Harvesters end season, 33-3

Lose state semifinal to Georgetown

By L.D. Strate
Sports Writer

AUSTIN - For the second year in a row, Austin turned out to be heartbreak city for the Pampa Harvesters.

Georgetown, in its state tournament debut, sneaked past Pampa, 65-64, in overtime Thursday night in the Class 4A semifinals played at Frank Erwin Center.

With the final seconds ticking down and Georgetown leading 65-64 in the extra period, Cedrick Wilbon's 15-foot jumper bounced off the rim as time expired, sending Georgetown into the finals.

"This was an exceptionally tough loss for this group of seniors," said Pampa head basketball coach Robert Hale. "They gave it all they had for 36 games. It was a difficult loss to accept, but we had our opportunities to win. Georgetown played very aggressive and they played very hungry."

"I couldn't be prouder of my players," Hale said. "They're a group of super young men and super players who handled pressure well all season long."

Neither team could gain much of an advantage throughout the contest, although things seemed to be going the Harvesters way most of the time.

Pampa led by as many as seven points in the second quarter and by as many as six in the third quarter.

Georgetown never led by more than two points until the three-minute overtime period.

Ragged shooting by both clubs kept the score close, however late in the fourth quarter, Pampa boosted the lead to four points, 62-58, on a 7-0 run with just 38 seconds remaining.

Georgetown's Chris Phillips mistimed from the outside, but teammate Brian Michener grabbed the rebound and scored to cut the gap to 62-60.

Georgetown was forced to foul with just 15 seconds to go, but Wilbon missed the free throw. After Georgetown's Glen Senclair collected the rebound, Eagles coach Maurice Varnell called a time out to diagram a final play.

The Eagles elected to go for the win as Phillips launched a 3-pointer from the outside. The shot was way off target, but reserve post-player Matt Shell grabbed the rebound after a scramble for the ball near the baseline. Shell threw up a desperation shot that went in as the buzzer sounded ending regulation play.

"I was about 15 feet away and I just picked the ball up off the floor. I really didn't have time to get my eyes focused on the basket, but somehow the ball went in," said Shell of the shot that tied the score at 62 after four quarters.

Georgetown used the foul line to jump out on top in the overtime period.

Todd Holubec hit a free throw to give the Eagles a 63-62 lead with 2:11 remaining. Snell canned two foul shots to up the margin to three, 65-62 with 1:17 to go.

After Wilbon's 17-foot jumper drew Pampa within a point, 65-64, Georgetown went into a slowdown offense to take some time off the clock, but Lamont Williams' pass to Senclair along the baseline went out of bounds giving Pampa possession.

The Harvesters called a time out with 16 seconds remaining and Hale designed a basic cut play over the middle with a pass off it.

Georgetown's defense, however, rose to the occasion and forced Wilbon to take a bad shot.

"It was a play we executed hundreds of times before, but for whatever reason, it didn't develop this time," said Hale. "Cedrick did a good job of getting the shot off, but it just wasn't the shot we wanted."

Senclair led the Eagles in scoring with 17 points and Michener added 12 as eight Georgetown players made the scoring column.

David Johnson, who connected on four 3-pointers, led the way for the Harvesters with 18 points. Jeff Young contributed 17, Dwight Nickelberry had 16, Wilbon 7 and Randy Nichols 6.

The Harvesters, ranked at the top of the Class 4A poll all season long, close out with a 33-3 record. Unranked Georgetown, at 29-

8, advances to meet No. 2-ranked Dallas South Oak Cliff for the championship Saturday.

Pampa lost to San Antonio Alamo Heights in triple overtime in the Class 4A semifinals a year ago.

FCC eases ownership rules

WASHINGTON (AP) - Financially successful broadcasters are expected to begin expanding their holdings soon, now that the Federal Communications Commission has eased ownership restrictions.

The FCC voted Thursday to increase the number of stations a single owner can possess from 12 AMs and 12 FMs to 30 of each nationwide. Within local areas, an owner can have three to six stations, depending on the size of the community. Owners had been limited to one AM and one FM per listening area.

The FCC voted for the change to infuse new economic strength in the industry by allowing financially successful companies to increase their holdings. Commissioner Andrew Barrett abstained from the 4-0 vote, saying he would have preferred a more modest relaxation of the rules to be phased in over several years.

He also said he was concerned about the effects of the change on minority ownership and feared that the commission was making a permanent structural change to address an economic slump.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass. and the chairman of the House telecommunications Subcommittee, also criticized the decision, saying it would stifle diversity.

FCC Chairman Alfred Sikes said, however, that radio has been a decreasing presence among mass media for some time. It attracted only about 11 percent of the approximately $76.2 billion spent in media advertising dollars in 1990, compared to 43 percent for newspapers, 37 percent for television and 9 percent for magazines.

In 1945, radio had 25 percent of the $1.7 billion advertising market, newspapers 55 percent and magazines 20 percent.

Allowing broadcasters to operate more than one station on the same band in a community means they can use the same advertising sales departments and other administrative personnel to operate several stations.

Suoco Oil agrees to pay asbestos-related fine

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A Pampa oil company agreed this week to pay a $31,500 fine to the Texas-Air Control Board for releasing friable asbestos particles into the air in 1988.

Inhaling friable asbestos has been linked to lung cancer and other health problems.

Suoco Oil Co. of Pampa already has paid a portion of the fine levied against it, according to TACB attorney Scott Humphrey.

Humphrey said the incident occurred in 1988 but Suoco "had a lot of foot-dragging which dug it out until now."

Only when the agency was preparing the case for the state Attorney General's office for prosecution did Suoco agree to pay the fine, Humphrey noted.

Suoco was hired by the Oxy plant to conduct a demolition operation on a natural gas processing plant in 1988, TACB documentation shows.

"They were hired by the Oxy plant and it was (Oxy) that reported Suoco was not conducting themselves properly," Humphrey said.

"We went in and investigated and found friable asbestos on the ground. The people from Oxy released Suoco and we investigated again and found the asbestos had been cleaned up."

"They signed a board order without admitting liability," Humphrey said of Suoco. "They did not put us to the burden of proof."

Suoco officials declined comment on the case.

Humphrey said there is no current health threat from the asbestos because the incident happened four years ago.

Humphrey said it is extremely unusual for a pollution case of this type to take four years to settle.

"We didn't put it off, but the company engaged in foot dragging and it just took a while to deal with it," he stated. "We would make a proposal and the company would not react to them. When we had prepared this for a lawsuit the company became aware of we were sending it to the Attorney General and realized their best option was the agreed board order. It was a difficult case because we had so much difficulty with them."

Suoco was one of 16 Texas companies agreeing to pay fines this week for releasing harmful materials into the air.

Plaintiffs' lawyer likens Keating to 'monarch'

By ARTHUR H. ROITSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Charles Keating Jr. ran his financial empire as a monarchy and tried to buy anything he wanted, including the people in his courtroom, put them in his pocket, a lawyer told jurors today.

"Evidence will show he took millions out of the corporation and put it right in his pocket," attorney Charles W. Cochet said as opening statements began in the $1.2 billion case.

Lawyers representing some 17,000 investors will seek to prove that the co-defendants aided Keating and his Phoenix-based American Continental Corp. in an allegedly fraudulent bond sales scheme. Keating has denied all wrongdoing.

The plaintiffs contend that lawyers, accountants and other co-defendants made Keating's financial empire appear sounder than it was and cost investors more than $300 million.

"We're going to put forth that Charles Keating attempted to buy anything he wanted, including the people in this courtroom, that he would pay the best lawyers and best accountants and everybody else - put them in his pocket," Cochet said today.

Cochet told U.S. District Court jurors that within 60 days after American Continental bought Lincoln Savings & Loan in 1984, every Lincoln loan officer had been fired.

He also showed various videotapes, including aerial shots of homes that Keating had on Cat Cay, his island in the Bahamas, at Indian Creek, Fla., and at Paradise Valley, Ariz.

Jurors saw portions of taped depositions of former employees and business associates of Keating, including one in which a young lawyer said Keating operated a "monarchy."

And Cochet quoted a co-defendant, accountant Jack Henry, as saying that he had never audited anyone with as much power as Keating retained over his business operations.

With interest and triple damages, the amount bondholders are seeking to recover could reach $1.7 billion. The trial could last six months.

In addition to the civil case that got under way today, Keating, 68, awaits sentencing for a conviction on California state securities fraud charges last year in Los Angeles. He also faces a federal criminal trial in Los Angeles on racketeering and other charges.

Cochet has called the trial a "local point case for where we're going in the 1990s as to who is going to be responsible for much of the S&L crisis."

But M. Laurence Popofsky, lawyer for defendant Ernst & Young and one of its partners, Jack Atchison, said he doubted the trial would rock the industry.

"I don't think there will be any particular change because someone gets sued," he said. "It's the price one pays for being in business nowadays."

The trial involves combined class-action lawsuits on behalf of investors who say they were duped into buying uninsured American Continental securities with false claims that they were backed by the government.

The securities were sold by Irvine, Calif.-based Lincoln Savings, which was seized by federal regulators in 1989. The Lincoln bailout will cost taxpayers a record $2.6 billion.

As of last month, about half of the original 99 defendants had reached tentative settlements totaling nearly $70 million, according to lawyers for the plaintiffs.

The remaining co-defendants include the national accounting firms Ernst & Young, Arthur Andersen & Co. and Deloitte & Touche; the Cleveland law firm of Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue; Ixecon Inc., a Chicago economic consulting firm; Saudi European Investment Corp.; and Offerman & Co., a Minneapolis securities firm.

Panel endorses Lake Meredith project

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The four-year fight to get federal funds to remove the salt pollution from Lake Meredith, the source of drinking water for 450,000 West Texans, has moved a step closer to resolution.

The Senate Energy Committee agreed to consider legislation authored by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen to eliminate the primary source of salt pollution at the Panhandle lake. The provision, attached to the fiscal 1993 funding bill for the Bureau of Reclamation, should be voted on next week when the committee takes up the authorization measure for that agency.

Bentsen, D-Texas, has tried since 1988 to obtain authorization for the Bureau of Reclamation to undertake the project. Earlier efforts stalled when the differing House and Senate versions could not be reconciled.

"I'm more confident than at any time since 1988 that we're going to win and probably this year," he said.

The Senate legislation is similar to a bill approved by the House last year.

Unless the situation is remedied, the naturally occurring salt could eventually render the water useless for human consumption. Each year, 30,000 tons of salt are added to the water, Bentsen said.

Studies show that 70 percent of salt entering the lake originates in a shallow brine aquifer in New Mexico. The aquifer is under artesian pressure and is leaking into the Canadian River, which feeds Lake Meredith.

A 1985 Bureau of Reclamation report recommended the most cost-effective solution would be to intercept the brine at the source by well pumping and disposal by deep well injection. Cost estimates have ranged as high as $9 million.

Bentsen's legislation would authorize the Bureau of Reclamation to pay for design preparation and construction management, which is an estimated one-third of the total cost.

The Canadian River Municipal Water Authority would be responsible for the remaining two-thirds, including construction, operation and maintenance costs.

Congress would still have to vote separately to appropriate money for the project even if it authorizes Bentsen's legislation.

Communities that depend on Lake Meredith for drinking water include Lubbock, Amarillo, Brownfield, Lamesa, Levelland, Plainview, Slaton, Borger, Pampa, O'Donnell and Tahoka. All 11 cities are members of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority.

Bush launches Michigan campaign; TV ad rips Buchanan's Mercedes

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — President Bush today opened a slashing TV campaign against rival Patrick Buchanan and courted Michigan's manufacturing industries by promising to "cut needless red tape" through new legislation.

"I am determined to roll back the tide of overregulation," Bush told workers at a prosperous medical equipment-making plant as he campaigned for support in Michigan's presidential primary Tuesday.

Speaking in front of Stryker Corp. boxes marked for export to Japan, Bush said overregulation of business gives foreign competitors an advantage and forces U.S. firms to take their operations and jobs overseas.

"I'm going to introduce what legislation it takes to change this ... to correct unreasonable rules we can't correct simply through executive action," Bush said.

He said he would introduce such legislation at the end of the current 90-day freeze on new regulation that he imposed Jan. 28 and promised to veto any bill containing excessive regulation "as soon as it hits my desk."

"As long as I'm the president I'm going to work to cut needless red tape," Bush said.

Later, Bush was to carry the theme to the auto industry, announcing the government will abandon a proposed requirement for new anti-pollution canisters on cars.

Bush also went on the attack against his conservative GOP challenger with a TV ad aimed at Michigan auto workers, pointing out that Buchanan drives a Mercedes-Benz.

"Michigan has too much at stake to trust Pat Buchanan," says the ad, which began running Thursday night and was to continue today and Saturday, according to campaign officials.

Bush was stumping the state today in hopes of winning back voters embittered by the recession.

"It's a tough state," said Bush campaign strategist Mary Matalin. "It's got high unemployment. It's a large labor base which is in a grumpy mood."

Bush is expected to win the Michigan Republican primary, but the widespread economic discontent could slap him with a protest vote larger than he found in his sweep of Southern primaries last week.

In an effort to woo the auto-industry dependent state, Bush planned to announce today an Environmental Protection Agency rule that will free automakers of a rule requiring them to fit cars with vapor-catching, anti-pollution canisters, administration officials said Thursday.

Gasoline pumps will be used to catch the vapors.

The administration had decided some time ago to take the step because of a Department of Transportation decision that such canisters were unsafe, but saved the announcement for today when Bush will be campaigning for Tuesday's primary election.

In a state wracked by 9 percent unemployment — higher than the national average — Bush chose to visit the prosperous Stryker Corp. in Kalamazoo. The employs about 300 people.

In contrast to the moribund auto industry and related businesses,

Stryker boasted sales increases of about 25 percent worldwide last year and has not laid off employees for several years, said Vice President David Simpson.

Bush said today the firm is "the number one seller of artificial hips in Japan. Don't tell me the American worker can't compete with the Japanese," he said.

But the state's economic concerns have been heightened by General Motors Corp.'s recent announcement that it is cutting more than 9,000 jobs in five Michigan cities.

Heavily Democratic union workers here have become embittered.

"We certainly need somebody that is going to back us on a lot of issues, such as fair trade rather than free trade," said Joe Duplanty, president of United Auto Workers Local 659, representing the Flint plant GM plants to close.

"You take your best shot with your best person, go after Bush with a vengeance and knock him out of there. That's got to be our chief priority," said Don Lindemier, a representative of Communication Workers of America, with 15,000 members in Michigan.

With Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin out of the presidential race, unionists are left without a favorite Democratic candidate. The Bush campaign is worried that union members may cross over and vote against Bush in the Republican primary.

Regardless, Bush has the endorsement of Republican Gov. John Engler and most of the state party.

In addition, Bush's top surrogate campaigners, Vice President Dan Quayle, Barbara Bush and Marilyn Quayle, all are campaigning in Michigan.

Vance Brand resigns from astronaut corps

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Vance Brand, who flew on four space flights including the historic Apollo-Soyuz mission in 1975, has left the astronaut corps to work on the national space plane, NASA said Thursday.

Brand, 60, logged 746 hours in space and became the oldest person to fly in space on his last orbital trip, in December 1990.

Brand is now director of plans for the National Aero-Space Plane Joint Program Office in Dayton, Ohio. The proposed single-stage-to-orbit spaceship would take off like an airplane and accelerate to 25 times the speed of sound.

The space plane is a joint program of NASA and the Defense Department, and has encountered serious funding problems in the past year.

Brand, a former naval aviator with the Marines, became an astronaut in 1966. He was the Apollo command module pilot in the Apollo-Soyuz mission, in which U.S. and Russian ships docked in space. He went on to command three shuttle flights, in 1982, 1984 and 1990.

Wilson admits to bouncing checks

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As House members scramble to control the damage from the bank check-kiting scandal, a tenth Texas congressman has stepped forward to admit he too wrote checks drawn on insufficient funds.

Houston Republican Jack Fields, who previously claimed he had not sustained any overdrafts, said he learned of his dismay Thursday that he had written some bad checks.

"I didn't feel that I had a problem," Fields said, noting that last year he had requested and received a letter from the House bank's overseer stating he had not written any overdrafts.

But Fields said he learned only Thursday that the checks were coded to show whether they were cashed with insufficient funds. A quick check of 18 months of records showed "some" bad checks, he said.

Fields declined to say how many of those checks he wrote since he doesn't have complete records for the 39-month period examined by the House ethics committee. But he said he would release a full accounting when he receives the records he has requested.

The resurgence of the check flap, which was sparked by a congressional report last September, prompted a flurry of news releases and public statements Thursday from members of Congress eager to point out they favor full disclosure.

Rep. Charlie Wilson called a news conference.

Rep. Charles Stenholm appeared on ABC's "Prime Time Live."

Wilson, who earlier refused to say whether he had bounced any checks, Thursday said he wrote 75 to 85 checks while having insufficient funds in his account.

The Lufkin Democrat revealed his financial dealings at the now-defunct House bank just hours before House members began their heated, partisan debate over disclosure.

The ethics committee last week recommended releasing the names of the 24 top offenders. But House Republicans successfully pushed for disclosure of all 355 current and former members who wrote rubber checks over 39 months.

The House voted 426-0 early today to publicly identify 355 current and former members who wrote bad checks at the chamber's bank.

The unanimous vote for full disclosure came after Democratic leaders caved in to intense public pressure and to Republicans crying cover-up.

Wilson said he may be one of the 24 worst abusers, because he fit at least some of the criteria used by the committee in selecting the biggest offenders.

Most of the 75 to 85 overdrafts were covered within days, Wilson said. The biggest check was $6,500 to the Internal Revenue Service.

"I have summoned the posse here today to turn myself in," Wilson told reporters during a light-hearted news conference.

"I regret it of course. But now let's be completely honest about it; completely, totally 100 percent honest about it. You're basically contrite because you got caught," he said, laughing.

"It's so strange how things turn out to be big deals that you just never dreamed."

Writing overdrafts was an accepted practice, Wilson said.

"As a matter of fact, one of the senior members of the Texas delegation told me when I first came here that one good reason to use the bank was that they paid overdrafts without any hassle," he said. That member was former Rep. Bob Eckhardt, he said.

Wilson also repeatedly stressed that no taxpayer funds were involved. Overdrafts were covered with money from other members of Congress.

He said when he knows for sure how many checks he bounced, he'll dock himself $25 per check and donate that amount to charity.

Asked if he has written overdrafts on his private checking accounts, Wilson laughed and said he didn't.

"They charge me $25 bucks if I do that."

Wilson said he doubts the current flap will translate into defeat at the polls for incumbents.

"My guess is that it'll cause a lot of anxiety for a couple of weeks and then I think people will become interested in something else," he said.

Business tax pool mullied

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards' staff is attempting to put together a school-finance proposal that would remove businesses from local school district tax rolls and put them into a statewide pool, a newspaper reported today.

The Houston Chronicle reported that two sources, who asked not to be identified, said they had talked with the governor's staff and had been told the plan would put all business property, including utilities and minerals, into a separate tax base.

The money would be combined with other state tax dollars and distributed according to a formula designed to equalize money between rich and poor districts, the newspaper reported.

Local school districts would not be able to tax the businesses. The districts' tax base would be their tax base local residential property.

Such a plan would amount to a statewide property tax on businesses only and would require a constitutional amendment.

Margaret Justus, a spokeswoman for the governor, had no immediate comment on the report today.

As a fallback plan, Richards' staff also is looking at a proposal to modify the current County Education District (CED) system, the Chronicle reported.

That system was designed to shift hundreds of millions of dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within the CEDs, taxing regions made up of one or several counties.

The CED plan was meant to meet a Supreme Court mandate to equalize school funding. However, the court in January declared the tax unconstitutional and gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993 to fix the system.

Utah officials defend not taking action against parents of chained, starved boy

FARMINGTON, Utah (AP) — Utah authorities declined to prosecute the parents of Stephen Jay Hill when presented in 1984 with allegations they abused the 5-year-old boy, who later starved to death in Texas.

The Davis County attorney's office declined to file charges against Jay and Linda Hill based on evidence presented by the state Division of Family Services and police in Clearfield, where the family then lived.

The 13-year-old boy died of starvation in November in Fort Worth, where the family moved in 1985. Stephen Hill weighed 55 pounds when he was found by Texas authorities, who said his parents starved him as punishment and occasionally shackled him to keep him from food.

Jay Hill, 42, and Linda Hill, 37, are in the Tarrant County Jail on charges of homicide, aggravated kidnapping and injury to a child. They face trial Aug. 3.

Police and DFS officials in Utah received allegations of abuse as early as 1983.

Deputy Davis County Attorney Brian J. Namba said Wednesday that files on declined cases are not kept and it is unknown who screened the case. Even if charges had been filed, the records likely would be sealed by a juvenile court judge, he said.

Namba said the general criteria for declining prosecution are lack of evidence or the absence of a "reasonable probability of success at trial."

Pat Rothermich, director of Child

Protective Services for DFS, said the DFS' records of the case were sent to Texas authorities at their request after the boy died. She said she called Texas and had the records read to her over the phone.

She declined to discuss the contents.

"We did screen the case with the county attorney," Rothermich said. "I felt after listening to the records, we had provided as many services as possible under the circumstances."

"We did everything we could, we did offer appropriate services to help the child," Rothermich said.

The Hills moved from Clearfield to Texas in 1985. Before that move, their neighbor, Anne Barlow, said she called Division of Family Services officials five times to report that the child was malnourished and physically abused.

Clearfield police have records of an officer accompanying a DFS caseworker to the Hill residence Oct. 10, 1984. They said then that the boy had swollen tonsils and a slight fever but that they found no evidence of abuse. However, the caseworker told the officer that the parents had been reported for suspicion of child abuse May 9, 1984; and Oct. 31, 1983.

The 1983 complaint was unsubstantiated, but the 1984 was confirmed and that case was taken for screening to the Davis County attorney's office.

Stephen's brother, Douglas, 12, remained in foster care in Texas Wednesday.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenant commandment.

Opinion

'Supreme' ruling is a good start

A few months after celebrating the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights, citizens saw one of those rights strengthened a bit recently by the U.S. Supreme Court. In U.S. v. Walker, according to an Associated Press report, "The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that could quash drug charges against Ralph Walker, who allegedly had some 200 pounds of cocaine in his car when he was stopped on an interstate highway in Utah" on Jan. 10, 1990.

Court officials told us that a vote of the nine justices usually is not released when they only let a case stand, unless at least one justice strongly objects, which did not happen here. That is unfortunate, because this case deserved an open vote with comments.

The salient facts in the case: Walker was driving 12 miles over the 55 mph speed limit when Officer Richard Graham pulled him over. Except for the speeding, there was no indication of illegal activity. A computer check revealed the car registration was valid. Officer Graham then asked whether Walker's car held any "weapons, drugs, or large amounts of cash," the AP reported.

Walker answered that the glove compartment held $1,600 in cash, but the car contained no illegal drugs. Officer Graham requested a search of the car. According to the officer, Walker allegedly replied, "Sure, go ahead." The officer opened the trunk and allegedly found cocaine.

Walker was convicted of possessing and trafficking in cocaine. On appeal, U.S. District Judge Bruce S. Jenkins "ruled that Walker's rights were violated, and suppressed the use of the cocaine as evidence against him," the AP reported. "Jenkins said Graham, prior to the search, lacked any reason to believe Walker was transporting contraband or had committed a crime. The judge said police do not have unfettered discretion to search people without such reasonable suspicion." In reviewing Judge Jenkins' ruling, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals "ruled that Walker had been 'seized' by the officer and had not consented to the search of his car."

Clearly, the officer violated Walker's Fourth Amendment right to protection from unreasonable searches and seizures. The Supreme Court rightly allowed the seized "evidence" to be thrown out. Yet the court should have explained how it squared this action with three recent rulings that did the opposite.

In 1990 the court allowed so-called "sobriety checkpoints," in which, on no cause at all, cars may be herded into areas where the driver is checked for alcohol abuse. In May 1991, in a case involving a man from Santa Ana, Calif., the court allowed police to search cars and packages in them without a search warrant. And less than a month later, in June, it ruled that police may search a bus without a search warrant.

The recent action is welcome. But the court needs to do more, much more, to restore our Fourth Amendment rights.

"I'd LIKE to vote my conscience, but I don't have one."

It's now Bush's race to lose

Barring some disastrous event, it will be George Bush against Bill Clinton in November. The outcome will turn on the vote in California. When the time comes, be prepared to stay up all night.

I write on the eve of Super Tuesday, but I venture these confident predictions anyhow. Clinton will have won a great bundle of Democratic delegates—enough for him to sound the trainman's cry of "all aboard." The race isn't over till it's over, but it's all but over now.

Bob Kerrey and Tom Harkin have dropped out. Neither one of them ever had a real prospect of winning the party nomination.

Kerrey had little to run on, apart from his valiant service in Vietnam and his Medal of Honor. He has set no fires as United States senator; his record as governor of Nebraska was not especially impressive. As a campaigner he left an impression of a nice guy, but.

Harkin's assets were as limited. Running as the "only true Democrat" in the New Deal tradition of Franklin Roosevelt, Harkin offered large promises to a small audience. His foremost accomplishment as a senator—an accomplishment I have warmly applauded—is the Americans with Disabilities Act. Many businessmen, especially those with small companies, see the act as one more burden to bear. So much for Harkin.

What makes Bill Clinton the almost certain nominee? His remaining opposition is weak. He has the money it takes to sustain his campaign. As his momentum builds, he will look more electable—and that's what politics is all about.

Paul Tsongas, the onetime senator from Massachusetts, has been getting a free ride from the press. Everybody loves an underdog. Everybody admires a man who triumphs over adversity. Tsongas has captivated the traveling press corps by talking sense: "The novelty leaves reporters speechless."

Novelty alone will not prevail. A great many voters see Paul Tsongas as another Michael Dukakis—one more liberal from Massachusetts. They close their eyes a little tighter. By every account, Tsongas overcomes his codfish image by a dry wit, but it takes big money to mount an effective campaign and Tsongas doesn't have it.

Money is Jerry Brown's problem also—one of Brown's problems. His big problem is an image that won't go away. It is the image of Brown, the California snowflake, who as governor slept in a cheap apartment instead of the governor's mansion. Brown is a grandstander. He is a brilliant fellow in some ways, but brilliance has this in common with hard rocks, bagpipes and the chatter of little children: It is best appreciated at a distance. Brown will win a couple of hundred delegates in California in June. Too little, too late.

That brings us down to Clinton, the Super Tuesday sensation. He is racking up committed delegates to the New York convention. So far, he is playing his cards skillfully. Analysts will pore over Tuesday's returns, looking for evidence of serious weakness.

Nothing substantive appeared in South Carolina's primary on Saturday. Democratic voters, hungry for a winner, appeared willing to overlook both adultery and draft avoidance. South Carolina prides itself on its military heritage; the state has a large population of fundamentalist Protestants. Clinton won 63 percent.

Momentum isn't everything in a presidential campaign. Other factors count heavily—a candidate's personality, his TV commercials, his wit and composure in debates, the vague impression of his stand on the big issues—but momentum is a powerful locomotive. Clinton's people will be spreading the word that the train is leaving the station. Were you for Bill before Super Tuesday? Get aboard, or get left.

Nothing much remains to be said on the Republican side. Wherever Bush is pitted against Patrick Buchanan, it will be Bush 65-Buchanan 35—there or thereabouts. Pat's second-place showing leaves him like the disappointed woman in the Patsy Cline ballad. The woman kept the pictures while her rival got her man. Patrick has the protest; George has the vote.

The rules of punditry require that every pundit hedge his predictions. One more "Big Neg," meaning negative, could wreck the Clinton candidacy as swiftly as it has risen. A "Stop Clinton!" move may be confidently expected. The momentum that has been flowing against Bush could bring him to defeat in the electoral college in November. It's now Bush's race to lose, Clinton's to win.

In 1906, American suffragist Susan B. Anthony died in Rochester, N.Y.

In 1925, a law went into effect in Tennessee prohibiting the teaching of evolution.

In 1928, more than 400 people died when the San Francisco Valley in California was inundated with water after the St. Francis Dam burst.

Public charity 'A total failure'

It was a noble experiment but an expensive one. New York City officials counted 50,000 people sleeping in the streets.

It was a pitiful sight by day and a dangerous one by night.

All those people shivering in doorways and subways and cardboard boxes.

Panhandlers were everywhere, often impertinent, sometimes menacing.

"Disgraceful!" the sociologists insisted.

"The city must do something!"

So, 10 years ago, New York City began providing homes for the homeless—shelters of all kinds—including 26,700 units of permanent housing. That's more just in New York than our federal government was providing for the whole nation.

Now, after 10 years, New York streets and alleys and doorways and subways are still hosting 50,000 homeless.

Does that mean the city has made no progress? Mayor Dinkins appointed a commission to research and report.

Paul Harvey

The commission reports: "No progress." After 10 years and $2 billion...Despite spending $18,000 per homeless person per year...

The commission says these most generous efforts were "a total failure."

In an inch-thick report, the commission, headed by Andrew Cuomo, the son of the governor, recommends that the city get out of the shelter business. That private charities can do it better and cheaper. One thing the commission discovered is that the "lack of a home" is seldom the problem.

Sixty-five percent of the homeless in the singles shelters tested positive for drugs and/or alcohol. One-fifth have been treated for mental illness. Half are high school dropouts. Half have been in jail.

Mayor Dinkins says he agrees with the commission.

The city had planned to spend another $280 million over the next five years to create new shelters. Now it will not.

Homeless people, instead, will be referred to drug treatment centers, to job training centers and to facilities that care for the mentally ill.

Nobody has really high hopes that these measures will solve the problem.

What we've come to call "homelessness," for too many, is either inevitable or preferable.

For the others—the homeless who genuinely need and want help—the Boston Globe is offering free "situation wanted ads."

Also, you may funnel funds through the Salvation Army, where overhead is minimal and nobody is ever turned away.

What Bush and de Klerk both face

Who would have thought that the presidencies of two once-upon-a-time conservatives, George Bush and F.W. de Klerk, would ever evolve into citadels of ideological moderation!

Both the American and the South African have changed from being guardians of the right wing's holy grail to advocates of reason—but not because they planned it. Both were forced by events.

The two presidencies are amazingly parallel.

Bush, who inherited the presidency from a pre-historical conservative throwback, did his best to carry on Ronald Reagan's voodoo economics and revive "separate but equal" racism. The policies failed because the economy took a nose-dive and too many Americans of good will are still not ready to abandon Brown v. Board of Education (1954) for Plessy v. Ferguson (1896).

De Klerk, who succeeded belligerent apartheid apostle P.W. Botha, discovered that a worldwide economic boycott had put South Africa's economic future on hold. He also realized that to continue a war of attrition against the African National Congress would have plunged South Africa into economic impotence.

Both Bush and de Klerk began pursuing policies that evoked right-wing yelps that they were betraying the faith. Bush raised taxes, and de Klerk freed Nelson Mandela. The two actions have caused a flood of right-wing resentment.

In South Africa, the Conservatives' storm trooper, Andries Treurnicht, has rallied white South Africans into a political phalanx that could doom de

Chuck Stone

Klerk's National Party negotiations for a South African democracy.

In America, the ideological counterpart to Treurnicht, Patrick J. Buchanan, is exploiting the same irrational fears of unaccountable despair. Middle-class America doesn't know what is wrong, and it needs a scapegoat.

Buchanan has given middle-class Americans three: George Bush's broken promises, affirmative action and imports from Japan.

Buchanan and Treurnicht have two things in common. Both despise Jews and want to keep blacks segregated. Buchanan's history of anti-Semitism is so flagrant that even his fellow conservative, Bill Buckley, wrist-tapped him in a rambling, disjointed dissent. Buchanan's repeated derogations of blacks and tangential insults leave little difference between him and David Duke.

At the same time, Treurnicht and Buchanan do have their differences. Treurnicht dons a uniform and carries a pistol. Buchanan wears a blue suit and carries a computer. In the hands of a ranting racist, both instruments can touch off a political revolt. Ideas are frequently the artillery of change.

But this two-continent drama can still have a happy ending. Unless the American people succumb to a plague of idiocy, Buchanan will not win the Republican nomination. He knows it and does not care. Pat Buchanan's real purpose is to stake out 1996.

In South Africa, the fate of racial civility rests with a brilliant, but costly gamble by de Klerk. He has called for a "whites only" election. With typical Afrikaner bluntness, de Klerk is posing a simple parliamentary question to his white constituency: Do I still have your electoral mandate to negotiate for an interracial South African democracy?

Even the African National Congress knows de Klerk's gamble must succeed if Treurnicht and his followers are to be prevented from subverting the democratic process. That's why Nelson Mandela has been noticeably restrained in his criticism of the election.

Mandela, it should be noted, is in an almost impossible position. If the ANC comes down too hard on de Klerk, white voters will detest de Klerk for not standing up to the kaffirs. If ANC's leaders are too soft-spoken, their followers will accuse them of being Uncle Toms.

I admire the tough-minded de Klerk, and all of us should pray for his party to overcome in the March election. While we're at it, we might reserve a few entreaties for Bush to do the same in his party.

Wholesale prices rise

Lower energy prices offset surge in cost of foodstuffs

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices edged up a modest 0.2 percent in February as another decline in energy prices helped offset the biggest surge in food costs in two years, the government said today.

The Labor Department said the small gain in its Producer Price Index, which measures inflation before it reaches the retail level, followed two consecutive monthly declines, 0.3 percent in January and 0.1 percent in December.

In another report, the government said business sales rose 0.6 percent in January, the biggest gain in six months, while business inventories dropped 0.4 percent, snapping a four-month buildup.

Falling inventories in relation to sales could mean increased output and more jobs as businesses attempt to replenish their dwindling stocks in anticipation of growing demand.

In a development likely to be reflected quickly on grocery store shelves, wholesale food costs soared 1.1 percent in February. Food prices had fallen in eight of the last nine months.

The February jump was led by a 26 percent increase in the price of vegetables, but a wide range of foods from meat to eggs registered gains last month.

Even with February's 0.2 percent overall price increase, the biggest since a similar gain last October, inflation at the wholesale level was still declining at an annual rate of 0.5 percent for the first two months of this year as a weak economy has kept the lid on prices.

A number of recent economic barometers from rising retail sales to expanded manufacturing orders seem to be signaling that the country is finally emerging from the recession. But even if a sustained recovery does get underway this year, analysts are not looking for inflation to worsen.

Many are forecasting that wholesale prices will climb by around 2 percent for the whole year while consumer prices will rise by around 3 percent. Such a development, coupled with similarly good results last year, would give the country the best two-year performance on inflation since the mid 1960s.

While proclaiming that an economic recovery is at hand, the Bush administration has continued to keep up pressure on the Federal Reserve to reduce interest rates to ensure that the recovery does not falter like it did last year.

However, many analysts believe the recent string of stronger economic reports makes it unlikely that the Fed will cut interest rates further anytime soon.

Energy prices edged down for a third straight month in February, falling 0.1 percent. However, that decline was far smaller than the 2.8 percent drop recorded in January or the 1.4 percent December decrease.

Gasoline and home heating oil costs actually were up last month, rising by 1.9 percent and 16.2 percent respectively, but those gains were offset by identical 1 percent drops for electricity and natural gas prices.

In the food category, the overall 1.1 percent increase was the largest since a 1.8 percent surge in January 1990.

In addition to the huge jump in vegetable prices, which analysts attributed to short supplies at winter's end, egg prices rose 2.6 percent, beef prices were up 3.4 percent and pork prices rose 2.9 percent.

Outside the volatile food and energy categories, wholesale prices rose a tiny 0.1 percent in February, the best performance since last June, indicating to analysts that the underlying inflationary pressures were remaining moderate. Prices for passenger cars, alcoholic beverages and soap all fell last month, helping to offset price increases for magazines and prescription drugs.

The various changes left the Producer Price Index, before adjusting for seasonal variations, at 121.9 in February, compared to 121.4 a year ago. That means a marketbasket of goods costing $121.40 in February 1991 would have cost $121.90 last month.

For the year, Donald Ratajczak, director of economic forecasting at Georgia State University, is forecasting that inflation at the wholesale level will rise by a slight 2 percent while consumer prices will rise by just 2.9 percent this year.

That compares to an actual drop of 0.1 percent in wholesale prices last year and an increase in consumer prices of 3.1 percent. Such a forecast, which is in line with the expectations of many analysts, would give the country its best back-to-back years on the inflation front since the mid-1960s.

The reason for the optimism of many economists about inflation is their view that the recovery from the recession will — initially — be one of the weakest on record.

"The prolonged weakness that the country is going through has created excess capacity, which will persist, and that will mean that both wages and production costs will remain under downward pressure for some time," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

President Bush told a meeting of state legislators Thursday that he is not gloomy about the economy and that reports of strong increases in retail sales in January and February "could be a forerunner to a very good recovery."

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, however, continued to publicly pressure the Federal Reserve to go further in easing interest rates to ensure that the recovery does not falter as it did last year.

Congressional candidate cut by flying glass in shooting

By STAN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A congressional candidate was under police guard today after gunshots shattered the rear window of his car and he was injured by flying glass.

Mel Reynolds was riding through a high-crime area on the city's southeast side Thursday night when "somebody pulled up and took two shots at him," Chicago police Sgt. John Manos said.

The car had a large "Reynolds for Congress" sign on the roof, but there was no evidence the shooting was related to his campaign to unseat U.S. Rep. Gus Savage, Manos said.

No arrests were reported early today. Reynolds suffered cuts, but was not struck by a bullet, said officers. Two other people in the car were unhurt.

Reynolds, wearing a large bandage over his right eye, refused to comment as he left South Shore Hospital late Thursday. Officers were sent to guard his apartment.

Reynolds, 40, a former college professor and Rhodes scholar, is challenging Savage for the Democratic nomination from the 2nd Congressional District in Tuesday's primary.

The campaign has been bitter. Savage has been accused of anti-Semitism for criticizing Reynolds for accepting campaign donations from pro-Israel groups.

Both candidates are black. Savage, 66, has had a black urban power base for most of his 12 years in office. The new 2nd District, redrawn after the 1990 census, is 48 percent suburban and has a much larger white population than Savage's old district.

Telephone messages left on an answering machine at Reynolds' campaign headquarters were not immediately returned early today. Savage's campaign office declined to ask him to contact The Associated Press, and no one answered his business office telephone. His home telephone number is unlisted.

Reynolds ran unsuccessfully against Savage in 1988 and 1990.

Clinton takes unity pitch to Reagan Democrat country

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — The man whose message was carefully crafted with Macomb County and its Reagan Democrats in mind methodically ticked off his proposals for economic growth, job training, college access and welfare reform.

Then Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton dropped his voice a notch and said he had one final topic to discuss: race relations.

With but three blacks among the approximately 150 people in the community college auditorium, it appeared the wrong message for the audience, given past studies showing many of these so-called Reagan Democrats abandoned the party because they believed its social policies too heavily favored minorities.

"I do not believe we have any hope of doing what we have to do in America unless we come together across racial lines," Clinton said Thursday. "The problems are not racial in nature. This is a crisis of economics and values. It has nothing to do with race."

Many of the television cameras were from Detroit stations, so Clinton's appeal for unity likely was seen by the inner-city blacks he is courting on in Tuesday's Michigan primary — even more so now that it appears the state's labor vote is up for grabs.

As he looks to win the Midwest, Democratic front-runner Clinton is trying to assemble the same biracial coalition that gave him huge victories across the South over former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas and former California Gov. Jerry Brown.

As he tries, he is testing the very premise of his candidacy: that he can not only win support from blacks but also from suburban blue-collar whites.

After Walter Mondale's 1984 defeat, Democrats began research here in Macomb County into why blue-collar, middle-class voters were defecting in national elections — earning the name Reagan Democrats.

When pollster Stanley Greenberg came to Warren in 1985, many disaffected Democrats said they were tired of seeing tax dollars spent on giveaways to minorities. Many said they moved out of the city they equated with blacks, crime and drugs.

Greenberg read a statement by Robert Kennedy about the special obligation to black Americans because of slavery and discrimination.

"I can't go along with that," one participant said. "No wonder they killed him," said another, according to Greenberg's report on the Macomb County groups.

But Thursday, Clinton's audience rose to its feet after he ended his appeal for racial unity by saying, "I can't change the country unless the American people are willing to be Americans again."

Greenberg said it's unclear whether a large number of Reagan Democrats will vote on Tuesday, but he predicted a moderate Democratic nominee could bring many back into the Democratic fold in the fall.

Hoping to stop Clinton from steamrolling, Tsongas and Brown are working harder for black support than they did in the South, although the principal battleground between the three so far has been for the labor vote left without a natural candidate since Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin quit the race.

Leaders of a dozen industrial unions that were backing Harkin met Thursday in Washington, deciding not to endorse for now, although some locals were backing Brown.

"We decided not to endorse any candidate at this point," said Owen Bieber, president of the United Auto Workers, the biggest union in Michigan.

Brown has been heavily courting the union vote, mixing his pitch with attacks on both Clinton and Tsongas.

On Thursday, he called Clinton "the slipperiest, slickest talker I have ever run up against."

Brown's remark was reflected in an ABC News Poll that showed four in 10 Americans — including three in 10 Democrats — said they were not satisfied that Clinton has the honesty and integrity to be president. The network poll's margin of error is plus or minus 4 percentage points.

The overnight poll of 781 Americans found 39 percent had a favorable impression of Clinton and 31 percent view him unfavorably.

Tsongas kept the heat on Clinton, too, saying the Arkansas governor had a lousy labor record in Arkansas.

"My appeal is going to be to the rank and file," Tsongas said. "I'm going to invest and create jobs."

Although Tsongas had a solid labor voting record in Congress, his opposition to legislation banning permanent replacements of strikers alienated many union leaders.

"He cleared up a few things for me, but not the scab thing," said Yves Roper, a UAW shop secretary who put Tsongas on the spot on the issue.

On the Republican side, challenger Patrick Buchanan campaigned at Chicago's Croatian Cultural Center and for a moment, seemed to dismiss his "America First" theme.

"If I am nominated and I am elected, Patrick Buchanan will be the first president of the United States to make a visit to the free and independent state of Croatia," he said.

Killeen cafeteria reopens

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

KILLEEN (AP) — Lillian Taylor was waiting anxiously for her first lunch at Luby's Cafeteria in nearly five months when she thought of the gunman who committed the nation's worst mass shooting there.

"We're putting thorns in that old devil's cap now," Mrs. Taylor said of George Hennard, who killed 23 people and then himself in the restaurant last Oct. 16.

"We're not giving him any glory," she said. "As long as they were closed, he was getting glory. That's what he wanted."

The restaurant reopened Thursday, drawing hundreds of residents, including some survivors of the shooting spree.

"The gunman ruled my life for about five minutes back there," said Hazel M. Holley, who was planning a Sunday school party with friends when Hennard crashed into Luby's and started firing.

"Since I was an adult, my life had never been ruled like that. And I am back here because I rule my own life," said Mrs. Holley, who broke her arm fleeing Hennard through a smashed window.

"I am back here because I rule my own life."

— Hazel M. Holley, shooting survivor

Company and civic leaders hailed the restaurant's reopening as a way for the central Texas city of 63,000 to heal from the massacre. Luby's received more than 300 letters asking to have the restaurant reopened.

But not all in the community feel that way.

Connie Nickolson, whose cousin Nancy Stansbury was killed in the shooting, said she wished Luby's would have built a new restaurant somewhere else in town. She said she bristles when others suggest that would have been "a victory for the shooter."

"It doesn't make any difference to him. He's dead," Mrs. Nickolson said.

McDonald's Corp. closed its San Ysidro, Calif., restaurant after gunman James Oliver Huberty killed 21 people inside it in 1984.

"I think it's definitely a process of healing and a realization we've got to on with our lives," said Ralph Erben, chairman of San Antonio-based Luby's Cafeterias Inc., which owns 156 restaurants like the one in Killeen.

The company spent $350,000 remodeling the restaurant.

Its deep brown brick exterior was given a lighter shade. A gazebo-like area was removed from the dining room and its green-and-white styling was updated with contemporary colors, deep wood trim and flowered wallpaper.

The floor-to-ceiling glass windows at the front of the building, one of which Hennard drove his truck through, have been replaced. There is now brick to about waist-level and then window.

Erben said he never second-guessed the reopening.

"I think they stayed closed too long," said Mrs. Taylor, who along with her husband, was a regular at Luby's before the shooting.

"I'm sure we'll be back tomorrow," she said.

Killeen Mayor Bob Blair displays an artist's rendering of a proposed memorial to be placed in a Killeen city park. The memorial will be dedicated to the 23 people slain on Oct. 16, 1991 by a lone gunman at the Luby's Cafeteria in Killeen. (AP Laserphoto)

Jazz legend Dizzy Gillespie undergoes surgery

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Dizzy Gillespie's manager says the jazz trumpeter will need up to two months to recover from surgery to remove an abdominal blockage.

Gillespie was resting comfortably this morning at Englewood Hospital, where he had the operation Thursday.

"He is expected to fully recover in six to eight weeks, and to resume his performance schedule thereafter," said his manager, Charles Fishman of Charismic Productions in Washington.

Gillespie, 74, was hospitalized briefly last month in Berkeley, Calif., where he was treated with insulin to control his diabetes.

Dr. Arthur Grossman said he examined Gillespie last week and "realized it was more than his diabetes that was giving him a problem."

The jazz great canceled appearances scheduled next week in England. Gillespie lives in Englewood.

Warren Beatty's bachelor days over, marries Annette Bening

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood heartthrob Warren Beatty says his wedding to "Bugsy" co-star Annette Bening was as private as could be — just them and their 2-month-old daughter.

The marriage was announced by publicist Nancy Seltzer.

"I can confirm they were married not too long ago, but no further details will be forthcoming," she said, moments after talking to the couple. "They sound very happy."

Beatty told Daily Variety columnist Army Archerd the wedding was "just the three of us," counting Kathryn Bening Beatty, who was born Jan. 8.

It's the first marriage for the actor-director-writer-producer, who turns 55 on March 30, the day of the Academy Awards presentation. "Bugsy," which Beatty starred in with Bening, got 10 nominations, including best picture and best actor for Beatty.

Beatty and Miss Bening, 33, became romantically involved during filming of the mob movie. It is her second marriage.

Beatty has been linked with Diane Keaton, Julie Christie, Madonna, Joan Collins, Isabelle Adjani, Leslie Caron, Michelle Phillips, Susan Strasberg, Carly Simon, Barbra Streisand, Faye Dunaway, Jean Seberg, Joni Mitchell and Britt Ekland.

THE SEASON FOR . . .

COLDS AND FEVER

THE COMMON COLD . . . one of the few viruses that man has not conquered with a cure. The only thing that we have come up with so far, are medicines to give us relief. Perhaps, some day, someone will come up with the solution.

There are many spiritual things that we do not know the answers to. These things we must accept on faith.

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law."

Deuteronomy 29:29

God has revealed himself, his son, and his commandments, these are the major things.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere—and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

The Calaways

Calaways to speak at seminar

The Rev. and Mrs. J. Albert Calaway of Springfield, Mo., are scheduled to be guests in a seminar on Sunday through Tuesday at the Briarwood Church, 1800 W. Harvester.

The Calaways are set to speak at 9:30 a.m., 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday. Services on Monday and Tuesday are set for 7:30 p.m.

After 21 years of pastoral ministry, Calaway entered the evangelistic ministry, conducting revivals and seminars to assist the local pastor and families of the church.

The Calaways have had a burden through the trauma associated with their 19-year-old son, who became involved in drugs, alcohol and problems with the law, leading to a prison sentence, according to Pastor Gene Allen.

The couple has appeared on several television programs to share the story. They have also been speaking in public schools and other organizations in many states.

"Colors of Change" is their newly released book co-authored by J. Albert Calaway and Birkaen O'Hamlin. It is the story of their family.

Allen invites the public to the seminar. A nursery will be provided.

Cyclists to trek across country in Bike-Aid '92

This summer six groups of 20 cyclists from around the world are set to take off from Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Austin and Montreal on Bike-Aid '92.

All routes will converge in Washington, D.C., at the end of August. Bike-Aid is an annual transcontinental trek sponsored by the Ørveseas Development Network, a national student based organization, which involves individuals in addressing global problems of poverty and injustice.

Some of the cyclists will be traveling through Pampa in mid-July, said Roxanna Willis, youth minister at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church.

Bike-Aid combines the sweat and determination of cyclists to raise funds and awareness for domestic and international grassroots development initiatives. In celebration of the 500-year anniversary of the Resistance Campaign, Bike-Aid '92 will emphasize Native American awareness by visiting with Native American communities and doing service projects as well as partnering indigenous development projects in North, Central and South America.

In the past six years, 600 cyclists have raised more than $750,000 in support for domestic and international grassroots projects. Riders of all age groups and walks of life have participated in Bike-Aid.

Bike-Aid is recruiting riders for this summer's trip. The application deadline is March 31. For more information, write Bike-Aid '92, 333 Valencia St. Suite 330, San Francisco, Calif. 94103 or call (415) 431-4480. For local information, contact Willis at 665-8933.

Church rebuilt with love, free labor

By AMY KEEN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

OLNEY (AP) — When Jewel Jenkins first started rebuilding a one-room church on a lonely stretch of Texas 79 to keep a promise to her dying sister, she had hoped to be finished by winter.

But nine months and a lot of sweat later, Jenkins, who is in her 70s, doesn't worry about the missed deadline.

"Oh, honey, I don't care when it gets finished, as long as it gets finished," she said. She spoke over the buzzing and pounding of hammers, drills and saws that broke the quiet of the springlike day.

Members of the First Presbyterian Church in Fort Worth had driven 105 miles to help her, bringing donated double doors and a window. They were among the most recent group to assist Jenkins with her labor of love.

The Ruby Chapel was named for Jenkins' sister, Ruby Guess, who was a missionary at the tiny Church of God in Christ. The congregation dwindled to less than a dozen when Guess fell ill and was unable to recruit visiting preachers. Before Guess died in 1988, Jenkins promised she would keep the church going.

But Jenkins was busy after that, taking care of Guess' ailing husband until his death many months later. Soon after, Jenkins became a widow herself. During that period, no one had tended the church, which has no owner of record.

Jenkins never forgot the promise to her sister, but a storm and three years of neglect had taken their toll on the church. She paid for a new roof and tackled as much as she could with her Social Security income and money from selling her peaches.

Word of her mission spread, and about a dozen volunteers have helped with the work since early fall. Others have donated items ranging from a new gas heater to boxes of hymn books. Contributions totaling about $2,000 have come from as far away as St. Louis.

Jenkins has carefully kept track of the donations, recording addresses in a scrapbook so she can mail notes of appreciation. She keeps snapshots of the work in another album.

The building now sports new white paint and a hand-lettered sign that says "Ruby Chapel Community Church." Jenkins added "Community Church" to the name because "Everybody has helped with this," she said.

The church has a new floor and insulated walls. A restroom, with a sink from the Jenkins' home, was built by Mark Slagle of Arlington, whom Jenkins calls her most faithful volunteer. He often brings his mother, other relatives or friends when he drives up to help almost every other weekend, she said.

Slagle, 31, was at work building his own house yesterday in Burleson, said his mother, Merle Slagle, 54.

"He had about three months there before he got the financing for his house, and he had some time on his hands," Merle Slagle said from her home in Arlington. When he saw a newspaper story about Jenkins, "he said, 'Mom, I really feel called to go up there and help this lady, and do you want to go with me?' We're a family that helps each other, so I did."

But their work is not finished, she said. They plan to help finish the walls and carpet the floor.

Jenkins is grateful. "They relieved me of a lot of the work. I'm telling you, it's just been wonderful," she said Friday as she sat outside on a stack of old paneling. "It's just amazing how things have happened, from where we came from. I was trying, but I wasn't getting very far by myself."

Jenkins tried to stay out of the way and offered occasional advice Friday as Rush Klein, Ken Wilson, Ralph Kimbrough and Phil Muller installed a side window and double doors at the front of the church.

Klein said the men were moved by Jenkins' struggle to rebuild.

"Ralph and I came up in December to kind of get a feel for what was going on," he said. They realized then that much more work was ahead for the church. "It was falling to pieces," he said.

Ken Wilson, left, and Phil Muller, both from First Presbyterian Church of Fort Worth, anchor a door frame in the Ruby Chapel Community Church in Olney.

Jenkins walked through the building, showing where she would like to put a window air-conditioner and describing the type of light fixtures she is saving to buy.

She showed where she'll put a piano that a church in Olney has promised, and lovingly ran a finger across a new donated pulpit. She has no idea who will stand behind it, however.

"I did hear once from an evangelist minister in Fort Worth. I sure would like to get one before we open up," Jenkins said. She said she believes that God will send a preacher if she completes her task.

She spoke with more assurance when asked whether members will return when the doors are opened.

"Oh, I think lots of people will be here," she said, adding that she gets frequent queries about when the church will be ready. She swept her hand across the room. "I think it will be full."

Until then, she said: "I just want to thank all these people, because I never would have got this done. Oh, Lord, I never would."

Local women to participate in worldwide observance

Local members of the Relief Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are set to join with similar congregations around the world on Tuesday to commemorate the organization's 150th anniversary.

The Relief Society, one of the longest continuing women's organizations of its kind, has 3.1 million members internationally. It is dedicated to women's education, development and support.

As part of the worldwide celebration, the Pampa Ward Relief Society chapter will be participating in the three main focuses of the sesquicentennial celebration which will be shared by the worldwide membership.

The principal activities planned include:

- local service projects;
- a live international satellite broadcast linking women's congregations in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Australia, England, France, Germany, Japan, Korea, Mexico, New Zealand, the Philippines, South Africa, and Taiwan;
- and a renewed effort to work within the community to improve literacy levels and proficiency.

Among the local service efforts planned, the Pampa Ward membership is involved in the "Adopt a Park" program in Pampa. This project serves the purposes of giving the local ward an opportunity to help the community by maintaining and eventually enhancing the park and by allowing adults, teenagers and children the opportunity to serve the community, according to Barbara Hanks, president of the Pampa Ward Relief Society chapter.

The Relief Society homemaking meetings are held at 6:30 p.m. on the second Tuesday of each month. One of the focuses is to be of service in the community.

The live satellite broadcast is scheduled for noon Saturday. It will feature church and Relief Society leaders, who will speak to congregations assembled around the world. They will be joined in the telecast by local Relief Society chapter presidents from Australia, Germany, Korea, Mexico and South Africa, who will speak in their native languages about Relief Society's mission. Translation of their remarks will be provided to viewers.

Relief Society President Elaine L. Jack will also deliver a message from Nauvoo, Ill., where the organization was founded. The Relief Society will focus on literacy improvements as another element of its 150th anniversary celebration.

Hanks said, "As a church we strongly believe in a good, well-rounded education. This enhances our self image. We feel it is important to be self-reliant and that literacy — the skill of reading and writing — is a tool of self-reliance. We have several of our mothers who volunteer their time to help in the Pampa schools."

The local chapter is dedicated to spiritual, temporal and emotional development of its members, Hanks noted. It meets weekly and welcomes women of any denomination to its meetings and activities.

For more information, contact Hanks at 665-3159, Linda Davis at 665-1903, or Nena Grilley at 883-2021 (White Deer).

Salvation Army sends delegates to meeting

The Salvation Army recently sent seven delegates to the Salvation Army Youth Councils held March 6-8 in San Antonio.

Those attending were Brian Rossiter, Steven Rossiter, Misty Welch, Cindy Welch, Glenda Edwards (chaperone), Lt. Ernest Lozano, commanding officer, and Mrs. Ernest Lozano, corps officer.

The group heard many presentations, including a Christian group called "Fortress" and a multi-media presentation called "Breaking Free."

The Pampa group presented the song "Tell The World" before more than 600 delegates.

The local Salvation Army unit was the recipient of a Youth Achievement Award for youth work, which is the first such award for the Pampa Corps since 1982.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a secret ballot, 64 percent of members of Pullen Memorial Baptist Church voted to approve the blessing of a requested same-sex union of two homosexual men.

The congregation is part of the Southern Baptist Convention, whose executive committee earlier initiated a proposal to bar from participation any local church affirming homosexual activity.

Such a step would depart from the denomination's longtime policy of self-determined autonomy of each congregation.

In the Pullen ballot, 94 percent favored full church membership for homosexuals.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel's embassy presented its 1992 civil rights awards to Rabbi David Saperstein, director of Reform Judaism's social-action center here, and to Dorothy Height, president of the National Council for Negro Women. In connection with the award, trees were planted in their names in the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Forest in Israel.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A representative of U.S. Catholic bishops says that a proposed bill before Congress on freedom of choice on abortion would give this country the most anti-abortion policy in the Western world.

"No nation establishes abortion throughout pregnancy as a fundamental right," attorney Helen Alvarez, director of pro-life activities for the bishops, told a house committee. She said the bill's provisions, mandating abortion on demand, is exceeded only by China's "coerced abortion policy."

NEW YORK (AP) — Because of recent killings of Christians in Zaire, U.S. Protestant leaders have urged President Bush to sever relations with that African nation and publicly ask its president, Mobutu Sese-Seko, to step down.

The appeal was made in letters to Bush by the Rev. Syngman Rhee, president of the National Council of Churches; the Rev. Robert Harman, world mission executive of the United Methodist Church, and the Rev. Clifton Kirkpatrick, global mission director for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

They said at least 42 were killed and more than 100 wounded when Mobutu's troops opened fire on thousands of Christians gathered peacefully Feb. 16 in the capital of Kinshasa to ask resumption of a conference on political reform.

Put Your Family In Its Place.

Quite often our day to day pressures forge their way into our lives devouring not only our time, but our strength, our love and understanding among our family members. Belonging to a Community of Faith provides a solid source of strength for ourselves and those we love. Sometimes it really helps to bring it all into focus if you put your family in its place.

Violence escalating as referendum nears

By GREG MYRE
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Twenty-three blacks died today in the worst factional violence this year, and bombs damaged two governing party offices ahead of next week's apartheid referendum, police said.

Also, Nelson Mandela said any attempt to reimpose apartheid would mean civil war and a new international boycott of South Africa.

If the right wing "comes to power and carries out its policies, civil war is unavoidable," the African National Congress leader told a news conference. "The forces of peace inside and outside the country are too strong to allow the return of oppression."

Violence in black townships has escalated sharply this month, with about 100 deaths in the past 10 days, according to the independent Human Rights Commission.

Some black opposition groups claim the violence has been orchestrated to undermine white support for a March 17 referendum on ending apartheid.

Mandela, who has previously accused police of instigating fighting, said he did not believe President F.W. de Klerk's government was behind the new violence because it would hurt its chances of winning the referendum. De Klerk has promised to resign if the referendum is rejected.

Eighteen people were killed and 22 injured when rival groups clashed early today with guns, spears and knives in the Umlazi township outside the Indian Ocean city of Durban, police Col. Moses Khanyile said.

Many of the dead were women and children, residents told the independent South African Press Association. Two victims, a mother with a child strapped to her back, both suffered fatal hack wounds to the head.

The ANC and the Inkatha Freedom Party, the two leading black groups, have been battling for supremacy in the area for years.

An ANC official, Bheki Cele, said his organization had warned police on Thursday that trouble was likely in the township.

Many residents fled the area for their safety; while police and army reinforcements were sent to Umlazi, part of the KwaZulu black homeland.

Meanwhile, police said seven blacks were thrown from a moving train this morning near the Riverlea station west of Johannesburg. Four people died and three were injured. At a station south of Johannesburg, police found the body of a man with stab wounds.

The one-day death toll of 23 is worst in political violence this year.

A bomb exploded before dawn today in the northeastern town of Nylstroom, a white Right-wing stronghold, slightly damaging an office of the governing National Party, police said.

In the nearby town of Cullinan, a bus used as a National Party recruiting office was bombed and burned, police added.

De Klerk's National Party has come under attack several times this week, presumably by right-wing whites who have vowed resistance to de Klerk's plans to end apartheid and have the country's 5 million whites share power with the 30-million blacks.

No one has claimed responsibility for the attacks.

(AP Laserphoto) John DiScala poses Thursday amidst the 12 million pounds of used clothing currently stored in a Hunts Point, Bronx, N.Y., warehouse. DiScala is giving it all away to anybody who wants it — for free. But he's finding out it's tougher to give than to receive.

Take some clothes, please!

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — John DiScala has used clothes: tons of T-shirts, a plenitude of pants, an abundance of underwear. It's free to anybody who wants it. But he's discovered it's tougher to give than to receive.

DiScala's donated 2 million pounds to the city's homeless shelters: A plane load went to Puerto Rico. An Indian reservation in South Dakota is getting a shipment, as is a small Louisiana town.

Homeless people, poor families and church groups come in daily to scale the Apparel Alps, helping themselves to clothes piled 20 feet high.

Which still leaves him with millions of pounds of clothes, stacked to the ceiling and packing a 60,000-square-foot Bronx warehouse. He's hoping it will go to good use.

"There are so many people out there, people who have no clothes, really," said DiScala as he toured the warehouse Thursday. "You think it can't happen in this country, but it is happening."

DiScala, 39, of Staten Island, bought about 12 million pounds of used clothes for $600,000 after an auction last year. He soon realized he could sell just a quarter of the clothes and still turn a profit.

So he turned philanthropist, opening his doors in December and giving clothes to anyone who would lug them away. DiScala figured in these tough economic times, it would be easy.

Sorry, John.

"I'm a little annoyed with the politicians out there. Nobody wants to arrange to take this stuff. They're too involved in the primaries or getting elected," said DiScala. "It's a funny world we live in."

What kind of clothes are we talking about?

Stuff that's in style, out of style, plaid, paisley, polka dot, striped, denim, leather, polyester. There's a varsity jacket from Henry Ford High School, a corduroy coat with "Home Sweet Home" stitched on the back, 10,000 U.S. Army uniforms.

As DiScala walks around the enormous bales of clothing, he's approached by an assortment of people: a homeless guy complaining about poor selection, two men from New Jersey looking to ship clothes to Croatia, a clergyman interested in sending garb to West Africa.

"You can take whatever you want," DiScala tells them. "You got a truck? Bring it out. You can fill it up."

The Rev. Alfonzo Brown of the Church of God in Christ Jesus rummages through a pile of jeans and overalls, looking to bring the good stuff back to his Queens church.

"I'm giving these clothes to needy people, and Lord knows, there's a lot of needy people," said Brown. "I think he's doing a terrific thing."

DiScala acknowledged not all the clothing is top quality; some items are just rags, he said (and he's right). But there are plenty of things that would look fine on somebody down on their luck.

"For us, these clothes are not so good," said DiScala. "But for people without any clothes, they're not so bad."

For more information on the giveaway, call 718-948-6626 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. EST.

New education plan to measure knowledge, not classroom time

By AARON WATSON
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania public high school students could become the first in the nation to be measured by what they know, not by how much time they spend in the classroom.

Board of Education members say a new plan they approved Thursday would not necessarily make students smarter, but could make them better thinkers.

Some parents oppose it, saying it imposes moral values they don't automatically condone. Others say a test that is part of the program asks intrusive questions, including about how much TV the students watch and how much their parents help with homework.

The plan would eliminate the graduation requirement of completing a prescribed number of courses in a certain amount of time. Instead, students would have to master a set of learning goals, called outcomes.

Along with requirements in such courses as math, science and English, there are sections on "wellness and fitness," "personal, family and community living" and "citizenship." One of the roughly 60 outcomes requires students to understand and appreciate others.

The system also includes new standardized tests, an increase in vocational training and a greater emphasis on foreign language.

It would allow students to learn at different speeds and let districts eliminate standard grading systems. That means more students could graduate earlier, while others might have to stay longer.

School districts would be able to design their own curricula and would be responsible for assessing student progress.

The plan must be reviewed by the House and Senate education committees.

"Pennsylvania has become the No. 1 state of what is a national movement to reorient the emphasis in instruction from time to what students know," state Education Secretary Donald Carroll said.

Joseph Bard, the board's commissioner for elementary and secondary education, said every other state is considering similar approaches but has not yet acted on them.

The public has contributed to hundreds of changes in the plan as it has evolved over the past two years. But some parents complain that they didn't get enough say.

"We are tired of our kids being used as educational guinea pigs," Cathy Little, of Newville, told the board before it approved the plan.

"Those are values they're trying to introduce," said Lorae Spuhler of Lewisberry, York County. "Since they took God out of the school, I don't know what the moral base is anymore."

Bard disagreed. "It's maybe time to say that schools do get involved with values and children," he said. "But are we trying to take the responsibility from parents of how (children) should think? Absolutely not."

He said students did not have to answer test questions their parents considered intrusive.

Turkish premier announces new cease-fire

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey today announced another cease-fire between Armenia and Azerbaijan in their four-year battle over the enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh, but new fighting was also reported.

Prime Minister Suleyman Demirel said he received word of the truce from the Turkish ambassador in Baku, the capital of Azerbaijan, who in turn was told of the cease-fire by Azeri leaders. Turkey, ethnically close to the Azeris, has been trying to mediate.

"I have just learned that the firing has stopped. I hope it (the truce) will continue," Demirel said at midday.

Efforts to forge a cease-fire between the two ex-Soviet republics have also been made by the Commonwealth of Independent States, Iran, Britain, and France. But previous cease-fires have not halted the former Soviet Union's bloodiest conflict for long.

A temporary cease-fire was reached Wednesday between leaders of Azerbaijan, Armenia and Nagorno-Karabakh to exchange hostages and recover dead. But it lasted less than a day.

An Associated Press reporter in Agdam, in western Azerbaijan, today reported that the fighting was continuing, even as word of Demirel's announcement was learned.

Azerbaijan said Thursday that Agdam came under heavy shelling, killing at least 25 people and shattering a cease-fire worked out hours earlier.

What to do when hot water becomes frigid

By READER'S DIGEST BOOKS
For AP Special Features

You're getting ready to take a nice hot bath. You turn on the hot water, and it's lukewarm — or worse, cold. Do not despair.

Here are some tips that can help pinpoint the cause and make quick repairs, if necessary:

Not Enough Hot Water
— This is usually caused by using too much hot water at one time and not giving the heater enough time to reheat a new supply. The easiest solution is to space activities requiring hot water. Don't take a shower, run your dishwasher and do your laundry all at the same time.

Also check the heater thermostat. The usual setting is 140 degrees Fahrenheit, but in very cold weather you may need to set it higher if the pipes pass through unheated spaces.

Check the hot water faucets. They may be leaking and need to be repaired.

If you still don't get enough hot water, it may be time to call for service.

No Hot Water — Electric Water Heaters

First, make sure the heater's master switch is on. If it is, check the circuit breaker or fuse on your electrical system that controls power to the water heater.

If the heater is getting power, try resetting it. Remove the access panel and cut away the insulation with a sharp knife. Then push the reset button located on the high temperature cutoff.

If it starts the unit, replace the insulation and the access panel.

If it doesn't, get professional service to check the thermostats and heating elements. A licensed electrician may also have to check if your wiring is adequate.

No Hot Water — Gas Water Heaters

First, check if the master switch to the heater is on. Then, check the pilot light. If necessary, relight it according to instructions on the unit.

If the pilot will not stay lit, remove the pilot shield and clean the orifice with a thin copper wire. Do not use a needle, paper clip or other hard metal object that may enlarge the orifice.

Once the pilot is lit, reset the master switch. If the problem persists, seek professional help.

Water Is Too Hot — Gas and Electric

Lower the thermostat. If that doesn't help, call for service.

Water Is Discolored or Heater Is Noisy

This means that sediment has built up in the unit. You will have to drain the tank to flush out the sediment. Here's how: First, turn off the master switch on the heater. Close the water inlet valve and open a hot water tap at a sink to equalize pressure as the tank drains. Hook up a hose to the draincock and run it to a floor drain or outdoors. The open end of the hose must lie below the level of the draincock for full draining of the hose. Open the draincock and let the water drain out, taking the sediment with it.

Now reverse the procedure. Close the draincock, disconnect the hose. Open the inlet valve to fill the tank and when water runs from the sink tap left open, close that. Turn the heater's master switch on, and in the case of a gas heater, relight the pilot.

If the water remains discolored, the anode rod and water supply pipes will have to be checked, and in the case of electric heaters, the heating elements may have to be cleaned. These jobs can be done by skilled homeowners, but they are best left to the experts.

NOTE: Every month or so it's a good idea to drain a couple of gallons of water from the heater. This washes out the sediment and keeps it from building up. To drain only this amount from the heater, place a bucket under the draincock, and open it up to drain off some water.

Scars and blemishes lend character to attic finds

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Features

Furniture whose past can be read in its scars and blemishes is in vogue, so try polishing up a piece from the attic or second-hand store.

No special skill is needed to remove the grime. Apply a good quality furniture cream and rub, says John Johnson, a woodworker whose retail business, The Woodworkers Store in Norwalk, Conn., caters to hobbyists.

"The next step beyond pure amateur is easier than many people think," he says, "because there are new products on the market, and a great deal of help is available."

A do-it-yourselfer can go into a specialty store such as his and see a variety of finishes — lacquer, wax, oil, color stains, flat and shiny varnish.

"The most desirable old wood furniture has the original finish, even if it's faded or unevenly worn, so don't wipe out history by stripping furniture chemically," he advises. "Many times you don't have to strip down to bare wood in order to improve the looks of an old piece."

New products specifically for amateurs include spray-on paints that create special effects. Plasti-Kote Co. Inc. of Medina, Ohio, for example, has a faux stone finish in 12 colors and a crackle glaze in six colors. The stone look can go over just about anything — wood, metal, wicker, and plastic. But the crackle finish must be tested first because it can lift some finishes. A color wash in six shades can be brushed onto unfinished or stripped wood.

"People do chairs, tables and cabinet fronts, but also refrigerators, bath fixtures, picture frames, file cabinets, lamps," says Judy Vorthman, merchandise coordinator of Plasti-Kote. "Most people are redoing attic finds, but they're also doing kitchen cabinets, bathrooms and fireplaces."

Easy-to-use products are now sold by a number of companies through a variety of retailers — mass merchandisers, home centers and large craft stores.

Since refinishing is new to many people, the companies are trying to get the consumers' attention with in-store videos and promotional literature. Plasti-Kote, for example, has a demonstration video available to stores.

"With refinishing, one picture is worth a thousand words," Johnson says. He stocks videos and schedules seminars one Saturday a month.

Another spur to redoing furniture at home is that products, such as those made by Behlen's, once available only to professionals, are now marketed to do-it-yourselfers.

"Our mindset is professional products that an amateur can use," says Jonathan Kemp, national sales manager of H. Behlen & Bros., of Amsterdam, N.Y. The company, which has been making professional finishing products since 1888, is now packaging smaller sizes for the hobbyist.

"We used to sell products in gallon sizes only; now we market quarts and pints," Kemp says.

To aid consumers, Behlen added information to product labels, published point-of-sale literature and began in-store demonstrations. Kemp, for example, spoke about finishing products at Johnson's store in January.

"Instead of playing golf, professionals and managerial types are going to the next level ... and becoming more serious about their woodworking projects — even buying woodworking machinery and exotic woods," Kemp says.

But for the times when doing it yourself just won't do, look for a professional.

Wood furniture, no matter how disreputable looking, can be put into surprisingly good shape via expert stripping, repairing and refinishing, says John Dotson, a furniture refinisher in Wilton, Conn. He estimates a small chest in bad shape might cost up to $300 to redo, a dining chair about $125.

"Compared to the cost of buying a new piece," he says, "repairs are often a bargain."

Dotson says the best way to find a good refinisher is to shop around.

"Get personal references, compare prices and insist on looking at some finished work by the person in question," he says. "The price quoted is not necessarily a reflection of quality."

Coed's mom wants answers about school's policy on rape

DEAR ABBY: Please help. I don't know how to handle this situation. My daughter is a freshman at a Midwestern coed college. She was assigned to a coed floor in a dormitory with 11 girls and 64 boys.

The first week of school, a girl she knows who lives across campus was raped in her dorm room. Campus police were notified. The boy admitted the rape. His "punishment": He was moved out of the victim's dorm, across campus, and onto my daughter's coed floor!

I am outraged! I definitely want to do something, but my daughter and her roommate are upset because they feel my involvement would label them, and the boy's friends would harass them. The roommate won't tell her parents because she is afraid her parents will make her move back home.

These girls are young and naive, but I have to respect her wishes. Since I am new to the state, I have no contacts or support.

I know that local police should have been involved and the victim should have pressed charges, but neither was done. I am deeply concerned for my daughter's safety; the rapist should have at least been moved to an all-male floor! Please tell me what to do.

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: It is unfortunate that the local police were not notified immediately.

If the young man admitted to the rape, he should have been expelled. And, if your daughter is afraid to speak up because of possible harassment, you should contact the president of the university and request a copy of the school's policies about rape. Also, ask for the university's explanation for its action in this case. Finally, inquire about the school's programs for educating students about their vulnerability to this crime. If there are no programs, something should be started.

DEAR ABBY: I sure enjoyed those letters from people who told about receiving gifts that had telltale signs of having been used. My cousin received a cookie jar as a wedding shower gift. When she got it home, she noticed some cookie crumbs at the bottom.

A friend of mine told me she received a steam iron for a wedding present. It was in a regular carton, taped shut like brand-new items come in, but when she took it out of the carton to use it, it had water in it! I'm sure others have had similar experiences. Have you, Abby?

ME IN LANSING, MICH.

DEAR ME: Only once. I bought a brand-new purse, and when I got it home, I found a quarter in the coin purse!

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. ## Indiana State Museum capitalizes on past INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Buttons and bows, posters and pictures vie for attention in an exhibition on politics at the Indiana State Museum, featuring a cast of colorful characters who have drawn national headlines.

Four private collectors offered memorabilia, the rest of the exhibit came from the museum's collection of some 2,000 political items, and virtually all the major names in Indiana's political past are represented.

Among them are: Wendell Wilkie, 1940 presidential candidate whose "No Third Terms" buttons attacked Franklin D. Roosevelt's try for a third term; President Benjamin Harrison, who lost the popular vote to incumbent Grover Cleveland but was chosen by electors amid cries of vote buying; Thomas R. Marshall, vice president under Woodrow Wilson, who coined the phrase, "What the country needs is a good 5-cent cigar."

One rare poster shows Warren T. McCray in his successful gubernatorial campaign in 1920. Near the end of his term he was convicted of using the mail to defraud and sentenced to federal prison in Atlanta.

The slogan on his poster? "We need his kind in office." The exhibit opened earlier this month at the museum; it will run through June 14, 1992.

Texas Parks and Wildlife meeting 'a huge success'

The much-ballyhooed March 2nd public meeting conducted by Texas Parks and Wildlife was a huge success with a standing room crowd of over 100 concerned citizens. The meeting had to be moved from the Commissioners Court to a bigger courtroom. The TPW surely were impressed with the number of interested taxpayers.

Most were there to talk about the fishing conditions at Lake Meredith, but several avid hunters used the forum to get some answers on proposed changes in the 1992-93 hunting regulations.

The most interesting exchange on hunting concerned the proposal to ban bowhunters from carrying firearms. BEST LOGIC of the night: the international signal of distress is three gun shots, not three arrows flying in the air.

For the fishermen it was a night of a small victory and several disappointments.

GREAT NEWS for local fish: After conduct cove kills as recently as the summer of '91, TPW regional biologist JOE KRAAI of Canyon, promised "NO cove kills are scheduled for Panhandle lakes in 1992." Upon hearing the good news, that great stone face, PLAYA PETE, almost smiled. It took six months to get that answer from Mr. Kraai.

The TPW disclosed that the proposed slot limit protecting smallmouth bass will allow an angler to keep only three smallmouth-either under 12 inches or over 15 inches. The current limit is five and each must be over 14 inches.

Since last fall, Kraai has changed his mind concerning the need to lower the walleye length limit. Minimum size will remain 16 inches, at least for another year.

HIGHLIGHT of the meeting: After testimony from numerous anglers lamenting the fishing conditions at Meredith, up stepped part-time walleye guide MELVIN STOVALL of Fritch, who claimed that "LAKE MEREDITH is a walleye fisherman's paradise." Melvin backed up his claim with a cooler full of keeper walleyes. It is nice that a guide can catch fish, but it would be better if the average angler, who cannot be on the lake twice a week, could share that success.

Final decisions on all fishing and hunting rules will be made by the TPW commissioners at their summer meeting and will be effective as of September 1, 1992.

SUMMARY: Sadly, the TPW rejected all suggestions from the public on the need to improve fishing in the Panhandle. They continue to ignore the facts: local bass, walleye, and striped anglers are being forced into spending their money in New Mexico, Oklahoma, or down-state.

NEW WEEK—my interview with Mr. Walleye, MELVIN STOVALL.

Spurs defuse Rockets, 104-98

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Terry Cummings was hot and Hakeem Olajuwon was not.

Cummings scored a season-high 31 points Thursday night to lead the Spurs to a 104-98 victory over the Houston Rockets.

Olajuwon managed only six points as he missed 11 of his 13 shots from the field and snapped a streak of 199 games in double figures.

"Cummings has been a rock for us lately," said San Antonio coach Bob Bass. "He has been so strong. We went to him a lot in the first half and he came through for us."

Rod Strickland added 12 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter and David Robinson scored nine of his 15 in the final period as the Spurs claimed their ninth consecutive home-court victory.

"It wasn't a pretty game, but we were able to win," Robinson said. "I thought we played real tough on the defensive end."

Although Vernon Maxwell scored 24 points and Kenny Smith and Otis Thorpe each had 20, it was Robinson's effort against Hakeem Olajuwon that was the key to the game.

"It is disappointing to lose. That's one thing good about the NBA, there's always tomorrow," Olajuwon said.

The last time Olajuwon scored fewer than 10 points was last April 14 at Utah when he had nine.

Olajuwon and Robinson were both 0-for-3 in the first half as San Antonio built a 47-36 lead. The gap had been 47-27 with 2:56 left in the second quarter, but Houston scored the final nine points of the half.

The Rockets reeled off five more points to start the third quarter, drawing within six. Houston finally forced a tie midway through the third quarter and still was within two at the 11:43 mark of the fourth, 67-65.

But Robinson finally got unleashed, scoring five consecutive points to trigger an 11-0 rally and Houston Rockets forward Otis Thorpe (33) drives against San Antonio Spurs center David Robinson (50) and Paul Pressey, right, in San Antonio Thursday.

San Antonio led 78-65 with 9:00 to play.

The Rockets never came closer than six the rest of the way.

"That was a game of streaks," Bass said. "We would go on a streak where we couldn't miss a shot and they couldn't make one, and then they would go on a streak where they wouldn't miss."

The victory kept San Antonio one-half game behind Phoenix in the battle for fourth place in the West. Houston slid back into a virtual tie in the conference standings with the Los Angeles Lakers for the last two playoff spots.

The Spurs, who have four more games left on their current homestand, are 14-1 in San Antonio since Bass replaced Larry Brown.

"I give them credit," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "It was a big game for them. They are very quick defensively and took us out of things."

San Antonio moved 15 games over the .500 mark for the first time this season.

Record crowds watch UIL 'miracles'

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

Unfortunately it went in," said Shell, who also scored the winning points in overtime with a pair of free throws.

Pampa's Cederick Wilbon missed a chance at victory when his jumper with 3 seconds left hit the rim and bounced away. Wilbon also missed two free throws in the last 38 seconds of the fourth quarter.

Glen Senclair led Georgetown (29-8) with 17 points in its final four debut.

Pampa (33-3) saw its season end in disappointment for the second straight year. At last year's tourney, Pampa was ousted in triple overtime by San Antonio-Alamo Heights.

The other Class 4A semifinal also was close, but Dallas South Oak Cliff scored seven unanswered points in the last minute to beat Austin McCallum 65-56.

"Our kids did what they were supposed to do down at the end. Our kids hung tough," said South Oak Cliff coach Chris Dyer.

McCallum overcame a 40-26 half-time deficit to lead 54-50 with 3 minutes left in the game. But their comeback stalled just when South Oak Cliff heated up.

"We have nothing to be ashamed of. The sun will rise tomorrow," said McCallum coach Don Caldwell.

South Oak Cliff (33-2), playing in its seventh UIL tourney, will appear in its first final since 1977.

McCallum ended the year 28-9 with its first final four game since 1966.

The appearance of Central Texas teams Georgetown and Austin McCallum helped sell a first-day record 28,253 tickets at the Erwin Center.

Even more fans may show up Saturday to watch what could be the miracle team — Class 3A's Groesbeck, the only undefeated team left in the state and another team in its first state tournament.

The 18-0 Goats have played fewer games than any other team because they didn't start the season until after their football team finished — with a state title.

Should the basketball team also win the crown, it would be only the second double-championship school year by a Texas team. Dumas in 1961-62 holds the lone honor.

Groesbeck was led to its 70-60 victory over Clarksville (26-10) by Brandon Bennett and Lenoy Jones, both of whom also are football stars. Bennett scored 23 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, while Jones had 22 points and 11 boards.

Stafford defeated Clint 58-52 in the other Class 3A semifinal, but the Spartans had to withstand a 19-3 fourth-quarter run by the Lions.

Clint (25-8) was making its final four debut, while Stafford (29-8) was trying to erase the memory of a 97-52 loss to Jefferson in last year's semifinals.

In Class A, Petersburg enjoyed its tournament debut by defeating Weatherford Brock 77-62.

Tim Fox helped the Buffaloes (29-4) cruise into the finals by scoring eight of his 16 points during an early fourth-quarter run.

Fox also grabbed a game-high 16 rebounds. Doug Porter scored 14 points and hauled in 10 boards.

John Walker led Brock (30-7) with 16 points and Ernie Enax grabbed 11 rebounds. The Eagles were making their first tourney appearance since 1973.

Laneville earned a spot in its first title game since 1952 by defeating Dime Box 84-72.

The Yellowjackets, making only their second appearance since 1956, are 36-1. The Longhorns, another first-time semifinalist, finished the year 31-6.

UCLA clinches title

By The Associated Press

While most major conferences hold their postseason tournaments, the Pac-10 and Big Ten are still playing meaningful regular-season games.

Eighth-ranked UCLA clinched a tie for the Pac-10 title Thursday night by beating No. 2 Arizona 89-81. The Bruins can win the outright championship on Saturday if they beat Arizona State or Southern Cal losses to Arizona.

"We've got to beat Arizona State," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said. "We don't want to tie. ... We've got to get our emotions under control and play another ballgame."

No. 10 Southern Cal, which beat Arizona State 81-66 Thursday night, can gain a share of the league title with a win over Arizona and a UCLA loss to Arizona State.

UCLA is 24-4 overall and 15-2 in the league, while Southern Cal is 22-5 and 14-3. Arizona is 24-5 and 13-4.

"This year, UCLA has not lost the games it shouldn't lose," Arizona coach Lute Olson said. "In past years, they've lost games that they should have won."

In the Big Ten, fourth-ranked Indiana routed Wisconsin 66-41 to regain a share of the league lead with Ohio State.

Indiana and Ohio State are both 14-3 in the conference. Ohio State ends its regular season at Minnesota on Saturday, while the Hoosiers finish against Purdue on Sunday.

Indiana beat Wisconsin despite shooting a season-low 35 percent from the field. The Hoosiers made up for it by hitting 26 of 29 free throws.

"Our shooting remains a tremendous puzzle for us," coach Bob Knight said. The Big Ten, Pac-10 and Ivy League are the only conferences that don't use a postseason tournament to determine their automatic bids to the NCAA tournament. In those three leagues, the regular-season champion gets the automatic berth. Princeton already has won the Ivy League title.

No. 22 Massachusetts earned its first NCAA bid in 30 years Thursday night by beating West Virginia 97-91 to win the Atlantic-10 tournament.

Maryland beat Clemson 81-75 in the opener of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, while Boston College downed Providence 78-68 and Miami upset Pittsburgh 83-71 in the first round of the Big East tournament.

3 Mets players accused of sexually assaulting woman

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — Three members of the New York Mets have been accused of sexually assaulting a woman last year near the team's spring training camp, police say.

The Mets players were not identified by St. Lucie police on Thursday, and the club did not disclose their names.

"I have no comment on the report," vice president Al Harazin said.

The woman, in her late 20s and a resident of New York state, filed a complaint on March 3 about an alleged sexual battery which occurred sometime during the end of March 1991," said a statement released by spokesman Lt. Dwight Hart.

"The allegations are that three individuals, who are believed to be members of the New York Mets baseball team, committed the assault," the statement said.

The woman is a seasonal visitor to Port St. Lucie, the Mets' spring training home, Hart said.

Police had not determined the exact location of the alleged assault, but believe it happened within the city limits of Port St. Lucie, a coastal city about 50 miles north of West Palm Beach.

"The one thing that disturbs me about the complaint is the timing," Port St. Lucie mayor James Lawless said. "It's a year removed from the time it allegedly happened."

"We will, of course, check it out completely," he said. "If in fact there was an offense, then that can be dealt with."

Hart told The Port St. Lucie Tribune "the investigation is in its infant stages. There's certainly a lot of work to do in a case of this type."

The report was circulated around the Mets' camp around 5:30 p.m., and the team held several closed-door meetings. Mets players and officials said they were under orders not to talk about the matter.

"I'm not going to comment at all," manager Jeff Torborg said after a 6-5 victory over Montreal. "I'm not supposed to say anything about it."

Asked how he would deal with the team's first crisis of the spring, the first-year manager shook his head.

"I have no comment," he said.

AUSTIN (AP) — A miracle shot, a chance for a miracle season and victories by three teams debuting at the boys state high school tournament highlighted the opening day of the championship.

A record crowd was in attendance Thursday for the Class A, 2A and 3A semifinals at the 72nd annual University Interscholastic League event.

The tourney continues today with the Class 2A and 5A semifinals.

By virtue of victories Thursday, Laneville and Petersburg will meet Saturday for the Class A title while Stafford and Groesbeck will duel in 3A. The 4A clash will pit Georgetown and Dallas South Oak Cliff.

The last semifinal played Thursday proved to be the best as Georgetown downed Pampa 65-64 in overtime.

Georgetown's Matt Shell forced the extra period with a 16-foot jumper with 2 seconds left in regulation.

"I saw the ball on the floor and I knew there were only 8 seconds left when it was shot. I just picked it up, threw it up in the air and for-

By The Associated Press

Dave Stewart is trying something new.

Stewart, trying a new delivery for the first time in his 11-year career, pitched five strong innings in the Oakland Athletics' 8-5 exhibition victory over San Diego Thursday at Phoenix.

The right-hander gave up three runs on four hits, but said his new delivery felt comfortable.

A's pitching coach Dave Duncan had the right-hander make a major change because he felt Stewart was telegraphing pitches to opposing hitters last year.

Baseball Roundup

Stewart had always brought his hands above his head to start his delivery. Now he starts his windup by bringing his hands just up under his chin.

"Different," Stewart said. "A couple of times I was thinking about going over my head and had to catch myself. It was comfortable, but in your mind you visualize certain things and I always pictured myself going over my head."

Duncan was pleased with Stewart's effort. The pitcher was only 11-11 last year after winning 20 games or more in each of the four previous seasons.

"I think this is a strong step in the right direction," Duncan said. "I watched pretty close and I couldn't pick up anything."

Pirates 3, Orioles 2

At Bradenton, Fla., Kirk Gibson made his debut with Pittsburgh as the Pirates beat Baltimore. Gibson started in right field and was 1-for-2 with a double and a walk. He was acquired in a trade from Kansas City for left-handed pitcher Neal Heaton on Tuesday.

Braves 4, Tigers 0

At Lakeland, Fla., David Justice hit his second home run of the spring and Sid Bream had a two-run double for Atlanta.

Winner Pete Smith allowed three hits over three innings for the Braves. Bill Gullickson gave up two hits in three innings for Detroit — including the homer to Justice — and took the loss.

Twins 5, Red Sox 2

At Winter Haven, Fla., David West, Bill Krueger and Mike Trombley combined to strike out 11 batters and limited Boston to three hits for Minnesota. Shane Mack had four hits, scored two runs and knocked in a run.

Astros 2, Royals 1

At Kissimmee, Fla., Juan Guerrero's single with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Joe Mikilik to lift Houston over Kansas City. Al Osuna was the winner.

Yankees (ss) 8, Expos (ss) 7

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Hensley Meulens hit a grand slam homer and Jesse Barfield added a two-run shot, powering a New York split squad past Montreal.

Cardinals 5, Reds 1

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Ray Lankford's two-run homer sparked a five-run third inning as St. Louis defeated Cincinnati for its fifth consecutive exhibition victory. Jose DeLeon became the first St. Louis pitcher to go four innings this spring, allowing two hits.

Blue Jays 3, Phillies 0

At Clearwater, Fla., Jason Grimsley and Brad Brink each gave up only a single in three innings as Philadelphia beat Toronto. Brink, the Phillies' first-round draft pick in 1986, had reconstructive shoulder surgery on May 30, 1989. He did not pitch at all in 1990 and pitched in just 10 games in the Phillies' minor league system last season.

Dodgers 8, Yankees (ss) 5

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., starter Tom Candiotti pitched four shutout innings and Los Angeles pounded 16 hits to beat a New York split squad. Candiotti allowed only three hits in improving his exhibition record to 2-0. The knuckleballer walked two and struck out two.

White Sox 9, Rangers 5

At Port Charlotte, Fla., Texas pitchers walked eight and hit a batter with the bases loaded as the Chicago White Sox beat the Rangers. The wildness helped the White Sox take a 9-1 lead after four innings.

Mets 6, Expos (ss) 5

At Port St. Lucie, Fla., pitcher Bret Saberhagen, hitting for the first time as a major leaguer, keyed a four-run second inning with a two-run double as New York beat a Montreal split squad.

Brewers 8, Athletics 4

At Chandler, Ariz., the Milwaukee Brewers used a five-run seventh inning, including a two-run double by Andy Allanson, to beat Oakland in a morning makeup game from a rainout Monday.

Cubs 4, Angels 2

At Mesa, Ariz., Greg Maddux allowed one hit in four innings and Ryne Sandberg and Shawon Dunston had two hits each as the Cubs beat California. Maddux will be the Cubs' opening day starter April 7 in Philadelphia.

Giants 2, Mariners 1

At Scottsdale, Ariz., second baseman John Patterson, the rookie sensation of the Giants' camp, singled, stole second and scored in the bottom of the 10th inning as San Francisco beat Seattle.

Judge won't release Tyson jurors names

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A judge has decided not to reveal to defense attorneys names of jurors in the Mike Tyson rape trial who expressed concern for their safety.

Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford ruled Thursday on a petition by the former heavyweight champion's defense attorneys for names of those jurors and information about safety concerns they expressed to the judge.

Tyson, 25, is scheduled to be sentenced March 26 by Gifford for rape and two counts of criminal deviate conduct stemming from an assault on a contestant in the Miss Black America pageant in Indianapolis last July.

A Marion County jury convicted him Feb. 10 after an 11-day trial.

Soil compound stops AIDS skin cancer in lab mice

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Laboratory studies in mice show that a compound from soil bacteria blocks the growth of Kaposi's sarcoma, a cancer common among male AIDS patients that often causes red and purple skin lesions.

Researchers at the National Cancer Institute report today in the journal Science that a bacterial extract called sulfated polysaccharide peptidoglycan, or SP-PG, is more effective in laboratory studies against Kaposi's than the drugs now commonly used against the cancer.

Shuji Nakamura, a University of Southern California scientist formerly with NCI and first author of the study, said SP-PG was tested both against laboratory cultures of Kaposi's sarcoma, known as KS, and against lesions of the cancer that had been grown in laboratory mice that lack an immune system.

In both cases, said Nakamura, KS was stopped in its tracks.

"SP-PG specifically inhibited the growth of Kaposi's sarcoma cells on chicken cells and in nude mice," Nakamura said in an interview. "And during our experiment on mice, I did not see any type of side effect."

This is in contrast to other KS drugs that often have toxic side effects on humans.

Nakamura said SP-PG's effectiveness in controlling KS was then tested against three drugs — suramin, pentosan polysulfate and interferon alpha — now commonly used to treat KS.

"SP-PG is much, much better," the researcher said.

The SP-PG compound was isolated earlier from soil by Daiichi Pharmaceutical Co. of Tokyo. NCI said it has formed a cooperative agreement with Daiichi to organize clinical trials for the drug.

A report by Daiichi scientists that SP-PG suppresses the growth of blood vessels prompted NCI researchers to try the drug against laboratory models of KS; said Dr. Robert C. Gallo, head of an NCI team.

It was known that KS feeds its cells by the wild and rapid growth of blood vessels. "We began looking for compounds that were known to affect blood vessel formation and that might interfere with the growth of these cells," Gallo said in a statement.

The experiment leaned heavily on earlier studies of a natural protein, called oncostatin M, produced by the immune system. Research by Gallo's group, also reported in Science, showed that although oncostatin M can suppress other types of cancer, the substance actually doubles the growth of AIDS-related KS.

An independent study led by Steven Miles of UCLA, also published in Science, showed that KS in the absence of oncostatin M grew poorly and did not survive in laboratory cultures. But oncostatin M added to the KS cells proved to be a powerful stimulant, allowing KS to thrive, Miles reports.

Miles said in Science that a compound that blocked the effect of oncostatin M possibly could work as a drug against KS.

Until the AIDS epidemic started, KS was considered a rare skin cancer in old men of Mediterranean heritage. The sudden appearance 10 years ago of many cases of KS among young men with depressed immune systems was one of the early clues that there was a new and deadly disease moving through the population.

The virus that causes AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, apparently also creates the ideal biological conditions for Kaposi's sarcoma.

Exactly what triggers KS remains controversial.

An American study published last month in the British medical journal Lancet suggested that it is caused by the human papilloma virus, which causes genital warts. But a study by a British group in this week's Lancet presents evidence that KS is caused by an infectious agent found in feces and says that explains why the cancer is 10 times more common among homosexual males with AIDS.

Science, which published the studies by Nakamura, Gallo and Miles, is the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Japanese bullet train aims at rivals in high dollar race

ABOARD THE NOZOMI, Japan (AP) — The bullet train, the grandfather of high-speed rail travel, is taking aim at its newer and quicker European rivals in competing for billions of dollars in potential business.

The first fully redesigned model in 28 years — faster, lighter and more efficient than its predecessor — is scheduled to begin service Saturday.

It carries the aspirations of officials trying to recapture Japanese competitiveness as the United States and other nations shop for high-speed rail builders.

The "Nozomi," or Hope, slices 19 minutes off the quickest time between Tokyo and Osaka, bringing the 322-mile journey down to 2 1/2 hours. Its top speed of 169 mph is 30 mph faster than its predecessors, but below the French TGV's 188 mph.

In the United States, where train travel is comparatively slow, several high-speed rail projects have been proposed but designers must first deal with inadequate tracks and other obstacles. Amtrak plans to test a Swedish train capable of more than 100 mph on its Boston-Washington corridor.

Instead of the famous bullet-like nose, the Nozomi has a rounded wedge that reduces wind resistance and increases traction, designers say. The $770-million project is the first complete redesign of the bullet train since its introduction in 1964.

Engineers say the Nozomi's speed is limited chiefly by its curvy track, designed for maximum speeds of 130 mph. Straighter tracks allow faster speeds for France's TGV train. TGV is the French acronym for high-speed train — Train a Grande Vitesse.

"Our first priority was to reduce noise and vibration in the ground," said Hiroyuki Idei, assistant manager of the bullet train's rolling stock section.

The 16-car trains use only two contacts that pick up electricity from an overhead wire. Called pantographs, the contacts are covered by large shields that limit noise and divert air flow. The earlier trains had as many as eight.

The train's weight also was reduced by 25 percent by using aluminum alloys. The cars are 14 inches shorter to cut air resistance, although ceilings are higher because overhead air conditioning has been moved under the floor.

On a recent test ride, the train swayed on some curves and the powerful motors buzzed at some speeds.

During braking, the Nozomi's motors become generators and produce electricity, which is returned to the overhead power line for other trains to use.

Ridership on the Tokyo-to-Osaka bullet train, which averages 82 percent of capacity, was 129 million last year and is expected to grow 30 percent by the year 2000. Officials predict the Nozomi will attract more passengers away from airlines.

But the greater challenge lies overseas, where Japan is going against other nations for high-speed rail contracts.

A Japanese consortium using bullet train technology is bidding against France's TGV and Germany's slower Inter-City Express for a South Korean rail project expected to cost at least $8.3 billion.

The three also are likely to bid for a $11.9 billion high-speed railway that Taiwan plans to complete by 1999.

"We have faith in our technology," says Toru Fukushima, manager of Central Japan Railway Co.'s International Section.

But will it be enough to capture the speed record? "That's not our goal, but if we happen to overtake them, I'll be happy," Fukushima says.

Japan Rail is already working on a faster version of the Nozomi while grappling with the future technology: magnetic levitation trains known as maglevs.

Maglevs float above the track on a magnetic field and are expected to travel at up to 310 mph. But as conventional trains improve, some critics say the cost of developing maglevs isn't warranted.

Poles demonstrate at Israeli Embassy

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — About three dozen young nationalists shouting anti-Semitic slogans demonstrated outside the Israeli Embassy.

The protesters Thursday were dressed in jackets bearing the insignia of the Polish National Community, a small but militant right-wing nationalist party.

"A good Jew is a dead Jew" and "Poland for the Poles," they shouted, holding up their fists. "End to a Jewish-German occupation," read one banner.

After about 10 minutes, riot police arrived and formed a line to protect the embassy. "Jewish Gestapo," the demonstrators chanted in response, then dispersed a few minutes later.

The leader of the Polish National Community, Boleslaw Tejkowski, has been charged with kindling anti-Jewish feelings and slandering Polish authorities during last fall's parliamentary election campaign.
