

A county school superintendent in Virginia got tired of what he called "social promotions" and decreed that students would be promoted only if they passed standardized tests twice a year.

The first year 1,300 students flunked and parents were outraged. But the superintendent's plan stuck.

Other schools and states are learning toward competency tests to graduate from high school, tests on which a student would have to prove his "survival skills."

Educators say a growing number of "functional illiterates" have been handed high school diplomas. Why?

Here are some of their reasons as reported by the National Observer:

1. A new breed of young, anti-establishment teachers who reject measures such as tests, grades and rote learning.
2. Pressure to desegregate without inflating dropout rates.
3. Student demands for liberalized curricula and courses such as black studies and feminist concerns.
4. The postwar American ideal that every boy and girl deserves a high school diploma.

The Virginia superintendent explained why he has been so adamant about changing the diploma-giving policies at his school:

"You give me a check. I want that check to be worth its face value at my bank. When we give a student a diploma, I want the person he shows it to after graduation to know that it represents achievement rather than the fact that he stayed in school 12 years."

Some of our colleges and universities might do well to look into the superintendent's plan and impressive results.

Too many college diplomas, both undergraduate and graduate, simply mean that the holder persevered.

But then, perseverance is one of the most important lessons to learn.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has decided Texas should give more state aid to schools and limit the amount of taxes squeezed from local taxpayers.

But before you start spending your property tax savings, Bob Phillips said he doesn't know how the list of recommendations will affect Pampa. Briscoe and his advisers expect the local tax burden to shrink in some areas. But the question of where the money is coming from remains unanswered. You can bet taxpayers will still foot the bill.

His recommendations covered items from training school tax assessors - collectors to adding money to evaluate individual schools.

They did not include a pay hike for teachers. The base pay for a beginning teacher was jumped from $6,600 to $8,000 a year in 1976.

Briscoe promised that he would not sign a new tax bill unless it contained the local taxation ceiling.

Now, if the state doesn't tack on some other duties local school districts must perform in order to earn their allowances...

In Gray County, an impressive 72 per cent of the registered voters went to the polls Tuesday.

Many senior citizens were given rides by Republican and Democratic headquarters workers. Pampa Leisure Lodge took interested residents to the polls.

Several polling places provided desks and chairs for those who didn't want to stand in voting booths while marking their ballots.

America's recent history is full of close elections.

In 1960, John Kennedy won over Richard Nixon by two-tenths of one per cent of the vote. In 1968, Nixon defeated Hubert Humphrey by seven-tenths of one per cent of the vote or $10,645.

Rest precedes transfer of power

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the electoral count complete, victorious challenger Jimmy Carter and vanquished President Gerald R. Ford, both exhausted by their battle for the White House, are planning vacations before the rites of passage that mark the transfer of presidential power.

Carter was meeting today with Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale, who scheduled a flight to Plains, Ga., for their first conference since the election.

Ford received another steam inhalation treatment for his hoarse voice and then went to the Oval Office for a day's work that included appointments with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and United Nations Ambassador William Scranton.

Carter's paper-thin margin of 272 electoral votes — only two more than the minimum required for victory — increased today as Ohio fell into the Democratic camp with its 25 electoral votes.

Ford picked up six more electoral votes when The Associated Press declared him the winner in Oregon, giving him a complete sweep of states west of the Mississippi with the exception of Texas. But Carter had won the South and the populous states of the Northeast, giving him a final electoral vote margin of 297 to Ford's 241.

The 52-year-old Georgia peanut farmer and former governor, who spent nearly two years in his pursuit of the White House, said as he claimed his victory in the wee hours of Wednesday morning that he was pledging himself to "the unification of our country."

It will be up to the two winners, their staffs and the staff of Ford's White House to work out details of the transfer of the control of government from the defeated Republican president to the victorious president-elect.

While the principals in the fight for the right to lead the United States into its third century accepted the results of Tuesday's election and planned for the orderly transfer of power, vote counting continued in widely scattered areas.

Ohio went for Carter this morning with the secretary of state reporting a vote margin of 6,300 votes and the News Election Service reporting an edge for Carter of 7,575. About 750 absentee ballots remain uncounted, mostly in the Cleveland area.

In Oregon, unofficial figures showed Ford leading Carter by 1,911 votes with about 3,500 absentee ballots to be counted. The final count may not be completed until Friday.

Carter carried 23 states and the District of Columbia. Ford carried 27 states.

Here was the popular vote total with all the nation's precincts reporting:

Carter 40,276,040 or 51 per cent.

Ford 38,532,630 or 48 per cent.

The numbers indicated that 53 per cent of the Americans who were eligible to vote in Tuesday's election cast ballots, contradicting predictions that apathy was the ruling factor and projections that voter turnout would be a record low.

In terms of raw numbers, the voter turnout was the largest ever, compared with 77.6 million in 1972 and 73 million in 1968. However, the percentage of the voting age population trooping to the polls was low, far behind the record high 62.8 per cent in 1960. In 1972, the Ford and Carter, showing the strain of the long campaign, began their holidays this weekend. Carter said his first task would be "the unification of our country after a close and hard-fought election." He expressed his gratitude for Ford's pledge of "complete and whole-hearted support."

Meanwhile, Carter planned to receive a blueprint made up by his key advisers to ease the change of administrations. Among the recommendations is that Carter desert his Plains home for most of each week and set up offices almost at once in Washington.

Carter already has said he plans to set up a transitional office in Washington right away.

President Ford publicly conceded defeat shortly after noon on Wednesday. Earlier in the day he had called Carter in Plains to congratulate him.

But Ford supporters said the President's voice was so hoarse from his campaign efforts that his chief of staff, Richard Cheney, had to relay the message.

Carter, in a statement from Plains, said, "I deeply appreciate the President's call and his gracious expression of congratulations and cooperation. I expressed my admiration for him and for the strong, well-planned and effective campaign that he ran."

Carter said he would take full advantage of Ford's offer of cooperation during the transition period.

In Washington, his voice barely above a whisper, Ford told reporters at the White House that in the 78 days until Carter's inauguration on Jan. 20 "there's a lot of work to do and we're going to keep on doing it."

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford plans to continue pursuing an arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union as well as peace initiatives in the Middle East and Southern Africa.

On domestic policy, Nessen noted that the outgoing president still has responsibility for submitting a proposal for a fiscal 1978 budget to Congress shortly after it convenes in January.

After that, Ford, who spent 25 years in Congress before being elevated to the White House after the resignation of Richard Nixon, has no definite plans, Nessen said.

"He's talked of an interest in teaching political science at a university," Nessen said.

Ford plans to leave Sunday for a week-long vacation in Palm Springs, Calif.

Mondale and Carter have talked on the telephone but have not seen each other since the balloting.

Mondale was in Minneapolis on Wednesday, where he said the efforts toward a government transition were well underway. He said he planned on having a "significant role" in Carter's administration.

After spending the day relaxing with his family, the vice president-elect met with reporters and said he hoped to work effectively with the Senate, which will be made up largely of fellow Democrats.

There was one quick negative reaction to Carter's election. Wall Street analysts said the stock market, with its normal GOP leanings, was jolted by the Democratic win. They blamed a 16-point decline in the Dow Jones average on the Carter election. The market cut those losses by almost half that amount — by the time trading ended.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the losing vice presidential candidate, returned to Washington on Wednesday. He said he doesn't believe the defeat of the Ford-Dole ticket is a sign the country is moving leftward politically.

"The majority of the country is moderate to conservative," Dole told a news conference. "Southern pride prevailed, not liberalism."

When Carter takes office in January, it will put the Democrats in control of the two elected branches of the federal government for the first time since 1969, when Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson turned over the White House to Richard M. Nixon, a Republican whose party was the minority in Congress.

The party lineup in the Senate remained 62 Democrats to 38 Republicans following Tuesday's elections, even though there was an unusually high turnover among senators. Seventeen new senators will take seats in January, eight Democrats and nine Republicans. Eight of the new faces will replace veterans who didn't run for re-election. But the other nine defeated incumbents.

In the House, Democrats may add as many as three seats to the 290 to 145 majority they held in the last Congress. Four House races are not decided. The Democrats hold a slim lead in three of those. In races decided so far, the lineup is 289 Democrats and 142 Republicans.

PISD may get more state funds

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Because the Pampa Independent School District apparently is "making sincere efforts to get taxable property on the tax rolls at a true market value" more state revenue may be on the way, according to Bob Phillips, superintendent.

In a statement issued by Phillips today, he summarized the Governor's Report on Full Taxable Wealth of Texas Schools which was released Monday in Austin.

"Full taxable values of the 1,022 Texas school districts was computed in 14 categories by three separate organizations," Phillips explained.

The organization reports included a self report submitted by each school district in 1974-75; a study by Management Services Associates (MSA), an Austin consulting firm which entered into a contract in 1975 with the governor's office for the development of an index of market values for each of the state's school districts; and the governor's office, "which included a review of all districts by a group of certified tax assessors and an outside group of appraisers."

Phillips said that in the studies, "careful attention was given the degree of efficiency with which each local district was exerting effort to maintain a true market value on the taxable property in that district."

When the total number of districts all had been reviewed, "comparisons were made and the true taxable values of these districts were divided by the students enrolled in those districts. The state average tax value per student has been computed to be $93,800," the superintendent said.

He explained that districts below the state average are eligible for additional state funds in the form of State Equalization Aid.

"Locally, Pampa is below the state average, with an amount of $85,860 tax value per student," Phillips said.

"Being below the state average does not mean that a district is a poor district," he emphasized. "It does imply that the tax base in that district is somewhat limited in relationship to the number of scholastics enrolled."

Totals for the three studies of the PISD include:

—Self report (1974-75): $294,361,584.

—MSA: $306,402,532.

—Governor's office: $354,131,889.

All were based on full 100 per cent values.

"Throughout the recommendations made by Governor Briscoe, the computations made by the governor's office are those used for all Texas school districts," Phillips said.

"While Pampa is approximately $60,000 below the amount reported by the governor's office in full taxable values, the study indicates that our local effort in striving for full market value is much closer than many, many other school districts.

"For that reason, we stand to receive more state revenue than those districts who have failed to make proper effort..."

Phillips cited specific examples of some categories of relief in Pampa based upon recommendations made by the governor and the survey:

—Increase of $41,300 in maintenance and operation funds to total of $433,100 ($105 per student instead of current $95 per student).

—Increase of $13,900 in transportation funds to total of $69,400 (25 per cent increase over present $55,000).

—Decrease of $753,300 in local fund assignment from present $1,072,000 (9 cents per $100 value instead of present 35 cents).

—Increase in state equalization aid of $60,900 to total $74,500 (currently $13,600).

The total state revenue under the governor's plan would be $3,294,800, an increase of $849,500 in the Pampa district.

But Phillips said the governor repeatedly emphasized that "These are only estimates and recommendations and are subject to change."

Key foreign issues to stagnate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's failure to win election means key foreign policy issues that languished under the pressure of vote gathering now will stagnate during the remaining 12 weeks of Ford's lame-duck administration.

U.S. officials said the goal of Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will be to hold things together while working to create an impression that business will go on as usual.

But there will be no new initiatives taken and no new commitments made, the officials said, not only because Jimmy Carter would object, but because few if any foreign governments will be willing to deal on crucial matters with an administration on its way out.

Kissinger himself is expected to stay in office until Carter takes over next Jan. 20, but many other State Department officials and ambassadors probably will be leaving.

Already Richard M. Helms, the former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, has resigned as ambassador to Iran. One key Kissinger aide who has labored for the secretary since 1969 is preparing to leave soon, first to take a long vacation and then to seek outside employment.

"This will be the time of the 'actors,'" said one State Department source, meaning that as high-level officials leave, they will be replaced by "acting" officials.

Mentioned prominently among those retiring early or leaving the Foreign Service are Deputy Secretary Charles Robinson, Counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs William D. Rogers and director of Policy Planning Winston Lord.

The major casualties by Ford's and Kissinger's own views will be their hopes for a new U.S.-Soviet treaty limiting offensive nuclear weapons and, on a wider plane, detente with Russia.

Because of charges by conservative Republicans as well as Carter that Kissinger was not strong enough with the Russians, the Ford administration has been dormant since last spring in negotiating a second-phase strategic arms limitation treaty.

Kissinger also canceled meetings last summer of U.S.-Soviet commissions on trade and other matters when Ford was under strong challenge for the Republican nomination by conservative Ronald Reagan, who charged the administration with being soft on Moscow.

Another important issue on which the administration has been marking time is the Middle East. The administration was reluctant to move in such a touchy area pending the election.

The swine flu alarm

The $135 million Congress appropriated for the nationwide swine flu inoculation program could be one of the best investments the country ever made. Or it could turn out to have been the biggest medical false alarm in recent history.

It depends, of course, on whether swine flu does break out this winter. So far, not a single case has been reported anywhere in the world since it was identified in five recruits at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February, and some medical experts continue to question the wisdom of trying to immunize 200 million people against something that may never occur.

Why the alarm in the first place? For one reason, the appearance of a new strain of influenza has always resulted in a worldwide pandemic simply because most people have no immunity to it, and the Ft. Dix strain was new in that it hadn't been seen in human beings since early in the century.

For another, news of the discovery immediately recalled the devastating flu pandemic of 1918-19, which involved a similar virus and which killed 20 million people worldwide, including some 500,000 in the United States.

Thus no one disputed the need to begin developing and producing a swine flu vaccine. The question was whether the vaccine should be administered on a universal scale or merely stockpiled in case mass inoculation became necessary.

One of those who favored the stockpile approach was the doctor who identified the Ft. Dix virus, Martin Goldfield, assistant commissioner of the New Jersey Department of Health.

"I thought it was unwise," he is quoted in a publication of Boston University Medical Center, "to prepare irrevocably to immunize an entire population before knowing the frequency or severity of side effects and efficacy of the vaccine. I recommended manufacturing the vaccine and preparing to deliver it if needed."

Proponents of vaccination argued, however, that stockpiling would be useless because influenza could spread faster than people could be immunized. It takes about two weeks for an inoculation to develop full immunity, and millions could be infected in that time. The only safe course was to assume the worst—that there would be a swine flu epidemic—and to take steps to prevent it.

This was the opinion which prevailed on President Ford, who called for the mass inoculation program last March. Interestingly enough, just the opposite decision was later made by Canadian health authorities who after a similar controversy decided to stockpile the vaccine and to offer it on a voluntary basis only to certain high-risk groups.

The matter has become further confused in the mind of the public because of the unfortunate deaths of a number of elderly people at the beginning of the inoculation program. Even though medical authorities are agreed that the vaccine had nothing to do with the deaths, the program was temporarily suspended in many areas and has yet to pick up full steam.

As things appear now, most Americans will be inoculated against swine flu in the coming weeks. The coming weeks will also tell whether it was a wise and necessary precaution or a tremendous waste of money and effort. But even if a waste, it will have been so only in the sense that fire insurance is a waste if your house never catches on fire.

Goldfield, however, raises another disturbing question. What happens, he asks, if we immunize everybody in the fall and swine flu appears the following spring, after immunization has worn off and we've run out of vaccine?

We hope this is one question about the great swine flu puzzle that will not have to be answered.

Give us a brake

For some reason, a bumper sticker dreamed up by Friends of Animals, Inc., rubs us the wrong way. It reads: "Caution. I brake for animals."

Who doesn't brake for animals? It's a purely instinctive reaction, even for experienced motorists, and has nothing to do with one's feelings for or against four-legged critters who suddenly dart into the road. The trouble is that it has been known to have catastrophic consequences for the two-legged variety.

If the people who sport this bumper sticker are telling us that they love animals, fine. So do we.

If they are telling us that they will make every reasonable effort, with due regard for the safety of themselves and other motorists, to avoid hitting some unfortunate, confused animal in their path, so will everyone else who is not a dedicated sadist.

But if they are saying that they would deliberately invade a rear-end collision by slamming on their brakes to spare an animal, we just hope that when they do the guy behind them isn't driving a semi.

Road to recovery looks good

By RAY CROMLEY
WASHINGTON (NEA) — So far as I can determine from economists with no axe to grind, the economy should move up smartly late this year and in the first half of 1977.

That growth is expected to reach a seven per cent a year place by midyear, compared with the sluggish four per cent a year growth shown in the July through September period we've just been through.

The course has been set by actions taken by private industry, consumers, farmers and the Administration and the Federal Reserve Board. Little either candidate does from here on out will change things much for the next eight months. That, at least seems to be the consensus.

What has worried some of these economists — not Ford men by any stretch of the imagination — is that too much government meddling with the economy can prolong a recession for years on end. Witness the time it took to recover from the 1929 crash — the result, some economists say today, of excessive federal tinkering under President Franklin Roosevelt.

A number of these economists, avowed Democrats among others, have feared that Jimmy Carter would move in with too many fixes on the economy. As I gather it now, however, that fear is disappearing. The feeling now seems to be that the underlying recovery will be so far along by Jan. 20 that any Carter overreacting, if it occurred, would not break the upward economic trend.

Though it appears that employment will grow at a quite reasonable pace in the eight months ahead, with some jiggles up and down in the process, it now seems unlikely that unemployment will decline appreciably in the process. The slide in real take-home worker income from 1973 through the spring of 1975 — a slide from which blue collar paychecks have not recovered — leads some responsible economists to suspect additional women and teenagers will move into the labor market almost as fast as new job openings appear.

As for the recent lull: several economists suggest the disappointing reports on economic growth from the end of June to the first of October this year were largely a result of uncertainty among businessmen as to the outcome of the election, made worse, of course by the strikes against the Ford Motor Co. and the rubber industry.

Many businessmen have been sitting on their hands, holding back on new spending for expansion and for upgrading their plants. The latest surveys indicate, however, that industrial companies generally plan to increase their investments in buildings and equipment by 14 to 16 per cent next year. This should, of itself, give a sizable wallop to the economy.

Add that to the 5.8 per cent increase in social security payments predicted for July 1977, the increase in inventories expected to accompany the surge in capital investments, and you have a satisfying impetus to the economy.

What must be noted is that each of these pieces of good news gives out easy to catch signals in advance, spurring consumer buying and increases in employment and additional investment.

In the past few days, for example, new surveys indicate consumer apathy may be ending, and that we're getting ready to buy again.

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

High-priced, but it's worth it

By WILLIAM RUSHER
TOKYO — The Japanese are pretty nearly as good as the British in the matter of queuing up, but they can use some more practice in planning for the consequences.

In the International Departures section of the Osaka International Airport one recent morning, half a dozen Passport Control officers were strung out like an efficient scrimmage line athwart the route of passengers bound for any one of four big jet-liners scheduled to take off more or less simultaneously. All very efficient; but before anyone could get to a Passport Control officer he had to pass through Security, and Security consisted of one (1) x-ray machine for hand luggage plus a door two feet wide for people — the latter guarded by an Oriental Cerberus who conducted a polite but efficient frisking operation on everybody.

As a result, there was a neat line approximately two city blocks long strung out in front of Security, while a clock overhead inched ever closer to the take-off time of the jets and airline personnel scurried along the line frantically plucking out passengers on their particular flight and shoeing them into the clearance process closer to the door. Why the Japanese, so fearfully efficient in everything else, should blow a detail as absurdly simple as this one, I cannot imagine.

It's true, incidentally, what they say about Japanese price. Despite a domestic inflation rate not far short of 10 per cent a year, the yen is currently selling in the neighborhood of 285 to the dollar, and the price tags confronting tourists (as well, of course, as Japanese) would have made the late Jean Paul Getty, who could be notoriously frugal in such matters, consider overflying Japan until things cooled down a bit.

In a quite ordinary Kyoto hotel (not the elegant and luxurious Myako), a cup of coffee costs 300 yen, or just slightly over a dollar. If you aspire to have a small glass of orange juice and two slices of toast plus that coffee for breakfast, they are all yours for a mere 700 yen ($2.45). Add 10 per cent for service, in lieu of a tip.

Dinner, if you are careful, may therefore cost you an arm and a leg. In the Grill Room of the same unpretentious hotel, a medium-sized tenderloin steak for one, preceded by consommé, accompanied by potatoes, green beans, rice and a green salad, and followed by ice cream and tea or coffee, is the day's special — 5,500 yen ($19.30), to which again will be added 10 per cent for service, bringing the total to $21.23. If you insist (as I did) on a small bottle of Beaujolais with the steak and a brandy afterward, your total bill will be in the neighborhood of $35.

If the thought of such prices drive you to serious drinking, expect to pay about $2 per cocktail or highball. Alternatively, you might try to get by on Japanese beer, which is excellent and costs only 350 yen, or about $1.25 per bottle.

Nor do you save much, if anything, by sticking to Japanese dishes, on the theory that they ought to cost less.

A Rabbi and a soapmaker went for a walk together. The soapmaker said, "What good is religion? Look at the trouble and the misery in the world after thousands of years of religion. If religion is true, why should this be?"

The Rabbi said nothing. They continued walking until he noticed a child playing in the gutter. The child was filthy with mud and grime. The Rabbi said, "Look at that child. You say that soap makes people clean. We've had soap for generation after generation, yet look how dirty the youngster is. Of what value is soap? With all the soap in the world that child is still filthy. How effective is soap anyway?"

The soapmaker protested and said, "But Rabbi, soap can't do any good unless it's used." "Exactly," replied the Rabbi, "so it is with religion."

Tax savings promises still just promises?

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 — Word of advice!

Don't rush out and start spending those alluring tax savings you're hearing so much about on the hustings these days.

Basically, they are electioneering pie-in-the-sky that you may or may not savor next year or the year following — depending on economic and other factors largely unpredictable at this time.

Unquestionably the presidential candidates were sincere and meant what they said about cutting taxes. But there is one all-important rub.

Presidents do not enact tax laws. They can propose, but they most emphatically do not dispose.

Congress writes tax legislation, and Presidents take it or leave it. In most cases, they take it whether they like it or not.

President Ford is a graphic example of that — by his own rueful admission.

With frank reluctance, he recently signed the huge 1,500-page tax "reform" bill passed by the adjourning 94th Congress after torturously working on it for several years.

The sweeping measure went far beyond what the President recommended. The last thing he had in mind were its hundreds of revisions and new provisions — whose real import and consequence are still only dimly known.

The far-reaching massive statute was wholly the handiwork of Congress and, with undisguised distaste the President went along.

That's what Presidents have been doing for a long time, and will continue to do.

Who Does It
Most influential tax writer in Washington is Sen. Russell Long, veteran chairman of the Finance Committee.

His potent imprints pervade the 1,500-page tax "reform" measure.

The stocky, conservative Louisiana Democrat, son of the late flamboyant Huey "Kingfish" Long, exerts far more influence over tax writing than the President, Secretary of the Treasury and various other moguls combined.

It can verily be said that what Russ Long wants, he usually gets.

That was definitely the case on the newly-enacted giant tax bill. While Long didn't win everything he favored, on the other hand, he blocked various drastic proposals he opposed — especially aimed at the oil industry, to which he is unabashedly partial.

One thing is flatly certain: Regardless of what tax proposals are submitted to the 95th Congress, Russ Long will call the turn. The powerful Louisiana will have much more to say about the nature and scope of the next tax bill than the next President will.

So while the candidates were vociferously proclaiming and declaiming insiders knew all along that the real decisions on taxes will be made in Capitol Hill — with Russ Long having a key say regarding them.

Key say regarding them. "Quantum Leap"

Also sure to wield a potent oar is Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Oregon Democrat still has a long way to go to exercise the sway of his once-dominant predecessor Wilbur Mills. At the height of the astute and dapper Arkansan's power, he literally ruled the roost on tax matters. It takes time and experience to gain such control.

Ullman is working hard at it — as he demonstrated on the colossus new tax measure. He was patient, conscientious and industrious. He gave ground when he had to: stood fast and won on other showdowns.

Above all, the Oregonian showed he thoroughly knows the revenue field and has what it takes to run a big and high-powered committee.

That this is clearly what Ullman proposed to do is evinced by his own tax plans. Overshadowed by the noisy electioneering rhetoric, Ullman's ideas are getting little attention — for the present.

But you will earring a lot more about them now that the election is over — and they are far-reaching.

He describes them as a "quantum leap" in tax revision. Primarily they involve doing away with double taxation on corporate dividends.

This is a long-discussed reform, but about which nothing concrete has ever materialized. Main reason is that accomplishing this revision is immensely complex; it sounds simple but it's enormously complicated.

That's why, although presidents, secretaries of the treasury, and numerous others have advocated this momentous change, specific legislation has yet to be written and enacted.

Billions in taxes are involved. Under one reckoning, eliminating double taxation on corporate dividends would cost the Treasury $10 billion of revenue; under another, $20 billion.

Manifestly, such a giant loss would have to be made up somehow. That's the stumper. How, where, what and how much.

If you have any answers, Sen. Russ Long and Chairman Ullman will be glad to get them.

To paraphrase an old saying: "That's billions in them that double-taxed corporate dividends."

'77 Texas Legislature white, conservative

Associated Press Writer
The 1977 Texas Legislature will be mostly white, male and conservative Democrat but Tuesday's election did boost the number of black, Mexican-American, female and Republican lawmakers.

Labor also claimed an increase in its "friends" in the House.

Conservatives will maintain strong working majorities in both chambers and hold top leadership positions in the 65th legislature that convenes Jan. 11.

Gains by Mexican-Americans, Republicans and blacks resulted chiefly from a bill passed last year under federal court order, dividing nine populous counties into single-member House districts.

Mexican-Americans picked up one Senate seat, for a total of three, with the election of Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, a liberal who crusaded as a representative for better state mental hospitals and schools for the retarded.

Rep. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, another liberal, replaced retiring Sen. D. Roy Harrington.

Otherwise, the 31-member Senate's composition will remain the same.

Turnover in the House was slightly below average, with 38 new members elected Tuesday. Only one incumbent was defeated—Rep. J. L. Brisco of Houston, a Republican chosen in a special election this year.

Eleven more House members were whipped in the primaries.

Changes in the composition of the House include:

- An increase of four Mexican-Americans, from 13 to 17.
- The addition of four blacks, raising their numbers from eight to 12.
- An increase in Republican strength from the 16 members they had in the 1975 session to 18 in 1977. (Brisco had replaced Democratic Rep. Joe Penney, who resigned to run for the state Senate election last spring.)

—A net gain of three women, for a total of 10. One of the seven women in the 1975 House, Kay Bailey of Houston, resigned earlier this year to accept appointment to the National Transportation Safety Board.

The four additional Mexican-Americans came from Corpus Christi, El Paso, Lubbock and Beaumont-Port Arthur, where countywide election of representatives gave way to neighborhood districts.

Republicans made their gains in Tarrant County and Lubbock, where television sports and weather announcer Joe Robbins defeated stockbroker Roy Ward. Expected increases in Travis and El Paso counties failed to materialize.

Decorations on the Christmas tree at the Senior Citizens Center will be for sale during the annual Christmas bazaar which opens at 10 a.m. Friday along with the first hot lunch to be served in the center from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Placing handmade ornaments on the tree are from left, Edna Ray, Beatrice Lunsford, Ruth Broxson and Jean Prather. Christmas spirit for sale

The Christmas tree at the Senior Citizens Center, 500 W. Francis, was decorated Wednesday with handmade ornaments — but it may be stripped Friday — and redecorated later.

Every ornament will be for sale when the doors swing open at 10 a.m. Friday for annual Christmas bazaar.

The hot lunch program begins

Friday. Serving hours will be from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The bazaar sale, which includes foods, handmade items, arts, crafts, plants and elephant items, will continue until 5 p.m.

The Friday menu will include a choice of chili or stew, with cornbread, a drink and desert for $1.50. The public is invited to share the Friday hot lunches.

But the hot meal program for members only will begin Monday.

Hot meals will be served Monday through Friday.

The hot meal program has been in the planning stages since the center was officially opened on Feb. 15.

The center now has 800 members and those who were present for the game session Wednesday, including Troy Maness and Lee Randolph, said they were ready for it.

Wanda Talley, executive director, stresses that the center wants to serve the best meal possible for the cost.

As the hours ticked away, no time was wasted in making sure enough food is on hand for the big event.

The necessary pots and pans were purchased. Preparations were underway today as Jean Earl began the time consuming task of peeling 50 pounds of potatoes and 20 pounds of carrots, for the stew. Fifty pounds of beef has been donated for the opening feast.

The menu for the week includes:

Monday — Ham or turkey and dressing, candied yams, carrots, green beans, tossed salad or fruit salad, pumpkin pie or cobbler, and hot rolls.

Tuesday — Rolled roast with gravy, meat sauce and spaghetti, mashed potatoes, green beans, cabbage, lettuce and tomato salad, or a molded salad, chocolate cake and pudding, hot rolls and cornbread.

Wednesday — Stew and chili, cornbread, salad and applesauce cake.

Thursday — Chicken fried steak or ham and beans, cottage fried potatoes, turnip greens, squash or green beans, cabbage slaw and chocolate pudding or cake with fruit topping, hot rolls or cornbread.

Friday — Beef casserole or fried fish, potatoes, green lima beans, spinach or carrots, pineapple - cabbage slaw, pudding, hot rolls and cornbread.

'You better believe I will serve' - Yarbrough

HOUSTON (AP) — Donald Yarbrough, referring to the leaders of the State Bar of Texas as "ego-jerks", says he will be sworn-in as an associate justice of the State Supreme Court and "serve every day of my six-year term."

Yarbrough, defendant in at least 15 lawsuits including one to remove his license to practice law, said Wednesday, "I expect to look up during those swearing-in ceremonies and see horde of opposition like Attila the Hun. But you better believe I will serve. The legal establishment has given their best, they took their best shot, and I beat them."

Yarbrough received more than 1.22 million votes in Tuesday's general election, compared to about 415,000 for two write-in candidates.

The 35-year-old Houston attorney was the surprise winner over Civil Appeals Court Judge Charles Burrow of San Antonio in the Democratic primary. There was no Republican candidate.

State District Court Judge Sam Houston of Denton and veteran attorney Tom Corance of Houston entered the race as write-in candidates. They were soundly beaten.

Lorance told The AP, "I think it is a pity the governor of Texas (Dolph Briscoe) urged voters to cast a straight Democratic ticket, including Don Yarbrough. It's a pity Mayor Fred Hofheinz of Houston urged a straight Democratic vote, including Don Yarbrough. It was a straight party vote that led to the election of Yarbrough."

Lorance said, "The write-in enterprise was doomed from the day that Sam Houston announced. I decided he wasn't ready for Supreme Court and so I stayed in the race."

Houston said, "I undertook this race as a matter of duty to give the voters of Texas another chance and another choice. I am afraid the result will cause the state and the Supreme Court quite a bit of grief."

Many political observers said Yarbrough won the primary because of similarity of names with Donald Yarbrough, a long-time Texas Democratic political leader and with former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarbrough.

The State Bar filed a lawsuit against Yarbrough two weeks ago seeking his disbarment and outlining 53 grievances, including 12 alleged acts of professional misconduct and eight violations of state and federal laws.

When a car's tires are worn to one-sixteenth of an inch or less of tread, they are about 40 times more likely to be suddenly disabled than new tires.

Limited flu vaccines to be ready Friday

A limited number of free swine flu vaccines will be available to Gray County residents Friday, according to Dr. W.P. Beck, county health officer.

Only high risk patients, those more than 65 years old and those with chronic lung conditions, will be eligible.

Patients with lung conditions, she said, should contact their physicians for advise on whether they should take the vaccine.

The shots will be administered from 9 a.m. to noon at the Salvation Army office of the county health nurse, Dr. Beck said she is not sure how many vaccines will be available. She suggested that those who qualify to receive them call the nurse at 665-2669 Friday morning.

Carter contacts Demo leaders

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter is contacting the Democratic leaders of Congress with overtures of partnership and cooperation, but none of them can say yet how easy that will be to achieve or what programs it will produce.

While Carter was beating Ford, Democrats were keeping their 62-38 control of the Senate and possibly increasing their 290-145 House control closer to the 295-140 Democrat-controlled House that helped push through the late President Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society and war-on-poverty programs in the mid-1960s.

But Democratic leaders brushed aside Wednesday the question of how expansive a program the Democratic President and Democratic Congress can enact, pointing out that they haven't even met on the subject yet.

An aide to O'Neill said Carter telephoned early Wednesday morning and told the House Democratic leader, "Tip, I'm six votes from being elected President... and I'll be wanting to meet with you on working with Congress."

Democrats were reluctant to talk about that ticklish subject but some Republicans were happy to.

My impression is that Jimmy Carter is going to run things," said Rep. Barber Conable of New York, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee. "I think he's a very tough bird and I don't think the Democratic leaders will be able to stand up to him."

Black leaders want election

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — One of four key black nationalist leaders today called for a national election in two weeks to choose an interim prime minister for Rhodesia.

The plan for a one-man, one-vote plebiscite, outlined by Bishop Abel Muzorewa at the British-sponsored talks on Rhodesia's future, was immediately disowned by rival black Rhodesian factions.

A spokesman for the so-called Patriotic Front of Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe called the Muzorewa proposal "simply his own selfish plan."

The spokesman, Willie Muzurwa, said the bishop, who heads one faction of the split African National Council — ANC — "did not consult us about this. It is a political gimmick and for practical reasons it is impossible."

Bishop Muzorewa, speaking at a news conference, also appealed to U.S. President-elect Jimmy Carter to "stand with the people who are seeking majority rule (in Rhodesia) because I believe that (Americans) support majority rule."

As he outlined his pre-independence election plan, conference legal experts were meeting to discuss purely technical problems created by various possible timetables for Rhodesian independence and black majority rule.

Court hears bribe testimony

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense attorneys for Judge Garth Bates are continuing efforts to dilute the testimony of a robbery defendant who says he paid $59,000 bribe to the judge to stay out of jail.

Bates is charged with accepting the cash from Nukie Fontenot in exchange for helping Fontenot stay out of jail on a robbery charge.

A tape-recorded telephone conversation was played to the court Wednesday in which Bates is heard telling Fontenot "I'm going to help you."

Joe Reynolds, Bates' attorney, branded Fontenot as a potential dealer in machine guns and narcotics and a man who had suggested a murder contract with undercover police.

Fontenot said a friend of the judge, Ed Jay Riklin, mentioned Bates' name several times in alleged bribe negotiations although there was no mention of Bates' name in several hours of tape recordings on the case.

Fontenot testified he decided to cooperate with the investigation into the alleged bribery after having first discussed the bribe with Riklin and another man in late 1975.

Two new governors may take spotlights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days after the election, there already is talk of national prominence for two of the nation's new governors, Democrat John D. "Jay" Rockefeller IV of West Virginia and Republican James J. Thompson of Illinois.

Both swept into office Tuesday with huge record-setting electoral margins, drawing attention to themselves as fresh faces likely to be heard from again outside their states.

Thompson, for one, has acknowledged a lifelong ambition for the presidency. Nicknamed "Big Jim" because of his 6-foot-6 inch frame, Thompson beat Democratic machine candidate Michael J. Howlett by 1.3 million votes.

Asked about his White House ambitions Wednesday, Thompson recalled his career as a tough federal prosecutor who brought more than 200 public officials to trial on corruption charges, a record that propelled him to the governorship.

"I'm just going to put talk of national leadership for a national role... behind me, until I've got a handle on my job," he said. "The No. 1 lesson I've learned is you don't go anywhere else until you first have done a good job where you are."

Thompson declared that he plans to seek a second term in 1978, but he did nothing to discourage any speculation about his potential as an eventual presidential aspirant. But there are potential hazards, including serious budget problems and a possible tax increase, both issues that must be negotiated with a Democratically-controlled state legislature.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
A perfect Fall day appeared on tap as skies were clear over the state early today except in South Texas where some fog was being reported.

Early morning temperatures ranged from 32 at Amarillo in the Panhandle to 56 at Galveston. Other readings included 44 at San Angelo, 50 at Houston and 48 at San Antonio.

Forecasts called for clear skies with temperature readings expected to reach the 60s and 70s by late today.

National weather

By The Associated Press
Arctic air crossing the warmer waters of the Great Lakes produced snow and snow flurries today over the north-central states.

Five inches of snow had fallen at South Bend, Ind., by early morning, and a travel advisory was extended for parts of Indiana and Michigan, where up to three inches of snow were likely to accumulate.

Flurries also were reported in the upper Mississippi Valley and northern Appalachians.

Rain fell in scattered areas along the northern Atlantic coast. Skies were mostly clear across the rest of the nation.

Cold winds helped push temperatures to the teens in the Dakotas and to the 30s in parts of Alabama and Mississippi.

Temperatures remained mild in the Southwest, with readings in the 60s and low 70s in southern parts of California, Arizona and Nevada.

Readings around the nation early today ranged from 71 at Blythe, Calif., to 13 at Minot Air Force Base, N.D.

The forecast called for fog in Oregon and fog and rain in Washington. Rain was likely in northern New England, and snow was to remain in the Great Lakes region.

Skies were to be clear in the remainder of the nation, except in Florida, where some clouds were likely.

Readings were to be unseasonably warm along the southern California coast, mild from the Pacific coast to the Rockies and cool elsewhere.

Early morning weather conditions in city centers:

EASTERN U.S.: Atlanta 33 clear, Boston 50 showers, Chicago 32 snow, Cincinnati 27 clear, Cleveland 33 cloudy.

Girl joins Rainbows

INDIANOLA, Iowa (AP) — Twelve-year-old Michelle Palmer has been installed as a member of the International Order of the Rainbow. But whether she and 5,000 other Iowa members still belong to the national service organization remains in doubt.

Michelle's admission caused national officials to expel Iowa's 136 Rainbow assemblies because of an "unwritten law" banning blacks, according to one state official of the Mason-affiliated group. Michelle's mother is black, her father white.

But national officials later said the assemblies were only suspended, not expelled. They blamed the situation on the Indianola chapter's failure to follow correct procedure in nominating Michelle for membership.

Dwaine Palmer said his daughter was installed "without incident" at a ceremony Wednesday. Reporters and photographers were barred from the installation at the Indianola Masonic Lodge, and police were called to keep them off the Masons' property.

Herbert Grou, supreme inspector of the Rainbow Girls in McAlester, Okla., was unavailable for comment on the installation.

"The kids would have gotten along great if the damn adults didn't get involved," said Palmer. "It's something the girls have never experienced before — the discrimination — and they're going to remember this."

"When she (Michelle) came to me and said she wanted to join, she was concerned about the dues and buying a white dress the girls wear."

Michelle said she was upset at the prospect of Iowa losing its charter.

"Pretty soon there'll be another state losing its charter," she said, "then another, and another, and before long the Rainbow will be all gone."

Slow journey

Taking no risks with excessive speed, the Thierstein House Moving Company of Pampa needed nearly six hours to move this house seven miles from No. Somerville to the site of the New Hope Baptist Church at Harlem and Gray. Assisting in the journey were three Southwestern Public Service employees, three Southwestern Bell linemen, one man from City Service and two Pampa Cable Television employees. The house was moved west on Browning to Loop 171, south on 171 to McCullough Ave., and then east to Harlem and Gray. The same company moved another house to the church property one year ago.

Egypt accuses Carter as pro-Israel, may use oil for political leverage

By The Associated Press
Egypt's leading newspaper called on the Arab world to forge a united front and find new ways to use oil as a political weapon in order to cope with President-elect Jimmy Carter's pro-Israel policy in the Middle East.

Elsewhere, Carter was viewed as a welcome fresh face or a puzzling unknown by editorialists trying to predict what direction the new American leadership would take.

Cairo's semi-official Al-Ahram predicted that the new administration would give Israel unlimited support. It urged the Arab states to counter this with a unified political, economic and military policy and new tactics to use Arab oil for political leverage.

Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, said President Ford's ban on mention of the detente policy during his campaign was a factor in his defeat because it "caused doubts he would follow a course in international relations which the rank and file of Americans wanted."

But a Chinese Communist newspaper in Hong Kong, Wen Wei Po, said Carter's victory was a protest against detente because the policy encouraged Soviet military expansion. It said Americans "are afraid the Soviet Union could become the world's most powerful military country and the United States could be relegated to second place."

Other foreign newspaper comment: Avvenire of Milan, Italy, a leading Roman Catholic daily

— "Carter's victory is the defeat of a party — the Republican — which has given America the presents of the Watergate scandal, political espionage, the persecution against those who battle against the Vietnam war and American commitments in Asia."

Nhan Dan, Vietnamese government newspaper — "Taking into consideration the many difficult and unsolvable problems that face the U.S. nowadays, it is doubtful that a new man in the White House can effectively solve such problems."

London Daily Express Daily Express, conservative — "Britons and America's other allies will find in Jimmy Carter one of the best and most powerful friends that they have ever had."

Times of London, independent — "If nobody knows who Jimmy Carter really is, it means that Jimmy Carter is himself still free to decide."

Paul or Gammage? nobody can be sure

U.S. Rep. Ron Paul, R-Tex., waited today to find out who's correct — the Texas Election Bureau or 22nd Congressional district election officials.

The TEB said its unofficial complete returns showed Paul, a Republican serving the remainder of an unexpired term, won another term in Tuesday's election, edging Houston attorney Bob Gammage 138,161 to 128,324.

However, officials in the four-county Southeast Texas district tabulated the vote and said Gammage had won by scant 94 votes, prompting Paul to demand a recount.

Election officials said Wednesday that of the 192,750 votes they tabulated in Harris, Fort Bend, Brazoria and Waller counties, the unofficial returns gave Gammage 96,422 votes to 96,328 for Paul.

In asking for the recount, Paul said, "Too many people have invested their time and efforts not to be more certain."

But Clairborne Johnson, assistant manager of the TEB, said, "He (Paul) can demand a recount if he wants, but I would suggest waiting until the weekend when all the counties can say all boxes are in and complete."

Gilmore seeks execution

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gary Mark Gilmore, a convicted murderer scheduled to face a firing squad on Nov. 15, has tried to fire his lawyers to keep them from appealing the execution.

It would be the first execution in the United States since June 1967 and the first execution by firing squad since 1960.

Craig Snyder, one of two court-appointed defense attorneys, said Wednesday that he would ask the court to appoint new counsel for Gilmore, but that he planned to go ahead with the motion for a stay of execution.

"There is a question, and a substantial one, as to whether he has the right personally to die on the 15th or at any time that might be set," Snyder said. Appeal of a death sentence is not mandatory in Utah.

Snyder said he and Public Defender Michael Esplin had been notified by the 35-year-old Gilmore that he no longer wanted them to represent him. But Snyder said he questioned whether Gilmore was capable of deciding what was best because of the pressures he is under.

Meanwhile, Samuel Smith, warden of the Utah State Prison, has asked the attorney general's office whether he should start recruiting a five-man firing squad.

On Monday, Gilmore, who has spent 18 years in state and federal prisons, told District Judge J. Robert Bullock that he wanted to go through with the scheduled execution "because I don't want to spend the rest of my life in jail."

"You sentenced me to die. Unless it's a joke or something, I want to go ahead and do it," Gilmore was sentenced to death in October by a jury that convicted him of killing a Provo motel clerk during a holdup last summer. The state gives the condemned a choice of death by firing squad or hanging. Gilmore said he preferred to be shot.

Bullock ordered Gilmore to undergo a psychiatric evaluation, including a determination of his state of mind and factors that might have made him decide not to appeal.

Gilmore was a parolee when he was arrested in July and charged with killing the clerk and another man in the Provo area. He is still scheduled to be tried for the second slaying.

The last legal execution in the United States was in Colorado on June 2, 1967, when James W. Rodgers died before a firing squad for killing a fellow miner in San Juan County.

Judge to snort coke

BOSTON (AP) — A New York doctor has agreed to allow a Massachusetts judge to sample cocaine in a "controlled hospital setting" to help the judge decide a case of cocaine possession.

Roxbury District Court Judge Elwood S. McKenney will go to New York for the experiment with Prof. Richard Eslinger, all of which today have Democratic governors-elect. Only in Delaware did a Republican capture the governor's mansion and the voters go for Carter.

"The judge will just snort coke and see how it feels," Lawson said.

Although Resnick normally runs a number of physical and visual tests on those using cocaine, Lawson said the judge has not requested any detailed testing.

McKenney had said Monday he would not rule on the case until he had tried the drug. Lawyers for defendant Richard Miller asked that the charges be dismissed on grounds that cocaine is a "harmless, non-addictive, recreational drug."

Lawson said Resnick is one of only five researchers in the country with the necessary Federal Drug Administration license to legally administer the drug to McKenney.

McKenney is also expected to report to District Court Chief Justice Samuel E. Zoll on the legality of the proposal.

Zoll expressed concern about the experiment's "impact on the entire district court system."

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a widower, age 41, with two small boys, ages 6 and 11. My wife was killed three years ago in an auto accident and because I was driving, I needed professional help to get over the feeling of guilt.

I have recently hired a young babysitter to look after the house and boys. Her name is Maria and she is a very sensible, intelligent and mature 15-year-old.

Maria's mother, who has never been married, plans to marry next month. She came to see me and begged me to let Maria live in my home because her future husband refuses to have Maria live with them after they're married. She said Maria is willing to live with me. I said I would have to think it over.

Maria is a lovely girl, but she looks like a 20-year-old woman, if you know what I mean. I fear that if I let her live here, my reputation and hers might be ruined by evil-minded people. My parish priest advised me to take her in, and not to worry about evil-minded people. My mother-in-law, who is too old and sick to look after the boys, agreed with the priest.

The boys love Maria, and I must confess that I adore her in a fatherly way. Would I be inviting trouble to take Maria in? I have more than enough money to send her to college when the time comes. She wants to be a doctor.

MUST KNOW

DEAR MUST KNOW: Maria sounds like a serious-minded, ambitious, intelligent girl. If you're certain that your attitude toward her is fatherly, don't worry about what evil-minded people think.

DEAR ABBY: Seems to me I've read a lot lately about people "dying" for a few minutes, coming back to life and living for years. I've begun wondering how many people have been buried alive, which has developed a fear in me that I might be buried alive one day. It's giving me nightmares!

Abby, who is supposed to make absolutely sure a person is dead before he's buried? The doctor or the mortician?

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Most state laws require that a death certificate be signed by either a medical doctor or the county coroner, and the latter are being replaced in some states by "medical investigators," who must be licensed physicians. Relax. Your chances for being buried alive are zilch.

DEAR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN: Again it's come up in your column! I refer to the confusing business of the proper use of "Ms."

Why not just drop the Ms., Miss or Mrs., and simply address the person by name as I have done in addressing you? In this day of liberated womanhood and personal rights for everybody, why can't we be who we are without the gobbledygook of Mr., Ms., Miss or Mrs?

The Mr. before a man's name is useless since it applies to both married men and single men. And to label a woman by her marital status is an invasion of her privacy. Whose business is it whether she's married, single or using the "Ms." to disguise one or the other?

FRANKLY FRANK

DEAR FRANK: Thanks for a sensible suggestion.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Leaky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 21 and my husband is 33. When my husband was 15 he caught the mumps and they went down in one testicle. We have been married for two years and have been trying desperately to conceive a baby and I have had no luck.

About a year ago my husband went to see his doctor about it and he told him this did not mean he was sterile (as we had thought). It just meant our chances of conceiving would be smaller and that all of our children would be of the same sex.

A year and half has passed and still I'm not able to get pregnant. I have a child by a previous marriage. What I'd really like to know is, what are our chances of having a baby?

DEAR READER — It is true that mumps that involve the testicles can cause a man to be sterile. However, many times the man recovers entirely and he is just as able as the next man to father children.

The involvement of only one testicle would suggest that the other one would be normal. In fact, as occurs with many paired organs the uninjured one may enlarge to compensate for the weak one. We see this in people with one kidney, for example, the other kidney may be larger than normal.

There is absolutely nothing to the statement that all your children will be of the same sex. A man does not produce sperm for male children from one testicle and females from another. That is about as far-fetched as the city kid's idea that one test of a cow is for chocolate milk, another for cream, another for buttermilk and the last for whole milk. I am sure you have misunderstood what the doctor said.

There is only one good way to find out what your chances of having a baby really are. Your husband should have a sperm count. If he has sufficient or even a borderline amount of healthy sperm cells the chances of your having a baby are pretty good. Sometimes improvement in overall medical conditions can improve a person's fertility — male or female. Men or women low in thyroid may benefit from thyroid medication. There is also some evidence now that men will benefit from taking the fertility pill often used in women who do not ovulate. This would probably be most applicable to the man with some but not enough healthy sperm cells. Apparently the fertility pills stimulate an increased production of sperm in the male just as they increase the production or release of ova from a woman's ovaries.

And to increase the sperm count somewhat, if there are healthy sperm, it is well to limit the attempts to get pregnant to every other night. When a doctor does a sperm count he wants a specimen after abstinence for two or three days. Why? To get the best specimen with the most healthy sperm cells. For pregnancy it is best to produce an equally optimal specimen. The sperm cells live for two to three days in the womb.

Finally, don't overlook the possibility that even though you have had one child that you may not be as fertile as you once were.

Impotence can be caused by diseases and hormone deficiencies but most often from psychological factors. For more information on this problem send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 3-12, Impotence. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Many children's clothes have nothing to hang them up by, so I make three and a half inch loops at the inside back neckbands on coveralls, jackets, coats and so on. That alone is not so new, but I use shoe laces of the proper color and they work so well. Such loops on garments help children learn to hang up their clothes, and is especially nice when coat hooks are placed low enough that the little ones can reach them. Shoe laces are good to use for making replacement hooks on those garments that have had them previously.

DEAR POLLY — An old bread box, repainted, can store cook-books, file, pencil, etc. It is also useful for keeping medicine away from children by turning the open side to the wall. Cleaning supplies could be kept in one and away from toddlers.

JFK birthplace to open after firebomb repairs

By LARRY LAUGHLIN

Associated Press Writer
BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) —

From the horsehair plaster in the kitchen to the wallpaper in the bedroom, workmen are putting the finishing touches on repairs at the birthplace of the late John F. Kennedy to get it ready to reopen to the public.

The restored home on Beals Street was damaged the night of Sept. 9, 1975, the day Boston's public schools opened for a second year of court-ordered busing. An arsonist's firebomb crashed through the kitchen door at the rear of the house.

Nov. 15 is the target date for the reopening of the two-story house as a historic site.

The physical restoration continued into October, according to John Heath, the National Park Service ranger overseeing the work. Then came the house-cleaning.

The fire left the kitchen a charred ruin. The rest of the house, spared from flames by the quick response of firefighters, was damaged by heat and smoke.

The arsonist apparently also spray-painted the words "Bus Teddy" on a sidewalk in front of the house, in a reference to the late president's brother, U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, a supporter of the busing program. Heath said chemicals were used to erase the slogan.

The president's parents — Rose and Joseph Kennedy — moved into the house in 1914. Four of their children, including the future president, were born there. The family moved to New York in 1921.

The house passed through about six owners before the Kennedy family bought it back in 1966 and deeded it to the federal government. The park service dedicated the site in 1969.

The kitchen furnishings, selected with Rose Kennedy's advice in order to recreate conditions when the family lived there, were not authentic pieces. Heath said none of the genuine Kennedy furnishings were lost in the fire.

All the articles of furniture had to be cleaned afterward, but the unfortunate incident gave officials the chance to assess the landmark fully.

"The fire gave us an opportunity to have a professional analysis of the home done," said Heath. "We went back to the original layers of paint to see exactly what kind was used."

The fire also revealed a china hutch in the wall between the kitchen and dining room. "No one even knew it was there. It must have been covered over years ago," said Heath.

"The original plaster in the kitchen was made with horsehair," said Heath of another post-fire discovery. "They don't make it that way nowadays. In order to replaster the kitchen, we had to go to Suffolk Downs racetrack to purchase horsehair, and then we had to find someone old enough to have worked with it."

A craftsman with experience in working horsehair plaster, which resists cracking with the settling of walls, was located in Boston and another historic detail was preserved.

Vested interest in fashion

The vest is the fashion accessory of the season, whether pulling together a tailored suit for day or topping a Russian coltote for evening. The lustrous look of rich firenze with its velvet touch softens a very tailored three-piece suit, left. Try the same vest with last year's favorites to update your wardrobe. For a dramatic day-into-night statement, wear black in a sleek gilet vest and coltote piped in satin over the softest of silk shirts, right. The separates are 100 per cent cotton.

Camera handy when househunting

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you are planning to buy a house, remodel a house, sell a house or even decorate a house, you can get a lot of mileage out of a camera, suggests Alfred Howarth of New York, an architect and interior designer.

"In our business a color camera provides a useful record of many things. If we must travel to see a house, we may forget certain details that are important, but the photograph can refresh our memories so that we do not need to take another trip." He uses the camera for architectural and interior design purposes.

"In addition a camera can give you something to work with after you leave a project — it often reveals things you haven't even noticed when you looked at a house."

In fact, in one photograph Howarth, who studied architecture in Canada, noted that the ridge of a roof was bowed. It had not been apparent when he was on the site, but the camera emphasized the disrepair. On a new house such a problem means deterioration, he explained, so repairs would be necessary before they could proceed with other plans.

"You really must be willing to get up on a stepladder and photograph the roof, which can reveal conditions you might not be able to see from the ground. It might mean shoring up an area before you can work below."

In another example, a photograph picked up a strong shadow on a wall, an indication that the old house to be remodeled had been partitioned at some time or another. Exploratory work in the attic above that room revealed that one area was sagging because the partition had been removed.

In the architectural business, the cost of a consultation can be cut down considerably by using a camera to record the elevations and various angles of the house if a client wants to do so in advance of meeting with the architect whose fees are set on an hourly basis, Howarth advises.

Little photographs can be blown up later if one needs larger prints and color cameras can provide instant snapshots even with space on the bottom border to jot down details. But it really doesn't matter what kind of camera you use so long as it serves your purpose, says Howarth, who has been serving as a homes specialist consultant to the Polaroid Corp. He is also a member of the American Society of Interior Designers.

"It is expensive nowadays to get scaffolding built, so if you want to get a good view of the ceiling, a photograph can be very helpful. This can be done on a ladder," he advises.

Pipes, wires and even studs in old houses being remodeled can be photographed to serve any number of purposes — to indicate where they are located or to prove what is behind the walls if you ever must do so.

As for people who are planning to buy a house, which might necessitate some costly trips to another city, a lot of information can be passed on to a mate by taking photographs. Real estate people often supply snapshots but these may be little flattering views of the best angle of the house. The house shopper can do more. Photographs showing negative aspects may prove to be a saving factor — removing the house from serious consideration. On the other hand details of the home in photographs may be a selling point with one's partner, saving time and money.

Cameras long have been useful to interior designers as Howarth maintains, especially useful when one wants to capture colors, motif and style for future reference or to show to another interested person. They can be used to photograph odd-shaped windows to assist in their draping and might be used also to photograph furniture that might need reupholstering. Photographs are useful also when one wants to remember the pattern and colors in rugs and fabrics on shopping trips.

Another use of the camera, of course, is to make a record of one's possessions for personal use or for insurance or legal purposes.

Club news

Altrusa Club

A GIA Debate was the program for a recent meeting of the Altrusa Club of Pampa. Grants - In - Aid is an international project for Altrusans to help women obtain an education.

Mary Wilson and Geneva Tidwell represented the news media while Geraldine Rampe argued for Altrusa International.

Erin O'Connor, Altrusa Girl for October was introduced.

Glyndene Shelton and Virginia Wilkerson presented a skit reflecting highlights of the Convention.

Vermell Meador was presented with two engraved bars to hang below her Altrusa plaque. The bars are engraved with the various district offices she had held, and the dates.

Announcement was made that Altrusa Club won second for its newsletter, first runner up for the Mamie L. Bass Award, an award-for-community-service projects, and first runner up for the Edith DeBusk Award, which is the club president's annual report to her local club.

The Pampa Altrusa Club is one of 42 in District Nine. Pampa members received 28 perfect attendance certificates.

Varietas Study Club

Morris Kille traced the history of bell ringing during a program presented for members of the Varietas Study Club at its annual Guest Day tea in Lovett Memorial Library.

The welcome was given by Anna Pierce, and Mrs. J.E. Gunn introduced the speaker.

Kille also presented the nine-member Women's Bell Choir of the First United Methodist Church, which he directs.

Hostesses for the tea were Mesdames Rue Hestand, L.B. Pernick, Sherman White and Otis Nace.

Place 8 to 10 chicken thighs in shallow baking dish. Drain 1 11-ounce can mandarin orange juice into saucepan; reserve orange sections. Add 2 teaspoons sugar, 1/2 teaspoon orange peel, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup orange juice, 2 tablespoons teriyaki sauce, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 2 tablespoons oil to saucepan. Bring to boil stirring constantly for 5 minutes. Allow sauce to cool then pour over chicken thighs and refrigerate for at least 4 hours, preferably overnight. When ready to cook, bake at 350 degrees F. for 35 minutes. Serves 5 hot or cold.

Cheddar tomato quiche

Sprinkle 1 cup shredded cheddar cheese, 6 slices cooked, crumbled bacon and 1/4 cup sliced green onion over bottom of 9-inch unbaked pie shell. Beat together 3 eggs, 1/2 cup cream, 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and 1/2 cup dry mustard. Pour into pie shell. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese. Bake in preheated 375-degree F. oven 30 to 35 minutes or until a knife inserted near center comes out clean. Let stand 15 minutes before serving. Garnish with sliced tomatoes, if desired. 6 servings.

Rice--breakfast, lunch, dinner

Rice is so versatile that it can be served for breakfast, lunch or dinner, in main dishes and desserts.

Now is a good time to try recipes featuring rice. An excellent crop this year, in addition to a large holdover from last year's harvest, insures that supplies of the grain will be abundant.

An added bonus of rice is that even cooked, it has excellent keeping qualities. If stored in the refrigerator, it keeps up to a week; in the freezer, it keeps for six to eight months.

The Texas Department of Agriculture home economist suggests trying the following recipes.

- Green Rice
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup finely chopped celery
6 tablespoons melted butter
1 (10 oz.) pkg. frozen chopped

- broccoli, thawed
1 (8 oz.) pkg. American cheese, cubed
1 (10 1/2 oz.) can cream of chicken soup two-thirds cup water
2 cups uncooked rice
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
Salt and pepper to taste
Sauté onion and celery in melted butter until tender. Add broccoli and cheese; cook over low heat until cheese melts. Add remaining ingredients and blend well. Spoon into an oiled 2-quart casserole; cover and bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Uncover; reduce heat to 300 degrees and bake an additional 10 minutes. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

- Honeyed Rice
3 cups cooked rice
1/2 cup seedless raisins
2 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup honey
2 tablespoons butter

- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1 tablespoon orange juice
Cinnamon
Combine rice, raisins, milk, honey and butter. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 14 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in orange peel and juice. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Yield: 6 servings.

- Ham and Rice Casserole
2 (10 1/2 oz.) cans cream of celery soup
1 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1/4 teaspoon rosemary
4 cups cooked rice
4 cups cubed cooked ham
1 (1 lb. 4 oz.) can cut green beans
1 (3 1/2 oz.) can French fried onion rings

Combine celery soup and cream; stir until smooth. Heat slowly until hot, being careful not to boil. Stir in cheese. Blend in mustard and rosemary. Remove from heat. Combine sauce with rice and ham. Alternate layers of ham and rice mixture with green beans in 3-quart casserole, ending with ham and rice mixture. Sprinkle with onion rings. Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes, or until bubbly. Yield: 10 servings.

- Rice Buttermilk Pancakes
2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 tablespoons sugar
3 eggs, separated
2 1/2 cups buttermilk
5 tablespoons butter
1 cup cold cooked rice
Sift dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry, peaks form. Beat egg yolks. Combine yolks, buttermilk and butter. Add to dry ingredients, mixing well. Stir in rice. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake on hot griddle. Yield: 16 4-inch pancakes.

- Rice Pudding Surprise
3 cups cooked rice
2 eggs
2 1/2 cups milk
1 (4 oz.) pkg. lemon pudding and pie filling (not instant)
two-thirds cup orange marmalade
Beat eggs slightly with milk; stir into pudding mix. Place into medium-size saucepan. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture starts to boil. Meanwhile, heat marmalade. When pudding is done, fold in rice and marmalade. Spoon into serving dish. Chill. Yield: 6 servings.

Pumpkin bread marvelously moist

Get a running start on the mellow mood of fall by concocting a golden pumpkin bread. Make two loaves at one time and freeze the second loaf or give it to a special friend or relative. Canned pumpkin and sour cream give this bread a welcome moistness and the enriched corn meal, pecans and raisins add texture. The fall also is a good time to make the most of apples from local orchards. As cooler days draw near, whip up some fresh apple doughnuts and put aside some fresh cider to make hot buttered cider for football weekends.

- GOLDEN PUMPKIN BREAD
1 16-ounce can pumpkin
1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
4 eggs
1/2 cup vegetable oil
3 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup enriched corn meal
2 teaspoons soda
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 cup water
3/4 cup raisins
1/2 cup chopped pecans

Beat together pumpkin, sugars, eggs and oil. Add combined dry ingredients to pumpkin mixture alternately with sour cream and water, mixing well after each addition. Stir in raisins and pecans. Pour into two well-greased 9x5-inch loaf pans. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven about 1 hour and 10 minutes. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pan. Makes two

- FRESH APPLE DOUGHNUTS
5 cups all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon mace
1/4 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup grated raw apples
1/2 cup buttermilk
Vegetable oil

Mix and sift first seven ingredients. Cream shortening. Add sugar and eggs. Beat until smooth. Add vanilla, apples and buttermilk, mix well. Add flour mixture 1 cup at a time; beating until smooth after each addition. Chill dough at least two hours. Turn out on well floured board. Roll out dough to a thickness of one-half inch, using additional flour for handling dough if necessary. Cut with floured 2 and one-half inch doughnut cutter. Heat vegetable oil (2 inches deep) to 375 degrees. Gently drop doughnuts in hot fat, 3 or 4 at a time. Fry 1 minute on each side. Drain on paper toweling. Makes 2 to 2 and one-half dozen doughnuts.

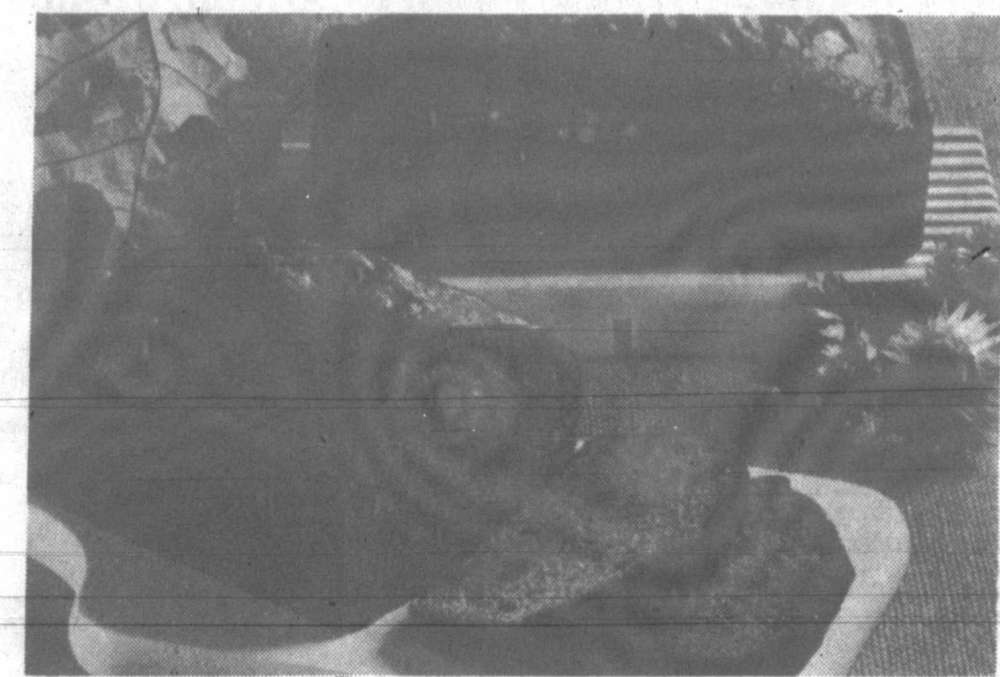

HOT BUTTERED CIDER
Combine 1 quart cider, one 4-inch stick cinnamon, 8 whole cloves, 8 allspice berries (optional) and one-fourth to one-third cup brown sugar, depending on taste. Bring to a boil. Simmer 10 to 15 minutes. Strain into mugs. Top each with about 1 teaspoon butter.

Carrot squash

- 2 medium acorn squash
4 medium carrots, peeled and sliced 1/4-inch thick
1/2 cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons water
1/4 teaspoon dried Italian herb mix

Cut squash crosswise into 1/2-inch thick slices; do not pare; remove seeds and membranes. In an oblong glass 3-quart baking dish (13 1/2 by 8 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches) or similar utensil arrange the squash slices, overlapping as necessary. Scatter carrots over them. Heat butter, water and herb mix until butter melts; pour over vegetables. Tightly cover dish with foil. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until tender — 1 hour. Makes 6 servings.

Golden pumpkin bread makes tasty use of a seasonal favorite. Other foods which suggest autumn are fresh apple doughnuts and hot buttered cider. Recipes are given at the left.

Dates, oats make cookies

- 1 1/2 cups sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup finely cut pitted dates
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1 large egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup commercial sour cream
1 cup quick-cooking oats

Sift together the flour, baking soda and salt. Coat dates with 1/4 cup of this mixture. Cream butter and sugars; beat in egg and vanilla; blend in flour mixture, in several additions, alternately with sour cream. Stir in coated dates and the oats. Drop by level tablespoonfuls, a few inches apart, onto lightly greased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven 12 to 15 minutes. Let stand 30 seconds before removing to wire racks to cool. Store between sheets of wax paper or plastic wrap, tightly covered. Makes about 5 dozen.

CHICKEN RICE CURRY
Curry powder may be decreased for a blander dish.
1 cup converted rice
2 tablespoons butter
4 teaspoons curry powder
3 tablespoons flour
2 cans (each 10 1/2 ounces) condensed chicken broth, undiluted
1/2 cup water
3 cups 1-inch pieces cooked skin-free chicken
1/4 cup canned flaked coconut
Cook rice according to package directions. In a medium saucepan over low heat melt the butter; stir in the curry powder and flour. Off heat, gradually stir in the chicken broth and water, keeping smooth. Over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, cook until thickened and boiling. (Makes about 3 1/2 cups sauce.) Mix about 2 cups of the sauce with the rice and spread half of the mixture in an 8 by 8 by 2 inch baking dish. Scatter chicken over this rice. Spread remaining rice mixture over chicken. Sprinkle with the coconut. Refrigerate, covered. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until hot through and coconut is toasted — about 30 minutes. Meanwhile, reheat remaining sauce and pass separately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Warped saucepans and skillets perform inefficiently. Utensils with flat bottoms hug the heating units and get the most out of them.

Imported oil flow is on the increase

WASHINGTON — (LENS)
Under the 1974 Nixon plan the country was supposed to become self-sufficient in energy by 1980. The administration now reckons the United States will still import 5 million barrels of oil a day in 1985. Shell and Exxon guess the figure will be at least twice that much, i.e., well above today's figure.

Nixon was especially keen to cut the country's reliance on those countries that placed an embargo on oil exports to it in 1973. Just the opposite has happened. Supplies from old friends, notably Canada and Venezuela, have fallen. The Arab countries' share of American oil imports went up from 7 per cent in 1973 to 34 per cent last year.

So during the first six months of this year the United States spent nearly $16 billion to buy oil from abroad: 27.3 per cent of its total import bill. It is still the world's third largest crude oil producer (with 8.2 million barrels a day) after Russia (10.1 million barrels a day) and Saudi Arabia (8.5 million barrels a day), but it is also the world's biggest oil importer.

In 1970 it imported 23 per cent of its oil — this year it will import about 45 per cent.

The administration offers two main excuses for this dependence. The first is that it virtuously concluded the costs of Project Independence were too high to fit the national interest.

The second is the unvirtuous way Congress has refused to wear such White House proposals as laxer clean-air standards, the abolition of price controls on fuel, and Ford's 1975 bill to help private industry, through treasury bond issues and government loan guarantees, to raise $100 billion for approved energy projects over 10 years.

Also, it is said, Congress has scared the oil industry off investment, and kept the public's mind off more important energy issues, by making "big oil" a villain. The now postponed effort by Congress to force the vertical disintegration of up to 22 oil companies is cited in support of this view.

Price controls remain. Under a two-tier system newly found crude oil in the United States is held at about $11.55 a barrel, crude oil from pre-embargo wells at about $5.13 a barrel. These controls are supposed to be phased out by the spring of 1979. That may not happen.

The Federal Energy Administration, a "temporary" agency created during the oil crisis that now boasts 3,400 employees, has published many exceptions to the price rules. Others think those who have benefited now form a strong lobby for continued controls.

The American voters are a still more powerful force for continued price controls. According to public opinion polls, they are more distrustful than ever of big business, and most especially of "big oil." The oil companies are suspected of running the price cartel for OPEC and of making an old-fashioned killing out of higher prices.

The industry's critics find it hard to explain why then the oil companies are in such a hurry to diversify. Atlantic Richfield has invested in Anaconda, a copper miner; Mobil in Marcor, the owner of a department store chain; Standard Oil of California in Amax, a metals producer. Exxon, Continental Oil and Occidental Petroleum are exuberant diggers for coal.

Unsurprisingly, allies of the United States, particularly its partners in the International Energy Agency, are restive. The noises they are making up in the gods have become even ruder since Henry Kissinger, the secretary of state, abandoned an effort to push the Congress to agree to that famous $25 billion "safety net," the petro-dollar recycling scheme.

The United States, as they see it, has acted in an unneighborly way in rejecting the two alternatives it had to cut oil demand quickly: rationing by price or rationing by allocation. True, the American treasury flirted briefly with the idea of raising the federal government tax on gasoline, now 4 cents a gallon, as high as 30 cents a gallon. It blushes when it is reminded of this.

Gasoline is still pumped into American cars at about 60 cents a gallon. The French pay more than three times that price — the British, Germans, Japanese and Swiss more than double.

Other countries, of course, continue to warn of the risk of petrodollar recycling hardships unless the United States does its big bit to restrain demand so that OPEC thinks twice before it puts up prices. American treasury officials are not much impressed. They recall the Europeans and Japanese cried wolf on this after the 1974 OPEC price increases but the money markets, helped by floating exchange rates, coped.

The Federal Energy Administration is not as relaxed, but then it has less clout. John Hill, its deputy chief, thinks the treasury scoffs too hard at the danger that if some Arab oil countries, helped by burgeoning American demand, continue to take in more money than they know what to do with they will cut production.

Texan, Arabian oil different

DALLAS — Americans get twice as much of their oil supply from Texas as they do from Saudi Arabia. And there are two significant differences between the Texas oil and the foreign crude:

First, Texas producers are averaging about $7.64 per barrel for their oil because of federal price controls. The Arabs, on the other hand, are demanding and getting $11.50.

Second, Texas production is secure. Arab production is subject to the uncertainties of lengthy transport, international power politics, and the threat of arbitrary price increases.

"Although Texas oil is taken for granted by most Americans and discriminated against on price by our own federal government, it still is the nation's major source of energy," says Jack S. Blanton of Houston, an independent oil company executive and president of Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

"Texas oil remains a key element of U.S. foreign policy. As an indispensable factor in our national security, it is our last line of defense against energy blackmail."

Nearly all of Texas' 172,000 oil wells are producing at 100 per cent of rated capacity and have been for more than four years. But production is dropping steadily, down from the record 1972 pace by about 220,000 barrels per day.

Along with the decline in Texas production have come dropoffs in other oil-producing states. Most of these states have been losing an even greater percentage of their production. As a result, Texas' production has become even more valuable and last year accounted for 40 per cent of the U.S. total, the highest percentage since 1957.

The state's regulatory agency, the Railroad Commission, set the oil production allowable at 100 per cent of potential for nearly all Texas fields in April, 1972. But that action only temporarily stayed a downward trend already begun. Although Texas fields are producing virtually all the oil they are capable of producing, they cannot overcome the declining reserves situation and lower pressures found in many of the state's older fields.

The six per cent loss of production between 1972 and 1975 has been spread generally across the state, with only one Railroad Commission District running counter to the trend: District 8-A in West Texas, the state's most prolific producer, showed an 18-per cent increase in oil production between 1972 and 1975. Thus far in 1976, production is down about 2.3 per cent over the same period one year ago.

Texas' producing wells are found in more than 8,400 fields and a total of 206 widely scattered Texas counties recorded some crude oil production in 1975. Production comes from all sizes and depths of wells and fields and approximately 15 per cent of the state's oil output comes from stripper wells, those producing 10 or fewer barrels of oil per day.

One-third of Texas' 1.2 billion barrels of crude oil produced last year came from six counties in West Texas, while 47.8 per cent of Texas crude oil last year was developed from 10 counties and 58.7 per cent came from the top 15 producing counties.

The federal government's present price controls, clamped on in response to international interruptions of supply and the setting of arbitrary world prices by the Oil Producing and Exporting Countries, have produced a confusing pattern for the pricing of Texas oil.

Approximately 60 per cent of Texas' crude oil now gets a price of about $5.25; the remaining 40 per cent sells for about $11.50.

This scheme, which formerly included the designation of oil as either "old" or "new," is designed to produce a federally mandated average price of about $7.66 per barrel, a figure presently frozen by the Federal Energy Administration.

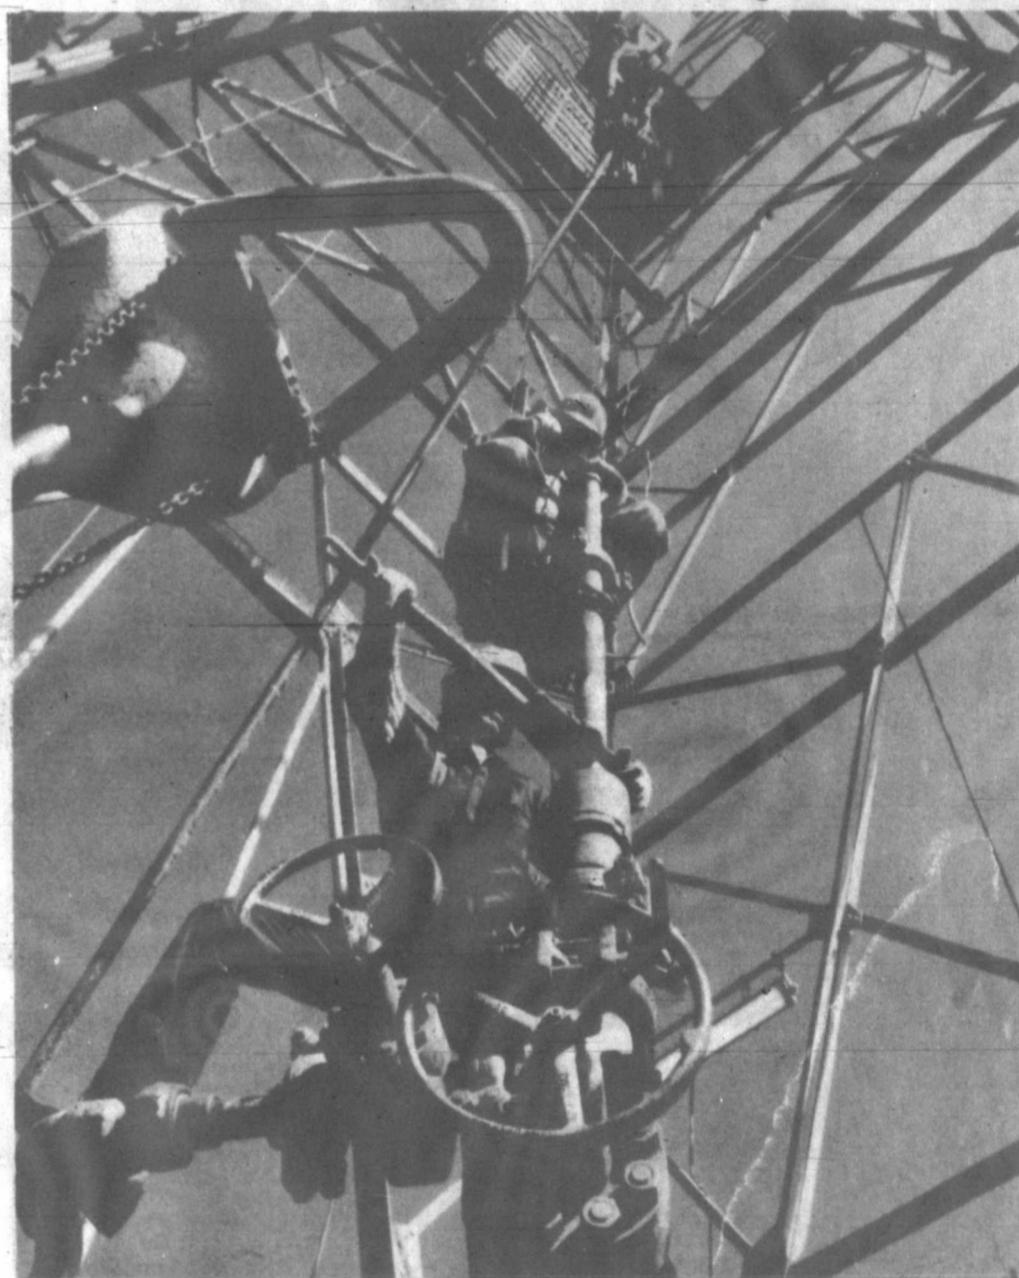

The increase in oil prices both in Texas and worldwide has signaled the end of an era of cheap energy supplies. But, because of its oil reserves, Texas has been more fortunate than many other areas and has experienced broad economic benefits. Price increases have brought about a revival in the search for oil and stimulated projects aimed at increasing the recovery of oil. Moreover, higher prices have increased the state's tax collections, fattened industry payrolls, and acted as a general stimulus for the state's overall economy.

No look at production is complete without an examination of the status of proved reserves, the "pool" from which "withdrawals" are made. And Texas' proved reserves at the end of 1975 were about 10.1 billion barrels, down from the 13.2 billion barrel level in 1970 and only two-thirds of the 1951 peak figure of 15.3 billion barrels.

Reserves reflect both discoveries and development and the rate of production. It was in 1960 that the last field with a potential of 100 million barrels or more was discovered in Texas. That, combined with almost four and one-half years of all-out production, has taken its toll.

This decline in reserves has put a new emphasis on "enhanced recovery." Generally, the phrase is used to describe the pumping of a fluid — water or gas — into an oil-bearing formation in an effort to force oil to the surface, with the most frequently used substance being water.

Oklahoma gospel

The Weatherfords, family gospel singing group from Paoli, Okla., will appear in concert at the Fellowship Baptist Church at 7:30 p.m. Friday. The Rev. Earl Maddux, pastor, said the family is recognized for their music that "can shape minds, stir hearts and challenge souls." The gospel music program is open to the public. Rev. Maddux added. PHS test scores higher Pampa High School seniors during 1975-76 outscored their national counterparts on two major college entrance examinations, according to John English, high school counselor.

Average scores of the 49 students who took the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) were 467 for the verbal section of the test and 506 on the math portion.

English said that compared to national averages of 431 for verbal and 472 for math. He said the highest possible score on the test is 800 and the lowest possible is 100. There were 286 seniors at Pampa High School during the 1975-76 academic year.

Ninety-one seniors took the American College Test (ACT), averaging 20.2 on their composite scores as compared to the national composite score of 18.3.

English said highest possible composite score on the ACT is 36 and lowest is 1.

The counselor added that while SAT measures only verbal and math skills, the ACT tests students in English, math, social studies and science. These scores are then averaged to arrive at the composite scores.

English said seniors planning on attending college must take either the SAT or ACT.

"Most colleges now accept either test," he said.

"Some colleges now permit students to take the tests at freshman orientation during the summer and we would not have those results."

In 1970-71, 29 per cent of the 366-member senior class took the SAT while 46 per cent of the class took the ACT.

Since then participation in the testing has been on the decline with the SAT attracting only 29 per cent of the seniors in 1971-72, 25 per cent in 1972-73, 21 per cent in 1973-74, 20 per cent in 1974-75 and 17 per cent in 1975-76.

The ACT fared a little better with 46 per cent of the seniors taking the test in 1970-71, 41 per cent in 1971-72, 32 per cent in 1972-73, 1974-75 and 1975-76. Thirty-seven per cent of the senior class took the test in 1973-74.

Students taking the SAT locally scored higher than the national average every year since 1970-71 except for 1971-72 when they ranked 430 in verbal and 467 in math as compared to national scores of 450 in verbal and 482 in math. In 1974-75, local scores in math dropped below the national average of 472. The local average was 470.

ACT composite scores locally have been higher than the national composite scores since 1973-74, English said.

Beds seized as evidence

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. (AP) — Vowing to crack down on prostitution in this central Kansas farm town, the sheriff raided the B&W Snack Bar and confiscated two beds and an empty whisky bottle.

The sheets will be sent to the Kansas Bureau of Investigation for laboratory analysis, Geary County Atty. Michael Francis said Tuesday.

Sheriff Jim Gross, who was authorized by a district judge to seize the beds as evidence, said he's storing them in his office until the court determines what to do with them.

Three women were arrested on prostitution charges as part of the weekend raid that followed an undercover investigation at the Main Street snack bar, a popular hangout for many of the 15,000 soldiers at nearby Ft. Riley, Gross said.

"That's the right time, pay day at Ft. Riley," Francis said of the weekend crackdown.

Gross said officials in this town of 20,000 persons had tried several months ago to wipe out prostitution by leveling a red light district on East Ninth Street and turning it into a parking lot.

But the world's oldest profession simply moved on to Main Street, the sheriff said, and city fathers called a meeting with Francis to discuss the problem. Francis went to Judge John Rugh for the search order.

Gross said he and his deputies found the beds and bottle in a room separated from the rest of the snack bar by a partition that extended only part way to the ceiling.

Francis said he would file for an injunction closing the snack bar for two years as a nuisance. He said the owners would have 20 days to respond in court.

Nuclear blasts of 25 megatons and 50 megatons, the largest man-made explosions to that date, were set off by the Soviet Union, Oct. 23 and 30 respectively in 1961.

Harvesters to test big-play Dons Friday

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Amarillo Palo Duro Coach Ken Ozee agrees that his Dons potentially are an explosive, big-play football team. Then he adds that the defense has left a lot to be desired.

"I told everybody at the start of the year that we should be explosive on offense," Ozee said. "Defense? That's been our problem... The key to beating Pampa is we've got to play better defense than we did against Amarillo High."

Amarillo High throttled Palo Duro, now 5-2-1 for the season, 37-12, Oct. 29 in the Dons' last outing. With a District 3-AAAA record of 1-1, the Dons' best hope is for a three-way tie with Amarillo and Pampa, which visits Amarillo Friday to meet Palo Duro.

"Our only hope is if we win Friday for Pampa to beat Amarillo High in the last game of the season. I think Pampa can beat Amarillo High in Pampa, then it's a three-way tie," said Ozee, in his first year at the Don helm.

Ozee points out, though, that the task, particularly since his defense has been way below par this season, will be monumental.

"I don't see how we can overpower Pampa. Pampa's the most physical football team I've seen, more than Amarillo High. I definitely think Pampa will beat Amarillo High with the homefield advantage."

"With Pampa's inside defense, you can't do anything from tackle to tackle. They're well-coached, extremely well-coached.

Those two defensive tackles (Terry McBride and Charles Copeland) are bodacious football players. And No. 45 (linebacker Frank Stowers) and Bailey (linebacker Pat Bailey) are both extremely tough.

"All five of their interior people on defense are all-district candidates. The defensive ends are tough. I don't see any weakness in Pampa's defense — it's the best in the district. There's no comparison."

Offensively, Ozee also is impressed with the Harvesters, in spite of the loss of fullback David Caldwell for the season because of knee surgery.

"Our scouts felt like this other fullback (junior Dean Smith) was a pretty good fullback. Maybe he strengthened the offense. He's not a breakaway threat like Caldwell but he's more of a tenacious runner. He's a little tougher."

"There's no doubt that Moore (halfback Ricky Moore) is the best back in the district. If he ever gets the football 25 or 30 times a game, somebody's going to be in trouble. He only carried the football 11 (actually 12) times against Plainview — I hope he just carries it 11 times against us."

Moore rushed 12 times for 74 yards, but Pampa lost 9-7 to Plainview in a non-conference game last week. Smith added 63 yards on 11 carries.

Moore may miss the Palo Duro contest because of bruised ribs and a bout with an illness. That could present problems for the Harvesters since backup halfback Curtis Matlock is lost for the season with a hyperextended knee.

Palo Duro also has suffered injury problems. The Dons' best athlete, tight end-linebacker Matt Mask, underwent knee surgery and is out for the season, and Monty Stumbo, a linebacker who leads the team in tackles, will miss the Harvesters game with an injury.

Palo Duro is typically Palo Duro. Through the years, the Dons have been noted for a bruising fullback, a breakaway threat at halfback, a passing quarterback, at least one fleet receiver and a big offensive line.

The fullback is Mike Stumbo, among the district's top rushers. Robert Brooks is the breakaway halfback. Quarterback Bill McElduff and alternating ends Wade Jernigan and Anthony Gilbreath provide a dangerous aerial attack. And four offensive linemen weigh more than 200 pounds.

The line leader is center Marion Thompson, a 6-4, 240-pound senior who also starts at defensive left guard.

"They're a big play team, offensively," Pampa Coach John Welborn said. "They're not as big overall as they have been and I don't know if they're as good defensively. At least their stats haven't been."

"Potentially, they're as good as they have been the last two years."

Pampa's best hope, should it lose, would be for a three-way tie. A victory would make the Pampa-Amarillo contest next week a shootout for the outright championship.

"We've got to win it Friday. If we don't, we have to rely on beating the Sandies, then win a coin flip."

Sooners want to know about probe

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma President Dr. Paul Sharp wired the National Collegiate Athletic Association Wednesday asking it to state whether or not it is formally investigating the OU football program.

In a telegram to Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, Dr. Sharp said: "The Oklahoma City Times reports today (Wednesday) that you have issued a prepared statement in which previous comments by officials at OU were branded inaccurate."

"Please provide by returned telegram (collect) a copy of alleged prepared statement. Further by returned telegram (collect), please state in plain language whether or not the University of Oklahoma is under official investigation by NCAA as required by Section 3, official procedure governing the NCAA enforcement program, NCAA manual 1976-77."

Byers released a statement earlier Wednesday that said the NCAA is conducting a preliminary probe into allegations of ticket scalping by OU players.

He said Sharp called him on Oct. 25, the day the Oklahoma City Times first reported the NCAA was investigating the allegations.

"I advised him that allegations of noncompliance with NCAA requirements previously had been received by our office, that we were in the process of investigating them to determine the reliability of the sources of the allegations and the extent of supporting details for the charges and that results of those initial interviews would determine whether there was cause for the formal notification procedures of the NCAA enforcement program." Byers said in a statement.

Dr. J. R. Morris, OU vice president for the university community, issued a statement

Wednesday evening explaining the difference between a preliminary probe and a formal investigation.

"The difference between an initial inquiry and a formal inquiry is more than one of semantics," Morris said. "A formal inquiry means that the Committee of Infractions has made a formal decision that there is evidence to warrant an official inquiry and at that point the institution is notified and fully informed of the matter of inquiry."

"As a matter of fact, that committee decision had not been made on Oct. 25, and, so far as we know, has not yet been made. It is highly irregular and a violation of the NCAA's own procedures to report to a newspaper that an initial inquiry is being made."

Pastorini seeks trade

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini makes headlines on and off the football field.

During the off-season he took the Oilers' future along with him and started racing speed boats as a hobby and later in the summer he broke a bone in his foot while hosting his own celebrity tennis tournament.

Two weeks ago Pastorini escaped serious injury when his camper pickup truck crashed into several trees off a city street at 4 a.m.

Wednesday he asked to be traded.

"This team just isn't working together," Pastorini said in an understatement after Monday night's nationally televised 38-14 loss to the Baltimore Colts.

"I had high hopes when I came here (1971) that we'd build something, maybe a dynasty," Pastorini said. "We haven't built anything."

The frustrations of a three-game losing streak are beginning to show.

Against Cincinnati two weeks ago, Pastorini called time out after Oiler offensive coordinator King Hill had sent in Skip Butler for a field goal. Pastorini convinced Hill to go for a touchdown instead.

Baylor to tackle defensive Hogs

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Baylor coach Grant Teaff says Arkansas is much better than it was last year when the Razorbacks beat his Bears 41-3.

The reason, Teaff says, is defense.

"Arkansas has the best defense in our league," Teaff said. "I've seen some film on everybody. Their defense improved last year, but they are much better defensively than they were when we played them."

"If we had played them at the end of last year, they would have scored 150 points," Teaff said. "Scott Bull was just beginning to come into his own when we played them."

Baylor plays Arkansas Saturday at Waco and Teaff was asked if the Bears would dare Arkansas to throw the football by forcing on defense.

"You've got to stop Arkansas' from getting the long run," he said. "They have a half-dozen running backs capable of breaking one. But (Ron) Calcagni has started to throw the ball real well and you can't give up the long pass."

Arkansas had four backs rush for more than 85 yards each in last week's 41-16 rout of Rice. Calcagni completed four of 10 passes for 107 yards against the Owls.

For the season, Calcagni has completed 15 of 48 passes for 316 yards.

Arkansas coach Frank Broyles says, however, that the Razorback passing game is on the upswing. He says the devel-

Shockers test Caprock

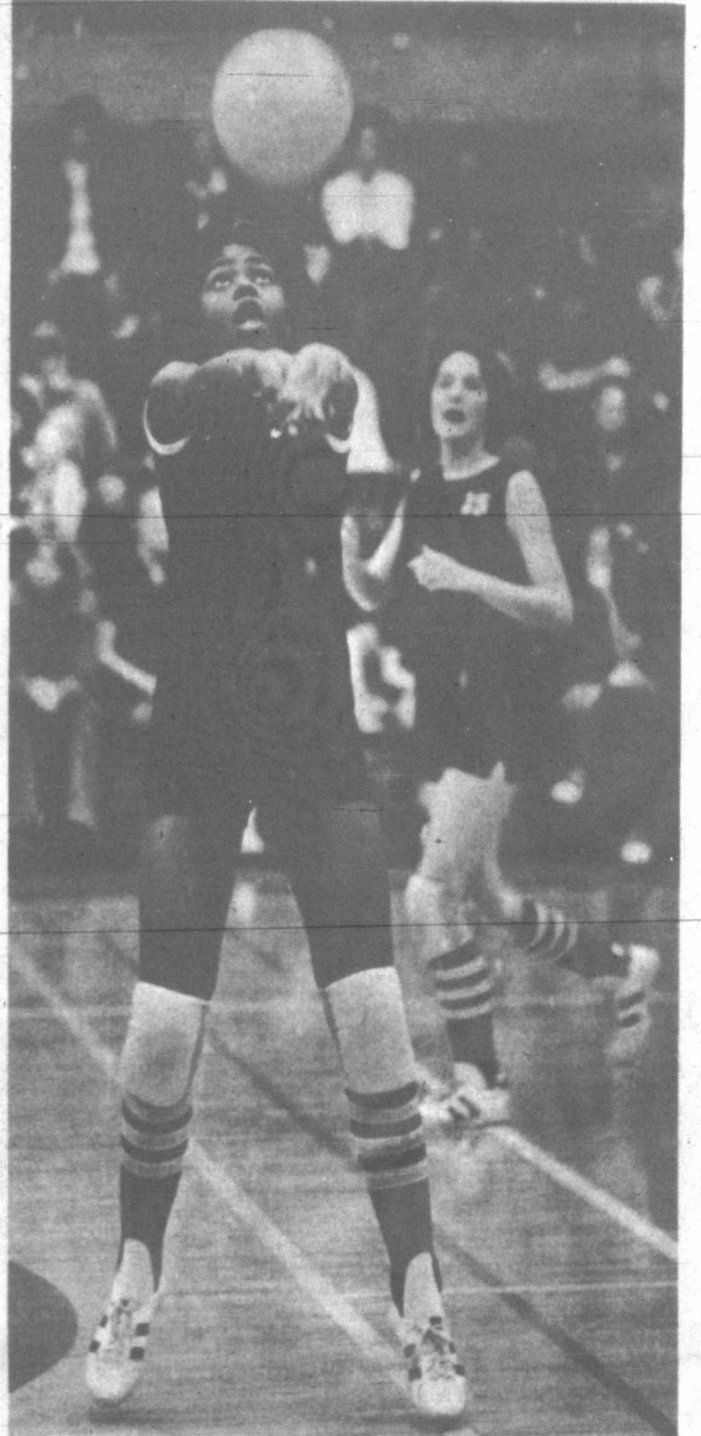

The Pampa Shockers visit Amarillo Caprock in the next-to-last junior varsity football game of the season at 4 p.m. today.

Pampa is 4-3 for the season and 1-1 in District 3-AAAA play. In a sophomore contest, Pampa visits Guyton, Okla., for a 7 p.m. contest.

In junior high action today involving Pampa teams, the freshman A-team visits Borger (7 p.m.), the freshman B-team hosts Canyon White (4 p.m., Shocker Field); the eighth-grade blue team entertains Dumas (4 p.m., P.J.H. field) and the eighth-grade red team travels to Perryton (4 p.m.).

That's the lot of all expansion teams. They are given a license to drive with the big boys, but then allowed to use only roller-skate or a broken-down Edsel.

"I wish we could have a shot at some of those free agents," said Gorman, whose infant club could grow up very quickly with the likes of Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi or Don Gullett on the roster. "But these are the Sophomore Demetria Simmons, a spiker, will lead Pampa tonight against Amarillo High in a crucial district contest, which will end both teams' regular season. Both are tied for the second-half leadership. Pampa would force a playoff with either Amarillo or Amarillo Palo Duro with a victory tonight.

Another George Blanda? Mal Dixon is hoping so

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — When Mal Dixon, a college place-kicker, graduates next June, he'd like to turn pro. If he does, he'll be the oldest rookie — in fact, the oldest active player — in the National Football League.

He's already the George Blanda of the college set. Dixon is a 46-year-old senior at Fairleigh Dickinson University and the oldest active college player.

"I'm old but I'm eager," Dixon says, suiting up to take the ribbing and hard hits from opponents half his age. "There's no easy treatment for me — they're trying to knock off my head and I'm trying to knock off theirs."

Dixon retired from the restaurant business four years ago and went to college to get a degree in education. It had been his lifelong dream to play college football, and he didn't let his age stand in the way.

"My first year here, I happened to see the football team working out. So I thought I'd go out for it," he says. "My wife thought I was crazy and my kids didn't believe me, but they came around."

Dixon not only does the place-kicking but also occasionally fills in as a defensive lineman. He has hit on 11 of 12 extra points but missed his only field goal attempt this year. The team is 1-5 and usually playing catch-up, so he doesn't get a chance to try too many field goals. In practice he booms 45-yarders.

"I'm in better condition now than when I was in my freshman year," says Dixon, who, like many collegians, would love to play pro ball.

Dixon started out life with a heart murmur that kept him on the sidelines during his early years, but went away after he started school.

Seattle, Toronto won't get big-name players

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Gorman has seen a lot of baseball lists in the last two weeks, but none is more appealing than today's available free agent players. Only this is one list Gorman can't touch.

Gorman is the director of player personnel for the expansion Seattle Mariners, who will be forced to come into the cold, competitive baseball world in 1977 with young hopefuls, old has-been and middle-aged mediocres.

That's the lot of all expansion teams. They are given a license to drive with the big boys, but then allowed to use only roller-skate or a broken-down Edsel.

"I wish we could have a shot at some of those free agents," said Gorman, whose infant club could grow up very quickly with the likes of Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi or Don Gullett on the roster. "But these are the rules of the game."

Seattle and its twin brother, Toronto, paid a hefty price to get into the American League. Part of that entrance fee for each team included $5.25 million for 30 players. Among the available players to the Mariners and Blue Jays will be Pat Dobson, Wilbur Wood, Brooks Robinson, Bill Melton, Boog Powell, Rico Carty, Paul Blair and Bill Freehan.

"The clubs did an excellent job of protecting their best players," said Gorman.

All 12 existing AL clubs have 15 untouchable players, along with all their minor leaguers signed after 1975. Each team must lose one player per round. When a team loses a player, it can protect three more after the first three rounds and two more after the fourth round.

"I'm somewhat disappointed," said Peter Bavasi, vice president and general manager of the Blue Jays. "The clubs didn't leave unprotected as many young players as I would have liked."

"Now we'll have to change our approach and go with what's around. There are certainly a lot of old guys available."

Building teams eventually attain success because of young, talented players who mature into stars together. Old teams tend to do little but get old together.

"Our goal is still to draft the best young players we can get, except now there are fewer available than we counted on," says Bavasi, who estimates he and his scouting staff have put in 13,000 man hours to bone up on the available personnel.

"When we run out of young guys, we'll pick the veterans we feel can do the best job maybe even two or three at one position to provide us with trading material."

Athletes win and lose in world of politicking

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

When Ken Bowman was at center for the Green Bay Packers, he always bemoaned the fact that offensive linemen rarely were recognized by pro football fans.

Now a lawyer, Bowman ran into much the same problem Tuesday when he lost his bid for a seat in the Wisconsin State Senate.

"I guess maybe I should have been a quarterback," Bowman said after being defeated by Republican incumbent Thomas Petri.

"We thought we were going to win, but unfortunately it didn't come out that way," the Democrat said. "But I've played enough football games to know that there are many instances where you fight real hard and the team still loses."

Bowman was one of 13 former athletes to run for office in Tuesday's election. Six were winners.

Democrat Joe DeNucci, a former fighter, was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives, polling 70 per cent of the vote.

"One thing about boxing, the rules are all defined pretty much," said DeNucci, who retired from the ring after losing two close decisions to Emile Griffith in 1972. "Politics is a different kind of business. You don't have that much control over your own destiny."

Other former athletes who won were Republicans Jack Kemp and Larry Jackson, and Democrats Ralph Metcalfe, Mickey Owen and Ray Jarvis.

On the losing end were Republicans Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell, Bobby Richardson, Don Demeter, Wes Santee and Ron Shotts.

Kemp, who quarterbacked the Buffalo Bills of the National Football League, posted a big victory in his re-election bid to the U.S. House of Representatives from New York's 38th Congressional District.

Jackson, who pitched for the St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies, won re-election to the Idaho House, out-polling his Democratic challenger by nearly 2-to-1. He is in line to become chairman of the Idaho House Appropriations Committee.

Metcalfe, a member of the victorious American 400-meter relay team in the 1936 Berlin Olympics, also ran well in Illinois' 1st District, crushing his opponent while winning his fourth two-year term to the U.S. House.

Owen, best remembered as the catcher who passed ball helped the New York Yankees beat the Brooklyn Dodgers in the 1941 World Series, narrowly was re-elected as sheriff of Greene County in Missouri. It is Owen's fourth consecutive four-year term as sheriff, and he defeated Republican Ron Ginn, who was on Owen's staff until quitting five years ago.

Jarvis whipped Republican Bob Williams, taking 61.2 per cent of the vote, in becoming sheriff of DeKalb County in Georgia.

Mizell, another former major league pitcher, lost to incumbent Democrat Steve Neal in the contest for North Carolina's 5th Congressional District seat. Mizell, who was unseated by Neal two years ago after serving three terms, polled only 46 per cent of the vote.

Richardson, the former New York Yankees second baseman, lost to Democratic Congressman Kenneth L. Holland in South Carolina's 5th District, polling 48 per cent of the vote.

"I'll have to wait and see what comes along," Richardson said of his future plans. He resigned this summer as baseball coach at the University of South Carolina to enter politics.

"I really didn't put anything in the back drawer for after the election. I went in to win."

Demeter was defeated in his bid for a seat in the Oklahoma state legislature by incumbent Democrat Ken Nance. Now an Oklahoma City businessman, Demeter was an outfielder for the Dodgers, Philadelphia Phillies and Detroit Tigers, batting .307 in 1962 when he was with the Phils.

Former University of Oklahoma football star Ron Shotts was defeated in his bid for a seat on the Oklahoma Corporation Commission. But Shotts got 48 per cent of the votes in an office generally dominated by Democrats, and Oklahoma GOP officials believe the Oklahoma City attorney may win two years from now.

Santee, one-time holder of the American record in the mile with a time of 4:00.5, lost his bid for a seat in the Kansas House of Representatives.

"She had signs on her property for my opposition," said Santee.

Like Bowman, another former football center lost his bid for office. The University of Michigan's most valuable player in 1934, when the team was 1-7, Jerry Ford lost to Jimmy Carter in the race for president.

Between-game chat

Pampa girls volleyball coach Lynn Wolfe asks for a rule clarification Tuesday night between the Harvester - Amarillo Tascosa District 3-AAAA match. Pampa wasn't phased by the mixup and belted the Rebels, 15-4, 15-2, to set up tonight's all-important match at Amarillo High. The winner will earn the second-half title in district play. Pampa's junior varsity Thursday won the district B-team championship by edging Tascosa, 15-7, 6-15, 16-14. The junior varsity match at Amarillo tonight will start at 6:30, with the varsities playing after the end of the B-team games. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

Denver wins 5th game

By The Associated Press

The undefeated Denver Nuggets have made a successful transition from the American Basketball Association to the National Basketball Association.

The upstart Nuggets, who joined the NBA this season in the merger of the leagues, are adjusting well to their new environment.

In fact, Denver is making winning look easy, as its 5-0 record attests. The Nuggets' latest victim was the New York Knicks, whom they beat 119-100 Wednesday night. Denver leads the Midwest Division by two games.

In other games, the New York Nets upended the Buffalo Braves 100-96, the Washington Bullets eased past the Milwaukee Bucks 117-105, the Indiana Pacers whipped the San Antonio Spurs 113-97, the Kansas City Kings topped the Seattle SuperSonics 126-106 and the Houston Rockets outlasted the Boston Celtics 117-111 in overtime.

Coach Larry Brown of Denver was succinct after the Knicks' game. "It's great meeting the Knicks. Now, we know we're in the NBA," he said.

The other clubs now know it, too.

Veteran forward Paul Silas sees Denver "as a potentially great team" that can compete on even terms with the Boston Celtics, the NBA champs he played for last season.

Except for Silas, the Nuggets consist of players who were in the ABA last season. Silas was obtained from Boston in a three-way deal also involving Detroit, with Ralph Simpson going from Denver to the Pistons, who sent Curtis Rowe to the Celtics.

Against the Knicks, the Nuggets bolted to a 23-point third-period lead and coasted the rest of the way before a record crowd of 17,806 in Denver.

David Thompson supplied most of the Nuggets' scoring impetus with 24 points and Dan Issel added 19. Five other players hit double figures in the balanced Denver attack.

Walt Frazier of New York topped all scorers with 27 points, while Earl Monroe was limited to 14.

Dupre honored for Tech play

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Larry Dupre was looking at this old Southwest Conference highlight film the other day.

There was his dad, L.G. (Long Gone) Dupre scoring two touchdowns for Baylor in a game against Texas.

Then the camera switched, rather unkindly, to Texas' offensive heroics and the victim was defensive back Dupre.

"I'd been listening to all this bull for years about what a great back he was and there he was scoring two touchdowns and getting burned for three on defense," laughed the younger Dupre.

Of course, young Dupre is a defensive back. And rather unheralded until last Saturday. The junior from Dallas Highland Park who has never lettered at Texas Tech intercepted a pass to setup a touchdown and saved two more with diving tackles from his safety position.

The performance earned the Red Raider strong safety The Associated Press Defensive Player of the Week award.

"My dad was at the game and he was thrilled to death," said Dupre. "In fact, he was as thrilled as I was."

Young Dupre hasn't had all that many goose bumps. He was listed as a backup behind free safety Greg Frazier when the season began. He was moved to strong safety when Allen Emerson went down.

"I was a little discouraged but I knew eventually I would get my chance," said Dupre. "I thought I was going to score when I intercepted that pass. (Mike) Cordaro threw it right to me. I saw some daylight it closed fast. Later I looked at the films and I probably could have scored if I had cut back."

Dupre also made two critical tackles when he was the last Tech defender between Johnny (Gold Medal) Jones and Texas quarterback Ted Constanzo, and the goal line.

"I was going to make a form tackle on Jones then I had to dive for him and was lucky to get him," said Dupre. "He has so much speed he takes your breath away."

Dupre played both ways as a freshman at Texas Tech then decided he wanted to play strictly defense.

"I definitely like to hit and being on defense is where the action is," said Dupre.

Dupre talks defense a lot with his roommate, Tech quarterback Rodney Allison, who also happens to be the AP SWC Offensive Player of the Week.

"We've been roommates two and one-half years," said Dupre. "I'm glad I don't have to play against him."

And young Dupre can claim he's the best defensive back in his family.

Golfers seek partners purse

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — The National Team championship, which got underway today, presents the players with a strategic challenge different from any other on the pro golf tour.

"It really helps to know your partner's game," said veteran Dave Hill, teamed with brother Mike in one of the two-man squads given the best chance of winning the $40,000 first prize in the last event of the year.

Scoring in this unique tournament is based on the better ball of each team. That is, if one player scores three on the hole and the other partner scores four, the team score is three.

"Getting it in position, giving the other guy a chance to pull out the stops, is the thing," Hill said. For example, he said, if he hits first off the tee and drives in the fairway, hard-hitting Mike then can attempt an exceptionally long drive. If Dave misses the fairway, then Mike must be more careful to keep the ball in play.

Dave has had an exceptional season, winning the Milwaukee Open and collecting $116,180. He was second in the Sahara, third twice, including the World Series of Golf, and has been fourth twice.

Or, if Dave hits his approach first and puts it on the green, Mike then can go boldy for the pin, ignoring the traps and potential trouble in order to give the team a good shot at a birdie.

"Playing as a team, if you work it right, you're going to have a much better ball than if the two of you were playing in a regular tournament," Dave said.

He and Mike have a history of high finishes in this event being played on two courses at Walt Disney World. But they haven't won.

"Mike usually plays super in the Team," Dave said. "If I'd putted a little better, given him a little help, we might have won a couple of times."

Allison top SWC offensive star

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

It's several hours after the biggest victory of his coaching career and Texas Tech Coach Steve Sloan is describing a sideline scenario in which he thought Rodney Allison had reinjured his knee.

"Rodney limped to the sidelines and I thought he had done something to his hyperextended knee," said Sloan. "Shoot, I was rubbing his leg and would have kissed him if I thought it would get well. He only had cramps in his leg but we were really worried. He went on to play the most unbelievable game I ever saw."

Allison rushed 25 times for 106 yards, hit 10 of 11 passes for 87 yards, converted 13 of 20 third down situations, and ran for a touchdown in a 31-28 victory over Texas.

The performance earned Allison The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week award. It was the second time this season he has been so honored.

The Tech quarterback was an absolute magician against the Longhorns. Once he made a pitchout OVER the helmet of a Texas defensive end and BERTWEEEN his outstretched hands and arms.

"Allison was absolutely superb," said Texas Coach Darrell Royal. "We tried to recruit him."

Allison, a junior from Odessa, was heavily recruited by Tech and Texas. He came close to going to Texas and was the first one to offer Royal condolences after the game with a handshake.

"I thought that was a nice gesture," said Royal.

This is the second time Allison has earned The AP Player of the Week award.

Allison also earned the plaudits of his teammates for playing with pain.

"We knew his legs were hurting, but when he'd come back to the huddle, it looked like he'd gut up," said offensive tackle Dan Irons.

"I just like to play and I don't think about getting hurt," said Allison.

Allison said "I nearly told Texas I was coming. I just wanted to go somewhere where I could start something. Coach Royal probably came to Odessa more than anybody did. That's why I wanted to say hello to him after the game. He's quite a guy."

And as far as the Texas Longhorns and Royal are concerned, the feeling is mutual when it comes to Rodney Allison.

College predictions

Michigan may get another breather

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bo Schembechler and the Michigan Wolverines never have been known as the Happiness Boys, but they are capable of making an occasional joke.

Here is one courtesy of Schembechler: "We have to keep our momentum going. There are teams left on our schedule that can still beat us."

And from quarterback Rick Leach: "You can't take any Big Ten team for granted."

Well, yes, there still are teams on Michigan's schedule that can beat the Wolverines. There is Ohio State on Nov. 20 and whatever team they play in whatever bowl they go to.

But first there is Purdue this Saturday and Illinois next week. The last time the Wolverines lost to those teams was 1966, when Purdue won a 22-21 squeaker and Illinois prevailed 28-21.

So, in this election year, the immediate choice lies between Michigan and Purdue, and here is one vote for ... Michigan 35-6.

Last week's score was 48 right, 23 wrong for a 676 percentage, making the season's count to 385-157-10-710.

Florida vs. Georgia at Jacksonville: This game is similar to the Texas-Oklahoma war in Dallas with 72,000 screaming fans split down the middle. Breaking the tie, here's one shaky vote for ... Florida 27-21.

Oklahoma State at Nebraska: "The thing that impresses me about the Cornhuskers is everything," says State's Jim Stanley. "We're impressed, too. Jim ... Nebraska 31-21."

Colorado at Missouri: Last weekend, the Big Eight scramble was reduced from a five-way tie to a three-team deadlock. Now, Colorado must win to remain tied with the Oklahoma State-Nebraska winner ... Missouri 24-17.

Houston at Texas: It is elimination time in the Southwest Conference ... Houston 20-16.

Army at Pitt: Army is improved, but the Panthers' and Tony Dorsett are too much, too soon ... Pitt 38-13.

Southern California at Stanford: This used to be the Blood Bowl when John McKay was at USC and said he wanted to beat Stanford by 2,000 points. But with ailing Ricky Bell below par, this looks like the Upset Special of the Week ... Stanford 28-24.

Texas Tech at Texas Christian: Tech Coach Steve Sloan says he will shave his head if the Red Raiders make it to the Cotton Bowl. TCU, 0-7 and a strong possibility to go 0-11, will not do much to dull the razor ... Texas Tech 45-14.

Cincinnati at Maryland: The Bearcats enjoyed their one-week stay in the Top Twenty before a 31-17 loss to Georgia knocked them out ... Maryland 28-14.

Illinois at Ohio State: The Illini started out 2-0, including a big victory over nationally ranked Missouri. But now they must win two of their final three games to have a winning season. And, unfortunately, they play Michigan next week. This week ... Ohio State 31-13.

Notre Dame at Georgia Tech: Pepper Rodgers was knocked cold during last week's loss to Duke when one of his players tripped over a telephone cord, yanking the earphones off the head of an assistant coach and whacking Pepper in the face. This one is going to hurt, too ... Notre Dame 24-14.

Arkansas at Baylor: The Razorbacks still are tied with Texas Tech in an attempt to return to the Cotton Bowl. Arkansas recently had two weeks off and beat Houston. Now Baylor has had two weeks off. A lightning-strikes-twice hunch and a Second Upset Special ... Baylor 20-17.

Louisiana State at Alabama: LSU certainly was not looking ahead when the Tigers walloped Ole Miss 45-0, but "Bama might be with Notre Dame one week away. A third Upset Special was in the works until it came to mind that Bear Bryant always — well, almost always — teaches his former pupils a lesson ... Alabama 21-14.

Minnesota at Northwestern: So let us make this the third Upset Special instead, as the nation's longest losing streak comes to an end at 14 ... Northwestern 24-20.

Kansas State at Oklahoma: Just what the doctor ordered for the Sooners after all those injuries and other problems ... Oklahoma 41-14.

Tulsa at Virginia Tech: One of the day's better games, with Tulsa 5-2 and VPI 6-2. The winner will be looking for a bowl bid ... Virginia Tech 20-14.

Teacher exam to be given at WTSU

The National Teacher Examination testing schedule for the 1976-77 academic year has been set for Nov. 13, Feb. 19 and July 16 at West Texas State University.

Students completing teacher preparation programs may register for the test with the Educational Testing Service, a non-profit educational organization which prepares and administers the testing program.

Results of the National Teachers Examinations are used by many large school districts as one of several factors in the selection of new teachers and by several states for certification or licensing of teachers. Some colleges also require all senior preparing to teach to take the examinations.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations which measure their profession preparation and general educational background and an Area Examination which measures their mastery of the subject they expect to teach.

Prospective candidates should contact the school systems in which they seek employment, or their colleges, for specific advice on which examination to take and on which dates they should be taken.

Pampa police report issuing 283 tickets

Pampa police answered 842 calls and drove 21,233 miles on patrol during October, according to Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills.

Mills said that officers issued 283 traffic tickets, 95 warning tickets and 13 parking tickets during the month.

Police made 80 jail arrests and investigated 86 accidents. Mills said the department operated four persons short during October because of illness, school and vacations.

Headley sets annual banquet on Nov. 27

The Hedley Ex-Student and Teacher's Association will hold its annual banquet at 7:30 p.m. on Nov. 27 in the high school cafeteria.

The graduating class of 1929 has scheduled a reunion at that time.

A barbecue dinner will be served at $3 per plate.

A short business session will follow the meeting.

Officers include Fred Watt, president; Joe Neal Beavers, vice president; Dorothy Martin, secretary; treasurer, and Geneva McAfee, decorations.

Food a bargain in San Antonio

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Grocery shoppers in San Antonio are getting the most for their food dollar and Corpus Christi shoppers the least, the Texas Department of Agriculture reported Tuesday.

It was the second consecutive month for San Antonio to rank as the No. 1 food bargain area. The McAllen-Edinburg area was the most expensive for food in September, but Corpus Christi moved ahead in October, the department said.

John White said the October survey of 70 supermarkets in 12 cities showed that the price of 20 commonly purchased items in San Antonio averaged $17.20, an increase of 42 cents from September.

The same items cost $18.89 in Corpus Christi. The statewide average was $18.26.

Other cities surveyed Oct. 19 reflected the following food basket prices: Austin $17.79; down four cents from September; El Paso $17.97; down 10 cents; Tyler $18.21, down three cents; Dallas $18.27, down five cents; Abilene $18.31, down 41 cents; Houston $18.38, down 13 cents; Laredo $18.38, down 18 cents; Fort Worth $18.43, down 23 cents; Lubbock $18.49, down 24 cents; and McAllen-Edinburg $18.83, down 22 cents from September.

In Lexington, Ky., the only home ever owned by the Confederate Gen. Stonewall Jackson, is now a national shrine.

Clinic to be permanent

The establishment of a permanent Planned Parenthood clinic in Pampa has been announced by officials of the Panhandle Planned Parenthood Association headquartered in Amarillo.

The clinic is located at 208 West Browning. Clinic hours will be from 9 a.m. until noon and from 1 to 3 p.m. each Wednesday.

Any woman wishing birth control services may call 665-2291.

In the past area doctors have assisted Planned Parenthood by providing services and performing patient physical examinations.

The recent training of a registered nurse practitioner, Mrs. Rae Gonzales, made it possible to expand family planning services for Gray County residents.

Community services through the clinic include physical examinations, birth control services, family planning and educational and lecture type programs for area schools or clubs.

In the 1870s a million head of cattle were driven to Dodge City, Kan., for rail shipment to Kansas City. It was such a rough town that gunmen like Bat Masterson were hired to keep order.

Names in the news

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dolly Parton, named top female vocalist by the Country Music Association for the second straight year this year, has a severe throat condition and has been forbidden to sing for the rest of the year, her record company says.

Miss Parton, 30, has canceled all concert appearances until next year, RCA records said Tuesday. The company said her physician recommended that she cancel her appearances and advised her to talk only when necessary for the next two weeks.

A spokesman for her booking agency, Top Billing, said she will miss about 25 concerts.

Earlier this year, Miss Parton was forced to cancel appearances between mid-June and Oct. 1 because of exhaustion.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Country music star Merle Haggard is "somewhere between Arizona and Los Angeles, resting up from too much stress and pressure on the road," his manager says.

"He'd been on tour for three weeks, and I guess it just got too much for him," manager Puzzy Owen said Tuesday when contacted here about the singer's disappearance. "He's been under quite a strain."

Haggard failed to appear for weekend concerts in Denver and Salt Lake City, and a spokesman for Harrah's Club in Reno said Haggard called the hotel late Sunday to cancel an engagement which was to have begun Monday.

Utah law enforcement agencies tried to locate Haggard after receiving an anonymous telephone call saying the singer's body could be found in a Nevada gully. But Owen said he's been in touch with the star and "there is nothing to worry about. He's with his bus driver and they're just taking a little vacation. Merle just needed a few days off."

Owen estimated Haggard would resume his performance schedule in three or four weeks.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Madame Chiang Kai-Shek will return to Taiwan from the United States to dedicate herself to recovery of the Chinese mainland as soon as her health permits, according to a legislator.

Le Heng said members of the Yuan, Nationalist China's highest lawmaking body, recently wrote to the widow of nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-Shek. She said Madame Chiang wrote back that she flew to the United States Aug. 23 for medical treatment and doctors said she suffered from an ulcer and muscle pains from an old injury. But her letter said there was nothing to worry about, Le Heng said.

She said Madame Chiang, whose husband's government was driven from the mainland by Communist forces in 1949, wrote that "as soon as my health condition permits me to travel, I shall return home to work for the big plan of recovering mainland China."

Chiang died in April 1975.

Lois Radcliff to be president of Church Women

Church Women United of Pampa will celebrate World Wide Community Day Friday with services at St. Mark's Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

Fellowship and a coffee at 9:30 a.m. will precede the program which is slated to begin at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Eloise McDougal of Hereford, state projects chairman, will install new officers including Mrs. Lois Radcliff, First United Methodist Church, president; Mrs. Sondra Heath, Salvation Army, vice president; Mrs. Pauline Sutton, Salvation Army, secretary; Mrs. Barbara Roe, Highland Pentecostal Holiness Church, treasurer.

Members will participate in Communion with the Rev. V.D. Brown, pastor of St. Mark's CME Church, officiating. He will be assisted by Capt. Bodell Heath of the Salvation Army and the Rev. Norman D. Dow Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

Annual dues will be payable at the meeting and a nursery will be provided.

David Cain wins bid as state rep

David Cain, 27, a Dallas attorney and son of Gray County Judge and Mrs. Don Cain, won his bid for state representative from Legislative District 33-K (Dallas County).

He defeated his Republican opponent by 71 per cent in his first bid for a political office.

DEATH RATE DROPS

NEW YORK (AP) — The Institute of Life Insurance says accidental death rates dropped to a record low in 1975.

It says there were 49.0 accidental deaths per 100,000 population that year, compared with the 1974 final results of 49.5.

Fritz Mondale--HHH protege, humorist

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — It was, perhaps, the most important day of his vice-presidential campaign and there was Walter Mondale, lounging against a marble ashtray stand in a hotel lobby, kibitzing with reporters.

He was about to go to Houston's Alley Theatre for a test of equipment before his debate with Sen. Bob Dole, his Republican counterpart, when he spotted a cluster of reporters awaiting him. He couldn't resist a little playful banter.

It is typical of Walter Frederick Mondale — "Fritz" to his family and friends — that he enjoys repeating a humorist's crack that most people think "Mondale" is a suburb of Los Angeles.

"I think he's right," Mondale usually appends.

His triumph in winning election as the 42nd vice president of the United States comes almost two years after the Minnesota senator became an early dropout from the ranks of the Democratic presidential nomination.

Early in 1974, when Sen. Edward M. Kennedy made clear he was not planning to run for president in 1976, Mondale saw an opening for a liberal candidate and began acting more and more like a presidential hopeful. He traveled around the country on speaking tours, raising funds for local candidates and gathering a campaign staff.

But after testing the waters for nearly a year, he dropped his bid on Nov. 21, 1974, in the face of a poor showing in the polls, competition from other liberals and low recognition among the voters.

"I just didn't have the overwhelming desire you need to do all the things you have to do to get nominated and elected. To begin a campaign without a total commitment on my part is unfair to everyone. I admire those with the determination to do what is required to seek the presidency, but I have found that I am not among them," he said then.

Critics said he lacked the stomach to run for the presidency. Other observers, including those close to him, saw his decision as that of a political realist who was making little progress and was not widely known.

Mondale, 48, has a puckish, dry humor that takes hold when he is relaxed. One of his most frequent targets, as it was in the lobby of Houston's Rice Rittenhouse Hotel, is the senator himself.

It is a side of Mondale not often seen by the public during his campaign, where contact was often limited to such events as coffee and ponics — Polish jelly donuts — at a Polish-American club on Milwaukee's South Side, a factory tour in South Bend, Ind., a visit to a union hiring hall in a Los Angeles ghetto or a speech on a college campus.

Although he spent half his campaign days taking part in so-called "media events" geared primarily to providing pictures for local television programs, Mondale complained in conversations that the nature of campaigns, particularly vice-presidential campaigns, did not afford ample opportunities for serious discussions of issues.

Mondale claims to like to "ponder" issues carefully, to "chew them over" and read a book before making decisions. The lack of time to do this was a factor in his decision to drop out of the presidential race.

"The absolutely unbelievable schedules, the 18-hour days, the weekends. Above all, there's no time to sit down and think through an issue, to read books and other things you should to test and probe an idea to be sure you're on the right track, to talk with leaders in the field. That has always been my way. I'm just uncomfortable with the snap judgments that one makes when you're tired or don't have a chance to think things through."

After he dropped out of the presidential race, he put his thoughts together in a book, "The Accountability of Power," on the growth of presidential power and what he viewed as Congress' failure to curb it.

He said Congress had allowed the President to become too strong, particularly in foreign affairs. "The task we face is ... to redefine the role of the presidency, to acknowledge the importance of presidential power but to insist on the greater importance of accountable presidential power," he wrote.

The senator became the Democrats' vice-presidential nominee on July 15, rising out of the relative obscurity in which he had operated in the U.S. Senate for 12 years despite his short-lived presidential campaign.

Since his start in Minnesota politics — he was the state's youngest attorney general at age 32 in 1960 — he has been the protege of Hubert H. Humphrey. Their ties stretch back to 1948 when Mondale, then a college sophomore, quit a summer job as an inspector in a pea factory to work in Humphrey's first Senate campaign.

In 1964 Mondale was appointed to fill Humphrey's Senate seat after Humphrey was elected vice president. Mondale was elected to the Senate in 1966 and again in 1972, when he won by a landslide although the national Democratic ticket headed by Sen. George McGovern was swamped in Minnesota by former President Richard M. Nixon.

Mondale compiled a strong liberal record in the Senate, opposing antibusing legislation, voting for gun control and the Equal Rights Amendment. He has been active in work to curb child abuse, earning a reputation as one of the leading legislators in the area of child care.

Mondale likes the north country of Minnesota, and after important events in his political life, he has retreated there.

When asked what he gets from the setting, he replied: "Everything. It's much cheaper and far more effective than a psychiatrist. There's something about a few days in the woods that'll do more for you than anything else."

Mondale is the son of a Methodist minister and a graduate of the University of Minnesota, which he attended after three years at Macalester College.

His wife, Joan, 46, is also a minister's child. She also attended Macalester College, but the two did not meet until after graduation. They were wed Dec. 27, 1955.

The former Joan Adams, she is a potter and also wrote a nonfiction book, "Art in Politics," published in 1972. She has given tours of Washington's National Gallery of Art and also tours of the nation's capital historic and artistic points of interest for convention groups.

The Mondales have three children, Theodore, 18; Eleanor Jane, 16; and William, 14.

Mondale has hypertension, or high blood pressure, and takes five pills daily to control it.

An aide said during the campaign that Mondale does not engage in any particular regimen to keep fit, although he plays a mediocre game of tennis when he finds the time.

Mondale's younger brother, Mort, a music teacher in Aberdeen, S.D., has described the senator as "a complicated guy and very intense."

RIBBON 'ROUND the old maple tree in Dorset, Vt., has Bicentennial significance. Some 20 feet of yellow material went into the decoration of the tree, believed to be between 450 and 500 years old and said to be Vermont's oldest sugar maple. It was the centerpiece of a Bicentennial party.

110 criminal cases set for trials

A total of 110 criminal cases, ranging from harassing phone calls to unlawful sale of liquor, are set for jury trials during the week of Nov. 15 in Gray County Court.

Forty-seven of the 110 persons scheduled for trial are charged with driving while intoxicated. Fifteen are charged with possession of marijuana.

Other charges include enticing a child, speeding appeals, theft, unlawfully carrying a handgun, assault causing bodily injury, child nonsupport, and evading arrest.

Judge Don Cain will preside over the cases as they are presented by John W. Warner, county attorney.

Real-life movies combine fact, fiction

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The movie studios and the television networks are discovering the joys and occasional sorrows to be found in "faction" — a form of storytelling that combines fact and fiction.

Television has long presented documentaries about history, but recent seasons have brought a number of successful dramatizations. Examples: "Eleanor and Franklin," the marriage of the Roosevelts; "Babe," the story of athlete Mildred (Babe) Dickerson; "The Adams Chronicles," "The Missiles of October," the Cuban crisis; "Fear on Trial," about TV blacklisting.

The hit status of "All the President's Men" showed the movie makers that today's events can be dramatized with good results. Other hits that can be classified as faction: "Patton," "Walking Tall," "Papillon," "Serpico," "The French Connection," "Midway."

Two of the year's biggest news events demonstrated the entertainment industry's new interest. When Howard Hughes died, at least eight production companies announced films to be based on the billionaire's life.

The Israeli rescue of hijacked jet passengers in Uganda brought a half-dozen film projects.

At least two film projects were announced for the school bus kidnapping at Chowchilla, Calif. Warner Brothers has reportedly scheduled a movie to be based on the murder of Joseph A. Yablonski, insurgent leader of the United Mine Workers.

Television is ideally suited for real-life stories, comments Roger Gimbel, whose E.M.I. Productions is preparing at least two: a Howard Hughes saga for CBS, and "The Michigan Murders," based on a 1967 tragedy in Ann Arbor.

Among the feature movies in the works: "Bound for Glory," the Depression travels of songwriter Woody Guthrie, David Caradine starring; "MacArthur," with Gregory Peck as the general; "A Bridge Too Far," star-studded restaging of a World War II operation; "Julia," with Jane Fonda in a Lillian Hellman memoir; "Valentino," Ken Russell's view of the film idol's life; "The Great Brinks Robbery," from Dino DeLaurentiis; "Stanley of Africa," about the explorer.

The upcoming TV specials include: "Amelia Earhart" with Susan Clark as the missing flier (NBC); "21 Hours at Munich," William Holden in the Olympic Games massacre (ABC); "Johnny We Hardly Knew Ye," reminiscences of JFK (NBC); "Phoenix Hit," the murder of investigative newsman Don Bolles (CBS).

Also: "Tail Gunner Joe," Peter Boyte as Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (NBC); "Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," continuing the Roosevelt saga (ABC); "Scott Joplin, King of Ragtime," Billy Dee Williams as the composer (NBC); "The Great Houdinis," magic stuff with Paul Michael Glasser (Starky) and Sally Struthers (ABC); "The Late Great Populist Huey P. Long," starring Edward Asner (NBC); "The Disappearance of Aimee," Faye Dunaway as evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson (NBC).

Applications for scouts for Jamboree

Applications to attend the 1977 National Scout Jamboree are available at the Adobe Walls Council office, according to Joe Chambers, Scout executive. The Jamboree will be Aug. 3-9 at Moraine State Park near Butler, Pa. Chambers said, adding that the event is expected to attract more than 31,000 Boy Scouts from the U.S. and 100 member nations.

"We have set our qualifications rather high so that boys with outstanding records and leadership potential will attend," Chambers said. "This is going to be the 'summit conference' of Scouting, one where all of the skills and techniques will be blended with other program events to be shared with the various troops we work with."

The Adobe Walls Council will be represented at the Jamboree by 36 Scouts and four leaders.

"Clink" is a slang term for prison or jail. It derived from the famous London goal, the Clink of Southwark, which was destroyed by riots in 1790.

From 'Jimmy Who?' to 'Mr. President'

Carter credits shrewd plans, voter appeal

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer
PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — He began as "Jimmy Who?" with a campaign against the establishment; now he's president-elect and will head the establishment.

Even as "Jimmy Who," James Earl Carter Jr. always said he never intended to lose. "When I began, I didn't have much money," he says. "I didn't have a built-in campaign organization or live in a media center. I didn't hold public office. Not many people knew who I was."

But now, 22 months after he announced his presidential candidacy on Dec. 12, 1974, nearly everybody knows. Carter can thank shrewd planning, appeal to a cross-section of voters and sheer hard work.

For Carter and his staff, victory is sweetest when they look back on the humiliations and loneliness.

"We had to go where the people already were because they wouldn't come when we invited them," he told a dinner attended by big-name New York Democrats. "We would invite a whole neighborhood to come to a living room, and maybe four people would show up. Or we'd go to a labor hall that would hold 300 people, and 10 people would come."

The slight, sandy-haired peanut farmer, his family and a few volunteers "walked the streets, went into barber shops and beauty parlors and restaurants and stood in factory shift lines, farmers' markets, live-stock sale barns, country court-houses and city halls, just learning about our country and letting them get to know us."

Carter billed himself as a candidate of the people, an outsider running against Washington insiders who are pawns of special interests, who've turned the government into a "horrible, bloated bureaucratic mess."

"I'm not a big shot. I'm just like you," he said again and again. Rather than emphasize issues, he stressed the need for tough management and restoring integrity, pride, openness, honesty and sensitivity in Washington.

In the same soft-spoken, preacher tones he uses to teach his Baptist Sunday school class, he kept repeating that the system of government is good, the people are good, but those who run the government have lessened the respect it earns.

"I'll never tell a lie," Carter promised during the primaries.

He turned to issues in the fall campaign, but still there were few concrete proposals—no detailed blueprint for a future administration.

He called for welfare and tax reform, government reorganization and a comprehensive health care program, but provided scant particulars.

But he had a way of identifying himself with the group to whom he was speaking. He was a "worker" with working people, a "businessman" with businessmen, a "farmer" with farmers and "once a poor boy from Georgia" with the underprivileged.

"I'm looking for a job, too," he told a group of unemployed persons in Scranton, Pa.

Sometimes his efforts were seen as an attempt to please the greatest possible number of voters, no matter how diverse.

"It was hard for us to talk about the prospect at first," Carter has said. "It was very tentative and somewhat embarrassing. We never used the word 'president' for the first three or four months."

In 1973 and 1974, Carter used his governorship to expand his contacts with politicians, businessmen and journalists. He sought and won in 1974 the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee's campaign committee.

As chairman, he traveled the country, meeting and cultivating union, farm and consumer officials, political and civic leaders and campaign workers, all interested in electing Democrats to Congress. The courting paid rich dividends in 1976.

when he was seeking his nomination.

Carter and his aides developed a detailed plan, including decisions to run in every primary and to get early, favorable media coverage by concentrating on Iowa's January caucus, which gave the first indication of candidate strength.

Carter's victory in Iowa gave him momentum going into New Hampshire, which he also won. Then came Florida, and the Carter campaign was on its way. Even a string of late primary defeats by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Idaho Sen. Frank Church couldn't stop him.

Not long ago, Carter was asked about his life before the campaign.

"I'll say this," he replied. "It was quieter then."

Less tiring?

"Yes, definitely."

More fun?

Carter grinned. "Well, winning is much more fun than anything."

For example, he said he was personally opposed to abortion and to the use of government funds to finance abortions. But he also said he was opposed to outlawing abortions by constitutional amendment.

All these tactics prompted accusations that he was fuzzy on the issues, that he was like a political chameleon.

It was a family victory for the Carters of Plains, Ga.; they all got into the act of campaigning.

Carter is just as complex in his private life. He listens to opera, reads and quotes philosopher Reinhold Niebuhr and Welsh poet Dylan Thomas, but he is a fan of the Allman Brothers rock band and country singer Charlie Daniel as well.

"He is hard to get to know," says Dr. Peter Bourne, an adviser. "He is not given to small talk, or having a beer with the boys or anything frivolous. He can take tremendous stress, and his single-mindedness is unbelievable."

Critics described Carter as arrogant, self-righteous, unbending, lacking humor and sensitivity for other people, particularly those who work for him.

His top aides said he showed those qualities on occasion, but added they are not overriding in his personality.

In the early primaries, voters were more impressed by Carter's appeal as an outsider to Washington than they were by charges against him.

But they took a second look in the later primaries and during the general election campaign. Some expressed concern that they didn't know who Jimmy Carter is or what he would do as President.

Before the Republican convention, polls were more than 30 points in Carter's favor, but in the weeks immediately before the election he held only a slim lead.

Carter was born in Archery, Ga. on Oct. 1, 1924. He decided at age 5 he would go to Annapolis. After graduating from the Naval Academy in 1946, he embarked on a nuclear submarine career, aiming to become chief of naval operations.

But when his father died in 1953, he went back to his home town of Plains with his wife, Rosalynn, to take over the family peanut farm. He helped build it into a million-dollar business.

He was elected to the state Senate in 1962 and 1964. He lost his first bid for governor in 1966, and spent much of the next four years campaigning for 1970. He ran with public support from several of Georgia's leading segregationist politicians, who saw him as a lesser evil than his liberal opponent, former Gov. Carl Sanders.

But when Carter won, he announced that "the time for racial discrimination is over." Ignoring cries of outrage, he hung a portrait of Martin Luther King Jr. in the Statehouse.

He reorganized the state government, although there is argument about how effective and efficient the shakeup was. And he pushed through a number of social programs.

Carter's efforts toward the presidency began while he was still governor. He and a small group of youthful advisers, who still are his closest aides, discussed the possibility.

Stock market plunges

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply Wednesday, registering an unsettled reaction in the traditionally conservative financial community to Jimmy Carter's victory in the presidential election.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 11.39 at 954.70, and losers overwhelmed gainers by a 9-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers noted a wave of selling by those traders who had bought stocks last week on the theory that President Ford might be able to spring an upset in Tuesday's close election.

They said that, given the market's emotional behavior this morning, it was too soon to try to gauge what eventual verdict the market might give on the voters' choice of Carter.

Oil stocks were among the weakest groups, amid apparent fears that the combination of Carter in the White House and a Democratic Congress might mean a less favorable political climate for the industry.

Most major stocks in the group posted declines of 1 to 2 points.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .69 to 54.31. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .63 at 98.40.

Volume on the Big Board was an active 11 million shares over the first two hours.

And finally this: "Unemployment — The Overriding Issues," an article that tells how

"One of every five American workers was jobless at some time during 1975."

Ford's approach to economic stability was to move slowly, to permit market forces themselves to adjust the disparity between the number of workers and the jobs available, and between prices paid and wages earned.

That same attitude prevailed for some time in the housing market, where until the administration moved to spur construction during the past two months, a low level of starts was considered a necessary if painful consequence of recovery.

Jimmy Carter was less positive about a tax cut, but he did hold out hope that government would become more active in seeking solutions to the egregious deficiencies of the economy.

Throughout the campaign he indicated the economic condition was intolerable, "disgraceful," and while he may not have spelled out his specific moves, he left little doubt that he would act.

While doubts prevailed about his ability to deliver on his promises, he did hold out hope. Ford's promises were better known and many people felt they already had failed to deliver enough.

Throughout the business community, there appeared to be strong support for Ford's steady-as-you-go policy. But when it came to putting money where the words were, it sometimes didn't appear.

We Hold These Truths... A Chronicle of America

Fall-Winter, 1776:

Colonel John Glover, once a shoemaker and now a shipowner, becomes an unsung hero. A native of Massachusetts, Glover arrives August 28 in New York City with a regiment of blue-jacketed Marblehead fishermen; a day later, General Washington puts Glover in charge of manning the boats for the Long Island evacuation. Working with a regiment of Salem sailors during the six-hour nighttime evacuation, Glover and his men shuttle heavy equipment and Washington's main army across the mile-wide East River to Manhattan without a collision, a swamping, or any loss of life. Four months later, in the early hours of Christmas morning, Glover and his weatherproof Marbleheaders will ferry Washington and his rag-tag army across the ice-choked Delaware River for a successful surprise attack on a Hessian garrison at Trenton, thus reversing the course of the war.

Voting machines impounded in NY

NEW YORK (AP) — Trucks were sent throughout New York State this Wednesday morning to pick up the state's 25,000 voting machines, all impounded by a middle-of-the-night court order carrying White House approval.

The highly unusual action — believed to be a first in this state — was ordered after representatives of Republican officials alleged that irregularities had occurred in Tuesday's election.

A spokesman at the Board of Elections in New York City said this morning that trucks were being dispatched "to pick up the machines. They will be removed to a central location and guarded."

The impoundment is meant to safeguard the voting machines while a recount is conducted. With 98 per cent of the state's vote counted, Jimmy Carter led President Ford by about 250,000 votes and was running four percentage points ahead — 52 to 48. That lead was considered far more than could possibly be needed to survive any changes in the state's vote total as a result of a recount.

However, there was confusion over the status of absentee ballots in the state.

A spokesman for the state Board of Elections estimated that 400,000 absentee ballots had been mailed by local boards. Under state law, any ballot received by 9 p.m. Tuesday — the hour the polls closed — was counted Tuesday and is included in the current total.

However, there was no way to immediately determine how many absentee ballots were counted and how many remained uncounted. Any absentee ballot received in New York State after 9 p.m. Tuesday is being held by local election boards pending a court test over their legitimacy. They will not be counted until the court decision is made.

The New York Police Department said officers were assigned to guard some voting locations at 5 a.m. and "would remain until the machines are picked up by the Board of Elections."
