PAMPA — Play a musical instrument and enjoy jamming with other musicians?
Tarpley's Music Co., 117 N. Cuyler, is offering that chance for musicians with an open jam session on Saturday beginning at 2 p.m. The jam session is designed to showcase local talent in a group gathering of musicians.

Tarpley's has sent out more than 1,000 invitations to local musicians, but added that anyone — older or younger — who plays an instrument is invited to join in for the festivity.

PAMPA — A man who saw his picture in The Pampa News turned himself into law enforcement authorities Monday.

Walter Lawrence Johnson Jr., 22, 1001 Varnon Dr., was wanted by police on a warrant alleging delivery of a controlled substance. He surrendered himself at Pampa Police Department, where he was arrested on the charge. Johnson was transferred to Gray County jail.

Johnson's picture was included in the Crime Stoppers 10 Most Wanted article in Sunday's edition of The Pampa News.

LEFORS — Lefors Independent School District's Board of Education will meet at 7 p.m. today in the library of Lefors Elementary School.

Items scheduled to be discussed include the monthly expenditures, the approval of transfer students, accepting the resignation of teachers, a discussion concerning amending the budget, interviewing an applicant for an elementary school teacher position, and the superintendent's and principal's reports.

McLEAN — A fund has been set up at the Bank of Commerce in McLean to aid the family of David Young, 13, who died April 5, with expenses relating to the death and burial.

Donations may be sent to the Bank of Commerce, P.O. Box 29, McLean, TX 79057, attention Cindi.

In addition, friends have placed buckets at various locations in McLean for those wishing to contribute. Parents are Mike and Anna Young of McLean.

PAMPA — Pampa residents wishing to immunize their children against several childhood diseases can do so Thursday at the Pampa office of the Texas Department of Health.

Some of the diseases the department personnel will be giving shots for include polio, diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, measles, rubella, mumps and HIB (haemophilus influenzae type B).

To help with the cost of keeping the clinic open and serving the community, the Texas Department of Health is charging a fee for the shots. The amount charged will be based on family income and size and the ability to pay.

Immunization at the clinic, which is located at 408 W. Kingsmill, will be conducted from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and then from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Dallas billionaire Ross Perot blasted President Clinton's health care reform package Monday and urged doctors to develop an alternative proposal.

"I need the doctors to get into the ring," Perot said. "Only you have the trust of the patient. You have earned it. You can mobilize millions of Americans to tap Congress and the Senate on the shoulder and say, 'Do not do that.'"

Speaking to members of the Texas Surgical Society, Perot said doctors need to develop an alternate plan quickly, although he did not cite any specific options.

Asked later by reporters which plan he favored, Perot said only, "The doctors are working on it."

In February, Perot invited U.S. Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., to explain his reform plan to Perot's organization, United We Stand America. Perot did not endorse Cooper's proposal.

HOUSTON (AP) — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan called upon 13,000 black men in Houston to love each other and stop the violence among themselves.

"If as a people we do not love each other, as a people we are dead and therefore the grave that we sleep in cannot praise God," the controversial speaker said Monday night.

The "men only" address at Pleasant Grove Missionary Baptist Church drew an astoundingly large crowd, including Evander Holyfield, the current heavyweight champion.

The speech was held at the church after a scheduled speech site — Houston's Texas Southern University — was canceled because Farrakhan excluded women from the address.

Wholesale prices up 0.2 percent in March

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose a modest 0.2 percent in March as energy costs moderated following a sharp jump the previous month, the government said today.

The Labor Department said its Producer Price Index, which measures inflation pressures before they reach the consumer, matched the 0.2 percent increase in January.

The index had jumped 0.5 percent in February, the largest increase in 10 months, because of surging heating costs.

Energy prices in March were unchanged from February, with gasoline prices declining 1.8 percent and heating oil down 0.7 percent. But gas for home heating increased 1.9 percent, breaking the previous record of 1.5 percent set in both June 1993 and October 1992.

Prices for some vegetables and fruits rose dramatically, and for crude materials they surged 2.8 percent, the biggest advance since 8.6 percent in October 1990.

While inflation now has been in check for more than three years, fears that the economy is heating up have disturbed financial markets.

If wholesale prices continue to advance for the remainder of the year at the same rate as the first three months, the index will rise 3.9 percent for 1994. Producer prices rose just 0.2 percent all of last year.

Many economists predicted a 0.2 percent rise for March, expecting the arrival of spring and more moderate temperatures to ease the demand for heating fuel.

"Commodity inflation clearly is more than last year. But no serious flare-up of inflation is apparent," said Donald Ratajczak, head of the Georgia State University Economic Forecasting Center, in advance of the report.

Excluding volatile food and energy prices, the index rose the same amount as the overall index in March — 0.2 percent — following a 0.1 rise the previous month for the same measurement.

The Labor Department is scheduled to announce the Consumer Price Index for March on Wednesday, and most economists expect it to rise 0.2 percent also.

While Americans have been enjoying moderate increases in the cost of living since 1991, recent economic growth has led to nervousness about the future.

The economy surged at a 7 percent annual rate in the final three months of 1993. But economists and the Clinton administration predict the expansion will be about half that this year.

In advance of today's report, Ratajczak said, "If the markets are willing to accept the reality of inflation over its fear, then a positive response to this report is expected. After all, inflation is not growing that strongly."

"If growth slows as we believe it will, inflation pressures should be minimal," said Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co.

Blue-chip issues rallied Monday while the broader stock market ended mixed. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 14.57 points and advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 8 on the New York Stock Exchange. Other major market barometers ended little changed.

Stocks staged a modest recovery last week after a steep drop the week before.

Hoping to restrain inflation before it gathers a head of steam, the Federal Reserve Board in the last two months has nudged short-term interest rates from 3 percent to 3.5 percent. Even though the moves added to investor jitters, many analysts expect further tightening of credit by the central bank this spring.

The Labor Department said the cost of vegetables was up 9.8 percent in March, the biggest rise since they increased 20.6 percent in November 1993. The March figures include a 147.9 percent price rise for squash, 73.5 percent for sweet corn, 58 percent for green peppers and 27.2 percent for tomatoes.

Fruit prices were up 1.4 percent, including 44.8 percent for lemons, 11.9 percent for oranges, 7.1 percent for pineapples and 4.8 percent for tangerines.

Food prices rose 0.5 percent as beef was up 3.4 percent, the largest increase since a 4.3 percent jump in December 1992.

But pork prices dropped 4.4 percent, the biggest decline since a 5.3 percent drop in May 1993. Poultry was up 1.2 percent and fish 3.8 percent.

Morning accident

Six people were treated and released from Coronado Hospital this morning following a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of Lefors and Browning Streets in Pampa which occurred at approximately 8 a.m. Taken to the hospital were Leona Burns and her daughter Ashleigh, and Jill Schroeder and her three children, Michael, Lacey and Jamie. Police were still preparing their accident report information late this morning. (Pampa News photo by Cheryl Berzanskis)

Strike ends against one trucking firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — One trucking company closed its doors and another announced it would negotiate its own contract with the Teamsters as a nationwide strike neared the end of its first week.

Churchill Truck Lines Inc., of Chillicothe, Mo., went out of business Monday. Company officials said the demands of strikers would make it impossible to turn a profit.

The Teamsters called off the strike against Preston Trucking after the firm agreed to negotiate its own contract with the union. Preston was the seventh-largest company of the 22 involved in the strike that started last Wednesday.

Meanwhile, seven Teamsters were arrested in suburban Boston after scuffling with police as nonunion trucks began rolling into a Roadway Express terminal for the first time since the strike began. The seven strikers were charged with disorderly conduct.

Churchill was the first company to close its doors because of the strike, but industry officials predicted others would follow.

Pampa widow, hospital ask jury to settle dispute

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

A Pampa widow today is asking a Gray County jury to award her $500,000 for the physical pain suffered by her late husband and mental anguish they both suffered following a 1989 Coronado Hospital stay.

Adele Morrison brought suit in December 1990 against the local hospital following an August through November 1989 stay in which a Foley catheter was pulled twice from John Morrison's body when physical therapy personnel failed to unclamp it from the bedside.

In Monday testimony, Mrs. Morrison said that the catheter was forcibly pulled from Mr. Morrison's body on Sept. 16, 1989 and Sept. 27, 1989, when physical therapy aides who came to walk her husband did not unhook the catheter's urine collection bag from his bedside. She testified that his health continued to decline until his autumn death.

Mr. Morrison was admitted to Coronado Hospital on Aug. 18, 1989 for treatment and examination following a light stroke, court records show.

Today, defense attorney Barry Peterson of Amarillo asked District Judge Lee Waters for a directed verdict in favor of Coronado, arguing that the facility does not control contract employees. Waters denied the motion.

When the jury was recalled to the courtroom, Bill O'Brien, assistant hospital administrator, told the jury that physical therapy personnel in 1989 were not employees of Coronado Hospital, but were provided by Health Focus, a contractor who screened and staffed physical therapy department. He said that Coronado Hospital exercised no control over the department except that the contract required them to meet guidelines established by the Joint Commission on Hospital Accreditation.

Coronado Hospital did not pay nor direct the daily activities of Health Focus staff members, he said. Health Focus provided policy and procedure manuals for the department during the time of the contract, he said.

Monday, O'Brien told the jury that there were no records at Coronado Hospital saying physical therapy staff members were counseled about the two catheter incidents.

Other testimony included that of Dr. Alberto Sy and Dr. David Williams, Canyon, on Monday, and Joan Adair, Clarendon, and Ken Morrison, Dumas, daughter and son of Mr. Morrison, today.

Sy testified he was called to consult on Mr. Morrison's condition on Aug. 18, 1989 and treated him for stroke, diabetes and peripheral vascular disease. After the catheter was jerked from Mr. Morrison's body the second time, he said, based on the amount of bleeding discovered the elderly man suffered an ulcer requiring treatment.

Williams told the jury about the proper insertion and removal of a Foley catheter.

Mr. Morrison's children told the jury panel their father's health declined after the incidents, causing it to be more difficult to communicate with him and hampering his ability to move around. They said he was frightened when people entered his hospital room.

Adair told the jury that Linda Haynes, former public relations officer for the hospital, called her and told about the second catheter incident. Adair said Haynes assured her that it would not happen a third time and that no other physical therapy staff members would give therapy to her father except the head of the department.

Rivers rising in Midwest

By The Associated Press

Midwestern rivers kept rising today after three days of steady rain that forced scattered evacuations from Oklahoma to Ohio.

Forecasters said a repeat of last summer's disastrous floods isn't likely. But that didn't reassure Denise Warner's customers at the post office in Portage des Sioux, Mo., where streets were flooded.

"A lot of them are coming in just shaking their heads," Warner said. "They're saying, 'Boy, I sure don't want to go through this again,' and 'Didn't we do this about this time last year?'"

Up to a foot of rain had fallen on parts of Missouri since Saturday. The Mississippi River was expected to crest about 4 feet above flood stage today at St. Louis.

The Missouri River rose 7 feet in 24 hours at Jefferson City, Hermann and Washington, Mo. At Hermann, the river was expected to crest at 34 feet today, 13 feet above flood stage.

A tornado overturned a mobile home in the southwestern Missouri town of Seligman, killing a 60-year-old woman.

As much as 6 inches of rain fell since Monday in northern Indiana.

Philippine police confront image problem with smiles

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Concerned that the arrogant image of Manila's police intimidates citizens more than criminals, officials are offering cash incentives to officers who carry out their duties with the "cutest" possible smile.

"Starting this week, we will be on the lookout for the policeman with the sweetest smile," Senior Superintendent Romeo Maganto of Manila's Western Police District said today. "This is no laughing matter. Flash your cutest smile and win."

The owner of the winning smile will receive 1,000 pesos (about $37). Winners in the weekly competition will be picked during surprise visits to police stations and based on letters from the public, Maganto said.

He said he came up with the plan after getting complaints that arrogant behavior by police was discouraging people from reporting crimes.

"A cop has already solved half of the problem of the complaining person if he wins that person's confidence and trust," Maganto said.

Mitchell withdraws as Supreme Court candidate

By JOHN KING
 AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell today abruptly took himself out of contention for the Supreme Court vacancy, even though he said President Clinton wanted to nominate him. Mitchell said he was worried his nomination would stall health care reform.

The dramatic announcement threw Clinton's search back into uncertainty. Aides said Clinton had been considering several other prospects because he was worried about the legal and legislative hurdles to naming Mitchell.

In addition to Mitchell, Clinton's list of prospects includes U.S. District Judge Jose Cabranes of Connecticut and Solicitor General Drew S. Days III.

Also on the list are at least three federal appeals justices, Amalya Kearse of New York, Stephen Breyer of Boston and Richard Arnold of Little Rock, Ark., a long-time Clinton friend.

The vacancy, the second for Clinton in a year, was created by Justice Harry A. Blackmun's decision to retire this summer.

Mitchell, 60, quickly emerged as the favorite, as White House aides talked of Clinton's desire to find a proven consensus builder for a court closely divided on controversial topics such as school prayer and federal-state relations.

Speculation about a Mitchell appointment was well received even among Senate Republicans, another plus as Clinton hoped to avoid a protracted election-year confirmation battle. But the White House was worried that putting Mitchell through the confirmation process this summer would impede him from shepherding health care through the Senate.

In his announcement, Mitchell said he shared those concerns and decided to withdraw from consideration.

"I made the judgment I could best serve what I perceive to be the national interests overall by continuing to serve and doing the best job possible in the time that remains" in his Senate term, Mitchell told reporters.

He said Congress had "a rare opportunity" to enact "comprehensive, meaningful health care reform and I don't want to do anything to detract from that."

Mitchell said he made his decision Monday afternoon and then had an hourlong meeting with Clinton at the White House to convey his decision.

"He told me that he wanted to appoint me to the court, that he intended to appoint me to the court but that he was as concerned as I was about the prospect that the nomination would affect my ability to serve a majority leader for the rest of the session," Mitchell told reporters.

He said Clinton "reluctantly accepted" his assessment that he could not guarantee that he would be able to steer health care and other Clinton priorities through Congress while under going the court confirmation process.

Mitchell was asked if he would want to be appointed to chief justice if William Rehnquist retired from that position. Mitchell said he had no inkling Rehnquist had any plans to step down, but said "if the president tells me that he wants to nominate me, I will consider it at that time."

Mitchell, a liberal Maine Democrat, already had announced he will not seek re-election this fall. He also is said to be a top candidate for the vacancy as commissioner of major league baseball. Mitchell said he had not been offered the job but would consider it if an offer was made.

Cabranes, Days, Kearse, Arnold and Breyer also were on Clinton's initial list last year when he chose Ruth Bader Ginsburg for a high court vacancy.

After Mitchell, they were said to be the "most active" prospects on a list of a dozen court candidates compiled by Clinton's search team.

World trade agreement meeting opens

By CLARE NULLIS
 Associated Press Writer

MARRAKESH, Morocco (AP) — Top officials from more than 120 countries opened a four-day meeting today to sign a groundbreaking world trade agreement that is forecast to add $235 billion to the global economy in just 10 years.

But despite the accord, signs of future North-South and trans-Atlantic trade disagreements immediately emerged.

The European Union pressed its case for better protection of workers' rights. Bangladesh, representing the world's poorest countries, said there should be no link between trade and labor standards.

French Industry Minister Gerard Longuet said the new World Trade Organization that is formally to begin operations on Jan. 1 must stop unilateral actions aimed at forcing open markets, a thinly veiled swipe at Washington.

The United States is expected to come under repeated criticism at the meeting for using threats of high, retaliatory tariffs to punish countries accused of keeping out American exports.

But many of the opening speeches were congratulatory and summed up the relief over the successful conclusion of seven years of bitter negotiations. The pact creates the new trade group to replace the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and gives it stronger powers to enforce international trade rules.

Vice President Al Gore

"We should be proud of this stride toward a more open world which will be, through the lifting of barriers and protectionist regulations, a source of prosperity and welfare for the peoples worldwide," said Moroccan Crown Prince Sidi Mohammed, host of meeting.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor met with the European Union's trade commissioner, Sir Leon Brittan, to discuss opening up supply contracts for state-owned companies.

The two sides averted a trade war last year when the EU agreed to temporarily waive rules favoring European heavy electrical equipment companies competing for contracts with state monopolies. In return, Washington agreed to relax some of its own restrictions.

They now want to make the agreement permanent and to settle a dispute over state contracts for buying telecommunications equipment.

Kantor was cautious about prospects for his meeting Friday with Japanese Foreign Minister Tsutomu Hata on reducing Japan's $59 billion yearly trade surplus with the United States. With Japan's governing coalition divided on a new prime minister, it was unlikely Hata would have much negotiating authority.

Vice President Al Gore arrives Thursday to push U.S. demands that more priority be given to the environment, one of the key topics of the World Trade Organization. The United States also wants the organization to do more to protect workers rights.

GATT, the chief international arbiter of trade, forecasts the agreement will boost global trade by $755 billion a year and pump an additional $235 billion into the global economy by 2005.

GATT said its estimates, in a report released today, were conservative. The World Bank and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development predict gains by early next century of up to $274 billion.

GATT said as a result of the agreement developed nations would cut customs duties on industrial imports by an average 38 percent and on agricultural products by 37 percent, lowering prices of thousands of products.

Compound from broccoli found to block breast cancer in rats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rats exposed to powerful cancer-causing chemicals and then fed compounds extracted from broccoli have a lower risk of developing breast tumors, according to a study by Johns Hopkins University medical researchers.

The study, published today in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, identified the anti-cancer chemicals as sulforaphane and some closely related compounds. All are found in broccoli and other vegetables.

In a process not thoroughly understood, these vegetable compounds tend to amplify the body's own defenses against chemicals that can lead to cancer, the report said.

"Most cancer-causing chemicals are themselves innocuous until they enter cells where they are converted to enzymes which are highly reactive and are capable of initiating tumor formation," said Dr. Paul Talalay, a Hopkins researcher who is co-author of the study.

Nation's busiest freeway reopens after quake

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's busiest freeway reopened overnight 2 1/2 months ahead of schedule after round-the-clock repairs that earned the contractor a fat bonus and sent politicians racing to take credit.

Late Monday night, Gov. Pete Wilson, Mayor Richard Riordan and U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena strode onto the freshly poured concrete of the Santa Monica Freeway and lifted a line of orange safety cones to let drivers roll through for the first time since the Los Angeles earthquake Jan. 17.

The first drivers honked their horns and leaned out their windows for the TV cameras, immediately creating the new route's first traffic jam.

"It shows what you can do when you cut the red tape," Wilson said on ABC today. "I think it's become symbolic as well as real."

When two miles of the freeway collapsed 84 days ago, driving in this most car-dependent of cities got even uglier. Many drivers had to take detours that added an hour or more to their commute.

The east-west Santa Monica, part of Interstate 10, carries 300,000 commuters each day.

The state Transportation Department, or Caltrans, estimated the repair job would take 140 days. It offered contractor C.C. Myers Inc. $14.9 million, plus $200,000 for every day it beat the deadline.

C.C. Myers worked seven days a week and finished 74 days early, earning a $14.8 million bonus. The repairs were paid for by the federal government.

Wilson, Riordan and Vice President Al Gore were scheduled to attend a reopening ceremony this morning. But a scramble by politicians to be first on hand when the freeway opened brought out Wilson and Riordan about 12 hours ahead of the ceremony. They opened the road on live

TV, during the 11 p.m. newscasts.

Gore, speaking on CBS today, called the quick repair "an example of reinventing government." He has made government reform one of his projects.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Times reported today that the bridges will need further strengthening so they can withstand another major quake. In the haste to rebuild, columns on two bridges were erected that could not stand large-scale shaking, according to design consultants hired by Caltrans.

But Pena denied the report, saying, "These new columns ... do not need retrofitting. This was done to correct standards."

Wilson said today that the overpasses will be needed to be strengthened, but denied that the need for upgrades stemmed from haste or shoddy construction. He said the state Seismic Safety Committee recommended enhanced standards for freeways "literally as this one was being rebuilt."

Carson County to observe County Government Week

PANHANDLE — In its regular monthly meeting, the Carson County Commissioners' Court made plans to recognize the week of April 18-22 as County Government Week.

Anyone interested in learning more about county government, how it works and what it does is welcomed to attend an open house at the Court House, which is located in Panhandle.

Refreshments will be served and a video will be shone throughout the week.

In addition, the Square House Museum will have a display located in the hallway of the first floor of the Court House commemorating the history of the county government.

In other business Monday, the commissioners' court heard a report from a representative of the Skellytown Volunteer Fire Department about its activities in the last three months.

As for a personnel matter dealing with the salary of the secretary in the second Justice of the Peace Court, commissioners decided to table the matter until the next meeting.

Finally, the commissioners ordered the clean up of the agriculture barn, discussed a report on the commodity sheets and the volunteer workers, and talked about attending a meeting of the Human Resource Institute in Austin later this year.

Fisher, Mattox at top of ballot marquee for primary runoff elections today

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic Senate hopefuls Jim Mattox and Richard Fisher were racing the clock to talk to voters before today's runoff election.

A poll by The Dallas Morning News and Houston Chronicle published over the weekend showed Mattox with 48 percent and Fisher at 46 percent. The survey had a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

The winner will face GOP Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison in the November general election.

State election officials predicted that about 11 percent, or 1 million of the state's 9 million voters, will cast ballots in runoff elections. About 17.5 percent, or 1.58 million registered voters, participated in the March 8 primaries.

In statewide races, voters in the Democratic runoffs will pick candidates for U.S. Senate, Texas Supreme Court, Place 1, and Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2.

The statewide Republican runoffs include races for attorney general and Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2. There are numerous local contests across the state.

Despite poll results showing them in a dead heat, both Mattox and Fisher predicted victory in today's election.

Mattox, who has served in the Legislature, Congress and two terms as attorney general, said, "I'm convinced that we're doing good, and we're going to win. The momentum turned very heavily our way about a week and half ago."

Fisher, a Dallas businessman, said, "Really what this comes down for Democrats is a decision as to whether or not you want Kay Bailey Hutchison to be your next United States senator. I am fully confident that if I win ... I will beat Kay Bailey Hutchison in November."

Another bitter Democratic race pitted Corpus Christi attorney Rene Haas against Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez.

Gonzalez is generally backed by insurance and business interests, while Ms. Haas is supported by consumer advocates and trial lawyers who represent people who sue businesses and insurance companies.

In the Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2 runoff, Democrats Betty Marshall and Gene Kelly square off.

Ms. Marshall is co-chief of the appellate section of the Tarrant County district attorney's office. Her late husband, C. Chris Marshall, was killed in a 1992 shooting rampage at the Tarrant County courthouse.

Kelly is a Universal City attorney who has run well in several races despite spending little money. Some believe his name reminds people of the famous dancer.

The seat is currently held by Chuck Miller, a Republican, who did not seek re-election.

Republicans have a fierce inter-party squabble in the attorney general's race between Pat Lykos and Don Wittig, who are both judges from Houston. The winner faces Attorney General Dan Morales, a Democrat.

Ms. Lykos has accused Wittig of exaggerating his military record in Vietnam. Wittig has stood by his statements and has called on Ms. Lykos to apologize.

In the Court of Criminal Appeals runoff, Sam Bayless, a San Antonio lawyer and former Dallas County prosecutor, faces Sharon Keller, also a former Dallas County assistant district attorney.

In one of the more colorful races, Leslie Elaine Perez, a transsexual ex-convict who once came within hours of the electric chair, was making her third bid for chairwoman of the Harris County Democratic Party.

Ms. Perez of Houston was the top vote-getter in a six-candidate field in last month's primary. She faces real estate developer David Minberg in the runoff.

Under the name Leslie Douglas Ashley, Ms. Perez was sentenced to death for the 1961 fatal shooting of a Houston businessman whose corpse was set afire and left in a roadside ditch.

A judge granted Ms. Perez a stay of execution in 1963 with four hours to spare. The death sentence later was overturned because of suppressed evidence and she received a 15-year sentence in a retrial. After her 1971 parole, she underwent a sex-change operation.

Audit: Prison ag operations lose money

AMARILLO (AP) — A $10 million meat processing plant proposed in Amarillo for prison inmates is "guaranteed to waste taxpayers' money," according to a comptroller's report.

That prediction came last week in State Comptroller John Sharp's report on the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. The audit included a look at the state's 30 prison agricultural operations on more than 140,000 acres.

Prison system spokesman Charles Brown said officials have not set a start-up date for the meat plant because state auditors want to study it again.

Farms and food-processing facilities at prisons aren't as efficient as TDCJ has depicted, according to the Sharp report.

"In fiscal 1992, the agency's agriculture operations actually lost $7 million, although they reported to the (prison) board a net profit of $5.6 million," he said.

But prison board member Jerry Hodge of Amarillo says auditors failed to take into consideration the savings gained when inmates grow their own food.

Auditors found inefficient accounting methods, Sharp said. And overhead costs for salaries, farm shops, the cannery and a packing plant were not counted against the agricultural operations, the report said.

Moreover, Sharp's audit said the prison system sells its produce back to itself at prices higher than super-market costs.

Hamburger bought from the agriculture division for $1.10 per pound, for instance, could have been purchased from commercial suppliers for 77 cents per pound, according to the report.

"If food service had purchased all the ground beef supplied by the packing plant in fiscal 1993 (2.2 million pounds) at the open-market rate ... it would have saved $730,000," the report said. "Clearly, the cows are not the only ones getting trimmed."

But Hodge, who oversees the agricultural operations for the prison board, said major meat suppliers refuse to sell directly to TDCJ, because the state is slow to pay its bills.

Hodge called the report's conclusions "off base." Prison farm operations are efficient, he said, and they teach job skills and a work ethic to inmates.

"Even if they're just chopping weeds out in the pasture, that is a lot better than if they're sitting around doing nothing," Hodge said.

by a landowner in a land dispute.

But Jorge Constantino Kanter, an Altamirano ranch leader, on Monday called the shooting "an act of self defense." He said Arturo Espinoza Macedo fired on a number of men after rebels seized some of his land, stole his cattle, and threatened his wife.

Constantino told a news conference in San Cristobal de las Casas that Zapatista rebels had kidnapped the landowner's brother and sister-in-law after the shooting and that their whereabouts was unknown.

After ruling party presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio was killed the March 23, rebels halted meetings they were holding with Indian peasant communities on a government peace proposal to provide roads, hospitals, schools and other basic services to far-flung communities.

'Four Weddings' moves up on box office charts

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — D2 The Mighty Ducks was No. 1 at the box office for the second week in a row, while the romantic comedy Four Weddings and a Funeral broke out with help from rave reviews and good word of mouth.

D2 The Mighty Ducks made $5.5 million over the weekend, Exhibitor Relations Co. reported Monday.

In its fifth week of release, Four Weddings, starring Hugh Grant and Andie MacDowell, was No. 6 with $3.9 million. But it made $7,145 per screen — double or triple that of other top draws.

It is appearing in 552 locations, compared with 2,223 for D2. It was No. 9 the week before.

Among new movies, the twentysomething comedy Threesome made $4 million for fifth place.

Here are the weekend's top 20 films according to Exhibitor Relations, with the Friday-through-Sunday gross, number of North American theater locations, average gross per location, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on actual receipts and projections where actual figures were unavailable.

1. D2 The Mighty Ducks, Disney, $5.5 million, 2,223 locations, $2,482 per location, $30.2 million, three weeks.

20. The Piano, Miramax, $581,213, 505 locations, $1,151 per location, $38.5 million, 22 weeks.

Texas town fights possible parole of teen's killer

GRANBURY (AP) — Ted Herr was a Tarrant County Junior College student with a 4.0 grade point average when his life was cut short by a man who called himself the minister of a satanic cult.

William Wayne Martin, then a 32-year-old day laborer, was found guilty of killing Herr, 18, in February 1986. He was sentenced to 99 years in prison. After serving less than nine years, he will be considered for parole in June.

Herr's parents and thousands of Granbury residents are outraged by the prospect of Martin's release and fear that he may return to Hood County. They are waging a petition and letter-writing campaign to keep Martin locked up.

"He is a person that you look at, and he has that look that makes you afraid," Hood County District

Attorney Richard Hattox said of Martin. "We talk about people with Bette Davis eyes; well, Billy Martin has those Charlie Manson eyes."

Martin is eligible for parole after serving eight years and four months because the indictment did not specify that he committed the crime with a deadly weapon.

Although Martin is believed to have slashed Herr's head with a machete, the weapon was never found. District Attorney Dan Grismom believed the minimal evidence he had would not withstand an appeal if the indictment specified a weapon, said Andrew Ottaway, a former assistant district attorney who helped prosecute the case.

If Martin had been convicted of using a deadly weapon in the slaying, he would have been required to serve at least one-third of his sentence, Hattox said.

Outraged citizens have helped Herr's parents, Bertrum and Priscilla Herr, collect about 5,000 signatures on petitions protesting Martin's parole. They plan to send an additional 2,000 to 3,000 signatures to the parole board before the vote.

The petitions are prominent on counters at gas stations, grocery stores and other businesses throughout Granbury.

Martin's former attorney, Gary Lowellen of Stephenville, said he has doubts about whether Martin killed Herr.

"I've defended a lot of people in 20 years of criminal work, and that's one that still leaves some serious doubts in my mind," Lowellen said.

CAER group to meet

Chief Eddie Joe Roberts of the Lefors Fire Department will be the featured speaker at Wednesday's Community Awareness and Emergency Response Committee meeting which begins at 1:30 p.m. in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Roberts will be discussing recent area grass fires and what might be in store throughout the upcoming months.

Other items to be discussed by committee members include an update on the emergency generators that were recently installed at a local radio station and a progress report from the training committee.

Other items include the county warning system, a review of a policy change, awarding certificates of appreciation, and a tabletop training exercise.

Following Wednesday's meeting, the next meeting of the CAER committee will be July 13.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Voluntary efforts
much more reliable

It took a constitutional amendment to outlaw alcohol in the "Noble Experiment" of Prohibition in the 1920s. As wrongheaded as Prohibition was, causing widespread bootlegging and gang warfare, at least prohibitionists respected the constitutional stipulation that the federal government may conduct only those actions specifically "enumerated" in the Constitution. Booze couldn't be outlawed until the Constitution itself was changed to allow such an action.

The modern smoking prohibition movement cares not a puff for such constitutional restrictions. It is going full-bore ahead with attempts to ban, or severely restrict, the use of tobacco.

Most people today understand that abuse of tobacco causes severe health problems. But what business is it of the Nanny State what free American adults smoke? As today with tobacco, health arguments were made before the enactment of Prohibition: that drunkenness led to cirrhosis of the liver and shortened life spans while causing traffic accidents and work absenteeism. Yet though laws exist today against drunk driving, the remembrance of alcohol Prohibition remains fresh enough to restrain anyone outside the Prohibition Party from calling for a ban on alcohol.

U.S. Rep. Henry Waxman of Los Angeles, chairman of the House committee on Health and the Environment, suggested that a ban on nicotine, the major active chemical in tobacco, is "starting to look like it might well be a reasonable way to deal with this problem."

David Kessler, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, testified that nicotine is a substance that could fall within the FDA's strict regulatory purview.

Secretary of Labor Robert Reich announced that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration might ban smoking in every workplace, thus overturning the freedom of private companies to set their own policies.

Getting people voluntarily to give up smoking is commendable. But anti-smoking zealots ought to realize that a full-blown assault on people's liberties, like puffs of exhaled cigarette smoke in a hurricane, is bound to get blown back in their faces.

In Canada in recent years, high taxes jacked up cigarette prices to $6 a pack, leading to widespread bootleg tobacco sales, Capone-style gang warfare and massive sales on tax rate, dropping prices to $3 a pack. In the United States, high tobacco taxes already have contributed to increases in gang warfare and organized crime.

An even higher tax increase on cigarettes, rationing of cigarettes as a prescription drug by the government, or Waxman's prohibitionist ban on nicotine, all would make America's gang problem far worse. Cigarettes would become even more valuable commodities to steal and peddle.

The only benefit from increased tobacco restrictions might be that a Canadian-style revolt against government taxation and meddling could be ignited in America.

Better to rely on voluntary efforts to reduce smoking, which have succeeded remarkably the past 30 years, while grounding out tobacco prohibition in an ashtray of common sense.

Weak hand against North Korea

Stephen Chapman

The Clinton administration's patience with North Korea, which some people think has been scandalously excessive, has just about run out. After months of going back and forth with the United States on its nuclear weapons program, the Pyongyang government finally admitted international inspectors, only to block them from completing their rounds last month. "This time, the North went too far," said one American official. "There are no more carrots."

Probably not. But the fact that we've run out of carrots doesn't mean our sticks are any more useful than before. Amid all the carping about how the president has played this hand, it's easy to forget that the real problem is the cards he was dealt. The danger is that he'll let politics and frustration force him into a policy that probably won't work and could bring on disaster.

By now, everyone concedes that the North Koreans are working to build a nuclear arsenal. The Central Intelligence Agency thinks they probably have at least one bomb already. The hope in the negotiations over inspections was that North Korea would try to get everything it could for giving up its nuclear ambition — and then make a deal. Last month, that hope stopped looking implausible and started looking ridiculous.

So it's left to the rest of the world to try to force Pyongyang off the nuclear track. President Clinton's critics act as though tough talk is all it takes. Tough talk is all they have to offer.

Frank Gaffney, a former Reagan Pentagon official who now runs the Center for Security Policy, thunders that "the United States cannot afford to ignore or otherwise accommodate North Korea's nuclear ambitions." He proposes to increase our troop strength in South Korea, put nuclear-armed ships close to North Korea and resume joint U.S.-South Korean military exercises.

The careful reader may notice that none of these will stop North Korea from becoming a nuclear state. So Gaffney goes further: First, ask the United Nations Security Council to authorize the use of force. Second, "prepare to prevent North Korea from achieving the credible capacity to threaten the use of nuclear weapons." Prevent? Heavens, no — just prepare to prevent. That'll teach 'em.

More sober observers understand that a preemptive strike can't work, since we don't know where the North Koreans are assembling the bomb or where they've hidden the fuel and components. Everything we want to destroy may even be stashed far underground (the North Koreans are legendary tunnelers) where our bombs can't reach.

So the favored option these days is an international economic embargo authorized by the United Nations and enforced, in part, by the U.S. Navy. One snag here is that we'll need cooperation from China, which has a Security Council veto. North Korea's closest friend and major trading partner, China is not in the mood to do any favors for Clinton, who has made himself a major nuisance by harping on human rights. Even if Beijing doesn't block sanctions, it may take a relaxed approach to enforcement, which would leave a big leak.

That's the optimistic scenario. The pessimistic one is that the sanctions do real damage to the North Korean economy — which is already so squeezed that citizens are urged to eat just two meals a day. In that case, the regime may decide it would rather go down fighting.

Just as the Japanese responded to an earlier U.S. trade embargo by attacking Pearl Harbor, the North Koreans could respond to this one by pouring across the 38th parallel. When you're dealing with enemies who are fanatical and maybe crazy, you shouldn't expect prudence.

A conventional war on the peninsula would be only slightly less lethal than a nuclear one. Seoul, with 16 million people, is within artillery range of North Korea. Worse, the Nuclear Control Institute notes, the South has nine nuclear reactors. If just one were destroyed, hundreds of thousands of south Koreans could die.

A war we win would be destructive enough. But Newsweek reported last year that when the Defense Department ran computer simulations of a North Korean invasion, it showed (as one Pentagon source put it) "the South's defenses collapsing so fast the hair stood up on the back of our necks as we watched." This could be a tougher fight than Americans imagine.

We should face the fact that the North Koreans have us over a barrel. They can get the bomb, and we probably can't stop them at any reasonable price. So we ought to take the approach we took when other, far more dangerous communist dictators (Stalin, Mao) got it: Accept the inevitable, however nervously, and rely on our own nuclear weapons for protection.

It would be especially reckless to court war with one of the last relics of communism, which with any luck will soon go the way of its brethren. Time is on our side in the deadlock with North Korea. It's about the only thing that is.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, April 12, the 102nd day of 1994. There are 263 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On April 12, 1861, the Civil War began as Confederate forces fired on Fort Sumter in South Carolina.

On this date:
In 1606, England adopted as its flag the original version of the Union Jack.

In 1877, the catcher's mask was first used in a baseball game.

In 1934, the F. Scott Fitzgerald novel Tender Is the Night was first published by Scribner's in New York.

In 1945, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the 32nd president of the United States, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in Warm Springs, Ga., at age 63.

In 1955, the Salk vaccine against polio was declared safe and effective.

In 1961, Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin became the first man to fly in space, orbiting the earth once before making a safe landing.

Gun control the small-town way

If big-city intellectuals keep at it, some of them may get to be as smart as country deputies and small-town cops were 40 years ago.

A case in point is an article in a recent issue of the New York Times Sunday Magazine by James Q. Wilson. Now, Wilson is the real thing — an intellectual who actually makes sense, as opposed to the many who have diarrhea of the mouth and constipation of the brain. Wilson proposes as one solution to the crime problem that police should just take guns away from people who don't have a carrying license.

Well, that's exactly what country deputies and small-town cops were doing 40 years ago until lawyers and judges made them stop. I know, because in my reckless youth I used to be a reserve deputy in west Florida and would ride as an unpaid partner with my best friend when he had the midnight shift.

Every now and then, several deputies would get together and arrive en masse in front of some juke joint or tavern. They followed a standard ritual. All the customers would be ordered to stand against the far wall, and the deputy in charge would begin to make a deliberately long speech in which he explained that every patron would pass between two deputies, be frisked and then proceed out the door.

The whole time he was talking, there was a steady sound of clumps and bumps as the customers ditched their hardware. They would all be frisked and asked to wait outside. They were all clean. Then we would ask the owner to fill up a croaker sack with the guns, linoleum knives, switchblades, blackjacks and other assorted weapons littering the floor.

Since everyone was given a chance to get rid of his weapon, no one resisted, no one got hurt and no one was arrested. But, at least for that night, nobody in that crowd was going to get more than socked or slapped, because we had their hardware.

During one of these raids, just as we pulled up to a large joint out in the country, a man, hearing the sirens, dived through a glass window, landed on his feet and took off running up a hill. A deputy, just for the sake of form, ran a few steps, shouted, "Halt!" and fired his pistol in the air.

The words had no effect on this fellow, but the sound of the gunshot turned on his afterburner. We watched amazed and amused as he increased his speed, cleared a 5-foot fence as easily as a deer and vanished over the hill. We never did figure out who he was or what he was wanted for, or at least what he thought we wanted him for.

Running stories are a favorite of cops'. One recalled a man who was fleeing through the woods and made the mistake of looking back to see if the officer was shooting at him or into the air. He smacked right into a tree.

I knew another officer who fell into an open septic tank while chasing a man at night through a neighborhood. It was fortunate for the fleeing man that he got away.

But I wouldn't want to be a cop today. Policing, like newspapering, is not much fun anymore. There are too many pompous, serious people these days, and I don't doubt a minute that we have a lower class of criminals, too. Why not? We have a lower class of practically everything, including politicians and intellectuals.

Kicking back with Generation X

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico — Poor Caesar has a problem with the third month of the year — "Beware the Ides of March," the soothsayer warned him. Even if one of those doom dispensers had been hanging around travel agencies and airports on March 15, nobody would have paid any attention to him.

For tourists, college students and professors, March is the swingiest time of the year. It is a time to shrug off the sack clothes and ashes of freezing temperatures and inexhaustible snowstorms, head for sun-drenched beaches and party with shameless abandon.

You're mistaken if you believe that the first robin, red breast and golden forsythias are the harbingers of spring. The announcement is made by a massive spring break hegira of college students to tropical climes.

Spring is also the unofficial kick-off of the first tourist season. Tourists are really a contradictory lot. They want exotic environments with all of the amenities of home, English-speaking comfort and friendly foreigners — except that in their country, they're not foreigners!

But linguistic gaps are more than compensated for when you head toward the Caribbean. Or you can bury the acrimony over the NAFTA agreement (as thousands of anti-NAFTA union members are doing right now) and head for our southern continental neighbor, Mexico. Canada may be cool. But Mexico swings.

Chuck Stone

And that may explain why so many members of Generation X, the post baby boomers, from other countries have joined their Mexican colleagues as recreational aides at one of the local chain hotels. They take you on bicycle tours, do aerobics in the swimming pool, organize poolside fashion shows, beer-drinking contests, hot-pepper-eating contests, dancing festivals and a Roman toga night. (Guess whom they chose to play the emperor?)

"It's not a career move for me," explained blonde, blue-eyed Canadian Bernie, 23, from British Vancouver. "But it's a good experience."

Handsome, dark-haired Robert, 25, didn't know what he would do when his tour ended. "Probably head back to Jamaica, maybe into radio," he said in a resonant, Edward R. Murrow-like voice.

Fellow Jamaican Paula, 28, with sultry green eyes and golden fawn skin, smiled confidently. "I may go back to Jamaica, or I may keep on moving," she said. Californian Anna, 32, fretted momentarily at the designation, Generation X member. "I'm 32. That's a little old for that, isn't it?" she said laughingly. "I also have a 12-year-old daughter home with my ex-husband."

Not to worry, Generation X is a participant in life's ceaselessly changing ambience, a stage of mind, or more accurately, the media's mind.

That's why Douglas Coupland's 1991 cult-hit novel, Generation X: Tales from an Accelerated Culture, took American campuses by storm. He struck an exploratory nerve ending.

But if you live long enough, you discover that Generation X-ers are variations on a theme of yuppies, hippies, the beat generation and baby boomers. Each group invents their own heroes, shuns existing orthodoxies and recreates the present in their image. Society sees them as cognitive cop-outs. But given a chance, they want to work. They also study hard and play even harder.

I call Generation X the "crossover generation," flexible, easygoing and lovers of diversity. My three kids are dues-paying members.

Down here in this majestically laidback seascape, where friendliness is ordained as a way of life, meals are gastronomic symphonies and party-time is a daily ritual, global Generation X-ers are doing their audacious thing.

In springtime, they also remind us that seasonal rebirth is a time for sun-bathed reflections on the deeper meaning of life. I did — and in the process, what a gorgeous tan I got.

Capital echoes with sound of gunfire as violence spreads through Rwanda

By ARTHUR ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) — The capital echoed from the sound of mortar and heavy machine-gun exchanges today between government troops and rebels advancing from the north. The streets were filled with men armed with machetes, clubs, hatchets and spears.

Six days of ethnic warfare have killed an estimated 20,000 people, and the air in Kigali was heavy with the stench of corpses.

Fears mounted that the entire country could become engulfed in fighting between the majority Hutu ethnic group and the minority Tutsis. Their ancient feuds have etched Rwanda's history in blood.

"We've had trouble before, but I've never seen it this bad," said Tony Wood, a British citizen who has owned a tea factory in Kigali since 1968.

"It seems this has been an excuse for settling old scores," he said.

In the countryside, smoke from burned-out villages wafted over the lush green hills that had once earned Rwanda the nickname "The Switzerland of Africa."

New reports of butchery surfaced in this small Central African nation.

A nun told Spanish National Radio that about 100 people were massacred Monday in the town hall in Kibuye, 85 miles west of Kigali.

Hundreds of Tutsis were reported hacked to death by Hutus at a church-run university in Gisenyi, a town at Lake Kivu near the border with Zaire about 60 miles northwest of Kigali.

In Butare, Rwanda's second-largest city 50 miles south of Kigali, refugees from the countryside told of gangs of men setting fire to villages and killing residents with machetes.

The Rwandan Patriotic Front, a Tutsi rebel force, said it entered the outskirts of Kigali from its stronghold in the north and would not agree to a truce the United Nations has been attempting to broker for days.

"We have not signed any ceasefire agreement and we don't intend to," said Christine Omutoni and Bosco Butera, members of the rebel group's political bureau in Kampala, Uganda.

They said they did not recognize a provisional government appointed Friday.

The interim government today was reported to have fled a hotel where it had been staying in the capital. The British Broadcasting Corp. said the group left in a convoy for an unknown destination, prompting further panic in Kigali.

The country's political parties have been unable to agree who would serve in the government following the bloodshed that has convulsed Rwanda since the presidents of Rwanda and neighboring Burundi died in a plane crash Wednesday.

The government said the jet had been shot down, and people near Kigali's airport reported hearing shooting, but the cause of the crash has not been confirmed.

The death of Rwanda's president ruined a fragile peace between the Hutu-led government and the Tutsi-led rebels.

It also touched off a rampage of killing and looting by rogue elements of Rwanda's army and armed gangs of drunken youths and men who have attacked clerics, aid workers and even slaughtered hospital patients as they lay in their cots.

French and Belgian paratroopers collected a group of expatriates from a school in Kigali today but refused to take 11 Rwandans — U.N. workers and their relatives.

"We spent the night outdoors, without eating, in the cold," said Vinney Nsengiyunuaone, of those left huddling outside the gates of the Antoine de Saint Exupery school. "You've seen the corpses in the road. We're in danger of death."

Sister Pilar Espelosa, one of three Spanish nuns in Kibuye, said she feared the same fate for a similar number of Tutsis sheltered in her mission's hospital.

"I'm trying to talk to the governor," she told Spanish National Radio. "I'm going to call to see if they can send a helicopter or something to avoid the massacre, to keep what happened yesterday from happening again."

Shuttle scans rugged mountain ranges, ocean currents

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space shuttle Endeavour scanned the central Andes Mountains today with super-sophisticated radar that could give scientists their best map ever of the rugged and remote region.

The $366 million in radar equipment had recorded images of about 3 million square miles of Earth's surface by Monday, two days into the flight. That's equivalent to half the United States.

NASA is aiming for 18 million square miles before the shuttle's return to Florida next week.

After some initial difficulty, the radar equipment is providing unprecedented 3-D maps of deserts, oceans and cropland.

Images of the Andes, one of 19 primary targets, were collected early today as Endeavour flew high above Chile and Bolivia.

Scientists hope data collected on the region will yield clues to climatic changes, environmental conditions and plate tectonics, or movements of the Earth's crust. The study could also lead to new topographic maps of the mountains.

"This area is so remote and difficult to reach that adequate maps do not yet exist," said NASA's Billie Deason.

Minutes before the pass over South America, the radar was pointed toward the Pacific Ocean off the east coast of Australia. Images of the East Australian Current will be used to study an area where warm waters flowing from the north meet cool currents from the south, creating wave disturbances.

On Monday, the radar peered beneath Sahara Desert sands for traces of ancient river channels and lost civilizations. One of three radar wavelengths being used can penetrate as much as 10 feet beneath the surface.

"This area is of particular interest, not only for past climate change ... but also the archaeology aspect is extremely exciting," said Diane Evans, a geologist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

Previous radar images and pictures from space led to the discovery in Oman of what's believed to be the lost city of Ubar. Archaeologists believe it was an ancient trading center for frankincense. Some past images also led to the discovery of river drainages in the Sahara that were covered by sand 100,000 years ago.

As Endeavour flew over Algeria on Monday, the radar scanned the Central Sahara for ancient tributaries of the Niger River. The radar also was aimed at the Eastern Sahara in Egypt and Sudan to study what's called the proto-Nile, or ancient tributaries of the Nile River, and other river drainages.

Radar images released by NASA showed some of these ancient river channels; they resembled a sprawling network of thin, frayed, white roots against a black background.

The six astronauts aboard Endeavour are supporting the radar experiments by photographing the areas being scanned. About 2,000 people on the ground are surveying the sites so researchers can verify the accuracy of the radar.

Study: Early years a time of peril for children

WASHINGTON (AP) — For millions of American children, the first three years of life are a time of peril, jeopardized by lack of health care, substandard child care, poverty, violence and crumbling families.

In a report released today on the "quiet crisis" facing the nation's 12 million infants and toddlers, the Carnegie Corporation of New York said as many as half confront one or more risk factors that could harm their future.

The study is the work of a task force of experts from business, education, public health and government brought together in 1991 by Carnegie, a philanthropic organization. Until his nomination as secretary of education, Richard W. Riley was the organization's chairman.

The co-chairmen, Eleanor Maccoby of Stanford University and Julius B. Richmond, a former surgeon general now at Harvard University, said the environments of many young children have deteriorated in the past three decades.

"Infant mortality rates are too high, child immunizations are too low, more are born into poverty, more are in substandard child care while their parents work, more are being raised by single parents," they said.

"When taken together, these and other risk factors can lead to educational and health problems that are much harder and more costly to reverse," Maccoby and Richmond said.

Even before its formal release, lawmakers were talking about the report. Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., described it as a "clear call for action to provide greater assistance for infants and toddlers."

The first three years of life, the report said, lay the foundation for all that follows. Ideally, this learning time is spent with adults who offer nurturing love, protection, guidance, stimulation and support.

Instead, infants and toddlers are society's most neglected age group. One in four lives in poverty and in a single-parent family. And one in three victims of physical abuse is a baby, the report said.

"The risks are clearer than ever before: An adverse environment can compromise a young child's brain function and overall development, placing him or her at greater risk of developing a variety of cognitive, behavioral and physical difficulties," the report said. "In some cases these effects may be irreversible."

According to the report, changes in the American economy and family, combined with the lack of affordable health and child care and the crumbling of other family supports, make it difficult for parents to provide the essential requirements for their children's healthy development.

More than half of mothers of children under 3 work outside the home, and "most parents feel overwhelmed by the dual demands of work and family, have less time to spend with their children and worry about the unreliable and substandard child care in which many infants and toddlers spend long hours," the report said.

Botulism outbreak

EL PASO (AP) — In the most severe outbreak of botulism reported in at least 10 years, 14 people have been hospitalized, including one in critical condition and four in serious condition.

All the patients ate at a Greek restaurant in east El Paso on Friday and Saturday, officials said Monday. It appears they ate skordalia, a creamy, garlicky, potato-based dip.

The restaurant, Tassos, closed voluntarily Sunday and owners are cooperating fully with authorities, making available food for laboratory analysis to track the cause definitively, said Dr. Laurance N. Nickey, director of the El Paso City-County Health District.

Officials from the Texas Department of Health arrived in El Paso Monday to assist in the probe. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta will also send at least one official to assist.

Botulism usually surfaces in food that has been improperly cooked or processed.

China executes company chief for illegal bond scheme

BEIJING (AP) — The president of a Chinese company who embezzled about $375,000 was executed on Monday in another example of the government's anti-corruption campaign.

A vice minister was sentenced to 20 years in prison in the same case. Shen Taifu, 39, president of the Great Wall Machinery and Electronics High-Technology Industrial Group Corp., was executed on charges of embezzlement and bribery totaling 3.25 million yuan ($373,500), the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

His wife, Sun Jihong, company vice president, was given a 15-year sentence. Li Xiaoshi, vice minister of science and technology, who accepted thousands of dollars in bribes from Shen, was fired from his post, expelled from the Communist Party and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

The sentences were among the harshest in China's anti-corruption campaign, which has been going on for several years with little effect.

In many cases, government officials get off with little more than a warning or demotion. But authorities wanted to make an example of the Great Wall case because it gained widespread publicity last year as one of China's biggest financial scandals in recent years.

More than 100,000 people nationwide bought bonds issued by the Great Wall company after reading favorable publicity about it in the official media. The bonds carried 24 percent interest — more than double the return from banks and treasury bonds.

The central bank ordered Shen to stop the bond issue, saying his company did not have permission to offer the notes. Shen maintained the issue was approved by the State Science and Technology Commission and sued the central bank. His lawsuit was thrown out of court.

In March 1993, the government froze Great Wall's bank accounts and arrested Shen on charges of fraud and embezzlement.

Xinhua said Monday that he had given out the equivalent of nearly $29,500 in bribes in cash or in goods to Li and 11 other people, including four reporters, to get the favorable publicity.

The cases of the 11 others were being handled separately.

Shen also was convicted of embezzling $345,000, withdrawing the funds from company accounts and depositing them into his personal accounts.

The Beijing Intermediate Court sentenced him to death on March 4, and all his personal property was confiscated. The Beijing Higher Court upheld the ruling, and it was confirmed on April 8 by the Supreme Court. Executions in China are by a bullet to the back of the head.

Li, 53, accepted about $4,598 in bribes from Shen, the television news said. Xinhua reported that Li had held a succession of government posts that made him influential in science and technology circles.

Before becoming vice minister of the State Commission for Science and Technology, he had been deputy director of the Hubei Provincial Commission of Science and Technology and editor-in-chief of nationally circulated Science and Technology Daily.

When Great Wall began issuing its high-interest bonds last year, Li "made an immediate positive written comment and instructed his staffers to support" the bond issue.

Federal report claims baby boomers will exhaust Social Security trust fund

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barring changes, the aging of the baby boom generation will exhaust Social Security's retirement trust fund by 2036, eight years sooner than was expected last year, a federal report said Monday.

The annual study also warned that Social Security's disability trust fund could go broke in 1995, while Medicare will be able to pay the hospital costs of the nation's elderly and disabled workers for only another seven years.

Congress, however, is expected to shore up the disability trust fund, which pays monthly cash benefits to 5.4 million ill and injured workers and their families, by changing the formula for dividing payroll taxes among the retirement and disability trust funds.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala argued Monday that passage of health care reform would significantly improve the longer-term fiscal health of Medicare by controlling the growth in spending.

The prediction that Social Security's retirement fund would be out of money eight years sooner than believed just a year ago marked the biggest departure from last year's report.

The forecasts, by the trustees of the Social Security and Medicare trust funds, also paint a somber picture of the financial health of three of the federal government's largest social programs.

Together, Medicare and Social Security account for more than one-fourth of the federal budget. They pump $1 billion a day into the U.S. economy and support one in four households.

In their report, the trustees recommended that a panel of Social Security experts be named to conduct an extensive review of the financing issues facing both the retirement and disability trust funds.

The Social Security Administration said members of such an advisory council would be named later this year.

"The nation's domestic social policy agenda is focused currently on two major objectives: reform of our health care and welfare systems," wrote two of the trustees, Stanford G. Ross and David M. Walker, who represent the public.

"Important as these issues are, they must not overshadow the importance of beginning now to seriously consider how the nation should deal with the financing gap that the OASI (old age and survivors insurance) program is projected to face after the large 'baby boom' generation retires," they wrote.

The other three trustees are Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, Labor Secretary Robert Reich, and Shalala.

According to their report, Social Security's retirement trust fund will be able to pay benefits for about 42 years under current law, and for about 36 years with the recommended changes in the formula to bail out the disability insurance fund.

The Medicare trust fund, which covers the hospital costs of 36 million elderly and disabled workers, is likely to go broke between 2000 and 2004, and soaring health care costs are to blame.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, which oversees Social Security and Medicare, said Monday's report "raises some important questions that will demand congressional attention in the months ahead. Our early warning system is working well and we have ample time to respond to the important issues raised by this report."

Ed Lopez, an aide to Senate Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the report suggests the need to "rethink the financing of these programs for the short term and the long term."

Horace B. Deets, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons, the nation's largest seniors' group, called on Congress to replenish the disability insurance trust fund.

"Unless corrective action is taken, the payment of DI benefits could be jeopardized, unnecessarily eroding public confidence in the whole system," Deets said.

In 1993, the Medicare hospital trust covered about 32 million elderly and 4 million long-term disabled Americans at a cost of $94.4 billion. Social Security's disability and retirement trust funds spent another $302 billion on benefits for 42.2 million people.

The federal supplementary medical insurance trust fund, which pays doctor bills and other outpatient expenses for Medicare recipients, is financed on a year-by-year basis and, on that basis, the trustees said it is adequately financed.

Midwest flood survivors anxious as new rain arrives

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rain battered parts of the Midwest for the third day Monday, and anxiety levels were rising along with rivers. It all looked too familiar to survivors of last year's disastrous floods.

Forecasters said it was a typical spring storm, but Denise Warner's customers at the post office in Portage des Sioux were still worried.

"A lot of them are coming in just shaking their heads," Warner said. "They're saying, 'Boy, I sure don't want to go through this again,' and 'Didn't we do this about this time last year?'"

Warner said streets were flooded from heavy rain but no serious problems were reported.

Portage des Sioux, just northwest of St. Louis and wedged between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, was one of hundreds of Midwest river towns ravaged by flooding last summer along the two great rivers.

The two rivers and many smaller streams were on the rise Monday, but Jack Burns, a hydrologist for the National Weather Service in St. Louis, said the Midwest was unlikely to see a repeat of last year's flood.

"I think it's a little too early to get too concerned," he said. "But we'll keep a wary eye."

Much of the heaviest rain that continued Monday was south and east of last year's flood zone. Downpours have caused flooding across parts of Ohio, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and West Virginia. The thunderstorms and flash floods have killed at least four people.

Farmers in southern Ohio said hundreds of acres of farmland were under water. In southeastern Ohio, about 10 families near Chauncey were evacuated Monday, as were residents in flood-prone areas of Miami and Skiatook in northeastern Oklahoma.

Since Sunday, more than 7 inches of rain fell in Altamont, Kan., and up to 5 inches in some parts of Missouri. Flash flood watches remained in effect Monday for much of the southern parts of the states. Burns said the storm system was expected to move out of the area on Wednesday.

The weather service said the Missouri River had risen 7 feet in 24 hours at Jefferson City, Hermann and Washington, Mo., and was expected to crest as much as 7 feet above flood stage in those cities by Wednesday.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old male who works as a sacker at a large supermarket. Today a young couple came into the store and bought $310 worth of groceries (approximately $250 was in food stamps.)

I worked for nearly 15 minutes sacking at full speed to get their groceries loaded into three baskets. (The load was so big, I had to call another sacker over the help me carry their groceries to their car — which happened to be a taxi.)

Guess what kind of a tip I got? Nothing! Not even a quarter. I suppose some people would say, "Well, that's just part of the job for which you are getting paid." Well, so are waiters and waitresses. Their pay amounts to very little, but if they give good service, their tips are what they live on.

Please comment.
STIFFED BAG BOY

DEAR STIFFED: A tip is always optional. I agree, it would have been gracious of that couple to have tipped you, but some people feel that those who are employed are well enough paid, so they either tip very little or nothing at all.

Perhaps they are not aware that most people who work as waiters, waitresses, bellboys, doormen, etc., live on their tips — not on their salaries.

I recently saw a neatly printed little sign posted on the wall of a checkroom. It read: "Tips are optional; our people are paid a living wage."

DEAR ABBY: An acquaintance of ours invited my husband and me to spend the day on their new boat. There were eight of us. When we got on the boat, I didn't see any life jackets, so I asked our host (I'll call him Fred) if he had any. He replied, "Yes, we have lots of them," but he didn't offer us any or point out where they were stored.

As we got into deeper water with more boat traffic around, I asked Fred if I could please have one of those life jackets. He said, "What's the matter, can't you swim?" Then his daughter, who was piloting the boat, asked jokingly, "Don't you trust my driving?"

Abby, first of all, as hosts, they should have offered us life jackets as soon as we got into the boat — it would have put us at ease. Second, they should know that even a gold medal Olympic swimmer could drown in a boating accident if seriously injured.

Please print this with your comments. Maybe someone will write in to say that a life jacket saved his or her life.
MRS. N.M. IN MARYLAND

DEAR MRS. N.M.: Your hosts were irresponsible to have invited guests aboard their boat without giving them life preservers and explicit instructions on how to use them in case of an accident. Furthermore, their "humor" was inappropriate. Water safety is no joke.

DEAR READERS: Your chuckle for today: "If all the economists were laid end to end, they would not reach a conclusion." — George Bernard Shaw.

Estate sets up scout camp fund

The family of Lewis W. Benz recently donated $5000 to the Golden Spread Council of Boy Scouts of America to establish the Lewis W. and Cecil Benz Camp M.K. Brown Fund.

The fund will be used for capital improvements at Boy Scout Camp M.K. Brown, located in Wheeler County near Mobeetie.

It is expected that the fund will be used initially to enlarge the inside of the dining hall in time for this summer's boy scout camping season.

Lewis Benz was a long-time boy scout volunteer in the Adobe Walls Boy Scout Council. The administration building at Camp M.K. Brown was named the Lew Benz Lodge in his memory.

Others interested in donating gifts for improvements at Camp M.K. Brown are encouraged to designate their contributions to the Lewis and Cecil Benz fund held by the Golden Spread Council, 401 Tascosa Road, Amarillo.

Mongolian treasures tell of Genghis Kahn and Chinese dragons

By MARK DENNIS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Genghis Khan and his Mongol hordes have the image of a ferociously powerful people coming out of nowhere like Valkyries descending on a battlefield, to wreak destruction on societies they conquered.

But was this 13th-century warlord an oddity who just happened to build the largest empire the world has ever known, once stretching from the Black Sea to the Pacific Ocean?

Not according to a unique exhibition currently at the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County, which says Khan's empire resulted from centuries of development.

"The Mongols drew on their heritage," said exhibit curator Adam Kessler. "They did not come out of nowhere ... they were not an isolated phenomenon."

The exhibition, "Genghis Khan: Treasures from Inner Mongolia," tells its story with a generous selection of loans from Chinese museums, including lavish gold, silver and bronze jewelry and weapons, rare ceramics and painted wooden artifacts.

It represents an unusual cultural collaboration between the Chinese government and an American museum, and it will travel to several venues in North America through 1995.

Kessler spent the last few years traveling to Inner Mongolia, an autonomous region in northern China, to pull together around 200 items to give "breadth and context" to Khan's notorious exploits.

To say the exhibit is about Genghis Khan himself is a bit of a misnomer. Rather, it explores the cultures that spawned the potent Mongol Empire. It hypothesizes that they were extremely important to the development of ancient Chinese culture long before Khan's grandson, Kublai Khan, relocated to his city of Beijing in 1276.

"The people from the area north of China have a lot to do with the growth of Chinese culture, which in turn has a lot to do with world culture," said the tall, bespectacled archaeologist.

As an example of northern empire influences on Chinese culture, Kessler points to images of dragons — "profoundly important" to Chinese civilization — featured on several exhibited works.

Many of the exhibits have never before been seen in the West. They trace 3,500 years of history, culminating in the height of the Mongol Empire in the 13th century — but their aesthetic merits alone compel attention.

There's a one-of-a-kind intricate gold crown, for example, dated to the Warring States era (403-221 B.C.). It has a turquoise-headed, spring-mounted eagle on top that would move as its wearer moved.

A bronze "Yin-Yang" dagger of the Eastern Hu people (11th to 4th centuries B.C.) features a nude man on one side of the handle, a nude woman on the other. A mesmerizing 12th-century blue Jun-ware censer is glazed in a wavy design that makes it appear to be in motion.

Some pieces of beautiful blue and white porcelain are dated to the 12th century, 200 years earlier than any previous dating of this porcelain. A "thumb-rest" gold cup is similar to those Marco Polo described during his visit to the court of Kublai Khan.

The installation includes a reconstruction of a Mongol tomb, with frescoes brought from Inner Mongolia, and a contemporary Mongol yurt — a type of tent — replete with furniture.

The exhibits are always more than interesting pieces, pleasing to the eye: Kessler uses them to support his groundbreaking work on the ancient history of the region. Wall panels and audio cassettes augment the show's educational aspect.

The exhibition examines the synthesis between cultures that created several of the exhibit's hybrid pieces, such as a tricolor glazed figurine with a dragon's head and a fish's body and tail.

This blending of cultures occurred, Kessler says, because of the northern empire's location on Silk Road and its power to dominate those around them; which led to the incorporation of some of the vanquished people's culture.

B-25 preservationists travel to Liberal, adopt plane

Several members of the National B-25 Preservation Group who live in Pampa recently traveled to Liberal, Kansas to participate in Mid-America Air Museum's "Adopt-A-Plane" program. With 103 aircraft on display, the Liberal facility is the fourth largest air museum in the United States. Their adopt-a-plane program allows responsible individuals or groups to select a particular aircraft to clean and maintain.

Since the program began three months ago, eleven aircraft have been adopted. The Pampanos have adopted a J-model B-25, presented to Mid-America Air Museum by its founder, retired USAF Col. Tom A. Thomas, Jr.

The local group has pledged to clean the "Iron Laiden Maiden" every 45 to 60 days. Working in the first clean-up were Raul Bowers, Bob Marx, Mike Parker, John Triplehorn and Deborah Hendrick. "This project provides an excellent opportunity for our group, which is pledged to the preservation of the B-25 Mitchell bomber," said Parker, who is president of the organization. "The five of us spent about four hours working on this fine old airplane. We vacuumed and dusted inside and out, washed the entire airplane including the propellers and gun barrels, polished all the glass and even mopped up the puddles of oil which had leaked from her engines."

Bob Marx of the National B-25 Preservation Group sits in the co-pilot's seat of the "Iron Laiden Maiden." (Speical photo)

The "Iron Laiden Maiden," which was still flying when placed on static display in the museum, is painted in the colors of the 498th Bomb Squadron, 345th Bomb Group of the 5th Air Force, commonly known as the Air Apaches. During World War II, this particular airplane served in the Pacific and conducted bombing raids against the Japanese. Powered by two Wright R-2600, 1750 horsepower engines, this airplane specialized in low-altitude raids. The B-25J could deliver an awesome 5000 pound bomb load, flying at 200 mph and 200 feet of altitude. Greatly admired for its phenomenal handling characteristics, the B-25 could withstand considerable battle damage and still bring its crew home safely.

The National B-25 Preservation Group, established in August 1992, hopes to sponsor a B-25 fly-in to Pampa in the near future. "We want to make Pampa, Texas the B-25 crossroads of the United States," said Parker. Persons interested in joining the preservation group can learn more about the organization by calling Parker at 669-2506 or Deborah Hendrick at 665-3301.

Piecemakers
Panhandle Piecemakers Quilt Guild met for a regular meeting March 24.

Plans were finalized for the "Spring Festival of Quilts III" show which will be held Saturday, April 30 at the Pampa Community Building.

Raffle tickets for the donation raffle quilt were distributed to those present. Members were reminded to turn in their hand-made door prize items as quickly as possible. Drawings for the door prizes will be held each hour during the show.

Show chair-person Jane Jacobs said the judges for the show will be Emily Nipp, of Calico Cupboard Too in Amarillo, and Frank Phillips quilting instructor Rita Burcham. First, second and third place ribbons will be awarded in several categories. No entry fee will be required. Non-members may contact Darlene Vespestad at 665-2245 for entry requirements and registration forms.

Also, new member Suzanne Pickering from Panhandle showed a variety of amish projects at the meeting.

Piecemakers will not hold a regular April meeting due to the show. The next regular meeting will be May 26, 7 p.m., at the Pampa Community Building.

FHA
The Pampa High School FHA chapter is joining with the Texas Association of Future Homemakers of America to locate former officers and invite them to the organization's 50th anniversary celebration.

Local members and alumni will participate in the anniversary festivities this month during the FHA State Leadership Conference in Fort Worth.

The association requests that former officers contact Sharon Reddell Pierce, state advisor, at P.O. Box 9616, Austin, Tex. for more information or to update historical records.

Host families sought for foreign exchange students

Foreign high school students will be arriving soon into the Pampa area for academic semester and year homestays, and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange (P.I.E.) Executive Director, John Doty, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18 years, are English-speaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurances, and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families. P.I.E. currently has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

P.I.E. area representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal in-home meeting. Prospective host families are able to review students applications and select the perfect match.

As there are no "typical" host families, P.I.E. can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it be a single parent, a childless couple, a retired couple or a large family.

Families who host for P.I.E. are also eligible to claim a $50.00 per month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized tax returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

For the upcoming programs, P.I.E. has students from Spain, Germany, Poland, Russia, Finland, Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Paraguay, Australia, New Zealand, Croatia and many other countries. P.I.E. has also been invited to participate in a special government-funded program to bring scholarship students from the newly independent states of the former Soviet Union to the United States. P.I.E. is a non-profit educational organization that has sponsored more than 18,000 students from 23 countries since its founding in 1975. The organization is designated by the United States Information Agency and is listed by the Council on Standards for International Educational Travel (CSIET), certifying that the organization complies with the standards set forth in CSIET's Standards for International Educational Travel Programs.

Pampa area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting with a community representative may call P.I.E., toll-free, at 1-800-631-1818. The agency also has travel/study program opportunities available for American high school students as well as possibilities for community volunteers to assist and work with area host families, students and schools.

Trail pioneer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jesse Chisholm (1806-1868) was a Cherokee Indian cattle trader who gave his name to the Chisholm Trail.

In 1866, Chisholm drove the first wagon up from Texas through Indian Territory to his trading post near Wichita, Kan. The following year, pioneering cattlemen followed Chisholm's wagon tracks to drive their livestock along the northward trail, which avoided towns, hills and wooded areas.

Notebook New era begins at The Ballpark

BASEBALL

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — California Angels left-hander Mark Langston will undergo arthroscopic surgery on his pitching elbow and miss at least six weeks.

Dr. Lewis Yokum, the Angels' team physician specializing in orthopedics, will perform the operation at Centinela Hospital.

Langston has bone chips and spurs in his elbow and he has tried resting it, but that didn't help.

Langston pitched in the Angels' season opener last Tuesday at Minnesota, allowing two runs and eight hits over 7 2-3 innings in an 8-2 victory. That night, he accidentally hit his elbow on a chair in his hotel room.

On Feb. 24, Langston agreed to a $14 million guaranteed contract extension covering 1995-97.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Cincinnati Reds closer Rob Dibble had surgery on his pitching shoulder, and is expected to be sidelined about three months.

Dr. James Andrews repaired torn cartilage in the right shoulder and cleaned out sections of torn rotator cuff muscles. Dibble will remain in Birmingham several days as he begins rehabilitation.

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Carter of Toronto and Andre Dawson of Boston were chosen AL co-players of the week. Carter hit four homers and drove in 12 runs as the Blue Jays won five of six games, while Dawson had seven extra-base hits, including three homers as the Red Sox opened the season 4-2.

NEW YORK (AP) — Kent Mercker of the Atlanta Braves was selected NL player of the week after pitching the first no-hitter of the season April 8. It was the first complete game of Mercker's career.

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Dikembe Mutombo of the Denver Nuggets was chosen NBA player of the week after averaging 12.3 points, 13.3 rebounds and eight blocked shots in four games while recording consecutive triple-doubles.

HOCKEY

TORONTO (AP) — New York Islanders center Benoit Hogue is NHL player of the week after scoring seven points on five goals and two assists in four games.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Matt Kilcullen, who guided Jacksonville to a big turnaround last season, was hired as Western Kentucky basketball coach.

He signed a four-year contract and succeeds Ralph Willard, who took the coaching job at Pittsburgh last week.

Last season Jacksonville went 17-11 after going 5-22 in 1992-93 — the third best improvement in NCAA Division I. Kilcullen had a 34-50 record in three seasons at Jacksonville.

Kilcullen will receive a base salary of $68,000 a year, plus money from a television show, summer camp and promotional contracts.

Kilcullen inherits 12 of 13 players from a 20-11 Western Kentucky team which won the Sun Belt Conference and an NCAA tournament berth.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Rob Chavez, who coached Maryland-Eastern Shore to its first winning season since 1981, was hired as University of Portland basketball coach.

He replaces Larry Steele, the former NBA player fired after his seventh losing season at Portland. The Pilots went 13-17 last season and haven't had a winning record since 1982.

Chavez, 36, coached Maryland-Eastern Shore the past two seasons. He inherited a 3-25 team and produced records of 12-15 and 16-12.

From 1987-1992, Chavez coached at Chemeketa Community College in Salem, Ore., compiling a 136-24 record. His 1990-91 team was 33-0. He also was an assistant coach at Montana State, Colorado State and Arizona State.

Steele had a 56-141 record at Portland.

TENNIS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Third-seeded Richey Reneberg defeated 1993 NCAA champion Chris Woodruff 6-1, 6-2 in the first round of the $288,750 U.S. Clay Court Championships.

Fourth-seeded Jason Stoltenberg of Australia beat Alex O'Brien 6-2, 6-4, No. 6 Jacco Eltingh of Netherlands outlasted Hendrik Dreckmann of Germany 7-6 (10-8), 6-7 (5-7), 6-3, and Argentina's Daniel Orsanic upset fifth-seeded Luiz Mattar of Brazil 6-3, 7-5.

In other first-round play, Alberto Mancini defeated Martin Stringari 6-3, 6-3 in an all-Argentine match, Gabriel Markus downed qualifier Jimmy Arias 7-6 (7-4), 6-2 and Steve Bryan ousted Brazil's Jaime Oncins 6-3, 1-6, 6-3.

NICE, France (AP) — Third-seeded Magnus Gustafsson of Sweden was upset in the first round of the Nice Open by French wild card Thierry Guardiola 6-7 (3-7), 6-4, 6-2, while No. 7 Wayne Ferreira of South Africa advanced with a 7-5, 6-1 victory over Richard Fromberg of Australia.

In other first-round matches, Andrei Chesnokov of Russia beat Jamie Yzaga of Peru 6-0, 6-3; Jonas Svensson of Sweden defeated Rodolphe Gilbert of France 7-6 (7-5), 6-4; Slava Dosedil of the Czech Republic downed Marcos Ondruska of South Africa 7-6 (7-2), 1-6, 7-5, and qualifier Emilio Alvarez of Spain topped Gilbert Schaller of Austria 7-6 (8-6), 7-6 (7-4).

HONG KONG (AP) — Jeff Tarango upset sixth-seeded Jonathan Stark 6-2, 6-3 in the first round of the Salem Open.

No. 8 Greg Rusedski beat Australian Neil Borwick 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, and Russian Andrei Olhovskiy outlasted New Zealand's Brett Steven 3-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-4.

In other matches, No. 5 Aaron Krickstein defeated Austrian Alex Antonitsch 6-2, 6-2; No. 7 Amos Mansdorf of Israel beat Bryon Black of Zimbabwe 6-4, 6-3; Omar Camporese of Italy topped Argentina's Javier Frana 6-4, 6-3; Japan's Shuzo Matsuoka ousted Venezuelan Maurice Ruah 7-5, 6-4, and Martin Damm of the Czech Republic downed South Korean Chang Eui-Jong 6-1, 6-2.

ARLINGTON (AP) — When the first day at The Ballpark in Arlington began, it looked like the first rainout could ruin the event.

Grey skies and periodic showers kept the tarp over the field for about three hours Monday. Bunting practice was cancelled. The night lights were on before lunchtime.

But just about the time the game was supposed to begin, the skies were clearing. The tarp came off, a piano was rolled out to home plate for Fort Worth's Van Cliburn and a new era was ready to begin.

Fifty-two minutes late, the umpires finally yelled "Play Ball" and all the time (two years) and money ($189 million) that went into building The Ballpark seemed worthwhile.

"To think you could build a new ballpark that has the character that this park does, that reflects the history and tradition not only of the region but of the game, is remarkable," said baseball's interim leader Bud Selig.

For all the great things that happened Monday, one sad event cast a pall over everything.

Holly Minter, 26, was sitting on a rail in the upper deck in right field when she fell 30 feet into the lower deck. She was flown by helicopter to Parkland Hospital in Dallas, where she was in serious condition.

Her accident could lead to some changes in the stadium. There already were complaints that rails were too low.

As for the game, which was won 4-3 by the Milwaukee Brewers, it provided a series of firsts.

Texas' David Hulse got the first hit in the bottom of the first inning, although the next 17 Rangers made outs.

Milwaukee's Dave Nilsson hit the first home run, a leadoff solo shot that went 382 feet into the seats in right field and gave the Brewers a lead they wouldn't relinquish.

Will Clark hit the first Rangers homer and right fielder Rob Ducey made the first of what will be many fielding mistakes as the team gets used to its irregular-shaped home.

The bad bounces may seem like a hinder now, but just wait until later this season when the Rangers have a better grasp on things and they're opponents are baffled, players and coaches say. "I think it's going to be different every time we play," Ducey said.

Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said, "We've got to use the field to our advantage."

Even if it takes some getting used to, players are ecstatic at finally being out of Arlington Stadium, the overgrown minor-league park the Rangers called home for their first 22 seasons.

"Coming in here is just an exhilarating feeling," Texas closer Tom Henke said before the 4-3 loss to Milwaukee. "It gives you an adrenaline boost compared to playing in the old park. I felt like a kid being out there."

The distance between the two is several hundred yards. The feel and the amenities are light years apart.

"You can't compare the two," Rangers third baseman Dean Palmer said. "The facilities here are 10 times better. You're a lot more comfortable here and I think you look forward to coming to the park more. They did it first class."

The Ballpark evokes warm emotions because of its old-fashioned look, much of which is borrowed from other stadiums such as Fenway Park, Wrigley Field and Tiger Stadium.

A lot of the credit for The Ballpark's beauty goes to architect David Schwarz, whom fans made feel like a player Monday by asking for his autograph as he toured the concourses.

"They've been coming up gushing to me," Schwarz said. "Everyone's response is somewhat equivalent of the word 'wow.'"

Sonics play super defense

By JIM COUR
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Call the Seattle SuperSonics Team Chaos. Sometimes, the full-court, trapping defense can even get to the players.

"When I'm in practice and have to go against one of our traps, I even scream at the coaches, 'Damn, why don't you let us run our offense instead of all this trapping,'" Nate McMillan said.

The Sonics' relentless defense may look like a gimmick. If it is, it's good enough to have given the Sonics their second Pacific Division title and the NBA's best record.

Their defense may be just different enough to snare them a league championship.

On Sunday, the Sonics overcame a 17-point deficit in the fourth quarter to beat the Phoenix Suns 111-108 and clinch their first division title since they won their only NBA championship in 1979.

And their defense made Charles Barkley disappear in the final quarter, holding him to a single point. Barkley finished with 23 points and 14 rebounds, but he wasn't there for the Suns when the game was decided.

McMillan, Gary Payton, Kendall Gill and Shawn Kemp don't play defense like the maim-and-maul, man-to-man New York Knicks, who lead the league at 91.4 points allowed to the 96.5 allowed by Seattle, which is fifth overall.

But what the Sonics do is plenty effective and their 955 steals lead the league.

"When Seattle started double-teaming on Charles in the fourth quarter, the other guys have to move to get open," Kevin Johnson of the Suns said. "But Seattle has so much quickness that you have to make them pay when they trap. We didn't."

The Sonics are 57-18 with seven games left, 2 1/2 games better than Houston for the NBA's best record. They also are 104 steals short of the NBA mark of 1,059 set by Phoenix in 1977-78.

McMillan leads the league with 2.92 steals per game. Payton, Gill and Kemp also are in the NBA's Top 20.

The Sonics trap nonstop during a game, no matter who's covering who. In a game against Phoenix, the 6-foot-3 Payton may find himself matched against Barkley, while 6-10 Kemp is out on the perimeter shadowing 6-1 Johnson.

It's by design. "Every guy has a position they're supposed to be in whenever we trap," McMillan said. "It's a defense that's drilled into our heads. If just one guy is not doing it properly, it can look real bad. That's why it takes five guys in order for it to be successful."

Among the six teams in the NBA with 50 or more victories this season, only the Sonics don't have a player averaging 20 or more points a game.

Kemp and Payton were All-Stars. Kemp leads the Sonics in scoring (18.1 points per game), rebounds (10.6) and blocked shots (2.1). Payton is second in scoring (16.6).

The Sonics start Detlef Schrempf and Michael Cage with Kemp; Payton and Gill. McMillan comes off the bench with Sam Perkins and Vincent Askew.

The defense tends to take the fun out of the game for opposing teams.

"It's like, 'Why do you have to trap every time?'" McMillan said with a smile. "You don't get to run the plays that you want to run. You're playing pretty much a pickup game. It's frustrating, especially for a point guard."

Murray passes up final year to play in NBA

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Lamond Murray, who became California's career scoring leader in three seasons, said Monday he will pass up his final year of eligibility and enter the NBA draft.

Murray, a third-team All-America, joins teammate Jason Kidd in leaving Cal early. Kidd, a sophomore All-America point guard, announced last month he will be part of the June 29 draft.

Murray, a small forward, said Kidd's decision had no bearing on his own.

"I guess I feel relieved I've made this decision yet sad knowing that I'm leaving my team, coach (Todd) Bozeman and the staff," Murray said. "It was mainly because of the economic welfare for myself and my family and because of the dream I have to play in the NBA."

Murray's announcement had been widely expected since Cal's season ended at 22-8 following a loss to Wisconsin-Green Bay in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Pampa tennis team looks impressive at Amarillo Relays

Sophomore Jamie Barker and senior J.B. Horton were chosen as the players of the week by Pampa High coach Larry Wheeler after their performance last weekend in the Amarillo Relays.

The varsity team played in the Silver Division of the Relays while members of the junior varsity participated in the Open Division.

The varsity, led by Barker in winning girls' singles and Horton taking second in boys' singles, finished fourth.

Barker defeated Levelland's Paige Parker, the No. 4 seed in last year's regionals, 6-3, 2-6, 7-6, in an outstanding boys final.

"Jamie was real impressive against Parker and in all of her matches," said Wheeler. "She really helped us out."

Horton fell to Plainview's Zack Gibson, the No. 1 seed at last year's regionals, 6-3, 2-6, 7-6, in an outstanding boys final.

"J.B. lost to Gibson in the finals of our tournament and the finals of the Plainview Tournament. He comes closer to beating him each time out," Wheeler said. "J.B. played some of his best tennis ever."

Barker has 40-2 singles record while Horton is 34-14.

In boys doubles, Stefan Bressler and Brooks Gentry finished and solidified the No. 1 seed at this week's District 1-4A Tournament in Borger. They defeated Plainview's Clark-Pitts, the No. 1 seed, 3-6, 7-6, 7-5, and Jarecki-Lockmiller, Hereford's No. 1 team, 6-1, 6-1, in winning three of the four matches.

"Stefan and Brooks played some tough tennis. They're really looking good," Wheeler said. In the Open Division, David Kludt came away with the top JV performance in reaching the quarterfinals of boys singles before losing to Amarillo High's McRay Lanham, 6-4, 6-4.

The varsity continues its season this Friday and Saturday at the district tournament in Borger.

Kruk returns, but Phillies fall to Rockies, 8-7

NL roundup

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

To Philadelphia fans, replacing the Phillie Phanatic is one thing. John Kruk is another story.

Kruk, playing just six hours after undergoing his 16th cancer radiation treatment, went 3-for-5 in his first game of the season Monday as the Phillies dropped an 8-7 home opener to the Colorado Rockies.

A sellout crowd of 58,627 packed Veterans Stadium on a sunny day to welcome home the defending NL pennant winners, who received their championship rings before the game. They also came to see Tom Burgoyne replace 17-year veteran David Raymond as the lovable giant green mascot known as the Phanatic.

But mostly they came to cheer Kruk, the team's rambunctious and long-haired leader.

Kruk batted only twice in spring training before undergoing surgery March 8 to remove a cancerous testicle. He played three times for Double-A Reading last weekend, and was activated before the game.

Philadelphia sports fans, not exactly known for their warmth, showed their love for Kruk during the pregame player introductions, greeting Kruk with a long standing ovation.

"That was a nice thing. It was real nice, and I really appreciate it," he said.

Kruk's dramatic return was upstaged by the Rockies' Dante Bichette, who hit his fifth homer of the season, a two-run shot in the eighth inning.

Bichette, who has homered in all, but one of the Rockies' six games, drove in three runs with his homer and two doubles. He is 13-for-26, leads the majors in homers and has 11 RBIs.

In his first at-bat, Kruk, batting third, drove a high fastball off Mike Harkey deep to center, bringing home Mariano Duncan with Philadelphia's first run and prompting another standing ovation.

"I didn't know whether I should tip my hat or stand there and be stupid," Kruk said. "So I just decided on that."

"Everybody was glad to see him," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said. "I think he'll be better because he's back and playing."

"I'll certainly not play him every day, maybe four or five days a week. It depends on him and how he feels."

Kruk lined a single past second in the sixth and another single in the seventh, but he missed his chance to be the Phillies' hero in the ninth. With Lenny Dykstra on second and one out, Kruk looked at a curve ball for strike three from reliever Darren Holmes.

In other NL games, Chicago beat New York 9-5 and Cincinnati beat Montreal 9-4 in 11 innings. Los Angeles' game at St. Louis was rained out and rescheduled for tonight.

Cubs 9, Mets 5

Steve Buechele drove in four runs with a double and homer as the Cubs ruined the Mets' home opener before 42,467 at Shea Stadium. Buechele doubled home Chicago's first run in the second inning against Bobby Jones (1-1) and then hit a three-run homer off Dave Telgheder to highlight a six-run third.

"When you get a pitch to hit," the third baseman said, "don't miss it."

Willie Banks (1-1), beaten by the Mets in their three-game sweep last week in Chicago, earned his first National League victory, allowing six hits in six innings.

Reds 9, Expos 4

Thomas Howard hit a go-ahead single in the five-run 11th inning as visiting Cincinnati extended its winning streak to five.

Jacob Brumfield doubled with one out in the 11th off Gil Heredia (0-1) and was trapped off second, but advanced on a throwing error by Mike Lansing. Howard singled and scored on Lenny Harris' double for a 6-4 lead. Jeff Branson hit an RBI single and Brian Dorsett hit his first homer of the season, a two-run drive. "That's the kind of game that's real gratifying," Dorsett said. "All the guys on the bench are looking for ways to contribute, and we sure got the opportunity to do that today."

Rookie Hector Carrasco (3-0) pitched two innings for the Reds, who had 15 hits as they stopped a five-game losing streak against Montreal.

Delgado powers Blue Jays past Athletics, 14-5

By The Associated Press

AL roundup

Not having restaurants to homer off didn't change the menu for Carlos Delgado.

Delgado, playing in Toronto's first road game of the season, homered twice and drove in five runs Monday as the Blue Jays routed the Oakland Athletics 14-5.

Last week at the SkyDome, Delgado homered off the Hard Rock Cafe and Windows, two restaurants in the SkyDome.

"I feel pretty good at the plate," he said. "I was in good shape in spring training. I'm just trying to hit good pitches. I don't care where they go."

Since being converted from a catcher to Rickey Henderson's replacement in the outfield during spring training, the 21-year-old Delgado has hit five homers in seven games, with a 917 slugging percentage.

struck out five and walked four. "We're down four runs right away, and mentally that puts a damper on the team," said Witt, who allowed four runs in the first. "After the first inning, I settled down and got some strikeouts. I'll try to put it behind me."

AL batting champion John Olerud also homered twice. He and Paul Molitor each went 4-for-5 for the World Series champions, off to a 6-1 start.

"The first five guys (in Toronto's lineup) are not just talented but professional," A's manager Tony La Russa said. "Right now, they're the best."

In other games, Milwaukee beat Texas 4-3, Seattle 9, Minnesota 8 in 10 innings, Cleveland beat California 9-6, Boston beat Kansas City 8-5 in 10 innings and Baltimore beat Detroit 7-4.

Bobby Witt (0-1) allowed seven runs and eight hits in five innings, from an 0-5 roadtrip. It was the fourth straight loss for the Twins.

Mike Blowers singled in Felix Fermin with two outs in the 10th. Carl Willis (0-1) gave up a one-out double to Dan Wilson and Fermin singled him to third. Rich Amaral then grounded to shortstop Jeff Reboulet, who threw out Wilson at the plate. But Blowers followed with his game-winning hit.

The Twins tied it at 8 with four runs off four Seattle relievers in the eighth.

Indians 9, Angels 6

Rookie Manny Ramirez homered in consecutive innings and had five RBIs for Cleveland in California's home opener.

A crowd of 37,285 — more than 27,000 short of capacity at Anaheim Stadium — watched Cleveland starter Mark Clark (1-0) allow only two hits over seven innings.

Ramirez hit a two-run homer off John Dopson (1-1) in the fifth, then added a three-run shot off Bob Patterson in the sixth.

Red Sox 8, Royals 5

Otis Nixon tripled leading off the 10th and scored the lead run on Billy Hatcher's sacrifice fly for visiting Boston. Tim Lincecum added a two-run triple off Mike Magnante (0-1).

Paul Quantrill (1-0), Boston's sixth pitcher, went 1 1/3 innings and got the win after blowing a save chance in the ninth, when Brian McRae's RBI double capped a three-run rally.

Orioles 7, Tigers 4

Ben McDonald (2-0) allowed two runs and three hits in 7 2/3 innings, and Cal Ripken tripled in two runs in Detroit's home opener.

Baltimore scored four unearned runs in the third inning, and added three runs in the sixth.

Tim Belcher (0-2) gave up seven runs and seven walks in 5 1/3 innings.

Sooners start search for basketball coach

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — University of Oklahoma officials met Monday to discuss their strategy in replacing basketball coach Billy Tubbs, who left during the weekend for the job at Texas Christian.

Among the names speculated upon in the media have been Tubby Smith of Tulsa, John Calipari of Massachusetts, Jim Crews of Evansville, Bob Huggins of Cincinnati and Charlie Spoonhour of St. Louis.

Oklahoma athletic director Donnie Duncan repeated Monday that he has not contacted any coaches, and wouldn't until he met with university personnel and the board of regents. The regents hold their monthly meeting Tuesday and Wednesday in Norman.

"I've spoken with the president today and there has been discussion about what can occur, what should occur and how it should occur in terms of timing, from the standpoint of the rules and regulations we operate under," Duncan said.

It was not certain what day Duncan would outline his plans to the regents, who would have to approve any hiring.

"I think the discussion would be one of a report and providing information and discussion with the regents on how we proceed," Duncan said.

"We all have our jobs to do and our roles from an institutional standpoint. My position always has been that I want involvement from the administration and the regents."

Bob Marcum, athletic director at UMass, said he would allow Calipari to speak with Sooners officials "based on if John is interested in the job."

"I think John's made it very plain he's not interested in going elsewhere right now," he said.

Calipari, who has built a powerhouse at UMass, recently was sought by the University of Pittsburgh but decided to stay put. He is under contract with the Minutemen through the year 2000, Marcum said.

Smith was thought to be locked in at Tulsa with a five-year deal. The agreement was reached on Friday, but Smith hasn't formally signed a contract.

Christopher Small, a university vice president who also is acting athletic director, said he expected Smith to stand by the deal.

"I think, based on all our experiences with Tubby, he's a man of his word and I see no reason to assume he's going to change his mind at this point," Small said.

He also pointed out that even if Smith had already signed the contract, that wouldn't necessarily keep him from taking a job elsewhere.

Smith turned down a lucrative offer from Kansas State before agreeing to stay with Tulsa. His name also has been mentioned in connection with the job at Iowa State if Johnny Orr retires.

Clinton urges quick work on crime package

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton on Monday urged Congress to make quick work of the crime bill, warning that "frivolous" and "political" amendments would annoy an already anxious public.

"The American people have waited long enough," he told a receptive audience of police officers, including a dozen recently hired through his community policing initiative.

"We don't need to waste their time with frivolous or political amendments and delay," he said to the standing-room-only crowd at the Justice Department. "We don't need to take months on a task that can be done in a couple of weeks."

The $15 billion House crime bill, containing "more police, more punishment, more prevention," includes some of Clinton's key proposals: thousands of additional police, a provision sending third-time felons to prison for life, $3 billion for state prison expansion, and $7 billion for prevention efforts.

"We know we're all preaching to the saved today," Clinton told the officers. "Tomorrow when the Congress comes back, there are many other things that will claim their attention. I will ask them to think about many other things. You must say, 'Pass the crime bill now.'"

The House is scheduled to debate the bill Wednesday and Thursday, with possible continued action next Monday and Tuesday.

Some Democrats tried to push the bill through the House three weeks ago, before the chamber recessed for the spring break.

But Republicans accused them of trying to prevent legitimate GOP amendments from being debated. Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., chairman of the Judiciary Committee's crime subcommittee, accused the GOP of trying to keep the White-water controversy in the headlines by keeping the crime bill out of them.

The House Rules Committee is expected on Tuesday to allow a few more GOP amendments to be considered, a congressional source said today.

"The time for politics and partisanship is over," said Attorney General Janet Reno, who spent last week promoting the crime bill on a national tour. "Everywhere I went, I heard the same message, loud and clear: The people want action."

Clinton's top priority is 100,000 additional police, but the House bill seeks only 50,000, authorizing $3.45 billion over six years.

The $22 billion Senate crime bill, passed last fall, authorizes $8.9 billion for 100,000 officers over five years. The House is expected to agree to the Senate's numbers in a conference with the Senate.

Clinton wants the new officers to be involved with community policing — a throwback to the old days of officers walking beats and getting to know the people they serve — like the 12 at Monday's gathering from the Albany, Ga., Police Department. They were hired recently with $730,000 in federal funds.

Community policing "permits the officers to form a partnership with law-abiding citizens," said Albany Police Lt. Earnest Williams.

"Most detest the criminals who have invaded their lives, and are eager to help," Williams said. "When you put a community police officer on the street, you lay the groundwork for pro-active policing, just not reactive."

Other substantial differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill include parts of the three-strikes provision, which is stricter in the Senate bill; the method for funding state prison expansion; an assault-style weapons ban and federalization of most gun-related crimes in the Senate bill; and rules on death row inmates' rights to habeas corpus appeals in the House bill. Both versions would impose the death penalty on dozens of crimes, including carjacking.

Liberals and blacks in Congress oppose the bill's death penalties, but support the habeas corpus measure and a provision letting defendants use race statistics to demonstrate discrimination in death penalty cases to get sentences overturned.

Both are anathema to Republicans, and the Justice Department opposes the race statistics measure, saying it could eliminate the federal death penalty.

Russia, U.S. plan joint troop exercises — on Russian soil

By LARRY RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Americans are coming!

Some 250 U.S. troops will hold joint maneuvers this summer with the Russian military, the first such exercises on Russian soil.

Monday's announcement signaled that despite differences over Yugoslavia and other issues, Russia and the United States want to continue moving away from the tense decades of Cold War confrontation.

Now, instead of planning for war on the plains of Europe, they are holding military exercises to help prepare for future U.N. peacekeeping operations.

Some Russians, however, remain wary of military cooperation with their longtime adversary, the United States, which sent 10,000 soldiers to Russia in 1918 in a failed attempt to crush the Bolshevik Revolution.

Vladimir Zhirinovsky and other nationalists have denounced the planned exercises as a sinister American plot to undermine Russia.

"We know how they have been hatching plans for attacking Russia for nearly 50 years," Zhirinovsky told the State Duma last Friday.

"We're against any joint military exercises on Russia's territory with any foreign army. No foreign army here! That's all aimed at destroying the Russian state."

Nationalists in parliament oppose Russia's entry into NATO's Partnership for Peace program and are outraged by the prospect of American troops training on Russian soil.

The weeklong exercises in July, involving 250 officers and soldiers on each side, will help prepare for future United Nations peacekeeping operations, Defense Ministry spokesman Vyacheslav Sedov said.

The troops will come from Russia's 27th Motorized Rifle Division and the U.S. Army's 3rd Infantry Division, he said.

"There will be no mock combat, since it is not called for by the peacekeepers' mandate, and they will not shoot a single live round," Sedov said.

Maj. Gen. Anatoly Sidyakin, commander of the 27th Motorized Rifle Division, told the ITAR-Tass news agency that the goal of the exercise is "learning to seek political solutions to conflicts."

He called U.S.-Russian cooperation "inevitable."

The exercises will be held near the town of Totokoye, about 435 miles east of Moscow. The site was used for a 1954 above-ground nuclear test involving Soviet army servicemen, but Sedov said the level of radiation is not dangerous.

Partnership for Peace allows former Soviet bloc Warsaw Pact members to take part in peacekeeping, military exercises and other NATO activities, but without membership in NATO.

Anti-melanoma vaccine holds promise for other cancers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Researchers using the diseased cells of melanoma patients have developed a vaccine that they say dramatically reduces the recurrence of the deadliest form of skin cancer.

The method also could be used to develop vaccines for other forms of cancer.

The researchers used the vaccine on high-risk patients with advanced melanoma. Even after surgery, most of these patients develop additional tumors and die.

People with the advance form of melanoma represent a small fraction of the disease, which is diagnosed in 32,000 Americans annually.

Dr. David Berd of Thomas Jefferson

University in Philadelphia said his team treated the patients with a vaccine made from their own cancer cells and another chemical to stimulate the immune system.

After three years, 70 percent of those vaccinated remained cancer-free, compared with 20 percent in patients treated with surgery alone, Berd told the American Association of Cancer Research on Monday.

"There is no reason why it's not applicable to other cancers," Berd said. "A great deal of this work has been concentrated in melanoma merely for tradition."

Berd said he believed anti-melanoma immunizations for high-risk patients could be available within five years from now, if scientists can synthesize the vaccine.

Dr. Joseph Bertino, head of pharmacology at the J.R. Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, said other anti-cancer vaccines are being tried, but the Jefferson results are the most striking yet.

He said he was particularly excited that the researchers were closing in on particular peptides, molecules that trigger the body's anti-tumor defenses.

He said he would like to see longer-term studies, but agreed that if the results hold up, they could help develop vaccines for other forms of cancer as well.
