Chamber holds installation for board of directors

By DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

Nine new directors were installed to the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce Board in ceremonies Thursday conducted by former Chamber president Gene Steele.

Newest members of the chamber's board of directors are Billy Smith, David Kaul, Dawson Orr, Larry Hollis, Norman Knox, Brent Stephens, Richard Stowers, Joe Wheeley and Ben Shackelford. Also installed were Richard Stowers, Brent Stephens and Jerry Norris.

Outgoing president Jim Morris and Steele presented Mike Keagey, 1991 president, with a gavel engraved with her name. Keagey is the first woman to be named Chamber president in Pampa.

"In looking forward to 1991, I see we have problems that need to be solved. We need to get the sales tax. We need to get out there and shake some more hands and kiss some more babies. But I know this time we can do it," Keagey said.

"A fairly wise man once said that things work out when people work together. This board's great. (Red McNatt, chamber executive vice president) is great and we'll have a great '91!" she added.

Morris was honored for serving as Chamber president for 16 months, the longest single term of any president. Morris took over as president when Robert Wilson moved from the Pampa in the summer of 1989.

During Morris' term, the Chamber board hired Red McNatt to replace Bruce Barton, executive vice president, who left to accept a job in Georgetown. Also during his term, Pampa had one unsuccessful prison bid, followed by a successful bid in July 1990 which will bring from 300 to 400 new jobs to the community in the near future.

"I believe we will see that Jim has been one of the very best presidents we have ever had. I looked up the word 'ultimate' and found it to mean 'beyond which there can be no other'. I think that describes Jim Morris," said Keagey, as she presented him with a T-shirt saying "Ultimate President."

Formerly plant manager at the Pampa Celanese plant, Steele returned to Pampa after 10 years to be guest speaker for the installation banquet at the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn. Steele presently serves as vice president of administration for Hoechst Celanese.

emony on "Heroes," and used the song "Wind Beneath My Wings" and a video to accompany the presentation. He mentioned several Pampa residents who "had influences on my life. Some were a piece of mortar, some were a brick and a few were a cornerstone. These are my heroes." He mentioned Rex and Ann McAnelly, Frank Culberson, Carl Kennedy, Joe Donaldson, Ed

Myatt and Don Lane.

Following installation of the new board members, Steele said, "These people are the wind under your wings. They share themselves in making Pampa a better place to live."

Also recognized were past directors, some of whom are retiring from the Chamber board. They included Louise Fletcher, Jerry Norris, Ben Shackelford, Billy Smith, Roy Sparkman, Brent Stephens and Richard Stowers.

Board member Dona Cornutt was presented with an arrangement of red roses by Steele in recognition of the contributions she has made during her 14 years on the board. Steele noted that she was a special "hero" of his.

State Rep. Warren Chisum presented a plaque to Ron Guard, former Chamber board president and Celanese plant manager, who had also arrived in Pampa to attend the installation banquet. Another former plant manager, Don Lehman and his wife Laura, were present also.

One of the highlights of the evening was a style show featuring clothing made from Pampa's Hoechst Celanese chemical plant products.

Rebels deny airmen murdered after U.S. helicopter downed

By ANY CABRERA
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels deny U.S. allegations they murdered three American airmen after forcing their helicopter down with gunfire. The guerrillas contend the three died of wounds incurred when the copter was shot down.

A forensic team from the U.S. Armed Forces Pathological Institute prepared to perform autopsies today on the crew, said American Embassy spokeswoman Pamela Cory-Archer.

Bush administration and congressional sources said the deaths in the incident Wednesday might serve to spur release of more than $40 million in U.S. aid to the Salvadoran army. A decision is expected next week.

The rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, which contends it inadvertently shot down the aircraft, said Thursday night that its combatants found one of the victims dead at the scene and tried to get first aid to the two others.

The State Department earlier Thursday said circumstantial evidence showed that rebels fatally shot the crewmembers after the meg safely landed the UH-1H Huey helicopter.

More than 73,000 Salvadorans and 30 Americans have been killed in fighting between the FMLN and a series of U.S.-backed governments in El Salvador's 11-year-old civil war.

The communique by the rebels, known also by their acronym FMLN, said guerrillas shot at the unmarked helicopter because it flew low over a meeting they were holding with civilians in a combat zone.

"Our combatants, assuming that the armed aircraft would open fire on the concentration of civilians, as is the custom of the Salvadoran armed forces, fired small arms at the craft, downing it in the process," the rebels said in a communique.

The Pentagon said the victims were members of the U.S. Army's 4th Battalion of the 228th Aviation Regiment and were returning to their base in Panama after flying a routine mission to San Salvador.

The U.S. Army Southern Command in Panama said victims' names would not be released until families were notified. But Gotay Lacayo, a journalist at a private Salvadoran radio, said military sources told him they were pilot Daniel Scott, Pvt. Ernest Dawson and Lt. Col. David J. Pickett.

Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., a member of the House Intelligence Committee, said the helicopter was flying an administrative support mission for the American ambassador and crew members had no links to the Salvadoran military.

Shuster, speaking in Washington on Thursday, said the craft was clearly marked as a U.S. Army helicopter.

State Department deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said the site of the incident is not considered a combat zone. The helicopter was downed at San Francisco, a community about 75 miles east of San Salvador near the city of San Miguel.

"They (the victims) were given basic first aid and turned over to the local population to be taken to the San Miguel hospital, but they didn't survive. There are dozens of witnesses to this situation in the civilian population," the communique said.

Health official warns of AIDS risk in Pampa

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa's Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS) problem has become severe enough that the Texas Department of Health has assigned a full-time HIV nurse to their office here.

And Carolyn Hall, who will be conducting confidential AIDS screening and interviews, said the local high school and middle school are ripe to become AIDS breeding grounds in the near future.

"In an age when movies, television, rock music and magazines are pushing sexual behavior, our children are at an especially great risk," Hall stated.

"Because the screening and information on carriers is, by law, strictly confidential, and because a lot of people with AIDS are misdiagnosed, we really don't know how severe the problem is," Hall said. "But we have not seen the tip of the iceberg in the Panhandle."

Through Dec. 7, 1990, there were 11,339 confirmed AIDS cases in Texas. Sixty-three percent of those died, with 110 of them being younger than 13 years of age.

Of the dead children, most contracted AIDS from their mother in the womb.

Seventy-four percent of the adults in the state with AIDS describe themselves as homosexual or bisexual, Hall said.

In the Panhandle there are 121 confirmed cases, with at least that many more out there that have been misdiagnosed, Hall said.

Fifty-three percent of those have died.

Again, most of those contracted AIDS during homosexual or bisexual encounters, or from someone who had engaged in such activity.

"But there is no such thing as a 'risky group,'" she insisted. "It is risky behavior. It is mankind's behavior."

She termed Pampa "in a period of denial."

"Nobody wants to admit that such a thing could exist here, but it does," she promised.

Hall said sexual promiscuity among local students is rampant, as evidenced by high numbers of teenage pregnancies.

"We have an epidemic of unwanted, unplanned pregnancies in all age groups," Hall said. "Everything is promoting sex anymore, and sex is promoted as the answer to everything. It makes our problems more complex. They are becoming sexually active around the age of 12, just ask a middle schooler."

That promiscuity, coupled with undeniable evidence that the HIV virus is present in the area, means anyone involved in what the Health Department terms "high-risk behavior" could become stricken with AIDS.

"The state is pushing confidential, anonymous testing," Hall said of AIDS screening. "They can use any name. It's free, too."

Hall said anyone contacting the Health Department can ask to speak to her without saying what it is about.

"The first thing we do is take an assessment," she said. "I introduce myself, they sign a consent with any name. We talk about their sexual partners. We encourage younger people who are sexually active, use crack, cocaine or intravenous drugs, even alcohol, it means they are probably not practicing safe sex."

Each person who comes in is given a code number and the blood drawn from them is identified only by the code, Hall said. When results of the blood test are received, the person is called back in, given the test results and all of their paperwork.

"At that point I don't have anything and it is up to them how they proceed," she said. "They can and should be protected and that is done with confidentiality laws. If I were to divulge any of that information to anyone, I could have my nurse's license revoked. We take confidentiality very seriously."

Reducing risk of AIDS

The Texas Department of Health has issued a warning for those that engage in the following behaviors, due to an especially high risk of contracting AIDS.

You are at special risk if you engage in the following:

- Anal intercourse.
- Receptive vaginal intercourse with more than one partner or with a partner whose sexual history you do not know.
- Oral sex with more than one partner or with a partner whose sexual history you do not know.
- IV drug use.
- Alcohol or cocaine use leading to reduced inhibitions.
- Using a condom with a petroleum-based lubricant.

Ways to reduce the threat of AIDS include the following:

- Clean all needles with bleach.
- Use a condom with a spermicide and a water-based lubricant such as KY Jelly.
- Use dental dams during oral sex.
- Never engage in anal sex.
- Avoid condoms made of animal skin.
- Avoid prostitutes or those who trade sex for drugs or other favors.
- Pick up free condoms at the Texas Health Department, 400 W. Kingsmill.
- Be tested for AIDS if you have an active sexual history.

AG: Random drug testing violates state constitution

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Constitution's guarantee of privacy protects law enforcement officers from random urine tests for drugs unless a compelling reason can be shown for the practice, said an attorney general's opinion.

The opinion, released Thursday, cited a Texas Supreme Court ruling against a state agency's requirement that employees be given polygraph examinations in certain instances.

"The intrusiveness of urine testing is of a somewhat different nature from that of a polygraph examination, but in our opinion, the former is at least as intrusive as

Gray County Sheriff's Sgt. James Walker, left, and Department of Public Safety Trooper Lynn Holland look over an accident scene about 10 p.m. Thursday on Price Road, between U.S. 60 and Texas 152. According to the DPS, Sandra Phillips Perdue, 36, 712 N. Frost, was walking southbound in the middle of Price Road when she was struck by a 1991 Nissan pickup driven by Michael Dean Haskell, 39, 1928 N. Christy, who was traveling southbound. Haskell swerved to miss the pedestrian, but struck her, knocking her 51 feet, according to the DPS. Perdue was transported by Rural/Metro-AMT Paramedic Service to Coronado Hospital where she was listed in good condition this morning with a fractured ankle. Trooper Holland said alcohol on the part of the pedestrian was a factor in the accident and that citations are pending against the pedestrian.

Mosbacher proposes limiting terms

By PEGGY FIKAC
 Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — A campaign to limit officeholders' terms is being touted by Rob Mosbacher Jr., who lost the 1990 race for lieutenant governor to longtime comptroller Bob Bullock.

"We're convinced that this is the best tool to return control of government to the people," Mosbacher said Thursday.

Mosbacher, a Republican, said the Texans for Term Limitation campaign hopes to raise $250,000 and gather half a million signatures in the effort.

"We're simply asking lawmakers to allow the public to vote on the issue," he said.

Mosbacher said he couldn't tie longevity in office to ethics questions raised about the Legislature. But he said term limits could attract more people to office who are interested in public service as opposed to a political career.

The proposed constitutional amendment would restrict the governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, comptroller, treasurer, agriculture commissioner and land commissioner to two terms of four years each.

State senators would be limited to two four-year terms, state representatives to four two-year terms and railroad commissioners to one six-year term.

The campaign also wants to restrict Texas members of the U.S. Senate to two six-year terms and of the U.S. House to four two-year terms.

A Houston oilman who is stepping down as state welfare board chairman, Mosbacher supported term limits during his campaign against Bullock, a Democrat. In 1984, Mosbacher lost a GOP primary bid for U.S. Senate against Phil Gramm.

Bullock, elected comptroller in 1974, began his political career as a state representative in 1957.

Mosbacher avoided criticizing Bullock, instead emphasizing the importance of bipartisan support for the constitutional amendment, which would be on the 1992 ballot if passed by lawmakers.

Bullock, who as lieutenant governor presides over the Senate, said he didn't regard the proposal as a personal attack.

"It's got pros and cons ... You would lose some experience, but by the same token, gain some new ideas," he said.

Gov.-elect Ann Richards "doesn't have a problem with it," said Chuck McDonald, her deputy press secretary.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has not taken a position on the issue, said John Bender, his press secretary.

Joining Mosbacher at a news conference were Paul Ogle, coauthor of a successful Colorado amendment to limit terms, and Laura Lowell, involved in a similar campaign that succeeded in California. Oklahoma voters also recently endorsed limiting terms.

Woman given six years for prescription fraud

A 28-year-old Pampa woman was sentenced Thursday to six years in the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice and fined $750 by 223rd District Judge Lee Waters.

Tina Marie Crossman of 1901 Lynn pleaded guilty to a 15-count indictment charging her with obtaining controlled substances by fraud, said District Attorney Harold Comer.

The charge is a third-degree felony, which is punishable by a maximum 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Crossman pleaded guilty to the offense under a plea bargain arrangement with the state, Comer said.

The 15 counts occurred from May 21 to July 19, 1990, when Crossman reportedly would find out which of her acquaintances had prescriptions for Zanax and Tylenol 3 with codeine.

Crossman then would call the doctors who prescribed the medication and ask them to call the pharmacy for a refill, at which time she would go and pick up the refill, the district attorney said.

Texas congressmen questioning administration's gulf policy

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Texas congressmen are back in Washington for the 102nd Congress, wrestling with the threat of war in the Persian Gulf and the effects of recession at home.

Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, says he goes to bed every night thinking about the Persian Gulf and hoping that he'll never have to vote to go to war.

Sarpalius says he returned home to Amarillo recently from the Middle East with promises to call 200 girlfriends, parents, brothers and friends of troops in Saudi Arabia.

"I heard the soldiers say they're ready to get it over with, they want to come home," Sarpalius said Thursday, on the first day of the new Congress. But when he calls the troops' friends and relations, they tell him "they don't want to see us go to war."

"It's something I go to bed every night thinking about. I feel very strongly that we can't jump the gun, when you've got American lives on the line," he said.

"What is the price of this in blood and in money?" asked Democratic Rep. John Bryant, echoing the fears of the people in his Dallas district. "When you're running a $300 billion a year deficit, where is this dough going to come from?"

In Houston, "there is genuine support and appreciation for what the president has done so far, but I don't sense anyone is prepared to endorse an all-out attack on the country of Iraq without some further provocation," said Rep. Michael Andrews, D-Houston.

But in the High Plains around Lubbock, said Republican Rep. Larry Combest, "a pretty hawkish area," people believe the country must back up its talk, "and anybody who undercuts, undermines the president, I think it grates against them."

Rep. Jack Fields, R-Humble, said that while the American people want everything done to avoid a conflict, they also feel "we have taken a very strong stand and that we really don't have many alternatives at this point."

People across Texas, said the state's congressmen and senators, are also questioning how the country can afford the U.S. military buildup in and around Saudi Arabia, and why Japan and Europe aren't committing more troops and resources.

"They ought to ante up and pay and they ought to send the bulk of the troops in there. They ought to be sharing the risk to their own troops and the risk to their own pocketbooks," Bryant said.

Some of the state's congressmen said sanctions and diplomacy should be given a chance, beyond the Jan. 15 deadline for Iraq's Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait, before military force is used.

Others, like Combest, R-Lubbock, say the threat of war is necessary to make the sanctions work, while Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, is torn.

"I talked to the guys who are going to do battle and they tell me we need to go and get it over with; that he (Saddam) is just buying time to build a more potent weapon. Then I come back home and talk to the mothers and fathers of these same kids, and they say we shouldn't go in there, see if sanctions work," said Ortiz, who visited troops in Saudi Arabia late last year.

Rep. Chet Edwards, D-Waco, said there are mixed emotions in his Central Texas district, which has 22,000 troops in the Persian Gulf, more than any other congressional district, and is home to Fort Hood.

"People are overwhelmingly committed to seeing that Saddam Hussein doesn't get away with unchecked terrorism," said Edwards, the state's only new congressman sworn in Thursday. "But there are a lot of 20-year-old wives and husbands who would be widowed in the several months if we go to war."

"The people of Texas understand it's a very grave situation and it's a very dangerous situation," said Republican Sen. Phil Gramm, who estimates one in 12 of the 400,000 troops either in the Gulf or being dispatched to the region is from Texas.

Gramm said he believed the only hope for a peaceful resolution would be for Hussein "to come to his senses and pull out of Kuwait."

Gramm said he was concerned, however, that congressional "sniping and second guessing" would undermine the Bush administration's efforts to force Saddam's withdrawal from Kuwait.

"I don't rule out military action, but my first choice is to see if sanctions could work," said Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Andrews said that while it's a "wait-and-see" situation in the Persian Gulf, his constituents are being immediately affected by the downturn in the economy.

Bryant said his constituents also appear more concerned about the economy than the gulf, although one of their worries is the question of who is going to pay for the military buildup.

"They're saying 'What are we doing over there in view of the problems here.' There is an underlying current of questions about what exactly the objective is, how it benefits us and how we pay for it. It wasn't a condemnation, yet no one jumped up and said invade tomorrow," Bryant said.

MADD sought alcohol ban at football parties

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — Mothers Against Drunk Drivers members say they had sought a ban on alcohol consumption at football game tailgate parties to avert drunken brawls like one that followed the John Hancock Bowl.

Two off-duty U.S. Border Patrol agents were arrested after the New Year's Eve brawl at Sun Bowl stadium on the University of Texas at El Paso campus. A young boy and off-duty police officer were punched or hit and one of the agents emptied his revolver during the melee.

"We are concerned about tailgate parties ... You do have a greater chance of having a drunk driver on the road," Margaret England, El Paso MADD office manager, said Thursday.

Agents Donald Toovy, 31, and Michael Willmer, 26, were arrested Tuesday by UTEP police.

Toovy was charged with aggravated assault and felony criminal mischief and released on $120,000 bond. Willmer was charged with felony injury to a child and released on $7,500 bond.

The two agents were placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of an investigation by the Office of the Inspector General, said Doug Mosier, Border Patrol spokesman.

Witnesses told police that the agents drove up to four separate tailgate parties on one street in search of drinking cups.

UTEP Police Lt. Ted Ramirez said a bystander at one of the parties instigated a fight with the agents.

"For some reason Louis Mora ran over to the agents' pickup truck and jumped on top of the hood and broke the windshield," Ramirez said. As Willmer chased Mora, Toovy drew his .357 Magnum service revolver.

"He fired one shot in the air and fired at a pickup truck that was parked across from his pickup," Ramirez said. "A fight broke out after the shooting stopped and that's when an 11-year-old boy was struck."

The identity of the boy, who was examined at the scene, was not released. Mora was charged with criminal mischief and released on $2,500 bond.

About a dozen people were in the crowd the agents approached, including off-duty police officer Victor Portillo, who Toovy is accused of striking in the face during the fracas.

Ramirez said the agents were not tested for alcohol consumption.

"They had alcoholic beverages with them and smelled of alcohol," Ramirez said. A one-pint bottle of Jim Beam whiskey and a pony keg of beer were found inside the agents' pickup, he said.

Mosier said each of the men have been Border Patrol agents about five years. Off-duty agents are authorized to carry firearms.

UTEP President Diana Natalicio did not recall receiving MADD's request to curb alcohol consumption. But she said the university took a good look at alcohol consumption at tailgate parties a few years ago and reaffirmed its policies.

"We don't sell alcoholic beverages at athletic events and don't in any way encourage people to bring alcohol to tailgate parties," she said. "The issue here is how far do you go to make sure people aren't doing that? ... We've had relatively few problems at athletic events. I think our policies have worked well."

Alcohol is not sold in Sun Bowl stadium during UTEP football games. It was sold through the beginning of the fourth quarter at the John Hancock Bowl.

Officials with the Sun Carnival Association, which organizes John Hancock Bowl activities, were out of town Thursday and could not be reached for comment, a receptionist said.

Kreuger, Sharp sworn in

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — On the same day he was sworn in to office, Comptroller John Sharp said he had devised a new, streamlined structure for the agency.

Sharp said Thursday he would abolish 18 of 19 top management slots and replace them with four new positions. He also promised to conduct a management audit of the agency aimed at cutting costs.

"Texas is facing a number of tough fiscal decisions in the next year, and I want to begin today doing my part to help make our state government more efficient and service-oriented," he said.

Sharp, 40, was sworn in by his predecessor, Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Bullock, who held the post for 16 years.

Bullock was joined by Gov.-elect Ann Richards and former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough at a Capitol rotunda podium framed by Texas flags and bunches of blue and white balloons.

"Our goal will be to clear away the bureaucratic clutter so that our most creative, innovative people can rise to the top and do their jobs," said Sharp, of Victoria.

Also on Thursday, former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger took the oath of office as Texas Railroad Commissioner, replacing former Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance.

Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Morris Overstreet administered the oath to Krueger, a Democrat from New Braunfels, who was elected to the Railroad Commission in November. The commission regulates the state's oil, gas and transportation industries.

During the ceremony in the Senate chamber, Krueger read from a 1973 speech in which he announced his candidacy for Congress. Part of that speech dealt with the energy crisis.

"Today we face as tough an energy problem as we did in 1973," Krueger said. "In some ways even tougher, because we face the possibility of losing not only dollars but losing blood because of our energy posture."

Krueger said that as commissioner, he intends to enforce oil and gas industry regulations while encouraging productivity and competition with other states and nations. He also pledged to champion environmental issues.

"I'm very, very concerned that our underground aquifers be protected. We have to look to that next generation," Krueger said. "We have to be sure that the air we breathe is pure — as pure as we can make it."

As a congressman, Krueger served on the Energy and Power Subcommittee of the Interstate Foreign Commerce Committee. He also has been a dean of Duke University.

Boy awakens family from deadly slumber

PLAINVIEW (AP) — A 5-year-old boy awoke and alerted his family after carbon monoxide filled their home during the night, officials said.

Dominic Jackson managed to wake up his father, Robert Jackson, who rescued the boy's mother and 7-year-old sister.

The boy awoke about 6 a.m. Thursday, concerned about his sister vomiting in the room they share, said the boy's aunt, Christine Sansom.

Unable to wake her, the boy went to his father's room and struggled to wake him.

When the father regained consciousness, he ushered his son outside, carried his daughter out and then found his wife, Darlene Jackson, unconscious in a bathroom.

He carried her out, and after breathing some fresh air, loaded his family in a car and drove them to Central Plains Regional Hospital.

Dominic was treated and released to Ms. Sansom, and the others were listed in stable condition and were under observation.

Energas Co. investigated the incident.

Family members told physicians that an unventilated wall heater may have caused carbon monoxide to build up.

Silvery frost outlines the branches of trees along Pampa streets this morning as the latest winter front lingers in the area.

Cold front leaves icy roads, bridges in state

From Staff and Wire Reports

Ice-coated bridges and overpasses created hazardous driving conditions across a vast area of Texas in the wake of a cold front that claimed three lives and caused a jetliner to slip off a runway at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

But forecasters say some relief appears to be in sight with the end of the wintry weather expected tonight and Saturday. It was the third cold front to cause icing problems across the state since the weekend before Christmas.

"The temperature is expected to climb above freezing tomorrow afternoon," Mark Brundrett, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth, said late Thursday. "The freezing precipitation should become rain tomorrow during the afternoon and that trend is expected to continue through Saturday and possibly Sunday."

The rain and above-freezing temperatures will replace frigid conditions that surprised commuters Thursday morning and made for treacherous travel after the evening rush hour in central North Texas, Brundrett said.

Pampa area residents faced roadways made slick by light snow and sleet falling from Thursday afternoon through this morning. Pampa had a high temperature Thursday of 20 degrees, with an overnight low of 16.

Forecast for tonight calls for cloudy and cold with a 40 percent chance of freezing drizzle or freezing rain, a low in the upper 20s and southeasterly winds 5-10 mph. Saturday will be cloudy and not as cold with a 20 percent chance of rain or showers, a high in the mid 30s and southeasterly winds 10-20 mph.

Those area cities where school has already resumed from the holidays remained open, but at least two — Canadian and Lefors — were not running their bus routes for students today.

At least three motorists died on treacherous roads Thursday. A Farmers Branch woman, Abilene man and Odessa man died in separate accidents Thursday.

Officials said a Delta Airlines MD-80 jet with 17 passengers and a crew of six was preparing to leave the Dallas-Fort Worth area for Memphis when the nose wheel slid into some mud. No one was injured.

The icing caused numerous schools, including those at Fort Worth, to close. Some major companies, including Frito-Lay, shut down operations in the Dallas-area today.

Dense fog, freezing drizzle and light snow combined to create treacherous driving conditions across all of West Texas east of the mountains and freezing drizzle coated bridges and overpasses over a vast area of North Texas early today. A winter weather advisory was in effect through tonight for the Panhandle and South Plains.

The freezing rain extended from the Panhandle and South Plains eastward into northwestern portions of North Texas and southeastward into the College Station area and southward into the Hill Country.

Fort Worth police said that more than 500 accidents occurred on Thursday. Meanwhile, police in Dallas reported 335 accidents Thursday, 110 of which caused injuries, as motorists tried to negotiate icy overpasses, bridges and elevated roadways.

Ice and accidents caused the temporary closure of the intersection of interstates 20 and 35E in Dallas on Thursday morning and a section of Loop 12 at Interstate 45 later in the day.

"The people aren't reacting to the slicker streets, it's getting slicker real quick," Dallas police officer David Myers said Thursday night.

Winter weather advisories were expected to end at midday today for most of North Texas, all of West Texas and the Hill Country in South Texas.

Snow was not expected to accumulate from flurries that were predicted to continue in the Panhandle through Sunday night, Brundrett said.

Light rain, drizzle and fog that pervaded South Texas Thursday were expected to continue into the weekend.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 20s across West Texas and North Texas and in the 30s and 40s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 19 at Dalhart to 47 at Galveston.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Economy's better without politicians

One sign of the exceptional sluggishness that has gripped the economy was revealed in a New York Times article last month on average cost of goods and services. For the first time in decades, prices are actually on the decline throughout broad sectors of the economy. "Deflation" is the technical term — and economists offer mixed assessments of the likely immediate and long-term effects.

By our reckoning, however, the benefits far outweigh the drawbacks. For one thing, economic efficiency is enhanced by a dip, or at least a stabilization, in the price of inflation-hedges such as real estate, fine art and collectibles. When these investments no longer yield the highest returns, more money flows toward the business sector, which offers a greater potential for job creation.

Then there's the benefit to working people whose paychecks are chomped up by rising prices. Without galloping inflation — or even the more gently rising prices of recent years — two-earner families wouldn't have become the norm, so families by and large would enjoy the stronger foundation that comes when parents are able to nurture families, instead of serve as absentee landlords to their children.

It's interesting to note the areas that, so far, seem exempt from deflation: Costs for health-care, college tuition and legal fees continue their upward trajectory. Can't all these trends — which place such a burden on individuals and the public treasury — be laid at the doorstep of government? After all, federally sponsored insurance funds a big portion of health-care bills, just as much of the cost of college tuition for the middle class is covered by federal loans. Don't these government programs help fan inflation by insulating the beneficiaries from the true cost of the services they're receiving? When recipients don't directly feel those costs, they have less incentive to shop for the best deal — so competitive restraint on prices is minimized.

What about legal fees? Can't their sky's-the-limit runup also be blamed partly on government — specifically, on the monopoly advantages that government bestows on licensed lawyers and more broadly on the plethora of laws government has foisted on us? If paralegals were allowed to offer a broader range of services, wouldn't the competition prove healthful for the consumer's wallet?

In short, where inflation still wears away at pocketbooks, lifestyles and general happiness, we have politicians to thank for the favor.

A LITTLE HARMLESS DIVERSION
FOR THE TAXPAYERS

Running from the police

WASHINGTON — Here we go again. When oral arguments resume this month, the Supreme Court will hear two cases that are likely to send mere laymen climbing the walls in search of common sense. As you may have guessed, the cases deal with the Exclusionary Rule.

One case involves Charles Steven Acevedo, who was nabbed with a quantity of marijuana in his lunch bag. The other involves a juvenile offender, Hodari D., who took to his heels when he saw a police car. In both cases the question is, Should the evidence thus obtained have been excluded at trial?

In recent years the Supreme Court has gone through repeated agonies of indecision over the Exclusionary Rule. Determining a "reasonable" search or seizure is tougher than pinning down obscenity or defining an establishment of religion. The justices keep trying to find "bright lines," but the only lines they find are smudged.

Take the Acevedo case, to be argued on Jan. 8. It goes back to October 1987, when federal agents in Hawaii intercepted an express package destined for an apartment on Stevens Avenue in Santa Ana, Calif. The package contained nine clear bags of marijuana. Agents let the shipment continue, but kept the address under surveillance.

Shortly after the package arrived, Acevedo entered the apartment, empty-handed, only to emerge 10 minutes later carrying a brown lunch bag that appeared to be full. Acevedo put the bag in the trunk of his car and drove away. Police stopped him, opened the trunk, found the sack, opened the sack and found the marijuana. Oops! The police, it appears, could open the trunk with a warrant but they could not open the sack without a warrant. The evidence was excluded.

James J. Kilpatrick

Since at least 1977, the high court has been making such fine distinctions under the "automobile exception" to the Fourth Amendment. Justice Harry Blackmun wearily described the court's several opinions as "vacillations," a charitable term. Cases have turned upon the character of a footlocker and the opacity of a green plastic bag. Was contraband on the seat? In the glove compartment? In the spare tire? Now we shall learn about marijuana in a lunch bag.

The case of young Hodari D., scheduled for argument on Jan. 14, turns upon the meaning of "seizure" under the Fourth Amendment. In 1988 police in Oakland, on routine patrol through a drug-infested neighborhood, saw several boys clustered around a car. As the squad car approached, the driver sped off. Hodari and the other youths scattered.

Police Officer Jerry Pertoso gave chase. He caught up with Hodari. When they were about 11 feet apart, the boy threw away an object. Pertoso picked it up: cocaine.

The juvenile court judge admitted the evidence and gave the youngster five years of renewed custody as a ward of the state. On appeal, the California Court of Appeal reversed. The court's curious reasoning was that an officer who chases a suspect has effected a "detention." The officer may not have physical control over the suspect, but the suspect's freedom has been infringed by the pursuit. If a person sees a policeman and immediately flees, that is not sufficient cause for the cop to chase after him.

As precedent for this unmitigated nonsense, the California court mistakenly looked to a Michigan case decided by the Supreme Court in 1988. The case involved Michael Mose Chesternut, who was walking along a street when a squad car came by. Chesternut took off. Police kept up with him. Chesternut discarded a packet. It turned out to be cocaine. Subsequent search turned up heroin as well.

The Supreme Court ruled unanimously that "in this particular case" the police conduct did not amount to a seizure, but the court ducked the larger question: Is the act of fleeing, by itself, sufficient to constitute a reasonable suspicion that would justify pursuit? The question that was left unanswered in Chesternut will now be tackled in Hodari.

But tackles can be missed, and tackles can be evaded, and the nine justices will be shaking their heads over this one. The whole purpose of the Exclusionary Rule — and it is an excellent purpose — is to deter misconduct by police. If the cops cannot introduce evidence that is unconstitutionally acquired, what is the point in acquiring it?

But if the cops are hamstrung in their difficult and dangerous work by weird judicial constructions, the people must be the losers in their war against criminals. That makes no sense to laymen. It ought not to make sense to jurists either.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Jan. 4, the fourth day of 1991. There are 361 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Jan. 4, 1885, Dr. William W. Grant of Davenport, Iowa, performed what's believed to have been the first appendectomy. The patient was 22-year-old Mary Gartside.

On this date:
In 1809, Louis Braille, inventor of a reading system for the blind, was born in Coupvray, France.

In 1821, the first native-born American saint, Elizabeth Ann Seton, died in Emmitsburg, Md.

In 1896, Utah was admitted as the 45th state.

In 1948, Britain granted independence to Burma.

In 1951, during the Korean conflict, North Korean and Communist Chinese forces captured the city of Seoul.

In 1960, French author Albert Camus died in an automobile accident at the age of 46.

Tough impressions at tender age

I was a fledgling reporter, barely out of my teens, when I first saw a man shot to death.

In Missoula, Mont., the man, a fugitive, fled across an open field, ignored the policemen's multiple orders to "Halt!" and he was knocked to the turf by the impact of a .45.

Sparing you more graphic details, I was with the man in a hospital elevator, dutifully determined to get a statement, when he gasped once and expired.

That was not the last time I was to see someone die, but I never got over that first time.

Even now, writing these words, I can still see the pallid face and slighted eyes because tough impressions at a tender age are likely to remain with us always.

Purposefully repeating: Tough impressions at a tender age are likely to remain with us always.

The mayor of Washington, D.C., visited an eighth grade science class for gifted students in a public school in a poor neighborhood.

He asked: "How many of you know somebody who has been killed?"

There were 19 students in the class; 14 hands went up.

"How were they killed?"

Paul Harvey

The answers: "Shot." "Stabbed." "Drugs." These were children age 13.

The Atlantic Monthly recently published a sobering chronology of events under the caption "Growing Up Scared."

It mentioned Detroit, where the entire school system had to be shut down for two days to arrest a tide of violence.

During a four-month period in Detroit, 102 youngsters under the age of 16 were shot, nearly all of them by other children.

A Chicago youth, Lafayette Walton, told the Wall Street Journal that life in his housing project involved almost daily battles with guns, submachine guns, beatings, maiming, rapes and cocaine running by 9-year-olds.

The University of Maryland, Baltimore, discovered that 24 percent of inner-city teenagers have witnessed a murder.

In many American cities homicide is now the leading cause of death!

That is enough recitation of case histories typical of metropolitan — and a growing number of rural — communities.

History demonstrates that excesses ultimately, inevitably, are their own undoing. But how long before Americans will reach what Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune publisher Jenkin Lloyd Jones calls "the stomach-turning point" and curb the mayhem?

If we do not — as surely as violence begets violence — our next generation of adults will be helplessly infected.

Only 18 percent of persons committing violent felonies are convicted and sentenced to at least one year in prison. For drug felonies, 10 percent.

So four out of five state prison inmates are repeat offenders. Half of them are serving at least a fourth sentence.

That cycle can stop now with less legal deference to the rights of wrongdoers. If that's not the most we can do, that is the least we can do.

Carter tries to undo Reagan legacy

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

I have previously noted in this space how busy our liberal media are, rewriting the history of the 1980s. They were notably unsuccessful in their efforts to defeat Ronald Reagan, but that has only whetted their appetite for trashing him retroactively.

So we are constantly belabored with the Big Lie that the 1980s were a decade of greed, corruption and self-preoccupation, and that Reagan was the symbol and cause of its alleged defects.

That isn't the way most people remember the 1980s, nor should it be. Those were the years in which the federal strangulation of America was slowed to a near halt, launching the longest economic boom in modern American history.

Eighteen million new jobs were created. Our defenses were rebuilt and our free-world alliances intensified, with the result that the Soviet Union simply stopped trying to compete with us and threw in the sponge. Above all, perhaps, our self-respect was restored, after its battering Vietnam and the Iranian hostage crisis.

But the media tell us otherwise, and now they are moving to shore up another wall of their flimsy revisionist lean-to. They are actually trying to rehabilitate the reputation of Jimmy Carter.

In this, they have had considerable help from Carter. In the years since the American people threw him out of the White House, he has been busy with a whole series of activities calculated to ingratiate him with the liberals who dominate the media.

He has associated himself with all sorts of "human rights" causes and campaigns. Whenever there was an election in some Third World country, Carter was on hand to "observe" it and decide whether it was fair. When there was nothing else to do, he would go up the New York with his own two hands, a simple wooden chair for some welfare project.

In return, the grateful media thoughtfully overlooked the costly junkets that he and the Steel Magnolia were constantly taking at the expense of the American taxpayer — such as their million-dollar expedition to Nepal in 1985, to trek in the Himalayas with an entourage of 16 American attendants.

Now Carter evidently judges it time to join the attacks on the man who brought him down. In a television interview, all the bile and bitterness come pouring out — a great wave of hatred, withheld for a whole decade. It says a lot about the difference between the two men that nobody could possibly imagine such a vicious attack emanating from Ronald Reagan.

Carter blames Reagan, without any evidence whatever, for everything from the savings and loan fiasco and the federal budget deficits to the alleged energy shortage.

Weirdly, he even accuses Reagan of giving America "a reputation of being the world's worst warmonger, with the possible exception of Saddam Hussein." In support of this charge he cites our military operations in Lebanon, Tripoli, Grenada and Panama (forgetting, in his fury, that it was President Bush who ordered the invasion of Panama).

Carter is probably still smarting because all of these, save Lebanon, were successful military operations, thoroughly approved (according to the polls) by the American people. No doubt in the back of his mind is the pitiful disaster he presided over in the Iranian desert, when a poorly planned helicopter rescue of our hostages collapsed.

You can be sure that neither Carter nor his media admirers ever mentions the state of this nation when he was relieved of executive responsibility for it by a disgusted electorate. Shall we remind them?

Interest rates were 21 percent. Inflation was in the double digits. Unemployment was higher than it is even today, when those same media insist we are in the midst of a recession.

Let's hear it for Ronald Reagan!

Navy to urge bailout to save attack plane

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy, hoping to save its faltering A-12 stealth aircraft program, is urging Defense Secretary Dick Cheney to approve a partial bailout of the contractors, a Navy official says.

In a set of recommendations being presented to Cheney today, the Navy also was likely to advise that fewer of the radar-evading planes be built than previously planned, said the official, who discussed the matter on condition of anonymity.

A reduction in planes below the 620 A-12 attack planes authorized by Cheney last year would cut the program's overall cost. But it would increase the price tag for each plane since the development and production costs would be spread among fewer aircraft.

The program is projected to cost about $50 billion.

The Navy official said senior service officials would propose to Cheney that the government share in the project's cost overruns, which came to light last June just days after Cheney assured Congress that the program was on schedule and within budget.

Cheney set today as the deadline for the Navy to show why the $50 billion program should not be canceled. A $4.8 billion contract for production of six prototype planes is at least $1 billion over budget and none of the models has been completed.

Cheney could decide as soon as today whether to continue the program. If dropped, it would be one of the biggest weapons systems ever canceled, and the Navy says American strategic capabilities would be badly hurt.

The contractors, McDonnell Douglas Corp. and General Dynamics Corp., have said they would be compelled to lay off about 8,000 workers at plants in St. Louis and Fort Worth, Texas, if the A-12 program is canceled.

The Navy calls the A-12 Avenger its top priority in weapons development. The aircraft is supposed to replace the Navy's aging fleet of A-6 Intruders, a carrier-based aircraft now deployed in the Persian Gulf.

The Navy wants to begin replacing the Intruders within a few years, but the A-12 contractors have fallen at least 18 months behind schedule in building the prototypes.

The Navy official said Cheney will be asked to agree to a restructuring of the contract so that the government, in effect, would absorb some of the cost overruns. He said he could not estimate how big the bailout might be, but presumably it would run into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Until recently little was known about the project because it is classified secret.

On Dec. 17 the Navy formally notified General Dynamics and McDonnell Douglas that they were in default on the contract, in part because they had failed to meet technical standards for the plane, such as its weight. The service said it might cancel the contract unless the contractors "cured" the problems by Wednesday.

Lt. Dave Wray, a Navy spokesman, said he could not comment on the contractors' response Wednesday to the default notice. Spokesmen for General Dynamics and McDonnell Douglas also declined to comment.

Defense Department spokesman Pete Williams said senior Pentagon and Navy officials held "very intensive" talks Thursday with contractor officials, including John McDonnell, the chairman of McDonnell Douglas, and General Dynamics Chairman William A. Anders. He declined to provide any details.

The First Secretary at the Iraqi Embassy in London, Salih Faraj Mohammed, one of the diplomats to be expelled, is shown as he is getting into his car outside the Iraqi Embassy Thursday. Britain on Thursday expelled eight members of the Iraqi Embassy staff and deported 67 other Iraqis, citing threats by Iraq to attack Western targets if war breaks out in the gulf. Others in the photo are unidentified.

Iraq studies Bush offer for dialogue

By BRIAN MURPHY
Associated Press Writer

The diplomatic scramble to head off a possible war in the Persian Gulf shifted today to tiny Luxembourg for a European Community conference, while President Bush awaited word from Iraq on an offer for talks.

Meanwhile, military forces in the gulf region have exceeded 1.1 million troops and continue to grow. The Pentagon this week plans to begin vaccinating U.S. soldiers against germ warfare.

The offer by Bush on Thursday for "one last attempt" at peace was welcomed by world leaders and drove oil prices to their lowest levels since shortly after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Congress today resumes debate on the gulf crisis, with some lawmakers favoring taking up a resolution stating that congressional approval is needed for any military action against Iraq. Others urge delaying a vote until the Bush administration ends its latest diplomatic efforts.

Congress will remain in session throughout January, canceling a planned three-week recess.

"They keep asking me, 'Will there be war?'" said Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., recalling questions from constituents. "What's going to happen?"

The United Nations has set a Jan. 15 deadline for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face the threat of war.

European Community officials predict the 12-nation trade bloc will seek direct talks between Luxembourg Foreign Minister Jacques Poos and his Iraqi counterpart, Tariq Aziz. Luxembourg holds the rotating EC presidency.

Bush on Thursday offered a meeting between Aziz and Secretary of State James A. Baker III any time between Monday and Wednesday in Geneva. Bush had earlier said talks could begin no later than last Wednesday.

Baghdad did not rush to accept the proposal. "We are studying it," said an Iraqi Foreign Ministry official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But several leaders, including those in Germany and Britain, quickly supported Bush's offer.

"This is a good step and a very important step," said King Hussein of Jordan, who visited British Prime Minister John Major in London on Thursday.

The king was scheduled to hold meetings today with officials in France, Germany and Italy to discuss the gulf crisis.

The EC and Bush administration officials have said they will demand complete withdrawal from Kuwait in any possible talks. On Thursday, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein reiterated that peace initiatives must also include the Palestinian-Israeli conflict.

Iraq, meanwhile, is reportedly bolstering its troop strength in and around Kuwait.

Turkey has strengthened air defenses and sent more tanks and armored vehicles to its border with Iraq in response to a reported Iraqi troop buildup, the Istanbul daily Hurriyet newspaper reported Thursday. Turkish military officials have not commented on the report.

Elsewhere, Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi on Thursday hosted a meeting of leaders from Egypt, Syria and Sudan to discuss peace efforts.

The foreign ministers of Iran, Turkey and Pakistan ended talks on Thursday in Islamabad, Pakistan, with a call for the 46-member Organization of the Islamic Conference to mediate a peaceful end to the gulf crisis.

Two Arizona senators turn on each other, but suffer together

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arizona's two senators find themselves suffering together from the politically damaging Keating Five ethics hearings, even as they turn on one another in defense of their own integrity.

Although the cases against them are entirely separate, Republican John McCain and Democrat Dennis DeConcini are both in political trouble at home as a result of the savings and loan controversy.

"There was no love lost between them before this, and since this has occurred both see the other one as trying to save their own bacon," said Bruce Merrill, director of the media research program at Arizona State University's School of Journalism.

Facing a televised inquiry into their actions on behalf of failed S&L owner Charles H. Keating Jr., each has offered defenses that put them sharply at odds.

McCain faces his first public questioning under oath in the case today. The Senate Ethics Committee planned to question McCain first, then begin questioning Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. DeConcini and Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., will follow, probably on Monday.

No decision has been announced on how the panel will question the fifth senator under scrutiny, Democrat Alan Cranston, who is undergoing treatment for prostate cancer back home in California.

A poll published Thursday in Arizona newspapers provided fresh evidence of the political damage the Arizona senators have suffered.

The survey of several hundred Phoenix-area residents by O'Neil Associates, an independent polling firm, gave DeConcini an unfavorable rating from 71 percent of respondents and a favorable rating of 16 percent. For McCain, the figures were 50 percent negative and 38 percent positive.

The latest survey, taken Nov. 30-Dec. 8, carried a margin of error of 4.5 percentage points.

McCain, in an interview Thursday, disputed the poll as unreliable.

But he acknowledged that the Ethics Committee's ultimate decision could determine whether he seeks re-election.

DeConcini has faced far more serious allegations of potentially unethical intervention on behalf of Keating. They included testimony that he attempted to negotiate a deal with regulators and continued to assist Lincoln long after being warned that regulators were recommending criminal charges.

McCain received easier treatment from the committee's special counsel, Robert S. Bennett, who concluded he found no evidence of wrongdoing by McCain.

But McCain had by far the closest personal relationship with Keating. He was embarrassed by the disclosure that he and his family took trips at Keating's company's expense and did not repay them until their disclosure.

McCain also is the only one of the five senators who had a personal financial relationship, through his wife's business partnership in a commercial venture with Keating. But McCain, according to testimony, cut off all contacts with Keating when he felt what Keating was asking was improper; Keating, in return, branded McCain a "wimp."

Testimony in the hearings so far has established several points of dispute between McCain and DeConcini. In addition, there has been private sniping between partisans of the two senators.

Some DeConcini allies are convinced McCain was involved in selective leaks of information designed to damage other senators and thereby help himself.

DeConcini, on the other hand, was embarrassed when a witness, former Keating accountant David Stevens, testified that DeConcini asked permission to pass along to reporters Stevens' assertion that McCain never intended to repay the travel expenses. Stevens withdrew that charge under oath.

Join Us In Worship

In The Church Of Your Choice

*Ring out the Old
NEW*

Another year has passed, and things gone by, we cannot change. So ring out the old year and ring in the new with high resolutions. These bells, which have long been used by churches as a call to worship, are ringing an opportunity for you to begin the new year at worship with the Lord in His house. Start now and be faithful throughout this year. Attend Church regularly.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: For we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do. (Ephesians 2:10 NIV)

When I was a teen-ager, a family friend was curator of the Garden City Zoo in Garden City, Kan. This was before an animal nursery was available at the zoo, so our friend and his family raised, in their home, many exotic baby animals. Of course they became attached to the animals, made pets of them, and hated to see them returned to the zoo.

They had one male African lion cub that had a pleasant disposition which made him particularly adaptable to the life of a pet. In fact, he grew to enjoy the pampered life so much, he depended on the humans in the family to do everything for him; they even had to wash his face.

When the lion's size made him impossible to keep at home, they introduced him to his zoo-keeper. Again he showed his adaptable disposition and did well; however, his laziness held true, and he required extra attention and care because he wouldn't lift a paw to take care of himself. He had forgotten he was a lion and was content to be a domestic cat; he missed the opportunities and experiences that go with being born a lion.

We modern day Christians are a pampered lot. We rest assured we are saved by grace and not by works. Preachers and Bible teachers nurture us.

Our pastor and other professional church staff workers minister to our every need. Thus we are loved, fed, and supplied. And we like it that way!

Too many of us have become lazy and dependent. We have forgotten we are spiritually gifted, and we are content to doze in the Sunshine; we are missing the opportunities and experiences that go with being born again.

Shekinah Glory to be in revival at Amarillo church

AMARILLO - Shekinah Glory will appear in revival at Christian Heritage Church, 900 S. Nelson, at 7 p.m. nightly next Wednesday through Friday.

The group is an evangelistic music ministry from Tulsa, Okla., which presents the gospel of Christ through songs that teach, exhort, edify and minister in praise and worship.

Religion roundup

CHICAGO (AP) - The monthly U.S. Catholic said that 76 percent of readers responding to a survey would welcome female priests in their parishes and that a third believe that perpetuating the male-only priesthood is sinful.

The magazine, which is published by the Claretian order, said the results were based on responses from 274 of the 1,300 readers to whom questionnaires were mailed. A majority of the respondents were women.

Sixty-nine percent said they thought that if Jesus were living today in the United States, he would ordain women.

If women were admitted to the Roman Catholic priesthood, 50 percent of those responding said they would encourage their daughters to become priests. But 68 percent said they saw little hope in their lifetime of women being allowed in that role.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - A United Church of Christ policy-making board says women should have access to a controversial French "abortion pill" if the drug meets federal safety standards.

Believed to be the first major denominational agency to take such a stand, the 50-member board of directors of the church's Board for Homeland Ministries voted to urge U.S. testing of the pill, known as RU-486.

If scientific experts find the pill meets federal standards of safety and effectiveness, the Food and Drug Administration should ensure it is available to women, the board said.

The denomination is among the few taking a clearly pro-choice view about abortion.

NEW YORK (AP) - A booklet issued by the American Jewish Committee contends that a "new activism" by pro-Palestinians within Christian churches seeks to undermine sympathy for Israel and is putting Israel at risk.

Advocacy in the churches of Palestinian Arab political goals has taken an increasingly anti-Israel tilt "in that failure to achieve either peace or stability in the Middle East is laid almost entirely at Israel's door," the booklet says.

New generation of performers bringing Christian rap to the forefront

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

When the prophet Isaiah promised God would work in "new ways" that even his own people would have trouble recognizing, he probably never imagined how gospel singers in the 1990s would fulfill that vow.

Christian music is being deluged by a new generation of performers who frequently quote that promise in Isaiah 43 to explain their use of rap music to convey biblical themes.

Two recent albums, Nu Thang by DC Talk and Rhythm And Poetry by Stephen Wiley, are pushing Christian rap music to levels of acceptance that Christian-rock has still not achieved, though the latter has had a 20-year head start.

In addition, two albums from Star Song Records, Ultimate Rap and Ultimate Rap 2, offer 22 songs by 10 different acts as a rap sampler for those unfamiliar with the format.

"With rap music, the sound is very bold," said Velvet Rousseau of Star Song-Nashville. "Likewise, Christian rappers are very bold."

In fact, Christian rap's popularity is largely due to that boldness, which challenges young people to stand against the temptations of premarital sex, abortion, alcohol and drugs, as well as standing for evangelizing the world with a Christian message.

Christian rap uses virtually

every song to portray believers as warriors in a spiritual battle that requires total dedication; a far cry from the "just be good" message to Christian teens in days gone by.

Several current rap songs even decry the "just be good" attitude as a counterfeit to real Christianity.

"Christians should be on the cutting edge," insists rapper Michael Peace, on his live album Loud N Clear. "We've got to terrorize the streets with the gospel. You know, I have never taken the war on drugs in America seriously. We need to do more than 'just say no.' We have got to say yes to the gospel of Jesus Christ."

Rousseau noted, "When you're reaching out to people who weren't raised in church, you've got to do it in a way they understand, but without diluting the message."

Wiley, who will appear at the M.K. Brown Civic Center in April, said his use of rap is touching people in ways other Christian mediums have not.

"I was in Lansing, Michigan, and did a concert in the inner city for kids off the street," Wiley said. "There were a lot of teenagers who were dealing drugs that were brought in. Some came with the intention of disrupting the event. Afterward, four of them came forward and told us about it. They also gave their lives to Christ."

Wiley said young people who are skeptical of Christian rap's ability "to hang with secular rap" realize quickly that the gospel version is every bit as intense, without being obscene.

Toby McKeehan of DC Talk terms groups like 2 Live Crew "ill," and writes off their profanity as "overkill."

Christian rappers point out that their music should be judged by the lyrics and spirit, not whether or not rap is intrinsically good or bad.

"The music grabs them," Wiley said. "I was even invited to perform at a Church of Christ. The minister said they normally don't go for music with instruments, but they wanted to do whatever it took to reach kids for Jesus."

DC Talk, currently opening concerts for Christian superstar Michael W. Smith.

son, Ariz., are three prominent examples of outlets where rap has become a regular part of the format. "It's reaching out to an audience in search of meaning," said Rousseau.

DC Talk is currently opening concerts for Christian superstar Michael W. Smith, whose sound is rock and pop.

But DC Talk, whose sound mixes Sly and the Family Stone and M.C. Hammer with a strong Bible message, is turning non-rap fans into hard-core rap-a-holics.

DC Talk videos are also featured regularly on Black Entertainment Television's secular music shows.

And yet the band, considered the coolest of the cool, came from Liberty University, where Jerry Falwell-brand fundamentalism is held in high esteem.

Even Falwell, not known as a fan of rock 'n' roll, has gone on record as endorsing Christian rap as a valuable resource for meeting kids where they are.

"You can be listening to the radio and hear one of these songs and really get into it and then say, 'Weren't they talking about Jesus? What's this all about,'" Rousseau said.

Wiley said adults in his audiences have often come to the concert with the intention of giving him a piece of their mind. However, they leave tapping their feet to the Jesus beat, he said.

"At a church in Ohio I had a deacon around 50 come up and say he had a really bad attitude about Christian rap, but he ended up apologizing and bought one of every (tape) I had for sale," Wiley said.

"People not in the know say 'gospel rap, c'mon man,'" Wiley added. "They are in a mindset to think of rap as Run DMC and 2 Live Crew. What we're doing with Christian rap is deprogramming."

Proponents of Christian rap point out that no other format more clearly allows young people to be exposed to Bible stories and Christian lessons in a setting they are comfortable with.

The Washington Post even termed Christian rap the surprise hit of the 1990 musical year. It is a position Wiley agrees with.

"The new Rocky movie has a rap song, the Ninja Turtle movie had rap in it, Wiley said. "Carman has a rap song on his (hit Christian) album and so does (Christian rocker) Bryan Duncan. I see it just growing and growing."

'Resurrection Road' presented at convention

The Holiday Youth Convention, sponsored by Faith Tabernacle, closed last Friday in Pampa with a host of youth and young adults making new commitments to Christ, said Aaron Thames, pastor.

The two-day convention began with a song fest featuring the Steve Swint Singers from Amarillo and the First Church Singers from Lubbock.

Pampa Mayor Richard Peet was on hand to welcome the convention to Pampa. The Rev. J.T. Pugh of Odessa, and district superintendent of the United Pentecostal Church, responded to the welcome by the mayor.

The Rev. Ken Gurley of Houston closed the evening with a message from Matthew.

On the last day of the convention, Dec. 28, there were several classes held in the M.K. Brown Auditorium that were taught by the Rev. John Howard Snyder, the Rev. Rick Musick of Plainview, the Rev. Jimmy Henry of Dumas and the Rev. David Carrington of Dumas.

The Rev. Terry Pugh of Odessa taught a class in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn on "Marriage and Home Life." A question and answer forum on prayer, led by the Rev. Steve Shaw of Lubbock, followed the classes.

The highlight of the convention was a drama called "Resurrection Road." The drama was written and produced by Ron and Jena Rankin and covers the life of Christ from his birth through his resurrection. The drama cast was from the youth group at Jubilee Tabernacle in Amarillo.

The convention closed with a lock-in at the Pampa Youth Center.

Marriage 'tune-up' set for Feb. 8-9 in Pampa

Regularly scheduled oil changes are a must if your car is to run effectively and smoothly. Even though it costs, the time to change the oil is while the motor is running well - not after the motor is shot.

Marriages are the same way. The time to care for them is while they are running smoothly - not after they wear out from years of neglect, says Dr. Gary Manning, professor of philosophy and religion at Wayland Baptist University.

Calvary Baptist Church will host Manning and his wife, Paulette, in a "marriage tune-up" set for Feb. 8-9 at Coronado Inn. The marriage enrichment retreat will be from 6:30 to 10 p.m. on Feb. 8 and from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Feb. 9.

Manning is a member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy and the Association of Couples For Marriage Enrichment.

He holds a doctorate in psychology and counseling.

There is a fee for the event, which includes an overnight stay in the Coronado Inn and three meals. For maximum benefit, all couples must stay the night.

This is not a marriage therapy session and is not intended to help marriages that are in trouble. The atmosphere will be lighthearted, fun and relaxing. The topics covered range from communication to resolving conflict.

A deposit and reservations are required, so the Rev. Lyndon Glaesman, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, invites those interested in the retreat to contact him at 665-0842.

College choir to perform at local church tonight

The Dallas Christian College Concert Choir will appear tonight at Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks.

The 7 p.m. program, titled "In The Presence," is a musical and dramatic production depicting the worship of ancient Israel and the New Testament Church.

Hi-Land Christian is the 29 member group's first stop on the 1991 winter tour which includes 10 concerts in Texas, New Mexico, Nevada, Arizona and California.

Dallas Christian College is a four-year accredited Bible College training young men and women for full-time vocations in Christian ministries, such as preaching, Christian education and church music.

This equipping ministry of Dallas Christian College is supported solely through gifts from individuals and support from numerous independent Christian churches and Churches of Christ.

Larry Haddock, minister at Hi-Land Christian, invites the public and groups from sister churches in the community to attend the concert.

A free-will love offering will be received to assist with the choir's travel costs.

Church to host Epiphany party

St. Matthew's Episcopal Church is hosting an Epiphany party at 11:30 a.m., after the regular church services on Sunday morning.

The Epiphany, or the manifestation of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles (the visit of the three kings to the manger in Bethlehem), is commemorated on Jan. 6, the 12th day of Christmas.

Historically, the Epiphany commemorates the manifestation of Jesus as the son of God, as represented by the adoration of the Magi, the baptism of Jesus and the miracle of the wine at the marriage feast at Cana.

The first reference to Epiphany is supposed to have been made in Egypt, late in the second century; and, after the fourth century western churches emphasized God's manifestation of Himself in Christ to the entire world.

Despite cancer risk, older women live longer with estrogen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Estrogen pills help older women live longer by preventing heart disease, strokes and broken bones — advantages that outweigh chances the hormone might cause cancer, a study published today said.

"The evidence is quite strong and consistent that overall mortality is reduced among estrogen users," epidemiologists from the University of Southern California said in the journal Archives of Internal Medicine.

Previous research found women are more likely to get breast and uterine cancer if they take estrogen pills to relieve hot flashes and other menopausal symptoms.

For the average postmenopausal woman, the new findings show "the longer you're on estrogens, the longer you live," despite the cancer risk, said Dr. Ronald Ross, who co-authored the study.

If the typical older woman doesn't take estrogen to replace her body's dwindling supply of the sex hormone, "your life is shorter because you get more heart disease" and strokes, said Dr. Brian Henderson, the study's chief author and director of USC's Kenneth Norris Jr. Comprehensive Cancer Center.

However, Ross cautioned that for certain women, such as those prone to breast cancer, the risks of using the hormone still might outweigh the benefits.

He said women who take estrogen should be alert to possible signs of cancer, including breast lumps and unexplained uterine bleeding.

Doctors "need to think about every woman as an individual" in deciding whether to prescribe estrogen, said Dr. Elizabeth Barrett-Connor, a heart disease expert at the University of California, San Diego.

"I do not think we have enough information to try to sell every postmenopausal woman in the United States on estrogen replacement."

The study showed estrogen users live longest when they take the hormone for many years. It also found no difference in death rates among women who take 0.625 milligrams daily, half the once-common dose of 1.25 milligrams. The lower dose protects against heart disease while minimizing the cancer risk, Ross said.

Ross, Henderson and Analia Paganini-Hill spent 7 1/2 years studying questionnaires and medical records from 8,881 older women at Leisure World, a Laguna Hills retirement community. Half the women had used estrogen. At the end of the study, 1,447 women had died.

Women who used estrogen at any time after menopause had death rates 20 percent lower than non-users, meaning they lived 1.2 years longer than non-users, Ross said.

Women who were still taking estrogen and had done so for at least 15 years had death rates 40 percent lower than non-users, which translates to 2 1/2 years of extra life, he said.

Doctors in the United States write about 20 million estrogen prescriptions a year. Estrogen replacement therapy started as a way to decrease menopausal symptoms including hot flashes, vaginal dryness and headaches.

Studies later prompted doctors to prescribe it to prevent heart disease and osteoporosis, the bone-brittleness ailment that makes elderly women prone to fractures. In the 1970s, researchers found that estrogen increased the risk of cancers of the breast and the endometrium, or lining of the uterus.

Cleveland County grand jury may consider murder of Amarillo student 20 years ago

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The Cleveland County prosecutor has declined to comment on why he requested a grand jury, but investigators say evidence will be presented concerning the 20-year-old slayings of a University of Oklahoma student from Texas and his date.

District Judge Preston Trimble called the grand jury to convene Feb. 4 at the request of McCoy.

Investigators said before Christmas that prosecutors probably would seek an indictment against their chief suspect by presenting evidence in the case to a grand jury.

The bodies of David Sloan, 21, of Amarillo, Texas, and Sheryl Benham, 19, of Oklahoma City, were found in the trunk of Sloan's car May 10, 1970, on a rural lover's lane in northwest Norman. The two had disappeared from a fraternity party the day before.

Benham was nude and both she and Sloan had been shot at least 10 times in the face and chest.

Former Norman police officer Frank Edward Gilley, 54, was the Norman patrolman who went on duty in the "lover's lane" neighborhood a few hours after the couple disappeared. He resigned from the city police department a few days after the couple's bodies were found.

Gilley is charged in Dallas County, Texas, with aggravated perjury in connection with testimony he gave when questioned about the murder case during a November bond reduction hearing on an unrelated firearms charge.

Gilley testified at that hearing he never had any contact with either Sloan or Ms. Benham before their bodies were discovered. The perjury charge alleges, however, that he told one of the original investigators in the murder case that he knew Sloan in Amarillo and had had a "run-in" with him.

Retirees, investigate with care 'pension expanders'

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

Soon-to-be retirees can expect to hear a lot about an insurance product known as a pension maximizer, or pension expander. But beware: Chances are it won't expand your pension — just the agent's wallet.

At issue is your choice between the single-life and joint-and-survivor options offered by company pension plans. By choosing joint-and-survivor you trim monthly pension benefits by 10 percent to 20 percent in exchange for a guarantee that your spouse will continue to receive benefits (usually 50 percent of the amount you were receiving) after your death.

The seductive pension max pitch calls for choosing the fatter single-life checks and using part of the extra money to buy insurance to provide income for the survivor.

Pension max has been billed as a simple alternative to the agonizing single-life vs. joint-and-survivor dilemma. It does remove the gamble of guessing who will die first. If your spouse dies, you could drop the insurance policy and continue to receive bigger, single-life checks; with the joint-and-survivor option, you'd be stuck with reduced payments even though there would be no survivor benefits.

All in all, though, pension max has muddied the waters even more. Agents are notorious for whipping out computer illustrations to show how impressively the insurance alternative can translate into income for the spouse. But those calculations may be flawed.

Ronald W. Roge, a financial planner in Centereach, N.Y., is critical of salespeople who back into the amount of insurance they suggest. Take, for example, a couple, both age 65, who must choose either a $1,500-a-month single-life payout or a joint plan that will pay $1,200 a month until the retiree dies and then $600 a month to the survivor.

"Armed with this information and knowing that the couple's motivation was to save money," says Roge, "the salesman would attempt to sell a universal life policy that had a monthly premium of $200."

But in this case, that would buy only about $50,000 worth of insurance. And that amount, used for an annuity to pay lifetime income to the survivor, would buy just $435 of monthly income at today's rates. That's $165 a month less than under the joint-and-survivor option.

To duplicate the $600 monthly survivor benefit, the couple would need $75,000 worth of insurance. The monthly premium would be $300, the same as the "cost" of the survivor option. Although that may appear to put pension max on equal footing with joint-and-survivor plans, Roge notes that the insurance will buy less annuity income in the future if interest rates fall.

"With the insurance, you're betting on interest rates; with the corporation, you have a guarantee," he says.

That's not the only pitfall of pension max. The spouse loses any cost-of-living increases a pension may provide. And if the marriage falters, the retiree could cancel the insurance or change the beneficiary of any policy.

Another variable that complicates the decision is taxes. But here's where pension max has the advantage. The survivor's pension is fully taxable, but only a portion of the income from an insurance annuity would be taxed.

Under what circumstances does pension max make sense? It may pay off if your spouse is in poor health and not expected to live long. And depending on how generous your pension plan is to survivors, you and your spouse could end up slightly better off with pension max.

Some companies are stingy with survivor's benefits — they reduce the pension for those who elect the joint-and-survivor option by more than is actuarially fair based on the couple's life expectancies.

On the other hand, some companies encourage "protecting the spouse by not reducing the retiree's pension at all under the joint-and-survivor option. In such plans, pension max never makes sense.

If you consider a pension expander, follow these guidelines recommended by Fred Munk, who owns Retirement Counseling Associates, in Westport, Conn.:

— Ask your pension administrator to estimate your benefit under both single-life and joint-and-survivor options.

— Ask an accountant or a financial planner to calculate how much insurance is needed to provide the equivalent after-tax income of the pension's survivor's benefits. If cost-of-living increases are likely under your pension plan, make sure they are taken into account.

— When you shop for insurance, stick with financially stable, dividend-paying companies with a Moody's rating of Aa or Aaa or a Standard & Poor's rating of AA or AAA.

— Ask for rates for a traditional whole life policy rather than for universal life, which is the variety usually promoted in pension max plans. With universal, your premium and payouts aren't guaranteed; if interest rates fall, your premiums rise. That means paying a higher premium or settling for a smaller death benefit.

— If after paying the premiums you would have less than you would under the joint-and-survivor annuity option, then stick with the sure thing — your pension.

In these times when a single canvas is auctioned for millions, Charles and Janice Rosenak are proving it's possible to collect art that doesn't exact a king's ransom.

As Washington D.C. lawyers in 1973, they started buying works by living folk artists. It was an area most serious collectors sidestepped.

Today, they have more than 5,000 pieces and a house in Tesuque, N.M., built to display them. They've also written a book, "Museum of American Folk Art Encyclopedia of Twentieth Century American Folk Art and Artists" (Abbeville Press, $75), which has biographies of 257 folk artists.

In addition, 86 objects in their collection are on display through March 10 at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City. The exhibit will move on to museums in New Britain, Conn.; Laguna Beach, Calif.; St. Louis; Abilene, Texas; Tampa, Fla.; and Savannah, Ga., over the next two years.

At least 50 dealers now specialize in contemporary folk art. Gallery directors are eager to find new artists, and critics talk knowledgeably of some of the artists the Rosenaks discovered. In the 1970s, they knew of only two dealers, Phyllis Kind in Chicago and the Ames Gallery in Berkeley, Calif. And it was much harder to track down the artists than it was to ultimately pay for their work.

The Rosenaks collected contemporary art until the late 1960s when they tired of it. They were impressed with 19th-century American folk art, but it was out of their price range. Many experts told them there was no more folk art because the mass media had made it impossible for untutored artists to exist.

"One who didn't was Robert Bishop, director of the Museum of American Folk Art," recalls Janice Rosenak. He said the work existed but would be very hard to find.

(AP photo) Charles and Janice Rosenak are pioneers of sorts, as early collectors of 20th century folk art. Their house in Tesuque, N.M., with tromp l'oeil shadows on the front porch, was designed especially to enhance their collection, part of it in and around the fireplace.

"We decided to look for it," recalls Rosenak. Thus began an odyssey that over the past 15 years has taken them to rural areas, mountain villages, big city slums, prisons, mental institutions and Indian reservations.

They rarely buy without mutual consent and currently own work from about 400 artists. However, it's likely that fewer than 100 will survive the test of time.

"When you are assembling a collection over a long period of time," Rosenak says, "you have to buy a great deal that may not last in order to get the work that will be recognized as important."

Reviewing her selection of what she regards as important pieces for the museum exhibit, curator Barbara Cate says most are from the last 20 years. That, she says, is a time of "significant achievement with many new self-taught artists emerging and finding acceptance in both the folk and modern art worlds."

For all the diversity in the works by 72 artists, including 22 African Americans and eight Hispanics, there are some similarities, she says. The majority are from rural areas and never went beyond elementary school. Most have had menial jobs and have been unable to afford standard art supplies. So they had to use whatever free materials they could find, such as parts of trees, scrap wood, discarded window shades, tin roofing, wire and tacks.

The Rosenaks and Cate, who teaches art at Seton Hall University in South Orange, N.J., say that many self-taught artists did not begin to express themselves until later in life, often after experiencing a great trauma.

"Many have a missionary zeal and believe that their purpose in making art is to reveal, teach or preach," says Cate.

Several years ago, the Rosenaks commissioned architect Hugh Newell Jacobsen to design a house to accommodate their collection. The small house overlooking the Rio Grande not far from Santa Fe resembles a movie set for a frontier town with its general store facade and porch with tromp l'oeil shadows.

Recently, the growth of their collection led them to add a room that serves as a private art gallery. Next July, the gallery will be the setting for a week-long seminar on contemporary folk art, sponsored by the Museum of American Folk Art. However, the art is not restricted to this room.

"It's everywhere," says Rosenak. "It stands on stairways, on tables, in bookcases and on shelves that go up 10 feet to the ceiling."

Microwave potato cacciatore

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Garden Magazine Food Editor

One potato, two potato, three potato, four — your microwave oven cooks potatoes speedier than before. Then use your microwave to cook the sauce that turns a common spud into an uncommonly good main dish.

POTATOES CACCIATORE

- 4 medium baking potatoes
 - 1 medium zucchini
 - 1/4 cup chopped onion
 - 1 clove garlic, minced
 - 2 tablespoons water
 - One 9-ounce package frozen chopped cooked chicken
 - One 8-ounce can stewed tomatoes, cut up
 - One 8-ounce can tomato sauce
 - 3/4 teaspoon dried Italian seasoning, crushed
 - 1/2 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (2 ounces)
- Scrub potatoes; prick several times with a fork. Arrange potatoes on a microwave-safe plate. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) 13 to 16 minutes or until tender, rearranging once. Let stand while preparing sauce.
- Cut zucchini lengthwise into quarters, then into 1/4-inch-thick slices (about 2 cups). In a 1 1/2-quart microwave-safe casserole combine zucchini, onion, garlic and water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 3 to 5 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring once. Drain.
- Stir in chicken, stewed tomatoes, tomato sauce and Italian seasoning. Cook, covered, on high for 5 to 7 minutes or until heated through.
- Split potatoes open; mash centers slightly with a fork. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Spoon sauce on top. Top each with cheese.
- Makes 4 servings

Sleepy husband smokes; is hazardous to family's health

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a very serious problem that could be a matter of life or death. My husband falls asleep while he's smoking cigarettes. I just found another 2-inch-long burn on my sofa. There are 15 burn holes in the carpet in front of the sofa, 10 burn holes on the coffee table — not to mention the burn holes in my sheets and in the carpet beside our bed.

Twice I have been awakened by our fire alarm — and found smoke rolling through the house because he fell asleep while cooking breakfast. The first time, he was cooking bacon, and it burned a two-foot area on the kitchen floor. The second time, he fell asleep while boiling eggs.

This is a constant source of fear and fights in our house. I have begged, pleaded, threatened and have even thrown his clothes on the porch over this, but it keeps happening. Sometimes I catch him, but most of the time, I find another burn hole. A few years ago, he was told he had a disorder called "sleep apnea" — he stops breathing while he's asleep. Could this be related to his problem?

How can I convince him that this is serious, and possibly life-threatening to our entire family?

AFRAID OF FIRE
IN LAKE CITY, ARK.

DEAR AFRAID: Please get your husband to a physician before the sun sets on another day! He needs a total evaluation of his physical and mental condition. In the meantime, he should not smoke in the house unless he's supervised. His life, and the lives of everyone in your family, depend upon it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a 5-year-old daughter who is blind. She is constantly confronted with pity — a reaction she does not understand. Strangers come up to her saying, "Oh, bless your heart. You poor little thing!"

Abby, my daughter is not a "poor little thing." She is a beautiful, happy, healthy child who cannot figure out why people she has never met before are touching her and feeling sorry for her.

It seems that ignorance still runs rampant in the 1990s, and blind people are still considered helpless. Please, let sighted people know that — like them — blind people will ask for help if and when it is needed, and they do not appreciate being patronized. Contrary to popular belief, blind people can hear, think, speak and feel, and they are not to be pitied.

SANTA ANA PARENT

DEAR PARENT: I have had many letters from sightless people asking me to remind sighted people of the important message in your letter. A major complaint: When a blind person is accompanied by a sighted person while traveling, the sighted person will be asked, "And what will your friend have?"

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The less said today the better, especially if an inquisitive friend tries to enter into a confidential matter that affects only you and an associate.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be reluctant to make an adjustment today if you feel you've made a decision that does not serve your best interests. It can be done in a tactful manner that others will not find offensive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your co-workers won't be inspired today by an old-fashioned pep talk. If you want to stimulate their productivity, be sure that your actions speak louder than your words.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your initial impulses regarding things of a speculative nature should not be given too much credence today; upon review, you're likely to revise your early assessments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although minor domestic issues will likely be treated in a casual fashion today, the same will not be true with you, particularly if there is something serious with which you'll have to contend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best not to make major domestic decisions on your own today. Two heads are better than one, so be sure to get your mate's points of view before rushing to judge.

Eagles' Cunningham hopes to prove he's a winner

NFL roundup

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Randall Cunningham is arguably the most talented quarterback in the NFL, someday to be remembered as one of the most frightening offensive weapons ever to step on the field.

But to be considered among the greats of the game, Cunningham has some winning to do when it really counts — in the playoffs. He knows it and so does Philadelphia Eagles coach Buddy Ryan.

"If I voted for a guy who's the best at quarterback, I'd have to vote for somebody who won the Super Bowl," Ryan said Thursday as he prepared the Eagles for Saturday's NFC wild-card game against the Washington Redskins. "I think that's the ultimate in our business."

That is not meant as criticism of Cunningham, who quarterbacked the Eagles in playoff losses the last two seasons.

"In Chicago, we threw for 400 yards, but we turned the ball over six times in the Fog Bowl," Ryan said of a loss to the Bears two seasons ago. "And then last year (against the Los Angeles Rams), it was a terrible game. He had nobody to help him, but he didn't play that well, either."

Cunningham, who has passed for more than 3,000 yards three years in a row and is within 237 yards of Fran Tarkenton's all-time rushing record for quarterbacks, is focused on nothing short of victory.

"We know we've lost in the playoffs twice, so we're not going to settle for anything less than a win," he said.

In addition to the Redskin-Eagle matchup at 12:30 p.m. EST, Miami plays host to Kansas City in the AFC wild-card game at 4 p.m. On Sunday, it will be AFC Central champion Cincinnati hosting wild card Houston at 12:30 p.m. EST, and NFC Central titlist Chicago at home to wild card New Orleans at 4 p.m.

With the spotlight on Cunningham and the Eagles a 4-point favorite, Washington quarterback Mark Rypien is hoping to do well in his first playoff appearance.

"This is a big step for me," Rypien said. "There's pressure, but I'm looking at it as a great opportunity."

Ryan, rarely the diplomat, took a swipe at Washington running back Earnest Byner, who gained 1,219 yards this season.

"He'll probably lay one on the ground and we expect to be there and pick it up," Ryan said before being informed that Byner has fumbled only once in 297 carries.

"Is that right?" Ryan asked. "Maybe he'll lose three this week."

History will be relived in the second game Saturday, although those awaiting an encore to the only previous postseason matchup between Miami and Kansas City are asking to be disappointed. On Christmas Day in 1971, the Dolphins won the longest game ever played, beating the Chiefs in the second overtime period (after 82 minutes, 40 seconds) on Garo Yepremian's 37-yard field goal.

History though it may be, ancient by NFL standards it certainly is. So ancient, that Kansas City quarterback Steve DeBerg was still in high school.

DeBerg, a 14-year NFL veteran, nevertheless finds himself in a new position.

"I'm not a big expert on this by any means," he said from the Chiefs' temporary training camp at Vero Beach, Fla., as he prepared for only the second postseason game of his career.

"I'm playing better than I ever have," said DeBerg, who will be 37 in two weeks. "I have a great understanding of the game, and I don't get fooled by anything anymore."

Carlson ready to take second step for Oilers

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Cody Carlson is ready to take the second step in his job as replacement for injured Houston Oilers' quarterback Warren Moon, but he hopes he doesn't stub his toe.

A fourth-year pro from Baylor with little playing time, Carlson subbed for Moon Sunday and led Houston to a 34-14 victory over Pittsburgh that put the Oilers into the NFL playoffs for the fourth straight year.

"We expected him to play well but he made things look so easy," coach Jack Pardee said. "This was the 16th game of the season and he hadn't had much playing time. That could have been a worry."

Carlson completed 22 of 29 passes for 247 yards and three touchdowns against the Steelers.

He also replaced Moon in 1988 and led the Oilers to a 38-25 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders in his first pro start. In his second start, he completed 9 of 25 passes for 108 yards and was replaced by Brent Pease to complete a 45-3 loss to the New York Jets.

Now Carlson must step in again Sunday against Cincinnati in a first-round playoff game in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche recalled his scouting report on Carlson when he finished his career at Baylor.

"I gave him high marks then, but I didn't place him in a run-and-shoot offense at that time," Wyche said. "But he's adapted to the offense very well. He's a smart guy, very clever. He's actually more a scrambling type runner than Warren. He's not a saucer-eyed rookie."

Carlson has been the center of attention since Moon suffered a dislocated thumb late in the fourth quarter of a 40-20 loss to Cincinnati Dec. 23.

He likes the playing time but not the attention that goes with it.

"I don't like it to tell you the truth," Carlson said. "I wish I could go play a game like that and have no attention. That makes it easier, but that's not the way it works."

Carlson is modest off the field. He was born in Dallas, was an all-state player at San Antonio Churchill High and became a record-setting quarterback at Baylor before the Oilers drafted him in the third round in 1987.

He likes to hunt and fish and says he would handle any lasting fame by going to the mountains to get away from fans waiting at his door and autograph seekers.

"I hope I never start thinking I'm more than I actually am, which is an average Joe, a guy who can throw a football, so big deal," Carlson said. "It's important while we're on the field, but other than that it's not as important as a lot of things in life. People just get wrapped up in it."

Carlson sheds his humble personality when he steps on the field. He became so frustrated with his lack of playing time that he demanded during the off-season to be traded and was a contract holdout until Aug. 6.

"This definitely makes up for the frustration, but I'm not looking back anymore. We've got a lot to look forward to," Carlson said. "When I was a holdout, I said I could be a starter in this league and now I've got a chance to prove it."

But experience has taught Carlson he won't have to go to the mountains to get away from fans if his effectiveness disappears.

"If I have a bad game, I'm sure there won't be anything on my door step but rotten eggs," he said.

Wadkins takes first-round lead in Tournament of Champions

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins gets a little nervous, a little anxious at this time of the year.

"I don't like the position I'm in at the start of the season," the 41-year-old veteran said.

"You work all year long to get ahead of the other guys and then, all of a sudden at the start of the new year, you're back tied with them again."

"I don't like that. I want to be ahead of them. So I put a lot of emphasis in getting off to a good start," he said.

He has rarely had a better one than the 65 compiled in a chilly rain Thursday in the first round of the PGA Tour season, a 7-under-par effort that gave him a three-stroke lead in the Tournament of Champions.

"It's a total surprise to me," said Wadkins, who won this event in 1982 and '83.

"I didn't know what to expect. I didn't do a lot of practice at home in Dallas. The weather wasn't too swift. So I didn't know what to expect the first time out."

"I still don't. If this were later in the year, I'd already be thinking about winning. But now I'm just thinking about working on my game," Wadkins said.

He left little to be desired in his first competitive outing of the year, however. Wadkins missed only one fairway and scored eight birdies on the La Costa Country Club course.

He pulled away with a 31 on the back nine, including 15-foot birdie putts on the last two holes.

Tom Kite, who returned to a cross-handed putting stroke, and Chip Beck shared second with 68's lead in the 31-man field of winners only from the 1990 season.

PGA champion Wayne Grady was alone at 69.

Greg Norman, the Australian who led the American tour in money-winnings and stroke average last year, was in a group at 70 that also included David Ishii, Fred Couples, John Huston and Wayne Levi, the only four-time winner from 1990 and the man selected by his fellow pros as the PGA Tour's first Player of the Year.

Frank Beard, who won this title in 1967 and '70, topped the 13 seniors competing in a separate but simultaneous tournament on the same course.

He had a 69 and led by one. Bruce Crampton was second at 70. Lee Trevino, winner of seven titles and more than $1.1 million on the Senior Tour last year, was the only other over-50 player to break par. He had a 71.

The tournament is sponsored by Infiniti.

Oak Hills accepts first black member

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Oak Hills Country Club has accepted its first black member, but a San Antonio Golf Association official said there is no guarantee the Texas Open will return to the club's course.

The San Antonio Express-News reported today that several sources said Joe Fontenot has become the first black member of Oak Hills.

Fontenot, a retired military officer who now works at an automobile dealership, reportedly unanimously accepted last week into Oak Hills membership.

The Express-News reported Fontenot was in Las Vegas and could not be reached for comment. Attempts by The Associated Press today to reach Fontenot were unsuccessful.

Oak Hills came under fire in September, just before the 1990 Texas Open, because it had no black members. PGA officials said they would monitor the club's progress in attracting black members in the coming year.

Andy Iosue, president of SAGA, which organizes the Texas Open, said Oak Hills is being considered as the tournament site for 1991 along with The Club at Sonterra. A decision is expected this month.

"This removes a tremendous obstacle," Iosue said of Oak Hills accepting a black member. "The chances are better now that Oak Hills could keep the tournament."

The Texas Open has been played at Oak Hills continuously since 1977. The tournament also was played at Oak Hills from 1961-66.

Oak Hills president John Yantis declined to comment on Fontenot's membership, saying he wished to protect the new member's privacy. Yantis repeatedly has said he wants the club's first black member to be treated like any other member.

A membership at Oak Hills requires an initiation fee of $16,500. Fontenot reportedly elected to make a down payment of $4,500 and will have five years to pay the remaining sum with interest, the newspaper reported.

About 20 other Oak Hills members have chosen that payment plan.

Four 49ers named to NFL All-Pro Team

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Why are the San Francisco 49ers in line for an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl? Just look at the 1990 All-Pro Team.

Four 49ers made the squad, announced Thursday — Jerry Rice at receiver, Joe Montana at quarterback, Charles Haley at outside linebacker and Ronnie Lott at safety. No other team had that many All-Pro players in a year.

"We have not been a dominant team the way we were at times last year," 49ers coach George Seifert said. "We have gotten excellent performances at the important times from key people."

Rice, Montana, Haley and Lott are among the most key people for the Niners, whose 14-2 record this season was the league's best.

Rice, the fourth player in league history to catch at least 100 passes in a season when he got 100 for 1,502 yards and 13 touchdowns, led all players with 78 votes. Like Rice, Montana is a repeater from last year's team and completed 61.7 percent of his passes, tops in the NFL.

He threw for 26 touchdowns and 3,944 yards, although he played sparingly in the final two games.

Haley paced the NFC with 16 tackles and was the big-play star of San Francisco's underrated defense. Lott, another repeater, remains the glue of a strong secondary and his best work comes in the biggest game, such as the 49ers' 7-3 victory over the New York Giants on Monday Night Football.

Buffalo, Kansas City and Philadelphia had three players apiece on the All-Pro squad, while Minnesota, Detroit and the Giants had two each.

For the AFC East champion Bills, defensive end Bruce Smith, center Kent Hull and running back Thurman Thomas were named. Smith was second in the overall voting with 77 votes.

The Chiefs had linebacker Derrick Thomas, the NFL sack leader with 20, cornerback Albert Lewis and placekicker Nick Lowery, who led the league with 139 points.

Philadelphia's All-Pro were defensive end Reggie White, DT Jerome Brown and tight end Keith Jackson.

The Lions placed Barry Sanders, the NFL's leading rusher with 1,304 yards and a league-high 16 TDs, in the backfield, and also had kick returner Mel Gray make the team. Minnesota's All-Pro were safety Joey Browner and guard Randall McDaniel. The Giants had outside linebacker Pepper Johnson and punter Sean Landeta.

Joining Rice at wide receiver was Andre Rison of Atlanta. The rest of the offense had tackles Jim Lachey of Washington and Anthony Munoz of Cincinnati and guard Bruce Matthews of Houston.

The defensive team also had nose tackle Michael Dean Perry of Cleveland, inside linebacker John Offerdahl of Miami and cornerback Rod Woodson of Pittsburgh.

There were 12 repeaters from last season's team — Rice, Montana, Jackson, Munoz, Lachey, Matthews, Sanders, White, Perry, Lewis, Lott and Landeta. First-time All-Pro were Rison, McDaniel, Hull, Thurman Thomas and Gray on offense. On defense, first-timers were Brown, Derrick Thomas, Johnson and Offerdahl.

Notably missing from the team were Warren Moon, Mike Singletary and Lawrence Taylor, all of whom made the second team.

Harvesters roll past Levelland, 69-49

CANYON — Junior center Jeff Young scored 17 of his game-high 21 points in the second half as Pampa defeated Levelland, 69-49, in basketball action Thursday night.

It was the final non-district game for the Harvesters, who open District 1-4A play against Hereford next Thursday night.

The first half ended with Levelland on top, 28-26, but Pampa went on a 10-0 run to begin the third quarter and the Lobos could never catch up. The Harvesters improved to 19-3 for the season. The Lobos fall to 14-5.

Pampa led by five, 45-40, after three quarters, but the Harvesters expanded that lead to 16 points midway in the fourth period. Young paced Pampa's barrage with 10 fourth-quarter points.

Cederick Wilbon, who was both on a 10-0 run, added 10 points for Pampa. Wilbon entered the game averaging 22.7 ppg to lead the Harvesters in scoring. The 5-11 junior suffered the leg injury during the Fort Worth Tournament last month.

Jason Edwards led Levelland in scoring with 12 points, followed by Cleveland Dawson with eight.

Dwight Nickelberry chipped in 9 points for the Harvesters, followed by Randy Nichols and David Johnson, 8 points each; Ryan Erwin and Quincy Williams, 4 each; Brent Skaggs 3, and Jayson Williams 2.

Oklahoma and Texas are entered in the tournament, said Pampa coach Steve Kuhn.

"It's one of the three toughest tournaments in the state of Kansas," Kuhn said. "Garden City is in it and they are the defending Class 6A state champions."

The finals are scheduled to start at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Pampa matmen defeated by Boys Ranch

BOYS RANCH — Boys Ranch defeated Pampa, 56-14, in high school wrestling action Thursday night.

John Pacheco, Chris Archibald and Phil Sexton won the only matches for the Harvesters.

Pacheco won a decision over Mark Weisbecker in the 140-pound division. Archibald pinned Shane Passmore in 42 seconds of the 189-pound division. Sexton, competing in the heavyweight class, pinned Art Valdez in 1:48.

Boys Ranch won three of the matches by forfeit.

The Harvesters are entered in the Liberal, Kan. Tournament today and Saturday.

Fifteen teams from Kansas,

Lakers prove they're still among the league's elite

NBA roundup

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

By winning five NBA titles in the 80s, the Los Angeles Lakers proved they were the best.

Now, three seasons removed from his last champagne victory celebration, Magic Johnson says the Lakers are simply trying to prove they belong among the league's elite.

"We needed this game to prove to everybody and to ourselves that we can still play with the best," Johnson said after the Lakers beat Portland 108-104 Thursday night.

The loss marked the first time the new king of the West had been beaten consecutively in rolling to a 27-5 start.

"I think they wanted this game more than they wanted anything in life at this point," Portland's Clyde Drexler said. "It was just another game on the schedule."

"I don't think we overlooked them. I just think they came in and played a better game."

Elsewhere, it was Houston 114, Chicago 92; Milwaukee 97, Dallas 87; Washington 118, Charlotte 108; New York 135, Denver 108; Orlando 110, the Los Angeles Clippers 108; and Sacramento 131, Golden State 113.

Byron Scott scored seven points in the final 1:43, including three of four free throws in the last 18.1 seconds, as the Lakers won their fourth straight game.

The Lakers, who got 30 points from James Worthy, wrapped it up by outscoring the Trail Blazers 10-6 in the final two minutes.

Johnson finished with 13 points and 17 assists. Sam Perkins hit seven of eight shots and scored 19 points before fouling out in the final minute.

Portland's Kevin Duckworth matched his season high with 27 points.

Rockets 114, Bulls 92

With Akeem Olajuwon out after being knocked unconscious in the third period, Houston cooled off Chicago behind a 23-point, 11-rebound effort by Otis Thorpe.

Olajuwon had 20 points and 10 rebounds when he collided under the Houston basket with Bulls center Bill Cartwright with 3:32 remaining in the third quarter. Olajuwon was carried to the locker room on a stretcher.

Olajuwon, hit in the side of the face by an inadvertent elbow, received X-rays, which proved negative, and was sent to a Houston hospital for observation.

Bucks 97, Mavericks 87

Ricky Pierce scored 15 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter as streaking Milwaukee held off a late charge to beat floundering Dallas and remain unbeaten at home.

Jay Humphries added 24 points as the Bucks improved their homecourt record to 16-0 with their season-best sixth straight victory. Dallas, a loser in seven of its last 10 games, got 21 points from Derek Harper and 18 from Rolando Blackman.

Bullets 118, Hornets 108

Bernard King scored 46 points and keyed a 10-2 fourth-quarter spurt as Washington handed Charlotte its 13th loss in 14 games.

King and Harvey Grant scored four points apiece in a surge that gave Washington a 107-98 lead with 4:29 left. Grant scored 27 points.

Knicks 135, Nuggets 108

Gerald Wilkins matched his season high with 25 points and New York defeated Denver despite taking 26 fewer shots.

New York made 56 percent of its 93 shots compared to 38 percent of 119 shots by Denver.

Michael Adams led Denver with 22 points.

Magic 110, Clippers 108

Scott Skiles scored 10 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter and Otis Smith 10 of his 15 as Orlando rallied to send the Los Angeles Clippers to their 10th loss in 11 games.

Orlando trailed by 13 points with 46 seconds left in the third period. But the Magic made a comeback by playing four reserves — Smith, Jerry Reynolds, Jeff Turner and Michael Ansley — the entire fourth period.

Kings 131, Warriors 113

Antoine Carr matched his career best of 32 points as Sacramento snapped a six-game losing streak.

Lionel Simmons scored 26 points and Duane Causwell 20, both career highs for the rookies.

Chris Mullin scored 25 points as Golden State sustained its sixth straight road loss.

San Antonio's WLAFL team will be nicknamed 'Riders'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The World League of American Football team here will be nicknamed the "Riders," and football veteran John Peterson will be vice president and general manager.

Owners of the WLAFL team were to make those announcements later today, said reports in the San Antonio Express-News and San Antonio Light.

Team officials said the name Riders was selected because of its association with Texas tradition.

Peterson has been player personnel director of the past two years for the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League. He arrived in San Antonio late Wednesday.

"We're really excited," said his wife, Wendy Peterson. "Being from the States, we wanted to get back there. Plus it was minus-5 degrees here on New Year's Eve."

Peterson, 41, a native of Ann Arbor, Mich., formerly worked for the Dallas Cowboys, Seattle Seahawks and San Diego Chargers. He has held several college football positions, including jobs at Bemidji State, Frostburg State and Holy Cross.

Other candidates for the vice president and general manager job were Tommy Nobis, director of marketing for the Atlanta Falcons, and Bob Wallace, counsel for the Phoenix Cardinals.

Peterson was a candidate for at least two other general manager jobs in the WLAFL. He turned down the general manager's position with the Montreal Machine, the league's only Canadian franchise.

Freshmen cagers surprise starters for North Texas

By DAN NOXON
The Dallas Morning News

DENTON, Texas (AP) — One reason Jesse Ratliff and Jereld Nunley chose North Texas last year over schools such as Southern Mississippi and Texas A&M was they figured to play as freshman.

But neither figured to play as much as they have, much less start.

"I counted on being a reserve guard and thought I'd get some quality minutes," said Nunley, who teamed with Ratliff to win consecutive Class 5A state championships at Biloxi (Miss.) High School before coming to North Texas. "But I was really surprised when I first got to start. It's a great confidence builder."

Ratliff, who said in the season's first month he set a goal to crack the starting lineup, got the nod from coach Jimmy Gales at New Mexico two weeks ago. He responded with 14 points and six rebounds in 24 minutes as the Eagles stayed close to the heavily favored Lobos before falling, 98-84.

Four nights later, at the Pre Holiday Tournament in Honolulu, Nunley came off the bench to score 15 points and grab a team-high 8 rebounds as North Texas defeated Appalachian State, 95-83, and broke a four-game losing streak.

Both totals were personal season highs. The following night, Nunley joined Ratliff as a starter and the two combined for 26 points and 12 rebounds in a 108-100 loss to Hawaii.

"They still have a lot of rough edges," said Gales, whose team has lost seven of eight games after starting with four victories. "I thought Nunley was a pretty good player, but he's gone beyond my expectations as a freshman. And Ratliff's struggling some on defense, but he's really playing well overall."

Early production in few minutes led to more playing time. And that has led to even more production.

Neither started in North Texas' first six games. Ratliff averaged 18.2 minutes, 6.8 points and 5 rebounds. Nunley averaged 13.7 minutes, 4.5 points and 3 rebounds.

In the subsequent six games, though, Nunley (25.7-8.7-5.5) has started four games and Ratliff (24.7-13.5-6.0) three.

"A lot of it is just feeling more comfortable," said Nunley, a 6-4 guard, who in North Texas' relatively small lineup is counted upon for more rebounding than in high school.

Ratliff's role has changed as well. At 6-7, he mainly played inside in high school. At North Texas, he plays outside more.

"It's different," he said. "The main thing was I had to get confident with the defense because I didn't really understand the 2-3 and the press that we play. Now that I've been able to get into the flow more, I'm feeling a lot more confident."

Police detective devises glow-in-the-dark bass lure

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Kevin Pierce was fishing at night several years ago and wondered how the fish could see his lure in the dark.

So he took a clear fishing lure, injected some of that "glow-in-the-dark" substance used in green fluorescent light sticks and tossed the glowing lure into the water.

He hit paydirt that night.

"I must have caught about 30 fish with that lure," he said. Pierce's tinkering with fishing lures four years ago led him into a business venture that he hopes will spell financial success for his company and fishing success for other anglers.

Pierce, a detective with the El Paso Police Department, is president of KP Pro Inc., a company he founded to sell glow-in-the-dark bass lures.

Pierce and business partner Raul Loera designed a crude lure out of a putty used to repair dents in vehicles.

Then they approached Edward Paskey, owner of Precision Mold and Design, in November 1989.

They wanted Paskey to design and engineer the lure and take it from drawings into reality.

Using the model, Paskey drew a lure design. His company produced a mold.

The lure KP Pro is marketing is made of hard plastic.
