Friona Industries Sees Its Best Quarter

FRIONA, Texas (Nov. 3)—Friona Industries, Inc., achieved net income of $360,936, or 29 cents per share, on revenues of $10.9 million in its first quarter ended September 30, 1975.

This compared with a loss of $379,028, or a deficit of 30 cents per share, on revenues of $9.3 million in the first quarter of the prior fiscal year.

"It was the best quarter that the Company has had in the past 18 months," said John G. Carrothers, president. "However, the U.S. cattle industry is still a long way from returning to normalcy and parts of the total industry continue to be hard hit by adverse conditions which persist.

"Most of the profitability for the quarter was attributable to the sale of Company-owned cattle," he explained.

About 7,900 head of Company-owned cattle were sold during the quarter at an acceptable profit level. Company-owned cattle inventories were at approximately 15,300 head at the end of the first quarter.

The Company's three cattle feedlots also contributed to income. Occupancy at the feedlots, which have a total capacity of 124,000 head, averaged considerably below normal as it was for the industry nationwide.

"There has been some improvement in occupancy since the end of the quarter, but indications are that custom feeding operations will remain relatively stable over the short

Bailey Cotton Crop Estimates Up

Duane Howell, farm editor for Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reports expectations of the third largest cotton crop for a 10-year span and says cotton prospects were bolstered by the October weather. He forecasts a cotton crop pointing toward a crop of 1,733,700 bales, getting his information from industry officials in the High Plains area.

Spencer Tanksley, Bailey County Extension Agent in Muleshoe says, "From the standpoint of Bailey County, we made an increase estimate of the bales of cotton. We feel there will be an increase due to the very favorable weather record in the month of October. We estimate cotton will produce between 50,000 bales this year in Bailey County."

"Most farmers are waiting for a good killing freeze before harvest operations begin," Tanksley said. "However, some cotton is being harvested at the present time," he pointed out. The last estimate for Bailey County was 48,000 bales. The present estimate is now up about 4,000 bales.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange and the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., place the expected production in the 25-county area at a slight 21,100 bale increase from the forecast of a month ago.

A spokesman said, "Committee members saw no reason for any really significant change in the total prospective production."

It was pointed out that the biggest changes were in the estimates for certain counties. The revisions were due more to re-evaluations and new information than to any substantial alterations in the overall condition of the crop.

The cotton crop could be the third largest of the 10-year period back through 1966, despite indications that per-acre yields will be below average, if the estimated output is achieved.

The crop is expected to top last year's drought-shortened 1,193,100 bales by a wide margin and would rank behind annual gin-

Methodist Women Say Bazaar Great

The Annual Harvest Bazaar, sponsored by the United Methodist Women of the First United Methodist Church of Muleshoe, was termed a huge success by Bazaar workers. Over 725 persons were fed a traditional Thanksgiving dinner and numerous items were purchased from the booths set up by the Methodist Women. Mrs. Royce Harris said overall the Bazaar cleared approximately $5,000.

Mrs. Harris pointed out that last year's Bazaar served 570 persons and this year they served about 725, including around 185 plates that were taken out. This is the third year for the Bazaar and though it is sponsored by the Methodist Women, the whole church gets involved in the Bazaar, contributing time and items for the sales, including the men.

This year the proceeds from the Bazaar will be used for the hospital, approximately $1,000; a missionary the church sponsors and for repairs in the church.

The Methodist Women prepared the dinner with Mrs. Wanda Shafer in charge of this committee. Mrs. Jeanice McVicker was the chairman of the Bazaar with Marilyn Cox as co-chairman. Lunn Box and Kay Harris were in charge of the money booth, for change.

The Candy Booth was co-chaired by Sally Ellis and Pat Nichols. Pat King and Nonnie Howard were in charge of the Bake Goods Booth and Melva King and Judy Lambert had charge of the Canned Goods Booth. The Stitchery Booth was under the direction of Mae

USDA Announces More '76 Cotton Provision

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced additional major provisions of the 1976 Upland Cotton Program.

The announcement included the following major provisions:

--a preliminary Upland Cotton Loan Rate of 37.12 cents per pound, applicable to middling one-inch (micronaire 3.5 through 4.9) net weight, at average location in the U.S.

--a Seed Cotton Loan Program for upland cotton.

--an Upland Cotton National Production Goal of 12,376,000 standard bales of 480 pounds net weight.

--an Upland Cotton National Base Acreage Allotment of 11,000,000 acres.

--an Upland Cotton State Base Acreage Allotments.

The Department announced other major program provisions earlier. On August 21, USDA said there will be no acreage set-aside or conserving base requirements under the Upland Cotton or the Feed Grain and Wheat Programs next year.

The preliminary Upland Cotton Loan Rate of 37.12 cents per pound compares with the 1975 crop loan rate of 34.27 cents per pound. It reflects 90 percent of the average price American cotton in world markets for the three-year period ending July 31, 1975. The law provides that if the calculated loan rate is higher than the current level of average world prices for American cotton, the loan rate may be established at 90 percent of the current average world price. A further evaluation of cotton prices will be made before the beginning of the 1976 cotton marketing year (August 1, quality strict low middling 1976).

Loans available to program cooperators for different individual upland cotton qualities will be based on the middling 1-inch rate, after adjustment to 1-1/16 inches, the base quality now applicable to spot market and futures price quotations. A schedule of premiums and discounts for these various qualities and the base loan rate for strict low middling 1-1/16 inches cotton at each warehouse location will be issued at a later date. As in 1975, loans will be available to cooperators for a term of 10 months from the first day of the month in which the loan is made.

The Upland Cotton Seed Loan Program, initiated in 1971, is aimed at helping producers reduce harvesting, marketing and processing costs. It will be out that good weather for cotton prevailed during October.

Since the crop had been damaged severely by freakish mid-September weather extremes which had produced widespread leaf desiccation, the cotton was not in condition to take full advantage of the favorable October weather.

Supak said, "a killing frost now would be advantageous." "Most farmers need a freeze to kill the plants and allow them to begin once-over stripping operations."

Chemical desiccants and defoliants have been applied to cotton by some farmers, but most are awaiting a freeze before beginning the harvest, according to the agronomist.

Harvest-aid chemicals, with some exceptions, have been applied somewhat selectively to areas that had been infected with verticillium wilt, a late season plant disease, and to cotton that had been most severely affected by leaf deterioration in September. Supak pointed out.

The crop is coming in well, although receipts are still light. They are well ahead of the pace of the last few years except for the early harvest of 1973.

Three thousand-nine hundred samples have been classed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture last Wednesday, bringing the season's total to 18,200 bales. Only 432 bales had been classed on the comparable date last year.

Classing receipts in the past often have totaled between 50,000 and 60,000 bales a day, at the peak of the harvest.

Two years ago, through about the first week of November, the classing total stood at 158,000 bales. Totals in other recent years have been only 2,900 by November 8, in 1972 and 306 and 9,500, respectively, by November 12 in 1970 and 1971.

Throughout the state, the cotton harvest through last week had reached 29 per cent completion, on schedule with last year and also with the three-year average tempo.

The crop now seen for the 25-county Lubbock area, based on current estimates, would account for 60.6 per cent of the Texas upland cotton output, with forecasts at 2,860,000 bales, and 19.1 percent of the entire U.S. production, predicted to total 9,058,800 bales.

High Plains will produce more cotton than any state except California, there the crop is projected at 1,950,000 bales, and Texas, according to current estimates. Mississippi is the only other state expected to top the 1-million-bale mark, with a crop estimated at 1.2 million bales.

Lubbock County alone is expected to produce as much cotton as the entire state of Georgia. The production in both is estimated at 180,000 bales.

The Upland Cotton National Production Goal of 12,300,000 bales (standard bales of 480 pounds, net weight) is equal to the sum of the estimated domestic consumption and estimated exports for the 1976-77 marketing year, which begins August 1, 1976, plus an allowance of 5 percent of the total for market expansion, plus an adjustment to provide carryover stocks equal to 50 percent of the average offtake for the three preceding marketing years.

Base Acreage Allotment of 11,000,000 acres is apportioned to states on the basis of the acreage planted (including acreage regarded as having been planted) to upland cotton within the farm acreage allotment in these acreages as ment in 1970 and the farm base acreage allotment in 1971 through 1974, with adjustment in these acreages as required by law.

The farm allotment does not limit the amount of cotton a producer can plant, but is computed only for the purposes of making payments should a payment be required. Failure to plant at least 90 percent of the farm allotment will result in a reduction in any payment due and could result in a reduction of up to 20 percent in the 1977 farm allotment.

The moratorium on grain sales to Russia and Poland, whatever the reason behind it, is a seriously disruptive element in agricultural trade, according to Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock. While cotton, per se, is not involved in the trade stoppage, PCG nevertheless is concerned for two reasons, Johnson says. Most of our cotton producer members are also grain producers, he points out, "and any government interference with international trade in any agricultural commodity is a dangerous precedent for all commodities."

The board of the Texas Association of Cotton Producer Organizations (TACPO), of which Johnson is a member, has taken a firm position against the moratorium, citing the fact that an average of about 35% of all U.S. cotton production goes into the export market. An even greater percentage of Texas cotton is sold to foreign countries.

"It is vital to the U.S. cotton industry and especially to our Texas industry that we have free and uninterrupted access to foreign markets," Johnson said, adding that the grain embargo casts a shadow of doubt in the minds of overseas customers on the dependability of the U.S. as a continuous supplier of agricultural commodities, cotton included.

Congressman George Mahon of Lubbock and Senator Carl

Curtis of Nebraska met last September 24 with President Gerald Ford in Washington to convey the strong opposition of farmers across the country to the Administration's sales embargo.

Wilmer Smith, a New Home farmer and Past President of PCG, attended the meeting with the President and reported to the PCG board that the President then expected to lift the embargo by October 11. However, as this is being-written on October 17, sales are still suspended.

Meanwhile, Ford's State Department is negotiating with Russian officials for an agreement under which Russia would buy a minimum amount of grain from the U.S. every year, and there is speculation that the moratorium may not be lifted until such an agreement is reached. There is conjecture that the agreement is all but ready for signing and that only its ties to related negotiations for Russian petroleum sales to the U.S. are holding up final resolution.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm looks at television news this week, more or less.

Dear editor:
According to an article I read in a Newspaper last Monday night in between plays to keep from having to listen to Howard Cosell, most people now get their news from television.

This was stated as a confirmed truth and I got to thinking about it. Possibly it's true, considering how uninformed most of us are about what's going on in the world, although that's no test; most of us were in that shape even before television was invented.

Now I'm not berating television news. For example, the other evening during the TV news I marveled at the fact that man has put a satellite into orbit to bring a live picture from Japan to Muleshoe to tell us that Nancy Kissenger has bought a shaving brush for Dr. Kissenger, when all along I'd thought television commercials had persuaded everybody to use shaving cream from a squirt can, unless of course they'd tuned in another network and were persuaded to use an electric shaver. It's clear the Kissengers don't watch much television, but that doesn't explain why he has to keep flying back and forth between those mid-east countries to make sure what he found out yesterday is still true today, which most of the time it isn't.

But back to the notion that most people get their misinformation, I mean their news, from television. It's true they get the big news there first, like when Patty Hearst is captured or when the President is fired at by a woman, whom TV first reported was a man. But to say people get most of their national and international news from television 30 minutes a day, take away 5 minutes for commercials, and most of their local news from television another 30 minutes a day, take away 10 minutes for commercials and 5 more for car wrecks, is to be uninformed on how human nature operates.

Newspapers, which now have more circulation in the U.S. than ever before in history, furnish I'd say 50 times more news than television, and word-of-mouth beats both, if you're on speaking terms with your neighbors. When the country was young it sometimes took two months for a speech by some Congressman in Washington to reach the outer parts of the nation, and sometimes you get the feeling those were bound to have been the good old days.
Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stovall

The following poem by Helen Steiner Rice is one that I read and got a blessing from every time I read it. It brings to my mind the Glory of God and of you, my family and my friends, without whom my life would be less happy and my days more dreary.

It also brings to my mind the glory and thought that God is in his Heaven and all is right between me and my Heavenly Father.

It follows: "I have never seen God, but I know how I feel... It's people like you who make him so real... My God is no stranger, he's friendly and gay... He doesn't ask me to weep when I pray... It seems that I pass him so often each day in the faces of people I meet for my way... He is the stars in the heavens, a smile on some face... A leaf on a tree, or a rose in a vase... He is winter and autumn and summer and spring... In short, God is every real, wonderful thing... I wish I might meet him much more than I do. I would if there were more people like you".

I hope you will get the blessing I feel when you read it and that the love of our God daily surrounds you both now and in the future years.

HECE Holds Party

Halloween was celebrated by the HERO chapter, Thursday, October 30, with a party, at the Pleasant Valley Community Center at 7:00 p.m. The party began with refreshments of sandwiches, chips, dips, popcorn balls, caramelized apples, cup cakes, and cokes. Everyone arrived dressed in costumes of every shape and color. There were witches, pumpkins, hoboes, gypsies, indians, and many others.

As everyone arrived, the food began to disappear. There was music and games. Fortunes were also told. Dressed in black lace with beads, rings complete with a crystal ball was Mrs. J.W. Roberts, the fortune teller.

Everyone found out how many times they were going to get married and how many kids they would have. As the fun went on, everyone bobbed for apples. With time running out the clean up began. Clean up was not quite as much fun as the party, but by all means wasn't boring. Brooms were flying and rags were wiping as a spooky party house became a spotless community center.

The HERO girls send a special thanks to Mrs. J.W. Roberts for her help in decorating and telling the fortunes. Also the girls would like to send a special thanks to their sponsor for just being around when needed. The HERO's next big project will be the showing of a movie the Monday before Thanksgiving.

Advocate For The Handicapped

In today's climate of consumer activism, the Easter Seal Society - the nation's oldest and largest voluntary agency serving the handicapped - is placing new emphasis on its advocacy role in order to improve the quality of life for the nation's 23.6 million handicapped persons. Long before the term became popular, the Easter Seal Society was considered by many to be an advocate for the handicapped by helping to reduce or eliminate the barriers to fulfillment of human needs. Easter Seals has provided service to individuals, influenced legislation and placed the case of the handicapped before the public. But the new meaning of advocacy goes beyond physical restoration and sheltered or competitive job opportunities for handicapped children and adults. Easter Seals is extending its efforts to making sure that the disabled in all communities have equal opportunity for decent housing, adequate transportation, public school education, recreation, accessibility to buildings, services and cultural events that most of us take for granted in our daily lives. Do your part to help handicapped children and adults. Contact your local Easter Seal Society to find out what you can do to become an advocate for the handicapped.

Poole Chemical Launches New Program

TEXLINE, Texas -- Poole Chemical Company, Inc., is launching a new marketing program - selling fertilizer to the Volume Buyer in a six state area - announced Jim Poole.

The company, in its 19th year of operation, will be marketing anhydrous ammonia, nitrogen solutions, phosphate solutions, and dry fertilizer. They also will be marketing herbicides, insecticides, micro-nutrients, and agricultural equipment.

The expanded area will include the regions of western Oklahoma, western Kansas, southern Nebraska, eastern Colorado, eastern New Mexico as well as the Panhandle of Texas.

According to Poole, the company has appointed R.T. "Buck" Frederiksen of Lubbock, Texas, to be sales manager to coordinate the new program.

"We will be able to formulate the product to meet the exact needs of the farmer's soil, selling quantities of at least 20 Tons and delivering the product to the individuals specified location," Poole said.

"With this new type of sales approach within the industry, we feel fortunate to draw upon the expertise of a man like Frederiksen," he said.

Frederiksen, prior to joining Poole Chemical, was the plant manager of the Phillips Petroleum solutions plant in Hurlwood, Texas, a manufacturer of fertilizer solutions.

He has 22 years experience of farming and ranching. In addition, he has six years experience in retailing and 13 years experience in manufacturing of fertilizer.

Poole explained that Frederiksen was a pioneer in using the latest fertilizer systems designed by TVA. "He modified and improved the mechanics of the TVA system, and to date the plant he built and operated has been copied by companies in Virginia, California, Arizona, Texas and Sweden," he said.

The Texline Company utilizes the same type of T-reactor with added blending facilities. "We have the capabilities of formulating a solution for the many varying soils in our marketing region," he said.

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN—In previous columns we've talked about problems people sometimes have when overuse or unwise use of credit have gotten them into a financial bind.

But what about those persons who are on the other side of the fence—those who may have money problems because they cannot get credit?

Such persons, for various reasons, have been unable to obtain credit at all, and therefore must pay cash for purchases or do without them.

Many times these people are young people, retirees, working women, or persons with a low income. The questions most often asked by such persons are how they can build up a credit record if no one will grant them credit, and what it is that credit grantors look for when extending credit.

What many credit grantors look for is a steady income, prompt payment of bills, a regular savings record, and cautious use of credit.

Part of the answer to building up a credit record is realizing that special efforts may be needed if you cannot meet these standards.

If you are still in school, it may be a good idea to set up a savings account if you have a job. Later, apply for a loan using your savings account as collateral—and be sure to pay the note on time. This is one way to begin a good credit rating.

If you have recently joined the working world and are having difficulty establishing credit, contact the credit manager of several department stores to see if they have special limited credit accounts. If so, apply for one, make some purchases on the account, and pay your bills promptly. This is also a step toward a good credit record.

A retired person who plans to purchase on credit should apply for it while still employed, since it likely will be easier to get then than when retired. Or, plan to build up a savings account before retirement to use as collateral for any loans that might be desired in the future.

Women sometimes have had difficulty in obtaining credit, and if they are married, occasionally have been unable to get credit in their own name. However, under new federal laws soon to be in effect, women who meet other credit tests must be given equal consideration for credit. They can request that such credit be in their own names, if they are married and wish to do so.

Low-income people may also have more difficulty getting credit. In some cases, it can be helpful to ask for credit at neighborhood stores where you trade regularly. If you have patronized a local dry cleaner for several months and have paid your bill on each trip, it may be a simple matter to ask that an account be opened in your name. After a period of using such credit and paying promptly, you can use this establishment as a credit reference.

If you have problems obtaining credit, you may want to get special advice from a banker, a credit manager, a credit counselor, or other experts.

If you have other consumer complaints, get in touch with the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division, your county or district attorney, or your local Better Business Bureau.

Grain Sorghum Sales Team Begins Seminars

LUBBOCK—A four-man grain sorghum sales team, sponsored by the U.S. Feed Grains Council, has begun three weeks of European seminars promoting the use of U.S. No. 2 yellow sorghum.

The team left Texas November 1, and is expected to make stops in England, Spain, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Yugoslavia and Poland.

USSR Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Boris Runov, has extended an invitation to the team to make presentations in Moscow also, before returning to the United States on November 26.

Team members are Elbert Harp of Abernathy, executive director of Grain Sorghum Producers Association and Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Board; Jack King of Lubbock, GSPA-TGSPB research director; John Baumgardner, animal nutrition specialist from Texas Tech University, Lubbock and Dr. Lloyd Rooney, cereal chemist from Texas A&M University, College Station.

The seminars will focus on countering the poor image which sorghum has in some countries because of its tannic acid content. U.S. No. 2 yellow sorghum is very low in tannin, compared to bird-resistant sorghums from other countries.

The U.S. Feed Grains Council is a cooperative effort of private enterprise and the U.S. government, dedicated to expansion of foreign markets for U.S. agricultural products. The council operates out of its Washington, D.C. headquarters and 12 foreign offices located around the world.

Harp is immediate past chairman of the council.

Last year Congress passed the Privacy Act of 1974. It was passed for a very good reason. Citizens, worried about the tremendous flow of personal details of individual consumer's buying habits, marital status, income, credit standing, bank balances, savings accounts, etc., put pressure on the Congress to stem the public nature of the vast amount of information flowing from a computerized society. The law is very specific on what the federal government must provide to taxpayers in the way of records it collects on them by the many government agencies and how that information the agencies collect is to be distributed to other users.

But, private business was let off the hook. There is not now any control over the way information gathered by private sources about the personal lives of individuals is used for business purposes. The question is whether banks, direct mail companies, insurance companies, credit bureaus, publications and hospitals should be subject to the same regulations as the federal agencies. One of the biggest problem areas is the invasion of privacy caused by mailing lists, credit cards and the use of Social Security numbers by banks, state agencies and others.

Another hot potato is the use of federal income tax returns by some state officials for questionable political purposes.

Banks, especially are very careful to maintain good security in keeping information about their customers' private lives. But the spread of computerized financial transactions will doubtlessly cause some areas where leakage of information may occur with the result of possible blackmail or intimidation of private citizens. In some respects, control of information about a person could be tantamount to controlling that person.

The amount of information the government has about your private life is frightening. Business has also added to that store of information. Now the question is, how accurate is that information and who has the right to learn about the intimate details of your private life?

ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

READY FOR New CARGO

This ship has been emptied of its cargo, and now stands ready to take on fuel and more cargo for further service. If this ship were to remain empty, it would be of no value and would be failing in the one thing that it was built for.

Man was created to be a companion to God, and when he does not join in worship with God, he is failing in the reason for his creation. Make your life mean something for God...

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

May Need Permission To Do Maintenance Work

Farmers, highway maintenance men, and city employees who clean out ditches or move any dirt where cattails and willow trees grow—and many other places as well—may soon be faced with getting permission from a United States Army colonel. And they must also receive comment from the Texas Water Quality Board, according to terms of a recent Washington, D.C. federal court order.

The possibility of having thousands of individuals and local governments swamped in new federally inspired paper work for many routine operations is very real, according to Hugh C. Yantis Jr., executive director of the Texas Water Quality Board.

Yantis said that if this is a back door approach to land use planning, which has been turned down by Congress on several occasions, it ought to be recognized as such and dealt with openly.

This new problem for land owners and local governments arose when a group of environmentalists, organized as the Natural Resources Defense Council Inc., filed a lawsuit against the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in a Washington federal district court. The judge ruled on March 27 that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers had to apply their permit requirements for navigable waters to "all waters of the United States."

First indications were that even routine farming operations might be covered, and such an uproar ensued that some provisions were changed.

However, regulations as now proposed by the Corps of Engineers with the approval of the Environmental Protection Agency have still met with almost unanimous opposition from all areas of Texas government. Corps permits are now to be required for the excavation of ditches, diking, dredging or filling in of wetland areas, among other things.

The court ruled that tributaries to navigable streams were part of the law, which means that brooks small enough to step across are frequently included in the new law, as well as thousands of ponds larger than two surface acres in size.

The City of Houston has been told that it must have an Army permit for cleaning about 8,000 miles of ditches located within the city limits. And the Texas Highway Department also must get permission before moving any dirt where bridges cross streams.

In other words, running a road grader along certain ditches can be a federal law violation with penalties of up to $25,000 per day unless an Army district engineer okays it, after consulting with the Texas Water Quality Board.

Applications must be filed with the Commander of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers district offices, along with a $10 fee for small projects, and $100 for those where more than 2,500 cubic yards of dirt are moved. At present it takes about three months to get a permit, if one is granted, and if the program grows rapidly, the time required may be longer, according to the Corps.

One provision of the Engineer's current regulation calls for including areas which are characterized by the prevalence of vegetation that requires saturated soil conditions. This means cattails, willows, and bulrushes, among many other forms of common vegetation found in almost all parts of the state.

Congress was petitioned by the Texas Legislature on May 27 in a resolution which stated that the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Speaker of the House of Representatives and the 64th Legislature are "mutually and unalterably opposed to the expansion of federal authority over land and water resource management as would follow from the implementation of the proposed rules as published."

House of Representatives Bill 6935 is now before a subcommittee, and it provides for amending the water pollution control act to limit the areas covered to the traditional concept of navigation.

Chromosomes Reveal Defects of Genetic Background

Though your body contains billions of cells, each cell has all sorts of information about you, your parents and other ancestors.

If you are normal, this immensely personal record is contained in 46 microscopic, colored organelles called chromosomes. If you're not normal, you may have extra chromosomes or deformed ones. Your chromosomes will often show if you've used hallucinogenic drugs, such as LSD.

The chromosomes carry the genes and these constitute the genetic blueprint for constructing a new individual. This genetic blueprint is handed down to the offspring via the egg and the sperm, each of which has 23 chromosomes.

The fertilized egg (ova) as it starts to build a new being has 46 chromosomes, half of which it got from the mother and half from the father. It has been estimated that these instructions for building a human being, if translated into the English language, would fill a thousand books, TAES Mammalian Cytogenetics Laboratory of Animal Sciences.

This laboratory, the only one of its kind at Texas A&M, provides an important service to physicians in the diagnosis of chromosomal diseases such as Down's syndrome (Mongolism), Turner's syndrome, Klinefeller's syndrome (both involve sex chromosome) and others.

This laboratory also does genetic counseling on a limited basis, and when conditions warrant, chromosomal analysis may be made on future parents.

Such an analysis can tell some couples that if they marry they should not have children. On the other hand, sometimes such an analysis can show that an individual, whose forebears had some dread factor, is free of the factor.

An analysis of an individual's chromosomes takes several days; a blood sample must be processed in the laboratory for 72 hours. After that, a white blood cell is broken open, spread on a microscope slide, and stained.

Chromosomes are photographed and enlarged; this process is repeated on several cells. Chromosomes in each photograph are then arranged in a standard order called a "karyotype." The cytogeneticist can study the karyotype for the presence of abnormalities and thus aid the physician in his diagnosis.

"Although the greatest thrust of mammalian cytogenetics is in the area of basic research, it has given the practicing physician many answers as to the causes of certain genetic diseases and has provided a powerful tool in clinical diagnosis," Kieffer concluded.

Farming--Like Rolling High Dice

Taken from the Hereford Brand, Courtesy of Jerry Glover, Lazbuddie.

Our friend James Roberts, publisher of the Andrews County News, has a way with words that seems to put matters into their proper perspective. In a recent column he takes up the fight for the farmer and we believe his thoughts on this subject should be of interest to most of our readers and therefore we are loaning this space to him this week.

Farming, more than any other business, is like rolling high dice at a craps shooter's convention.

And now that everybody and his neighbor is getting into the act on the sale of wheat to the Russians, farming should be considered a hazardous occupation.

The editorial "we" has been used by newspapers since the founding of this nation but the past several weeks was the first time we have seen it applied to a farmer's harvest.

How did it suddenly become "we" shouldn't sell "our" wheat to the Russians? Does the wheat belong to the American consumer? Does it belong to the government? Does it belong to George Meany and the longshoremen?

Where were the "we's" when the poor devil was standing out in the middle of his field, week after week, scanning anxiously the skies for possible rainbearing clouds that would moisten the field enough for him to get his seed into the ground?

Where were the "we's" when the first small stand withered under the searing sun and the farmer wrestled with the agonizing decision as to whether to plow it up and replant or go with the poor stand?

Where were the "we's" that late afternoon when the man and his wife stood at the edge of that south 160 acres and stared in shocked disbelief at the utter destruction. Twenty minutes earlier, a lovely green, waving stand of twelve-inch high plants had completely disappeared under the savage seven-minute hail that had swept in from New Mexico and laid waste everything to the Caprock?

Where were the "we's" when the cotton farmer walked out into the green field and noticed for the first time that the rich, ripe bolls appeared sickly on second glance and a closer look revealed that the weevil had bored all the way through and the entire crop was heavily infested?

Where were the "we's" when the farmer hunted high and low-and in vain-for someone to help him and his wife and two teenage sons hoe the weeds that overshadowed the field despite the earlier application of expensive Treflan?

Where were the "we's" earlier in the year at planting time when the price of milo, cotton, and wheat were so low that despite his choice of what to plant, it didn't appear that even if he dodged all the perils of nature, that the harvest would be enough to pay fuel, fertilizer, and seed expense much less his own labor?

And now that the wheat farmer has managed to raise a bumper crop despite the adversity of weather, inflation, and soaring fuel costs, suddenly everyone, suddenly all the "we's" want to rush in and tell him who to sell to and for what price.

All of a sudden it's not the farmer's crop any longer. Now it's "our" crop.

Jumpin' jehosphat! The farmer has a commodity for sale and at long last the whole world wants to buy it. Now, instead of storing it in expensive elevators, buyers everywhere are clamouring for it.

And as far as we are concerned, the American farmer ought to sell his crop to the highest bidder whether he be the American consumer, an Arab potentate, a Russian wheeler-dealer, or a Ubangi native.

It is hard for us to visualize a Russian, an Arab, or a Ubangi native having more bargaining power, more purchasing power, more money to spend on food, than an American citizen.

But if the Russian citizen is more willing to pay the price of American wheat than is the American Consumer, then we firmly believe that the farmer should be free to sell overseas. It's his crop just as surely as it's the artist painting, the manufacturer's sewing machine, the author's book, the designer's gown, the oil man's well . . . and if you don't want to pay the going price-do without! That is Free Enterprise!

Prices good thru November 12, 1975. We reserve the right to limit quantities. None sold to dealers.

Friona...

term," said Carrothers. "Manufactured feed and grain sales were marginally unprofitable," he said. "However, we expect that both of these operations will return to a measure of profitability in our second quarter."

Sales and income from animal health supplies continued to be depressed, reflecting the overall cautious attitude of both cattle raisers and cattle feeders toward industry conditions.

"We are continuing our comprehensive study of the total needs of cattlemen for animal health supply products along with our program of expense reduction and operational efficiencies for our nine Hi-Pro Veterinary Supply Stores.

"One factor that became evident during our study was that as cattle prices went into a steep decline, cattle breeders became unwilling to invest in artificial insemination services for exotic and domestic breeding. The Company is now implementing its decision to phase out the sale of cattle semen and related services," Carrothers stated.

In the area of new products, an agreement is being negotiated with a company that has marketing expertise in the sale of lawn and garden products to test market bulk dehydrated, organic humus fertilizer utilizing the cattle manure from Friona's feedlots.

"Over the near term, indications are that our entire complex will begin showing a higher degree of profitability," he said.

"Feedlot occupancy for the nation as a whole is slightly above this time last year but remains well below the 1972-73 level. Many of the people who were financially wiped out in the past two years do not have the resources to return to the grain-fed cattle business on a large scale, he commented.

"For the cattle industry as a whole there is still much confusion due to the disruption of marketing and supply patterns.

"A large supply of grass-fed cattle, both cows and calves, have been slaughtered to fill the needs of both the rancher to decrease his herd size and the consumer to fulfill her beef needs. We expect this grass-fed volume to markedly decrease as we go into the winter and early spring months. Also, there is a shortage of hogs available for slaughter which should exist into the summer of 1976.

"The combination of these facts lead us to believe that the total tonnage of all red meat will be in relatively short supply. If our conclusions are correct, this will greatly increase the demand for grain-fed beef, which in turn, should strengthen our total business," Carrothers concluded.
