Reagan elected president in landslide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Wilson Reagan won the White House on the crest of a conservative tide that swept Republicans to control of the Senate for the first time in 26 years and gave the president-elect a landslide mandate for his promises of a tougher America abroad and less government at home.

"I am not frightened by what lies ahead," Reagan told a victory celebration at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles, promising to "tap that great American spirit."

President Carter congratulated Reagan and pledged "our fullest support and cooperation in bringing about an orderly transition of government."

"I can't stand here tonight and tell you it doesn't hurt," Carter told supporters at a Washington hotel.

Reagan and running mate George Bush led from the earliest returns on Tuesday and it quickly became clear that their triumph was a prelude to a sweeping shift in the American political balance of power.

The GOP ticket had courted Democrats — Jews, blue-collar workers and big city residents — and his strategy paid off, according to polling data that showed Reagan capturing a substantial share of those voters.

As the returns flowed in, the magnitude of Reagan's victory was clear in the electoral vote tally which gave the Republican nominee 469 to 49 for Carter when only two states with a total of 20 remained to be decided.

Republicans captured 10 Democratic Senate seats and were leading in the race for one other, assuring them at least a 51-49 majority and control for the first time since 1954. The GOP also could gain more than 40 House seats, but needed 59 to take control of that body.

Among the last races to be decided — all in the GOP's favor — were in Wisconsin, where former Rep. Robert Kasten defeated veteran Sen. Gaylord Nelson; in Alaska, where Frank Murkowski defeated Clark Gruening for the seat held by Sen. Mike Gravel, who lost to Gruening in the Democratic primary; and in North Carolina where John P. East defeated Sen. Robert Morgan.

The Democrats, in contrast, were threatening only the seat held by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., whose 1964 presidential campaign was Reagan's first taste of national politics.

A Reagan presidency, promising one of the sharpest ideological shifts of this century, thus would be aided by a more conservative Congress, even with the Democrats still in the majority.

Reagan wants to remove most government restraints on private industry as the surest way of solving the nation's energy problems. He says one of his principal goals is to "take the government off the backs of the American people."

Reagan pledged during his campaign that one of his first acts as president would be to sign an executive order placing a freeze on federal hiring.

One of president-elect's top aides said Tuesday that another of Reagan's first acts after taking office would be to send Congress his plan for a 30 percent cut in income tax rates to be phased in over three years.

"There has never been a more humbling moment in my life," Reagan told cheering supporters. "Even if it had been the cliffhanger that all of us I think were expecting, it would have been the same way."

It never was a cliffhanger. It was clear from the earliest returns on Tuesday that Reagan was on his way to a major victory. He carried every one of the big battleground states.

One after another they fell in his column: Michigan, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Illinois and, finally, California.

Reagan shattered Carter's hold on his native South Texas, Florida, Virginia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky all went for the Republican nominee. Four years ago, Carter carried every southern state except Virginia.

Among blue collar voters, another traditionally Democratic bloc avidly courted by Reagan, the Republican nominee ran ahead of Carter 48 percent to 45 percent.

Sleepy vote-counters delay final tally

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

The unusual method of tallying of ballots for Precinct 11 will not affect the election outcome or the legality of votes cast at M. K. Brown Auditorium during the 1980 General Election Tuesday, District Attorney Harold Comer said today.

At 2:30 a.m. today, a check on the Precinct 11 — the last one to report — by Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter revealed the election judge Art Rankin had allowed one vote-counting crew, which had been working since 7 a.m., to go home at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday. The remaining two crews were tired and wanted to finish counting the ballots later today, Mrs. Carter said.

Rushing to the polling place at M. K. Brown, Mrs. Carter and members of her office helped the remaining counters to finish tallying the votes. The tally was completed about 5:30 a.m. today. Last night, the county clerk was concerned with the legality of allowing the counting crew to leave and the legality of others coming in to complete the counting process.

In Article 8.19 of the Texas Election Code states, "After the polls have closed, the counting of votes shall proceed continuously until all of the votes are counted and the returns are properly certified and signed."

Also Article 3.04, Subd. 1, a 1969 amendment to the election code, says any person holding a "lucrative office" is disqualified from acting as a clerk or watcher in an election held by a county, city, school district, etc.

Comer said "There is a conspicuous absence of any punishment" for this portion of the code. He said it was "more of a directory," since non-compliance with that portion of the code does not carry a fine or prison term.

"It would not disenfranchise the voter because of a minor discrepancy in the way the votes were counted," the district attorney said. "It wouldn't invalidate any votes that are cast."

Local election officials were amazed with the large turnout of Tuesday's general election.

Mrs. Carter said almost 75 percent of the Gray County voters went to the polls. A total of 10,215 of the 13,777 registered voters cast ballots at the 14 county precincts or voted absentee, according to the county clerk's figures.

Agreeing with the trend throughout the nation, the newly-elected president, Ronald Reagan, led the presidential race in the county with 7,187 votes. President Jimmy Carter received 2,785. John Anderson and Ed Clark totaled 103 and 73 votes respectively.

Other Gray County contested race results were:

—U. S. Representative — Ron Slover, 5,635; Jack Hightower, 4,384.

—State Senator — Bob Price, 4,494; Bill Sarpalius, 5,509.

—Railroad Commissioner — Henry C. Grover, 5,683; Buddy Temple, 3,599.

—Unexpired term Railroad Commissioner — "Doc" Blanchard, 4,938; Jim Nugent, 4,215; David Hutzelman, 91.

—Associate Justice of Supreme Court, Place 1 — Jim Brady, 5,222; Jim Wallace, 3,966.

—Associate Supreme Court Justice — Will Garwood, 5,365; C. E. Ray, 3,742.

Gray County voters approved five of the nine proposed constitutional amendments. Those passed in the county were for the unmanned teller machines, charity bingo games, governor to remove appointed officers, private road work by counties under 5,000 population; and spouses' right to agree on separate property.

United Way to wrap up drive

The Pampa United Way will conduct its final report meeting at 4 p.m. Thursday at Citizen's Bank and Trust.

The meeting will be the final wrap-up for this year's campaign. Those with contributions to report are urged to attend.

Area voters give nod to Reagan, Sarpalius

Panhandle counties of Roberts, Wheeler, and Hemphill reported voting at the polls in record numbers, giving the Republican candidate Ronald Reagan and Democrat candidate Bill Sarpalius a majority vote, following national and state trends.

In the Panhandle race for U.S. 13th Congressional District seat, defeated Republican candidate Ron Slover ran an early tight race. In Gray and Roberts Counties the race went to Slover, with Hemphill and Wheeler Counties eventually defeating Slover. Incumbent Jack Hightower was announced the winner in the final tally.

In a media blitz campaign for the 31st Senatorial District race, Democrat Bill Sarpalius, newcomer to the political arena, was awarded the senatorial seat in a commanding victory over incumbent Republican Bob Price.

Sarpalius took the counties of Hemphill, Roberts, and Wheeler by a commanding two-to-one lead.

Pampa 'mugging' mars widow's trip to new life

Lisa Ann Burnley won't soon forget Pampa, Texas.

According to police reports, at 12:30 a.m. today on the south side of a convenience store at 300 N. Hobart, Mrs. Burnley of Mobile, Ala., was approached by a young white man who thrust a knife to her throat and demanded her money. The hijacker told her, "If you scream, I'll cut your throat," police said today.

The man then grabbed her purse and struck her in the face, bloodying her lip. Emptying the purse on the ground, the attacker took $310 and fled to a vehicle waiting about a half a block from the scene.

Mrs. Burnley had arrived at the bus station here late Tuesday evening only to find her luggage was on a different bus and would not arrive for some time.

The recently-widowed woman was on her way to Enid, Okla., to make a new life for herself, after the death of her husband three months ago. Mr. Burnley had been a construction worker in Mobile, Ala.

At his death, he had left Mrs. Burnley with $18,000 which she said she used to pay all their debts and to travel on the remainder of the legacy.

When she arrived in Pampa, she had the $310 and dreams of "starting over" in Enid — a town she had seen only once, but which, for some reason, held a special appeal for her.

Fortunately, all Mrs. Burnley's dealings with Pampa are not all bad. At 2:10 p.m. today, she will be back on the bus to Enid with a ticket provided by the Red Cross. Extra money was provided by the agency, the Salvation Army and from a fund raised by members of the Pampa Police Department.

Joyce Roberts of the Red Cross said the widow is optimistic that once she arrives in Enid, she will be able to take care of herself. Mrs. Roberts said Mrs. Burnley told her she is a practical nurse and has never had any problem finding a job.

Hostage negotiation through media refused

The Associated Press

The United States rejected Iran's demand for a speedy response via the media to its terms for release of the 52 American hostages and sought clarification of the conditions set Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Majlis, Iran's parliament.

"We are not negotiating through the newspapers," State Department spokesman John Trantner said Tuesday after Algeria's ambassador in Washington delivered Iran's request that the U.S. government "speedily announce" its reply to the Iranian Parliament's conditions for the hostages' release and "notify the peoples of the world through the mass media of this matter."

Trantner said the United States was seeking clarification of the terms and gave no indication when there would be a formal U.S. response to them.

"We will move forward expeditiously," he said, "but we will do it deliberately and with care."

President Carter sent a message to Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai through the Swiss ambassador in Tehran Monday, the day after the Majlis vote, but Rajai said it was a "statement concerning some generalities which did not address the issue of our conditions."

He said if the United States did not accept the conditions, "we will firmly stand by our position."

An official in Rajai's public relations office said Ronald Reagan's election will have no effect on Iran's position on the hostages.

"Iran's stand on the question is clear," he told The Associated Press in Beirut by telephone. "It is up to the United States to accept or reject. It doesn't make any difference to us who the president is."

The terms set by Khomeini, the leader of Iran's revolutionary regime, and the Majlis are a pledge from the United States not to interfere in Iranian affairs, cancellation of all American lawsuits and other legal claims against Iran, release the billions of dollars in Iranian assets frozen in U.S. banks and the return to Iran of the assets of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his close relatives.

Today was the hostages' 368th day in captivity, the second day of the second year.

Rajai spoke Tuesday to the thousands who thronged the grounds of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for a demonstration celebrating the first anniversary of seizure of the embassy and its staff by young Islamic militants.

The prime minister told the crowd that regardless of the outcome of the crisis, the United States will remain Iran's No. 1 enemy and "continue its assault against us."

He said the seizure of the embassy on Nov. 4, 1979, while the shah was undergoing cancer treatment in New York, was "the best thing that could have happened to us since it made us see that we had to stand on our own feet."

"The very same people who imagined that if the Americans left, all our enterprises and organizations would come to a standstill, have come to the conclusion that we do not need America or its mercenaries," he said.

The demonstrators swarmed around the 27-acre embassy compound, but the militant occupying it did not allow them to enter the buildings where the hostages are believed held.

Weather

It will be fair weather and sunny skies for the day after election, with temperatures in the 70s and overnight temperatures dropping to the mid 40s. Winds will be 10-15 mph today, gusting on Thursday. The high for Tuesday was recorded at 71 degrees.

BALLOT BOXES DELIVERED. Gay Kuempel, an election worker with Precinct 3, delivers ballot boxes to the Gray County Clerk's office Tuesday night after tallying votes for the precinct. The final tally from Gray County was not complete until about 5:30 a.m. today after employees with the Gray County Clerk's office assisted in counting votes for Precinct 11, M. K. Brown Auditorium, where one vote-counting team had been sent home early. The practice is "unusual," according to District Attorney Harold Comer, but will not affect the legality of the votes or the vote count.

How Reagan won

Win came after shift to Carter record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was Sept. 4 and as Ronald Reagan's chartered jet carried him toward Florida and Louisiana, his campaign was in trouble, beset by a series of stumbles in its early days.
His once-huge lead in the polls after July's Republican convention was shrinking and Reagan was on the defensive after a flap about his policy toward Taiwan, his declaration that the Vietnam War was a noble cause and his attempt to link President Carter to the Ku Klux Klan.
In retrospect, Reagan's strategists now view that trip as the turning point in the campaign, the day they began to shift the focus from Reagan's missteps to the Carter administration's record.
In the two-state southern swing, Reagan accused Carter of leaking military secrets about new bomber technology for political gain — to show that U.S. defenses were not in the bad shape that Reagan claimed.
The charges coincided with the start of a congressional investigation of the news leak, and the issue suddenly dominated the headlines and threw the president on the defensive.
The Sept. 4 trip also marked the first day that Stuart Spencer, a savvy Republican strategist and manager of former President Gerald R. Ford's 1976 race, began traveling on the candidate's plane. He steered Reagan away from trouble and picked up political intelligence from old allies.

From the beginning, Reagan's strategy was to attack Carter's record on the economy and inflation, particularly in big midwestern and northeastern states where layoffs in the auto and steel industries, as well as in coal mines, pushed state unemployment rates above the national average.
Reagan knew he had to convince blue-collar workers and other traditional Democrats to desert their party. He pledged to beat inflation and give them a 30 percent tax cut over three years.
He also vowed to bolster America's prestige throughout the world and to make America a militarily strong country that adversaries would be forced to respect.
Reagan also paid careful attention to the South. In particular he made repeated trips to Texas and Florida, hoping to crack the regional base that helped put Carter in the White House in 1976.
In the end, Reagan carried every southern state except Carter's native Georgia.
The debate with Carter a week before the election was a boost for Reagan, his strategists said. "It added to the momentum and put to rest the question of competence and compassion," Wirthlin said.
The one remaining worry, the Reagan strategists said, was an "October surprise" such as release of the American hostages in Iran. It didn't happen, although two days before the election the Iranian Parliament set terms for the hostages' release.

How Carter lost

War, economy and peace hurt Jimmy

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the end, the campaign boiled down to two main issues: the economy and war and peace. Both worked against Jimmy Carter.
Carter couldn't overcome his own record and he failed to convince the voters that Ronald Reagan was too reckless and right-wing to occupy the Oval Office.
His last chance may have been the televised debate a week before the election — a one-on-one confrontation that Carter had insisted on.
The reassuring image of the Republican nominee projected before an audience of more than 100 million belied Carter's efforts to portray Reagan as trigger-happy.
As he was restoring luster to his own image, Reagan attacked the president on the economy where he was most vulnerable, asking voters whether they were better off or worse than they were four years ago.
Inflation stood at 12.7 percent and unemployment at 7.5 percent. Fifty-two Americans had been held hostage in Iran for a year.
Within 48 hours, Carter knew the situation was desperate. During a week-long campaign blitz, he tried frantically to refocus the spotlight on Reagan.
At first, it worked. Carter campaign polls had shown him trailing Reagan by 3-4 points after the debate. But by Saturday, the president held a slight 0.3 percent lead.
Overnight, it fizzled: Sunday's polls revealed that the president was down by 2-5 points. By Monday — the day after Carter had temporarily suspended campaigning to assess the conditions set by Iran for release of the hostages — the outcome was inevitable: he trailed by 7-10 points.

In the pre-dawn hours of Election Day, as Air Force One flew to Plains, Ga., for Carter to cast his own ballot, press secretary Jody Powell ordered a drink and braced himself to deliver the omen to his boss.
Before the president voted, he knew.
He may have suspected even before his weekend surge.
On Thursday, there was a small crowd for the president's appearance at a Polish club in Philadelphia and only polite applause from Jewish leaders when Carter made his strongest pledge ever in support of Israel.
On Friday, in Florida, Carter admitted the outcome was in doubt. And one of his most trusted advisers told reporters aboard Air Force One the campaign was suffering a "pause in momentum."
The post-mortem offered by Carter's aides blamed the defeat on the hostage stalemate and dual problems of inflation and recession.
Blaming inflation and unemployment on increases in oil prices, Carter played up his achievements on energy and the Middle East and stressed the necessity for calmness and stability in the Oval Office.
Carter admitted he had made mistakes, and declared himself wiser for his on-the-job training.
But in the end, the man who won his job in 1976 as an outsider lost it four years later because he had become the ultimate insider.

Wright scores: Eckhardt loses squeaker

Associated Press Writer
House Majority Leader Jim Wright weathered a Ronald Reagan landslide and emerged with a lopsided victory that swamped a determined Republican challenge and enhanced his already powerful position in Congress.
But while Wright scored a clear and decisive win, one incumbent lost and two others found their political fortunes clouded until they eked out wins in late returns early Wednesday morning.
Incumbent Bob Eckhardt, a liberal Democrat whose traditionally Democratic 8th District in Houston has become increasingly conservative, lost a squeaker by two percentage points to Republican Jack Fields.
Democratic incumbent Jim Mattox overtook Republican challenger Tom Pauken in late returns and scored a slim 51 percent to 49 percent win in the see-saw battle for the 5th District in Dallas County.
Republican incumbent Ron Paul, assisted by the lopsided Reagan win in Harris County, nudged Democrat and political newcomer Mike Andrews by 2 percentage points in the Houston area's 22nd District.
Wright, who had crushed every opponent in his 26 years in the House, needed a solid win Tuesday to bolster his contemplated bid to succeed House Speaker Tip O'Neill if the Massachusetts Democrat retires in two years.
He was targeted for defeat by the Republican National Committee and faced a well-financed and determined challenger in Republican Jim Bradshaw.
Wright got 62 percent of the vote.
"We proved here in Tarrant County that people power is more important than money power any day," Wright told supporters at a victory party in Fort Worth Tuesday night.
Wright said the lopsided margin would bolster his chances to succeed O'Neill, but he said he did not look forward to the speaker's retirement.
"I am not looking forward to Tip's retirement ... if he's still speaker 10 years from now and a pall bearer at my funeral I'll be happy," said Wright.
The House majority leader said he did not believe he would have problems working with a Republican president.
"... I've worked with three already," said Wright.
"We may have a Republican administration, but we still have a Democratic Congress," Wright said before it was known the Republicans had gained control of the U.S. Senate.
Former State Sen. Ralph Hall, a Democrat from Rockwall, said he had to "survive a Reagan landslide in Smith and Gregg" counties to record his narrow win over Republican John Wright of Tyler in the race to succeed retiring U.S. Rep. Ray Roberts of McKinney.

"I knew from the time the landslide began we had a race on our hands," said Hall. "I had to run against the Carter collapse and the Reagan landslide."
"Once the late returns began to come in I would be OK. We gradually and consistently chipped away at his early lead."
Four Democratic incumbents, Sam Hall of Marshall, Jack Brooks of Beaumont, Marvin Leath of Marlin and Charles Stenholm of Stamford earned easy trips back to Washington, running unopposed.
Democratic incumbents who rolled to easy wins included Charles Wilson of Lufkin; Phil Gramm of College Station; J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin; Jack Hightower of Vernon; E. "Kika" de la Garza of Mission; Richard White of El Paso; Kent Hance of Lubbock; Mickey Leland of Houston; Henry B. Gonzales of San Antonio; Abraham "Chick" Kazen of Laredo; and Martin Frost of Dallas.
Incumbent Republicans scoring easy wins included Jim Collins of Dallas; Bill Archer of Houston; and Tom Loeffler of Hunt.
State Sen. Bill Patman, a Democrat from Ganado and the son of former long-time U.S. Rep. Wright Patman, defeated Republican C.L. Conklin, a Corpus Christi physician, to take the 14th District seat vacated by freshman U.S. Rep. Joe Wyatt of Bloomington, who quit citing personal reasons.
Mattox, who defeated Pauken by just 852 votes in 1978, waged a no-holds-barred campaign against his opponent, calling Pauken a flake, a failure and a carpetbagger who resigned "in disgrace" from a position in the Nixon White House.
Pauken denied all the allegations and responded that Mattox would stoop to anything and was trying to hide his liberal voting record in a barrage of mud-slinging.
Fields may have been helped by Reagan's surprising margin in Southeast Texas. He recorded a razor-thin 51 percent to 49 percent win over Eckhardt.
Eckhardt, a seven-term veteran, estimated he had spent $600,000 in his futile effort to guard his seat. He had been targeted for defeat by the Republican National Committee and he was facing well-financed, well-organized opposition.
Fields hammered away at Eckhardt's voting record, contending that the incumbent was a liberal in a district that had become conservative.
Eckhardt contended Fields was using dirty tricks and he defended his voting record as solid. He said he had been a leader in such issues as toxic waste disposal, which have a visible effect on the district dotted by giant petrochemical plants.

Texas voters liked Reagan's views

By GARTH JONES
AP Political Writer

Texas voters liked Ronald Reagan's views on inflation control and national defense, as sold to them by one of the best financed and most aggressive political organizations ever put together.

"What has happened is that Gov. Reagan is right for Texas and President Carter is wrong for Texas," said a jubilant Gov. Bill Clements Tuesday night after Reagan's surprising sweep of the state and nation. "Texas has become a model for how a campaign should be structured and how a campaign should be run."

Reagan carried almost two-thirds of the counties, including a number that voted for Carter in the 1976 election. In the Carter counties, Reagan often got a substantial vote also.

Some political observers called the Reagan win a continuation of a wave of political conservatism that made Clements in 1978 the first Texas Republican governor of this century.

"The margin of the Reagan victory is indicative that the people of the United States are uneasy... the nation was ready for a change and took it out on Carter," said Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, state co-chairman of the Carter-Mondale campaign.

Reagan's supporters credited the win to hard work by the candidate and hard work by those working for him. Reagan made five trips to Texas after being named the presidential nominee. Vice presidential candidate George Bush made nine Texas trips.

The former California governor bore down on the need for more defense spending and criticized Carter for not controlling inflation. He also won Texas votes with blasts at the windfall profits tax and excessive government controls over oil and gas.

In an AP-NBC poll taken Tuesday among Texas voters, 56 percent of them said the president should control inflation and 76 percent said defense spending should be increased.

Fifty-two percent of Reagan's voters told pollsters they had been contacted by Reagan's campaigners. Only 28 percent of Carter's voters had been approached by the Carter-Mondale campaign.

The poll showed 77 percent of the Hispanics voting, voted for Carter, compared to 83 percent four years ago. Texas blacks went 97 percent for Carter, according to the poll.

Clements, who personally directed Reagan's campaign, said 40,000 volunteers worked for Reagan, particularly in vast telephone banks where more than 1.5 million calls were made to voters.

Bush borrows song line: 'America is on the road again'

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President-elect George Bush, savoring an overwhelming and stunning Republican sweep throughout his adopted home state, borrowed a line from a popular country-western song to depict his vision of the nation's path under a new Republican administration.

Bush strolled into the main ballroom of the Houston Oaks Hotel for his victory speech Tuesday night, shortly after President-elect Ronald Reagan had made one in California. Quoting a line from country singer Willie Nelson's recent hit, the 56-year-old former Texas congressman and U.N. ambassador encouraged the jubilation.

"America, in the words of the song, is 'on the road again' and with the leadership of Ronald Reagan, that road is going to lead our country back to greatness," he said.

Clements would pass up appointment to get Connally to Washington

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says nothing in the world could get him to accept a presidential appointment from Ronald Reagan, but he is going to work on getting John Connally back to Washington.

Connally, who challenged Reagan for the GOP presidential nomination but dropped out after the South Carolina primary, served as secretary of the navy in the Kennedy administration and as secretary of the treasury in the Nixon administration.

He was Democratic governor of Texas in 1963-69 but later switched to the Republican Party.

Clements heaped praise on Connally before cheering, balloon-popping Texas Republicans Tuesday night and insisted on waiting for Connally to start a news conference. Clements, deputy secretary of defense under Nixon, said he would defer to Connally on questions about national defense because Connally knew so much more.

Returning the accolades, Connally said Clements was the deciding factor in Reagan's victory in Texas.

"I daresay there was not an elected official in the United States that even came close to giving himself up (for a Reagan victory) as Bill Clements," Clements, Connally and their wives — Rita and Nellie — campaigned for Reagan throughout Texas, and the delivery of the state's 26 electoral votes started immediate speculation about possible national roles for Clements or Connally or both.

"I will not under any circumstances take any job in Washington, D.C.," Clements proclaimed. "What else can I say?"

Clements about rejecting a position in the Reagan administration, Connally said. "Not quite as strong, I thought his statement was very strong."

Connally said, however, "I have no idea I will be offered a job. I don't anticipate a job. I'm not going to ask for a job. I don't want a job, and I'm not sure any of them have persuasive powers enough to get me to accept one."

"He might not be able to fend me off, so to speak," said Clements. "I'll be a person who is recruiting John Connally to take a position in Washington. I think he has something to offer to this country."

"With these talents and this kind of experience, this kind of an individual of high quality and total integrity, I think that he should be used in an administration in Washington," Clements added.

Asked what Connally might do in the Reagan administration, Clements replied, "He could fill any one of 10 positions."

Iraq offers peace terms to Iran

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer
BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein offered Iran peace if it recognized Iraq's right to absolute control of the Shatt al-Arab estuary but threatened to make further demands if the 45-day-old war continued.

There was no immediate response from Iran. But the Iranian Foreign Ministry on Monday rejected a cease-fire appeal by the Non-Aligned Movement, saying, "As long as the aggressor has not been punished, any cease-fire would be absolutely meaningless."

On the battlefronts, Iran reported more hard fighting around besieged Abadan, the last Iranian stronghold on the Shatt al-Arab.

Hussein in a speech Tuesday to the National Assembly in Baghdad said Iraq would withdraw its army from Iranian territory "as from tomorrow" in exchange for "a full recognition of its rights" in the 100-mile estuary that is Iraq's only water route to the Persian Gulf.

But if Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of Iran's revolutionary regime, chooses to carry on the war, Hussein continued, "we are ready to fight until eternity, and he will have to realize that our pre-war demands will multiply as long as the war goes on... War always produces additional rights for the conqueror."

He asserted that the Iraqi armed forces have plenty of weapons from "friends who are able to supply it with arms and spare parts," an apparent reference to the Soviet Union and to Iran's inability to get replacements from the United States for its American-made war machine.

Since Iraqi forces invaded oil-rich Khuzistan Province in southwest Iran on Sept. 22, they have occupied a sizable stretch of territory along a 300-mile front, including Khorramshahr, Iran's chief port of entry on the Shatt al-Arab. They have cut off Abadan, 10 miles southeast of Khorramshahr, and are keeping Ahwaz, the provincial capital, and Dezful, the military headquarters for the province, under constant artillery attack.

Iraq had full control of the Shatt al-Arab under a 1937 treaty negotiated by the British. It ceded the eastern half in 1975 to Iran in exchange for the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's agreement to stop supporting a Kurdish rebellion in northern Iraq. Hussein when he went to war six weeks ago abrogated the 1975 treaty, charging that government in Baghdad violated Iran's pledge in the treaty not to interfere in Iraqi affairs.

Khomeini's incitement of the Shiite Moslem majority in Iraq to overthrow the Sunni Moslem

Healthy economy a political threat?

From a scholar at Stanford's Hoover Institution comes a simple if discouraging explanation for why the country never seems to solve its economic problems. A successful economy, say Paul Craig Roberts, is a threat to politicians.

"Economic stability does not increase the demand for bureaucrats," says Roberts. It is crisis, not stability, that gives government spending programs and regulatory agencies their justification. And it is the presumed beneficiaries of these programs and agencies that form the power base of elected officials.

This leads to the gloomy thought that political oratory promising jobs and prosperity for all comes largely from politicians who could not cope with prosperity, or would refuse to recognize it if they saw it. A successful economy would reduce or eliminate demand for welfare, food stamps, subsidy programs and all sorts of federal assistance which makes citizens dependent on government and gives politicians their clientele.

Roberts offers a clue to why the government is so reluctant to reform the consumer price index, even though the index is known to exaggerate the impact of inflation on the cost of living. Or why the Labor Department is reluctant to accept the fact that the official unemployment rate is not an accurate index of the degree of economic hardship that unemployment is creating at any given time. If the economic statistics begin looking too good, it would shorten the list of problems that government agencies were created to solve.

As Washington sees it, we have been in the grip of hard times ever since the Depression of the 1930s, when the New Deal laid the foundation for so many federal programs which have refused to go away. Although the business cycle has had its ups and downs in the last 40 years, the general economic growth of the United States has been nothing short of spectacular. Yet try to tell a politician that it's time for government to give up some of its turf.

In Washington, prosperity must remain just around the corner, demanding more of this and more of that from the government. If good times ever arrive, there'd be downright panic on the banks of the Potomac River.

Room to cut budget

If anyone needs proof that there's plenty of space to cut the federal budget, he only has to look at the story of the government's Community Development Block Grant Program. This nearly $4 billion - a - year program gives cities money to eliminate slums and blight and so forth, but as of the middle of the year it was unable to find takers for more than $6 billion in accumulated funds. The response of Housing and Urban Development officials was to press cities and its own bureaucrats to spend faster.

According to a General Accounting Office report, HUD internal documents started to single out cities which hadn't drawn down their grants fast enough. Regional HUD administrators were getting personnel ratings based on their ability to make cities spend faster.

Guess what chance this pressure has of making the spending wiser and more useful. While avoiding a hard conclusion, the GAO allowed that it "creates the potential for ineffective and inappropriate use of such funds." For instance, building rehabilitation accounts for about 30 percent of this program. One slow-spending city stepped up its pace by switching rehab money from assistance grants to financing of the actual purchase of buildings. A HUD reported noted, with some dismay, "This results in greater 'drawdowns' for the same amount of rehabilitation work accomplished."

The spending push in rehabilitation is furthermore bound to intensify problems in a program that HUD already admits is scandal-prone. In a draft report provided to the Senate HUD Appropriations Subcommittee, HUD's inspector general stated, "The operational survey produced examples of a variety of deficiencies in the administration of the program, including contractor billing for work not done, grantee certifying work completed when it was not, initial inspections either not performed or not documented, cost estimates and work write-ups vague or not prepared at all. The above types of deficiencies can result in excessive repair costs and payment for work not actually done or done poorly."

Fortunately, this sort of spending was more than even the Senate could take. The subcommittee's chairman, William Proxmire, trimmed the block grant request by $200 million, back to last year's $3.75 billion level. An amendment from Senator Paul Tsongas to restore the money was beaten in a resounding 59-to-13 floor vote. But with the kind of evidence available, one wonders why $200 million was all that the Senate saw fit to cut. — Wall Street Journal.

Union will still find South hard ground

The agreement between J.P. Stevens and the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union brings into focus once again the dilemma facing union organizing efforts in the South.

The dilemma is that more industry is moving into the South while it becomes increasingly difficult to unionize that industry.

Industry is coming here from every section of the country. There are, of course, reasons. Some of those reasons have to do with climate, people, resources, and the fact that there are comparatively few unions here.

As industries leave other areas of the country to come south, they often leave unions and their strictures behind. The one basic reason they seek other, greener fields is that they simply no longer can operate in the black under the burdens that unionism has brought. Therefore, they move into areas where the likelihood of unions is small. They set up shop and do their best to keep the union wolf from the door. Their best "includes better wages, fringes and working conditions."

The Stevens-union agreement has brought a hallelujah chorus from union representatives. They see in the agreement the breaking of the dike in their effort to unionize the South. They might find the task increasingly formidable.

By and large, the nature of the South's people is different. They are stubborn and independent and wary of outsiders who try to sell them a bill of goods. They want to do their own bargaining. They want to deal directly with management and not put their fortunes into the hands of intermediaries — strangers, likely whom they don't know and probably don't trust.

They remember with bitterness the violent strikes of years past. They know for a fact that unions in recent years have not enjoyed favorable public relations and that echoes of corruption and union-related crime continue to sound across the canyons of time.

Meanwhile, the textile industry and others have done much to make their plants more attractive work places. Salaries and wages have improved considerably. The plants themselves are cleaner, safer and more desirable. The total package of wages, fringe benefits, working conditions, now make textiles and other industries less vulnerable to organizing efforts.

The Stevens-union agreement has been heralded by union workers as a real breakthrough for their efforts, and possibly it is. It is not, however, the open door to the South that unions might believe it is.

Labor cost is critical factor

By Oscar Cooley
Americans have long looked upon the automobile manufacturers as leading the industrial pack. They were shocked to learn that in 1980 to date, all four leading American auto makers suffered serious losses. In the second quarter alone, the aggregate loss exceeded $1.5 billion.

Does this mean that the automobile business is washed up and that American industry as a whole is trending downward?

Probably not. The brains and the push that developed American industry are still here. The profit incentive, though weakened by today's socialistic illusions, still moves Americans to put forth prodigious effort. A comeback by industry is only a matter of time.

What has happened is that foreign economies, notably those of Japan and West Germany, have pressed forward with imagination and vigor, outdoing Americans at their own forte, the production line. Worldwide competition has asserted itself; free enterprisers should not object to that.

We Americans had it coming to us. We were getting over - confident, assuming that our industry would always be at the top of the heap. Had not our productivity risen at a steady and substantial rate over the years?

It was time we got a swift kick in the pants. We should thank the Japanese for giving it to us. But -- was it swift enough to jolt us into action?

This is not the first year the Japanese and Germans have sold automobiles at our expense. General Motors, Ford and Chrysler have known for at least two years that the small, foreign cars were selling like hot cakes. Yet, they went on building gas guzzlers and expecting the inflation-based American driver to buy them. But the drivers, seeing no sign of the price of gasoline at the pump coming down, turned more and more to the Volkswagens and Toyotas.

In our steel industry, too, depression prevails. It is not new. For years, U.S. Steel has been closing down plants. One reason is that many things, even sewer pipe, are being made of plastic instead of iron or steel.

In steel as well as in automobiles, imports have become better buys and to some extent have displaced the home-produced article. Now the steel as well as the automobile workers are pleading for government aid against the foreigner.

Youngstown, Ohio, once a booming steel town, has lost most of its steel mills and is a depressed area. In the last three years, 11,000 steel workers have been left high and dry as their employers have moved away from the Mahoning Valley.

Don't the steel companies owe a debt to the Youngstown people for working for them and helping them to make money all these years? No, the employers are not in "debt" to the community. They have paid their employees well. The Mahoning Valley has the highest average manufacturing wage -- $16.26 an hour -- in Ohio.

This wage rate is an important part of the problem. Labor is a major cost in steel, as in automobiles and many other industries. The $10 an hour wage rate, plus fringes, is one of the main reasons why the industry is hard pressed to compete with foreign steel and why the steel companies are closing plants in Youngstown and moving away.

The steel workers extorted those high wages by striking, often with violence, resulting in destruction and death. Even under the depressed economy of today, strikes are going on in Youngstown and steel-related firms are being picketed.

The steel workers, ignoring the fact that the laws of supply and demand apply to labor as well as to commodities, have priced themselves out of their market.

What goes up must come down. It is totally unrealistic to assume, as is generally done by union advocates, that wage rates must always rise, never fall. Recessions, such as the present one, are made longer and more severe by workers refusing to lower their price (wage rate) in order that their product (labor) will sell, keeping them employed.

When a wage rate is pushed above the equilibrium level, the employer, who may be sure has trimmed his other costs to the utmost, is forced either to move, seeking a location where he can hold his costs down to a competitive level, or to shut down.

Whichever he does, the wage at the old location is not merely lowered; it is eliminated. When will it dawn on workers that it is better to get less than to get nothing?

Letters

Dear Editor
A couple of months ago, many Texas newspapers and other newspapers throughout the country carried several stories about the water pollution problems in Marble Falls. In reading some of these articles we were astonished at some of the inaccuracies -- particularly in the number of people reported affected and the apparent causes of the problem. At the time, we were tempted to rebut, but decided this might do nothing more than aggravate an already serious problem.

We decided instead to let our city correct the problem with a minimum amount of interference hoping that the sooner the problem was corrected, the sooner the city and media could return to normalcy.

We are proud to say the City Administration and Staff pursued the problem with great diligence and their efforts paid off. The City of Marble Falls now has good, clean, drinkable water.

We want, by means of this letter, to let everyone know we are proud, not only of our clean water, but also of our City in the combined effort to reach this goal.

Yours truly,

Today in history

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 5, the 310th day of 1980. There are 56 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Nov. 5, 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected to an unprecedented third term.

On this date:
In 1605, conspirator Guy Fawkes was seized as he was about to blow up the British House of Lords.

In 1872, Susan B. Anthony was fined $100 for voting before women had the right of suffrage.

In 1946, John F. Kennedy was first elected to public office as a Boston congressman at age 29.

And in 1968, Richard Nixon staged a political comeback when he defeated Vice President Hubert Humphrey for the nation's highest office.

Five years ago, Morocco's King Hassan ordered some 350,000 of his countrymen to move into the Spanish Sahara and claim it.

One year ago, militants in Iran seized the British embassy in Tehran as the U.S. hostages in the American compound began their second day of captivity.

Today's birthdays: Singer-songwriter Paul Simon is 38 years old. Former cowboy star Roy Rogers is 68.

Thought for today: Conformity is the jailer of freedom and the enemy of growth — John F. Kennedy, U.S. president (1917-1963).

How wide for men's lapel next year

— Aut Jarvey

How wide will the fashion dictators want men to wear our lapels next year?

What will they decree to be "in" in men's apparel next season?

A Lawrence Pucci suit, depending on fabric selection, will cost either side of a thousand dollars. Pucci refuses to alter what he calls his "classic suit."

He believes that what is "stylishly conservative" will remain acceptable anywhere anytime.

Yet I notice that his cut does vary, if only fractionally, over the years.

This fall the fashion industry is trying again to wheedle us men into "a change": two-button suit jackets instead of three.

Designer Bill Blass insists that "anything truly classic is in style"; Halston seconds that notion. Yet both of them narrow their lapels along with everybody else.

Bill Gale, author of "The Mature Man's Guide to Style," says that "every man of affairs should own at least three suits: a grey flannel, a navy blue and a chalk stripe."

And he suggests, "buy the best you can afford; fine fabrics last longer."

There is a trend, which Gucci has been unable to stop, away from loafers with business suits; back to wingtips and plain toes.

What difference does it make? Why can't a man just make himself comfortable with whatever suits him personally?

He can.
But John Callen, the head-hunter who recruits top and middle-management executives, says, "there is no question but that appearances can make or break a man's chances for a certain job."

The "in" shirt is solid white, or white on white, and with a smaller collar. Anybody who wears colorful stripes is asking to be categorized with "the arty types."

Women who are successful in business similarly gravitate toward suits.

This does not mean that jeans are out -- yet.

In the informal occupations there are still a lot of girls in shirts and jeans, but Elaine Kirchen, who recruits executives for Boyden Associates, says the female executive will likely wear a suit, maybe a Halston or an Ann Klein with a touch of fashion to make it feminine.

I am glad to see men tidy themselves up -- get back to shirts and ties. But one of the reasons for the fashion revolt of the Sixties and Seventies was the expense of maintaining a decent wardrobe.

Clothing is costly and cleaning is costly and fashions keep changing.

Paul Chang, Chicago tailor, is offering that city's fashion-conscious males a way out.

He'll change the shape of your lapels for $75.00. He'll narrow your ties for $10 each.

Co-determination gimmick

By Anthony Harrigan
A push is on to compel American corporations to place union representatives on their board of directors.

Some months ago, the ailing Chrysler Corp. agreed to accept United Auto Workers president Douglas Fraser as a board member -- an unprecedented and undesirable development. Other major companies will be targeted for similar action.

Flora Lewis, a columnist for The New York Times, is among those boosting the idea of enlarging union power in this manner. She notes in a recent column that Mr. Fraser has served notice that he is also going to demand a seat on the boards of General Motors and Ford. "It is about time," she says. She cites the alleged success of what is called "co-determination" in Germany.

Miss Lewis ought to read the article "Co-determining The Business and The Job" in the August issue of the First Chicago World Report. The Report says that the proposition -- worker representation on boards of directors -- "attempts to make a political institution out of a business enterprise." A union director on a corporation board dilutes the rightful power of the owners of the company.

The co-determination scheme that Miss Lewis favors means a further restriction of freedom in the United States. As several scholars have pointed out, the co-determined firm doesn't arise out of voluntary arrangements. Co-determination can only result from coercion in some form, or financial desperation, as in the case of Chrysler which was begging for federal aid.

American unionism has a long history of coercive activities. Co-determination is only the latest device. If the radicals, such as Ralph Nader, have their way, co-determination will be compulsory. It is a feature of the Naderite Corporate Democracy Act introduced in Congress last April.

The First Chicago Report observes that "co-determination laws tend to reinforce the view that profits emerge from the exploitation of labor and, therefore, are the legitimate object of restriction." Union directors on corporate boards would be chiefly concerned with redistributing profits to those who aren't owners, instead of strengthening the company.

One line of argument is that union representation on boards of directors would provide a new incentive for greater employee effort. It doesn't work out that way, however. The First Chicago Report says that co-determination in the Scandinavian countries, which have been held up for a decade as models of worker democracy, "has failed to motivate workers as proponents had claimed it would. Scandinavian countries have the highest absenteeism and employee turnover among industrialized nations."

Instead of turning to co-determination, the public and Congress should insist on the dismantling of the union monopoly which prevents greater productivity. The United Auto Workers is one of the first union monopolies that should be dismantled. Its know-nothing policies have been the prime cause of the industry's inability to compete with foreign manufacturers. Excessive wages in the industry, extracted by the UAW, give Japan and other countries a marked advantage.

The way for Congress to proceed is to enact a law that would remove the unions' exemption from the Sherman Antitrust Act. This is the way to get the automotive industry moving again. The United States always should move in the direction of freedom, not coercion.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a counselor for "problem" teen-agers who live in our group homes temporarily for a variety of reasons.

I'm responding to that MOM IN PUYALLUP, WASH., who wrote, "When I find a girlie magazine hidden in the room of any of our three teen-age sons, I remove it and replace it with a 3x5 index card with a Bible verse covering that very subject. I've never had a complaint from any of them, as they know from the verses that they are to abstain from fleshly lusts."

Mom may mean well, but she is not dealing with reality. I'm against girlie magazines because they exploit women, but they're here and we must deal with them, as boys will be boys regardless of what the Bible says. Mom is violating her sons' rights to privacy and is teaching them that they must repress, at the most critical times in their sexual lives, the most personal and human of all impulses.

We confront reality here instead of teaching kids avoidance and asking the impossible. They are given the facts of life as they really are, and they're taught to deal with them realistically in a responsible way. Kids get straight talk on birth control and VD and clues to help them form healthy relationships with the opposite sex.

These kids begin to feel good about themselves and their natural urges. No one should be made to feel guilty about their normal feelings.

PHOENIX

DEAR PHOENIX: Thanks for a great letter. And incidentally, this subject is dealt with in a wonderful 30-minute special on CBS at 3 p.m. (Pacific Time) tomorrow. (Check your local TV listings.) Ken Howard, who plays the basketball coach in "The White Shadow," raps informally and frankly with a group of boys between the ages of 10 and 16 about their sexual feelings, their bodies and the problems of growing up. I recommend it highly for boys and girls of all ages. And their parents, too!

DEAR ABBY: I would like to leave my eyes to the Lions Eye Bank, but I am an old lady who has had cataract surgery and glaucoma, too. Do you think they would accept my eyes? I can't see how they would be of any use to anyone. Thank you.

THINKING AHEAD

DEAR THINKING: All eyes are acceptable. Those that are not usable for transplants are needed for research.

DEAR ABBY: I always thought a tip of between 15 percent and 20 percent of the bill was considered proper no matter what part of the country you're in.

I happen to live in Pennsylvania, but recently visited in South Carolina, where I was the host at a very nice restaurant. There were five of us for lunch. The bill was $28, and I left a tip of $5.50 (the service was excellent).

One of my guests (who lives in South Carolina) saw the tip and said, "That's too much!" I said, "No, that's about right." He said, "Maybe for Pennsylvania, but it's too much for South Carolina!"

Tell me, Abby, does the size of the tip vary from state to state?

Also, when I'm a guest, if I feel that the tip is inadequate, is it OK to slip a little something extra to the waitress if the service was good?

NEEDS TIPS ON TIPPING

DEAR NEEDS: Waitresses earn the minimum wage and depend on tips to survive, so 15 percent for ordinary service and 20 percent for extraordinary service is proper. And it's not only "OK," it's extremely generous to slip a little something extra to the waitress who's been shortchanged.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Bleier to retire

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Lights, camera, action. Rocky Bleier intends to make his last season in the National Football League something special.

The film story of Bleier's comeback from Vietnam War wounds was finished earlier this year. It will be aired next month on national television.

But quiet on the set. There's more to come in Bleier's career with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We're going to do another movie, and we need some fresh footage," jokes Bleier, who sparked a fourth-quarter touchdown drive that helped Pittsburgh beat the Green Bay Packers 22-20 Sunday.

Bleier says this season will definitely mark the end of his football career.

"It's my body. Every Monday morning my body says, 'Retire, retire,'" Bleier said.

But he wasn't in a retiring mood against Green Bay. Pittsburgh, which had lost three in a row, had a 15-14 lead when Bleier came off the bench in the fourth quarter to replace fullback Franco Harris, who had been shaken up.

"It's a little tougher to get into the game mentally from the sideline," said Bleier, who is 34. "But the adrenaline is there once you get in. Everything comes back. You know what has to be done."

On his first carry, Bleier took a pitchout and gained 19 yards around right end with the aid of a block from tackle Larry Brown.

"One reason that quick pitch works so well is that Larry Brown and I have the same speed getting out there," said Bleier. "We keep the same relationship, so that when he throws a block I can cut off it. These other guys are too fast."

Bleier carried the ball on the next three plays: 7 yards around left end, 5 yards around right end and 7 yards off left guard to the Green Bay 4-yard line.

Unknown leads nation's rushers

By HERSCHEL INSENSEON
AP Sports Writer

This may come as a surprise to most people in the wake of last week's ballyhooed rushing duel between South Carolina's George Rogers and Georgia's Herschel Walker, but the Nos. 1-2 ground-gainers in the country will square off THIS week.

Rogers is one of them. Can you name the other? Would you believe Lyvonia "Stump" Mitchell of The Citadel?

Mitchell, all 5-foot-9 and 188 pounds of him, leads the nation in rushing with an average of 158.0 yards per game. The 6-2, 220-pound Rogers is second at 157.1. And The Citadel, the unheralded — football-wise, that is — military school from Charleston, S.C., meets the University of South Carolina 90 miles up the road in Columbia this weekend.

And like Rogers, from Duluth, Ga., and Walker, who hails from Wrightsville, Ga., Mitchell also is from the Peach State. He calls St. Mary's, Ga., home.

"He's an excellent football player," says Gil Brandt, the Dallas Cowboys' renowned personnel chief.

"Anyone who gains as much yardage as he has this year and who has shown the productivity that he has shown cannot be overlooked. Some have been critical because of his lack of height, but one can't be too critical of that characteristic when he's been as productive as he has been.

"The only difference between Mitchell and George Rogers is about five inches and 40 pounds. He (Mitchell) will be drafted and he has a good chance of making it in pro football."

As a high school senior, Mitchell wrote to scores of colleges but never got an answer. Finally, he learned of a military school in South Carolina that needed running backs. He also learned something else from Bobby Ross, then The Citadel's head coach.

"Coach Ross told me I would have to wear a uniform and march," Mitchell recalls. "The rest of it was a shock. I remember being sick the whole first week I was here. When I got in the car to come here I was sick and when I got here I was even sicker. I didn't like the military life, and I still don't, but I've adjusted to it."

Saints, Daugherty impressive in spring baseball season

Seward County Community College at Liberal, Kansas finished the fall baseball season with an impressive record and statistics to prove it.

Rick Daugherty, a Pampa sophomore, played a leading role in the Saints' 27-6 fall campaign, a prelude to the Jayhawk Conference season this spring.

Daugherty, a pitcher-catcher, was probably the most versatile player on the squad. His 5-0 record, 1.50 earned run average and 33 strikeouts topped the mound staff.

Daugherty also swung a hot bat. His .386 batting average was fourth best on the team and his 29 runs batted in was third highest. Team batting average was a hefty .350.

Two other Pampanas, Mark

Jennings and Brad Files, also contributed to the Saints' hitting attack. Both freshmen, Jennings batted .245 in 16 games while Files hit .250 in two outings.

Seward's pitching corps will be solidified even more this spring when Pampa hurler Steve Stout joins the team. Stout, who was District 3-5A player of the year in 1979, was ineligible this fall after transferring from Southwestern Oklahoma State.

Carlton wins Cy Young award

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Carlton, to the surprise of no one, is the National League Cy Young award winner for a record-tying third time.

And, just about here, there should be comments from the Philadelphia Phillies' pitcher about how it feels to be honored as the league's best pitcher.

But, Carlton, who played a key role in leading the Phillies to their first World Championship, was, as he has been to the media, unavailable.

He was voted the honor Tuesday by a Baseball Writers Association of America panel, and joined Tom Seaver and Sandy Koufax as the only three-time winners of the coveted award.

The fiercely private Carlton has refused to talk to the media for the past several seasons. That policy continued through the playoffs and the World Series and he was not even available to be notified that he had won the award.

He had been expected to go to Japan this week to conduct some baseball clinics with teammates Mike Schmidt and Pete Rose, but the trip was cancelled and the pitcher went hunting instead. Carlton's wife said she did not know where he was when the award was announced and added he was expected to be away for about a week.

But other people, as usual, spoke in his stead.

"It (the Cy Young Award) was a very clear cut choice," said Bob Boone, his catcher. "He was just outstanding, especially considering the number of innings he worked and his strikeout total. His slider is an awesome pitch with great control."

"I liken it to (the Cubs') Bruce Sutter's split-fingered fastball because it turns into an unhittable pitch. But 'Lefty' is just not a slider pitcher. He's got two other great pitches.

Mistrial declared in case of accused mother

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors described Patricia Ann Frazier as a "calm, cool and collected killer." But 10 jurors reportedly could not believe she was sane when she cut out the heart of her 4-year-old daughter.

The jury reported itself deadlocked Tuesday, forcing a mistrial. Miss Frazier, 25, who contended she was insane when she killed her daughter with a butcher knife Feb. 22, had no comment when state District Judge Keith Nelson declared the mistrial following 13 hours of jury deliberation.

There was no immediate word whether District Attorney Tim Eysen would seek a retrial on the murder charges. Miss Frazier's lawyer, Harold Lerew, assumes the office of county attorney on Jan. 1 and will be prohibited by law from defending her after that time.

Eysen said 10 of the 12 jurors reported they favored a verdict of innocent by reason of insanity. Lerew said he was "disappointed I didn't convince more of the jurors that we had met our burden of proof on the insanity defense."

Psychiatrists testifying for the defense said Miss Frazier was a paranoid schizophrenic, but state witnesses said she appeared normal the day of the slaying.

Miss Frazier had said she killed her child, Khunji Wilson, because she believed evil spirits had invaded the girl's body. She said she saw grass growing out of her daughter's chest and cut out the girl's heart because she was under orders from spirits "touching my body."

Twice Monday, jurors sent notes to Nelson saying they could not reach a decision. But the judge ordered them to continue their discussions until Tuesday evening.

In final arguments Monday, Assistant District Attorney Bob Brotherton called the killing the "ultimate and final act of child abuse." The defendant killed the child so she could be free of the responsibility of motherhood, he charged.

Lerew, trying to prove Miss Frazier was insane, told jurors that the defendant was wearing a blood-soaked bathrobe, her arms and legs were spattered with blood and she had made no attempt to clean the bedroom where the slaying occurred or to hide the butcher knife.

Photographs of the child's body and the scene were entered into evidence "to make it easy for you to hate Patricia Ann Frazier because if you hate her, it makes it easy for you to find her guilty," Lerew said.

CBS picks up with top shows for new season

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS began its 1980-81 prime-time season where it left off in April, listing six of the 10 highest-rated shows in the week ending Nov. 2, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

The week was the first of the fall season for both CBS and ABC. NBC maintains the TV year began Sept. 15, when it broadcast the first episode of the five-part "Shogun" miniseries.

CBS' "60 Minutes" was the No. 1 show of 1979-80, and the newsmagazine, which began original programming in September, was the highest-rated show in the most recent audience survey.

The rating for "60 Minutes" was 26.6. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 26.6 percent saw at least part of the broadcast. An NBC movie, "The Gauntlet," with Clint Eastwood, was runner-up.

ABC, meanwhile, had two shows in the Top 10, including "Love Boat" in third place. CBS' rating for the week was 19.8, to 18.3 for ABC and 16.5 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.8 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS. Two movies and a special helped the CBS effort. "The Jayne Mansfield Story" tied for sixth place.
