J. E. Birdwell Farm-Ranch Toured

Conversion Of Land Boosts Production

Approximately 40 people climbed aboard a bus Thursday afternoon and traveled to western Bailey County for the annual Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture Committee Farm Tour. This year, the tour covered operations on the J. E. Birdwell Ranch and Farm in the Coyote Lake area.

First stop was at Coyote Feed Yard adjacent to now dry Coyote Lake to pick up Birdwell, who conducted the three hour tour.

Birdwell explained the process involved in changing the former range land and brush-covered sandhills to fertile productive farm land. His men started chopping corn into ensilage to the 30,000 ton ensilage pit at the feedyard. He said the tonnage is not as good as he had hoped, but the irrigation circle had been pulled back and forth to a Love grass field in an effort to establish that crop. Birdwell explained that he expected approximately 16 tons from the ensilage being cut late in the week.

Fields were prepared to be drilled with barley and wheat was being drilled at the time of the tour. According to Birdwell, barley was grown on his land for the first time last year and he expressed his pleasure with the results of the first years growth. He said the grazing capability was very good and it yielded 92 bushels to use in the feed yard.

His farm land has been in cultivation for three to nine years, and now has 28 irrigation circles. He explained that range land to support a cow and calf required 30-35 acres year round, while he has stepped up production with his farm operation to 200-300 pounds of beef per acre. As the tour was conducted, Birdwell explained step-by-step what operational procedures were used, what seed and fertilizer utilized and what he did to achieve the maximum yields from the crops planted on his farm operation.

Emphasizing that "I would rather be remembered for what I have done with the land, than to be remembered for how much land I have," Birdwell declined to say how many acres his extensive operation covered. He said, however, that approximately one-third of his operation is now in farm land and under cultivation, with back-to-back crops on some of the land. He said as soon as wheat was harvested, corn was planted immediately for the ensilage crop. On his Love grass crop, he said the grass does a good job, but requires one inch of water a week and a lot of fertilizer. He grazes one-half of a field at a time, while the other half of the field is putting on new growth.

The rancher and farmer said he prefers that his cows calve on the range as range-born calves are not as subject to disease. He said the carrying capacity of the Love grass more than makes up the slight weight difference as he has experienced with native grass.

Birdwell also emphasized that he keeps his feeding operation as simple as possible, and uses only seven to eight full time workers, along with his sons, John, Clay, Britt and Scott. He showed his feed mill and explained how the feeds are blended, weighed and mixed right on the truck to take to the feeding troughs.

According to the time of the year, the number of cattle on Birdwell Ranch and Farm will vary, and he explained some crosses, and testing with cross-breeds, while explaining, that he uses no exotic cattle in any of his cross-bred tests.

At the feedyard are the feed mill, elevator, grain storage and dryer used for his operation. Several workmen were busy at the mill as the tour was made. He explained each of their operations to the group and told how his operation had been simplified to increase production and cut expenses.

Coyotes have presented a problem at calving time, said Birdwell. So two years ago a government helicopter was brought in to dispose of coyotes. On the first time in, with 13 hours in the air in three days, 138 coyotes were eliminated. The helicopter came back in last year and killed 35-40 coyotes near the lake in a four hour period of time.

This year, he has not been bothered by any great extent with coyotes. Rattlesnakes have also not been a major problem this year, he added, as the weather has been too dry. "You just don't see very many rattlesnakes when the weather is real dry," he commented.

Birdwell concluded the tour back at the feedyard as he explained the process of finishing out the steers in the pens. He said it costs 48 cents per pound until steers reach a

THANK YOU FOR HOSTING THE TOUR . . . Tommy Black, left, executive Director of the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce, thanks J. E. Birdwell following a tour of his extensive farm and ranch operation in southwest Bailey County. Birdwell told the touring businessmen and agriculturists of his conversion of sandy, brushy range land to productive farm land in cultivation and producing good crops. In the background is Gil Lamb. He was previously manager of XIT Steakhouse in Muleshoe in 1974.

Thomas Millsap was moved Monday from the VA hospital in Amarillo to the Farwell Convalescent Home.

Neal Dillman received a complimentary letter from the Salado ISD School Board this week about the Cheerleaders while in school at SMU.

Rev. Joe Bentley commented, "As a member of the Salado ISD School Board of Trustees, I would like to commend your cheerleaders conduct at SMU. I was attending pastor's school there and noticed that their manners and decorum set them a step above most of the other high school students attending there."

"If they can lead cheers as befits their superb conduct, I know they will go a long way."

Screwworms Continuing Siege On Texas Cattle

Screwworms have mounted a siege on the Lone Star State this spring and summer, and the coming months hold little promise for relief," said Spencer Tankley, county agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Virtually all of Texas is now subject to the menacing flesh-eating livestock pest, points out Tankley.

Recent cases in Montague county in North Texas and in Baylor, Cottle, Kent and Motley counties in the Rolling Plains mean that screwworms are now within striking distance of all livestock in the state. Therefore, it's vital that producers check their livestock regularly, spray for flies, treat any wounds, and send any worms found in wounds to the Mission Lab for identification, emphasizes Tankley.

If the worms are identified as larvae of the screwworm fly, then action will immediately be taken to bombard the area where the case was reported with sterile flies reared at the Mission Lab. Sterile flies will breed with wild screwworm flies, rendering any eggs that they may lay as sterile. Thus the eggs won't hatch. Of course, the screwworm fly dies after mating, so the mating process with the sterile flies breaks the reproductive cycle of the screwworm.

Texas screwworm cases in June totaled 2,306 and were

The cost of that canned fruit you have been buying at the grocery store is headed higher very soon. In the past two weeks, more than tons of peaches, apricots, pears and canning tomatoes rotted in the fields in California's central valley while cannery workers shut down 70 canneries over a wage dispute. The canning companies lost $1 million per day and the growers lost four times that amount while the strike was on, so Washington held marathon negotiating sessions between the workers and the canneries in order to get things settled. They did -- with a new contract which increases pay 32 percent over the next 36 months.

Labor is more than 50 percent of the cost of canned goods. The new wage package will add two to three cents to the cost of a can of cling peaches or peeled tomatoes. Canners and growers fear that the new wage settlement will put the California producers in an "uncompetitive" position, since the production of asparagus and some other labor-intensive crops is declining in California. The cannery workers came through the strike in fairly good shape, but the growers are the ones who had lots riding on their crops which went unpicked and unpacked. Cannery workers had a high "case carryover" from the last season. This is why no shortages are expected even though the consumer will pay more for canned fruits and vegetables. Cannery workers start with a base pay of almost $5.00 an hour. The loss in canned fruit and vegetable production is another factor in the jump in canned goods. California produces all of the canned apricots eaten in this country and 85 percent of the

Mahon Condemns OSHA Ranch Publications

Congressman George Mahon today called upon the Secretary of Labor to review the performance and take corrective action against officials of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration responsible for "a ridiculous waste of the taxpayers' money" to produce a booklet entitled, "Safety with Beef Cattle", which has been held up to scorn by farm and ranch groups across the nation. At the same time Mahon lashed out in a House speech on July 30 at OSHA officials for proposing field sanitation standards for farms and ranches which "are totally unworkable and ridiculous".

The 19th District Congressman used these examples to complain about harassment of the private citizen by government personnel charged with the administration of laws passed by Congress.

The booklet referred to by Mahon contains numerous admonitions such as, "When floors are wet and slippery with manure, you could have a bad fall"; "you can get too tired when working with cattle".

"We must declare war on such ineptness if respect for government is to be restored and maintained," said Mahon.

The proposed sanitation standards, which among other requirements, would make man-processed tomato products. During the week long strike, growers estimate that over 30 percent of the apricot crop, 14 percent of the cling peach crop, five percent of the pear harvest and almost three percent of the processed tomato production were lost and irreplaceable.

datory toilet and handwashing facilities within a five-minute walk of farm and ranch workers, have also been heavily criticized by farm and ranch groups.

In his speech Mahon pointed out that those responsible for the actions "do not have to answer to the public for the outrages they perpetrate in the name of administering the law. By their actions they bring contempt on the government. If there is to be a free democratic society, the people must support and believe in their government. Without this trust, government breaks down. We must find a way to instill in the Federal worker that he is a servant of the people and that he holds a public trust".

YOU CAN BANK ON IT!

Bill Loyd, President Muleshoe State Bank

What is money? Sure, in the U. S. it's dollars and cents in different denominations, but does money have to be paper and metal?

"Money," a Notre Dame economics prof said, "is anything 'commonly used' as a medium of exchange or as a standard of value."

Tobacco, the principal form of currency in Virginia in 1619, was used to purchase wives from England for the Virginia colonists, for example. The price: 100 pounds of tobacco ($36-$48 in today's currency).

Corn, musket balls, sea shells, beaver fur, nails, rice -- anything "commonly used" was classified as "money" in colonial days because of the shortage of hard coin.

The first recorded instance of official paper money legally created by an American governmental body was in December 1690, when Massachusetts issued bills valued from 5 shillings to 5 pounds.

Money then can be anything if everyone agrees on it as a medium of exchange.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm prepares himself for the fall elections.

Dear editor: With the fall elections not too far off, when the country will be electing people right and left from local to national offices, with millions and millions of campaign words to be heard, the best advice for a voter to remember is that there are truths, half-truths, and political statements.

A political statement, as I understand it, is an art form. You don't lie, but you don't tell the truth either. If asked about busing, you come out in favor of quality education. Since most politicians seem to be sharper than most TV reporters, they can get by with this for a full half-hour's interview. If some uppity reporter won't turn loose and keeps asking a tough question, you take so long in answering, going all the way back to the Peloponnesian War in 400 B.C., that everybody forgets what the question was.

But the best and shortest answer to a tough question I know about was given by a 12-year-old boy a generation ago. He and his older brother had the job of milking the family's two cows every day, and they got into a contest to see who could milk the most.

Consistently, the younger one started winning. His bucket was always brimful, the other's only two-thirds. But there was something peculiar about it.

"That milk tastes watery," the family complained.

"Son," the father asked, "Are you putting water in that milk?"

"No sir," the boy said. "I am not."

This is a classical political statement. You could go before a grand jury and say it. You could defy a Congressional investigating committee with it. You could look the TV camera in the eye and say it.

The boy was not indeed putting water in the milk. What he was doing, he admitted later on with a grin, was putting milk in the water. Started out with a quart of water in the bottom of his bucket.

It's a system that works. You a candidate opposed to increased taxes? When elected keep the tax rate the same like you promised but raise property valuations.

There's nothing handier than starting out with water in the bottom of the milk bucket. But perhaps it ought to be discontinued when you're grown, and is, by diarmen, but very few politicians are diarmen.

Yours faithfully, J.A.

double those recorded in June of 1975, points out Tanksley. That makes June the third worst on record since the screwworm eradication program got underway in 1962. Through July 28 a total of 6,398 screwworm cases have been confirmed in Texas this year.

certain stage, then costs 55 cents to put on a pound. He showed a pair of steers he would be selling before that time in order to avoid the spiraling expenses in feeding out the cattle.

Following a refreshment stop in the air conditioned offices at the feedyard, the farm tourists returned to Muleshoe looking at green crops in the western part of the county, to Highway 84.

Obey the rules of the road if you want to live longer.

And, traditionally, screwworm cases have been high during the fall months. So, the outlook isn't good, surmises the local county agent.

However, a new effort that may eventually keep the screw-worm out of Texas will be kicked off in late August when the first screwworm eradication program begins in Mexico. That's when the first consignment of flies from the new insectary at Tuxtla Gutierrez is scheduled for delivery to Baja, Calif.

Miss Jennings, Hamilton Wed In Candlelight Ceremony

Miss Mary Kathleen Jennings of Muleshoe, and Evan Charles Hamilton of Route 4, Dimmitt, exchanged vows in a candlelight ceremony, August 1, at 3 p.m. in the First Methodist Church of Muleshoe. The Rev. Charles Dunnam of Lubbock officiated at the double ring services.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James R. Jennings of Muleshoe and Mr. and Mrs. B.T. Hamilton of Dimmitt.

Music for the wedding was furnished by Mrs. W.T. Watson at the organ. The pre-nuptial music was classical selections. Soloist, Tom SoRelle of Littlefield, sang "If Ever I Would Leave You", "Wedding Song", and "The Lord's Prayer". Mrs. Watson played the traditional wedding march and the traditional recessional.

Maribeth Dillman registered guests.

Decorating the altar was a large arrangement of white gladiolas, blue carnations, spider mums and English ivy. A seven branch candelabra holding blue candles, entwined with ivy and tied with blue and white satin bows were on each side of the altar.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and presented in marriage by her parents. She wore a formal length gown of ivory satin organza fashioned with a high Victorian neckline of scalloped chantilly lace, and bishop sleeves accented with Venice lace motif were caught at the wrist with lace cuffs. The front of the bodice was accented with rows of scalloped lace. The full length A-line skirt fell to a lace hemline. OOPS . . . Loading a bulldozer can be hazardous as these men found out Friday morning. They were located approximately five miles west on FM 1760 when the bulldozer being loaded apparently slipped to the side and partially off the big truck. A problem was posed when no equipment showed up heavy enough to life the bulldozer. The solution? One of the workmen got into the cab and backed the bulldozer off the truck -- very carefully!

I re-read this little paragraph recently and it always impresses my mind. I think how true it is and how much better the world would be if we applied it to our lives.

It follows: "The Kingdom of God will never belong to anyone who is impure or greedy. When you follow your own inclinations your lives will produce these evil results: impure thoughts, eagerness for lustful pleasures, hatred and anger, envy, murder and drunkenness. But, in the lives God controls, are love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, gentleness, and self control."

Let us each day put our trust in God, for his guidance, that we may be a blessing to some one we meet each day and do the best we can.

College Grant Plan Boosts Savings

Thanks to an innovative Texas Legislature and the persistent urging of Independent Colleges and Universities of Texas, Inc. (ICUT), the Texas Tuition Equalization Grant (TEG) program presently allows some 18,000 Texas students to have a choice in selecting a college that will do the most for them as individuals. As an added benefit, Texas taxpayers are saving millions of dollars.

Now entering its sixth year, the TEG program will award about $9 million in grants to students in accredited Texas independent colleges and universities during the 1976-77 school year. Locally in the Texas Panhandle, two independent colleges - Lubbock Christian College and Wayland Baptist College in Plainview - have students enrolled through the TEG program. In the 1975-76 year, Lubbock Christian College enrolled 245 students receiving $102,795 and Wayland accepted 185 students who received $86,750 in personal grants. Statewide, 43 independent colleges and universities have been selected by students under the program.

During its 65th session in 1977, the Texas Legislature will determine the extent to which the state will continue to use this successful program.

Dr. Norman Hackerman ICUT

president and President of Rice University in Houston, said continued legislative funding, is important to assist this program "in behalf of the many Texas young people who desire to attend the independent colleges and universities which they feel will best fulfill their educational needs. The Tuition Equalization Grant provides the Texas resident who wants to be a student a wider choice in choosing an institution of higher learning. It makes available to the student a diverse set of institutions to which he or she can go. The student also can choose to attend a small institution.

Hackerman noted that the public policy program, in addition to giving Texas young people the right to make an educational choice, has also saved Texans countless tax dollars every year by utilizing the available resources of the more than 40 independent colleges and universities located over the state.

In 1974-75 alone, if all the 14,721 TEG recipients had been enrolled in a four-year state college or university, it would have cost the taxpayers of Texas a great deal more than the amount invested in the TEG program.

Students Required To Have Vaccination

The A/New Jersey (swine) flu immunization program may make parents overlook other immunizations their children need before they can enter Texas schools.

State law requires children have adequate polio, DPT (diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus), measles and rubella vaccinations before they can attend school, the Texas Medical Association says. Some school districts have additional requirements such as a smallpox vaccination or a tuberculosis test. In addition to these required procedures, a physician may feel additional inoculations would help a particular person. A doctor also can give advice on whether or not an individual can medically tolerate certain vaccinations.

About five percent of Texas school children and an estimated 10-20 percent of the preschool population do not have complete immunizations, a Texas Department of Health Resources (TDHR) spokesman says.

Even this relatively high Texas immunization level is only "a small margin of protection for the public. About 35 percent of the national preschool population has incomplete immunizations and as a result there has been a recent nationwide outbreak of measles, says John Witte, M.D., the U.S. Center of Disease Control's immunization director. The outbreak, centered mainly in the Midwest, probably can be traced to cutbacks in massive immunization programs two years ago, Dr. Witte says. A similar effect was noted in 1968.

Texas immunization standards before a child can enter school include three doses of polio vaccine with at least one dose given after the fourth birthday. By the time many children are one year old, they have had three doses of polio vaccine and three DPT vaccinations. Texas does not require polio vaccinations for students over age 19. Three doses of DPT vaccine with at least one dose given after the fourth birthday also are necessary. DPT vaccine helps protect against diphtheria, Pertussis (whooping cough) and tetanus.

The state also requires one measles vaccination and one rubella (German measles) vaccination. Children should be at least one year old before receiving these vaccines. If a child is 12 or older the state waives the requirement for measles and rubella vaccinations.

Parents wondering about their child's immunization records should check their own records if they know they are updated. If there is any doubt contact the physician or health department or TDHR also can give general information on necessary injections. Alton Burton Participated In Rescue Work

Navy Seaman Alton L. Burton, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alton L. Burton of 510 East Austin, Muleshoe, participated in the rescue of more than 300 American and foreign evacuees from Beirut, Lebanon as a crewmember of the aircraft carrier USS America in support of "Operation Fluid Drive."

The refugees boarded unarmed landing vessels and were ferried to the amphibious transport ship USS Coronado. The extraction of the civilians from the beleaguered Lebanon capital was accomplished without incident and the evacuees arrived safely aboard the Coronado for transport to Athens.

In a message from President Ford, the task force was commended for its high degree of professionalism which contributed to the success of the operation. His ship is homeported in Norfolk, Va., and is currently deployed as a unit of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

A former student of Palo Duro High School, in Amarillo, he joined the Navy in November 1973.

development of the TEG program is specific and convincing. The program has helped maintain a healthy, pluralistic and dynamic higher education system to serve the differing needs of Texans. Additional numbers of young people have been able to enroll in the independent sector because they have been given an economic choice. Before the TEG program, many middle income families were forced to choose state-controlled higher education because of the tuition difference. These same middle income families were the ones who often could not qualify for aid in other programs, designed mostly to help only the lowest income families.

The state has saved far more than it has spent in financing the TEG program. It presently costs the state and average $1,545 (minimum) annually in operational expense to educate a student in existing state higher education facilities. This is more than twice as much as the $600 maximum grant authorized in the TEG program.

Additionally, a billion dollars-worth of educational facilities already existing at independent colleges and universities is available to the state at no cost compared to the $7,765 minimum in capital outlay required to prepare a place for each student in a new state college or university. The TEG program is also providing Texans with an opportunity for significant tax savings in the years ahead. Repeated statements of legislators have called for fuller utilization of existing educational resources.

Programs such as TEG are also gaining support nationally. Over 40 other states now provide similar programs of state aid to their students who choose to attend independent colleges and universities. All such grants are based on the premise that the dual system of independently controlled higher education is one of the strengths of the nation; it must be preserved and advanced in partnership.

The TEG program came into existence partly as the result of an extensive study started in 1965 of independent sector resources available in Texas. On the recommendation of the Coordinating Board, the Tuition Equalization Grant Program was introduced on the floor of both houses during the 62nd session of the Texas Legislature in 1971.

To be eligible for a Tuition Equalization Grant, a student must be a Texas resident as defined by the Coordinating Board and meet the resident requirements as defined by law for Texas resident tuition in fully state-supported institutions of higher education; be enrolled as a full-time student in an approved college or university; be required to pay more tuition than is required at a public college or university; and not be a recipient of any form of athletic scholarship.

The student should also establish family financial need in accordance with procedures and regulations of the Coordinating Board; and not be enrolled in a theological or religion degree program.

NPK means wheat.

Nitrogen
An application of 80 pounds of actual N typically results in 15 extra bushels of wheat. At 1976 spring prices, 5 pounds of nitrogen cost about $1.00, and will return one extra bushel of wheat. Figuring the wheat at low as $3.00, this is a 3-for-1 return on an investment in nitrogen.

Phosphorus
The phosphorus level in most soils is too low for optimum yields. This has been documented by extensive soil test data. Take the guesswork out of your wheat program by getting soil samples and having them tested. As a general rule, most wheat soils need 50 to 80 pounds of P<sub>2</sub>O<sub>5</sub> for good yields.

Another consideration: When nitrogen and phosphorus are applied together, the phosphorus works harder than when applied alone. Nitrogen assists the wheat plant in taking up phosphorus—and this is especially important in early stages of growth.

Hudson Land and Cattle Co., in Arizona, reports on their alfalfa yields in 1974. They report five cuttings from the no MEDINA area - nine cuttings from the MEDINA area. MEDINA boosted hay yields well over two tons per acre over no MEDINA. (Copy of full seasons records available on request.)

Dr. T.A. Alhashimi of Stephen F. # Birth Certificates School Necessity

Every year at about this time, the Texas Department of Health Resources issues a reminder that many children would prefer to forget: School will be starting in just a few weeks.

Even though most people are in the midst of enjoying their summer vacations the personnel of the Bureau of Vital Statistics are preparing for the annual rush. They know that in another month or so, thousands of Texas families will suddenly realize that they're not quite ready for school. One thing they'll need, if they have children that are entering school for the first time, is a birth certificate.

This fall there will be some 230,000 new first graders in the schools throughout Texas, and proof of age is necessary for the first-timers -- either in first grade or in public kindergarten. Total public school enrollment is likely to exceed three million children.

At the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the Texas Department of Health Resources, the requests for birth certificates are already beginning to arrive. It takes a sizeable staff just to open the thousands of letters received daily, let alone search out the requested certificate, make a certified copy, and mail it. Over the years, the process has been refined to the point that most requests are filled within three or four days. After all, the Bureau of Vital Statistics has been handling birth records since 1903.

Last year, the Bureau received, reviewed, queried, and filed 559,000 records of births, deaths, fetal deaths, marriages, divorces, and annulments of marriage. Another 31,200 birth and death records were corrected.

More than 273,000 requests for certified copies of vital records were received, resulting in 386,000 searches of the files. In response to these requests, 254,000 certified copies were issued. In all, nearly three-quarters of a million pieces of mail were received and processed. Services of one kind or another were provided to more than 1.1 million people.

The problem, of course, is the individual who waits until the last possible minute before requesting a record that he needs. So many people make this mistake that the inevitable result, every year, is a log-jam of requests, with all of the delays, confusion, and possibility for error that naturally occur under those circumstances.

Parents can avoid those problems simply by taking a few minutes right now to request any birth records or other certified records they need. You can write directly to the Bureau of Vital Statistics, Texas Department of Health Resources, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756. Or you can obtain a certified copy of a birth certificate from the city registrar in the city where the child was born, or the county clerk in the county of birth; duplicate records are maintained in each location. In many cases, a brief visit to the county courthouse will ensure that you have the proper record in the shortest possible time. If you do write to the state office in Austin, don't forget to include your check or money order for two dollars, the fee for a certified copy of a record. If you don't include the two dollars with your request, that must mean more correspondence, more delay, and more frustration for you. And, when you write, include the child's name, the place of birth, the date of birth, and the names of the parents -- including the mother's maiden name. All of this information is necessary in order to make sure you receive the correct record you need.

Next year by this time, the experienced personnel of the Bureau of Vital Statistics will be even better equipped and prepared to handle the annual rush of birth certificate requests. This coming October, the Bureau is moving into a new records facility designed specifically for the protection and handling of more than 20 million birth, death, marriage, and divorce records that are already on file -- and the millions more that will be received in the future.

By using automated microfilm equipment and electronic data storage and retrieval, the Bureau is able to ensure that every record is protected from loss -- and, just as important, that every record can be found when it's needed. Not only must individual records be retrieved, but as many as 700 requests every year are made for analyses and statistical summaries of the data contained in the records. This kind of information is absolutely essential to many public health programs.

In all of these ways, the Bureau of Vital Statistics exists to serve the public. Right now, this important part of your Texas Department of Health Resources can serve you better if you'll take the time to ask for any records you will need in the next few weeks.

An investment in Your Future

ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

Where to...?

Did you ever look down railroad tracks and wonder where they went... or put your ear to the track, listen to the hum, and try to guess when the train would reach you? These questions we may have asked when we were children, but as adults it is time to ask... Are we headed in the right direction? Are we prepared for things in the future regardless of when they will arrive? Choose now the path you will take. Let the church help guide you. "Oh that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes!"

The church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Soil Fertility Research Featured At Halfway

Nearly 100 million dollars get buried beneath the soil of the Texas High Plains each year. The money is in the form of fertilizer, some 650,000 tons of nitrogen, phosphorus, and occasionally a touch of potash.

Soil research scientists will tell field day viewers at Halfway next month, Tuesday, September 14, what happens to the fertilizer under cotton, sorghum, corn, millet and sunflowers and how environmental factors influence fertilizer and crop interaction.

Dr. Art Onken, soil chemist with The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock, and Kenneth Banks, research associate for the Experiment Station at Halfway, say the chemistry of the High Plains soil is changing "continuously and irreversibly" as fertilizer is applied and used up by crops. The extent of this change and what farmers can do to assure that it continues to be beneficial are the topics of a tour stop near soil fertility research plots at which Onken and Banks will be stationed during the field day.

The afternoon event, beginning at 1:00, will be hosted by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Stations at Lubbock and Halfway. Beginning this year the field day will alternate between the two station sites, with Halfway serving as host this year.

Cooperators are the Texas Agricultural Extension Service; Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture; National Weather Service; and the High Plains Research Foundation.

Experiment Station soil research efforts are aimed at fertilizer use efficiency, says Onken. Based on research data accumulated from test sites on farms throughout the High Plains as well as from the Lubbock and Halfway research sites, correlations are made between fertilizer use and plant growth. Recommendations are then made for fertilizer applications under given soil and crop conditions.

Other attractions besides tours of research plots at the Halfway Station include farm implement displays and audio-visual programs. Texas Agricultural Extension Service specialists will be on hand for individual conferences about production practices and problems.

Drug Name Controversy Stirs Differing Opinions

(From The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal).
 Editor's note: The question of whether brand name prescription drugs are worth their generally higher prices is examined in this last installment of a three-part series.
BY JIM BUSBY
 Staff Writer

"A rose is a rose is a rose." But is a drug a drug...? With druggists claiming essentially, "You get what you pay for," one wonders: Does that include the quality of medication being sold?
 That question uncovers some disagreement among those who feel brand-name drugs are of better quality than generic drugs and those concerned with wide variances in prescription drug prices.

 An Avalanche-Journal survey of 31 Lubbock pharmacies has shown a $6.53 difference in the cost of 100 tablets of five milligram Valium, a popular brand-name drug.
 One expert explained there are, generally, three terms for a given drug: chemical, generic and brand names.
 For example, Valium is listed as diazepam (generic name), 7-chloro-1, 3-dihydro-1-methyl-5-phenyl-2H-1, 4-benzodiazep-in-2-one (chemical name) and Valium (brand name).

 Dr. A.W. Holmes, department of internal medicine chairman at the Texas Texas University School of Medicine, said there are two general points of view: (1) That brand-name drugs usually cost more than generic drugs; (2) That brand-name drugs have better "standards of preparation and preservation."
 The standards of pharmacopoeia are standards of quantity, but "They don't talk about bio-availability," Holmes said.
 Bio-availability may be defined as the efficiency with which a given drug is utilized by the body.

 Holmes said bio-availability is "not so much a problem with brand names, because you know what you're working with."
 "My own tendency," he said, "is to lean toward brand names," but he added, "If I were dealing with a pharmacist I knew, and I knew his sources of medication were good, I wouldn't worry."
 Holmes speculated, based on conversations he's had with other physicians, that most doctors "primarily go with brand names." A major reason for that he said, is that they see advertising for brand-name drugs.
 Since the pharmacist can determine the price of a given drug, Holmes said, it's conceivable for the generic drug to cost more than the brand-name drug.

Quality depends more on the company producing the generic drug, he said.
 Holmes said there is some justification for higher prices for brand-name drugs because research and development costs for both successful and unsuccessful drugs must be recovered through drugs that are sold.
 A local Ph.D. pharmacologist also said there is "some question of bio-availability." He explained, "Bio-availability is not so important because drugs are not administered in relation to body weight and age and other factors of administration 'in the real world.'"
 He said most medical schools deal mostly with generic drugs.
 Sam Dameron, a member of the State Board of Pharmacy, said he will attend a meeting in Austin beginning August 24, where the board will review violations of state regulations and look at all pending litigation. He also commented that their attorney will have an update on the Gibson and Page cases.

 "As soon as any further information is available," he concluded, "I will inform the Muleshoe Journal as soon as possible."
