U.S., EC negotiators take up farm subsidies

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heads of the world's three major economic institutions issued a rare joint statement today calling on political leaders to take the "courageous and visionary" decisions needed to conclude global free trade talks.

The top executives of the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade warned of dire consequences to an already fragile world economy if the trade talks, known as the Uruguay Round, are allowed to collapse.

"Failure to conclude would validate the rising wave of protectionist rhetoric and increase the danger of a vicious circle in which heightened protectionism impedes economic recovery and the lack of recovery in turn feeds protectionist pressure," the joint statement said.

"With so much at stake, political hesitations and vested interest must be put aside. Courageous and visionary decisions need to be made quickly," the statement said.

GATT Director General Peter Sutherland said that it was time for all countries to make the painful decisions to dismantle trade barriers that protect such politically powerful sectors as agriculture in order to get greater benefits for all.

Sutherland read the statement with IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus and World Bank President Lewis Preston sitting beside him.

A key meeting was taking place today between U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Sir Leon Brittan, chief trade negotiator for the 12-nation European Community, in an effort to resolve a nasty battle over farm subsidies.

The French are demanding that an agreement on scaling back agricultural subsidies that was reached last November be modified. However, the Clinton administration is adamant in insisting that it will not renegotiate the so-called Blair House accord.

Kantor and Brittan were all smiles as they shook hands for photographers at the start of sessions that were expected to address not only the French demands, but a number of other unresolved issues in the global free trade talks.

Neither official was willing to predict how successful they would be in resolving the huge differences between the two sides.

"We are going to have a chat and see how we get on," Brittan told reporters.

Today's joint statement by Sutherland, Camdessus and Preston served to underscore comments made by the IMF's policy setting interim committee in their final communiqué issued Sunday night.

In that statement, the 24-member interim committee called for "leadership and vision" from all countries in order to bring the trade talks to a successful conclusion by the end of this year.

Beyond the strong rhetoric, Sutherland said he had heard nothing so far at the annual meetings of the IMF and World Bank that would make them believe any country was ready to bring new offers to the bargaining table.

In a pointed speech to the IMF session Sunday, Sutherland said that political leaders in the major industrialized countries were to blame for lacking the political will to dismantle their own trade barriers.

Noting that leaders of the world's seven largest industrial countries have repeatedly urged completion of the Uruguay Round, Sutherland said, "We still find governments failing to do what they know they must do."

President Clinton and leaders of Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada proclaimed a breakthrough during this year's seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo with agreement on major cuts in manufacturing tariffs.

This tariff-cutting package was expected to provide renewed momentum, but the talks in Geneva have faltered again over the U.S.-EC impasse in agriculture.

The Uruguay Round is the most ambitious effort at dismantling trade barriers ever attempted. It seeks to lower tariffs, cut back farm subsidies, expand GATT rules to cover service industries and beef up protection of copyrights and patents.

The World Bank underscored the financial stakes if the trade talks are successful, saying in a new report Sunday that it would provide a $213 billion-a-year boost to the world economy by expanding trade.

World Bank economists estimated that industrialized countries would receive $135 billion of this gain while developing nations would enjoy an $85 billion increase in annual incomes.

These gains would be offset by about $7 billion in annual economic losses, mainly in very poor countries heavily dependent on food imports or who grow crops that would suffer price declines as trade barriers were removed, the World Bank said in its report, "Trade Liberalization: Global Economic Implications."

Russian parliament asks army to revolt

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Demoralized lawmakers appealed today to the Russian armed forces to revolt and oust Boris Yeltsin, but their support continued to dwindle as the military stood firm behind the president.

Yeltsin was cheered by thousands of people in Red Square and more marched through the Russian capital Sunday in a major show of support for the president, who dissolved parliament six days ago and ordered new elections.

A top parliament supporter was preparing today to switch sides to Yeltsin, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported. Viktor Barannikov, who was named security minister by parliament, told presidential aides he was loyal to Yeltsin and would leave parliament, the agency said.

Barannikov could not be reached for comment and government officials declined to confirm or deny the report. Such a defection could be a major blow to parliament.

The jittery lawmakers claimed early today that Yeltsin ordered riot police to storm parliament where they have been holed up since Tuesday. But there was no attack and what panic there was was reportedly set off by a backfiring truck.

Guards used chairs and tables to set up barricades in the corridors after rumors of the imminent government attack swept the building. Such rumors have repeatedly gripped parliament, but Yeltsin has said he will not use force.

Later, police ringing parliament stopped people from entering the grounds; people inside would be allowed to leave freely, they said. Police attempted a similar move last week, but later restored access.

Lawmakers claimed to have received telegrams of support from some army and navy units, but there was no sign of any military support for the hard-liners. The mood in the building, called the White House, was increasingly despondent as about 100 lawmakers morosely deliberated what to do next.

Some 300 supporters, many of them elderly, slept on carpets in the corridors of parliament. A small group of volunteers, armed with rifles and dressed in military fatigues, stood guard.

Final votes set on tax, budget

The Pampa City Commission will meet in regular session at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the City Commission chamber on the third floor of City Hall.

Items scheduled to be discussed at the meeting include:

- The second reading of ordinance No. 1233 levying ad valorem taxes.
- The second reading of ordinance No. 1234 adopting the 1993-94 budget.
- The second reading of ordinance No. 1235 granting a specific use permit for the operation of a miniature golf course.
- The second reading of ordinance No. 1236 repealing Article II of Chapter 16 of the Code of Ordinances, which has to do with purchasing and installing security systems.
- The adoption of a resolution having to do with guaranteed cost of workers' compensation insurance.
- The authorization of the interim

There was no sign of trouble today in Moscow as people headed for work and businesses and shops opened as normal. Commuter traffic streamed past the White House.

The lawmakers, headed by Vice President Alexander Rutskoi and parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, have been camped out in parliament since Yeltsin ordered the legislature dissolved.

Rutskoi claimed today he would defend parliament to "the last bullet," but some lawmakers and aides complained privately that parliament's leaders did not know what to do and were increasingly desperate.

Yeltsin appeared unperturbed by parliament's increasingly shrill attacks on him. Accompanied by Defense Minister Pavel Grachev and Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov, he waded into surging crowds on Red Square for a free concert by the Washington-based National Symphony Orchestra and its conductor, former dissident Mstislav Rostropovich.

A concert announcer urged "faith in the president and in Russia's future," and the crowd responded "Hurrah! Hurrah!"

"Yeltsin is one of us and he must succeed," said Nina Shtanina, a 69-year-old pensioner. "I took part in the Second World War, and if we won that fight, we can win this one," she said.

Yeltsin told Russian television the concert provided a "splendid" respite from the nation's political battles.

"It is a great nation," he said. "Look how many people have come here. Recent days have been rather restless, but people are calm, they work and they have faith in their president. I'm very grateful to them for that."

Later, pro-Yeltsin demonstrators marched with arms linked down broad Tverskaya Street — Gorky Street in Soviet times.

They carried Russian flags, pictures of the president and placards with slogans such as "Shame on the White House," "Boris, You're Right Again" and "Elections Are the Will of the People."

In St. Petersburg, leaders of many of Russia's far-flung regions and republics proposed immediate, simultaneous parliamentary and presidential elections and a cancellation of recent decrees by Yeltsin and lawmakers.

city manager to execute a solid waste disposal contract with the cities of McLean and White Deer.

• The appointment of people to the M.K. Brown Auditorium Advisory Board, the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board.

• And authorizing the interim city manager to execute a contract for a demolition contractor.

Prior to the regular meeting of the City Commission, the mayor and commissioners will meet in a work session. The work session will be held at 4 p.m. in the third floor conference room in City Hall.

Items which will be discussed, but not acted upon, include:

- An overview of the cable regulations.
 - And the acquisition of used landfill equipment
- The commission normally meets on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month.

Grant Gething, center, visits with members of the Gray County Historical Commission tour of the Bill Gething Ranch on Saturday. Listening to the discussion are, from left, Eloise Lane, Marie Smith, Lillian Skelly, Ethel Johnson and Darlene Birkes. Others touring the ranch included Ann and Jim Davidson, Larry and Darlene Holmes, Iris Ragsdale, Jo Scoggin, Lucille Foster, Mary Reeve and Edyth Jackson. The Gething Ranch is located on the eastern edge of Gray County. Those taking the tour looked at lakes fed by springs and black locust trees planted for fence posts, as well as the 103 apple trees on the ranch. The Gething family came to the area in 1892. The trademark of the ranch is orange pickups and horse trailers. The Gray County Historical Commission has at least one tour a year. The next program will be in November at the Lovett Memorial Library, with a videotape provided by the Square House Museum of Panhandle.

U.S. says USSR took American POWs from Korea

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government says it has "broad and convincing" evidence that the Soviet Union secretly and illegally moved hundreds of U.S. Korean War prisoners to its territory in the early 1950s and never released them.

It is by far the most dramatic and comprehensive assertion by Washington on a Soviet connection to missing U.S. servicemen since the Korean fighting ended in 1953.

The allegation was made in a detailed presentation by a senior State Department official at a meeting with Russian officials in Moscow earlier this month.

The evidence is detailed in a 77-page report titled "The Transfer of U.S. Korean War POWs to the Soviet Union." It was given to the Russians at the Moscow meeting but the Clinton administration has refused to publicly release it.

A copy of the report was obtained by The Associated Press.

"The Soviets transferred several hundred U.S. Korean War POWs to the USSR and did not repatriate them," the report said. "This transfer was mainly politically motivated with the intent of holding them as political hostages, subjects for intelligence exploitation and skilled labor within the camp system."

It asserted that the evidence gave a "consistent and mutually reinforcing description" of Soviet intelligence services forcibly moving U.S. POWs to the USSR at a time when Soviet forces, including anti-aircraft units, were active in North Korea.

It did not assess how long the American servicemen — mostly Air Force aviators — may have lived, or whether any might still be alive in the former Soviet Union.

Just last year the U.S. government said it had no evidence of such transfers. Washington has known, though, since the end of the war that some evidence existed that U.S. POWs from Korea had been taken to the Soviet Union. It asked Moscow for information on this in May 1954 and again in July 1956. Both times the Soviet government denied any knowledge of U.S. POWs on its soil.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin said last year that Soviet records showed 59 captured U.S. servicemen in Korea were interrogated by Soviet officials, and that 12 crew members of U.S. aircraft shot down in reconnaissance missions unrelated to the Korea war were transferred to Soviet territory. But the Yeltsin government has yet to concede that Americans were taken from Korea.

In the three years of fighting in Korea, in which the United States led a U.N. force on the side of South Korea against communist North Korea, 54,246 Americans were killed.

The government lists 8,140 as unaccounted for, although the number of missing for which there is no direct evidence of death is estimated at 2,195. Many of the "unaccounted for" were not recovered because they were buried in battlefield graves in North Korea or died in POW camps.

The U.S. report on U.S. Korean

War prisoners taken to the Soviet Union gave no specific figure but the analysis seemed to indicate it is fewer than 600.

It identified by name 31 missing Air Force F-86 fighter pilots who are among the most likely identifiable servicemen to have been taken by the Soviets for their knowledge of the plane's capabilities, plus six other Air Force aviators about whom the U.S. government believes Russia has additional information.

The report describes a top-secret program of the Soviet MGB (predecessor to the KGB) to capture American fliers and other U.S. and allied troops in Korea, interrogate them, and then transfer them into Joseph Stalin's notorious Gulag system of slave labor camps in Siberia and other parts of the Soviet Union.

"The range of eyewitness testimony as to the presence of U.S. Korean War POWs in the Gulag is so broad and convincing that we cannot dismiss it," the report said, adding that the prisoners probably were forced to assume new identities.

The report given to the Russians this month is based on a variety of sources: U.S. government records dating to the beginning of the Korean conflict in 1950, documents made available by Moscow since the collapse of the Soviet Union, and recent interviews by U.S. investigators with former Soviet officials, including retired officers who said they participated in the transfers.

Accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following accident in the 72-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

FRIDAY, Sept. 24

3:59 p.m. - An unknown driver struck vehicles driven by Tampa Lee Luna, 622 N. Russell, and Janet Leach Stowers, 2376 Chestnut, in the 1200 block of North Hobart. There were no injuries in the accident, and no citation was issued.

5:55 p.m. - A 1984 White Dodge Caravan driven by Jeremy Dale Simpson, 1924 N. Christy, collided with a 1987 Ford LTD driven by LaDonna Burrell Honeycutt, 1831 N. Faulkner, in the 2100 block of North Hobart. A non-incapacitating injury was reported to a passenger in Honeycutt's car, Heather Roberts, 1831 N. Faulkner, and she was taken to Coronado Hospital by ambulance. She was treated and released. Citations were issued to Simpson for failure to yield right of way at a stop sign and to Honeycutt for failure to wear a seat belt while driving.

2:58 p.m. - A 1984 Dodge Ram pickup driven by Jim Bob Nunley, Lefors, collided with a 1979 Oldsmobile Delta driven by Rosa Linda Garcia, 712 S. Finley, in the 100 block of South Cuyler. A non-incapacitating injury was reported to a passenger in Garcia's car, Ladislav Chavez, 909 E. Browning, and he was taken to Coronado Hospital by ambulance. Chavez was treated and released. A citation was issued to Nunley for failure to yield right of way at a stop sign and not having auto insurance or a driver's license on his person. A citation was issued to Garcia for not having a driver's license.

SATURDAY, Sept. 25

7:42 p.m. - A 1980 Ford Pinto driven by John William Hess III, 221 E. Atchison, collided with a 1973 Chevrolet Impala driven by Vona Lynn DuBose, 434 Carr, in the 1000 block of Yeager. Possible injuries were reported to two passengers in DuBose's car - DuBose, the driver, and Sunday Lea Derryberry, 434 Carr. Citations were issued to Hess for failure to stop and render aid and driving with an expired license and to DuBose for having no proof of financial responsibility.

12:15 a.m. - A 1986 Chevrolet Blazer driven by John Lee Herring, 505 Naida, struck a tree in the 1800 block of West Montagu after the driver lost control of the vehicle. There were no injuries in the accident. A citation is pending from the DPS. Damage to the tree, which is owned by Jean Hopson, 533 N. Roberta, was estimated at $250.

SUNDAY, Sept. 26

From 3 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. - An unknown vehicle struck a legally parked 1987 Renault owned by R.D. Dalton, 508 S. Barnes, on private property at 328 E. Frederic. No injury was reported from the accident, and no citation was filed. There was no damage to the Renault reported from the accident.

DPS - Accident

SUNDAY, Sept. 26

1:15 p.m. - An eastbound 1986 Dodge pickup truck driven by James Thomas Bolin, 63, 403 N. Somerville, landed in the north bar ditch along Gray County Road E after Bolin lost control of his vehicle. A sandtruck had dumped a partial load of sand in the eastbound lane, contributing to the one-vehicle accident. There was no injury in the accident, and no citation was issued. Damage to the Dodge pickup truck was minor.

Clarification

During last week's accreditation process, the Pampa Police Department was found to be in 100 percent compliance with mandatory and optional standards for accreditation. To be accredited, a department must meet 100 percent of a set of mandatory requirements and 80 percent of a set of optional requirements. Pampa Police Department met 92 percent of the optional requirements, putting them above the 80 percent minimum level required for accreditation, according to Lt. Steve Chance, accreditation manager.

Commerce secretary denies taking bribe after visits with Vietnamese businessman

By MARCY GORDON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Commerce Secretary Ron Brown met three times with a businessman who has been accused of conspiring to pay Brown $700,000 to help lift the U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam but he accepted no money, sources close to Brown say.

The sources, who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity, confirmed news reports that Brown met three times with the Vietnamese-American businessman, Nguyen Van Hao. But they denied allegations that Brown accepted money from Vietnam. Brown himself also denied the accusations in a brief written statement released Sunday night.

After President Clinton nominated Brown as commerce secretary last December, Brown flatly rejected Hao's proposal to have Brown represent his company in proposed business deals linking the United States and Vietnam, the sources said.

No charges have been brought against Brown, who has denied the allegations. But a federal grand jury in Miami recently has investigated the allegations - made by Bigh T. Ly, a Vietnamese business consultant - that Brown accepted $700,000 from the Vietnamese government.

Ly and Hao, both of whom live in Florida, are former business partners.

Hao, who was South Vietnam's vice premier for commerce and the only top official allowed to stay on in Vietnam's new communist government in 1975, appeared before the grand jury last month. He has denied Ly's allegations, and has on several occasions denied to reporters ever meeting Brown.

The sources close to Brown said he has not been asked to testify before the grand jury but expects at some point to be interviewed by federal investigators.

Since the end of the Vietnam War, the U.S. government has banned trade with that country. But some U.S. companies have long sought an opportunity to do business in Vietnam and have pressed the government to end the restrictions.

Two weeks ago, Clinton relaxed the U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam, allowing American companies to compete for the first time for internationally funded development projects in that country.

In his statement Sunday, Brown did not say whether he met with Hao, but repeated his assertion last month that he never received any money from Vietnam or anyone representing its interests. At that time, Brown also denied "any kind of business relationship, ... any kind of relationship of any kind on this matter."

Brown's new statement called the allegation "as preposterous as it is false."

"Secretary Brown understands that, as a high-ranking public official, an inquiry into any allegation, no matter how absurd, is appropriate," the statement said. "As his conduct has been entirely legal, he is confident the inquiry will soon be completed and will fully confirm this statement."

pleted and will fully confirm this statement."

Jim Desler, Brown's spokesman at the Commerce Department, declined to answer any questions on the statement.

Brown's newly hired defense attorney, former federal prosecutor Reid Weingarten, also declined any comment on the matter.

Earlier Sunday, The Miami Herald and ABC News, quoting unidentified sources, said they learned that one of the three meetings between Brown and Hao took place in February at Brown's Commerce Department office in Washington. The Herald quoted sources as saying a government limousine was sent to bring Hao and two friends of Brown's to the Commerce Department.

The sources close to Brown confirmed that the February meeting took place, but they said it was strictly a social visit in which no business was discussed.

But even that would contradict what Desler told the Herald last March, when he denied that Brown had ever met Hao, knew Hao or discussed business with Vietnam.

The sources said Brown was contacted last October by Florida businessman Marc Ashton, whom Brown has known for 10 years, who said he was exploring with Hao the possibility of U.S. business ventures in Vietnam. The sources said Ashton predicted former President Bush would lift the U.S. trade embargo before leaving office, and that Hao and Ashton wanted to hire a Washington lawyer-lobbyist to help them.

Brown, an attorney and lobbyist who also was a registered foreign agent, was chairman of the Democratic National Committee at the time of the contacts.

The sources said Brown met with Ashton and Hao in mid-November, before Brown was named commerce secretary. They said Brown showed no interest in becoming involved.

Hispanic faculty sought by college district

DALLAS (AP) - Advocates of more minority teachers say having professors with similar ethnic ties can be as important to a student as the quality of the teaching.

Critics of affirmative action disagree, saying that qualification, not race, should be the key factor in hiring.

Freddy Carrillo, who is studying journalism at Mountain View College - part of the Dallas County Community College District - said he never connected with other teachers the way he does with government instructor Edith Cardenas-Alvarado.

"She told us her name ... and I said, 'Wow! She's Mexican,'" recalled Carrillo, 21. "I've never had a Mexican teacher before."

For many Hispanic students in community colleges, seeing Hispanic instructors has been rare.

Of the 681 full-time faculty members on Dallas County Community College District campuses, 39 - less than 6 percent - are Hispanic. The vast majority, 82 percent, is white.

In all, minorities make up about 18 percent of the full-time teaching force in the community college district, which serves about 51,300 students at seven campuses. Nearly 12 percent of those students are Hispanic.

More than 500,000 Hispanics live in North Texas. That number could reach 1 million by 2000, according to projections by the Aspen Institute, a research organization in Washington, D.C.

"What's happening in Dallas represents what's happening around the country," said Dr. Edward Codina, director of research for the San Antonio-based Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities.

"You have a lot of growth in Hispanics and they're coming through the (school) system and now they're heading to the community colleges," he said.

Hector Escamilla Jr., chairman of the Greater Dallas Hispanic Chamber of Commerce's board, agreed that more Hispanics are enrolling in community college.

"But one of the things we need to work on is keeping them in. ... We want them to graduate from the community college. In that regard, it helps to have people who look like us as teachers and at all levels."

The seven-member college district board made history last year when Dallas lawyer Steve Salazar became the first Hispanic elected to serve on it. Board members said they are committed to diversity.

Meanwhile, Chancellor Bill Wenrich has promised to put training programs on the campuses to remind people of the district's hiring goals and procedures.

"We're not going to pick anybody because of their race," Wenrich said. "We're going to pick the best-qualified people."

One winner has ticket for Saturday's Lotto

By The Associated Press

One ticket purchased in the latest Lotto Texas correctly matched all six numbers drawn for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said Sunday.

The winning ticket, purchased in Houston, is worth an estimated $18 million, according to the state comptroller's office.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 4, 7, 11, 14, 18, 32.

In addition to the jackpot winner, 311 tickets were sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,083. There were also 16,145 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $75.

And Comptroller John Sharp said in a prepared statement that 265,994 tickets were sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $3 million if sales continue as expected.

Sales from Sept. 22 to Saturday's draw were $13.3 million.

PRI wins border election tainted by fraud claims

SALTILLO, Mexico (AP) - Opposition candidates in a bitterly contested state election accused Mexico's official party of fraud, and said they hoped the charges would influence U.S. lawmakers' decision on creating the world's largest trade zone.

"The United States is supposed to have commercial relations only with countries who respect human rights and the will of the people," said Jesus Gonzales Schmal, one of seven opposition candidates running for governor of the border state of Coahuila.

Early unofficial results in the election Sunday showed the official

Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) candidate, economist Rogelio Montemayor, ahead with 52,199 votes.

The National Action Party's Rosendo Villareal, mayor of the colonial state capital of Saltillo, trailed with 19,155 votes, according to State Electoral Commission projections.

New York visitor shot on Florida road by gunman

MIAMI (AP) — A New York City man visiting family was killed in what police called an apparently random, drive-by shooting. It was the third slaying of a traveler on Florida's highways in a month and another blow for the state's vital tourist industry.

The 40-year-old victim was going to dinner with two relatives when another car pulled up beside theirs Sunday night on a highway just north of downtown Miami, said Metro-Dade Detective Juan Del Castillo.

The driver — who was apparently alone in his car — rolled down the car window and fired one shot, striking the victim in the head.

"It's a typical incident that's giving Miami a bad name," Del Castillo said. "It is a drive-by (shooting) with the vehicle just coming up alongside and shooting for no reason."

There was no indication of any traffic dispute or interaction between the two vehicles before the shooting, he added. The gunman — described as in his early 30s — sped off afterward.

The name of the victim, who lived in the New York City borough of the Bronx, was not immediately released. He was a passenger in a car with his cousin and his cousin's wife, whom he was visiting, Del Castillo said. They drove him to a hospital, where he died.

The shooting occurred shortly after 8 p.m. on the Palmetto Expressway, also known as State Road 826.

The shooting is the latest in a string of visitor killings that have rocked the Sunshine State and its $31 billion-a-year tourism industry, prompting official efforts to make the highways safer. Ten foreign visitors have been slain in Florida in less than a year.

Road safety received renewed scrutiny in the wake of the Sept. 8 slaying of a German tourist, Uwe-Wilhelm Rakebrand, after his rental car was bumped on a Miami highway in a robbery attempt. At the time of the attack, his wife was reading a pamphlet advising tourists what to do when bumped in traffic.

Artifacts unearthed at slave plantation

BRAZORIA (AP) — Archaeology students at the University of Houston have unearthed hundreds of 19th century artifacts in a long-term excavation of a slave plantation in southwest Brazoria County.

Buttons, coins, crude jewelry, utensils and tools have been found over eight summers at the Levi Jordan plantation.

"We're learning what stuff was brought here by these people. They didn't have any property but they had a lot in their heads," professor Kenneth Brown said.

One artifact was a kettle that was part of a curer's kit, the curer being the African American equivalent of a physician or folk doctor. The kit included chalk, mirror fragments, bird skulls, animal bones and pebbles, all used in the art of ritual healing, Brown explained.

Slaves, and after slavery was abolished, tenant farmers lived and worked on the Jordan plantation until the 1890s. None of the 14 cabins still stands.

Texas law after the Emancipation Proclamation prohibited tenant farmers indebted to the owner from leaving a plantation, and their children inherited the debt, Brown said.

The excavation has turned up artifacts from more than four decades. The ground has never been plowed and a storm in the early 1900s covered the cabin remains with a protective layer of mud.

Brown said his ultimate goal is to get the plantation on the National Register and turn the house into a museum depicting the lifestyle of blacks under slavery and tenancy.

Biosphere crew celebrates with dinner

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

ORACLE, Ariz. (AP) — The four men and four women of Biosphere 2 emerged to a throng of media and well-wishers and a lavish dinner loaded with foods they hadn't seen in two years. But questions remain about what exactly the $150 million project accomplished.

Operators say the crew set a record for living inside an essentially closed structure — designed as a mini-Earth with rain forest, ocean, savannah and farm. The two-year exercise in self-sufficiency ended Sunday.

But the dome had been opened more than two dozen times before that, first for a crew member to get surgery after injuring her finger and later for import of thousands of small items, including seeds, sleeping pills, mousetraps and makeup. Outside air was pumped in once and pure oxygen was added twice to balance the atmosphere.

Still, Biosphere 2 operators claimed success in achieving their key goal — keeping eight people alive in a "materially closed" environment for two years.

"They said it couldn't be done," said crew member Mark Nelson. "But here we are — healthy, happy."

The eight crew members were to return to the Biosphere today to feed the goats and chickens, water crops and begin a plant and animal survey.

After testing and upgrading equipment, operators of the private, for-profit enterprise plan to reseat the dome with a second crew early next year for a one-year stay.

The first crew ranged in age from 29 to 69. All are single and agreed to just one restriction on their social life — no pregnancies. They have refused to discuss possible romances or arguments.

Abigail Alling, a marine biologist who oversaw the ocean and coral reef, said the toughest part was getting along with each other, but that they managed to keep sight of their goal.

"Never did I give up on the experiment," Alling said. "It never got to a point where we all wanted to get out."

Food also became very important.

Crew members lost an average of 29 pounds each on a low-fat diet heavy on such crops as sweet potatoes, rice, peanuts, bananas and wheat. They occasionally had an egg, chicken or goat meat and coffee. The women dropped an average of 9 to 10 percent of their weight and the men 18 percent, said the team physician, Dr. Roy Walford.

Among the items they most craved: chocolate, olives, salami, fancy cheeses and smoked salmon.

"I've thought about food quite a lot," admitted Jane Poynter, 31, of Surrey, England, the farm manager.

The 3.15-acre complex is run by Space Biospheres Ventures, a private, for-profit company financed largely by Texas billionaire Edward P. Bass, who says he hopes the biosphere will help educate the public about environmental issues.

Yet the project, once billed as a prototype space colony, has been accused of deception and amateur science and drawn unflattering comparisons to Disneyland, in part because it attracted more than 400,000 paying visitors in two years.

During their stay, the crew produced just 80 percent of its food, depending for the rest on beans and grain intended as seed and on a three-month supply of dome-grown food stocked inside before closure. Low crop yields were blamed on cloudy weather and pests.

Levels of potentially hazardous carbon dioxide rose, fluctuated and settled at about five times the normal level of the gas in the Earth's atmosphere.

Seven crew members told reporters Sunday they'll be staying on in new jobs with Space Biospheres Ventures.

The eighth, Walford, will return to the University of California, Los Angeles medical school, but plans to remain a consultant and continue with dietary studies on the first crew.

The crew emerged from the dome to a crowd of up to face a crowd of some 3,000 people. The event, dubbed "re-entry" by Biosphere operators, blended NASA-style techno-speak with the trappings of a Hollywood media event.

Festivities began with an early-morning concert — Vivaldi's Four Seasons — and speeches.

After taking VIPs on tours through the biosphere and meeting the public, Sunday evening was limited to a celebration for the crew, family, friends and special guests — an intimate feast for 400.

On the menu: appetizers including bacon-wrapped scallops and pesto-stuffed mushrooms; roast breast of pheasant with wild mushrooms and saffron sauce, wild rice pilaf with currants, vegetables and a dessert sampler with chocolates.

Oklahoma declares flood emergency; cleanup starts

By The Associated Press

The National Guard helped evacuate dozens of residents in north-eastern Oklahoma early today as two rain-swollen rivers rushed over their banks, prompting the governor to declare a state of emergency.

"The Spring River is like the ocean roaring. It's just churning," said Mayor Tom Derwin of Wyandotte, near the Missouri state line. "One of the engineers from the Grand River Dam Authority told me if I had any pull with God to start praying, I've been doing that already."

At least a foot of water covered highways and rural roads into Wyandotte and two other Oklahoma communities — Miami and Quapaw — virtually cutting them off from the rest of the state. Schools in the three towns were closed today.

"At this point, we're seeking to minimize flood damage and prevent injury and loss of life," said Gov. David Walters, who declared a state of emergency on Sunday. The Red Cross helped set up shelters at churches.

On the positive side, the heavy downpours that soaked parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri last week dissipated Sunday. Meteorologists said no more rain was expected for the next few days.

Most of the flooding came from the Spring River, which was at a record 46 feet Sunday and threatening to go 2 feet higher. The highest level previously was 43 feet in 1986. The nearby Neosho River was about 8 feet above flood stage and expected to rise 2 more feet before cresting.

Miami Civil Defense Director Terry Durburow said authorities were evacuating affected residents

"around the clock," with up to 400 evacuees expected.

About 50 people were evacuated Sunday from a trailer park and 40 others from a nursing home, Durburow said. Already about 150 had been evacuated when heavy rains began falling Friday.

"These people have never seen this kind of water before," Durburow said. "They see the water come up and they panic. They don't know what to do, who to call or where to go."

Since Wednesday, three deaths in Missouri were blamed on the latest flooding, which followed the historic summer flooding across the Midwest.

Near Boonville, in central Missouri, police on Sunday found a pickup truck that was washed off a highway but could not reach it because of high water. The fate of the truck's driver was not known.

Elsewhere in the state, the Missouri River continued to threaten towns where levees damaged by the summer floods are not yet repaired.

In Valley Park, Mo., flooding from the Meramec River has forced nearly 300 people from their homes since flooding began last week, while the rest of the St. Louis suburb's 4,000 residents waited to see if they would have to leave as well. The city's police and fire departments have been forced to run their operations since Friday from a church.

Farther west in Pacific, Mo., the Meramec forced about a dozen families from their homes and knocked down trees and power lines.

In Pittsburg, Kan., officials said Sunday that most residents from more than 200 houses that were flooded had been allowed back home.

Group combats frivolous lawsuits

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Enough is enough, says a group that opposes frivolous lawsuits.

San Antonians Against Lawsuit Abuse, formed last January, wants to cut down on the growing number of silly personal injury lawsuits.

They cite the case of a man who sued organizers of a safety seminar because they didn't warn him that tilting his chair backward could lead to a fall.

Members include small business owners, physicians, attorneys and private citizens who maintain that frivolous litigation clogs the court system, leads to higher insurance premiums and sometimes leads to bankruptcy.

Executive Director Winter D. Prosapio said her group kicked off Lawsuit Abuse Awareness week Saturday at a comedy club because some litigation is outrageously amusing.

Prosapio's favorite example is a lawsuit filed by a new father against an obstetrician who delivered a healthy child in a problem-free procedure. The father was upset because the doctor touched the new mother in intimate areas during the delivery.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Republican plan isn't much better

The Senate Republican "alternative" plan to President Clinton's socialized medical plans is only marginally better. The Clinton plan would force on citizens mandatory government-regulated insurance, tax increases and price controls masquerading as cost "ceilings." The Senate Republican plan is similar but would allow some choice among competing government-approved plans; supposedly it wouldn't require new taxes.

The Senate plan has been devised to a great extent by Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island, chairman of the Republican Senate health-reform task force. He is the epitome of 1990s "moderate," or "me too," Republicanism.

More serious is the House Republican health care reform which "would create tax-free medical savings accounts which people could use to buy insurance or health care," according to the description by Cox News Service. Such a reform would resemble that proposed by several free-market analysts, using market mechanisms—competition among millions of Americans—to cut costs and provide choice.

The funny thing about all these plans is that nobody has concrete numbers on what the costs will be. The Clinton plan supposedly won't include taxes.

Though savings are supposed to come from cutting Medicare and Medicaid, U.S. News & World Report calculated the Clinton plan's financial system "is a Rube Goldberg device that Clinton claims would create no net obligations for the government over the next seven years—but that could still cost private businesses at least $200 billion" over seven years, or $29 billion a year. "The highly regulatory plan includes a financing scheme expressly designed to avoid broad tax hikes but laced with so many dubious assumptions that it seems destined to flop on Capitol Hill." The magazine also reported that "some experts think [Clinton is] $40 billion to $50 billion a year short in his calculations."

A note of reality needs to be injected. If every one of the 35 million uninsured Americans were given a $1,000 private health insurance policy—or $4,000 poor a family of four—the total cost would come to $35 billion a year. Though a lot of money, that's less than the Clinton and Senate plans probably would cost. (The Clinton $29 billion figure is, of course, a fiction.) Surely $35 billion in waste could be sliced from the $1.6 trillion federal budget.

We're not advocating such a plan. The $35 billion is just a benchmark figure. Any plan costing more than that—and the Clinton plan probably would cost a lot more—should be rejected as an obvious socialist absurdity. The best reform still could be some version of the House plan involving less government and more market competition.

Religion and drug reformists

William F. Buckley Jr.

In his recent book examining some of the anomalies of our church/state deadlock, Professor Stephen Carter of Yale speaks of a unit of drug reformists who experimented with introducing addicts to religion.

It was very soon established that the experiment was extraordinarily successful—that the whole structure of religion was adaptable to introducing addicts to another view of life than one centered on instant self-gratification.

This will of course surprise no one who knows anything about the techniques of Alcoholics Anonymous. AA is nowhere thought of a missionary enterprise in any formal sense. But religion asks an individual to accept a perspective within which the mutilation of the mind and body for the sake of transient highs contradicts true self-interest and contradicts also the laws of nature "and of Nature's God." So does AA.

Charles Colson, who graduated from the political underworld to a hugely important and successful job as founder of Prison Fellowship, spends his time talking to prisoners and persuading them to take another view entirely on crime than that which was natural to them and brought them to prison.

It is not easy to generalize on the failure/success rate of his approach to the problem, but no one who has experienced his work in action can doubt the special appeal he exercises. I was witness to one session in which he addressed a hundred men sentenced for terms from five years to life. Not everyone has the gift of ministry, and I cannot even reproduce the sound of someone who has that gift. But I saw its effect, and even in the space of one hour it was palpable. Prisoners were being asked to have a look at a universe entirely different from the one in which drugs and money and sex were the axes of their world.

One pauses to make a point of purely academic interest. It is that one need not believe in God in order to believe that a belief in him is a transfiguring psychological event. In fact, it is of course preposterous not to believe this.

Any study of the life, say, of Edmund Campion is sufficient to make the point even offhandedly. That learned priest suffered torture so refined as to be on another scale from anything we nowadays associate with overtures to capital punishment. And he did this not merely to affirm his belief in God—because Queen Elizabeth, his executioner, also believed—but to affirm his belief in the correctness of the line of theological authority laid down by Christ, via Rome. But the father of Queen Elizabeth thought otherwise, and did not tolerate contradiction. It was more than 200 years later before Roman Catholics were allowed even to vote in Great Britain.

So that the evidence is very simply undeniable that a religious view of life brings to the believer a perspective that can alter his behavior.

The world is weighted down with men and women who simultaneously believe and transgress. But the question before the house is whether religion should be denied its therapeutic potential when the objective is to renew the life of a drug addict, or reintroduce the criminal to another vision of life.

The Wall Street Journal recently commented on the murders in Florida that are headlines all over the world. The attention they get isn't because we have one or two or three more instances of innocent people being shot. Nor even because we have here innocent foreigners visiting Florida and getting shot there. What stands out about the crimes is the sheer "senselessness" of them, to use the word getting around.

The incommensurability of the value of a car radio over against that of a human life stands out. And in one case, there was no evidence that robbery was even attempted.

What to do? The alleged murderers in two of the three cases have been apprehended, and then had, as one might expect, long records of previous crime. Again, what to do?

In the case of the unit engaged in attempting to revive drug addicts, what happened was that it ran into the First Amendment. Federal money can't be constitutionally spent on an organization that is engaged in religious indoctrination. Therefore, the unit in question either has to disband or else get private financing.

And although prisons still have chaplains, as does the military—only because the hard secularist front hasn't succeeded in effecting their elimination—it would not be tolerated that programs of prison reform be based on state-paid chaplains, or rehabilitationists overtly engaged in preaching a religious perspective.

And the theory is that America is the land of the practical, the home of empiricism. Bah humbug.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 1993. There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 27, 1939, Warsaw, Poland, surrendered after weeks of resistance to invading forces from Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union during World War II.

On this date:

In 1779, John Adams was named to negotiate the Revolutionary War's peace terms with Britain.

In 1854, the first great disaster involving an Atlantic Ocean liner occurred when the steamship Arctic sank with 300 people aboard.

In 1928, the United States said it was recognizing the Nationalist Chinese government.

In 1942, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra performed together for the last time, at the Central Theater in Passaic, N.J., prior to Miller's entry into the U.S. Army.

In 1943, Bing Crosby, the Andrews Sisters and the Vic Schoen Orchestra recorded "Pistol Packin' Mama" and "Jingle Bells" for Decca Records.

Jurassic Park in miniature

Jurassic Park, in the book and in the movie, was an island off Costa Rica where a visionary promoter assembled genetic scientists to create a zoo of dinosaurs.

But the dinosaurs prospered and proliferated until it was they who took over the island and the terrified scientists ran for their lives.

There is a real-life Jurassic Park in southwest Idaho, a town where some 400 farmers and ranchers have lived in harmony with their "dinosaurs" for generations.

Until now.

Now our federal government with its upside-down perspective which puts microscopic critters before people has found a snail bigger than you are.

It's not really bigger than you are, but the government thinks it is.

Until now, the snail has kept to its rocks, gravel and warm-water springs—sharing said water with farmers in order to make 21,000 acres of dry land productive.

Suddenly the United States Fish and Wildlife Service decides that farmers may no longer share that water. The snail, they say, is an endangered species. In that rural area, farming must be shut down in order not to disturb the snail's habitat.

Further, cattle grazing will henceforth be prohibited, and all conservation, advice, disaster and crop support programs are herewith suspended lest they have an impact on the snail's habitat.

Any and all underground water below Bruneau, Idaho, and thereabouts must be reserved exclusively for the snails.

So an entire valley of people—living, working people who produce food and things—are out of business.

They can starve, says their government, but the Jurassic Park for snails must be preserved.

There is no scientific evidence that the snail population is either growing or shrinking, but this is not a scientific decision, it is purely political.

The Idaho Conservation League, the Committee for Idaho's High Desert, the Land and Water Fund for the Rockies—and an environmentally oriented vice president in Washington—seem to care more about snails than about people.

Let's understand this about Idaho's new Jurassic Park for snails.

Should you visit, you will never see one of the snails in question... except through a microscope.

Each is smaller than a flyspeck!

There is some question as to whether this is a separate species.

As far as anybody knows, it is utterly worthless. Yet for this worthless creature, these agencies of government are willing to shut down agriculture in the area and put local businesses out of business.

Other communities take note: Seven hundred species are listed as threatened or endangered. Four thousand more candidates are awaiting approval. Petitions are sought to list an additional 8,000.

You could be next.

Doubts about Mid East agreement

I don't particularly enjoy being the skunk at this garden party, but I must admit to having grave doubts that peace in the Middle East has been brought any closer by the agreement just reached between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

First, a few preliminary questions. What, or who, brought about the agreement? Certainly not the Clinton administration—the deal was struck in secret face-to-face negotiations between Israel and the PLO in Norway, and afterward Israeli Foreign Minister Peres had to track down Secretary of State Christopher in Santa Barbara, Calif., (where he was vacationing) to tell him about it.

What caused agreement to be reached at this particular time? Almost certainly, exhaustion on both sides. Ordinary life for Israelis has been made almost unendurable by recurrent episodes of Arab terrorism. As for the Arabs, the collapse of the Soviet Union deprived them of their chief supplier of weapons. They could only visualize themselves becoming relatively weaker in the years directly ahead.

What has actually been agreed to? It is here that the balance tips heavily against Israel. It has turned over the Gaza Strip to Arafat—no great loss, it is generally agreed. But it has also turned over Jericho, the de facto capital of the West Bank, and any Middle Easterner can tell you what happens when a camel gets its nose inside the tent.

In return Israel has gained... what? The signature of Yasir Arafat's representative, who can plausibly claim to represent some fraction (but only a fraction) of the Palestinian Arabs, on a piece of paper saying Israel is entitled to permanent existence and security within its borders.

These are far from equal concessions. The late James Burnham was fond of saying that "Who says A must say B"—or, in other words, that taking the first step in a logical progression inevitably leads to taking the others. Israel, having agreed to give an elected Palestinian council certain legislative powers over the West Bank and Gaza, and to give Palestinians in Gaza and Jericho extensive control of their internal affairs (plus a police force), must now face, year after year, further political and territorial demands from a political entity that they themselves called into being.

They can say "No" once, or five times, or 10 times; but they cannot, and will not, say "No" forever.

As for the Palestinians, they will keep right on believing that Palestine—all of it—is rightly theirs, and there will, as the years roll on, be no lack of ambitious politicians to inflame them, and their fellow Arabs in adjoining regions, against the Israeli "invaders."

In reply, Israel will point to the PLO signature. In the same spirit (and with about as much effect) Britain today could point to the Treaty of Nanking, which it signed with representatives of the Emperor of China in 1842, and under which it received title to Hong Kong in perpetuity. Today, the Chinese couldn't care less. It was, they say, an "unequal treaty"—and who is contradicting them?

Israeli doves have often described their policy as one of "trading land for peace." In truth, however, what they have done is trade land for time. Let those who have not had to endure the perils of daily life in Israel be careful about criticizing their decision.

But let us also be under no illusion as to what has happened, or will happen hereafter. The Palestinian Arabs as a whole have not changed their minds one iota about what they regard as a great historic wrong, nor have they abandoned hope of rectifying it. And, as Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. wrote in 1919, "Between two groups of people who want to make inconsistent kinds of worlds, I see no remedy but force."

Child of the Sixties is woman of the Nineties

By DAVID BOWSER
Managing Editor

Susan Tripplehorn is a child of the 'Sixties. Discontent with the political environment in which she was raised, she became politically active and outspoken.

"I was looking at a catalogue the other day," Tripplehorn said, "and bell bottoms and platform shoes are coming back. I told the girls that I work with, 'I would never buy those clothes. It's from a time that embarrasses me too much.'"

She said it was a time in history when the drug culture became prevalent.

"It was the hippie era," she said. "The 'Do My Own Thing' attitude. That's not my forte. I'm embarrassed for a lot of my generation."

Susan Tripplehorn was not a long-haired hippie freak. A 1965 graduate of Garden City, Kansas, High School, she didn't riot at the 1968 Democratic Convention. She didn't lead anti-war demonstrations. Au contraire, she was raised a Democrat in western Kansas. She grew up to be the Gray County Republican chairman.

As Tripplehorn steps aside this fall to make room for a new county chairman, don't expect her to sit quietly by as the political campaign for 1994 begins to heat up.

"I suspect I'll be involved in a couple of campaigns," she said. "I'm already looking at a congressional race. If George W. gets into the governor's race, I'll probably serve as his county chair."

Tripplehorn moved to Pampa from Kansas in 1974 by way of New York City.

"I attended what was then Kansas State Teachers College at Emporia for awhile," she said. "Then I went to New York City and played for three years."

She worked for an advertising agency and a pharmaceutical house before returning to the plains and settling in Pampa. While she was in New York, she became more interested in politics, attending several meetings of the Libertarian Party.

"Less government is the best government is my philosophy," she said. "I picked the Republican Party over the Libertarian Party because it's basically a Republican-Democratic system. It was time for me to make my own decisions."

In the 1978 elections, Tripplehorn volunteered to work for Carl Kennedy's campaign for county judge.

"Carl was one of the first Republican office holders in Gray County," Tripplehorn said.

In 1982, Tripplehorn and her husband John heard that a friend, Paul Simmons, was going to run for county chairman of the Republican Party.

"John called him up and volunteered our time to help him," Tripplehorn said.

When Simmons stepped down the following September, he recommended to the county executive committee that Susan Tripplehorn take his place. She held the job for 11 years.

In the 1982 elections, the Republican Party had two candidates running for county offices. Both lost.

"Clements was governor then," Tripplehorn said. "It was his second time to run, and he lost to Mark White, but we carried every Republican statewide candidate. At the bottom of the ballot were our county candidates. One got 47 percent of the vote. One got 45 percent. I thought if we can do it statewide, why can't we do it locally?"

After the election, Tripplehorn formed a candidate recruitment committee and went looking for people wanting to run for office in 1984.

"The state party encouraged county chairmen to recruit like that through schools they held," Tripplehorn said.

In 1984, the Gray County Republican Party again had two candidates running for office. This time they won.

"Gerald Wright was elected county commissioner and David Potter, J.P.," Tripplehorn said. "Today, we have 12 office holders."

According to Tripplehorn, the Republican Party at the state level recommended bringing people from differing professions on to the recruiting committee. Then each member was sent out to find some one wanting to run.

"The state party would tell us, 'You don't know who's out there who would be willing to serve,'" Tripplehorn said.

Once a prospective candidate was found, the local party armed with statistics reflecting Republican Party voting strength would work with him.

Known as ORVS for Optimal Republican Voting Strength, the numbers reflected the number of Republican votes a candidate could expect in a given area.

Susan Tripplehorn

"In Gray County now," Tripplehorn said, "that's about 65 percent of the vote. Some precincts are higher, some are lower. In the mid-'80s, it was about 58 percent."

While Tripplehorn talks about more time with her family, she begins to bubble over with energy as she talks politics. Still she said she plans on spending more time with her nine-year-old daughter who is interested in riding. She admits that horses can take up a lot of time.

"Horses are like babies," she said. "The one we have is a baby. She's only five months old. We can't have dinner 'til we take care of the horse. Training and feeding the horse takes time."

Tripplehorn is most likely to be taking care of horses and elephants this year. Donkeys are not on the list.

Dear Abby:

DEAR ABBY: Here's how one telephone call changed my life: I was a 19-year-old fellow working late on a Saturday night at a service station. The telephone rang, and when I answered it, a young lady said, "Oops, sorry, I must have a wrong number - I was calling my aunt."

I don't know what got into me, but I said, "Please don't hang up - what's your name?"

She said, "It's Betty, but I don't talk to strangers..."

I introduced myself saying, "Well, Betty, my name is Frank." Then I asked her to give me her telephone number in case we got disconnected. I guess I fell in love with her voice, so I convinced her to meet me. When we met, it was love at first sight. She was only 16, but her parents approved of me, and three months later we were married.

Last July, we celebrated our 43rd wedding anniversary. We have three fine sons, ages 34, 37 and 42. The oldest is married and gave us two beautiful granddaughters - ages 11 and 8.

Betty is now an operating room technician at Crawford Long Hospital in Doraville, Ga., and I'm with General Motors with nearly enough years to retire. I guess you could say that our meeting is the story of how one wrong number turned out to be the right number for Betty and me. You may use our name.

THE FRANK WILLIAMSONS, AUSTELL, GA.

DEAR WILLIAMSONS: Congratulations on your anniversary, and thank you for a charming story. Alas, 43 years ago it may have been safe enough to give one's first name and telephone number to a stranger, but today, the risks are too great.

DEAR ABBY: Your column on fateful phone calls prompted this letter: My husband died several years ago, after which a longtime female friend and I decided to share an apartment. One evening, on a lark, she tracked down an old boyfriend to whom I had been engaged 30 years ago, when I was 18.

She introduced herself, then handed me the phone. We talked for a while, and he asked where I worked, so I told him. A couple of days later, he showed up at my office with 30 roses - one for every year we had been apart. We hit it off immediately and have been together ever since. We are being married in November.

OREGONIANS

DEAR ABBY: Here's how one telephone call changed my life: I got a call at home from an anonymous person who thought I should know that my husband was having an affair with a young woman who worked for him. She told me that they went to a motel on the edge of town every Friday for a three-hour lunch.

Because my husband had several unexplained absences from work, I hired a private detective to follow him. Sure enough, he was meeting his secretary at the motel. After I told him that I knew what had been going on, he didn't deny it. We saw our lawyers and ended our marriage.

Now, I suspect that she was the anonymous caller who tipped me off about my husband's affair. No names or towns, please. Sign me ... BETTER OFF NOW

4-H Leader Council sets finance program

The Gray county 4-H Adult Leader Council will host a special program on "Financing College" at 7 p.m. today in the Lefors School cafeteria.

Debbie Farnum of Amarillo will present the program. She is a Potter County 4-H leader and former district and state 4-H Adult Leader Association officer. She teaches at Valley View Junior High and conducts a variety of workshops across the state.

The program will focus on identifying sources of financial aid, scholarship programs and applications, planning for financial aid and scholarship application, and tips and techniques for successful scholarship application.

The public is invited to participate in this program.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Instead of idling your hours away today, occupy yourself with things that are truly significant and productive. This can be a day of achievement if you'll try. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to break away from your mundane routines today and seek activities which are fun and different. A change of pace will do you a world of good.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your material aspects look promising today. Be alert for unusual developments, because you may be able to add to your holdings from a least expect source.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Others perceive you as being very personable and charismatic today. You'll add zest to any group and make a favorable lasting impressions on new acquaintances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Follow your intuitive perceptions today pertaining to ways you can best gratify your material desires. Hunches provide a vision your logic lacks.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to involve yourself socially with several groups today, because there is a possibility you might meet someone interesting to whom you'll be strongly attracted.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Events could suddenly take an unexpected turn for the better today pertaining to an ambitious desire you've been nurturing. Respond immediately when you get the first signals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A close friend might talk with you today regarding an idea or project that is extremely unique. Listen attentively, because what he/she has to say could have possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today if you derive any special benefits, they are likely to come from a joint endeavor rather than from an independent pursuit. Don't waste time on situations you can't handle alone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In a partnership arrangement today your counterpart might be more on track than you are. Yield if his/her way of doing things is superior to yours.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be surprised today if more than one person comes to you with his/her problems. Associates will innately sense that you are the person who has the solutions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep in mind that it is people, not things that makes the world work. Your best asset today is your ability to get along with others. Use it constructively.

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Ernie Ivan's dominating victory in the Goody's 500 was overshadowed by tightening of the Winston Cup championship race between leader Dale Earnhardt and Rusty Wallace.

Wallace, who came into the 500-lap race on Martinsville Speedway's .526-mile oval with two straight victories and a 181-point deficit, was the only driver able to mount a challenge to Ivan.

Ivan's Ford Thunderbird crossed the finish line 2.77 seconds ahead of Wallace's Pontiac Grand Prix after leading all but 98 laps. Earnhardt wound up 29th and leads Wallace by 82 points with five races remaining.

Ivan started from the pole and earned his first victory for Robert Yates Racing in his fourth start. It was his second victory of the season and eighth of his career. Ivan earned $75,300 as he averaged 74.102 mph.

ESTORIL, Portugal (AP) — Alain Prost of France won his fourth world Formula One driving title with a second-place finish at the Portuguese Grand Prix.

Michael Schumacher of Germany won, but Prost gained 6 points to take an insurmountable lead over Williams-Renault teammate Damon Hill of Britain and clinch the title. Hill finished third after starting the race at the back of the grid.

Prost, who will retire at season's end, lost by less than a second to Schumacher, who averaged 124.118 mph in earning his second career Grand Prix victory. Prost previously won drivers titles in 1985, 1986 and 1989 and has a record 51 victories in Formula One racing since 1980.

LONDON (AP) — Australia and Germany completed 5-0 semifinal victories en route to Davis Cup championship meeting in December.

Australia beat India without losing a set in the three-day competition as Wally Masur defeated India's Leander Paes 6-4, 6-2, and Jason Stoltenberg downed Zeeshan Ali 6-3, 6-3.

Germany got victories from Michael Stich and Marc-Kevin Goellner against Sweden's Stefan Edberg 6-1, 6-1, and Henrik Holm 7-6 (7-3), 6-4. It was Edberg's worst Davis Cup loss in 35 matches.

Elsewhere, Austria beat New Zealand in qualifying, 3-2; Hungary advanced to the World Group for the first time with a 4-1 upset over Argentina, Spain topped South Korea 5-0, as Russia did against Cuba.

Brazil won doubles and reduced Belgium's lead to 2-1. The defending champion United States defeated the Bahamas 5-0, and Denmark beat Croatia 3-2.

Romania advanced with a 4-1 victory over Morocco, and South Africa beat Senegal 5-0 in Euro-African Zone qualifying matches.

TOKYO (AP) — South African Amanda Coetzer, who upset top-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the semifinals, won the Nichirei International, beating Japan's Kimiko Date 6-3, 6-2. Coetzer, No. 4, earned $75,000 in 1 hour, 20 minutes at Ariake Colosseum.

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Erin Whitten, the second woman to play in a professional hockey game, stopped 10 of 12 shots for the Adirondack Red Wings in an AHL exhibition game Saturday night.

Both goals Whitten allowed came in the second period of the Red Wings' 6-4 loss to the Cornwall Aces.

Whitten, a four-time collegiate all-star for New Hampshire's women's team, allowed a goal on the first shot she faced, a point-blank try by Paul Brousseau.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Tracy Harris Patterson, fighting in his hometown, defended his WBC super bantamweight title Saturday, stopping Daniel Zaragoza of Mexico with 53 seconds left in the seventh round.

Patterson's victory avenged a 12-round draw with Zaragoza last December. Zaragoza dropped to 44-7-2. Patterson is 48-2-1 with 35 knockouts.

AMIENS, France (AP) — Ann Trason, the world record-holder at 50 and 100 miles, broke the mark for 100 kilometers by more than nine minutes Saturday.

Trason covered 100 kilometers (62.137 miles) in 7 hours, 9 minutes, 44 seconds, bettering the existing record of 7:18:57, by Birgit Lennartz of Germany in 1989.

Rangers split doubleheader with White Sox

By MARIO FOX
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox talked about postseason excitement in the crowd. The Texas Rangers sounded like Yogi Berra.

"It's not over till it's over," said Rangers pitcher Roger Pavlik after the White Sox clinched a tie for their first AL West title since 1983 with a 5-3 victory over Texas in the opener of a doubleheader Sunday.

Texas prevented Chicago from clinching outright by winning the nightcap 3-2.

"You never know, we could win seven and they could lose seven," said Pavlik (11-6), the second-game winner.

The White Sox lead Texas by seven games with seven remaining, and are home against Seattle tonight, while the Rangers play Tuesday night at Oakland. "It's not over till they clinch," said Julio Franco, the Rangers' hero of the second game. "We're not going to quit."

Juan Gonzalez, who leads the Rangers in home runs and RBIs, missed both games because of a strained back muscle. Gonzalez refused Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy's request to pinch-hit in the seventh and ninth innings of the opener.

"Damn right I thought about it," Kennedy said. "That was our season right there. All I can do is ask. The guy said he can't play, so I go on to the next-best guy."

With the score 1-1 in the eighth inning of the second game, Franco hit an RBI double off Alex Fernandez (17-9) and scored on Dean Palmer's grounder.

Pavlik's streak of innings without an earned run went to 20 1-3, but ended in the eighth when he gave up two singles to Ozzie Guillen and Tim Lincecum and left the game. Tom Henke let Pavlik's runners score, but pitched two innings for his club-record 39th save in 46 chances.

"I didn't worry about the streak, just so we won," Pavlik said. "I stuck with my fastball. I guess I've been feeling pretty good lately."

He allowed two runs — one earned — and six hits in 7-plus innings. He struck out six, including Bo Jackson three times, and walked two.

Jackson hit his 14th homer in the second inning of the opener after a bee buzzed him at the plate.

"I guess I was invading his space. I tried to shoo him away but he came back. I tried again and he came back. Then I was in the dugout," said Jackson, who took a 3-0 pitch to center to give Chicago a 1-0 lead.

Jackson said he was stirred by the crowd of 42,034, who roared all afternoon as their team sat on the brink of winning the division flag.

"I don't think we've ever played more exciting games than we did today," Guillen said.

Some of the Rangers' players thought otherwise. "This stinks," Rangers starter Kenny Rogers said of the daylong roar of the crowd.

In the opener, Jason Bere (11-5) won his sixth consecutive start. He gave up four hits in six innings, including Palmer's 32nd homer. Bere struck out five, walked five and hit a batter.

"Jason didn't have his best stuff," Chicago manager Gene Lamont said. "We've been talking about how he sometimes doesn't have his best stuff but still wins."

The 22-year-old rookie said he was pumped up by the excitement of the series between the division leaders.

"It gives you a lot of adrenalin, sometimes too much. With two strikes, I wanted to go for the strikeout when it wasn't always a good idea," Bere said.

Roberto Hernandez got the last four outs for his 37th save in 43 opportunities. Rogers (15-10) gave up three runs and six hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Palmer hit his 32nd home run in the sixth inning of the first game. He, Rafael Palmeiro (37) and Gonzalez (44) have a combined 113 homers, tying an AL record for teammates set by the 1963 and 1964 Twins.

David Hulse hit his first major-league homer in the fifth inning of the second game.

Hines returns to helm of Miami Warriors

After a winless season last year, the Warriors were ready for a change. The change was the return of a coach that took them to district championships.

By Susan Adeletti
Sports writer

If you were in the town of Miami 30 years ago, you know this man. You know his style, his methods, his face. This football season, they are familiar once more.

After a 29-year hiatus, Bill Hines is again at the helm of Miami varsity football. Hines coached the team in 1959 and from '61-'64, leading the team to four district championships in his five seasons.

The '93 season couldn't be a better time for Hines to test his success rate, as Miami ended last season without winning a game. As a result of Hines' return to the sidelines, the Warriors posted victory in their first game of this season. They've lost three games since, but Hines attests that their record is not indicative of their improvement.

"It's taken the kids a little while to adjust to my methods, but we're coming along," Hines said. "I think we've improved a lot. The kids are still hanging in there, and they're getting better every week."

Hines, who played college ball at the University of Oklahoma, left Miami after the '64 season to coach at a bigger school, Silverton. He put in one year then relocated to Washington state, where he abandoned teaching in favor of a career in banking.

Seven years later, Hines returned to the panhandle and ran a business until three years ago, when he decided to begin teaching again at Miami High School.

"I was planning on going into administration," he said, noting that he did not consider coaching again until he was approached with the idea after last season's coach resigned. "I thought, 'shoot, it might be fun.'"

Picking up a whistle again after an interim of almost three decades sounds audacious, but Hines insists that the game hasn't changed much in the time he has been away from the field.

"Football hasn't changed that much," he said. "The same rules, the same equipment. We do basically the same drills, the same formations. I just don't see much difference."

While the game fortunately retains timeless qualities, sometimes people don't. Hines admitted that the biggest difference between coaching then and now is the lack of parent support.

"The parents were more supportive back then," he said. "Not just in Miami, but everywhere."

He guessed that Miami probably has more parent support than bigger schools, but the difference still exists. The place where the largest discrepancy may be expected, however, is devoid of one. Hines claims that the players on his roster this season aren't too unlike his players in the early '60s.

"The kids are just basically the same," he said. The main differing aspect that Hines found, however, is that today's society offers distractions from the sport.

"There's a lot more options now," he said. For instance, "everybody has their own car today. Back then, if you didn't participate in sports, there wasn't anything else to do," he added.

But if the glory has waned some, the stress of coaching hasn't.

"Coaching is a tough racket because there's a lot of pressure," said Hines, who also coached Miami basketball to three district championships in four seasons. "A lot of sleepless nights."

Hines, whose lifetime six-man record right now stands at 42-16, nonetheless is looking forward to the rest of his second inaugural season. The Warriors travel to Chillicothe this week and to McLean next.

"We've got two tough games coming up in a row, and no one expects us to win," Hines said. And in a voice that may have easily sounded out 30 years ago, "I might be a little foolish, but I have faith in the kids."

Ranger ownership structure confusing

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Without a scorecard, you can't tell the Texas Rangers owners — a widely divergent group of 39 investors who came together in 1988, when then-owner Eddie Chiles wanted to sell the group but wanted to make sure the team stayed in Texas.

A telephone call from Chiles to Bill Dewitt, son of a former owner of the Cincinnati Reds, started everything, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Dewitt helped form the partnership that bought the club from Chiles for $83 million just five months later.

Dewitt was interested in buying the club, but feared rejection by major league baseball owners, who discourage non-local ownership. He called his one-time Midland oil partner, George W. Bush, who didn't have a lot of money, but did have a Texas address.

In February 1989, baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth asked Bush and Dewitt to find more local money, and they set out to build a coalition of investors.

Bush started his quest with Fort Worth multimillionaire Richard Rainwater, 49, who had made a fortune managing the Bass family's assets.

Rainwater resisted Bush's offer, but decided to invest after a visit from Ueberroth, who came to town to recruit local buyers for the Rangers. Rainwater insisted on two general partners, Bush said, and brought in Edward "Rusty" Rose III of Dallas, who had a reputation of making wise investments.

The partnership grew as word spread that shares in the Rangers were for sale. Cable company owner Jeffrey Marcus and investor Michael Mewhinney, both of Dallas, got involved as soon as they heard Rose was a partner.

The additions of Rainwater and Rose, who invested $2.8 million, satisfied baseball's wishes for local ownership, and the deal was completed in April 1989.

The 39 partners are actually 70 individual investors, including lawyers, secretaries, political allies and businessmen. Their investments range from $10,000 to $5 million.

Roland Betts, who attended Yale with Bush and is a partner in a New York movie financing firm, owns the largest share of the team at 10.9 percent.

Bush, 47, portrays the group as "a bunch of big little guys." Among the partners is Oklahoma City publisher and broadcast magnate Edward Gaylord, 74, who sold his 33 percent share down to 10 percent after owners rejected his bid to buy the team in 1988.

About 30 smaller investors called Metroplex Baseball Partners own about 1.7 percent of the club. Although their share of the Rangers is small, their names are big. Among them are Roger Staubach, former quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys; Fred Drasner, president of U.S. News & World Report; and Morton Myerson, former chairman of EDS.

Tom Schieffer, 45, of Fort Worth, a lawyer and former state representative, invested $1.4 million as J.T.S. Entertainment Corp., and owns 4.2 percent.

Bush stands to gain the most when all the investors are repaid. He contributed $605,000 and has a 1.8 percent share of the ownership. Bush's share of the ownership will eventually climb to 11.3 percent, and as the franchise's value climbs, the value of his share could be $14 million, according to conservative estimates.

The confusion created by the partnership's structure is a small price to pay for the safety of its investors, Bush says.

"No one dominates the capital structure and not one person has put in more money than they can really afford to lose — probably with the exception of me," he said.

Kicking game key to weekend

By CHRIS SHERIDAN AP Sports Writer

In pro football, the operative word is "foot."

There were game-winning field goals Sunday and long field goals, but there weren't too many missed field goals.

And that seems the trend this season, with kickers converting 163 field goals in 202 attempts.

The league-wide accuracy rate of 81 percent is up from last year's 73 percent.

There have been almost as many field goals as touchdowns — 163 to 178.

That too is a big change from last year, when the ratio was 561 FGs to 958 TDs.

The game-winners: — Morten Andersen made a 49-yarder with 5 seconds left, giving the New Orleans Saints a 16-13 victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

— Fuad Revez made a 22-yarder with 6 seconds left in Minnesota's 15-13 decision over Green Bay.

The long ones: — Steve Christie of Buffalo kicked a 59-yarder, the third-longest in NFL history.

In Buffalo's 22-13 loss to Miami, "When you've got the wind, you've got the confidence to say: 'Oh, why not,'" he said.

— Greg Davis of Phoenix connected from 54 yards in the Cardinals' 26-20 loss to Detroit.

In other games, Indianapolis beat Cleveland 23-10, the Los Angeles Rams downed Houston 28-13.

Chicago routed Tampa Bay 47-17, the New York Jets ripped New England 45-7 and Seattle defeated Cincinnati 19-10.

Tonight, Pittsburgh plays at Atlanta.

Denver, Kansas City, the Los Angeles Raiders, San Diego, Dallas, the New York Giants, Philadelphia and Washington had the weekend off.

Saints 16, 49ers 13

At New Orleans, Wade Wilson engineered a 45-yard drive in the final minute after Mike Cofey's 30-yard field goal had tied the score with 1:14 left.

"I never had any concern about Wade's ability to get the job done," Saints coach Jim Mora said. "He's proven he can do what we want to do. That last drive was a heck of a job."

Wilson started the drive with a shovel pass to Dalton Hilliard for 9 yards, then hit Eric Martin for 15 and scrambled for 7. He connected on another 9-yarder to Martin to set up Andersen's kick.

The 49ers (2-2) lost for only the third time in their last dozen games with the Saints (4-0).

Vikings 15, Packers 13

At Minneapolis, Revez's kick was set up by Jim McMahon's 45-yard pass to a wide-open Eric Guliford that put the ball at the Packers' 5.

Green Bay safety LeRoy Butler, responsible for deep coverage on the play, described his thoughts when he saw Guliford unguarded: "It was a mirage."

In its previous game, Green Bay (1-2) tied Philadelphia but even on a long pass and win on a field goal with 5 seconds left.

McMahon, signed by the Vikings (2-1) as a free agent in the offseason, has won his last nine starts against the Packers.

Dolphins 22, Bills 13

At Miami, the Dolphins scored the first four times they touched the ball, and suddenly it was 19-0 with the crowd of 79,635 awfully quiet.

The same thing happened last year as Miami handed Buffalo its first loss of the season on the Bills' home field. Both teams are 2-1 and in a four-way tie for first in the AFC East.

Dan Marino, who finished 20-of-32 for 282 yards, threw a 36-yard touchdown pass to Irving Fryar and also ran 4 yards for a touchdown. Fryer had seven catches for 103 yards, and Terry Kirby had six catches for 91 yards.

"We put a hell of a whooping on them," Miami linebacker Bryan Cox said.

Lions 26, Cardinals 20

At Pontiac, Mich., Andre Ware led his team past Phoenix (1-3) but is not happy with his coach. Wayne Fontes refused to name Ware the No. 1 starter after his 11-of-24, 194-yard afternoon.

"Wednesday will be our first day back at practice," Fontes said. "I'll look at the films and then I'll decide who will be our quarterback."

"What's he going to do?" Ware asked. "Try out a quarterback every week?"

Detroit (3-1) recovered a fumble by Steve Beuerlein with just under two minutes left, ending Phoenix's last chance for a tying score.

Colts 23, Browns 10

At Indianapolis, the Colts (2-1) kept Cleveland (3-1) from becoming the league's second 4-0 team.

Vinny Testaverde came off the bench again to attempt a fourth-quarter comeback. Unlike last week, he didn't succeed. Testaverde threw an interception and fumbled in the end zone on Cleveland's last two chances.

Jack Trudeau led the Colts on a 65-yard drive ending in a 6-yard TD run by Anthony Johnson to make it 16-10 with 3:14 left. Jeff Herrod fell on Testaverde's fumble in the end zone for the final touchdown with 1:19 to go.

Rams 28, Oilers 13

At Houston, Warren Moon connected with Ernest Givens on an 80-yard TD pass midway through the third quarter to cut the Oilers' deficit to 14-13, but Jim Everett came back with touchdown passes of 22 yards to Travis McNeal and 48 yards to Henry Ellard.

"It's a very, very satisfying feeling to win in here, especially coming in a decided underdog," Los Angeles coach Chuck Knox said. The Rams are 2-2 and Houston 1-3.

Bears 47, Buccaneers 17

At Chicago, kicker Kevin Butler was perfect, hitting from 33, 40, 32 and 31 yards, and Jim Harbaugh passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in Dave Wannstedt's first victory as Bears coach.

"We're headed in the right direction. ... It's something to build on," Wannstedt said.

The Bears are 1-2. The Bucs (0-3) were out of this one by halftime.

Jets 45, Patriots 7

At East Rutherford, N.J., Bill Parcells' team didn't look anything like the teams he used to coach at Giants Stadium. The Patriots (0-4) gave up 35 straight points in a first half in which they were outgained 233 yards to 41.

"We were completely outclassed in every way," Parcells said. "That wasn't even a good scrimmage."

Seahawks 19, Bengals 10

At Cincinnati, Harold Green of the Bengals (0-4) fumbled in his own end zone with 4:26 left and Rod Stephens pounced on it for a touchdown, giving Seattle (2-2) the deciding points.

"That's a game that makes old men of coaches," Seattle coach Tom Flores said.

Jays; Sox could take it tonight

By The Associated Press

This could be a big night for celebrations in the American League.

The Toronto Blue Jays and Chicago White Sox clinched ties for their division titles Sunday and could win outright tonight.

All they need are victories by themselves or losses by their closest pursuers.

"When we got to this stage, we certainly hoped to do it in front of the hometown crowd and have a party in the SkyDome," Paul Molitor of the Blue Jays said after a 7-3 loss to the Yankees in Toronto's final home game of the season.

Toronto, seeking its third consecutive AL East title and fourth in five years, plays at Milwaukee tonight, and Molitor will have a chance to clinch in front of his former Brewers teammates.

"We would've liked to get it done here," Blue Jays third baseman Ed Sprague said.

Chicago clinched a tie by beating Texas 5-3 in the opener of a doubleheader, then lost 3-2 in the second game.

"It's not over 'til they clinch," said Julio Franco, who put the Rangers ahead in the second game with an RBI double in the eighth. "We're not going to quit."

The White Sox are home against Seattle tonight, while the Rangers play next on Tuesday night at Oakland.

"I don't think we've ever played more exciting games than we did today," Ozzie Guillen said.

In other games, Kansas City beat California 9-8 in 10 innings, Oakland beat Seattle 3-2 in 12 innings, Detroit swept Baltimore 9-4 and 6-5, Minnesota beat Boston 5-2 and Cleveland beat Milwaukee 6-4.

Jim Leyritz hit a three-run homer in the first off Todd Stottlemyre (11-11) at Toronto, and Jim Abbott (11-13) allowed three runs and six hits in 7-13 innings as the Blue Jays lost for just the second time in 14 games.

White Sox 5, Rangers 3; Detroit 9, Yankees 6.

Bo Jackson hit his 14th homer and Jason Bere won his sixth straight start (11-5), giving up one run and four hits in six innings in the opener at Comiskey Park.

Roberto Hernandez got four outs for his 37th save in 43 chances. Kenny Rogers (15-10) gave up three runs and six hits in 6-13 innings.

With the score tied 1-1 in the eighth inning of the second game, Julio Franco hit an RBI double off Alex Fernandez (17-9) and scored on Dean Palmer's grounder. Roger Pavlik (11-6) won and Tom Henke pitched two innings for his club-record 39th save in 46 chances.

Royals 9, Angels 8

Maybe someone should tell George Brett life begins at 40. On the day after he announced his retirement, Brett had his biggest game in five years, homering twice and driving in five runs, including a game-winning homer in the 10th inning off Paul Swingle (0-1).

Brett doubled in a run in the first and hit a three-run homer in the fourth. It was the second two-homer game this season and the 16th of his career. It was his first five-RBI game since May 22, 1988. Brett, who leads the Royals with 73 RBIs, has four home runs in his last five games and 19 this season.

Jeff Montgomery (6-5) pitched one hitless inning for the victory at Kauffman Stadium. Athletics 3, Mariners 2

Randy Johnson struck out 13 in 10 innings to become the 12th pitcher to strike out 300 in a season, but Oakland completed a three-game sweep.

Johnson, at 301 strikeouts, is the first pitcher to top 300 since Nolan Ryan fanned 301 in 1989. The other to do it are Vida Blue, Steve Carlton, Bob Feller, Walter Johnson, Sandy Koufax, Mickey Lolich, Sam McDowell, J.R. Richard, Mike Scott and Rube Waddell.

Steve Ontiveros (0-2) walked Henry Mercedes on a 3-2 pitch with two outs and the bases loaded in the 12th. John Brito (1-0) got the last two outs of the 11th at the Kingdom and Dennis Eckersley finished for his 36th save.

Tigers 9, Orioles 4

Baltimore, which has lost nine of 12, was eliminated as Mickey Tettleton tripled in the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning of the second game.

In the first game, Cecil Fielder ended a month-long home run drought and Eric Davis, Alan Trammell and Tony Phillips also homered. Davis' 452-foot drive was the longest homer ever at Camden Yards.

Bill Gullickson (13-9) allowed three runs and seven hits in 5-13 innings of the opener. Arthur Rhodes (5-5) gave up five runs and three hits in 2-2-3 innings.

Mike Henneman (4-3) won the second game and Joe Boever got his second save. Alan Mills (5-4) was the loser, allowing a ninth-inning double to Travis Fryman.

Twins 5, Red Sox 2

Mike Trombley (6-5) allowed one run and five hits in six innings for his first win as a starter since Aug. 14, and Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth at Fenway Park for his 33rd save.

Paul Quantrill (6-11) lost his fourth straight start, allowing three runs and seven hits in five innings.

Indians 6, Brewers 4

Sam Horn homered in the sixth and singled home the tie-breaking run during a three-run rally in the seventh. Horn, who hit 38 homers in the minors, had three hits, raising his average to .526 (10-for-19).

John Jaha homered twice for the visiting Brewers, who got two runs and four hits in two-thirds of an inning off Mike Iragui (1-1). Jeremy Hernandez (6-3) allowed one hit in 2-1-3 scoreless innings.

Braves still need more wins

Most seasons, 100 victories are plenty to finish in first place. The Atlanta Braves still need a few more wins, though.

Jeff Blauser's two-run single started a four-run seventh inning to snap a tie and Atlanta went on to beat Philadelphia 7-2 Sunday at Veterans Stadium, improving to 100-56.

San Francisco (98-57) kept pace with Atlanta by beating visiting San Diego 5-2 behind Billy Swift's 20th victory to stay 1 1/2 games behind the Braves and one in the loss column.

"I thought in the low 90s would win it," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "Cincinnati was a choice in the spring but they had a lot of injuries. And San Diego traded off its roster."

Despite the loss, the Phillies' magic number for clinching the NL East title was reduced to three as second-place Montreal lost to New York.

Steve Avery (17-6) pitched six innings for Atlanta, allowing four hits and two runs as the Braves improved to 27-7 this season when he stars.

With the score 2-2, pinch-hitter Deion Sanders opened the seventh with a walk and advanced to second on a wild pitch by Curt Schilling (15-7). Otis Nixon then beat out a bunt, with Sanders taking third. Nixon stole second without a throw and Blauser hit a 3-2 pitch for a tie-breaking single.

At Candlestick Park, Swift became the Giants' second 20-game winner this season and Barry Bonds hit his fourth home run in three games.

With Swift (20-8) and John Burkett (20-7), San Francisco became the first team to have two 20-game winners since the 1990 Oakland Athletics, who accomplished the feat with Bob Welch and Dave Stewart.

Swift allowed three hits in eight innings, retiring the last 12 batters he faced. Doug Brocail dropped to 3-13.

"I was actually nervous," Swift said. "You're sitting in the clubhouse three hours before the game and thinking about it."

Elsewhere in the NL it was New York 9, Montreal 3; St. Louis 10, Florida 7; Colorado 12, Cincinnati 7; Houston 5, Los Angeles 4, and Pittsburgh swept a doubleheader from Chicago, 5-1 and 1-0.

Mets 9, Expos 3

Jeff Kent hit his first career grand slam and drove in five runs as New York beat visiting Montreal. The second-place Expos took two of three in the series, but needed a sweep against the last-place Mets.

Dave Telgheder (5-2) scattered five hits in eight innings for the victory and Mike Maddux got the last three outs. Expos starter Ken Hill (9-7) lasted only 4 1-3 innings, allowing seven runs on nine hits.

Cardinals 10, Marlins 7

Bernard Gilkey hit a home run and drove in three runs and Stan Royer added three RBIs as St. Louis beat Florida at Miami. The Cardinals chased rookie starter David Weathers (2-2) by the third inning with six runs.

Winner Omar Olivares (5-2) gave up two runs and four hits in five-plus innings.

Rockies 12, Reds 7

Andres Galarraga hit a two-run homer and Eric Young a pair of solo shots, and the Rockies, in their final home game, extended their major league attendance record to 4,483,350. Sunday's crowd was 70,069.

Galarraga went 3-for-5 to raise his average to .379 and appears a virtual cinch to win the NL batting title. Armando Reynoso improved to 12-10 and Larry Luebbers dropped to 2-5.

Astros 5, Dodgers 4

At Los Angeles, Mike Piazza had three RBIs to become the first NL rookie in 40 years to drive in 100 runs, but it wasn't enough as Houston's Mark Portugal won his 11th straight decision. Piazza is the first Dodger with 100 RBIs since Pedro Guerrero in 1983.

Portugal (17-4) gave up four hits and two runs five innings to 526 (10-for-19).

Pirates 5, Cubs 1, 1st game

Pirates 1, Cubs 0, 2nd game

Tim Wakefield pitched a five-hitter for his first victory as a starter since April 27 as Pittsburgh beat visiting Chicago to sweep a doubleheader.

In the opener, Jeff King hit a three-run, tiebreaking double in the eighth.

Wakefield (5-11) had not won a start since he pitched into the 11th inning to beat Atlanta. Mike Morgan (10-14) gave up only Al Martin's RBI single in the first inning of the second game.

Texan sets new world record in powerlift

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — Super heavyweight Anthony Clark bettered his own world record Saturday with a 734 3/4 pound bench press at the U.S. Powerlifting Federation Northwest Open.

Clark, 27, of Pasadena, Texas, missed at his third and final attempt at 751 pounds. The 5-foot-8, 341-pound Clark went into the meet at Auburn High School holding the world bench press mark at 725 pounds.

Using an unorthodox reverse grip on the bar, Clark is one of only a few powerlifters to have hoisted 700 pounds in the bench press. His goal is to press 800 pounds.

Tacoma's Any Medak finished second to Clark in the super heavyweight division, pressing 400 pounds.

Clark's world record press is about twice what most professional football players bench-press. He makes a living traveling the world promoting products, and lifting cars and the occasional elephant.

"Every weekend I'm picking up a car," Clark said, listing anything up to and including a Cadillac Seville. "For me it's easier picking up a car than picking up weights."
