers who will be marching for over two hours in an effort to establish a fund to fight birth defects and to support research of the problem.

House, Senate In Joint Session To Canvass Returns Of Election

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas House and Senate are meeting in joint session today to do something all 181 members can agree on.

The joint session, required by law, is to canvass returns of the 1970 general election and certify Gov. Preston Smith and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes really did win their races for re-election.

There can be little dispute about that, since Smith and Barnes will be inaugurated for second terms as the state's chief executives in televised ceremonies on the capitol steps at noon Tuesday.

The vote canvassing is expected to be the only item of business today as lawmakers set aside legislative affairs to take part in the two-day inaugural festivities.

The State Democratic Executive Committee meets this afternoon and the party's traditional victory dinner is scheduled tonight.

All but 10 representatives and two senators in Texas are Democrats.

After the inauguration, a parade featuring most of the state-wide office holders is set for mid-afternoon, and the inaugural ball takes place Tuesday night.

Following the pattern set when he first took office, Smith is holding six inaugural balls — and all but one of them are free to the public. The formal ball has a $15 per couple price tag, but the other dances, in Austin hotels and on the University of Texas campus, are casual and feature a variety of country and rock groups.

Buck Owens, country recording artist and star of the "Hee Haw" television show, will perform at one of the informal balls. Other entertainers include western singers Susan Raye,

Ray Price and Faron Young and the rock group "The Gripping Force."

Singer Jeannie C. Riley, an Anson, Tex., girl who won fame with her recording of "Harper Valley P.T.A.," will accompany the governor and Mrs. Smith as they "ball hop" to all the dances.

The legislature and the governor will get down to business on Wednesday, when the governor goes before a joint session of the legislature to lay out his spending and tax programs for fiscal 1972-73.

There have been few leaks as to what sort of new taxes the governor will recommend to support the record budget he is expected to propose. Estimates are the governor's budget will require $650 to $800 million in new revenue.

Dorothy Kirsten Concert Tonight

Dorothy Kirsten, star of the Metropolitan and San Francisco operas, arrived in Pampa Sunday afternoon and will appear in concert at 8 p.m. today in Pampa Junior High School auditorium.

Miss Kirsten is being sponsored here by the Pampa Community Concert Association as the third attraction in its 1970-71 concert season.

When the United States State Department sent Miss Kirsten to Russia recently she had the unprecedented experience of 25 curtain calls after her performance of "Eugeni" at the Bolshoi Theatre.

In her concert tours and as soloist with the principal symphonies and on television, Miss Kirsten has added to her following until today she is in the very forefront of American singers, acclaimed as "one of the great operatic sopranos of our time."

Admission to tonight's performance will be by concert association membership card only.

Defense Seeking Right To Have Calley Examined By Psychiatrist

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — The big question before the Calley court-martial today was whether the defense has the right to have Lt. William L. Calley Jr. examined by psychiatrists who then would testify whether the stresses and strains of combat reduced his mental responsibility for malicious intent.

The issue is an interesting one. There was no combat for the American infantry platoon that Calley commanded at the subhamlet of My Lai 4 in March, 1968, according to testimony of those who were there. But the defense contends there was confusion and therefore stress in the issuance of orders.

Calley, 27, stands charged in a court-martial, now in its 28th day, of premeditated murder with a rifle of 102 Vietnamese women, children and old men, who did not resist the search-and-destroy mission. The government has made it clear that it contends he killed them himself or ordered their execution by his men.

Calley, 27, stands charged in a court-martial, now in its 28th day, of premeditated murder with a rifle of 102 Vietnamese women, children and old men, who did not resist the search-and-destroy mission. The government has made it clear that it contends he killed them himself or ordered their execution by his men.

My Lai 4 was one of six villages in a cluster called Song My, long a stronghold of Communist military forces and sympathizers. The defense has produced a string of witnesses who said the company commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, in a briefing, told his men including those of Calley's platoon, to destroy everything in the hamlet.

The task force commander, Lt. Col. Frank A. Baker Jr., who was killed in a helicopter crash shortly after My Lai, wrote in a combat report 12 days after the action that the mission had been to destroy enemy forces and fortifications — and "to capture enemy personnel." Medina's company took no prisoners.

Calley's defense is that he was doing his duty in obeying Medina's orders in a legal act of war. The defense has said that it wants to call three psychiatrists. The judge ordered them to appear at the morning session — with the jury absent — for inquiry as to his diagnoses.

What they say will decide whether there will be another long delay for Calley, who has

Jan. 31 Deadline To Pay City Tax

Less than two weeks remain before city taxes become delinquent and subject to penalty and interest.

Aubrey L. Jones, city tax assessor-collector said today collections on the 1970 tax roll must be in the tax office by Jan. 31 to avoid the penalty and interest.

"Taxes become delinquent on Feb. 1," Jones said.

The tax collector explained penalty and interest in effect on Feb. 1 would amount to 2 1/2 per cent. It increases monthly until it reaches 8 1/2 per cent on May 1. After that date, he added, the penalty increases one-half of one per cent per month.

Jones said current tax collections were running slightly ahead of last year.

Pampans Injured In Odessa Mishap

Steve Hardy, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hardy, 1004 E. Gordon, was reported in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Odessa Hospital today with injuries sustained in a traffic accident at 9:40 p.m. Sunday at a street intersection in Odessa.

Reports from Odessa today stated young Hardy, a student in Odessa College, had run out of gasoline and was standing in the rear of his car refueling the gas tank when he was struck from behind by another car.

Odessa police arrested the driver of the other car on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Hardy was hospitalized with a broken leg and pelvis and serious head injuries. He was a 1970 graduate of Pampa High School and had been employed in the mailroom of the Pampa News prior to entering college in Odessa.

Long Hair Case Will Be Taken To Federal Court

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — The case of two boys thrown out of high school for their long hair will be taken this week to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. If the ruling is favorable, the youths may return from Australia.

The two 17-year-olds, Adrian Cummings and Dickie Gray, left Friday for Australia because, they said, they did not want to remain where they could not attend school because of their hair length.

"It's unfortunate that the boys have been made to feel they have to leave the country because of their situation," Hank Albach, president of the Dallas Civil Liberties Union, said Sunday.

Wrecks Injure Pampa Youths

Cheryl Williams, 18, and Danny Paul Hammer, 17, both of Pampa, were admitted to Highland General Hospital Sunday morning for treatment of injuries sustained in two separate one-vehicle accidents near Pampa. Both were listed in good condition today.

Miss Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gray of Pampa, was traveling east on U.S. Highway 60 two miles east of Pampa when she lost control of her vehicle, according to investigating highway patrolmen.

Officers reported the small, foreign car rolled over, and slid backward into a tree.

Hammer, son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Hammer, 319 Warren, was driving north of Pampa on Texas 70, when he "apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his pickup," officers said.

The vehicle went off the highway, traveled a tenth of a mile in a bar ditch, veered back to the highway, slid sideways and flipped over on its top, throwing Hammer out.

His passenger, Donald Leroy Snapp, 20, of Pampa was pinned in the vehicle. Neither sustained serious injuries, according to investigating officers.

Two Persons On Separate Charges Remaining In Custody Of County

Wanda Murry, 539 S. Gray was filed by Levine's Department Store. Manager of the store, Stanley Godek, notified police Saturday shortly after 6 p.m. that Miss Murry had been stopped outside the store by the manager. Police answering the call arrested the woman who was allegedly wearing a coat taken from the store. While enroute to the police station she jumped from the patrol car in the 1600 block of North Hobart. She sustained a scratched arm and minor knee injury which were given emergency treatment at Worley Hospital. She was later released by police and told to appear at 9 a.m. this morning.

Charges of aggravated assault were filed against Bowman by Miss Murry following a Saturday night incident at her home. She alleged that Bowman refused to leave her residence upon her request and later hit her. She notified police of the incident at 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

Bowman was arrested on a warrant this morning and appeared before Judge Ed Anderson. He pleaded not guilty to the charges and was being held in lieu of a $250 appearance bond set by Anderson.

Miss Murry was in custody on a shoplifting charge which

A chicken dinner landed a Pampa youth in jail on charges of theft under $5 and minor in possession.

A call to police from Ishom Hutchins, an employe of Kentucky Fried Chicken, located at 1501 N. Hobart, began the search for the youth who was apprehended in the 400 block of Oklahoma shortly after the call at 12:40 p.m. yesterday.

Hutchins told police the youth entered the restaurant and advised him that his wife needed him at the hospital. When he left, the youth allegedly took some fried chicken from the warming table. Police were notified, and stopped the youth who reportedly had a bottle of wine in the seat of his car.

The youth pleaded not guilty to both charges this morning in Municipal Court. A hearing was scheduled by Municipal Court Judge Don Lane for Feb. 9.

Ed Myatt, 2121 Charles, and Walter Leroy Tate, 1242 S. Dwight, sustained no injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 6:50 a.m. today at the intersection of Price Road and the Borger Highway.

Tate was charged by Highway patrolmen with failure to yield right of way at a stop sign. Myatt's car sustained about $2,000 damage and Tate's vehicle was totaled in the wreck, officers said.

Inauguration Ceremonies To Be Televised

AUSTIN (UPI) — Officials of the Austin Inaugural Committee say 85 per cent of the state's population will be able to watch Tuesday's inauguration of Gov. Preston Smith and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes.

The ceremonies will be televised by 18 stations in Texas and one in Louisiana. Live radio coverage is planned by more than 125 radio stations in Texas.

"This will enable the most people in the history of our state to witness one of the great and significant ceremonial events in the life of our state," a committee spokesman said.

The education television station for Austin and San Antonio will originate the 30 minute color telecast. The Texas State Network will originate the radio broadcast for its 125 member stations. The broadcast will be made available to other radio stations.

Officials said any radio or television station in Texas can carry the broadcast by tying its line to the nearest toll-test board.

Poison Gas Squabble:

There will be more squabbling about redeployment of the stocks of American poison gas still in Okinawa. The removal of 150 tons of mustard gas was mostly a public relations gesture, designed to show that the United States intended to keep its promises to get the gas off the island as soon as possible. There remains 12,850 tons, most of it invisible nerve gas that can kill on contact. In the end, the U.S. probably will pave some rural roads inside bases to create a shipment route that doesn't pass through Okinawan villages. Left wing groups played on the people's fears this time, and Gov. Chobyo Yara had hard work winning acceptance of the shipment in a populated area.

H-Bomb Go-Ahead:

French national defense staffs and arsenals have received a direct order from President Georges Pompidou to start immediate work on the production of a "simple" hydrogen warhead so that French missiles in underground silos and on nuclear subs can be equipped with them in 1975 at the latest. Pompidou thus overruled the army brass which wanted to delay the industrial production of hydrogen bombs until after the completion of studies aimed at producing highly sophisticated multiple re-entry vehicles similar to those produced by the United States.

Upsets Romanians:

The riots in Poland have Romanian leaders worried. Of all East Europeans, the Romanians suffer most from high prices and from shortages caused by an emphasis on exports. There have been rumors—never confirmed—of strikes by peasants there. Just after the Polish riots, Romania's leaders decreed a cut in food prices and gave speeches stressing planned increases in consumer goods. It could mean they fear trouble and are moving quickly to prevent it.

Bomb Scare:

British officials are deeply concerned that the bomb attack against Employment Secretary Robert Carr may mark the beginning of a new era of violence in British politics—something Britain hardly has known in modern times. Tightened security measures for government members are not the problem. Officials are concerned that this may indicate extreme leftist militant groups are preparing to use violence in Britain as they already have in the United States, Latin America and many European countries.

Hard Line on Berlin:

Western experts on Soviet affairs predict a harder Soviet line on Berlin. They fear there will be new harassment of both Western Allied and West German traffic to and from Berlin in an effort to force the West to make concessions in the Big Four ambassador talks on the city. They say the Russians appear favorable to the East German demand that West German recognition of East Germany must be the price for a Big Four agreement on Berlin.

Project Femininity With Spring Style

NEW YORK (Sp1) — Spring is a mood as well as a season in the world of fashion. For Spring '71, a California couturier Travilla reflects this mood in many diverse ways, but always with a feeling for softness and femininity.

And throughout, despite his total dedication to the longette as the silhouette for "now dressing," he makes a point of "leg looks" via wrapped skirts, high rising slits, free-falling front panels over center-slashed skirts, handkerchief hems and "maypole panels" that open all around as the wearer walks.

By day, the silhouette is predominantly slim and in the current vein borrows on occasion from the ethnic influence. Typical of the latter is the slender navy silk shirt dress inspired by the Latin American Indian "guayabera" shirt but translated into American couture with overall tucking, trouser-pleated skirt and brightly printed scarfing at the neckline.

Another ethnic inspiration is the safari dress in oyster fibranne, cut in one piece but looking like a two-piece outfit via self-banding at the hipline and high slashed deadcenter on the skirt. Marvelously casual but simultaneously very urban in mien, it's a great way to look for every day-time activity.

Other pre-dark outfitting partners jackets, generally cropped short, with matching dresses, puts flare into the skirt life of simply shaped navy silk, turns into a great traveller via a skinny-bodied sweater dress whose skirt is a swirl of fine pleats that never lose their shape, and shapes natural tussah into a tailored coatdress unexpectedly counter-pointed with white organza gilet and cuffs.

As the hour moves on to late day and later, the couturier into temptresses, sometimes innocent, sometimes sensuous, but always soft and feminine. Such signatures of the new season as the arched godet, self-corded, parasol seaming, tiers, ruffling and belts and sashes generally worn on the rise, even a hint at the chemise silhouette via great shapery, all tell a very definite couture story, in his after-dark clothes line.

"The Innocents," a group of white lace beauties are, in a purposeful contradiction, pure fashion provocation and range from a bare-topped handkerchief-hemmed charmer, belted and shawled in pastel satin, to a four-tiered beauty, deliberately demure from its high necked bodice to its wrist-ruffled long sleeves and wide buckled belt of pale satin.

Another great look for not-too gala evenings are the designer's Batik prints, each print specially conceived to fit into a particular silhouette and hand-painted on chiffon and on surah.

Here is a sure fire way for the wearer to have a one and only for, with the fabric for each dress done individually, no two, even in an identical style, are exactly the same.

And for relatively informal evenings, there are his deceptively simple crepes making very definite fashion statements as in the body fitted dress, its shape totally controlled with intricate parasol seaming from a high round neck to a below-calf hemline or a side-wrapped soft shape strategically self-corded at neckline, waist and wrists.

For truly big evenings come Spring, he provides a plethora of enchanting fashions, ranging lengthwise from ankle to floor and in color from frosty white and inky black to cool clean pastels and such brilliant as shocking pink, porcelain yellow, vivid lime green and deep coral.

A wearer of the fringe-and a real fun fashion - are western-inspired crepe pajamas, with shivery showers of fringe accenting their skinny "jeans" fit.

Also fringed, but in a completely different mood is the fluid column of white six-ply crepe wearing a "tribal collar" of self-cording that continues down a deeply slit-neckline and ends in floor length cording-fringe to cover a thigh-high slit in the skirt.

POLLY'S POINTERS Family Makes Ice For Camping Trip

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Mrs. D.J. I that my husband also freezes blocks of ice in our deep freeze to have ready for camping. He fills a pliable rubber or plastic dishpan to within an inch or so of the top and freezes it. Be sure to use a deep dishpan made of flexible plastic rather than the brittle kind. To remove the ice, turn the dishpan upside down in the sink and run a small amount of warm water over the bottom of the pan.

top of the ice and not get wet.

MRS. W. A. G.
DEAR POLLY — We measured the size of our small ice box, allowed a few inches at the top and had a box made (at a sheet metal shop) that would fit into the freezer. We lay the container, full of ice, in the laundry tub, run water over it for a few minutes and the piece of ice comes out very easily and is then put in the icebox.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I wish someone would tell me the best way to shorten men's trousers when the material has the new permanent press creases. When shortened and a cuff turned up, there is a reverse seam line. How can one avoid this?

MR. E. P. H.

DEAR POLLY—My Pointer is for Mrs. D. J. I. who has trouble freezing cubes for the ice box they take on camping trips. I use my bread loaf pans. They make good-sized cubes that do not melt so fast. We also use the half-gallon or gallon coated milk cartons. Do not fill to the top and they will not split. We put carton and all in the cooler so meat packages, etc., can be put on

Altrusans Evaluate Monthly Programs

Pampa Altrusa Club members evaluated their first six months of programs during the recent noon luncheon in the Coronado Inn, with Miss Vernell Meador, president, presiding for the program, "Onions Or Roses."

After Mrs. Willard Henderson, chairman of Altrusa information committee, explained the use of the "Onions and Roses" evaluation sheets by requesting members to check which club programs could be described as "onions," or "roses," more programs were checked as "roses" than "Onions." Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Clief Burdett

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good man. He supports us, he loves us, and he's true blue. But I have a gigantic problem. I am so jealous of football I could scream!

I have heard and read all kinds of consoling pearls of wisdom, such as, "Just be glad he's home to watch those games," or, "Don't fight him, join him!"

Abby, weekend after weekend, he sits with his eyeballs glued to the television set, with a portable radio beside him listening to another game. All he ever says to me while the games are on is, "How about something to eat?" I really wish I could stir up an interest in a bunch of men falling on top of a ball just so I could share it with him, but I am sorry to say, it doesn't move me. This might sound humorous, but it's really a last desperate plea for some kind of fresh advice on how to change things. I have had it!

DEAR MARY: If you can't find something to do while your man is enjoying his favorite sport, you need more help than I can give you in a letter. Bake a cake, clean closets, cupboards, drawers. Catch up on your reading or letter writing. Do the ironing, mending. Go visit your mother or a friend. Or would you rather sit around and look hurt and neglected? If so, be my guest. What needs changing at your house is not your hubby's hobby, it's your attitude.

DEAR ABBY: I am a merchant seaman and I sail on many different ships. In the process of changing ships, my mail is sent to my home address and then forwarded to me. My home address is the address of my parents. My problem is my mother. She takes the liberty of opening all my mail before she sends it on to me. This annoys me but I don't want to offend her by making an issue of it. I am 23 and unmarried.

Respectfully awaiting your advice, I am,

A SAILOR
DEAR SAILOR: You can respectfully tell your mother that you are a big boy now, and prefer that she not open your mail. In other words, you will have to make waves. Sailor, or put up with a one-woman censorship committee.

DEAR ABBY: Last week my boy friend and I were in my living room talking. My father was there, too, reading a magazine. All of a sudden, my father looked up and said, "Oh, isn't this an interesting article?" He then proceeded to read aloud what turned out to be a 2-page article. When my father was about half finished, my boy friend got up, went into another room and returned with a newspaper and started reading to himself. My father finally finished reading the magazine article aloud.

Two questions: Was it correct for my father to have read such a lengthy article aloud all the way through?

Was it proper for my boy friend to have gotten his own reading material in the middle of my father's reading?

WONDERING
DEAR WONDERING: NO ... on both counts.

DEAR ABBY: Re that bride who had as her attendant her pet Pomeranian:
"Dear Hoosier who is horrified I, too, will gently chide the bride.

To complement her vow to honor
She should have had a Weimaraner."

Stoles March On Winter Wind

By JUDY LOVE

A beautiful way to beat the breeze that often blows in even the most snug home is to knit a lovely, clingy stole. Here are two versions that are sure to create conversation, keep you warmer than toast and also make most any dress or outfit look newer and prettier.

One pouffer than fresh air—yet warmer than a southern zephyr is the lacy 36-inch square, shown at left. Work this lightweight warmer on size 15 needles, using six balls of Bear Brand, Fleisher's or Botany Supra mohair. It'll whip along, and the loop fringe also works quickly on a size E hook.

The other stole, a long rectangular fascinator that's 20 by 64 inches, has a pretty fringe that's easily made on a size 1 crochet hook. For a real headstart on spring, there's a smart, practical stretch beret or snood that's worked on size 11 needles, and the open pattern on size 00 crochet hook.

Any one of these head turning fashion items are fun to do, and will fill those occasionally dreary midwinter hours with a worth-while project.

For instructions just send 50 cents to Stitchin' Time, C-9 your local newspaper, Radio City Station, Box 503, New York, N.Y. 10021. Ask for leaflet S307, and include your name, address and zip code.

Knit Knacks

DEAR JUDY—My daughter is learning to knit, and one of the hardest things to explain is how to pick up a dropped stitch. I can show her all right, but it's hard to explain it properly. Can you help? Thanks.

Mrs. D. P., Jackson, Miss.
DEAR MRS. D.P.: Delighted to hear your daughter wants to knit. Most youngsters think crochet is the in thing today. Hope this helps:

Tell her that the simplest way to pick up a dropped stitch (in stockinette) is to use a steel crochet hook. Then, with the right side of her work facing her, have her catch the stitch with the crochet hook and draw the first crosswise bar through the stitch. Continue doing this until the stitch is even with the other knitted stitches. Then, slip the picked-up stitches onto the needle.

SALE OF RIGHTS.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Interior Department has announced that a Dec. 15 sale of oil and gas drilling rights of the Louisiana coast brought in $845.8 million—a figure second only to the $900 million collected last year for drilling rights on Alaska's North Slope.

Avoid drafts in the prettiest way possible—knit on airy long stole or frothy square. Pick a pure white yarn or work with a soft pastel shade—any color warmly becoming, tossed around your shoulders and stoles play lovely feminine tricks for you.

Juggled Spending Can Pay

By RAY DE CRANE
Enterprise Publications

It may sound absurd to suggest planning right now for your 1971 income tax return. Now is the time you are most concerned about your 1970 return.

Yet, the suggestion to start thinking now of next year's return is good advice.

Tax laws are constantly changing. You have seen many of the changes which became effective last year. Even more changes are effective this year. For example:

Last year's surcharge of 2 1/2 per cent is eliminated.

The credit for dependents and the personal exemption is $650 for 1971.

The standard deduction which for years had been 10 per cent of adjusted gross income (limited to a maximum of $1,000), is upped for 1971 to 13 per cent of adjusted gross income with a maximum of $1,500 on a joint return, or $750 on a separate return of husband and wife.

It is this last change, the upgrading of the standard deduction to much higher levels, that should create close scrutiny of each person's tax status throughout the year.

Unless for the next several years you expect to have high real estate tax payments and high mortgage interest payments, this could be the perfect year to get on the alternate year cycle of itemizing deductions.

This tax-savings technique requires you to pack as many deductible items as possible into the year in which you itemize deductions. In the following year you hold down your deductions to the bare minimum and elect to take the standard deduction.

When you really stop to examine your individual situation closely, you will be surprised the extent to which you can control your deductions.

In many communities real estate taxes may be paid in either December or January. This gives you the choice of two tax years. Don't make December payments if that is going to be the year in which you will take the standard deduction. Save the payment until January.

The same applies to year-end medical payments and charitable contributions. Make your deductions work for you. Use them to their fullest advantage.

This is the way prudent taxpayers handle their finances. And remember the admonition against ending the year with a net long-term capital loss, if you are a stock market investor. Review your portfolio frequently throughout the year. Use your gains and losses to maximum advantage. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Nation's Ten Most Outstanding Youngmen Selected By Jaycees

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—Singer Elvis Presley and Ronald Ziegler, President Nixon's news secretary, were among those saluted by the Jaycees Saturday night as America's 10 outstanding young men.

The honorees covered a broad spectrum, including the varied worlds of business, medicine, government, show business and the Army. They were named earlier and formally presented to the delegates to the Jaycee convention Saturday night.

Earlier, George Bush, the U.S. ambassador-elect to the United Nations, told the delegates that the phrase "power to the people" already was a reality if the people "would only use it... through the democratic process."

Bush, a former Texas congressman, said he looked forward to his U.N. activity, but admitted he will miss "the day to day challenge" of the domestic problems facing the nation.

In addition to Presley and Ziegler, the Jaycees honored Dr. Mario Capucci and George Todaro, medical researchers; Army Capt. Paul Bucha, winner of the Medal of Honor in Vietnam; Walter J. Humann of Dallas, Wendell Cherry of Louisville, Jim Goetz, former lieutenant governor of Minnesota, Thomas Edward Coj of Hartford, Conn., and Thomas I. Atkins of Boston.

The 10 were selected by a panel of judges that included former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Calley's Trial Faces Another Possible Delay

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Lt. William L. Calley Jr., who has been detained in the Army more than year and three months in an agonizing wait to be judged as an accused murderer, faces another possible delay in his military trial.

The Army's senior first lieutenant in point of time served—promotion to captain would have been automatic if he had not been ineligible because of the charges—will hear three psychiatrists testify Monday what, if anything, they believe was troubling him on March 16, 1968.

On that day Calley, a stubby little platoon leader armed with an automatic rifle, led his men on a search-and-destroy sweep through the Vietnamese village of My Lai.

He is charged with deliberately and with malice aforethought killing 102 women, children and old men there either with his own M16, or by specifically ordering other American infantrymen to fire.

Calley, 27, has been examined by two of the three psychiatrists the defense expects to put on the stand Monday with the six-officer jury panel out of the room.

The inquiry will be made to let the judge, Col. Reid W. Kennedy and the Army prosecutors hear what the doctors would have to say if permitted to testify in open court.

Kennedy said if just one of the doctors contends Calley suffered a lack of mental responsibility that day, or even a slight character or behavioral disorder, he must be sent to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington for an Army sanitarium board examination before the jury can hear the psychiatrists' testimony.

The chief prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniels III, said the board usually takes a week to examine and three or four weeks to decide what it has found. Thus Calley's trial could be delayed by a month or more.

George W. Latimer, chief defense counsel, said he expects the doctors to testify that the stresses and strains of combat could have reduced Calley's mental responsibility. Calley's men encountered no opposition at My Lai, although many of them have testified here that they expected a savage fight.

The defense contends Calley was following orders of a man he admired greatly, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, at My Lai in a legal act of war.

Science Makes Changes Faster Than Society Can Absorb Them

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The coming years, the man was all set to say, "will see science and technology talking back to their critics."

He never got a chance to say it. The critics were present in considerable force to lodge an indictment of Glenn T. Seaborg for the crime of science against the people.

Dr. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS), put his speech in his pocket and left the room.

He had been scheduled to address a symposium at the association's annual meeting in Chicago last month when it became apparent that an organized group was prepared to shout him down.

Here are some things Seaborg, a Nobel laureate in chemistry, would have said if he had made his speech:

Science fosters changes in our society faster and with far more impact than our social and political institutions can absorb and manage them.

"Each and every advance of man (agriculture, medicine, steam, radio, nuclear energy, space has ushered in the need for new thinking and new social instruments, and these have always lagged behind the physical changes effected by those advances."

"It is easy to lay the blame for the world's turmoil on science and technology by saying their work has given us a world we never bargained for."

"But it is also, I feel, a world that will force us to change for the better, to evolve to a higher order of life that will be able to establish a new

TV In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Television viewers who watch CBS-TV Tuesday night will meet Archie Bunker, and it is not likely that they will soon forget him.

Archie, a fictitious character played by actor Carroll O'Connor, is the focus of a new, weekly, half-hour situation comedy that debuts on that night, "All in the Family." And CBS-TV has a lot riding on it, for it is a situation comedy like no other ever seen on American television.

In describing Archie, the network says he is "a middle-class husband-father who sees the world and everyone in it only in terms of his own prejudices." And that is putting it mildly.

For, in two episodes of the series previewed for the press, Archie freely tossed around such expressions as "Spics," "Spades," "Hebes," "Pinkos" and "subversives."

There are four main characters in "All in the Family": Archie; his long-suffering wife, portrayed by Jean Stapleton in a performance that is pure gold; his daughter (Sally Struthers); and his mustachioed, liberal son-in-law, who not only lives with his in-laws, but off them. Rob Reiner, Carl Reiner's son, is the young man.

Archie and his son-in-law are the comic protagonists. They disagree on everything possible—sex, religion law and order, students, hair. Speaking of sex, Archie recalls courting his wife: "There was nothing—no wedding night." Adds his wife: "Yeah—and even then..."

The son-in-law likes to watch television shows about pollution, and admires Jack Lemmon. Archie prefers football and John Wayne. He is thumbs down on liberal actors like Paul Newman and Marlon Brando.

Of the two episodes previewed—CBS didn't know which would be put on first—one was hilarious, the other very funny. Industry feeling is that the series will be either a sensation or bomb out completely.

Experts Say That No Device Can Successfully Block Bank Robbery

NEW YORK (UPI)—One Christmas Eve a holdup man hit a large eastern bank shortly before closing and unwittingly embarrassed a group of tellers.

Working as advertised, the bank's surveillance camera took clear pictures of a forbidden Christmas party as well as the stickup.

Security device salesmen actually are in no need of such extra help. The sharp rise in bank holdups and a federal law have sent bankers scurrying to them. A federal law passed in 1968 set minimum security standards for banks. But experts claim it is inadequate against the increasingly sophisticated methods used by underworld professionals. Police records show graduate engineers were involved in bank robberies on more than one occasion.

"It's a battle of one-upmanship," explained John Mosler, president of Holmes Electric Protective Company. "When we come out with a new device it's just a matter of time before a thief beats it."

Attempting to stay a generation ahead, companies have devised variations of cold war weapons. One Holmes device uses ultrasonic waves, another measures vault air pressure. Using mirrors, the company weaves invisible infra-red "electronic-eye" light throughout a bank. It also uses infra-red to detect body heat. Plus there are vibration detectors and capacity alarms.

Wells Fargo Alarm Services will surround a vault with an electromagnetic field. They also use highly sensitive microphones which amplify sound.

Both Wells Fargo and Holmes monitor their devices in control rooms. Depending upon the service, they send guards or call the police when a signal is received.

A central station, however, is added vulnerability and underworld professionals realize it. They can cut lines or send false signals. The companies retaliate with line integrity devices and signal codes.

One company hired a "think-tank" to write a code calling for random signals not to be repeated. The company president estimated it would cost $350 million to crack that code.

Although the take normally is much smaller, the "quick hit and run" stickup, because of its growing frequency, is a bigger problem than burglary. Recent silent alarm devices include a money clip that triggers an alarm if it makes contact with the bottom of the drawer. Another trips the alarm if pressure is exerted on the center of the drawer.

False alarms are a problem. But there is little anyone can do about the nervous teller. Erich Mittermier learned that the hard way.

Mittermier handed a teller at Honolulu's Hawaii National Bank a note specifying he wanted to withdraw $6,000. Thinking it was another robber, the teller handed him a stack of bills and tripped the alarm. Until it was straightened out everyone was a bit upset—particularly Mittermier when he discovered he had only $2,600 instead of $6,000.

Business Today

NEW YORK (UPI)—The non-political business man is on the way to limbo and so is the politician who doesn't know business principles.

That conclusion is the rationale behind a program called Social Policy and Urban Affairs just established in New York University's Graduate Business School under the direction of Dr. David Rogers.

Because many students in graduate business schools today intend to go into national or local government service instead of business, Dr. Rogers said it is important they recognize that nobody can operate successfully in government without some kind of political base. "Also," he said, "it is fast becoming impossible for a business man to be successful without a sound political base in the community."

Failure to recognize this, said Dr. Rogers, is what caused the city manager movement to fail in the 1920s and 1930s.

Rogers said no problem of administration can be solved without digging into the matter of "how the pie is to be divided" and without giving attention to the political tradeoffs necessary to effect reform and change.

He also said that while New York U's new program may be the first in the country, trends in the same direction have been observed at Harvard, MIT, Columbia, Carnegie-Mellon, Stanford and other graduate business schools. They put particular emphasis on the interaction of business and municipal politics in response to urban crises.

A practical example of the problems studied in the program is an analysis of the history and prospects of the vast new World Trade Center being completed in lower Manhattan. In a course entitled, "Interorganizational Decision-Making" given by Dr. Arlie Y. Lewin, the students came up with a report criticizing the Port of New York Authority and the city for failing to give enough consideration to the long range need of transporting an additional 60,000 persons daily in and out of the vicinity of the trade center.

In another study, Prof. Lewin's students found that curbing pollution of the Hudson is more a political than an industrial problem and that the city of New York is the big polluter, not the industries on the river.

Dr. Rogers said the requirements for the social and urban affairs program, in addition to Dr. Lewin's course, includes special courses in accounting, microeconomics, banking, corporate finance, financial management, national priorities, urban economics, metropolitan labor problems, urban politics and the management and politics of municipal agencies.

Dr. Rogers, who runs the program, is a Bostonian who originally studied sociology at Harvard. He is the author of the controversial best seller "110 Livingston Street," about New York City's school system.

America's New Golden Boy Is Part Time Hippie

MIAMI (UPI)—Wouldn't you know it, America's new golden boy turns out to be a hippie part-hippie anyway.

That's the way Jim O'Brien, the long-haired 22-year-old place-kicking rookie of the Baltimore Colts, describes himself.

You can't miss O'Brien's hair. It sticks out from under his helmet.

"Some of the guys on the club call me 'Lassie,'" he laughs. "They call me other things, too, like 'hippie,' 'flakey' and 'rookie.' I've been wearing my hair long since summer. They threatened to cut it if we won the game. But I'm gonna ask for amnesty."

If you were among the 80,055 who were in the Orange Bowl Sunday or if you were among the multimillions who watched the Colts come from behind to win the Super Bowl game by beating the Dallas Cowboys, 16-13, on a 32-yard field goal in the final nine seconds, then you know by this time who Jim O'Brien is.

You also know it looked a whole lot more like the blooper bowl game until the wind-up.

Everybody Makes Mistakes

Everybody was making mistakes. That included Golden Boy O'Brien, who missed a routine conversion try following Baltimore's first touchdown in the second quarter, leaving the score tied 6-6.

O'Brien had nobody but himself to blame for missing the pat. He took too long. He blew it and he knew it.

"When I missed that kick I thought I was gonna fold," the completely ingenuous O'Brien revealed while tightly clutching the "game ball" he had been awarded which was actually the same ball he had kicked for his three-pointer.

"I said, 'Damn, am I really gonna give up and not kick well all day or are we gonna come back the way we did in the San Diego game. That San Diego game was our first of the season and we were behind until the last 38 seconds."

Then what happened?

"I came in and kicked a 28-yard field goal and we won, 16-14," O'Brien said without actually boasting about it.

Although O'Brien is a first year member of the Baltimore Colts, he was something of an "old Oriole" out there on the field through all of the second half because he hurt his knee out kicking off following Baltimore's first touchdown in the second quarter.

"I was running down the field and I hit my knee on somebody's helmet who was trying to block me," O'Brien said.

Didn't the injury bother him?

"Nah," said O'Brien. "It was my left knee."

Oh, so it didn't really matter at all.

"I wouldn't say that," the rookie corrected. "I still needed a leg to stand on."

Jim O'Brien isn't the nervous type. Still, when he went out to try that placement with only nine seconds left there were a few things running through his mind.

"I wasn't cluttering up my mind with too many thoughts," he says. "If I started thinking I'd start worrying and I didn't want to do that. I was just concentrating on getting my steps down. Some of the guys like Jimmy Orr, Ray Perkins and Tom Mitchell told me not to worry too much if I missed the kick. There was always the overtime period. Earl Morrall (who held the ball for him) also was helpful. He said, 'Just kick it straight through. There's no wind.'"

That's what O'Brien did. He really wasn't overly worried. His mother, who is an astrologer, told him beforehand his team would win but it would be close. He believed what she told him.

Is a Backup Receiver

Curiously, O'Brien won a place with the Colts this year not so much for his place kicking but because he also is a backup receiver. That won him a berth over veteran Lou Michaels (remember the guy who challenged Joe Namath in a bar two years ago?)

"I didn't play too much as a backup receiver this season," O'Brien explained. "I caught only one pass."

They asked him all sorts of questions after his kick made the Colts champs Sunday.

Was that the best kick he ever made?

For $25,500 it has to be," he laughed.

Was he planning to ask for a raise now?

"No comment," he said to his questioner. "You trying to take advantage of a rookie?"

Was he going to cut his hair soon?

"No," Jim O'Brien said. "What for?"

No wonder he didn't get a phone call from President Nixon.

SLALOM WINNERS

STOWE, Vt. (UPI)—Karen Budge of Jackson, Vt., and 19-year-old Perry Thompson of Mammoth Lakes, Calif., Sunday won the slalom events in the Starr Trophy races, held in zero degree temperatures.

While O'Brien's tie-breaking boot, in the final nine seconds, was the simple reason for the Colts' victory in Super Bowl V Sunday, the football pundits came up with several other reasons today why the Colts were able to gain revenge for their 1969 Super Bowl upset by the New York Jets.

"Defense Did It"

"Our defense did it," explained Colt Coach Don McCafferty.

The big play was in the third period," said Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry. "That was when Duane Thomas fumbled on the Colt goal line. If he had scored, we would have had a 20-6 lead and the Colts would have had to do a lot of catching up. After that, it was nothing but errors for us."

"Earl Morrall did a fine job," explained Colt quarterback Johnny Unitas, who went out with a rib injury in the second period and then watched Morrall lead the Colts in dominating the second half.

"But a lot of fans were finding the key in the pass tossed by Cowboy quarterback Craig Morton with a minute to go that bounced off the hands of intended receiver Dan Reeves and was picked off by Colt Mike Curtis, who ran it back to the Cowboy 28 to set up O'Brien's field goal.

In the first period, the Cowboys had a first down on the Colt nine and had to settle for Mike Clark's three-pointer. In the second, they settled for another boot after having a first down on the Baltimore six. So when the Colts scored on weird play—John Mackey scoring on a 75-yard pass play from Unitas when the ball bounced off the hands of defender Mel Renfro—the Colts were tied up, 6-6.

Washington Blocks

Mark Washington blocked O'Brien's extra point when the eventual hero got it away a little slow. And the Cowboys went ahead again, 13-6, when Jethro Pugh's fumble recovery set up a seven-yard scoring run by Thomas on a swing pass from Morton.

The Colts didn't match that until the fourth period when Rich Volk's interception of a Morton aerial set up a two-yard plunge by Tom Nowatzke. This time O'Brien converted and the score stayed 12-13 until the last-minute dramatics.

For the first time in history, a loser, linebacker Chuck Howley of the Cowboys, got the "Outstanding Player" Award, worth a new car.

"It's nice," admitted Howley, "but I wish we had won the game."

Counting the $15,000 winner's share here, each Colt earned $25,000 in post-season money. Each Cowboy got $7,500 here and a total of $18,500.

RETAINS LEAD

HOBART, Australia (UPI)—Don Cohan of the United States retained his lead in the Prince Philip Cup race for Dragon class boats Sunday, despite a third-place finish in the fifth heat of the international yachting competition.

SKATERS TITLE

MADONNA DI CAMPIGLIO, Italy (UPI)—Dutch and Swedish skaters won the "four courses" title Sunday in the International Speed Skating competition.

Baltimore Holds World Titles in Two Major Sporting Areas At Once

MIAMI (UPI)—Baltimore is the first city in 14 years to claim the world championship team in both pro baseball and football in the same season.

The Baltimore Orioles won the World Series in five games over Cincinnati and the Baltimore Colts made it a sweep Sunday with a 16-13 victory over the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl.

The last city to hold that was New York in 1956 when the Yankees won the World Series and the football Giants won the NFL crown.

Ironically, the Baltimore fans don't seem to be overwhelmed by the success of their teams. There were empty seats at the baseball playoff and World Series games played in Baltimore and there were also empty seats at both football playoff games played in Baltimore.

Palmer Still Chasing His Own Private Rainbow After Losing Bing Crosby's Annual Clambake

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI)—Arnold Palmer still is chasing his own private rainbow. Tommy Shaw isn't.

Palmer, who wants a tourney title so bad he can taste it, almost pulled it off at Bing Crosby's annual clambake during the weekend. But it was a case of close, but no cigar.

Shaw, who hadn't won a tourney himself since mid-1968, scrambled home with a two-under-par 70 Sunday to beat Palmer by two strokes and win the Crosby.

The 41-year-old Palmer hasn't won since the Danny Thomas Diplomat Classic at the end of 1969, but doubtless in his pursuit of a tourney title, will try again this week in the Phoenix Open.

Shaw, who won only $33,004 last year, picked up a check for $27,000 for winning the Crosby and added to the $1,265 he won at the Los Angeles Open in the year's first tourney, he now almost has matched his 1970 earnings in just two weeks.

"It's nice to win again," said the soon to be 29-year-old who won the Doral and Avco classics two years ago. "I really needed this title (Crosby) because I can't think of anything worse than having to play on Mondays again."

Shaw was referring to qualifying play, which is held Monday of each tourney week.

Palmer won $15,400 for his trouble, while Bob Murphy, who finished third at 282, four strokes behind Shaw, picked up a check for $9,570.

Jerry Heard, Tom Weiskopf and Howie Johnson tied at 281 and won $5,581 each.

Bob Lunn, winner of last week's Los Angeles Open, finished far down the list at 288, 1970 Player of the Year Billy Casper was at 290, PGA champ Dave Stockton was at 291, Jack Nicklaus had a 292 in his first tourney of the year and U.S. Open champ Tony Jacklin finished at 296.

Lee Trevino, 1970's leading money winner, pulled out of the final round because of illness in his family. He was far down the list anyway and left word he will pass up Phoenix this week.

More On Baltimore's Unclassical Victory

MIAMI (UPI)—The Baltimore Colts didn't exactly do it the classy way Brooks Robinson and the Baltimore Orioles did—but they'll take it anyway.

They fumbled five times, they threw three pass interceptions, they flubbed an extra point, and three of 'em even collided trying to stop a punt from going into the end zone—nothing like the super way Robinson scooped up hot grounders for—baseball's Orioles.

But the Colts are laughing all the way to the bank today to deposit their $15,000 checks—thanks to a 22-year-old long-haired rookie named Jim O'Brien, who redeemed all mistakes with a 32-yard field goal for a 16-13 win over the Dallas Cowboys.

"My mother's an astrologer and she told me we were gonna win," said O'Brien, who's not only an Aquarius himself (and isn't this the "Age of Aquarius"?) but also (sorry, Cowboys) a born Texan.

While O'Brien's tie-breaking boot, in the final nine seconds, was the simple reason for the Colts' victory in Super Bowl V Sunday, the football pundits came up with several other reasons today why the Colts were able to gain revenge for their 1969 Super Bowl upset by the New York Jets.

"Defense Did It"

"Our defense did it," explained Colt Coach Don McCafferty.

The big play was in the third period," said Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry. "That was when Duane Thomas fumbled on the Colt goal line. If he had scored, we would have had a 20-6 lead and the Colts would have had to do a lot of catching up. After that, it was nothing but errors for us."

"Earl Morrall did a fine job," explained Colt quarterback Johnny Unitas, who went out with a rib injury in the second period and then watched Morrall lead the Colts in dominating the second half.

"But a lot of fans were finding the key in the pass tossed by Cowboy quarterback Craig Morton with a minute to go that bounced off the hands of intended receiver Dan Reeves and was picked off by Colt Mike Curtis, who ran it back to the Cowboy 28 to set up O'Brien's field goal.

In the first period, the Cowboys had a first down on the Colt nine and had to settle for Mike Clark's three-pointer. In the second, they settled for another boot after having a first down on the Baltimore six. So when the Colts scored on weird play—John Mackey scoring on a 75-yard pass play from Unitas when the ball bounced off the hands of defender Mel Renfro—the Colts were tied up, 6-6.

Washington Blocks

Mark Washington blocked O'Brien's extra point when the eventual hero got it away a little slow. And the Cowboys went ahead again, 13-6, when Jethro Pugh's fumble recovery set up a seven-yard scoring run by Thomas on a swing pass from Morton.

The Colts didn't match that until the fourth period when Rich Volk's interception of a Morton aerial set up a two-yard plunge by Tom Nowatzke. This time O'Brien converted and the score stayed 12-13 until the last-minute dramatics.

For the first time in history, a loser, linebacker Chuck Howley of the Cowboys, got the "Outstanding Player" Award, worth a new car.

"It's nice," admitted Howley, "but I wish we had won the game."

Counting the $15,000 winner's share here, each Colt earned $25,000 in post-season money. Each Cowboy got $7,500 here and a total of $18,500.

STADIUM WILL BE DISCUSSED FOR BUFFALO

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI)—Erie County Executive B. John Tutuska and Buffalo Bills owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr., are scheduled to meet in Buffalo today to discuss all prospects of a stadium for the Buffalo area.

Wilson announced last Tuesday that he would be forced to move the Bills franchise out of Buffalo unless the community could come up with a solution to the stadium situation.

In a statement Saturday, Tutuska said it would be futile to keep alive the prospect of a domed stadium in suburban Lancaster.

Tutuska said he plans to ask the county legislature for authorization for him to enter into discussion with Governor Rockefeller and the state's Urban Development Corp. (UDC) to develop a program for a stadium suitable for the community.

"The UDC has the power and the financing ability to develop a stadium providing it has a suitable guarantee from Erie County," Tutuska said.

Curry And Adderley Are Big Winners

MIAMI (UPI)—Bill Curry and Herb Adderley are the big money winners of the Super Bowl. Each has taken away $37,500 from three appearances.

Adderley was with the Green Bay Packers for victories over Kansas City and Oakland in the first two world championship games, each worth $15,000 to the winning players. Sunday, he was at cornerback for the Dallas Cowboys and picked up $7,500 as a loser.

Curry, the Baltimore center, also played on the Green Bay team that won the first Super Bowl in 1957, and on the Baltimore team that lost to the New York Jets here two years ago.

Craig Morton Is Crying About Cowboys' Mistakes

MIAMI (UPI)—"We just made too many mistakes," moaned Dallas quarterback Craig Morton.

"We beat ourselves—We fumble and two interceptions killed us," agreed Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

The interception by Rich Volk for Baltimore's tying touchdown in the fourth quarter and the interception by Mike Curtis, setting up a Jim O'Brien field goal giving the Colts their 16-13 Super Bowl win, were the difference and Landry pointed to still another Dallas mistake as the game breaker. Running back Duane Thomas fumbled the ball on the one yard line early in the third quarter and it was recovered by Jim Duncan for the Colts.

"Thomas' fumble undoubtedly was the big play of the game," Landry said. "If he scores its 20-6 and they have a lot of catching to do."

Curtis' interception came on a pass from Morton to running back Dan Reeves that brushed Reeves' hands and landed in the arms of Baltimore's burly

Randy Matson Becoming Legendary Figure Fast

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Men whose names have almost become legendary in track and field showed they still were not ready to be relegated to the history of the sport and the record books in the 12th annual Sunkist Invitational meet.

Their names are Randy Matson, George Young and Bob Seagren.

Matson was voted Field Athlete of the meet and Outstanding Athlete of the meet Saturday night for equalling the indoor shot put mark of 67 feet, 10 inches.

Making a comeback after two years away from distance running, Young easily captured the two-mile event in 8:42.2. Although not close to his indoor mark which he shares with Kerry Pearce of Australia, Young beat an impressive field that included Pearce, Arne Kvalheim of Norway, Frank Shorter and Rex Maddaford of New Zealand.

Seagren, who has toyed with the idea of retirement, won the pole vault at 17 feet, 5 1/2 inches and barely missed at the indoor record height of 17-8.

"I'm in good shape," said

Young, voted Track Athlete of the meet.

Matson, who also considered retiring after winning the gold medal in the Mexico City Olympics, said, "I did better than I expected. I am in better shape than I have been ever before—at this time of the year."

There were other top performances in the meet witnessed by a crowd of 11,234 at the Sports Arena. Sam Bair of the Pacific Coast Club won the mile run in 4:01, fastest time of the 1970 indoor season. Juris Lulins of the Marine Corps captured the 1,000-yard run in 2:09. Jean-Louis Ravelomanantsoa of Madagascar, who attends Westmont College, took the 60-yard dash in 6.1 seconds.

Little Debbie Brill of Hailey, B.C., high-jumped six feet to indicate the 17-year-old may be one of the world's better women athletes, and Jarvis Scott ran the women's 500 in 1:06.5, just two-tenths off the world mark indoors.

A non-winner attracting much attention was Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who finished third in the senior men's 60-yard dash at the age of 55. It was won by 59-year-old Virgil McIntyre in 7.6 while the senator was timed in 8.1. Cranston said he intends to compete in other meets as his duties permit.

Rod Laver Adds Another $10,000 To His Winnings

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Rod Laver added another $10,000 to his winnings Saturday night by drubbing Roy Emerson, 6-2, 6-5, 7-5, in the fourth match of the $210,000 Tennis Championship Classic.

Laver, who will meet Arthur Ashe at New York's Madison Square Garden in the fifth match Thursday, has won $40,000 in 14 days of tournament action.

The victor lost his service only twice during the one-hour, 45-minute winner-takeall match at the Spectrum.

Laver outscored Emerson, 7-3, in a 12-point tie-breaker game. After the score reached 5-5 in the third set the tie-breaker counted for two games.

Laver broke through Emerson's service to lead, 4-2, in the opening set and won the set two games later when Emerson served a double fault on set point.

A double fault cost Emerson the eighth game of the second set. Laver then won the set in a 14-point game that ended with Emerson hitting an attempted backhand passing shot out of bounds.

Should Laver win all 14 matches in the classic he will take home $175,000. He has victories over Ken Rosewall, John Newcombe and Tony Roche, all fellow Australians.

Harvesters Looking For Sweet Revenge

The Pampa Harvesters are looking for a sweet revenge for a 69-68 defeat by the Monterey Plainsmen in a rematch tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in Harvesters Fieldhouse.

The Plainsmen have posted a 19 win-2 loss season this year and are a tough overall ball club. The key man on the Monterey team is 6'5" Grady Newton. Newton has fine ball handling capabilities as well as good back up from the other four strong starters.

Kent Bass, 5'8", has had good coaching in his father as he has recently went to Miami to coach pro-ball. Bass is shorter than most players on the roster but what he lacks in height he makes up in playing ability.

Overall the outlook for the game is another Harvesters victory. The tough come team played one of their better games of the season against Canyon making very few mistakes in rebounding, defense and hitting their shots well.

Monterey will be using a man to man defense with a half-court press. Offensively they will be running a continuity offense. This offense utilizes all of the players in every position with all men in constant motion.

A Look At Russia's Libs

Some of the fiery ladies who are spearheading the drive for the "liberation" of American women cite Russia as an example of the promised land of sexual equality. They ought to look behind the myth to the reality, suggests U.S. News & World Report. True enough, as is often pointed out at Women's li rallies, since 1936 the Soviet Constitution has accorded women in the U.S.S.R. "equal rights with men in all spheres of economic, state, cultural, public and political life."

But a close look at today's Russia shows that, even though much progress has been made in revolutionizing the role of women, actual equality remains largely theoretical. Although women outnumber men in the Soviet Union by 19 million, it is still the men who run things, says the magazine — from the Kremlin right on down.

Not one of the 11 members of the Communist party's all-powerful Politburo, which makes all the ultimate decisions, is a woman. There is no woman in the Party Secretariat, which conducts the day-to-day operations of the party. The U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers, which implements the party's decisions, has just one woman member.

About a third of the deputies in the Supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament, are women. But the Supreme Soviet is merely a rubber-stamp body which never fails to give unanimous assent to Politburo decisions. For a Russian woman holding a job is not just a right but an obligation under law. It is often also an absolute economic necessity.

Thus nearly half of all workers in Russian industry are women — but nine of every 10 plant managers are men. Three of every four school teachers in the Soviet Union are women — but three of every four high school principals are men. Almost 90 per cent of all Soviet medical personnel are women — but nearly half of all chief physicians and heads of hospitals are men. The constitutionally "liberated" Russian woman has little choice of employment, which means that she is often forced to exercise her "equality" by taking on hard, heavy work few American women would care to tackle, such as digging ditches or sweeping streets (while a male supervisor looks on). In Russia four of every 10 crane operators are women. So are one of every three cement makers, four of every 10 laborers in the machine-building and metal-working industries and nine of every 10 bus and streetcar conductors. And they do get equal pay with men on the same jobs.

Soviet sexual equality, however, does not extend to housework. Soviet husbands are far less likely than their American counterparts to lend a helping hand around the house, says U.S. News. Add to that the fact that only one family in 10 has a vacuum cleaner or one in three a refrigerator — which means daily shopping, which in Russia means spending hours standing in line.

In one respect, perhaps, the Soviet system might appeal to American lib types: Russian women are not treated as sex objects. Pornography is not for sale on newsstands. There are no displays of pin-up girls. There are no beauty contests. Cosmetics and pretty clothes are hard to come by and expensive and are frowned on by the ever-watchful state.

So far, says the magazine, in spite of a few cautious, wistful complaints, Russian women show no signs of wanting to organize or demonstrate for better treatment of their sex. But if they ever do, it is extremely unlikely that they will follow the example of some American "bra burners." Russian women have worked too hard to earn the money to pay for their bras and have stood in line too long to buy them.

Warned But Still Vague

Researchers with New York State's Department of Environmental Conservation have discovered mercury levels in preserved fish that are twice as high as levels at which the Federal Drug Administration now bars fish from the market. Some of the fish were caught in New York lakes as long ago as 1927.

Does this mean that the current mercury scare is just that — a scare? Have some Americans been eating mercury-contaminated fish for 40 years, and perhaps longer, with no apparent ill effects? Or have there been effects we are not aware of?

The answer to all these questions is that we don't know. Only about a dozen preserved fish have been examined so far, and no reputable scientist would base a judgment on such a small sample. The case of the New York fish may be an isolated phenomenon which subsequent investigation may explain.

We do know that in high enough concentrations, mercury can cause brain damage, blindness and birth defects. But are worldwide mercury levels rising and, if so, at what point would they constitute an outright peril?

We don't know.

RUSSIAN CHROME
A lesson in the economics of essential minerals can be learned from the latest Russian price squeeze on chrome ore. Those who would like to put the U.S. at the mercy of foreign sources for vital minerals should not be allowed to ignore this costly lesson.

Prior to 1967, vital chrome for uses such as U.S. defense, for stock piles and for commercial needs in metal alloys were filled by purchasing high quality ore from companies in Rhodesia, which with South Africa owns 96 per cent of the known chrome ore reserves. Since the price for Rhodesian ore was only $25 per ton and the Rhodesian supplies purchased were largely owned by U.S. investors, the Rhodesian ore was a double bargain and helpful in our critical balance-of-payments problem.

For more than four years, the U.S. has banned our citizens from trading with Rhodesia, in compliance with United Nations sanctions urged by the Afro-Asian block of "neutralist" nations and the former Socialist Labour government of Britain. This short-sighted policy of the British socialists and other leftist governments failed to cripple the Rhodesian economy, as socialists and communists around the world had hoped. It did harm the U.S.

Most of all it helped the Russian Reds. Russia has less than 2 percent of the world's chrome ore and it is poorer quality than Rhodesian ore but 10 times more plentiful than U.S. ore. The Russian communist rulers cut off most civilian uses and sell ore in the U.S. market for hard cash. The Reds continue to squeeze the U.S. by raising prices, now more than double at $56 per ton and demanding more than $70. There are those who would like to see in the same shape on petroleum, dependent on foreign sources.

With Some Reservation

By INJUN WOODY

It is uncanny how far we have descended in this country when we are so permissive as to allow the waving of enemy flags like the Viet-Cong or Nazi banners in public places and even furnish protection for such undesirable to do so.

Not only that, out in California, the protestors filed a complaint against John Wayne, saying he was the one that was disturbing the peace. Wayne allegedly protested a little against the flag when they moved it in his face and began making some remarks. Now I don't think it is a very good idea for protestors of this ilk to start exchanging any light repartee with John Wayne. They might find themselves waving a red nose instead of the flag.

One of the protestors said that Wayne called him a dirty name. O, La-de-dah! You know good old John wouldn't do a thing like that! He might say, "Heavens to Murgatroid" or "My Goodness!" but never would he call a Viet-Cong sympathizer a dirty name! If necessary, I'll stand by him on that score.

Nope. As far as I am concerned, John is as pure as the driven snow. And waving a dirty old Viet Cong flag in his face will never sully him one bit.

Survey Shows Muskie Has Many Things Going For Him

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Sen. Edmund Muskie has so many things going for him at this stage in the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination fight that his prospective rivals simply can't cope.

When you talk to knowledgeable people in 15 sample states around the nation, as I have just done, you get quickly beyond the obvious — the fact that Muskie had a head start because he was 1968 vice presidential nominee and did a lot of field foraging in 1969-70.

What's working for him as 1971 dawns is the tremendous, contagious momentum that base, the fact that he is getting the money to fuel his chosen pace, and the fact that not too many influential Democrats want to shed fresh torrents of party blood so soon after the going of 1968.

The 15-state survey turned up astonishingly little interest in Sen. George McGovern, probably Muskie's chief rival today, and only the most occasional talk about such others as Senators Henry M. Jackson of Washington, Harold Hughes of Iowa, Birch Bayh of Indiana, and former Attorney General Ramsey Clark.

McGovern, South Dakota sources say, will drive hard in primaries everywhere. But few think he can get the big money. And the questioner has to be surprised at the absence of attention to him in such celebrated liberal centers as New York and California.

Everything seems to be meshing for Muskie. He gets money partly because his crowded calendar convinces giver he has the zest for the ordeal. The money helps him keep the hot pace.

His present trip to Europe and the Middle East is only his first foreign venture of the year. Tentatively, he plans visits to Southeast Asia and Africa.

His scheduled Jan. 22-26 trip to California, where he will keynote a Democratic conclave in Sacramento and deliver set speeches in both San Francisco and Los Angeles, is a bold plunge into strong liberal territory where he still needs to sell himself hard.

Already his February date book is full and aides are penciling in for March and beyond.

His separate political establishment in downtown Washington, many months old, is expanding and by March 1 will have a new top fund raiser and principal political operative among other newcomers.

Anyone who surveys key Democrats these days can't help being impressed by the overwhelming wish of many to avoid the bitterness and bloodshed of 1968, which culminated in the debacle at Chicago.

A Minnesota leader voiced this response: "Our people are bruised, battered and scared. They don't want anything like that again."
More is involved than just weariness with traumatic experience. Top Democrats have persuaded themselves that President Nixon is truly vulnerable, that two terms for a sitting president are not so automatic as of old. They don't want to weaken themselves with internal bleeding.

This attitude helps explain why Muskie so quickly is pulling committed support (a lot of it not yet open) from such surprising quarters as New York's liberal reformers. They want to win; they see Muskie making the big moves; they dismiss as ludicrous the fringe liberal gestures toward Ramsey Clark and GOP Mayor John Lindsay.

The money thing works for Muskie in so many ways. A really big struggle for the 1972 nomination, with two or three key rivals, would drain off funds badly needed for the fall campaign. The party's undischarged $9.3 million debt puts the 1972 credit in doubt and lays a premium on chary use of available resources.

Question Box

QUESTION:—Does anyone know for what purpose the excise tax on telephones is for? I have tried to find someone who knows. Haven't the answer yet. My understanding was that it was to be removed last June.

ANSWER:—The purpose of the excise is the same as for any other tax — to raise revenue for government.

It is true that the tax on telephone bills and a number of other special taxes were levied during World War II. At that time, it was claimed that in addition to raising revenue, the special taxes were being levied to reduce the use of certain facilities that were crowded, such as the telephone lines and transportation systems. It was promised that the taxes would be eliminated after the emergency.

Some of the taxes have been eliminated or reduced. For instance the tax on air transportation to Hawaii was eliminated. But when the time comes for the special legislation to end the national government contends the funds are "needed" to help pay the expenses of government. With the national government apparently committed to a almost continuous deficit, the likelihood that the wartime emergency taxes will be completely ended is not promising.

One reader reports she refused to pay the excise taxes totaling $6.52, and that the Internal Revenue Service has threatened to sell her home to satisfy the tax charge. And we have no doubt that it can do that under present laws.

Pain At The Right Spot
And Time Indicate Ulcer
Often you can make a diagnosis of a peptic ulcer from the symptoms it causes. When the symptoms are sufficiently characteristic, the ulcer is usually there even if it cannot be seen by X-ray studies.

The most constant symptom of peptic ulcer is pain. It may be a burning ache, cramplike or growing pain. If the peptic ulcer is in the lower esophagus the pain is at the lower end of the breastbone and may begin during eating or soon afterward.

The pain from an ulcer in the stomach usually starts within an hour after eating. It is usually just under the left rib margin and sometimes over the lower chest area. Duodenal ulcer pain commonly begins two to three hours after eating in a small area between the navel and the lower end of the breastbone.

Rarely, an ulcer will cause back pain or if it involves a portion of the small intestine quite some distance from the stomach, the pain may be in the middle of the abdomen or even in the lower left abdomen.

A peptic ulcer usually does not cause pain before breakfast. This more often is "burning" due to nervousness or anxiety. Ulcer pain frequently occurs at night—one to four hours after going to bed. If the pain is relieved by antacid or food, it usually does not recur until after breakfast. Pain at night usually means a severe ulcer or formation of large amounts acid-pepsin juice from spilling the stomach.

The ulcer patient soon learns that his discomfort can be relieved by food. While the stomach churns, the valves at the inlet and outlet of the stomach are closed, preventing acid-pepsin juice from spilling out over the ulcer. The acid stomach contents bathing exposed nerve endings in and around the ulcer cause pain.

The typical ulcer patient eats when the pain occurs and if he is having pain at night, he eats or drinks milk for relief.

Of course, antacids relieve peptic ulcer pain. Baking soda (not good treatment) usually provides some relief.

Some patients have a sensation of fullness in the pt of the stomach. Nausea and vomiting occur between meals but usually along with typical pain.

Among typical symptoms of a duodenal ulcer is the occasional patient with diarrhea. The patient has an overactive digestive tract and the ulcer is only part of the picture. Eventually, a careful analysis of the problem identifies pain in the typical location above the navel or adequate X-ray studies show an ulcer.

It is true that an ulcer may not fit the "textbook" picture but most of them cause problems so much like those listed above that if you have these symptoms you can be fairly certain you have a peptic ulcer.

Inside Washington

Russia Pushing Its SST Sales

WASHINGTON—While Congress temporizes about the fate of the supersonic transport plane, the Russians are stepping up their efforts here to sell their own version of the SST.

The Russian Tu-144, like the British and French Concorde, is a rival to the proposed American SST which is being developed by Boeing. The Tu-144 is one of several planes with which the Russians hope to edge into the world market for commercial airliners.

During the final days of the congressional session, while the Senate was stalled in its debate over whether to continue support for an SST, a two-page color spread advertising the Russian planes and featuring the Tu-144 was published in the Marketing Directory issue of the U.S. trade publication, Aviation Week.

The advertisement was sponsored by Aviaexport, "the national organization for export of the entire range of Soviet-made commercial airplanes, helicopters, avionics instruments, airport and ground handling equipment."

Aviaexport advertised its Moscow headquarters address, its telephone number, and its address for commercial teletype, asserting that it can "meet buyer's needs in any part of the world."

A variety of planes, engines and other airline equipment were pictured in the advertisement. The Tu-144, with a swept-back wing and tilted-down, pointed nose, was in the preferred position, top-left in the photo display.

PARIS RENDEZVOUS—The Aviaexport advertisement suggested a "rendezvous at the 29th Paris Air Show, Le Bourget, 27-May-6 June 1971." The annual air show is, of course, the big trade gathering for the aircraft-airline business. Aviaexport has already placed other Tu-144 advertising in U.S. trade publications to appear prior to the Paris Air Show. Advertising for the British-French Concorde has already appeared in Aviation Week.

These merchandising efforts by planemakers in other nations are a central feature of the drive of SST supporters here to continue long-range federal support when the issue comes up again in Congress in early spring. SST supporters here stress that three versions of the plane, British, French and Russian, are already flying.

Heavyweight Boxing Again In Realm Of Big Business

By PAUL HARVEY
Cassius Clay, or whatever his name is, and Joe Frazier, whoever he is, will perform together in New York on March 8 in what is called a prize fight for the Heavyweight Championship of the World.

Admittedly, I don't know much about sports. In this newspaper you have a competent authority on sports. He's sufficiently competent to know that this occasion will be something less than that.

Here we're not talking about "sports," we're talking about a performance. We're not talking about "athletes," we're talking about "actors."
Boxing has become big business again.

The first 10 rows will sell for $250 a seat, and they will sell. Promoters will divvy up millions of dollars from a one-night, two-man show.

America's improving prenatal care, improving standard of living, improving training know-how are combining to produce a superlative new generation of genuine athletes. Todays young, with discipline, can develop into faster-running, higher-jumping, farther-throwing, heavier-lifting, better-coordinated competitors than any in the history of the world; record books must be amended every year.

And where I am not opposing this Clay-Frazier circus act, it does seem a shame to dignify it by including it on the "sports" page.

Schoolagers have less interest in prize fighting than our generation did. Colorful Cassius Clay is a singular attraction to them.

They argue that the question is not whether there will be an SST but whether the United States will be in a position to compete with its plane — an SST which will be bigger, and therefore more attractive to airline operators, than the others.

The future for the U.S. SST is very much in doubt, however. Opponents, led by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., are sure they can kill it in the Senate, and they believe last fall's elections strengthened opposition to the SST in the House.

PROXMIRE PUT-ON?—For the time being, Proxmire and his economic committee have turned to an investigation of U.S. arms aid abroad. There is more than a hint that another Proxmire put-on — is involved.

In July, when Proxmire complained that Congress had been gulled by the Pentagon in its development of the so-called "electronic battlefield," we recalled that Proxmire was a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee. We suggested that he should have seen the unclassified testimony on the electronic developments and could have obtained the classified data — before the committee voted approval.

Now Proxmire is saying that is an exercise in "double-think" for the so-called Food for Peace Program to generate funds with which foreign governments have bought war materials here. Once again, he says in outraged innocence, Congress has been kept in the dark.

"The issue," says Proxmire, "is not whether we should do those things... the issue is whether the Congress has full knowledge before they are being done."

The record also shows that Proxmire was a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee from April 21, 1958, until August 27, 1963. In that capacity, according to the record, he participated in committee approval of two extensions of Public Law 490, which has been given short, leaves on-life by Congress over the years.

Once again it is hard to believe that Proxmire didn't know what he was doing (or was too shy to ask) when the Agriculture Committee considered whether to extend the well-publicized food-for-peace-minded Proxmire have possibly NOT known how the money generated by U.S. food assistance was to be used by food recipients?
Is Proxmire putting us on?

And they are likely to translate their unrelated feelings toward his draft status into admiration for his athletic prowess.

Joe Louis would not have messed around with him for more than one minute.

Joe Louis reigned for 11 years taking on all kinds, dummy slugger Tony Galento, massive Primo Carnera and fancy-dan boxer Billy Conn.

And each in turn and more than 20 others fell before the Louis sledgehammer.

Clay, when out from behind the false front, admits he's not a knockout fighter. "I have to stab and stab and cut my man down," he says.

"I can't say what I'm about to like I'd like to because somebody might sue and I can't prove complicity.

But if fight promoting is like it once was, Clay would have had to carry Oscar Bonavena for 15 rounds—then praise him — even publicly suggest that he, Clay, "may be sipping."

"In the old days they'd have done it that way to influence the betting odds in favor of the next opponent, so somebody behind the scenes could bet a bundle and make a killing. When Clay was saying "I think I can whip him," I was thinking "I should hope so; I could... anyway, George Blanda and I could."
I'm aware that this mention of the Clay-Frazier performance contributes to promoting it. That's all right. There's nothing wrong with either legitimate acting or legitimate fighting but spectators should know which they're watching.
