

Surgeons move Ida's two eyes

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Ida Hays, born with her eyes separated twice the normal distance, is returning home again to La Grande Ore after another ordeal of remarkable surgery.

Last May, Ida had her eye sockets moved more than an inch closer together. She returned to New York University Hospital Jan. 28 expecting only "touch-up" surgery to fix a droopy eyelid and a "bump" on her nose.

Instead, surgeons decided her right eye had to be moved closer to her nose. They thought this would cure the headaches and eye pains she'd been suffering because her eyes didn't focus properly.

"I was scared the first time and asked all kinds of questions," said Ida, who is now 16.

"This time, I'm sitting there all brave. Then they told me, and I thought, 'Oh, I'm going through it again, oh, oh, golly. Here we go again. But I'd started it, so I've got to go through with it.'"

"They're a team of surgeons and other specialists headed by Dr. John Marquis Converse, a plastic surgeon who is director of the Institute for Reconstructive Plastic Surgery here.

"They promised me they wouldn't cut my hair this time. But they did," said Ida in an interview. "They put me to sleep first because last time they had so much trouble from me about cutting my hair."

"And I didn't know if this time they would drill into my head."

"The first time around, the surgeons did drill into Ida's head, removing part of the bone in front of the skull. Then they lifted the brain up and backward, to make room to operate from behind the forehead.

They cut out part of the center of Ida's misshapen face, creating a space into which the orbits — the openings in the skull that hold the eyes — could be pushed closer together. Doing this left a space by the temples, filled by bone taken from Ida's hip bones.

"This time we didn't have to open the skull, just turn the scalp down, calling for cutting the hair," explained Dr. Converse about the Feb. 9 operation.

Originally the diversion of her eyes was so tremendous we were limited in how much we could move the right orbit. We were able this time to move it another 10 millimeters (a fraction of an inch), and it should come out good eventually.

Along with a checkup today, Ida planned a tour of The Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine at New York University Medical Center, because she's interested in a possible career as a physical therapist.

Ida still faces the "touch-up" surgery to correct a droopy eyelid, and more surgery at the University of Washington Medical School in Seattle, perhaps this summer, to correct jaw deformities.

But maybe the worst is over now.

"I haven't had a headache yet," the high school sophomore said. "I feel good, but tired. Now I feel so neat. The bump on my nose is gone."

Amin summons Britons

By BRIAN JEFFRIES
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin is apparently summoning Britons as well as Americans to a meeting with him Wednesday at Entebbe airport, reports reaching Nairobi said today.

British diplomats in both Kampala, the Ugandan capital, and Nairobi said they were checking reports that members of the 200-strong British community were ordered to be there together with the 240 Americans.

Britain severed relations with Amin's regime in August 1976, but two British diplomats still handle British interests out of the French embassy in Kampala.

Amin earlier moved his projected meeting with the Americans from a conference hall to Entebbe airport, delayed it from today until Wednesday and warned the United States not to emulate its Israeli allies with an attempted commando rescue.

In a telephone call to an American newsman in Nairobi, Amin repeated assurances that the Americans were in no danger.

"The Americans are my sons and daughters; they are very happy," Amin was quoted telling ABC-TV correspondent Charles Harrison.

Harrison said Amin told him he had received many telegrams, including messages from Saudi Arabia, the Central African Empire and Zaire.

"They all want to know about the Americans and I told them everything was fine," Harrison said Amin told him. He said the Ugandan leader told him he intended to confer medals on some of the Americans.

In Washington, President Carter said the U.S. government was watching the situation closely, trying not to upset President Amin and trying to take advantage of his good wishes that he has expressed.

The Soviet news agency Tass said in Moscow that the United States was "threatening Uganda" and accused Washington of a policy of trying to intimidate progressive African states.

The Soviet Union has trade and diplomatic relations with Amin and has carried little criticism of his regime in its state-controlled press.

Radio Uganda reported on Sunday that Amin postponed the meeting from 11 a.m. Monday until 8 a.m. Wednesday at the request of the Americans in his East African country, who are estimated by the State Department to number about 240. Most of them are missionaries.

Amin said no Americans would be allowed to leave the country and ordered the meeting Friday, two days after he claimed the United States, Britain and Israel were involved in a plot to overthrow him.

Sunday's broadcast said the location of the meeting had been changed from the International Conference Center in Kampala, the capital, because the main lounge at Entebbe was the only facility in the country large enough to accommodate the 3,000 persons who were to attend. However, there was no indication who would be present beside the Americans and Amin.

The official radio also warned Ugandans to be alert for signs of an invasion. It said after the Israeli raid on Entebbe last July, the presence of U.S. naval vessels off the Kenyan coast "must be taken seriously."

Quoting a "military spokesman," believed to be Amin himself, the broadcast said "In the event of an invasion the invading force will be disintegrated by the Ugandan armed forces."

The United States said the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise and its escorts were cruising in the Indian Ocean off East Africa following a good-will visit to Kenya last week.

Radio Uganda said Amin at the meeting Wednesday would discuss with the Americans a memorandum being prepared on their activities since the U.S. Embassy in Kampala was closed in 1973. The broadcast said Amin wanted to thank them for their work and planned to award medals to a few of them.

The State Department said it received an invitation from the Ugandan government to send representatives to the meeting. A spokesman said there had been no U.S. response and he did not know if there would be. Ugandan officials also said some foreign correspondents might be allowed to attend.

President Carter said the United Nations had offered to intercede on the Americans' behalf, but we've handled our affairs through the German embassy and so far there's nothing to cause deep concern.

The United States closed its embassy in Kampala in 1973 but did not break relations, and the Ugandan embassy in Washington is still open.

Helicopter lands here to take man to hospital

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

A 62-year-old Lefors man is in satisfactory condition at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo following an early morning helicopter transfer from Highland General Hospital.

Tors Culver today became the first Gray County resident to be airlifted to Amarillo in the Huey II Medivac helicopter.

Culver arrived at the Highland General Hospital emergency room about 2 a.m. and doctors here decided his condition made his transfer to Amarillo by conventional ambulance impossible.

Mark King, manager of Metropolitan Ambulance, said once the decision was made to fly Culver to Amarillo a suitable landing site for the helicopter was staked out by units of the Pampa Police Department.

Police cars assembled in a triangle formation at the Coronado Shopping Center parking lot and turned their spotlights into the sky. King said hospital and ambulance personnel were standing by to move Culver across Hobart Street once the helicopter landed.

The chopper left the Potter County Barn at 3rd and Grand in Amarillo at 3:50 a.m. and it set down in the shopping center parking lot at 4:15 a.m.

Within five minutes Culver was on board and on his way to the Emergency Receiving Center at Northwest Texas Hospital.

King said he was told Culver had a possible aneurysm which made conventional transfer too dangerous.

Vernell Meador, director of nursing at Highland General Hospital, said Culver's condition was stable when he was transferred. King said he had talked to Northwest Texas Hospital this morning and was told Culver made the trip without complications.

A nurse at the Emergency Receiving Center said Culver's condition was serious but stable at 9:30 a.m. when he was transferred to High Plains Baptist Hospital. A spokeswoman at that hospital said Culver was not in intensive care and was listed in satisfactory condition.

Betty O'Rourke, regional coordinator for the Emergency Medical Services, said the Medivac helicopter is a prototype of military helicopters used for rescue work in Vietnam. She said the helicopter has been available since July 1976, but added its availability was not made public until December.

"It has made very few runs," Ms. O'Rourke said. "This was probably the fourth."

The helicopter is equipped to transport any critical care or trauma patient and can handle four patients per trip. It is staffed by a highly trained trauma medical team.

"It is available to anyone at no charge for extreme emergencies," Ms. O'Rourke said. The helicopter services the 26-county Texas Panhandle.

She said the helicopter has been credited with saving the life of one person who would have died if moved by conventional ambulance.

A motorcyclist at Lake Meredith crashed and sustained serious head injuries. A nurse on the helicopter was able to stabilize the cyclist's condition before he was moved.

The helicopter carries approximately $20,000 worth of critical care equipment and is "extremely smooth riding" in addition to being fast.

Ms. O'Rourke said a flight crew is on stand-by at the helicopter site and the trauma team travels from the Emergency Receiving Center to the helicopter by ambulance or police vehicle.

"By the time we call for the helicopter, they're on route," Ms. O'Rourke said.

When the helicopter returns to Amarillo it lands at the Public Health Department which is adjacent to Northwest Texas Hospital.

The helicopter was obtained through the Potter County Civil Defense. Potter County's Sheriff's office, the Amarillo Hospital District and the Panhandle Emergency Medical Services.

Crowd expected for abuse trial

ATHENS, Tenn. (AP) — A special sound-equipped room was readied at McMinn County Courthouse today to hold the overflow crowd expected at the trial of Ronald and Wanda Gibson Maddux, charged with the beating death of Mrs. Maddux's 4-year-old daughter, Melisha.

The child's nude body was found on a bare mattress in the unheated living room of the Maddux's home in Cleveland, Tenn., last Oct. 13 — just five months after the state returned Melisha to the couple.

The Madduxes had been convicted of abusing Melisha when she was 11 months old and were jailed for six months. The state Human Services Department returned the child to them last May.

Reporters and some 150 prospective jurors were expected to fill the 200-seat courtroom. A basement room with loudspeakers to relay the proceedings was prepared for the overflow.

Criminal Court Judge James Witt said attorneys and witnesses in the second-degree murder trial would use a side door of the courthouse to keep them away from reporters and the public.

"There will be stringent security at the courthouse," said Sheriff Larry Wallace. "And there will be extra tight security measures taken at the jail while the Madduxes are here."

Judge Witt moved the widely publicized trial to Athens last year because he said heavy publicity made it impossible for the Madduxes to receive a fair trial in the Cleveland area.

Last week, he rejected a motion to suppress statements the Madduxes made to sheriff's deputies the day the body was found.

Mrs. Maddux was alleged to have said her husband resented Melisha because the child was fathered by another man. Maddux reportedly told deputies that he began disciplining Melisha after she wet her pants.

Maddux is alleged to have said he beat Melisha with a stick to keep her walking and allegedly made the following statement: "I made her keep walking back and forth all day to try and tire her out so that she would sleep that night."

I kept giving her the hot sauce a tablespoon at a time. She asked me for a drink of water. I got a glass of water and told her if she would take the tablespoon of hot sauce, I would give her a drink. She swallowed the hot sauce and I drank the glass of water.

Maddux told officers he gave Melisha a shower and sent her to bed alone, naked on the bare mattress in the cold living room. An autopsy concluded she died the following morning of shock and exposure.

If convicted, the Madduxes could be sentenced to 10 years to life in prison.

Reception honors chamber manager

Pampa paid tribute and said its official goodbye to Mr. and Mrs. E.O. Wedgeworth Sunday afternoon at a public reception in the M.K. Brown Civic Center. Wedgeworth is retiring Tuesday after 32 years as manager and executive vice president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. He and his wife, Doris, wearing a corsage, stood for more than two hours and heard the well wishes of hundreds of friends, community and industrial leaders as they filed through the reception line. The Wedgeworths will move to Mineola, Tex., the last week in March. Gift presentations of a silver tea set and cash were made by Melvin Kunkel, chamber president.

Fulton withdraws from city race

Neil Fulton, 957 Barnard, an employe of Pioneer Natural Gas Co., has withdrawn his candidacy for Ward 3 city commissioner in Pampa's April 2 municipal election.

City Secretary S.M. Chittenden said Fulton requested Friday afternoon that his name be removed from the candidate list due to a possible conflict of interest.

The withdrawal left only one candidate, Everett J. Tarbox, 720 E. Frederic, for the Ward 3 post to be vacated by Leo Braswell.

With the deadline for filing for city office only two days away, election contests still were assured for Mayor and Ward 1 commissioner.

Timothy Lee Morgan, 609 Red Deer, is challenging Mayor R.D. Wilkerson who is seeking re-election. J.D. McCann, 521 Montagu, and Rex McAnelly, 2000 Charles, are candidates for the Ward 1 council seat.

The city secretary said candidates may file at his office in City Hall up to 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Absentee balloting will be from March 14 through March 29 at the city secretary's office and polls for voting will be open in the City Commission Room at City Hall from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, April 2.

Brutal slaying uncovered

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Discovery of the nude body of a young woman, apparently strangled and then sliced in half at a West Fort Worth dump, provided investigators still another mystery today.

The unidentified victim, estimated between 17 and 21 years old, was the fifth woman found brutally murdered here during the month of February in the past decade. All the slayings remain unsolved.

These details were reported in a copyrighted news story by the Fort Worth Star Telegram.

Two White Settlement men hunting auto parts discovered the latest victim inside a 30-inch square box about 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

The Tarrant County medical examiner, Dr. Feliks Gwodz, said the woman had been dead no longer than 24 hours and apparently was strangled before her body was severed.

Whoever did it has to be nuts," county medical investigator R.O. Medford said.

Clifford Fowler, 23, and Dale Sustaire, 22, told White Settlement police they drove to the dump grounds on Sustaire's foreign car.

After finding the hinged box sealed with new nails, they took the trunk lid from the car, loaded the heavy crate inside and drove to Sustaire's home. Fort Worth Patrolman G.R. Shaw said.

The men said they drove away with the box because they thought it might contain auto parts. They left the crate outside the house while one got a screwdriver and hammer to pry it open.

A hand came up when they raised the lid, Medford said.

The men summoned police. Officers raised the box lid again, revealing the body of a slim woman with long, dark blonde hair. There were light bruises on the right side of the neck.

Investigators said the two sections of the body had been arranged carefully, and there was little blood inside the box, which was lined at the bottom with tinfoil.

It looks like the box was built for that purpose," said White Settlement policeman L.W. Terry.

The body was taken to All Saints Morgue and X-rays of the teeth were taken in an effort to establish identity.

Detectives searching the dump ground found several feet of blood-stained nylon cord tangled in a rope.

"She apparently was killed somewhere else and stuffed in the box," an investigator said.

This is similar to the June Ward slaying. Both were naked and both possibly strangled."

The battered body of Mrs. Ward was discovered Feb. 18 on a curb in far South Fort Worth, nude except for a gold necklace and a brazier strap tied around the neck. Police said she had been gludgeoned with an ax or hatchet.

On Feb. 3, 1967, the nude and strangled body of Mildred May was found along a bank of the Trinity River. She had left a disabled automobile on a Fort Worth freeway.

The nude body of Becky Martin was discovered near White Settlement seven weeks after she had disappeared Feb. 7, 1973, from the Tarrant County Junior College south campus. It was in a culvert on a county road. The cause of her death was never determined.

Carla Walker, a 17-year-old high school student, was found strangled and raped Feb. 17, 1974, beside a culvert near Lake Benbrook four days after she was abducted from her boyfriend's car in a bowling alley parking lot.

School finance bills merged

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A House subcommittee leaned toward phasing in a complete state takeover of the Foundation School Program today as it began work on molding six different bills into a single school finance proposal.

Chairman Tom Massey, D-San Angelo, said his goal was to send a bill to the full House Public Education Committee in three weeks, setting up a vote in the House perhaps before April 1.

The committee decided to use Gov. Dolph Briscoe's bill (HB750) as its vehicle but leaned in its opening discussion toward the approach taken by a coalition of seven school administrators' organization.

That plan would reduce the local share of the Foundation School Program from $508 million a year to $386 million, with the state picking up the cost of subsequent improvements in the program.

Other approaches would tie the local fund assignment either to a percentage of the total cost of the foundation program or to a fixed tax rate — so many cents per $100 of taxable property.

Rep. Ruben Torres, D-Brownsville, said there obviously isn't enough money available to have the state assume the full local fund assignment over the next two years — an estimated $1.04 billion.

But, he said, it could be phased in over a two to four-year period.

Torres also proposed a "progressive" local fund assignment where poor districts would pay less in terms of mandatory tax rate than rich ones. He said his studies showed a range of one or two cents per $100 valuation in the poorest to 22 cents in the richest.

Thimblerrigging FTC

Attempting to clamp more stringent restrictions on the advertising of food, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has just been caught with its hand in the proverbial cookie jar, in a manner of speaking. Statements supposedly expressing the independent, expert opinions of three doctors who appeared as paid FTC witnesses, turned out to have been written by members of the FTC's own staff.

The deception occurred last July in San Francisco at a FTC hearing in connection with a proposed new food advertising rule and came to light recently when William Dixon, who was the presiding officer at the FTC hearing, was questioned by Senator Strom Thurmond. Dixon, when questioned by Thurmond, was appearing at a Senate administrative practice and procedure subcommittee hearing on a bill sponsored by Senator Edward Kennedy to permit federal agencies to finance participation in their proceedings by citizens, if they can make important contributions. The aforementioned doctors' statements were introduced as examples of what the bill was supposed to accomplish.

Intrigued by the similarity of the three statements, Thurmond asked Dixon pointblank: "Your staff wrote their statements for them, isn't that true?" That's correct," the FTC official admitted.

Obviously, Thurmond pointed out to the Associated Press, the three doctors were brought in by the FTC as paid witnesses to substantiate its own views. "Such things as this," he said, "cause people to lose faith in the bureaucracy in Washington. Bureaucrats, he emphasized, try to carry out their own conceptions of what government regulations should be and the people are getting sick and tired of it."

Instead of spending the taxpayer's money trying to justify further intervention into the advertising industry, the FTC would be well advised to pay more attention to its own ethics and practices.

Editor: We are the employees of Leisure Lodge and would like to express our opinion of our happy home. In our times of growing to be senior employees, we have become very spoiled, always got what we asked for if we needed anything for our residents.

Throughout the two years that our home has been opened we know of our faults and our criticisms and are working just as hard as any other home who cares. Sticks and stones may break our bones but words never hurt us from people like you.

Leisure Lodge has special employees with special feelings to enjoy this type of work and we have or else we wouldn't be here loving these people and the ones whom don't have left and envied the ones whom stayed and loved these residents of ours.

Leisure Lodge is not only our resident's home, but it is our home also. Where we are at, it will always be happy. Our hearts are filled with happiness when just one of our people smile and say "thank you." Everyday, we feel as though we have received a reward for just loving someone. We have no shame in our hearts, we know they love us.

We are happy at our home, we know each other, we live with each other, we love each other. We are going to hold our heads up even higher when the roads get rough. We know Leisure Lodge is where it's at, and we know it's what's happening!

down our pride by failing to dig themselves out of their own downtrodden ruts. The student's attitude only matches that of the teacher in front of the blackboard.

Several schools with worse athletic facilities than McLean's have winning teams. Many boys and girls walk our halls carrying around tremendous athletic potential, but why don't the teachers see and help develop these talents? McLean's supporters are some of the best; they buy band candy, FFA fruit, FBLA magazines, and then turn right around and open their purses to buy basketball magazines. I've seen the stands of the home team nearly deserted while as a visiting team, McLean's fans filled the stands.

The blame for not holding or being satisfied with a job cannot entirely be placed on students' attitudes, poor facilities, or even lack of support; there's got to be another reason.

Business only can feed world

By C.R. BATTEN
"Today, as always, there is good news and there is bad news," says Walter B. Wriston, chairman of Citicorp. "The bad news is that more and more of our human resources are being diverted from productive work into government bureaucracy. The good news is that more and more people all over the world have come to this conclusion."

In a speech presented last fall in London, Wriston noted that for some time the addition of new employees in government has failed to increase the productivity of government. Therefore, "it is clear that if we are to be able to feed ourselves in the future, we cannot do so through government action," he said.

The answer to declining productivity in the public sector is to increase the productivity of the large global corporations, Wriston believes. They are even now the principal agents for the peaceful transfer of technology and ideas from one part of the world to the other."

Wriston's presentation was a long-needed defense of the multinational corporation. The world corporation is the best way yet found to supply human needs in an increasingly crowded world, he said.

Multinational corporations see the world as one large marketplace and have been a driving force toward the development of a rational world economy. "It has been the managers of the multinational corporations who have seen the world whole and moved to supply mankind's needs as efficiently as politics would allow," Wriston emphasized.

The current debate over the merits of the multinational corporations is really the continuation of the struggle between two historic ideas concerning economic and social behavior. One idea is that "business is politically neutral," and exists only to "satisfy the economic desires of the world's people."

The other idea is that business exists to serve the state. "Today, much of the criticism of the global company is really the disquieting voice of mercantilism," says Wriston. Mercantilism, which history books say died out with the Industrial Revolution, is expanding in some parts of the world.

The basic idea underlying mercantilism is that when someone profits, someone else must lose. The critics of the world corporations cannot accept the simple truth that business is a creator of wealth, and therefore both home and host countries benefit from their operations.

Wriston left much unsaid in his brief paper. His main point seemed to be that governmental controls over international business are retarding the full development of a world wide economy, and a world wide economy is the only way we can achieve the most efficient allocation of resources and solve the world's food problems.

Whether Wriston is correct in his belief that the multinational corporation is the best way of meeting world wide human needs can be determined only by removing governmental barriers to trade and business. I suspect that in a free market, we would find large world companies to be most efficient in some areas, and smaller businesses in others.

The one idea that must be overcome, if we are to be successful in meeting human needs, is the false notion that in a free market one person's (or nation's) gain is another person's (or nation's) loss. That assumption can be true only if wealth is static, and all the wealth that will ever be created now exists.

But wealth is created by business and industry. Both parties to every voluntary exchange benefit, or the exchange would not be made.

Only when government steps in to exact its conditions to any exchange, and to extract its tribute, does one of the parties lose.

Unobtainable Reserve

Oil shale in the United States may hold 40 gallons of petroleum to a ton of rock but no one yet knows how to extract it economically or without ruining thousands of square miles of the western U.S. by strip mining. The oil shale holds many times the known American oil reserves of 45.4 billion barrels.

'Nobody knows what it does to a victim mentally'

Raped woman puts bullet through brain

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Almost a year and a half after Mary Ann Anderson was raped, she stood alone in a field near Georgetown and fired a .22 caliber bullet into her head.

Her suicide earlier this month came less than a month after her attacker was sentenced to 60 years in prison for the assault.

An Austin police detective who handled the rape case said last week, "Nobody knows what it does to a victim mentally."

But the people close to the pretty 22-year-old woman are still puzzled over what exactly caused her to take her life.

No one can say whether Mary Ann's death wish began the night of the rape in her room near the University of Texas campus or when she told a jury about the unnatural sex acts she was forced to perform.

Or possibly it began when she had to try and convince that same jury that she didn't consent to the sex acts in the first place.

"Rape is the only offense where the victim is cross-examined about whether she consented to the crime," said Travis County Asst. Dist. Atty. Steve Edwards. "No one asks a robbery victim if he enticed the criminal into taking his money or if he enjoyed being robbed. If it happened to my mother or my sister, I would probably not want them to go through the trial, except that would let the guy get away with it."

Mary Ann's brother, Leo, said his sister didn't appear to be badly affected by the rape. He said he believes a trip to Europe shortly after the incident was a safety valve. She needed to be by herself for a while.

It was not until after her death that he discovered something about his sister he never knew. Her writings, poems, diaries and letters told of a struggle deep within the young woman for the meaning of life.

"It was the work of an absolute stranger," said Anderson's wife. "She was going through things we never knew."

Sgt. Jerry Slatton, the detective who handled Mary Ann's case, spent three days with her outside the courtroom waiting to testify. He remembers a quiet, somewhat frightened young woman, but one committed to testify and see her attacker behind bars.

"I've been a cop 10 years and it's rough waiting for a trial," he said. "You never know what they'll ask you."

Edith Roberts, the attorney who defended Laredo Cole, a prison parolee, based her defense on the consent portion of the law. Cole had told her that he had dated Mary Ann previously but he was unable to recall any witnesses who had seen them together.

In court, the attorney argued that there was no sign of a struggle, and Mary Ann did not see a weapon that could have been construed as life-threatening.

"I tried to argue the impossibility of the act as she described it," she said. "I didn't bear down on her, and I have been known to get rough on 'em."

The attorney said she noticed no emotional strain on Mary Ann's face during the cross-examination.

"Most women would have broke, and maybe that should have tipped me," she said, thinking back.

Mary Ann didn't break—at least not in a way anyone could notice. No one apparently knew of the inner tensions, the frustrations that might have surfaced with the rape. No one knew until it was too late.

Slatton said it best.

"I don't feel I ever got to know her, but I had a lot of respect for her."

Opposes Carter reorganization

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Before he starts his battle with President Carter over government reorganization, Rep. Jack Brooks would like the world to know that, despite some reports, he is not a curmudgeon.

Curmudgeons are not prone to pucker self-assessments like, "I don't go around wearing brass knuckles — just my old university ring. I really think of myself as sweetness and light."

Nonetheless, the Democrat from Beaumont, Texas, serving his 12th term in Congress, is opposing Carter's plans to fulfill his oft-repeated promise to streamline the federal government. The House Government Operations Committee, chaired by Brooks, opens hearings Tuesday on the issue.

Carter wants authority to send Congress reorganization plans that would automatically take effect unless the House or Senate vetoes them. Brooks says Congress should have to vote favorably on each item of reorganization.

Part of Brooks' image problem may stem from the fact that he looks like the stereotype of the flinty, reactionary House committee chairman. At 55, his short frame is topped by a bald head fringed with gray. He has watery blue eyes and a pinched, narrow face.

"Surely you can tell by looking at me that I'm not mean and cantankerous," he says, puffing sternly on a stogie and then laughing.

Brooks says he has no desire to fight with Carter. "I like Jimmy Carter. I worked for his election ... I'm sympathetic to presidents. I think they need help," he smiles.

The conflict is all in the minds of the press, he said. "Y'all are just always looking for a fight, saying 'Let's you and him fight.' It's nice to sit back and watch."

Brooks would prefer to be seen as standing for a principle than standing against the newly elected leader of his own party.

"The Constitution says that all legislative power is vested in the Congress. It makes sense to just about anyone who can read over the age of 10. Now the administration's bill would vest in the President the power to submit a bill and have it become law without the Congress doing anything," he said.

Brooks also quickly notes that his bill has many of the safeguards requested by the President. It would prohibit congressmen from amending the President's proposal, guaranteeing that it could not be bottled up in a committee.

But the Carter forces feel that having to round up a majority vote for each segment of reorganization would make a difficult legislative task practically impossible.

They would prefer to have the onus for initiating a vote and rounding up a majority rest with the opposition. If the Brooks plan passed, "We'd be dead in the water," said Frank Moore, Carter's congressional liaison.

After it became clear that Brooks was adamant, Carter turned to an old ally, Rep. Elliott Levitas of Georgia, to introduce his plan. Levitas, a junior member of Brooks' committee, was a floor leader for Carter's Georgia reorganization plan when he served in the state legislature five years ago.

Levitas put together a group of fellow Democrats — not including Brooks — to go to the White House to meet Carter. He says 17 of the Government Operations Committee's 24 Democrats have signed the administration bill. House Minority Leader John Rhodes of Arizona is also a co-sponsor.

Brooks says he has not yet begun asking people to vote for his bill and will not until the hearings are concluded.

But thus far, he has few notable allies. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill has promised to help Carter. Minority Leader John Rhodes is a co-sponsor of the administration bill. So is Brooks' counterpart in the Senate, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn.

"This is the kind of fight where everybody tells you, 'You're right, you're doing a great job, and you stay in there and fight, Brooks.' But they don't guarantee to vote with you," he said.

Brooks stood against the White House in a similar situation in the last session of Congress. He opposed the extension of the revenue-sharing bill, and lost.

Levitas said Brooks didn't try to twist arms then and doesn't appear to be doing it now. Nor has Brooks shown an inclination to hold grudges against those who oppose him, Levitas said.

Nonetheless, the administration is careful to avoid giving the impression that it is seeking to vanquish Brooks. "We're looking for a compromise. We respect chairman Brooks. We want to work with him," Moore said.

The administration knows it will have to work with Brooks long after initial battle over reorganization is over. His committee would have jurisdiction over any effort to create a Cabinet-level department for energy resources, for example.

Brooks says he will be cooperative. But, he adds, the situation reminds him of a quotation by the Roman satirist Petronius: "I was to learn later in life that we tend to meet any new situation by reorganizing. And a wonderful method it can be for creating the illusion of progress while producing confusion, inefficiency and demoralization."

Chemical ruins city water

CINCINNATI (AP) — The second spill of carbon tetrachloride into the Ohio River system in a week has turned off many Cincinnati-area residents to tap water — to the extent that some people won't bathe in it.

Restaurants claim diners are substituting coffee and tea for water with meals, while grocery stores report an increase of sales in soft drinks.

Some supermarkets reported a weekend run on bottled water.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Dave Wenger, an IGA store manager in Ft. Thomas, Ky. "One man ordered enough water to fill a bathtub. He said he refuses to take a bath in tap water."

The run on bottled water peaked over the weekend as Cincinnati, Ohio's third largest city, with 450,000 residents, closed intake valves for 31 hours to its drinking water supply.

The rarely ordered move came after 6,000 pounds of carbon tetrachloride was spilled accidentally Friday into the Kanawha River at the FMC Corp. near Charleston, W. Va.

The chemical, used in fire extinguishers and as a cleaning agent, can cause liver damage and is believed to be a cancer-causing substance.

Last week, a 70-ton slug of the chemical passed Cincinnati undetected, polluting the river where the city draws its water supply.

Because of the spills, uneasy residents began looking for supplies of pure water.

"We've had a tremendous volume of new customers, maybe over 50 per cent," said Charles Braun, a distributor for Mountain Springs, a bottler of water. "My wife just received 87 calls at home in a 24-hour period.

A store manager in Price Hill said his store ran out of bottled water several days ago and he has had difficulty obtaining more. Prices on bottled water range from 59 cents to $1.76 a gallon.

The city closed its intake gates Saturday morning and reopened them Sunday afternoon after the roughly 60-mile-long slug of carbon tetrachloride moved out of reach of the city's water supply.

City Manager Bill Donaldson said the valves were reopened when carbon tetrachloride levels dropped to under 10 parts per billion. The highest reading registered while the second spill passed was 37 parts per billion, he said. A level over 50 parts per billion is considered alarming.

Aides study elimination of White House groups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as Jimmy Carter promised during his election campaign, top aides are looking at the government agencies attached to the White House to determine which can be eliminated.

According to one White House aide, if an agency doesn't deal with the President daily, its chances of surviving the Carter review are dimmed.

One of the agencies is the 41-member White House Office of Telecommunications Policy. Its staff members, tucked away in a high-rise office two blocks from the White House, say that only recently have they had frequent contact with the President's office.

Richard Nixon established the agency. Its original director, Clay Whitehead, placed it in the spotlight by attacking network news organizations for dispensing "elitist gossip" and "ideological plugola."

Recently, however, it has been quietly considering such topics as electronic communications policies, expansion of television broadcasting, home computers and the electronic transfer of funds by banks.

"All of the futuristic discussions of what tomorrow's household is going to be like come out of this office," said Ronald Eisenberg, a staff member there.

Two years ago then-President Gerald Ford considered transferring the office's duties to the Commerce Department or making it an independent agency. But he decided to leave it alone.

Eisenberg and White House workers say no decision has been made on the agency's future role. But they indicated the once-controversial office may be one of Carter's efficiency and economy drive victims.

Although administration figures insist they don't know what will happen to the agency, a clue may be found in an agenda for the administration's first six months, prepared just after the election. It notes the agency's initial use by Nixon.

It said: "Special emphasis should be attached to the announcement of the closing of the Office of Telecommunications Policy, both as a means of eliminating waste in the White House and, equally important, as a means of expressing the Carter administration's commitment to a free and vigorous media, unimpeded by government pressure."

Labor leader missing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Nevada labor leader Al Bramlet telephoned the Dunes Hotel shortly before he disappeared and asked a hotel executive to deliver $10,000 to a Las Vegas casino, according to Bramlet's wife.

Bramlet, 60, has not been heard from since late last Thursday when he failed to return home from a business trip to Reno. Authorities have no leads, and his union has posted a $25,000 reward for information leading to his whereabouts.

His wife of two months, Barbara, 27, said Bramlet made the telephone call to the Dunes on Thursday night and asked that the money be delivered immediately to a downtown casino.

The call was the last word from Bramlet, head of local 226 of the Culinary Workers Union for the past 24 years and president of the state AFL-CIO for more than a decade.

"I hope we don't have a Hoffa case on our hands," said an investigator, referring to the disappearance of former Teamsters boss James Hoffa 18 months ago.

Tax cut expected this week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives will decide this week how to split up a $19.5 billion individual tax cut proposed by President Carter in an effort to prime the sluggish economy.

Carter wants to spend the money on a one-shot $50-per-person tax rebate and to permanently increase the standard deduction, which generally helps taxpayers on the lower end of the income scale.

Most Republicans and some Democrats prefer a permanent across-the-board tax cut for virtually all taxpayers.

Despite the political appeal of a universal tax cut, there is every indication the House will accept the Carter plan as the only sure way to pump more than $10 billion into the economy within a few weeks.

The two-year tax cut is scheduled for House debate on Thursday, one of the few pieces of legislation to be considered by Congress this week.

Another important bill, to be debated in the House on Tuesday, would extend for one year the government's authority to control interest rates on savings accounts. It also would broaden the powers of credit unions, giving them authority to lend money for home mortgages.

House action is expected Tuesday on a new code of ethics for representatives, which is considered virtually certain to pass because it was made a condition of allowing a 29 percent pay hike for lawbreakers to go into effect.

The ethics code is likely to call for extensive financial disclosure, a limit on outside earnings and for other protections against conflict of interest.

The Senate is expected to consider on Thursday the nomination of Paul Warnke to be chairman of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and chief U.S. negotiator at the U.S.-Soviet arms-limitation talks. The nomination has been the most controversial made by Carter.

A compromise budget amendment to accommodate any emergency economic stimulus is slated for work today during the first major Senate-House conference of the new Congress. The House and Senate have passed slightly different amendments that assume — but do not ensure — acceptance of Carter's tax-cut and job-creation plans.

Carter's plan to mail a $50 check to virtually all Americans this spring has been under attack by many in Congress since he first spelled it out. Opponents contend the rebate is an expensive and uncertain way to create jobs counted on to help pull the economy out of recession.

Carter's economic stimulus proposal would cost about $32 billion between now and Sept. 30, 1978. In addition to the rebate and a bigger standard deduction for taxpayers who do not itemize, the measure calls for a business tax break and increased federal spending to create jobs.

Middle East round-up

Sudan expected to join

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan is expected to join Egypt and Syria in their two-month-old unified political command at a summit conference of the three nations' chiefs of state now being held in Khartoum.

President Anwar Sadat, arriving Sunday for the three-day meeting with Presidents Hafez Assad of Syria and Jaafar Numaira of Sudan, said their meeting would result in historic decisions beneficial to the whole Arab world.

Egyptian officials said political unification may lead to a federation of the three countries.

Elsewhere in the Middle East — King Hussein of Jordan admitted getting money from the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency but denied he used it personally.

—Sadat said Arab-Israeli peace could come within a month if the United States assumed responsibility for arranging a settlement.

—The Israeli army evicted militant Jewish nationalists who tried to establish a settlement Sunday on the occupied West Bank.

—The International Monetary Fund agreed to extend $600 million in credit to Egypt over the next four years, Cairo Radio reported.

The Khartoum summit conference is the outgrowth of an announcement by Egypt and Syria two months ago that they were making new plans to merge. This was interpreted as a display of unity in preparation for peace negotiations with Israel.

Both Sadat and Numaira also are at odds with the Libyan strongman, Col. Muammar Khadafy, and have accused him of supporting enemies of their regimes.

In Amman, King Hussein told Newsweek magazine that money he received from the CIA was used to "enhance our intelligence and security capabilities."

The king, responding to a story in the Washington Post 10 days ago, said the checks were made out to him as Jordan's head of state, and that this was customary in dealings in the Arab world.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance defended secrecy in such payments to foreign leaders, saying "these kinds of things cannot be done in the glare of public publicity."

Vance told CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" that such payments are legal and "are in the interests of the country involved as well as the United States."

Sadat, in an interview taped last week for ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers," said the United States remains a key factor in Arab-Israeli peace because it "is a party trusted by me and the Arab world and it should be trusted by Israel."

In the occupied West Bank, which the Arabs demand be turned over to the Palestinians to be incorporated into a new Palestinian state, 60 Jewish families attempted to establish a settlement on Sunday at the tiny Arab village of Meskha. But they did not resist when the military governor of the occupied territory, David Hagoel, arrived with an expulsion order.

Ochiltree County to sue Joan Baez for taxes

PERRYTON — Lawsuits totalling over $15,000 have been filed by Ochiltree County against singer Joan Baez and 11 other defendants for delinquent taxes.

The suit against Baez, a renowned folk entertainer, is in regard to her company, the Harris Cattle Company, which had 1,456 head of cattle at Wheatheart Feeders when the feedlot operation declared bankruptcy in 1975.

The suit, filed in behalf of Ochiltree County, the State of Texas and the Perryton Independent School District, is for more than $2,400 in delinquent taxes.

Other defendants named in the tax suits include Fox Cattle Company, South Orange, N.J.; Fred Cattle Company, New York City, N.Y.; L. Grosman Cattle Company, Miami Beach, Fla.; Leonard Landsburg, Miami Beach; Morris Wheatheart Cattle Fund, Perryton; Whigham, Eastup and W.E. Cattle Company, Perryton; Woodworth Cattle Company, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; and Wheatheart Personal Property, Perryton.

All of the taxes due are on cattle which were in Wheatheart Feeders, Wheatheart was the second largest cattle feeding operation in the nation before it went bankrupt.

Four officials of the Perryton-based operation were charged with 28 counts of fraud and conspiracy but pleaded guilty to one count.

Convicts build center at third cost in taxes

By ROB WOOD Associated Press Writer HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Dr. Charles M. Friel admitted, "it was ironic that thousands of men caught breaking the law spent five years building a structure for the better education of the catchers of criminals."

But Friel said the Criminal Justice Center on the campus of Sam Houston State University "is really a monument to those state prison inmates who did the work, many of them once thought unemployable."

While the facility now is a training ground for law enforcement officers and administrators, Friel said, "It was the training ground for the inmates who had never done construction work in their life. They completed a structure that has not one single flaw and, many of those inmates are on parole today and have good jobs in the construction industry," he said.

Had the building been constructed on big basis by a private firm, Friel said, it would have cost the taxpayers $20 million, rather than $7.5 million.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe officially dedicated the center Friday. He said, "If the answer to the cause of crime is ever known, it will be known by the age-old question of punishment vs. rehabilitation is ever solved, it will be solved here."

Friel said in an interview, "We attempt to teach the 3,000 students at the center to be hard-nosed realists about crime. We don't want any pie-in-the-sky philosophy.

We want to teach people how to solve the problems of crime and of criminals.

"We want to stay one jump ahead by preparing them for the crimes of the next decade, which will be different from the crimes of today," he said.

Students at the Institute of Contemporary Corrections and Behavioral Sciences, the official name for what most call "The Center," includes those interested in law enforcement work, administrative positions within the criminal justice framework, or in social rehabilitation.

Attending the center are many law enforcement officers who are attempting to hone their skills, army officers assigned to military stockades, correctional and probation officers attempting to learn new methods of handling those in jail and those recently paroled.

Friel said, "We attempt to bypass the flash-in-the-pan arguments about capital punishment and such. We want them to learn how to handle crime, how better to reduce crime."

"They also must learn that when you have a problem with crime it won't be solved by simply firing the police chief or buying another helicopter," he said.

Friel noted that medical schools generally have a hospital nearby "and we felt we needed a courtroom."

The Justice Center courtroom was the site recently for the theft trial of a Wichita Falls man.

The murder trial of Hampton C. Robinson III, a 28-year-old Victoria rancher, is scheduled to open at the center today.

Robinson is accused in the Oct. 9 slaying of Thomas Bauer, 32, another Victoria rancher.

Both trials were moved to the Justice Center on changes of venue.

Friel said, "Our students got a first hand look at a trial, at the judge, at the attorneys."

"In the first trial, after the jury left for deliberations, the students were permitted to ask questions of the judge and of the attorneys, as to rulings made and questions asked of witnesses. It was a gold mine of knowledge."

Dr. Elliot Bowers, university president, said the center has been called a monument to the concern of the people of Texas for the problems of crime and delinquency. This monument, however, must be a living one. It must be alive with the education, research and continuing education of those who use it.

Friel said the center is "alive with the intelligence of the students here."

"But it is even more alive when you think of the hours of sweat put into this building. The sweat of prison inmates. It can never die because of what a group of prisoners did when some people had given up on them forever."

US trade balance shows deep deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade balance fell into its deepest monthly deficit ever in January as the severe winter weather slowed movement of domestic goods and closed many plants, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said imports of goods outpaced exports by $1.67 billion in January, up from $610 million in December and the biggest deficit since November's $1.03 billion deficit. Imports exceeded exports by $5.87 billion for all of last year.

Exports plunged 7.8 per cent in January, a sharp reversal of the 8.6 per cent increase in December. Imports, meanwhile, grew by 2.3 per cent in January compared to a 3.7 advance in December.

The trade figures are the latest in a lengthening string of government statistics delineating the impact of the harsh winter weather on the economy. An estimated 1.25 million or more people were out of work at the peak of the weather problems due to frigid temperatures, heavy snow and energy shortages. Industrial production fell last month, retail sales were off and other indicators of industrial and economic activity dipped.

Administration economists have said they expect total economic growth for the current three-month period to be cut by 2 per cent at an annual rate, although the economy is expected to make up that drop before the year is over.

The Commerce Department said the weather "had a pronounced impact in diminishing the volume of goods moving out of the country" but analysts were unable to provide a detailed estimate of how much of January's export drop was due to this factor.

The drop in exports was virtually across the board. On the import side, petroleum was up 5 per cent to 268.2 million barrels. That was the most foreign oil brought in for any month since the 285.7 million in January, 1975.

Other import categories registering increases were machinery and transport equipment, up $59.6 million, and food and live animals, up $34.4 million. Coffee imports grew $59.9 million, and cocoa imports rose $14.2 million.

Judge to rule on age

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A ruling was awaited today in the murder trial of millionaire Cullen Davis on whether defense lawyers may mention the age of Andrea Wilborn, 12, the stepdaughter he is accused of killing.

Efforts proceeded meanwhile to seat the first juror for the case, toward which questioning began a week ago before Dist. Court Judge Tom Cave.

Defense counsel requested the jurist Saturday to let them refer to the age of Miss Wilborn in asking prospective jurors about weighing the question of probation in event they should convict Davis on the lesser charge of murder. Judge Cave promised to study the matter over the weekend.

Presently Davis is charged with capital murder in the fatal shootings at the Davis mansion Aug. 3, 1976, of his stepdaughter and former Texas Christian University basketball player Stan Farr, who was living at the place with Davis' estranged wife Priscilla.

In addition the wealthy Fort Worth industrialist faces charges of attempted murder of Mrs. Davis and a visitor, Gus Gavrel Jr., in the same shooting spree that night.

Through last week prosecutors and defense lawyers questioned eight potential jurors and all were excused from hearing the case.

Thank you

Mrs. Wanda Talley, member of the board of directors of the Pampa Senior Citizens Center, recently presented a certificate of recognition to Cabot Corporation officials in appreciation of the company's contribution toward capital funding of the center's building. Police report

A Pampa man, Johnny Hoe Rosalez, 18, of 216 E. Tuke, is free on $2,500 bond for possession of marijuana.

Rosalez was stopped by Pampa police for a traffic violation and was arrested when officers learned he had no driver's license. He was taken to the police station where officers found a substance believed to be marijuana in his possession.

He was charged with possession of marijuana and arraigned before Justice of the Peace Venora Cole who set bond at $2,500. Rosalez appeared in Municipal Court and paid a $52.50 fine for no driver's license and a $32.50 fine for the traffic violation.

David Joe Fortin, 22, of 1124 S. Nelson was charged with driving while intoxicated following a traffic accident in the 2100 block of N. Hobart Saturday night.

His car was in collision with a car driven by Shane Rue Kotara of 2212 N. Christy. Fortin was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Venora Cole who set bond at $500 for driving while intoxicated. He was also cited for following too closely and he paid a $32.50 fine in Municipal Court on that charge.

A passenger in the Fortin vehicle, Kevin Reeves, 21, of 2106 N. Russell, was injured and was taken to Highland General Hospital where he was treated in the emergency room and released.

Odath Ray Reed, 19, of 1417 E. Frances, was stopped by police who noticed he did not have a current inspection sticker on his car. Police learned Reed's drivers' license had been suspended and he was charged with driving while license suspended.

He was to be arraigned later today.

In other weekend activity, Pampa police investigated a burglary, four thefts, a criminal mischief complaint and two non-injury accidents.

Three dollars worth of gasoline was taken from a self-service pump at a convenience store and firewood valued at $4-5 was taken from Gas and Go, 119 E. Brown.

Gasoline was siphoned from a Southwestern Bell service vehicle parked in an alley beside Southwestern Bell offices. A rubber hose was left sticking from the gas tank.

Tires on a vehicle parked at 519 Oklahoma were reported slashed.

Advice

Dear Abby,
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My Irish wife isn't speaking to me. Here's what happened: Her father, who lived to a ripe old age, was buried last week. I was a pallbearer. It was pouring down rain when we got to the cemetery, and we were all ankle-deep in mud.

There was some kind of mixup on the hole they had dug, so after half the services were said at the wrong hole, we were advised of the mistake, and the funeral party had to walk a very long way to the right hole. What a mess! All the pallbearers took turns slipping and falling in the mud as we carried the casket, and the priest fell twice.

I held an umbrella over the priest's head as he started the prayers again, and I leaned over and whispered, "Father, let's have the short version."

My wife heard me and claims I was very disrespectful to her father. Also she thinks that because of me the priest left out a lot, and her father didn't have a proper funeral. How can I get my wife to start talking to me?

SORRY IN BOSTON

DEAR SORRY: Send her some flowers. They're the best bloomin' silence-breaker known to man.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have a bet on, and we need you to settle it. Are you divorced, or aren't you? I say you are, and my wife says you aren't.

The loser has agreed to send $25 to a charity of your choice. Thank you.

MAC

DEAR MAC: You lose. I am NOT divorced, and God willing, come July I'll be married to the same wonderful man for 39 years. (P.S. Send your contribution to your local animal shelter.)

DEAR ABBY: CAROLINA CONTROVERSY says she is constantly being complimented on her clothes, which she makes herself, but her husband tells her she's foolish for telling people her clothes are "homemade."

How ridiculous! The well dressed man of today who can afford to have his clothes custom-tailored isn't ashamed to tell people that HIS suits are handmade. In fact he's proud of it. So why shouldn't a woman be proud to say that HER clothes are "handmade"?

MY TWO CENTS

DEAR MY: She SHOULD be. But "homemade" and "handmade" have an entirely different ring—on the cash register, that is. It's funny how most people want their clothes to look expensive, but don't like to spend a lot for them.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I got married recently and my husband and I agreed to wait before starting a family. I went to my doctor for birth control pills. He gave me a Pap test, but while doing it he casually said I have a tipped womb. I bombarded him with questions as to my chances of getting pregnant and if I do conceive will I be able to carry my child for nine months. He said it was nothing and not to worry about it. He gave me a prescription for the pills. I told him I would not take them because he was so vague in responding to my questions.

I told my husband about my doctor's visit and my fears about not being able to get pregnant. My husband said to take the pills; if I couldn't get pregnant, the doctor would not have given them to me. I love my husband and would like to think that he and the doctor are correct, but I'm worried and not satisfied with either. I consulted a gynecologist and she was even vaguer than my regular doctor.

What I want to know from you is, with a tipped womb, considering my health to be excellent, will I get pregnant? I am not taking the pills and I haven't gotten pregnant. I haven't told my husband because I do want to have his children and I have it planted in my mind that it will take me years to conceive and if I take the pills it will take even longer. Am I wrong? Or will I have to have my womb straight before I can conceive?

DEAR READER — By the time you get my reply you may have already found out that you can get pregnant. Won't your husband be surprised!

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I have a winter coat with an outer coat of vinyl casting leather that is marked with ballpoint ink on the outside. The label in the coat reads: "Do not dry clean. Brush stained or soiled area with lukewarm water and mild soap. Do not use detergents." These cleaning instructions have been followed but the ink marks remain. Do you have any suggestions? — RICK

DEAR RICK — The best thing I know for removing ballpoint ink marks is hair spray. But do test it on a hidden spot on your coat as nothing is infallible in these days of miracle fabrics. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — To fill a nail hole in a wall I press an aspirin table in the hole, wet the end of a finger and smooth it over. This can be painted over and the wall looks like new. — ANN.

DEAR POLLY — Many organizations such as the Scouts, P.T.A. etc. need cardboard for signs and display purposes. Display cardboard and posterboard are expensive so they might find the following not only helpful but economical. Ask local stores for any mattress or refrigerator cartons they may be throwing away and then cut them into the proper size boards. Apply a coat or two of quick drying wall paint, lay flat to dry and you have very good and inexpensive material to use for signs and display work. — MR. J.H.R.

DEAR POLLY — I save the plastic covers that come on two pound coffee cans and use them under the metal canisters I keep on the sink. They never leave rust marks. — EDNA.

Polly will send you one of her "peachy" thank-you cards, ideal for framing or placing in your family scrapbook. If she uses your favorite Pointer, Peavee or Problem in her column. Write Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

Silver spoon designer makes size 16 'float'

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — (What an absurd question, thinks Mary McFadden, and her thin, pale face and dark eyes reflect that. Of course she saw the De Beers diamond mines when she lived in South Africa in the '60s.)

"My husband was in charge of them," she says briskly.

Then she must have seen the working conditions. "I think we'll bypass the politics of the situation," she replies, sitting stiffly in her West 35th Street showroom. "It's a long story and very complicated."

Later on, when American politics come up, she passes again. "Carter was elected by the wayward minority groups that don't contribute much to the system — but I think I'm going to stop this subject."

Curious. The '76 Coty Award winner, 38, is outspoken in other personal areas. She is "definitely spoiled," she says. Her father was a wealthy Tennessee cotton broker who died when she was ten, after which the family moved to Long Island.

And she snagged the glamorous jobs she's held — editor at Vogue, columnist for the South African Daily Rand — because "I happened to be there at the right time."

It certainly wasn't due to her formal education. Wearing confederate uniforms at the Foxcroft School in Virginia as a girl and marching to lunch every day didn't do much for her, she recalls. "The time could have been better spent on education."

Still, though she always wanted to design, she attended the Traphagen School of Design for only one term. "I realized it was almost impossible to get into Seventh Avenue that way," she says. "You had to spend 15 years in Paris working your way up."

So she went on to study sociology at Columbia because she could get easy A's, she jokes. But she never graduated.

When she talked her way into a job as Christian Dior's New York public relations director, then, it was because she had the right contacts, the bearing and breeding to pull it off.

Why, then, in light of such candor, won't she discuss politics, one wonders. She can't be afraid of being called an elitist because everything about her spells that: her icy, guarded manner that warms only fractionally; the glimpse of her private life illustrated by a quick phone call from a friend — "Are you in Palm Springs? Why, yes, we'd love to go to Acapulco." And the clothes she designs for women size 4 to 18 who spend $200 to 1,200 for her handpainted silk tunics and paper thin quilted coats.

When the size 16 matrons she does such good business with buy one of her pieces of "floating art," they may not know Ming dynasty porcelain from African stone carving. But Mary McFadden does, and the fabrics she designs reflect that knowledge and what she sees in the Indian, Czech and Japanese films she watches — sometimes two or three a day.

In a sense, then, these women are buying identification with rarified artistic taste as well as beautiful clothes.

Art — African, Oriental, modern — fills her L-shaped showroom almost to the exclusion of her clothes. It also fills her life.

At 13, when her grandmother gave her some jewels, she sold them to buy art. "I couldn't see myself wearing 30 carats worth of rubies."

And when she married her second husband, the director of Rhodesia's National Gallery; it was the most logical thing in the world to her to open a "workshop" in the bush because "that's where the talent was, particularly the Mashona tribe who are wood and stone carvers."

They worked for her on the "reward and selection" system, she says. "I'd choose the best piece and give it the most money and the best display. The other artists would then give me the same high quality."

She sold that high quality to 29 countries, but she won't say what the artists got out of it. "They were paid according to the sculpture and they made more money as artists than as anything else." When terrorist activity in Rhodesia turned the area into a "wasteland," the workshop dissolved and she returned to New York because, she says, "There was no longer much opportunity for white in Africa."

There's a great deal of it here, though, and with the help of friends, especially Geraldine Stutz, president of Henri Bendel's, she began selling the clothes she'd begun designing in Africa.

Today, Mary McFadden, Inc. grosses two million dollars a year. Tomorrow, with the licensing programs she plans to enter, the figure could be staggering.

"Within the first year of licensing, annual gross sales should be $400,000," she reports. "The second, they should be $750,000; $1,500,000 the third," and so on.

And that may be why she's cautious about saying the wrong thing, presenting the wrong image. "At the moment our customer is elite only by virtue of price, but as we expand so will the customer."

And it wouldn't pay to offend the middle or working classes because they just might think twice about buying a Mary McFadden fur, handbag, scarf or whatever? Mightn't they?

MARY McFADDEN

NOT QUITE ready for mass consumption, in terms of price. Mary McFadden's red river and iris design apron in silk pongee ($1200); pants ($300).

Guns, knives as punishment

DENVER (AP) — For more than 5 million American children, punishment at home has meant being shot, stabbed, kicked, beaten and bitten by their parents, a new nationwide survey shows.

Richard J. Gelles of the University of Rhode Island told a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science on Friday that the study showed three of every 100 parents, an estimated 1.2 million parents nationwide, have used knives and guns on their youngsters.

Another 1.2 million have threatened to harm their children with the weapons, he added.

And more than 80 per cent of the 1,146 parents surveyed said they sometimes spank or slap their children, said Gelles, leader of the team that took the survey. Gelles said he drew no formal conclusions from the survey but plans to use information gathered in it to help determine causes and cures for family violence. He did not say over what period the survey was conducted or how recently it was made.

He said there is no accurate count of the number of children who die as a result of home violence each year, but he estimated there are about 700 such deaths nationwide. The U.S. Census Bureau's latest figures show 48.3 million Americans under age 14.

The survey was designed to find out what leads to violence in the family and how it can be stopped, Gelles said. It included families of differing social and economic background and was among the first on a national level on violence toward children in the home.

The survey indicated that from 3.2 million to 3.9 million children between 3 and 17 have been kicked, bitten or punched by their parents, Gelles said. An additional 1.6 million to 2.2 million have been "beaten up" during childhood, he said.

While parents often express concern about violence on television, Gelles said many of them might better be worried about how violence in the home affects their youngsters.

"While television may reinforce some of this behavior, what the child experiences in the home is much more important," he said.

And violence in the home is not limited to attacks on children by parents, said Murray Straus of the University of New Hampshire and Suzanne L. Steinmetz of the University of Delaware. Both were involved in studies of home violence with Gelles.

Straus said he examined relationships between 2,143 husbands and wives in a separate survey. Twenty-eight per cent of the couples admitted having slapped or hit each other, he said.

In another study of children in 1,224 families, Dr. Steinmetz said, it was found that 18 per cent of the youngsters questioned had used a knife or gun on a brother or sister.

AFL-CIO lashes out at abuse in American nursing homes

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Charging that older Americans living in nursing homes face widespread "patterns of abuse," the AFL-CIO called on Saturday for an end to profit-making nursing homes.

"Profit must be eliminated from the industry if its problems are to be corrected," the labor organization said in a report on a year-long study. The AFL-CIO suggested the gradual replacement of profit-making homes with non-profit or government-run homes.

"The facts are that non-profit nursing homes spend more on patient care and more on staffing than profit-making institutions and the results are evidenced in better care for nursing home residents," the report said.

The 14 million-member federation said inspections of nursing homes by its state affiliates, along with official government reports, showed negligence leading to death and injury, unsanitary conditions, improper medical care, inadequate control of drugs, reprisals against those who complain and widespread profiteering.

The study said that most of the problems were found in profit-making institutions.

The findings, in a 39-page report to the AFL-CIO executive council meeting here, also "revealed much that should be commended in terms of humane, compassionate treatment found throughout the industry."

But the study declared that "the case for broad-scale governmental action is compelling."

While federal standards exist for nursing homes, the report said enforcement is left almost entirely to the states, which have varying degrees of commitment.

In Michigan, for example, the report said "standards for pet stores are more stringently enforced than those for nursing homes."

"Although statutes provide that nursing homes failing to comply with standards are subject to non-renewal, suspension or revocation of licenses, this is rarely the outcome," the report said.

"Repeated citations for violations gather dust, and facilities are allowed to remain in business because of timid law enforcement, a complicated and unnecessarily cumbersome revocation process, and an unwarranted emphasis on the 'rights' of nursing home operators to the detriment of the rights of patients."

The report recommended:

—Comprehensive revision of federal standards that emphasize patient care. The answer is not in more regulations, but in making existing regulations clear and enforcing them swiftly, it said.

—Federal inspections for Medicaid certification, a procedure now left to the states.

—Legislation making abuse, neglect or mistreatment of a Medicare or Medicaid patient resulting in injury or death a federal criminal offense.

—Legislation barring nursing home operators from receiving federal funds if convicted of neglect, mistreatment or abuse of a Medicare or Medicaid patient.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK
Barbara Walters once related how she was invited to a state dinner in the Philippines. The dinner was to begin in ten minutes and Barbara had not brought along a long dress. She was about to decline the invitation when she had a flash. She would wear her red bathrobe, thus saving the day.

I have two acquaintances who have worn nightgowns to dinner parties. One was on the campaign trail and also didn't have a long dress and the other just thought her nightgown too pretty to waste in bed.

Don't those stories just turn your stomach? I don't have a nightgown in my drawer that would get me through an eighth grade prom — or a house call from my doctor, for that matter. Somehow, I cannot imagine myself showing up for a state dinner in the Philippines in a pair of blue scuffles, a flannel robe with a stomach button missing, spit-up on the shoulder (the baby is 18 years old) and pockets bulging from nose tissue that smells like vapo-rub.

I took a turn the other day through the lingerie department and frankly, I can see how they got away with it. I've never seen so many beautiful gowns and robes in my entire life.

"Here's one that's a luv," said the salesperson.

She held up a satin gown. (The last time I saw anything that narrow, there was toothpaste in it.)

"I'm afraid not. I have made it a rule of thumb that I do not wear anything to bed I have to wear a girdle under."

"What about this one?" she asked, holding up a transparent bit of nylon.

"I have also promised myself that I would never wear anything in bed that you had to wear a coat over."

"What did you have in mind?" she asked.

"Something with sleeves, a turtle-neck and a zip-in floor."

Then she held up a robe that was a knockout. Let me put it another way. If I had worn it to the ball when my husband was elected Governor, it's something I'd wear again to his inauguration as President.

"I'll take it," I said impishly.

Last weekend, I took the plunge and decided to wear it as an evening dress. As I entered the room all eyes were upon me when my husband looked up and said, "Hurry up and get dressed. We're leaving in ten minutes."

What'sa wanta bet? Barbara Walters could have worn the same thing and looked like a million dollars.

Mayors feel slighten

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's first federal spending plan reveals increased aid to financially strapped American cities, but an influential mayors' group says Carter "has ignored the need for new social initiatives," such as health insurance or welfare reform.

Carter's budget would increase funds in areas such as public works and community development, but Carter seeks cutbacks in programs to battle urban crime and he seeks no increase in job opportunities for teen-agers in the central cities.

Many mayors had hoped Carter would seek to put into effect the initial steps of a national health insurance program and a welfare reform package. However, Carter seeks funds only to conduct studies for such sweeping changes.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors, in a budget analysis released Saturday, said: "In many budget areas, important urban programs have been cut below fiscal 1977 levels or their growth restrained to rates of increase well below the inflation rate."

City officials say Carter may have deliberately short-changed the domestic programs, believing Congress would seek higher spending in these areas no matter what levels he set. In fact, Congress is expected to double Carter's request for $2 billion in public works jobs aid.

The mayors conference praised increases in community development and anti-recession aid, but said the Carter budget is inadequate for mass transit and youth employment needs.

Another urban lobby group, the larger and more conservative National League of Cities, expressed dismay at cuts in crime-fighting funds.

With summer approaching, city officials are afraid that continued high unemployment among city teen-agers could lead to trouble in the streets.

"No new funds are proposed for either the Title I jobs training program or the summer youth program," noted the League of Cities. "There is no recognition of the impact of inflation."

Big-city mayors who met with Carter during December came away with the impression "that he was extremely sensitive to the needs of the cities," says John Gunther, director of the Conference of Mayors. "Perhaps we were encouraged beyond reality."

FBI operates fence, recovers jewels, cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fencing operation run by police and the FBI for 14 months has recovered $2 million in stolen jewelry, securities, luxury cars and antiques, authorities announced Saturday. Federal arrest warrants were issued for 16 persons in five East Coast states.

The operation was conducted over 14 months from a $1,500-a-month hotel room in the plush Shoreham Americana hotel. Among the 64 expensive items purchased were such items as a irreplaceable antique mirror that had been stolen from the U.S. Capitol, $220,000 in municipal and corporate securities and a tractor-trailer with a load of over 1,000 cases of liquor.

The bogus fencing operation was the third conducted by law enforcement agencies in Washington in the last year. The others have resulted in 330 arrest warrants and 200 convictions.

The first operation was known as "The Sting" and the second as "GVA" for "Got You Again." The operation disclosed Saturday, which ran concurrently with the others, was called "Highroller."

Carter promises help

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who used to be one himself, has promised the nation's governors a ground-floor role in shaping federal programs, and they're giving it a try today.

Even California's skeptical Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who never bothered to come before, said the governors may have more clout with Carter in the White House.

Given the fact that we have a former governor as President, this may make the National Governors' Conference a more effective vehicle for national public policy," Brown said.

drought confronting the West

Governors from 17 western states conferred on Sunday and agreed to ask Carter for special, regional efforts to deal with the drought and the hardships it is creating. They want disaster relief loans, livestock feed assistance and increased farm price supports.

Gov. J. James Exon of Nebraska said he thinks the wheat price level should be raised from $2.25 a bushel, the current guarantee, to $2.85 or $3 to help farmers afflicted by the drought and to prevent a possible food shortage later.

"We want to develop a continuing partnership that will bring about the fullest possible participation of state government in the federal decision-making process," said Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, the conference chairman.

That's what Carter promised Not in 32 years, since the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, has a former governor held the White House, and Carter said he would not forget the lessons of his four years as governor of Georgia.

He scheduled two hours of a White House work session with the governors today, with Vice President Walter Mondale and the Cabinet also on hand. The governors will go back Tuesday night for a black-tie dinner with Carter.

The social visit is customary. The working session is not. In addition to that, at least eight members of the Cabinet are to meet with governors in separate committee sessions during their two-day conference.

The governors, from 48 states, with Missouri and Wyoming to be represented by other officials, assembled on Sunday, concentrating first on the problems presented by the severe winter weather and the Chief gets instructor certification

Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills has received his instructor certification from the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education.

The certification is for officers assigned to instruct and train police officers. Requirements are a minimum of five years police service and special training in instruction.

Another Pampa policeman, Officer Lynn Brown, received his basic certification from the Commission.

Basic certification is awarded after an officer has completed a prescribed training course and has one year police service, Mills said.

Tar Heels capture ACC championship

Harvesters set for playoff tilt

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The North Carolina Tar Heels pulled off a great double play over the weekend.

They won the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season title with a little help from North Carolina State, then beat Louisville with a lot of help from Phil Ford.

"It looked like we were worn out," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith after Sunday's nationally televised 96-89 victory over Louisville.

The Tar Heels had every right to be tired. They had beaten Duke 84-71 Saturday, then sweated through an emotionally draining day before finding out how Wake Forest would do that night.

The Deacons were upset by North Carolina State 91-85, thus giving the ACC championship to North Carolina.

Then, North Carolina defeated the nation's 10th-ranked club.

North Carolina led Louisville by as many as 22 points in the second half of the game at Charlotte, N.C., and led by Ford, held off a late Cardinals rally.

The brilliant guard scored 26 points and orchestrated the sensitive "Four Corner" offense for the ninth-ranked Tar Heels.

"It's hard to be ahead by 20 against such a good team like Louisville," Smith said. "Louisville is not going to fall over and play dead when they're down by 20."

Elsewhere in the Top 10 Saturday, No. 1 San Francisco squeezed past Portland University 95-92, No. 2 Kentucky defeated Alabama 85-70, No. 3 Michigan edged Michigan State 69-65 in overtime, No. 5 UCLA hammered California 91-69 and Georgia shocked No. 7 Tennessee 83-76.

In other games, No. 12 Providence stopped St. John's 69-66, No. 13 Minnesota nipped Illinois 72-70, No. 14 Cincinnati outscored Jacksonville 78-61, No. 15 Syracuse turned back Rutgers 82-72, No. 16 Detroit walloped

Cincinnati-Xavier 91-66, No. 17 Oregon edged Washington 61-60, No. 18 Marquette beat Virginia Tech 75-70, No. 19 Clemson embarrassed Roanoke 120-56, and New Mexico upset No. 20 Utah 81-77.

North Carolina held a 57-38 halftime lead and expanded that to 70-48 early in the second half before Louisville came back on the shooting of Wesley Cox and Rick Wilson, who led all scorers with 30 points.

But Ford scored crucial points, and freshman star Mike O'Koren, who also had 26, thwarted the Louisville comeback before a sellout crowd of 11,666 at the Charlotte Coliseum.

Saturday's victory and the first-place finish earned the Tar Heels a bye in the first round of the ACC playoffs, starting Thursday. North Carolina will play Friday night in the semifinals against the winner of the Maryland-North Carolina State game. Other first-round matchups include Wake Forest vs. Virginia and Clemson vs. Duke.

Bill Cartwright scored 33 points and led San Francisco on a 14-2 tear late in the game, helping the undefeated Dons beat Portland for their 29th straight victory this season. The big center had three baskets in the middle of the streak as the Dons rallied from an 11-point deficit against the underdog Pilots.

James Lee triggered a Kentucky that sent the Wildcats past Alabama and into sole possession of first place in the Southeastern Conference. This was accomplished by Tennessee's loss to Georgia.

Rickey Green scored 20 points, including a crucial basket in overtime, helping Michigan beat Michigan State.

Marques Johnson scored 37 points in his last home game in Pauley Pavilion, leading UCLA over California. UCLA's victory clinched a tie for the Pac-8 title. Walter Daniels and Curtis Jackson combined on a 10-point rally in the final two minutes as Georgia, the last-place team in the SEC, upset Tennessee.

Bruce Campbell scored 21 points, leading Providence over St. John's. Ray Williams sank two free throws with 30 seconds left, lifting Minnesota past Illinois. Brian Williams' 19 points led Cincinnati over Jacksonville. Syracuse defeated Rutgers as Jimmy Williams and Dale Shackelford teamed for 42 points.

John Long's 24 points paced Detroit over Cincinnati-Xavier. Ernie Kent scored the last four points for Oregon, helping the Ducks defeat Washington and remain mathematically alive in the Pac-8 race.

Butch Lee scored 22 points and Bo Ellis connected for 18, leading Marquette past VPI. Colin Abraham had 23 points in only 20 minutes, pacing Clemson's rout of Roanoke. Michael Cooper's 24 points, including four free throws in the final 15 seconds, helped New Mexico defeat Utah.

Elsewhere, three major conferences started post-season tournaments — the Big Eight, Southwest and Southern.

Tickets for Tuesday's Class AAAA bi-district basketball encounter between Pampa and Hereford are on sale at the Pampa school business office, 321 W. Albert.

Ticket prices for the 8 p.m. contest, scheduled to be played in the West Texas State University Fieldhouse, are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Pampa, 24-5, is in the bi-district game for the third straight year. The 3-AAAA champions lost to Lubbock Monterey and Lubbock Coronado in their past two appearances.

Hereford is in the state playoffs for the first time since 1960. The upstart Whitefaces, 22-11, whipped Plainview 50-39 for the 4-AAAA championship Friday in Canyon.

Hereford used a delay game throughout the contest to keep Plainview, which had a big height advantage, from going inside to its taller players. The delay was untypical of Hereford's play for most of this season, but Pampa Coach Robert McPherson expects to see it again Tuesday.

"It gave them a rebounding edge against Plainview," McPherson said, "and I look for them to come out in the same thing against us. It was effective against Plainview."

"We're going to try to take the ball inside and play good defense and stop the penetration by their guards and screen the boards real well. Other keys to winning will be to stay out of foul trouble — keep our five best ones on the floor — and we need to run our fast break."

Hereford is paced by 6-1 leaper James Mays, who scored 12 points against Plainview, six under Kelly Kitchens and 6-3 Kenneth Mercer have been other Whiteface standouts this season.

Pampa is led by guard Rayford Young, averaging nearly 18 points per game for the season. Other Harvester starters are 6-4 forwards Don Hughes and Rusty Ward, 6-4 post Rickey Buntun and 6-3 guard Brian Bailey.

Mercer is Hereford's tallest starter.

"Hereford is similar to Clovis (which Pampa beat in the Clovis, N.M., tournament en route to the championship). They're not real big. I feel like we'll beat them."

"But, of course, they've won 22 ball games so they must be doing something right. If they get a lead on you and run that delay, they can beat anybody."

Pampa's fast-breaking offense will contrast to Hereford's style of play.

SWC winners advance

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The four winners in the first round of the Southwest Conference postseason basketball tournament have the common goal of meeting Arkansas next Saturday night in the Houston Summit.

But no one seems to be mentioning the sixth-ranked Razorbacks. Players and coaches are either following the old adage about "taking them one at a time" or they are trying not to think about how they can beat a team that won 16 games without a loss in conference games.

Houston, the favorite to survive the elimination rounds and meet Arkansas, rode Otis Birdsong's 36 points to a 111-67 swamping Saturday night of Texas Christian, which lost its 21st straight game. Other first round games saw Texas Tech mash Rice 93-74, Texas A&M outgouge Southern Methodist 89-79 and upstart Baylor beat Texas 72-70.

Thursday pairings include Houston against A&M and Texas Tech versus Baylor. The Thursday winners at the Summit meet Friday and that survivor takes on a rested Arkansas Saturday night.

Rather than talk about Arkansas, Texas A&M senior Steve Jones, who scored 24 points against SMU to go along with Wally Swanson's 26, reserved his praise for Houston.

"If we're going all the way, we might as well play the best first," he said.

Texas Tech took a 12-point lead at intermission over Rice despite hitting 35 per cent in the first half. Then the Red Raiders shot at a 61 per cent clip in the second half to blow the eighth-place lay behind Mike Russell's 20 points.

Tech Coach Gerald Myers might have been tempted to talk about the possibility of meeting Houston or Arkansas later in the tournament since Baylor, his next opponent, is only 11-15 for the season. But Myers won't fall in that trap.

"Baylor is playing well," he said. "They seem better prepared than they were earlier in the year."

Baylor won only five of 16 conference games but has played well of late under new Coach Jim Haller.

Texas got 24 points from Jim Krivacs and 22 from Ron Baxter but no points in the last 2:57 as Baylor fought back from a 70-66 deficit to score the final six points in the game. Sherman Patton swished a jumper with two seconds remaining to win it.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't looking forward to playing Texas Tech in the tournament," said Haller. "It'll be a neutral court and we could have beaten them in Lubbock last week."

Texas Coach Abe Lemons and Haller also paid a parting blast to the officiating of Billy Cowan and Tommy Taylor in the game.

"I couldn't believe some of the things that happened tonight," Lemons said. "I don't know how their consciences keep from bothering them."

Baylor University had graded Billy Cowan and I graded Tommy Taylor lower than any official we had this year. I don't see how they can assign those guys to a game like this," Haller said.

Division I colleges playing basketball have built 82 new arenas in the past 10 years.

Southern Cal has won more bowl games than any major football team. Their record was 15-6 before meeting Michigan in the Jan. 1, 1977 Rose Bowl game.

Both Billy Newton of Morgan State and Kent Andrews of McNeese State set basketball free throw percentage records last season. Each dropped 85 shots in 90 attempts.

Nicklaus blazes to Inverrary win

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "I sort of steamrolled ahead," was the way Jack Nicklaus explained his 61st PGA tournament title, in the $250,000 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

The game's 37-year-old master fell one shot behind playing partner Gary Player on the eighth hole Sunday, then out-shot Player by seven shots on the next nine holes and finished five shots ahead of the South African to claim $50,000.

"I really don't think I'm a great frontrunner," said Nicklaus, who entered the day a shot ahead of Gil Morgan and two up on Player.

"Once I got one shot behind (with consecutive bogeys on Nos. 7 and 8), I just made up my mind and played more aggressive. I played better being behind at that point," said Nicklaus, who had a closing two-under 70.

Where Nicklaus really won the tournament was on the 532-yard 15th hole. He got an eagle three with a 30-foot putt to move four shots ahead and said, "I figured I could just walk home from here."

"I played the hole with two eagles, a birdie and one lousy par," said Nicklaus, who finished at 13-under 275 for 72 holes at Inverrary Golf and Country Club.

The five strokes he picked up on 15 was the margin of victory over Player, who ended at eight-under 280 to claim $28,500.

Nicklaus credits rotund comedian Gleason with his success on 15 — he had two eagles and two birdies on the hole last year when he won the Tournament Players Championship here by three strokes.

He said Gleason reminded him before the TCP that his downfall in four previous events had been failure to score well on 15. Nicklaus said he had approached the hole with a d d e d determination ever since.

Nicklaus, now tied with Ben Hogan for second on the all-time victory list behind Sam Snead's 84 triumphs, will skip this week's Florida Citrus Open at Orlando but play the next three tournaments to prepare for the April 7-10 Masters.

He is the first established veteran to win this year. Previous winners on the West Coast were Bruce Lietzke twice, Tom Watson twice, Jerry Pate and Tom Purtzer.

"It seems to be a solid pattern every year," said Nicklaus, who played in only two previous tournaments and made $4,600. The young guys come out in January ready to play.

Gil Morgan, Jim Simons and Fuzzy Zoeller each earned $13,250 for third place. Morgan, a shot behind Nicklaus entering the round, had a four-over-76 to finish at six-under 282, while Simons closed with a 70 and Zoeller at 73.

Hubert Green was another shot back to earn $9,000.

76ers string Seattle 93-85

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia 76ers' front court doesn't start and end with two players after all.

There is more to that National Basketball Association team than Julius Erving and George McGinnis.

Caldwell Jones made his presence felt Sunday, dominating inside play with 15 rebounds and six blocked shots, as the 76ers whipped the Seattle SuperSonics 93-85.

"I thought this was a tremendous game defensively for us, especially the job that Jones did," said Philadelphia Coach Gene Shue. "Defense is something that we've lacked in the last few games."

McGinnis and Erving also were noticeable, of course. McGinnis tied Jones for the high in rebounds and Erving led the 76ers with 22 points.

In other NBA games, the Golden State Warriors defeated the New York Nets 104-98, the Denver Nuggets walloped the Boston Celtics 121-100, the San Antonio Spurs blasted the New Orleans Jazz 135-118, the Washington Bullets whipped the Buffalo Braves 117-105, and the Los Angeles Lakers edged the Houston Rockets 106-101.

Warriors 104, Nets 98

Phil Smith scored nine of his game-high 24 points in the final six minutes, rallying Golden State past the Nets. The Warriors blew a 15-point lead before making their comeback.

Willie Mays No. 2?

By The Associated Press

Say hey, who is that in a California Angels' uniform? Why, it is Willie Mays Willie Mays Hicens, that is.

The Angels' rookie not only is a sound-alike for the former great outfielder who played for the San Francisco Giants and New York Mets, but is a look-alike — judging from the way he hit Sunday.

Hicens, a first baseman who was the 1976 Texas League home run champion at El Paso, hit a towering homer as the Angels held a full-scale workout at their Holtville, Calif., camp.

Outfielder Joe Rudi, a celebrated free-agent acquisition in the off-season, made his spring training camp debut as Sherry welcomed 46 players to the workout.

Other spring training camps also were in full swing.

The world champion Cincinnati Reds, joined by a dissatisfied Pete Rose, held their first workouts over the weekend. Rose, who has threatened to play out the option year of his contract, joined 29 pitchers and catchers.

Bye, bye, curb

In an effort to beautify Pampa and align Cuyler Street at Browning, a city worker digs out the present curb. A new curb has been poured and overhead streetlight have been installed. The park on the northwest corner of the intersection is a joint project of the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation and the city.

The foundation provided the money; the city donated the brown. Trees have been planted and a sprinkler system installed. The foundation will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in M.K. Brown Auditorium Green Room to discuss completion of the park.

Hollywood contracts for 'rich kids' story

ALICE, Tex. (AP) — Percy Garcia, 16, and Dean Bridges, 15, who found half a million dollars in the ground, did not know how to handle it and finally had it taken by police, may strike it rich again.

What the Internal Revenue has taken, Hollywood will return, says Antonio Santillan, a Los Angeles movie producer who has the two youths under contract for rights to a movie. It will be based on the bizarre events that followed the day in January when the two boys dug the money out of the ground on a farm run by Bridges' father.

Garcia and Bridges, two Alice High School sophomores, took off on a spending spree that ended two days later when police stopped them in Waco, 200 miles from Alice, for a traffic violation.

Santillan, who says he produced "Dirty Mary, Crazy Larry," hopes to make a 20th Century Huckleberry Finn version. Authorities are still trying to determine the origin of the money, Bridges' father, James Hiram, (Bridges lives with his stepfather) has chosen to go to jail rather than answer questions about it and investigators speculate that it could be "drug money." The IRS has placed a $300,000 on the money which now rests in a Waco bank.

Bridges has said he got into a fight with his father, decided to run away, went to Garcia's home and asked him to go with him. The two went to the ranch where Bridges had "seen someone bury something months earlier" and dug up an ice chest with the money.

Then they tried to get as far away from Alice as they could. They were stopped driving a brand new car, carrying a pistol and a small amount of marijuana and $486,000 in two suitcases.

Santillan, who said he has another movie coming out next month with Evel Knevel, explained that the boys' story would be one of "two kids to whom something happened that does not happen in 20,000 lifetimes. They come upon this large sum of money and don't even know how to handle it."

Apparently they did not. They took a bus to Dallas, gave huge tips, left the suitcases under the bed, went shopping and bought things like six pairs of jeans and six sweat-shirts, could not decide between a $20 and $120 camera, bought a car off a showroom, and "smoked some joints and got stoned."

Santillan says it does not sound like something Mark

Twain wrote, "but this is another century and the values are different."

Percy and Bridges have been close friends for years. "He doesn't lie. He is OK," Percy said of his friend. "He would come to my house and spend days with me and I would go to his home and we would go hunting together."

Bridges turned to Garcia to after the fight with his father.

"He asked me if I would go away with him if he found some money, I said yes. We went and dug up the money and went to the bus station. He told me 'you weren't lying about going with me' and I said, 'you weren't lying about the money,'" Garcia said.

Santillan, who has accompanied the youths almost constantly in recent weeks, said the boys have been threatened. "It was a good thing they got caught. If they had gone on to Chicago or somewhere else they probably would have been killed eventually," he stated.

Garcia and Bridges have become well known in recent weeks. "I feel strange about all this," Garcia said from a hotel room where he is staying with Santillan still a bit skeptical about the possibility of movies and books on what happened to them. "I still want to go back to school."

The two were expelled from school for truancy.

Santillan says a trust will be set up for the boys. Speculation on the possible illegal origin of the money comes from the fact that Alice is at the crossroads of the marijuana pipelines from the Mexican border only 90 miles south.

"I asked law enforcement officers how many backyards in the area could have treasures like these boys found and they told me 75 to 200," Santillan said.

McGEE "WINS 20" WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-four golfers won more than $100,000 on the 1976 PGA tour and Jerry McGee was among them with $130,986, good for 16th place behind Jack Nicklaus' $266,438.

Names in the news

By The Associated Press
WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip received an enthusiastic welcome to New Zealand's capital city Saturday afternoon.

More than 8,000 people thronged Wellington's civic square for the Queen and Prince Philip's 20-minute walk among flag-waving children and applauding adults.

The royal couple is touring Commonwealth countries for two weeks in honor of the 25th anniversary of the queen's coronation.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Clennon King, who drew nationwide attention when he tried to integrate President Carter's church in Plains, has qualified to run for the congressional seat vacated by U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young.

The Rev. Mr. King, from Albany, Ga., said he would establish his residence in Young's district by checking into an Atlanta hotel.

King is the seventh candidate to qualify for the election March 15.

A state election supervisor said Friday the minister qualified for the election as a pauper, signing an affidavit certifying he cannot pay the $1,300 registration fee.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Television host Johnny Carson says he welcomed the election of President Carter because it gives comedians fresh material.

"I'm glad they found a school for Amy," he told a news conference. "Now they're looking for one for Billy."

Carson, host of the "Tonight" show, visited Harvard University to receive the Hasty Pudding Society's "Man of the Year" award.

The presentation took place at the premiere of the theatrical society's 129th annual production, "Cardinal Knowledge," a spoof of medieval times.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter will receive a specially tailored "jungle" print long dress from Puerto Rico's first lady, Kate Romero, at a White House luncheon next Monday.

The cotton and dacron caftan, with a bold and colorful hand-screened print depicting the giant ferns of the island's El Yunque rain forest, was created by the Puerto Rico Design Institute.

Mrs. Romero will make the presentation at a luncheon for the wives of the governors of the 50 states and Puerto Rico, government officials said. She is accompanying her husband, Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo, to the winter meeting of the National Governors' Conference.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lowell Birrell, a 70-year-old former tycoon who admitted swindling stockholders out of $14 million, has been ordered to serve a one-year sentence in the Rikers Island Hospital.

Birrell, who has a heart condition, had constructed an empire that included some 40 companies and was valued at $60 million. But after 1957, when he fled the country to avoid a criminal investigation, his fortunes — and fortunes — faded.

Birrell said Friday that he is penniless and is supported by a 30-year-old son who earns $150 to $200 a week as a waiter.

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — America's newest attack submarine dropped its anchor — and lost it.

Crew members of the U.S.S. Philadelphia said the sleek 360-foot sub had completed its second sea trial when it decided to anchor outside New London harbor Thursday night because the Thames River near the Navy's submarine base was foggy.

The anchor was dropped, its chain slid free and followed the anchor to the bottom of Long Island Sound, crew members said. They said the Philadelphia circled in the Sound until Friday morning.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Ada County authorities raided the Idaho State Capitol looking for illegal gambling this week.

What they found, according to Ada County Atty. David Leroy, were two lobbyists playing cards in a lounge reserved for their use.

Leroy said no money or score card was found during the Friday raid and that no charges were filed.

He said the raid was arranged after Terry Pederson, a spokesman for Gaming Inc., complained that lobbyists were gambling in the area.

Pederson said he made the complaint to show that illegal gambling was going on in Idaho despite the constitutional ban against it.

The Senate had killed a measure sponsored by Pederson's group to legalize gambling in the state.

ELYSIAN, Minn. (AP) — Elysian's part-time dog catcher has quit, suggesting the bark of people is worse than the threat of being bitten by dogs.

Wayne Cowdin, dog catcher at nearby Janesville, was engaged by the Elysian City Council to pick up a week for three weeks. Members thought if a few dogs were picked up, the community problem of dogs running loose might be eased.

Cowdin gave it a try. But on his second professional visit to Elysian, he had picked up two dogs when a woman resident told him off in language that would have made a sailor blush.

Cowdin let his two captive dogs loose and returned to Janesville.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A wayward Valentine's Day card caused a marital spat until a postal worker stepped in with an alibi for the husband.

It began when the husband, whose name was not released, mailed the card in Concord. Under new procedures, the postal service sent the card to Manchester, 20 miles to the south, for sorting and post-marking.

The valentine arrived a day late, and the wife also asked her husband what he was doing in Manchester.

After she threatened to leave him, he asked the Post Office for an explanation. A postal employee didn't explain why it took five days for the woman to get the valentine, but did explain how the card, and not her husband, got to Manchester.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Whoever took fireman Charles Paul's helmet may wish he hadn't. It was found in the rubble of a house that burned.

Someone stole Paul's prized helmet two years ago from the back seat of his car during a busy night of calls.

Last Sunday, fire fighters looking at the scene of a house fire found the white helmet. The residents had no explanation how it got there.

Paul, who was given the helmet as an honor when he was promoted to chief of the 7th Battalion, said it "is like a diamond. It's really something to be proud of."

After he lost it, his four sons chipped in to buy him another one.

Carter pushes for ERA ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter, who wants to be remembered as a president who helped eliminate sex discrimination, has mounted a quiet campaign for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The command post is a tiny office on the second floor of the White House, where presidential assistant Mark Siegel is keeping close watch over three key states that vote soon on the amendment.

Thirty-five states have ratified ERA and three more are needed by March 22, 1979, for the amendment to become part of the Constitution.

Three states — Nebraska, Tennessee and Idaho — have rescinded their ratification votes, but the legality of that move has not been tested and is not expected to be challenged until the required 38 ratification votes, including those three, are collected.

The Carter forces hope that North Carolina, Florida and Oklahoma will put it over the top.

Before he was nominated, Carter promised a group of women leaders that he would push for ratification. Just as Lyndon Johnson is remembered for his efforts to end racial discrimination, Carter added, he wants to be known for his fight against sex discrimination.

Siegel, a deputy assistant to the President for policy planning, compares Carter's endorsement of the ERA to his recent letter of support for Russian dissident Andrei Sakharov.

While the President's feelings on Soviet human rights are now well known, Siegel said in an interview, "it's also not unusual for him to make a statement on human rights in America. He classifies the ERA as a positive statement on human rights."

The 30-year-old Siegel, is a former executive director of the Democratic National Committee.

White House efforts in Nevada on behalf of the ERA were unsuccessful earlier this month when the amendment was defeated in the state legislature. The President had sent telegrams to all state senators and most of the assembly, he called three senators who were wavering and he spoke twice with Gov. Mike O'Callaghan.
