Pilot walks away from crash

A Cessna aircraft being delivered to El Paso, Texas, miraculously thrown free of the wreckage and walked two miles to Getty's Schaffer Gasoline Plant in Skellytown, where he was taken to Highland General Hospital by a plant employee. Highland General Hospital officials said today DeWitt was admitted at 8:30 a.m. for treatment of abrasions, bruises and a fractured nose. He was reported in good condition at 11:30 a.m.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said DeWitt was delivering the Cessna, which had never been flown before, from the factory in Wichita, Kan., to El Paso, where it was to be sold.

Jordan said the plane crashed and burned on the Noel farm and ranch property in Carson County.

"There was nothing left of the aircraft, and a serial number was not even visible," Jordan said.

When Deputy Kelly Rushing arrived at the scene, the fire was out, and only the burned shell of the aircraft remained.

Kennedy camp claims Carter trip political

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Kennedy campaign officials claim President Carter was trying to help himself in Saturday's Texas presidential primary when he made a "nonpolitical" trip here Monday to visit the five American commandos injured in Iran.

Carter, favored to defeat Sen. Edward Kennedy in the Texas primary, made a whirlwind two-hour trip here Monday, visiting with the five servicemen injured in last week's aborted attempt to rescue the hostages in Iran.

He made only one brief statement to reporters, who were not allowed to accompany the president in the two military hospitals.

It was the president's first venture away from Washington or nearby Camp David since the Iranian crisis began last November. He has refused to personally campaign for his re-election while the Iranian crisis continues.

The Carter trip was not announced until late Sunday night. A Kennedy advance official, who requested anonymity, claimed it was designed to overshadow Monday night's major Kennedy rally in what is a Kennedy Texas stronghold.

But a cheering, predominantly Mexican-American crowd estimated at more than 5,000 turned out Monday night to give Kennedy a tumultuous welcome.

"We feel that the trip is partially politically motivated. It will adversely affect our press coverage," the Kennedy official said Monday before the Massachusetts senator arrived here. "The fact that he (Carter) comes here the same day we're here clearly pushes us off the lead story in the press."

Hunt brothers cited for contempt of Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee wanting to question the wealthy Hunt brothers about silver speculation voted unanimously today to seek a contempt of Congress citation after they failed to comply with its subpoenas.

Roger Goldberg, attorney for Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt, told the House government operations subcommittee that his clients wanted to cooperate but the multiplying requests for their appearances threatened to make them professional witnesses.

"In substance, there are parallel demands and in large part they seek mainly the same information," Goldberg said. "We do not feel in any respect that our clients should be caught up in a competition for their testimony."

The congressional hearing room was packed with spectators waiting to see whether the Hunts would comply with the subpoenas.

The Hunts have agreed to appear voluntarily before a Senate agriculture subcommittee Friday.

The parent House Government Operations Committee chaired by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, must vote in favor of the contempt of Congress citation and it then would have to pass the full House before it could be issued.

The maximum penalty for the misdemeanor would be 12 months imprisonment and a $1,000 fine.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., the subcommittee's chairman, said he hoped the full committee would take its vote next week.

U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples of Dallas told the subcommittee that the subpoenas were served to the Hunts' attorney, according to routine.

"Are they one of your better customers?" Rosenthal asked jokingly.

"We do pay frequent visits over there," Peoples replied.

The Hunts had requested a delay in their appearance, but Rosenthal refused to grant the request.

Late Monday, the Hunts sent the subcommittee a letter, asking that their appearance be put off. The letter noted they plan to appear voluntarily later this week before a Senate committee and suggested that the Senate panel was the proper forum to discuss the Hunts' silver trading.

Some observers, including the chairman of the House government operations subcommittee that subpoenaed Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt, believe the buying spree figured prominently in the sharp rise and fall of silver futures.

"We know from documents and other information made available to the subcommittee that the Hunts may have attempted to corner the silver market and actively intervened in the federal regulatory process and in the self-regulating activities of the commodity exchanges," Rosenthal has said.

The multi-millionaire brothers face a possible contempt of Congress citation if they fail to comply with the subpoenas. The Justice Department also could enforce the subpoenas through the courts.

The House panel last week issued its subpoenas requesting the Hunts' appearance today after their lawyer suggested that the two panels cooperate and share the testimony from the voluntary appearance.

Rosenthal said the House and Senate traditionally conduct their business separately.

His subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs is investigating the federal reaction to the sharp dive of silver futures from about $50 an ounce in January to $10.80 on March 27.

Stock market prices dipped at that time and speculation arose about the solvency of a major brokerage house used by the Hunts for much of their silver business.

Two federal regulators have testified before the subcommittee that they saw no evidence of price manipulation by speculators leading to the crash.

Paul A. Volcker, the Federal Reserve Board's chairman, is scheduled to testify Wednesday before the subcommittee about reports he approved of an $800 million credit line that banks issued to the Hunts after the board changed its policy on credit restraints.

Rosenthal has said he wanted to ask the Hunts about how much influence large buyers can exert on federal regulatory agencies' decisions.

The subcommittee last week also issued a subpoena to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission for tapes and transcripts of all meetings between Aug. 1, 1979, and April 22, 1980, where silver trading was discussed.

Pentagon denies Iran dogfight

By The Associated Press

Iran claimed two carrier-based U.S. fighter jets "started to shoot" at an Iranian patrol plane over the Gulf of Oman today in the first U.S.-Iranian military confrontation since the American hostages were seized nearly six months ago. The Pentagon denied there was any shooting.

In Washington, the Defense Department said: "Two F-14 aircraft from the aircraft carrier Nimitz made a routine intercept of an Iranian C-130 aircraft near the Strait of Hormuz. The U.S. aircraft escorted the Iranian plane back to Iranian air space. It was a routine intercept. There was no firing of weapons."

Washington officials said the Iranian airplane came within approximately 30 miles of the Nimitz and the two F-14s were launched to look it over. The Nimitz is one of about 30 U.S. warships stationed in the Indian Ocean following the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran last Nov. 4 by Iranian militants and the December Soviet thrust into Afghanistan.

The official Iranian news agency Pars quoted the Iranian army joint staff as saying the two American planes started to shoot at the Iranian plane but four Iranian jets were sent up and they "warded off the attack." Pars quoted the army as saying the U.S. planes "changed their direction as the four Iranian jetfighters escorted the patrol plane" back to Iran.

Tehran Radio reported the Iranian army joint staff has warned the armed forces to "expect extensive action by the U.S. Army" in the wake of last week's abortive attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran.

The Gulf of Oman, 350 miles long and 200 miles wide, lies on the southern shore of Iran and separates the Arabian Sea from Persian Gulf. Iran has two major ports on the Gulf of Oman, Jask and Chah Bahar, and must use this body of water in exporting its oil.

Meanwhile, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh escaped unharmed from what appeared to be an assassination attempt in Kuwait. Iran's army mobilized for a major offensive against Kurdish rebels in Sanandaj, and a controversial churchman arrived in Tehran to take charge of the bodies of the U.S. commandos killed in the abortive U.S. hostage rescue.

Kuwait's news agency said a hail of bullets fired from at least two cars hit a motorcade taking Ghotbzadeh to a meeting with Kuwait's ruler at Assaf Palace, slightly wounding a Kuwaiti security guard. The palace is the home of Sheik Jaber Al-Ahmad, Kuwait's ruling emir. The Kuwait Interior Ministry said police located two cars used in the attack, but made no mention of arrests.

The Iranian news agency Pars said one of the cars was found outside the Iraqi Embassy in Kuwait and claimed "the passengers of the car left the vehicle and entered the Iraqi Embassy." Pars also said two suspects had been taken into custody. There was no Kuwaiti confirmation. Iran and Iraq have been having a dispute along their border in recent weeks.

Ghotbzadeh arrived in the oil-rich Persian Gulf emirate Monday on a tour to try to improve his regime's relations with Arab governments. The Kuwaiti and other governments in the region are worried by Iran's attempts to export its Islamic revolution.

Tehran Radio said residents in Sanandaj were told by bullhorn to evacuate their homes today and head to the army garrison so that government troops who have deployed throughout the city can battle Kurdish rebels and "see to these sinners once and for all."

The Kurds have been battling Iran's central government for autonomy off and on for months, and over the weekend hundreds of guerrillas and troops were reported killed in fierce fighting in Sanandaj and Saqqez, 90 miles to the northwest.

Eight American commandos were killed in the failed hostage rescue mission, and Greek Catholic archbishop Hilarion Capudji arrived in Tehran today and said he would accompany the bodies "to another country and hand them over to the International Red Cross for delivery to their families."

There have been reports that the American rescue force was to be aided in Tehran by American agents who slipped into Iran earlier and Iranians hostile to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime. Tehran Radio reported that the U.S. Embassy was fired on three times Sunday night by persons in passing cars, and on Monday bombs went off under a car in a Tehran parking lot and in a movie theater, a bank and a drug store.

Hospitals reported three persons killed, and a revolutionary guard commander said 34 persons were injured in the parking lot and 10 cars destroyed.

Ghotbzadeh unharmed in shooting

KUWAIT (AP) — A hail of bullets fired from at least two cars hit a motorcade carrying Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh today, but no one was hurt, the Kuwait news agency reported. Iran blamed Iraq for what it described as an abortive assassination attempt.

The Kuwait Interior Ministry said police located two cars used in the attack but made no mention of any arrests. It said the cars were filled with weapons and explosives.

The official Iranian Pars news agency said the second car was found outside the Iraqi Embassy in Kuwait and claimed, "the passengers of the car left the vehicle and entered the Iraqi Embassy there."

There was no immediate confirmation from Kuwaiti authorities.

Iraq has blamed Iran for two recent assassination attempts against Iraqi government officials in Baghdad, capital of Iraq. Last Sunday, Tehran Radio claimed Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had been killed in a coup, but Iraq dismissed the report as "the result of a sick imagination." In recent weeks, the two countries have engaged in an escalating verbal battle and occasional skirmishes along their common border.

It first reported that Ghotbzadeh escaped an assassination attempt but later said it "appeared" to be an assassination attempt.

Ghotbzadeh's motorcade continued its journey toward the palace without further incident, it said.

"Many shots were fired at one of the cars in the Ghotbzadeh motorcade at 9:30 this morning while it was on the way to Assaf Palace. No one was hurt and the Interior Ministry will issue a detailed statement about this incident later," said Kuwait's minister of state for cabinet affairs, Abdul Aziz Hussein, in a statement carried by the news agency.

Ghotbzadeh is visiting several Middle East countries in an attempt to improve the Iranian revolutionary regime's relations with Arab governments. He came here from Beirut, earlier visited Damascus and is scheduled to go on to Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates.

Newspapers here recently reported that Kuwait would side with Iraq if current border hostilities between Iran and Iraq developed into war.

The governments of Kuwait and the other monarchies of the Arabian Peninsula as well as Iraq's socialist government are all worried by the attempts of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his associates to export their Islamic revolution.

Ghotbzadeh said the purpose of his tour was to explain that Iran "does not want to interfere in any country's internal affairs."

Vance resignation prompts Tower view on policy change

WASHINGTON (AP)— Sen. John Tower is calling for a hard line on foreign policy in the wake of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's resignation.

The Texas Republican said the resignation was based on three years of disagreement within the Carter administration over foreign policy.

"We can no longer afford the luxury of consensus politics in the formulation and implementation of foreign policy," Tower said Monday in a statement. "It is a time for leadership."

Meanwhile, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen turned down an invitation to accompany President Carter on a Texas trip to visit the men injured in last week's unsuccessful Iranian raid.

A spokesman for the Texas Democrat, who asked not to be identified by name, said

Bentsen wanted to go with the president to San Antonio but could not cancel a speaking engagement before a business press association in Boca Raton, Fla.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth traveled with Carter on the president's first trip outside the Washington area since the takeover of the American Embassy in Iran.

In a brief statement, Bentsen said he regretted Vance's decision to resign.

"Secretary Vance is an able man," the senator said. "His counsel will be missed."

Vance attributed his resignation to disagreement on principle with President Carter over the military mission to rescue American hostages in Iran.

Tower said it was a "tardy confirmation of what has long been apparent to America's friends and adversaries alike."

United States foreign policy is in deep chaos and disarray," Tower said. "The senator said Vance made the proper decision in resigning. "Our purpose today must be to look to the future and to the absolute imperative of establishing order and introducing a foundation of firmness and coherence in U.S. foreign policy."

Wright called the resignation an apparent honest disagreement over policy. "One of the great things about our country is that it allows for honest disagreements over matters of policy between people of goodwill," he said in a statement.

Television sets second as toronado monitors

Your television set can detect a tornado. By following these instructions supplied by the Soil Conservation Service your television can be used to screen approaching stormy weather.

- 1) Tune the television to channel 13. Darken the screen to almost black.
- 2) Turn to channel 2 and leave the volume control down.

The tornado detector is now in operation. As a storm approaches, lightning will produce a group of momentary white bands of varying widths across the screen, color sets produce a colored band.

A tornado within 15 to 20 miles will produce a totally white screen and remain white, there will be color on color sets. Should this occur, turn off your set, take a portable radio, and go to a place of shelter immediately.

This system was discovered by Newton Weller of West Des Moines, Iowa after twelve years of study. It works because every TV set has channel 2 set at 55 megacycles. Lightning and tornados generate a signal near this frequency which overrides the brightness control.

Channel 13 is "high" end of the frequency band and is not affected. This is why the darkness must be set on that channel. A portable radio should be kept ready for emergency instructions and in case of power failures. Lightning will cause intermittent static on a radio tuned on 550 kilocycles. A tornado will cause steady continuous static.

Newspapers file appeal on behalf of prisoner

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for two newspapers planned an appeal to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin today to seek an open hearing for a death row inmate who wants a new trial based on allegations his wife was having an affair with his defense attorney during the trial.

Attorneys for The Houston Post and The Houston Chronicle said they would go before the appeals court today to have the hearing opened to the public after State District Judge I.D. McMaster turned down the request on Monday.

Vernon Eugene McManus, a former football star and assistant football coach at Lamar University, was convicted in 1977 in the slaying, strangling deaths of Paul and Mary Cantrell in their Baytown home.

Weather slows boatlift, two killed

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Bob Graham declared a state of emergency in counties struggling to cope with 3,500 Cuban refugees as Coast Guard officials found dozens of deserted boats and two bodies and feared more people may have died when a storm hit the "Freedom Flotilla."

The Immigration and Naturalization Service dispatched 100 more Border Patrol agents to deal with the seafaring and customs agents seized three shrimp boats Monday, slapping heavy fines on the owners who brought 507 illegal aliens into the United States.

In Miami, immigration officials locked up more than a dozen Cubans who fellow refugees identified as criminals, and INS officer Kent Wheeler said there were signs Cuban President Fidel Castro was "sending his incorrigibles."

For the first time since the ragtag boatlift began eight days ago, there were no arrivals from Cuba on Monday following a storm with hurricane-force winds that pummeled the 90-mile straits between Florida and the communist-controlled island.

Despite choppy seas, however, about 100 small craft put out for the Cuban port of Mariel to join 1,500 boats already waiting to take on refugees. The weather was expected to improve today.

The bodies of two Florida men who set out to retrieve relatives in Cuba were pulled from their capsized cabin cruiser — one of at least 26 such boats, many of which were deserted.

Authorities said it would be "highly remarkable" if all aboard the boats had been saved.

The Coast Guard, using 12 vessels, brought ashore a dozen boats and more than 50 survivors of the Sunday storm.

"Before I saw these people, I didn't know what the look of stark terror meant," said Cmdr. Homer Purdy.

Graham declared a state of emergency in Dade and Monroe counties — the area from the Keys to Miami — released $50,000 in state aid and sent patrolmen and National Guardsmen to shuttle supplies to relief centers in Miami.

"How long is Uncle Sam going to keep his head in the sand?"

said Vincent Grimm, assistant administrator for Miami, where the refugees go from Key West. "The city's already at the breaking point."

Grimm's assessment came as customs agents seized the shrimp boats and slapped fines totaling $507,000 on the owners. The Coast Guard said it would revoke the license of any boat operator known to have received money for the trips. Some have admitted charging up to $1,000 per refugee, but Cmdr. Samuel J. Dennis said enforcement would be difficult.

"They've all got their stories together," Dennis said. "They all say no money exchanged hands."

The two known storm victims were identified as Eduardo Roque, 45, and Adolfo Martinez, 65, both of Orlando. Their 22-foot boat was found overturned 20 miles south of Miami.

"My father's been here for 20 years but we still have a lot of relatives down there (in Cuba)," said Roque's son, Eddie.

ON SOLID GROUND, Luis Alvaro tests the beach after he was rescued from the disabled boat, "Marisol", and brought back to Key West along with 24 other men on the Coast Guard Cutter "Diligence" Monday. A hurricane force storm blew through the Florida Straits Sunday, overturning and swamping dozens of small craft that were enroute to Cuba in the Cuban boatlift. Alvaro became so seriously seasick during the ordeal he had to be carried off the boat. (AP Photo)

Surface mining regulations go to state

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The federal government has turned over to the state Railroad Commission primary control of surface mining in Texas, and commissioner Jim Nugent noted federal bureaucrats "will have less control over Texas business."

Texas is the first state to gain federal approval of its proposed program to regulate surface mining.

Approval was granted Feb. 16 but Director Walter Heine of the federal Office of Surface Mining told a news conference he had not had a chance until Monday to attend a commission ceremony.

Texas ranks first in the nation in the production of lignite, or heavy coal, and was No. 10 in total coal production last year with 27 million tons. Coal production is expected to rise to as high as 90 million tons a year by 1985.

The commission estimates Texas has 12 billion tons of lignite within 200 feet of the surface and reserves of 12 billion more tons of light coal.

Texas ranks third among the states in uranium ore reserves, and total production this year is projected at 6.3 million tons, which would rank Texas among the top four states.

Commissioner Wallace said, "While some environmentalists have taken this agency to task for a portion of the strip mining program, other citizens have recognized it as being a sound program."

Heine said the federal government would finance 50 percent of the cost of regulating surface mines. Although the state will be in charge of daily regulation, he said, the federal government will make certain that federal funds are being properly spent.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

Government controls boost medical costs

Last year the medical profession beat back attempts in Congress to increase regulation and control medical prices. It is a continuing fight that doctors and hospitals expect to be in for a number of years to come. If they ever lose the American people will end up the real losers.

Dr. Charles Edwards, currently with the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in La Jolla, Calif., thinks the American people will pay dearly if price control and further regulation are allowed to envelop the medical business. His arguments make sense.

He points out that government regulations have had a negative effect on every industry they have touched. So why should the medical business be any different?

Eventually, Edwards argues, the community hospital, cornerstone of our health care delivery system, could have its ability to function severely eroded and possibly destroyed. At the least the quality health care Americans have become accustomed to expect may become a memory.

One of the strongest moves in Congress, with the support of the Carter administration, is a move to place a lid on medical prices. This is nothing less than price control, and for the same reason price control doesn't work for the economy as a whole, as President Carter acknowledges, it won't work when restricted to hospitals and doctors.

Edwards points out that the best quality nurses will simply quit if a hospital only offered them an unrealistic wage increase. With the prices of everything from soap to bedsheets going up, placing a lid on the hospital prices would obviously result in a decrease in the standard of health care.

Another area threatened by expanding government regulation, is the training of health care personnel. The federal government has been heavily involved in this already in order to increase the supply of trained professionals and to direct the future of medicine.

Dr. Edwards suggests that these efforts have been unsuccessful in keeping costs down — which was the purpose of increasing the number of trained professionals — and in improving the distribution and types of services.

Even if there could be minor benefits of further government regulation, Edwards argues that they would not compensate for the costs they create.

Edwards is a former assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, so he knows something about the hidden costs of government. He warns, bureaucrats not trained in medicine could end up making decisions for those trying to provide health care. Rules and regulations would stifle innovation and creativity. Eventually, as the scenario goes, the industry would slip into mediocrity and then into stagnation, a victim of the British syndrome.

If all this sounds like scare tactics, maybe there is good reason to be scared. It is comforting to know that this nation has a first-class medical system available to its citizens. It is expensive, just as is everything that is first-class.

We agree with Dr. Edwards that the last thing any profession, including the medical profession, needs is further government regulations.

Take a look at New York's transit

The Transit Workers Union is on strike in New York City and 5.5 million people dependent on mass transit are up the creek. The chaos erupting in Gotham is yet another example of what happens when the people of a large metropolitan area turn to government to provide them with transportation.

This is the first time in 14 years that the transit workers have gone on strike, yet through all those years the public was vulnerable to the whims of relatively few public employees. They used this power to obtain salary increases far in excess of the rest of their fellow New Yorkers. William Shore, vice president of New York's Regional Plan Association, pointed out that salary costs of the New York Transit Authority went up 43 percent from 1965 through 1975, while per capita income in the city rose only 8 percent, in constant dollars. Either a lot more employees have been hired, suggesting less work per employee, or transit workers have been faring far better than their neighbors.

As one might expect, politics has played a major role in bringing about this transit situation, just as it has played a role in creating most of that city's problems. In the late 1960s John Lindsay, then mayor of New York City, had dreams of being president of the United States. He couldn't afford trouble in Gotham so he made generous pension deals with the transit union to keep it quiet, at least until he was no longer mayor. The bill has come due and Lindsay is gone. Big pensions encouraged some of the most skilled transit workers to retire and now they cost the city nearly $190 million per year to keep the funds afloat. Correspondingly, the subway system in New York has fallen into disrepair, a testament to political management.

There are those who argue that none of this could be avoided. After all, they say, there is no alternative to a government mass transit system this negativism is tied to maintaining the current power establishments — big unions, big business and big management.

There is an alternative to government mass transit and that is called free enterprise. There is no reason any individual wishing to run a small bus service with a van should not be able to do so. There is no reason anyone with a car should not be able to put a sign on the door of his auto and start giving people rides. If transportation is a problem, the profit motive will encourage people to solve the problem. Having the public rely on hundreds of thousands of vans or jitneys seems far safer than having faith that a small number of transit workers will not use their power to gouge the public for as much money as they can get.

Is the United States on the verge of war against Iran?

Senator John Glenn, Ohio, who has seen his share of war, thinks we will be. Indignant as he, like other Americans, is at the seizing of innocent people as hostages, he warns that to make war would not rescue those 50 people. On the contrary, it would probably precipitate their deaths.

President Carter has strongly hinted that if the Iranians do not release the hostages, whom they have held for six months in our embassy at Teheran, he will order a naval blockade of Iranian ports.

Glenn, in an interview with a reporter of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, warned that such a blockade could cause a clash with Soviet Russia. He said:

"Let's say they send a little Russian freighter through and escorting it, one on each side, are great big Russian cruisers with surface-to-surface missiles, surface-to-air missiles, and 1,500 to 1,600 men aboard each of them."

"Before we establish any blockade, we have to have made an irrevocable decision that if that situation develops, we're going to sink those Russian ships. You don't bluff in a situation like that."

"If the Russians called our bluff and we did not sink them, that would be a tragedy.

And if we did sink them, that, too, would be a tragedy. ... Let's not start World War III over this." He advocated patience.

Glenn is right. The United States could gain nothing by military or naval action against Iran — except vast trouble. The object: release of the hostages, would not be attained. On the contrary, such action would probably bring about their immediate deaths. Then the best we could do would be to vent our spite against their murderers.

If we were to invade Iran, the Soviet army could move in, playing the role of big brother coming to help the beleaguered little fellow in his time of need. Already, we read, Iran has made overtures to the USSR, and Moscow has offered to assist the Iranians to overcome the effects of the economic sanctions. Military action by the United States to force release of the hostages might result in American forces fighting allied Russians and Iranians on the latter's soil.

It is not like Americans to do nothing in an emergency. We lean to action. But there are times when inaction may be more productive. There are always alternative courses of behavior — choices, and it behooves men to consider all the alternatives open in a given case and to choose the best. Sometimes, that may be to sit tight and do nothing.

This may well be such a case. For six months the Iranians have held the 50 hostages and have scoffed at us as we protested and employed one futile measure after another. They have undoubtedly enjoyed much satisfaction from being able to thwart the efforts of the world's richest nation to rescue its citizens and, at the same time, its reputation and prestige. They will continue to exult as long as we strain to escape the neat little trap in which they have caught us. In the abortive rescue attempt of April 24, we gave them another futility of ours to crow about.

The hostage affair also has apparently served a purpose politically for the ayatollah Khomeini and for the "students", though it is not clear to us who are far removed from internal affairs in Iran just what this purpose is. That has contributed to prolonging the agony.

If we keep cool and grant them nothing, not even publicity, in due time it will become evident to them that the jig is up, that they have wrung the situation dry of satisfaction, and that they might as well let the pawns of their game — that is, the hostages — go.

On the other hand, it is possible that the economic sanctions and the ostracism that we and other nations visit upon them will be so painful that they will retaliate by killing the hostages. What then?

Glenn acknowledged that this might occur. It would turn the civilized world against Iran. And it would last — once done it could not be undone. It seems incredible that even the most fanatical among the Iranians could countenance such an act, but it is possible. Human life, evidently, is cheap in their country.

Such an event would go down in history as a classic atrocity. It would shake the toughest optimist's faith in human nature. If it were to happen there is perhaps nothing that man could do — but pray.

It might, however, have the effect of alienating the Russians from Iran, for even the hardened Marxists of Moscow could scarcely justify such an act. The present danger is that the exasperation of the American people will move the administration to apply fire to the powder-keg which is Iran and that the result will be a world conflagration.

War will not free the hostages. It will make us all hostages to destruction and death.

ETTA HULME FOR WOMEN STAR-TELEGRAM N.E.A. '80

Rosie the runner

by ART BUCHWALD

BOSTON — Non-runners in America, who outnumber runners by at least three to one, have a new heroine. Her name is Rosie Ruiz.

Rosie claims to have finished first among the women in the sacred 26-mile Boston Marathon last week. She is supposed to have done it in the exceptional time of 2 hours 31 minutes and 56 seconds, the third-fastest 26-mile race ever run by a member of her sex.

After the race there was some question — and as of this writing still is — that Rosie ever ran the 26 miles. Those who doubt it are racing officials who have no record of her passing any checkpoints, and other women runners who say they never saw her in the race. All films have been studied by the experts and Rosie doesn't seem to appear in any except those where she is shown collapsing at the finish line.

While the rest of the world has returned to more mundane matters, the question of whether Rosie did or didn't will be debated in Boston for years to come.

If Rosie did, then we non-runners have no interest in her. But if she didn't, but claims she did, then she's our kind of girl.

Few will admit it, but those of us who don't run are getting terribly tired of people who do. It's a free country and anybody who wants to is entitled to run. But in recent years runners have come out of the closet and insist on talking about it.

You go into the office feeling lousy and some fresh-faced healthy male or female will come by the desk and say, "I did five miles this morning."

"Fantastic," you say, "I did the crossword puzzle on the bus."

They don't let it go at that. "I don't smoke, and I don't drink coffee and I feel like a million dollars. You ought to run in the morning. You look terrible."

"The reason I look terrible is I feel terrible. And the only reason I feel terrible is you look good. Now leave me alone."

If runners just ran in the morning it wouldn't be so bad. But more and more of them are now running during their lunch hour. At five of twelve they put on sweat suits and running shoes and tell you, "Well, I guess I'll do three miles during my break. Want to join me?"

"No, I'm going to lunch."

"You shouldn't have lunch. People eat and drink too much, and it isn't healthy for them."

"I know," I say, "but I like lunch, and it gives me a chance to talk to other people who also like lunch and are in as bad a shape as I am."

If you work in an office with a lot of runners and there are no showers in the building, it can be a pretty rotten afternoon.

There are some runners who like to ruff after work. You see them on the streets and highways on your way home from the office, and by the time you get to your house you're filled with guilt.

That's why non-runners hate runners. They make us all feel guilty because we don't enjoy pounding the pavements every day, gasping for air, with perspiration pouring down into our socks.

And that is why Rosie Ruiz' feat has so much meaning for us.

If Rosie really pulled a marathon stinking operation, she surely deserves the title of the non-runner's "Woman of the Year." All lethargic people have fantasized about winning the Boston Marathon without having to run it.

Ever since Rosie's feat has been publicized, I've dreamed of jumping out of the bushes near the finish line, doused with water and painfully breaking the tape 10 yards in front of Bill Rodgers, the four-time winner.

Some might call it cheating and unsportsmanlike but I like to think it's just getting even — getting even with all the runners in the country who won't let us non-runners do our own thing.

So to Rosie Ruiz — if you pulled a fast one — I say, "God bless you. You can have a three-martini lunch with me any time."

Share in a symbol

By Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Every household worries about replacing worn carpet, finding curtains to match the wallpaper or buying a new end table for the living room. But the Carter family here has an unusual problem in furnishing its home.

It's an elegant house, but much of the furniture has been borrowed from others, left behind by previous occupants or donated by generous friends. No self-respecting family is happy with loaned paintings or hand-me-down chairs.

Even if the Carters had enough money to fix up the place, it probably wouldn't be a very wise investment because they live an unpredictable landlord who could force them to vacate before they're really ready to move.

The previous occupants, the Fords, had to leave less than 18 months after they moved in. The Nixons lived there earlier, but they had to hastily vacate the place almost 1½ years before they expected the lease to expire.

The house, of course, is the nation's most famous residence — the White House.

Although Congress annually appropriates millions of dollars to employ a large housekeeping staff, landscape the elaborate grounds (technically a national park) and provide routine maintenance for the building, little public money ever had been available to build a permanent collection of furnishings.

Until the middle of this century, most presidential families brought their own furniture and art objects with them. When they departed, a few selected pieces remained behind as a gift to the nation but most of the furnishings quite naturally were carried away to the family's new house.

Congress has, on rare occasions, provided funds for extraordinary acquisitions or big refurbishing programs, but the first major reconstruction in modern times did not occur until the administration of President Harry S. Truman.

Even at that time, the White House was furnished with reproductions rather than authentic Americana appropriate for display in the mansion that stands as a symbol of the collective cultural heritage of the nation's people.

Not until the early 1960s did the first sustained effort begin to assemble a permanent collection of antiques that would provide an elegant yet tasteful display of American art and craftsmanship.

But even that effort has been forced to rely in the ensuing two decades upon sporadic special fund-raising campaigns, varying degrees of support from a series of presidential wives and the determination of White House Curator Clement E. Conger to "beg, borrow or steal" the appropriate furnishings.

The current collection, for example, includes 60 pieces of furniture, 140 paintings, 39 decorative objects and six pieces of sculpture on loan from museums, art galleries or generous individuals.

The art collection lacks adequate representation from the South and West. In addition, paintings of four former presidents — John Adams, James Buchanan, Andrew Johnson and William McKinley — are missing from the portrait collection of former chief executives.

More than 1.5 million visitors annually take advantage of the fact that the White House is the only residence of a chief of state anywhere in the world open for public tours on a regular basis without charge.

But that constant flow of tourists leads to the inevitable deterioration of draperies, upholstery, rugs and wall coverings that must be regularly refurbished, repaired or replaced.

To resolve those problems, a non-governmental, non-profit, non-partisan organization — the White House Preservation Fund — now has been established to seek financial support from public-spirited individuals, corporations and foundations.

With a goal of $25 million to build and maintain a permanent White House collection, the fund obviously needs large gifts — but it also emphasizes its desire to receive small, tax-deductible donations from all Americans who want to share in the heritage and tradition of "the president's house." It's a truly noble cause. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

New Mexico attorney general suspends assistant

SANTA FE (AP) — Attorney General Jeff Bingaman says he has suspended an assistant, Pat Whelan, for violation of written policies concerning contacts with the press.

"What I've done is suspend Pat from employment for 30 days and taken him off the penitentiary investigation," Bingaman said Monday. "I determined that he had made comments not previously cleared by me or authorized by me."

"This contradicts a well-established written policy on press contacts by staff people in this office," Bingaman said. "Any statements to the press about legal matters pending in the office are required to be cleared by me before being made."

Bingaman said the action concerned remarks attributed to Whelan in an article written last week by Frank Clifford of The Dallas Times Herald. The copyright article on the New Mexico penitentiary riot and its aftermath was distributed by the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post syndicate.

Whelan's comments concerned the adequacy of the funding provided by the 1980 Legislature for Bingaman's office to investigate the causes of the prison riot. And he also expressed views on the ability of District Attorney Eloy Martinez's office to conduct successful prosecutions of inmates accused of crimes committed during the riot.

"I'm impressed with his work and he is a valuable member of the staff," Bingaman said Monday concerning Whelan. "But under the circumstances I had no choice but to enforce our policy."

Santa Fe Attorney Steven G. Farber, president of the New Mexico Lawyers Guild, said in a press release Monday that the guild

"condemned the heavy-handed punishment inflicted on Assistant Attorney General Patrick Whelan by Attorney General Jeff Bingaman."

"Pat Whelan's treatment by the attorney general is a signal by Bingaman to the lawyers in that office that they had better not part from the official line that that office can do a proper investigation," Farber said in the release.

Farber also said it is incredible that Tim Orwig, Bingaman's public information officer, could make a statement that Whelan doesn't know what he is talking about.

Commissioner, newsman indicted for mail fraud and conspiracy

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County Commissioner Robert Y. Eckels and Houston television newsmen Judd McIlvain were free on $5,000 bonds after being indicted on federal charges of mail fraud and conspiracy.

Eckels, a Republican seeking his third four-year term, and McIlvain were named on nine counts of mail fraud and one count of conspiracy.

McIlvain said following the indictments Monday that he had anticipated the action "and I expected it just before an election." The newsman said he was being harassed because of his television news reports on alleged corruption within the FBI.

McIlvain said he and Eckels would seek a speedy trial.

Asencio says guerillo captors were 'spaced-out teeny-boppers'

HOMESTEAD AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio, freed after 61 days as a hostage in Colombia, called his guerilla captors a "bunch of spaced-out teeny-boppers" and said he nearly dissuaded some of them from Marxism.

An exuberant Asencio told a State Department spokesman he could have converted a few of the leftists to capitalism if he'd had more time with them in the Dominican Republic Embassy at Bogota.

"They didn't have the foggiest idea what the real world is like," spokesman David Passage quoted the 48-year-old diplomat as saying.

Asencio, who was freed in Havana on Sunday along with 11 other captive diplomats, arrived here 20 pounds lighter and with a bushy gray beard.

On the 40-minute flight to Homestead, he expressed "no sympathy" for his Marxist captors, but "considerable human understanding," said Passage.

"He said he was making great progress in converting some of them to capitalism," Passage said by telephone Sunday from the ambassador's suite at the base.

"A number of them were quite surprised at some of the things he said ... he thought with a little more time he probably could have converted half a dozen or so of them."

The spokesman said Asencio, the U.S. ambassador to Colombia since 1977, was in excellent health and his mood was "celebratory" like somebody who had just won the "Fort Lauderdale Open" or something.

Asencio stepped off the chartered plane into the arms of his wife, Nancy, and daughter, Maria. His other daughter and three sons arrived later Sunday for a reunion. Passage said.

The hostages, who were accompanied on a flight from Bogota by 15 leftist guerillas, were greeted in Havana by Passage, two American doctors and Samuel Eaton, a deputy assistant secretary of state. The papal nuncio, Msgr. Angelo Acerci, and a Vatican negotiator flew with the Americans to Homestead, then left immediately. Passage said.

Passage said Asencio, who did not speak with reporters, would stay here two days, resting, visiting his family and being examined by doctors. He then will fly to Washington for debriefing.

The ambassador said the guerillas were "a very mixed group, some of them being hard-core Marxists, other being rather fuzzy-minded ideologues of one sort or another," Passage said.

Bush uses get tough tactics in hometown speech in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — George Bush opened his Texas campaign with a get-tough speech in his home city, saying it is time for President Carter to be out of the White House and if Ronald Reagan wins the Republican nomination, the GOP has little chance of winning in November.

He was scheduled to fly to Dallas later today for a string of speeches and a private fundraiser.

Bush opened his five-day Texas tour by calling Carter "too weak and too vacillating with our allies."

During a city hall rally and a civic club speech, he said repeatedly that the United States "should stop apologizing to anyone, especially the Soviet Union and Iran, and act like the nation we once were."

Bush told about 700 people at a city hall rally "It is important that I turn things around in Texas. This country is looking for an alternative to Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter, and I am that alternative."

Bush is hoping for another win against Reagan in Texas' Saturday primary.

Bush was introduced at the rally by Leon Jaworski, former chief counsel for the Watergate inquiry, who said he had to leave the Democratic party "in despair and I seek someone in the Republican party who I can support. Ronald Reagan is an extremist. Ronald Reagan has no experience on a national level or in foreign areas."

Food stamp users warned of possible suspension

AUSTIN (AP) — Food stamps to buy groceries may be late, reduced or even suspended, state welfare officials are warning those participating in the program.

Jerome Chapman, Department of Human Resources commissioner, said Monday that Congress set a national limit of $6.18 billion on the program this year and that limit will be reached by June 1. Congress is working to extend the program, but it is uncertain when and to what extent additional financing will be available.

"At this time we don't know how much money Congress will provide for food stamps for June through September of 1980," said a letter to persons receiving food stamps. "We want to alert you to the possibility that your authorization to get food stamps may be late. It also is possible that the amount of stamps you receive may be less."

Chapman said 1.2 million Texans are eligible for food stamps, and about $40 million in stamps is issued each month. Most recipients are children of low-income families but many others are elderly or disabled.

Chapman said if Congress acts early enough in May, the authorizations to participate in the program in June will be issued but may be late.

He said Congress also may finance the program partially for the rest of the year.

If this happens, Chapman said, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will determine how much reduction will be made in issuing food stamps.

"In addition," he said, "we cannot rule out the possibility of a suspension of benefits for June and perhaps later months."

Elderly challenge stereotyped ideas

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Perry Gresham wants to change attitudes the young have toward their elders, and the ideas older people have about themselves.

A longtime educator and former college president, the white-haired Gresham is not exactly leading a revolution. But he's convinced he's come up with an important idea that may have meaning to young and old.

He states it simply: Humans are not all laboring under a death sentence helped along by diminishing power and ability. Life can, and often is, better as one grows older.

The aging process is a series of renewals of energy, ability and enjoyment, Gresham says. It is not the methodical wearing-down-and-out of the mind and body mechanism.

"Most old people do not fit the stereotypes that have accumulated through years of misunderstanding," says Gresham, 72, president emeritus of Bethany College in West Virginia, director of five corporations, writer and lecturer. He lives in Central Florida part of the year.

"Most of us are not useless and embarrassing to others," he says. "We are not like the typical TV caricatures depicting gentle foolishness or simplemindedness. An old person does not have to be regarded as a nuisance — an old fool to be ignored or discarded."

He knows this may not come as much of a surprise to some of his peers, particularly his elderly friends and colleagues still active in education, business, the arts and other professions. But he thinks the idea may have escaped the great majority of the population, from the Golden Agers to all of those "growing older" in their 40s, 50s and beyond.

The tall, husky septuagenarian says he came upon his views rather abruptly.

He was preparing to address the American Association of Retired Persons in St. Louis, Mo., one night about the various pitfalls of growing old — failing memory, decreased hearing and eyesight, forgetfulness, general infirmities and so on.

"Suddenly, I said to myself, 'My God, I can't drive another nail into their coffins,'" Gresham says. "I realized then that my thinking was all wrong."

"My mind, set on the conventional concepts of aging, had blinded me to what could very well turn out to be the greatest discovery of my life," he says. "I had misread the data. Life does not run down like that. The actual fact is that life is a series of renewals."

His text on the subject was abandoned, and he later felt so strongly about his new-found sense of growing old that he wrote a book about it.

Called "With Wings as Eagles," the soon-to-be-published book is a sort of "how-to" or "self-help" work for those piling on the years — from the 40s and 50s onward.

Filled with his own philosophy as well as tips from Gresham's many friends — comedian Bob Hope, Sen. Barry Goldwater, the late symphony conductor Arthur Fiedler — the book is a compendium of sensible, practical information on what to expect along the aging way. It tells how to prepare for old age, how to make the road easier and what to do when you get there.

He says one reason he wrote the book is that he senses a "sort of contempt for the old" in this country. Because of such attitudes, many old people have lost their pride, "their sense of self-regard," Gresham says.

"A new attitude on aging begins with each of us," Gresham says. "If you go on thinking the way people have always thought, you deserve what you get."

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By LOUISE PIERCE

A few of the phone calls, conversations and letters I have received have extolled the glories of older divorce. But they have all come from people about to be divorced. None has come from a former husband and wife who is now alone.

That tells me a lot about the emotional state of those who separate themselves from longtime mates and expect to find immediate, supreme and continuing joy in their aloneness. In my opinion, they don't.

According to authorities in this field, the divorced person is suddenly separated from everything he has treasured — love, sympathy, companionship, understanding and all the other warm feelings that marriage provides. We all know that the longer a thing has existed, the harder it is to remove it. So it follows that older divorce is a greater trauma than younger separation. Dr. Richard Robertello, author of several respected books on this subject, says that divorce is one of the most highly traumatic things a man can go through, that a divorced man feels unloved and full of despair. He adds, "Men whose wives have left them are shattered, and they really do withdraw."

Of course this is also true for older women who find themselves alone by court decree. And women need to pause and reconsider their possible loneliness before leaving a long-established home. It used to be that husbands were the ones who walked out. But now, since many women can support themselves, it is more often the wives who leave home.

So both mates need to give serious thought to any marital change. We cannot escape separation through death. But we can avoid grass widowhood.

To me, marriage is much like footwear. The old shoe may be worn, patched, cracked, even full of holes. But it is still comfortable and we don't want to throw it away. A new shoe usually pinches a little, sometimes a lot. And that can become intolerable.

At or near retirement age, people do not adjust easily to new surroundings, fresh faces, strange habits or new lifestyles. I know many divorced-and-remarried men and women who would give all they possess to be back in the comfortable routine of their former marriages.

Even if a long-married pair gets on each other's nerves sometimes, if they quarrel, if they resort to taking a few days' vacation from each other now and then, they can still come back to home and hearth and the knowledge that neither is truly alone. Knowing that there is another to share time and space and hope for the future is something we all need for security and stability.

I've been married to a good-natured man for almost 43 years. But if he ever gets mean and irritable, if he shouts at me, if he aims a missile my way, I'll never leave him. I'll know that another man might be far meaner, might heave heavier rocks.

I believe that the most blessed institution on earth, meaning marriage, should be held in sacred and permanent trust. And the older it is, the more respect a marriage deserves.

What does the newly divorced older person face?

Loners tell us that they find their social life stops, their fears of being alone grow greater day by day and they hesitate to seek new mates because of fear of another rejection or another unhappy marriage. Few people our age seek singles bars or the company of others recently divorced: only mirrors of misery await them there. When you come home to an empty house and find nobody to talk to, you are lonely indeed.

Even if you adjust to loneliness eventually, or if you remarry, is the post-divorce trauma worth its pain? I think not.

DEAR LOUISE: My husband and I got a divorce after 29 years of fighting. Had to. No way to go on together. He got married again. I didn't, don't plan to. Problem for me is that his folks like me better than they do him. Ask me to family dinners. Him and new wife too. Shall I go? D.N.

DEAR D.N.: If I were in your situation, I couldn't go to the family dinners comfortably. But if you can, without rancor toward your husband and his new wife, try it and see how everybody gets along.

If you are honestly relieved to be rid of his meanness, and if he really loves his new wife (or believes that he does), perhaps you can meet them without resentment.

I'm sorry you didn't write me before you got the divorce. I'd have tried to talk you out of it.

Patience, balance needed for roofing

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Repairing a partly torn shingle can be a do-it-yourself job for anyone with patience and a sense of balance.

By following simple directions, many homeowners can do these repairs themselves, says a spokesman for a shingle manufacturer, who adds that maintenance can prevent minor repairs from becoming serious problems.

If a shingle is partly torn, all it needs is a touch of roofing cement on the damaged underside. If the shingle is badly torn, however, apply cement to the damaged area (again on the underside) and re-nail the shingle. Then apply cement over the exposed nails.

If the entire shingle needs replacing, use a pry bar and remove the damaged piece along with the nails. Slip the new shingle in place and nail it to the sheathing below, using galvanized roofing nails.

Famous Americans don't tell ages

NEW YORK (AP) — Many famous Americans do not mind revealing their personal backgrounds, yet they resist disclosing their ages, reports Jim Bobulski, publisher of "Who's Who in America."

He says 29.46 percent of the women and 2.35 percent of the men in the reference book omit their birth dates in giving their biographical data.

Bobulski notes that one woman, rather than fill in a blank with her birth date, declared: "Racks and thumbscrews could not extort it." Another person replied: "Have decided not to be born." Still another wrote: "I am not young enough to be careless, nor old enough to be reckless."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: When APPALLED IN K.C. wrote that she was dismayed that her married daughter was going to let her 3-year-old son and 19-year-old unmarried sister witness the birth of her second child, you said, "It should be a fascinating and educational experience."

My wife and I are contemplating having a child. I would like to invite her 11-year-old nephew and members of his Little League team to witness the conception of the child. I also think it would be a "fascinating and educational experience" for the neighborhood kindergarten class to watch. My wife is appalled at this idea. Would you please tell her that she is a prude — that the best way to learn about the miracle of life is to witness it from its very beginning? Signed ...

AS CRAZY AS YOU

DEAR ABBY: Surely you weren't serious when you approved allowing a 3-year-old to watch his mother give birth! I am a registered nurse who has assisted in at least 5,000 births, and every time one of those supportive husbands scrubs and dons a gown to be with his wife during childbirth, I hold my breath for fear he will faint. Men in the delivery room are a pain in the neck. The bigger they are, the harder they fall. Abby, please don't encourage making childbirth a family affair. We don't need fainting daddies and hysterical kids while mama is panting, puffing and pushing.

MARTHA AT ST. JOHN'S

DEAR ABBY: When I was 9, my mother gave birth prematurely to my brother. I was the only one present — not counting my little sisters who were 4 and 6 at the time. It took me years to get over it. I'm not sure I ever did. I am now 36 years old, married, but ...

NO CHILDREN IN CANADA

DEAR ABBY: Allowing a 19-year-old unmarried girl to witness the birth of a baby might cause her to go on the Pill for the duration. But a 3-year-old child! Abby, that's sick!

According to the Bible, Elizabeth hid herself for five months before John was born. Births should be sacred and private — not a sideshow.

M.S.F. IN BELPRE, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I think that a young expectant mother who wants to let her 3-year-old watch a new life come into the world is out of her mind. And so are you for agreeing with her. If it's such a great "learning experience," why not invite the toddler's nursery school class, and serve ice cream and cookies? Better yet, why not hire a hall and sell tickets?

MAC IN PASADENA

DEAR ABBY: I've read and reread that letter 17 times, and still can't believe my eyes. Abby, as a nurse (obstetrics and surgery) for 23 years, and mother of five, I think even a normal birth is not for the eyes of a 3-year-old. Can you guarantee that the birth will be quick, quiet and uncomplicated? Seeing his mother moan, scream and yell could be traumatic for the youngster. And heaven forbid there should be complications! To expose a child to these facts of life at such a tender age could give him psychological problems for life. This is child abuse! Where were your brains on this one, Abby?

Kicks off year-long party

Beta Sigma Phi slates Founder's Day

Pampa's six Beta Sigma Phi chapters will celebrate the sorority's 49th Founder's Day with a dinner Wednesday evening at the Pampa Country Club.

This week's activities kick off a year-long Golden Anniversary celebration that will end next year with a huge birthday party.

Heading this year's effort in Pampa is Jamilou Garren, City Council president and toastmistress for the evening. Irvine Mitchell of Preceptor Chi will present a special message from the International Executive Council of Beta Sigma Phi.

Awards will be presented to local members and outstanding members in recognition for their sorority and community work. The six Pampa chapters are Rho Eta, Phi Epsilon Beta, Upsilon, Xi Phi Alpha, Xi Beta and Preceptor Chi.

From April 30, 1980 to April 30, 1981, the 250,000 members of Beta Sigma Phi chapters around the world will work on two goals — extending the hand of friendship to community women and enjoying to the fullest extent the opportunities for personal growth.

Begun in the Depression years by Walter Ross, Beta Sigma Phi was originally designed to provide an outlet for women who could not attend college and were obliged to remain home and support their families. Ross provided these women with a program of cultural study so they could have a chance at intellectual and social growth.

From that first chapter in Abilene, Kan., Beta Sigma Phi has grown into an international service, cultural and social organization with chapters in 31 countries.

Each year, members are provided with a different outline of study in the liberal arts. Life, learning and friendship are the bywords of Beta Sigma Phi.

Internationally, chapters of the world's largest Greek letter sorority have created special funds to which they contribute. The International Endowment Fund has donated more than a million dollars to health research groups, homes for underprivileged children and other causes. The Exemplar Fund supports Literacy Village in India. A college scholarship fund provides money for members or their sons and daughters.

Joel Grey: believer in all possibilities

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Recently, a couple of opera singers were married on Broadway — Cesare Siepi in "Carmelina" and Giorgio Tozzi in "The Most Happy Fella." But Joel Grey is doing something more unusual.

This season, the 47-year-old Broadway song and dance man is singing with the New York City Opera.

He is one of the two leads, both male, the other an opera singer, in Kurt Weill's "Silverlake." He hopes to sing his part with the opera company this summer at Wolf Trap near Washington and again during next fall's New York season. He'll sing it twice in December during the company's annual visit to Los Angeles.

Just before she became general director of the New York City Opera, Beverly Sills had asked Grey if he'd sing with the company if he had the right thing for him.

Later, Broadway producer-director Hal Prince, who sometimes also directs operas, called to offer him the part of Olim in an English version of "Silverlake."

Grey says he was worried when he went to his first rehearsal with conductor Julius Rudel. "I thought he'd hear me and say, 'I don't think you ought to do this.' I kept waiting for him to say, 'Sorry, kid,' instead, he said, 'This is good.'"

Grey says that Lotta Lenya, Weill's widow and a long-time friend, wants him to make a recording of Weill songs and there will be a recording made of "Silverlake." The New York City Opera production is the first since the opera opened simultaneously in three cities in Germany in 1933, to be shut immediately by the Nazis.

"It's a very powerful piece," Grey says, "about conscience and revenge and eventually the love that is inside people. The love has been twisted to a desire for revenge. Eventually the conscience gets back to its purest sense. The people are reborn in a way."

"I'm a constant believer in possibilities. I believe people who have had wounds, if they're put in an atmosphere of love, attention and care, can come back."

Grey started going to operas with his wife, and now loves the art form. "We went to the concert by Luciano Pavarotti and Joan Sutherland," he says, "and it was staggering. Beautiful, life-affirming, enriching. It made me want to go out and do it. Competitively, a lot of people get depressed when they hear something that good. I'm always so stimulated."

"I think the musical theater when it is right is really a very high experience. And opera, when it is right, goes even another step. It reaches for the impossible and that magic trick is very exciting to be part of, on or off stage."

Grey recently has been performing his one-man show in America and Europe and he made a TV special in Paris to be shown in Europe next fall. In Toronto, he appeared with his father, comedian Mickey Katz, for the first time in 18 years.

Grey's career on Broadway began as a replacement for stars, in "Come Blow Your Horn" and "Half a Sixpence." Hal Prince saw him in clown makeup as Anthony Newley's replacement in "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off" and thought of him for a cynical, sleazy master of ceremonies character, not then even written, in "Cabaret," which opened in 1966. Not only was it the first role Grey created on Broadway but probably his best-known, because he repeated it in the movie and won an Oscar.

Then he was George M. Cohan in "George M!," the Dauphin who became King Charles VII in "Goodtime Charley" and Jacobowsky in "Jacobowsky and the Colonel."

Grey moved to Los Angeles to develop projects to star in, starting with a book adaptation and two original scripts, one aimed for TV and two for movies. "My wife and I were in the midst of that when this opera came up," Grey says.

"We're hiring writers and directors and going to studios with these projects, which are hopefully of high quality. It's better than sitting and waiting for the right role or doing things you're not crazy about."

"Hal Prince says I'm entering a new time as an actor, when I can do all kinds of roles as a grown person. The past 10 years was kind of a transitional period, with that old mixed blessing of looking young."

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — Tommy Caldwell, bass player for the Marshall Tucker Band, died early Monday at Spartanburg General Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

The 30-year-old musician had been listed in stable but critical condition since last Tuesday when he suffered extensive head injuries in an automobile accident.

Authorities said Caldwell's jeep flipped over after it hit a stalled car on a Spartanburg street.

On Sunday a spokesman for the Southern rock band said the group had canceled its spring tour of several Midwestern cities scheduled to begin Wednesday.

ARRESTS AT THE PENTAGON were results of a Non-Nuclear War Coalition group which tried to block the entrance of the Pentagon Monday. The group started out as a demonstration with a police escort. The arrests came as the crowd made a move to block passage of officials and workers to the Pentagon.

Hawaii site for new asthma aid

By RON STATON
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — They look like any other kids — frolicking in the pool, shouting to each other, splashing each other, and having a good time.

But what makes this group of some 20 kids a little bit different is that all suffer from asthma.

The kids — aged 5 through 14 — are enrolled in Kokua Na Keiki (Help the Children), a health-education and physical-conditioning program for asthmatic children and their parents.

"It's a fun thing for kids and not a heavy academic program," said Harlan Yuhara, state coordinator of the program, which is sponsored by the American Lung Association of Hawaii.

The children participate in weekly hour-long classes in which they learn about asthma and how to control and manage it.

The classes include breathing exercises, demonstrations of yoga and karate (both considered good exercises for asthmatics), and an explanation of what is happening when they have an asthma attack, how to handle it and how to prevent future attacks.

A highlight of the classroom instruction is a demonstration with a pig lung, with the kids showing little of the squeamishness of their parents.

Celanese Crop. wins award

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The safe operations of the Pampa Plant of Celanese Chemical Company, Inc. were recognized by the National Petroleum Refiners Association during the trade group's 78th Annual Meeting in New Orleans last month.

At a special presentation ceremony on March 24, NPRA Board Chairman, Henry A. Rosenberg Jr., presented the NPRA's Silver Award to Homer C. Wilson, Vice President Operations, in recognition of the exceptional record of safe operations at the company's Pampa plant.

Meritorious Safety Performance Awards, citing various facilities for achieving a total recordable incidence rate of 2.0 or less for the 1979 calendar year, were presented to 20 refineries and petrochemical plants operated by NPRA member companies.

Special Gold Award certificates were also presented to 43 plants and refineries for a 20 percent reduction in total recordable incidence rate, in 1979, from the rate recorded the previous calendar year. Seven additional NPRA member companies received the Silver Award for 10 percent reduction for the same period of time.

operating 1,000,000 or more employee-hours without a lost workday case involving days away from work.

The presentation of the safety award plaques is part of a comprehensive safety awards program which the NPRA's Fire & Accident

Prevention Committee has developed to promote accident prevention in the refining and petro-chemical industry and to publicly recognize the excellent record of safety in operations which the industry has compiled.

Fly tyer works, and eyes calendar

WATERFORD, Conn. (AP) — The mayfly hatch is on Latimer's Brook and the brook is running fresh. The mere contemplation of it is balm to Henry Dougherty's winter-stiffened bones.

Day after day of late, and night after night, Henry has bent over his work table, focusing his one good eye on tiny bits of fur and feather, arranging them with fingers that are thick and tobacco-stained but as supple as a surgeon's.

Henry Dougherty is a counterfeiter of nature, a maker of trout fishing flies. At that so fine a craft, he has few peers.

"I don't know the real names of these bugs, the names the professors give them," he said. "I just go to the river, catch the bug the fish are eating, bring it home and try to match it."

"Sometimes I think the flies you buy in the store were tied by people who never saw the bug. That's why I began tying my own 20 years ago. All I know is, mine work."

The people who fish with Henry know it, too. Henry catches fish when nobody else does. Fish take his lures at any time of the day, any time of the season, and, to the dismay of everyone else, with maddening frequency.

The reason has to do not only with the artistry of Henry's fly-tying but the nature of Henry himself.

He is one of those rare species of human animal who blends with nature, is of a piece with nature. He detects color, movement, scent, sound that others do not see or hear or smell.

He knows that fish are not caught in anger or in malice and he harbors neither. He knows that fish are not lured by complex technologies that seduce modern day seekers of easy solutions, but by meekness and patience. He personifies both.

Henry was a cabinetmaker during his working days. He is 71 now, but when he closed his shop some years ago it was more because of health than age.

Arthritis had crippled his right arm and shoulder. Doctors tried ointments and potions and liniments but none worked.

They could not have known, because Henry didn't know it himself, that in this case the remedy would be poles and strings and hooks.

"I had spent my whole life in the woods with my bird dogs," he said, "but for some reason I had never gone fishing."

"When my arm went bad, a pal of mine said, 'Henry, all that wing needs is some exercise and the best way to get it is with a fly rod.' It worked. I got into fishing and fishing got into me. I would fish eight days a week if I could."

In the hierarchy of anglers, the dry-fly purist tends to look with smug disdain upon all other types, and the one who ties his own flies looks up to none, the ultimate fishing snob.

Dutch crown not worn

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch have a gold crown adorned with four rubies, four sapphires, eight emeralds and dozens of pearls, but their rulers never wear it. When Princess Beatrix succeeds her mother on Wednesday, the jeweled headpiece will stay on a table next to the throne in the Nieuwe Kerk (New Church) on Dam Square.

After the ceremony, the crown will go back into a palace vault with the State Scepter and the State Orb. The Royal Insignia won't be brought out again until the inauguration of Beatrix's successor, the seventh monarch of the House of Orange-Nassau.

When the egalitarian, commerce-minded Dutch accepted a constitutional monarchy in 1814, after more than two centuries as a republic, they limited the trappings and stressed the constitutional role of royalty.

The ceremony Wednesday is an inauguration, not a coronation, "a meeting of both chambers of Parliament, only a state affair," said one government official. "Nobody puts a crown on her head.... She has made it very clear that it is a bond, this inauguration, between the king and the people."

Ford Motor Co. reports record loss

DETROIT (AP) — Citing inflation and the slumping American car market, Ford Motor Co. reported a record $164 million first-quarter loss and said high interest rates, increasing energy costs and the weakening economy could cause more problems later in 1980.

The No. 2 automaker said Monday its second consecutive quarter in the red resulted from a $473 million deficit in domestic operations, its worst loss from North American business ever.

That was about the loss some have predicted for tottering Chrysler Corp., which has yet to announce its first quarter results, and was substantially more than industry analysts had expected from Ford.

In last year's first quarter, Ford earned $595 million, or $4.97 a share worldwide. Profits in that period totaled $220 million in the United States and $375 million from foreign business.

The loss this quarter amounted to $1.36 a share.

Ford's worst previous three-month-period loss came in the fourth quarter of 1979 when the automaker lost $109 million worldwide. The previous record loss from domestic operations was $299 million in the third quarter last year.

Lower volume, increased marketing costs, more small vehicles in the product mix and the impact of inflation were responsible for the record loss, Chairman Phillip Caldwell and President Donald E. Petersen said in a statement.

Kennedy dream faces bad May

WASHINGTON (AP) — May promises to be a cruel month for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's dream of convincing the Democratic Party that he has a better chance to win in November than President Carter.

Kennedy scored narrow victories this month in Pennsylvania and Michigan that underlined his contention that Carter is vulnerable in the northern industrial states, often the key to Democratic presidential victories.

But in May the battleground is shifting to states that are likely to push Carter's delegate total close to the 1,666 he needs for nomination to a second term.

The first test will be on Saturday in Texas, hostile territory for Kennedy outside the Mexican-American community. Carter seems certain to capture a clear majority of the state's 152 delegates.

Tuesday, May 6, promises to be another big day for the Carter-Mondale ticket with primaries in Indiana, North Carolina, Tennessee and the District of Columbia. Only in the nation's capital is Kennedy likely to emerge a winner.

And coming up later in the month, states like Arkansas, Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Nevada seem far more friendly to Carter than to Kennedy. Only in Maryland and Oregon would the senator seem to have a chance to emerge on top.

Henderson may play for San Francisco in '80

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, without a first-round choice in the National Football League draft for the first time since 1967, mulled the possibility today of acquiring a third-round pick from San Francisco in return for linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson.

Henderson told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Monday night the vice president and head coach of the 49ers called him earlier in the day and told him he'd be wearing a San Francisco uniform next fall.

Gil Brandt, vice president of the Cowboys, confirmed Monday that the club had talked with San Francisco officials about a trade for Henderson, but said nothing had been finalized.

"At this moment, no trade has been made for Henderson," Brandt said. "We had some conversation with San Francisco. A lot of teams have expressed interest in Henderson. If we get an offer we like, we could trade him."

A spokesman for the 49ers confirmed to the Star-Telegram that head coach Bill Walsh and vice president John Ralston had talked with Henderson by telephone Monday about a possible contract. However, he added:

"We are uncertain at this time if we will be able to meet Henderson's demands."

Henderson "retired" from the Cowboys late last season rather than allow the team to release him on waivers.

Buzzard fourth in shot put
Danny Buzzard of Pampa finished fourth in the shot put with a toss of 55-11 1/4 during the Region I-AAAA Track Meet Saturday at Lubbock.

Football meeting
Parents of all Pampa Harvester football players are urged to attend a meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the high school fieldhouse, head coach Larry Gilbert announced today.

Babe Ruth games
Cree Companies and J.T. Richardson won two games last week to open the 13-year old Babe Ruth League season.

The controversial linebacker remained the property of the Cowboys and the club has tried to trade him to several teams. There was speculation Henderson would be traded to New Orleans, but the Saints' highest offer was reportedly a sixth-round choice.

San Francisco had the No. 2 choice in both the first and second rounds of the draft, but the spokesman ruled out the possibility the club would trade away either of those.

"Walsh said he wanted a weak side linebacker, and he said I was the best in the business at playing man-to-man coverage on running backs," Henderson said.

"Walsh said he needs somebody to be a leader for the younger guys. He said he wanted me to be ready to take a lot of responsibility, and I told him I was ready to play football," Henderson said.

"This is exactly what I need. I can help them win some games. I told Bill Walsh that I could play specialty teams or whatever, and he said he was sending no draft choices to Dallas for a specialty team player. He said he wanted me to play linebacker fulltime."

"Eat your heart out Tom Landry," he said. "Eat your heart out (Saints coach) Dick Nolan. San Francisco said they are getting the best linebacker in the business, and they are right."

Oliver shifted

DETROIT (AP) — Since being moved to right field, Al Oliver "has not been himself" and is being shifted back to left field, Texas Rangers manager Pat Corrales says.

"I told him ... he'd be back in left field Tuesday and he'd stay there the remainder of the season," Corrales said as the slumping Rangers prepared to play a three-game series against the Detroit Tigers.

Oliver was at left field when he came to Texas from Pittsburgh before the 1978 season, but was moved to center field and later to right field because club officials felt he would strengthen those positions.

Each time, Oliver made the shifts but complained mildly about the club's not leaving him in one position.

"It's not the way he was playing, just the way he was acting. It wasn't Al. So after Sunday's game (a 7-4 loss at Cleveland), I called him in and asked him what was the matter," the Texas manager said.

Sonics down but not out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers aren't counting defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle out of the Western Conference title series, but realistically the SuperSonics don't seem to have much of a chance.

The Sonics are down 3-1 in the best-of-seven series, with Game 5 scheduled at the Forum in suburban Inglewood Wednesday night. A sellout crowd of 17,505 is assured for the nationally televised affair, which begins at 11:30 p.m. EDT.

The Lakers are 4-1 against the Sonics at the Forum this season — the only loss being a 106-107 setback in Game 1 last week. Overall this year, Los Angeles has a 41-5 record on its home court and has won 29 of its last 31 games there.

Even if the Sonics win Wednesday night, they would still have to win at home Friday night and triumph at the Forum again Sunday afternoon to get an opportunity to defend their NBA title.

"You can never count Seattle out," said Los Angeles forward Jamaal Wilkes, who scored 24 points and pulled down 13 rebounds in the Lakers' come-from-behind 96-93 victory in Game 4 Sunday. "But right now, I feel great. They're the defending champions and I want very badly to beat them in Los Angeles before our fans."

The Lakers overcame a 21-point deficit midway in the third quarter Sunday for a sweep of the two games in Seattle, which were played at Hec Edmundson Pavilion at the University of Washington because the Kingdome and the Seattle Coliseum were booked previously.

"Yeah, I'm joyed," said Los Angeles rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, "but not overjoyed. This doesn't cr—h'em. We still have one more to go. They're the champs and they're capable of coming back."

That's exactly what the Sonics did against Milwaukee in the Western Conference semifinals. Seattle was down 3-2 to the Bucks but won in Milwaukee and again at home to earn a berth in the conference finals.

"I won't feel good until we win the fourth," said sixth man Mike Cooper, who has been a key factor in the Lakers' success story this season. "That's the world champs we're messin' around with. They can win three straight."

Cooper is a rookie in every way but a literal sense. He is actually in his second NBA season, but played only seven minutes last year because of a knee injury.

Los Angeles Coach Paul Westhead agrees with his players.

"I fully expect Wednesday's game to be the toughest one in the series for us," said Westhead. "They'll play their best game. They might even relish the challenge."

One Sonic who played anything but his best game Sunday was guard Fred Brown, who missed all 11 of his field goal attempts. It was the same Fred Brown who connected on 15 of 21 floor shots last Tuesday night in scoring 34 points as the Sonics won Game 1 108-107.

The series winner faces Philadelphia for the NBA championship. If the Lakers win Wednesday night, they would face the 76ers in Game 1 of the best-of-seven championship series Sunday afternoon at the Forum.

First draft pick never went pro

NEW YORK (AP) — "...and the Detroit Lions, with the No. 1 selection, draft..."

The moment National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle cleared his throat and completed that sentence today, another bumper crop of millionaires was born.

It wasn't always that way, of course. Back before the Earl Campbells and Terry Bradshaws of this era, the O.J. Simpsons and Roman Gabriels of the previous decade and even the Tom Harmon and Paul Hornungs of bygone days, there was Jay Berwanger.

He started it all... or, more accurately, he nearly started it all. He was the first winner of the Heisman Trophy, emblematic of the finest collegiate football player in the land. And he was the No. 1 choice in the first draft in the National Football League.

But he never played a minute of pro ball. Philadelphia actually had the No. 1 choice in that No. 1 draft and, on Feb. 8, 1936, the Eagles selected Berwanger, a halfback out of the University of Chicago. They then traded the negotiation rights to George Halas' Chicago Bears.

The "negotiation" lasted less time than it takes to wave goodbye.

"I read in the paper that I'd been drafted," Berwanger said. "That's all I knew about it. Then I met George in a hotel lobby one night. We were both going to a social engagement. After he introduced me to his wife and I introduced him to my friend, he said, 'What do you want?' and I said, 'How about $25,000 for two years, no cut?' and he said to my girlfriend, 'Nice to meet you,' and to me he said, 'Jay, I'll see you around.' That was the last I saw of him.

"Life in the NFL didn't look like a very promising future because they weren't paying any money in those days — $100, maybe $150 a game," Berwanger said. "They couldn't afford it. They didn't have television; they weren't a big drawing card at the gate, and the country was just coming out of the depression."

Sox remain tied

By the Associated Press

Joe Hicks' single to right field brought in the winning run Monday night as Amarillo beat Midland, 4-2, and remained in a tie with San Antonio for the lead in the Texas League Western Division.

San Antonio, with six runs on four hits in the sixth inning, retained its place at the top with an 8-4 win over El Paso. Both teams are 13-6.

In the Eastern Division, Tulsa and Shreveport remained tied for first at 6-5, even though both teams lost Monday night.

Hicks' single for Amarillo came in a three-run second inning. Eric Show, 1-0, took the win. Losing pitcher was Henry Mack, 0-1. Midland fell to 6-13.

Bill Swoope's two-run single sent San Antonio into the lead in the sixth inning.

Plugged Nickle warms up for Derby

LOUISVILLE, KY. (AP) — Trainer Tom Kelly admits he's superstitious, perhaps because of his Irish heritage, but he isn't worried that Plugged Nickle is staying at stall 13 in barn No. 41 at Churchill Downs.

As the trainer of one of the favorites for Saturday's 106th Kentucky Derby, Kelly has another worry: to keep the 3-year-old colt from drifting out from the rail, as he did in his last two triumphs, the Florida Derby and the Wood Memorial.

"He seemed bewildered on the front end in the Wood," said Kelly before putting John M. Schiff's colt through a workout Monday. "I certainly hope it doesn't happen again."

On a track labeled good, the bay son of Key To The Mint was timed in 1:43.5 for a mile, pulling up in 1:58.4 for 1 1/4 miles. Regular jockey Buck Thornburg, who guided Plugged Nickle in the workout, said he had hoped for a better clocking but added the track was muddy in spots.

"He had no problem with the track," the jockey said. "I thought he handled it."

Kelly, 60 years old and here for his third Derby, had a slight problem. "I think he was going pretty slow early, but I couldn't tell because I borrowed a watch to time him and then I couldn't get it to work."

Plugged Nickle worked in the company of 5-year-old Rabmah "in order to keep him interested...I'd say we're just about on our game plan and this move today puts him right where he belongs coming up to the Derby," Kelly said.

Pressed on Plugged Nickle's penchant for drifting out, which indicates a tiring horse, Kelly said, "Another eighth of a mile won't hurt. He should be right there at the end." The Derby distance is 1 1/4 miles — the first time 3-year-olds go that far — compared the the 1 1/4-mile Wood and Florida Derby.

Kelly has been here before, with Globemaster finishing sixth to Carry Back in 1961, and Sunrise County, the second choice, winding up fifth to Decidedly in 1962.

Plugged Nickle has won seven of 11 career starts, including three triumphs in four starts this year.

Harry A. Oak's Rockhill Native, the Blue Grass Stakes winner, is expected to provide the biggest challenge to Plugged Nickle from a likely field of about a dozen. The 1979 2-year-old champion arrived here from Keeneland on Monday.

Other possible starters include Degenerate Jon, Gold Stage, Withholding, Rumbo, Jakin Klugman, Super Moment, Bold 'n Rulling, Tonka Wakhan, Execution's Reason, Major Run and the lone filly, Genuine Risk.

The fact that Codex, the Hollywood and Santa Anita Derby winner, and Temperance Hill, the Arkansas Derby victor, were not nominated for the Derby, has prompted some experts to call this a poor 3-year-old Derby crop.

Jenkins advances to state meet

LEVELLAND—Kevin Jenkins of Miami will advance to state in the 200 and 100 dashes after placing second in both events at the Region 1-B Track Meet Saturday.

Jenkins sped to a 22.3 clocking in the 200, just behind Larry Henderson of Sundown, who crossed the finish line first in 22.1.

Jenkins was also just two-tenths of a second behind Henderson in the 100 with an 11.2.

Richard Bean of Miami finished third in the 400 with a time of 52.1.

Other area placings went to Benny Baker, fifth, discus, 140-6; Wheeler; Kevin Andis, fifth, 800, 2:09.2; Wheeler; Randy Suggs, fourth, long jump, 19-10 1/2; McLean.

Only the top two individuals and teams advance to the state meet May 9-10 in Austin.

Groom's 440-relay team took fifth with a time of 46.0.

Miami took sixth in the team standings with 22 points.

Groom, Wheeler, and McLean tied with Valentine for 30th place with four points each.

Major League roundup

BY HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Dave Kingman didn't hit any home runs Monday night but he was a big man for the Chicago Cubs anyway...and not just because he stands 6-foot-6.

The tall left fielder, known for his towering homers and wild-swinging strikeouts, threw out St. Louis' speedy Garry Templeton trying to score from second base on a single by Keith Hernandez in the third inning.

That preserved a 1-1 tie and it remained that way until the ninth when Kingman slapped a pitch from Bob Sykes into center field for a tie-breaking RBI single that triggered a three-run uprising as the Cubs defeated the Cardinals 4-2.

"He's the complete ballplayer now," Manager Preston Gomez said of Kingman. "He beats you with his bat, he can run, he can throw and he can field."

Only three games were played in the majors while four were rained out — Atlanta-San Diego in the National League and New York-Baltimore, Boston-Chicago and Kansas City-Toronto in the American.

In AL action, the Oakland A's made it 5-for-5 over California by blanking the Angels 8-0 while the Seattle Mariners defeated the Minnesota Twins 6-4.

As usual, Kingman wasn't available to the media but other Cubs didn't mind talking about him.

"When the game's on the line and he's up, you better watch him," said relief ace Bruce Sutter, who picked up his sixth save. "When he first came up, he used to swing at everything. He's cut down on his strike zone. He knows what he wants up there now."

Ivan DeJesus opened the Cubs' ninth with a walk and Bill Buckner bunted safely before Kingman singled. Jerry Martin then greeted Donnie Moore with an RBI double and Tim Lincecum added a sacrifice fly.

A's 8, Angels 0
 Tony Armas, Dwayne Murphy and Dave Revering homered Monday night to support the Rick Langford's seven-hitter. Langford, 2-0, was making only his second start of the season and struck out four.

Armas homered with the bases empty in the second inning to give Oakland a 1-0 lead. Murphy added a two-run homer in the fifth to make it 5-0 and Revering homered off Jim Barr in the seventh.

Mariners 6, Twins 4
 The Twins committed seven errors and two of them by pitcher Terry Felton and left fielder Ken Landreaux led to a five-run Seattle fourth inning. Willie Horton began the big inning by drawing a walk against Felton.

Baseball sign-up
 Senior Babe Ruth baseball registration for 16-18 year olds will be held at 6 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at the Optimist Club Building, 601 Craven.

All boys wanting to play must register during the two-day deadline. Area players who want to participate in the league or form a team may contact James Davis at 665-4160.

TEXAS BRIEFS

CENTERVILLE, Texas (AP) — A crowd as big as the whole town — and then some — turned out Sunday to protest the proposed construction of a nuclear waste and hazardous chemicals storage facility. More than 1,000 people met at the Leon County courthouse square, listened to speeches, signed petitions and raised more than $11,000 to combat plans for the warehouse, a Nuclear Sources and Services, Inc. project. "Everybody was pleased with the meeting and the turnout," said Mildred Ellis, who lives near the proposed site. "We'd only been working (on the demonstration) since Thursday." The company last week announced plans to build the facility near Centerville, a town of 750 halfway between Dallas and Houston. Most of the radioactive wastes would come from hospitals and industries in Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston, a company spokesman said. AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — More than $1 million in truck-trailer rigs stolen in Tennessee have been recovered in Texas, the Department of Public Safety said Monday. Charges are being drawn up against suspects in Texas, Tennessee and Alabama, said a DPS spokesman.

Tender loving care cure for stress, ills

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Cuddle your rabbit and save him from a heart attack. That is one lesson of recent research at Ohio State University, where scientists found that "tender loving care" seemed to protect rabbits on a high-fat diet against clogging of the arteries. But Dr. Robert Nerem, who headed the experiment, says it also suggests that love and attention may affect hormone levels in the rabbit that help it to withstand heart disease. That may help us understand how stress, or the lack of it, affects human health, he says. Nerem, a bioengineer formerly with the space program, and two colleagues discovered the effect accidentally when they noticed that some rabbits on a high-cholesterol diet failed to develop fat buildups on the aorta that are usually caused by this diet. "We thought the person who was handling the animals, Dr. (Murina) Levesque, might have treated some of them differently because she's fond of animals," says Nerem. Two new experiments were devised in which Ms. Levesque deliberately petted some of the rabbits. "I'd visit them four or five times a day just to say hello and cuddle," she recalls. After six weeks, the petted bunnies had less heart disease than a control group of animals given normal care, even though both had elevated cholesterol in their bloodstreams. The experiments are continuing at the University of Houston, where Nerem has become chairman of mechanical engineering, to see whether petting raises the level of a hormone called corticosterone, which may be involved in fat deposition in the arteries.

Leg Cramps
Leg cramps keep you up at night? If so, a California physician has a remedy he says has worked for at least 44 people with this rare but troublesome form of insomnia. Dr. Harry Daniell of Redding, Calif., says in a letter to the New England Journal of Medicine that he tells patients to stand facing a wall a foot or two away with their shoes off. They then lean forward with their heels on the floor until they feel a pulling sensation in the calves. This is held for 10 seconds, then repeated. Daniell says his patients did the stretching exercise three times a day, and the nightly cramps eventually disappeared.

Antihistamines
Many critics — including a recent Food and Drug Administration review board — say antihistamines have no place in cold remedies, even though they're a standard ingredient in most over-the-counter products. The critics say antihistamines are good for the stuffiness and runny nose of allergies, but do no good for colds. But a new study concludes the opposite. Doctors at the Schering Corp., the Hershey Medical Center, Georgetown University and a Fletcher, N.C., clinic, compared one popular antihistamine — chlorpheniramine maleate — to a non-active placebo. "Patient and physician evaluations of 271 patients showed chlorpheniramine to be superior to placebo in lessening the symptoms of the common cold," they said in the Journal of the American Medical Association. "Statistically significant differences were found both on the first day and as late as the seventh day (of the cold)."

competition in events over 3,000 meters, and that's not fair, says the American College of Sports Medicine. The group, based in Madison, Wis., said in a recent policy statement that "there exists no conclusive scientific or medical evidence that long-distance running is contraindicated for the healthy, trained female athlete." The policy statement is only the fourth in the 10-year history of the college, set up to study medical aspects of athletics. The college said its only reservation was that young women in any grueling training program — whether running, gymnastics or ballet — often suffer menstrual irregularities. But these problems go away when training stops, it said.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — Residents of this Indiana city now can drink water straight from the faucet for the first time in two weeks.

Officials issued a warning April 10 for residents to boil all drinking water after the levels of bacteria in the water rose dramatically. The coliform bacteria was described as not dangerous, but indicative of other undesirable organisms in the water.

Water Works manager K.B. Eamhardt said Saturday that tests for the bacteria had proven negative for five days in a row. He said further tests will be undertaken to determine the source of the problem.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Authorities are investigating a suspicious fire that struck the 13-story Holiday Inn and forced 172 guests to flee.

Deputy Assistant Fire Chief Anthony Sauro said the blaze that broke out at 3:30 a.m. Sunday was confined to some mattresses and box springs on the unoccupied third floor.

Two employees were trapped briefly on the third floor when an elevator failed to work and fire blocked their exit. Night auditor Ralph Lakey said he and another worker escaped by breaking a window and leaping 15 feet to a second-story ledge.

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Threatening phone calls have been received by two civil rights demonstrators following the latest protest in this racially troubled community.

John Martin, local leader of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said two SCLC members received the threats after Saturday's rain-shortened march, which drew about 150 blacks.

Wrightsville has been the scene of many marches and rallies in the past three weeks to protest what blacks contend is continuing discrimination in county government and local businesses.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 68-year-old man shot while placing flowers on the grave of his policeman son was reported in stable condition today, authorities said.

Police said an unidentified man on a bicycle shot Edward Hosli once in the chest Saturday morning as he turned from the grave of his son. Officer Edwin Hosli had been shot and killed while investigating a warehouse burglary in December 1972.

Police said the elder Hosli pulled a handgun that he carried to fend off robbers and fired six shots, but they didn't know if any hit the attacker.

LONDON (AP) — A spell of cold, clear mountain air appears to have ended Tricia Reay's record-setting sneezing bout.

After sneezing every 20 seconds of every waking hour for 204 consecutive days, the 12-year-old British schoolgirl gave one final ker-choo Thursday morning and then stopped, British newspapers reported today.

"It's fabulous, but I still carry a hankie just in case," she was quoted as saying.

Tricia, of Sutton Coldfield in the industrial English Midlands, began sneezing last October after catching cold. Doctors tried unsuccessfully to halt the sneezing with drugs, nose sprays and even hypnosis.

Two weeks ago she was sent to a clinic near Perpignan, 6,000 feet up in the French Pyrenees. Within a few days she was down to three sneezes an hour. Then came the all clear. But she's staying another two weeks just in case, the papers said.

The previous record was held by 17-year-old June Clark of Miami, Fla., who sneezed for 155 days in 1966, according to the Guinness Book of World Records.

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist Party will hold a national congress late this year or early next, about a year ahead of schedule, the official Xinhua news agency indicated today.

It said two important national conferences originally scheduled for the second half of this year have been postponed to around May 1, 1981, to make way for the convening of the party congress.

The party's Central Committee decided in February to convene a congress ahead of schedule to deal with problems needing "prompt and rapid solution" and smooth the advance of China's modernization program. The last party congress was held in 1977. Although it set no date for the next congress, the committee said delegates must be elected before the end of November.
