Cuban jet fighters sink Bahamian gunboat, 4 die

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Cuban MiG jet fighters sank a 103-foot Bahamian gunboat, apparently killing four persons, and terrorized residents of a remote island by nose-diving the city of Duncan Town for several hours Sunday, the Bahamian government said.

The incident was triggered by the seizure of two Cuban fishing boats believed poaching in Bahamian waters, the Bahamian National Security Council said.

A telex message from Cuba claimed the fighter plane crews mistook the Royal Bahamian Defense Force ship Flamingo for a pirate ship, the statement said, and the Cuban pilots thought eight fishermen were being kidnapped, according to the telex message received by Minister of External Affairs Paul Adderley.

The Flamingo was clearly marked and flying several Bahamian flags, Bahamian officials said.

Council members met in emergency session with Deputy Prime Minister Arthur D. Hanna for 12 hours Sunday and released a 5-page statement shortly after midnight.

Prime Minister Lyndon O. Pindling was apprised of the events and was rushing home from London, Hanna said.

The officials refused to answer questions.

According to the statement, the Bahamian government sent a "strongly worded note to Cuba, protesting in the strongest terms these grave violations of Bahamian sovereignty and international law."

The statement confirmed in general an account by a resident of remote Ragged Island in the Bahamas, who reported the Cuban aircraft terrorized islanders by nose-diving Duncan Town for several hours. No injuries were reported there.

In Washington, the State Department issued a statement saying the initial reports indicated Cuba was guilty of a "gross violation of international law."

U.S. Coast Guard and Bahamian forces were searching for four missing seamen from the Saturday night sinking of the 103-foot gunboat Flamingo just south of Cay San Domingo, the Bahamian National Security Council said.

The incident was sparked by the seizure of two Cuban fishing boats suspected of poaching in Bahamian waters.

"If the boat sank was a Bahamas patrol boat, we sincerely regret the incident," the Cuban government said in a statement published by the Communist Party newspaper Granma. The statement was broadcast by Havana radio and monitored in Miami.

"We will never be arrogant with the Bahamas," the statement said. "It is a small country recently arrived at independence and they always can count on our solidarity and our respect."

Though the statement did not respond directly to Bahamian demands for reparations, it did say Cuba wanted the incident "properly clarified and settled friendly and honorably between the authorities of Cuba and Bahamas."

Cuba said its MiGs were called out after one of the two boats radioed that it "was being attacked by a pirate ship." The fighter pilots opened fire when the "pirate" ignored signals to stop, the statement said.

POLICE INVESTIGATE THE UNATTENDED DEATH of Jack Reagan of 531 S. Somerville. Police were called to the scene after the man was discovered by a neighbor at about 9:30 a.m. today slumped in the front seat of his older model Ford. The vehicle was parked behind the residence on South Somerville. Reagan was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford. "The death appears to be a natural death," Chief of Police J. J. Rzyman said. No autopsy will be performed, the police chief added.

'Kitty Hawk' completes first balloon crossing of America

MATANE, Quebec (AP) — Maxie Anderson and his son Kris safely landed the "Kitty Hawk" near the St. Lawrence River in eastern Canada today, ending the first non-stop balloon flight across North America.

The balloon down in rainy weather at 2:55 a.m. EDT on the wooded edge of a clearing six miles east of Matane in Quebec at the end of a 3,000-mile journey that began last Thursday in San Francisco.

The father and son, unshaven and reddened by the weather, were fatigued, but neither was hurt.

"We cycled from the heights of elation every day to the depths of depression," said Maxie Anderson, who hadn't slept in two days. "To me and Chris it was an adventure. I think it tests your mettle."

Matane is about 285 miles northeast of Bangor, Maine, and about 1,100 miles north of the planned landing site in Kitty Hawk, N.C. Unexpected winds had carried the balloon far north of the plotted flight path for the last half of the trip.

There were tough times, Anderson said.

Their water froze when temperatures outside the gondola plummeted to 40 degrees below zero.

"We lived for three days on oxygen," he said.

Anderson said a "little sick" last night from a heavy meal and high altitude.

When the 20-story tall balloon's landing ropes got caught in trees on the edge of the landing site, helicopters moved in and blew the airship free with their rotors.

"Trying to get into the clearing was a problem," Max Anderson said of the landing. "The helicopter pilots helped us get out of the trees."

He apparently referred to Canadian armed forces helicopters who had been stationed in the area since early this morning to await the landing.

Maxie Anderson, in a navy blue parka and a green striped turtle-neck shirt, was ferried by helicopter to the airport at Matane, where he embraced his wife Patty. His son stayed with the balloon.

Asked what his next goal was, the elder

Anderson replied, "I think I'm going to go home to bed."

Anderson, who won fame two years ago with two other men by becoming the first to cross the Atlantic in a balloon, said crossing the continent was tougher.

"In the Atlantic you just get up and go," he said. "There is no altitude problem."

Matane is on the Gaspé peninsula, near where the St. Lawrence meets the Atlantic Ocean.

Because of the hilly, wooded terrain of the area, Anderson, 45, and his son, 23, apparently considered landing in the river. But after dawn they decided they could make the clearing.

The Andersons had announced their landing plan in a radio message that was monitored aboard the plane taking Mrs. Anderson to the remote area. During the flight from Presque Isle, Maine, she said the four-day balloon excursion had been more difficult for her husband and son than the historic trans-Atlantic flight her husband made in 1978. "It's harder to fly over land," she said.

Court martial begins for parachute rigger

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Court-martial proceedings were to begin today for Pfc. Alvin Williams, charged with third-degree murder in the death of an officer who plunged to his death after his parachute was sabotaged.

Capt. Lawrence Hill of the 82nd Airborne Division was killed on March 26 when the static line in his chute was severed inside his backpack, making the chute useless, authorities said.

An Army investigator has testified during pre-trial hearings that Williams, a parachute rigger, admitted he sabotaged one of the parachutes out of frustration with his job.

The investigator, David Miller, said Williams first complained of problems with his sergeant and his job.

"He said he had been frustrated that day," Miller said.

Miller, said Williams, 20, "seemed happy that he made the statement that he had deliberately cut the static line of a parachute."

If convicted, Williams faces life imprisonment.

Fritch woman assaulted

FRITCH — A Fritch woman is hospitalized in Borger today after becoming the victim of an attempted rape early this morning while working at a local convenience store.

The incident, termed as an "assault with a firearm and an attempted rape" by Hutchinson County Sheriff's Deputy Bob Smith.

"No one was seriously injured," he said. However, the name of the victim is being withheld because no one has been taken into custody, he said.

"We are interviewing suspects and working on it at this time," he said.

The sheriff's department were the first on the scene of the incident at approximately 2 a.m. at the Allsup's store located at 206 E. Broadway in Fritch.

The Hutchinson County Sheriff's department is assisting the Fritch Police Department in the investigation, Smith said.

"We're just sitting on it right now until we can get more facts," he said.

Pampa men arrested in Canadian robbery

Two Pampa men were arrested by city police Saturday night in connection with an armed robbery which had occurred in Canadian earlier.

After being notified by the Hemphill County Sheriff's Department with a description of armed robbery suspects and the vehicle they were driving, Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Ken Minatree spotted a vehicle matching the description.

City police officers John Bennett and John Laramore stopped the vehicle and arrested Roberto Anguiano, 37, of 609 Christy and Eddie Wayne Blair, 28, of 612 N. Zimmers.

The two men were booked on Hemphill County warrants for aggravated robbery and placed in city jail.

"They were taken back to Canadian," Police of Chief J. J. Rzyman by Hemphill County authorities.

Court hears appeal not to air 'Princess' film

By The Associated Press

Four lawyers representing a Houston public television station asked Judge Sam Johnson of the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals Monday for a court order letting the station refuse to broadcast the controversial "Death of a Princess" film Monday night.

After an hour-long closed door conference with Johnson the four attorneys were told to return in an hour, either for a decision or more arguments.

A spokesman said one attorney represented the University of Houston, two were from the state attorney general's office and a fourth from the Public Broadcasting System in Washington.

There were no attorneys present at the first Austin conference representing those who were successful in obtaining a federal district court order that the film must be shown from U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald in Houston.

Appeals of federal court orders usually are made to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. But McDonald's decision was issued Friday and Monday night's broadcast deadline voided usual legal channels.

The film depicts the 1977 death of a Saudi Arabian princess, who was executed for committing adultery. The Saudi government expressed outrage at the film, claiming it contains distortions, and threatened to cut off diplomatic and trade ties with England.

UH Vice President Patrick J. Nicholson cancelled the broadcast because of what he called "strong and understandable objections by the Saudi Arabian government to the film." But a contributor to the station filed suit to force broadcast of the film, saying Nicholson's decision violated constitutional guarantees of free speech and press.

McDonald said since the station was licensed to a state agency, political beliefs could not play a part in programming decisions.

The scheduled broadcast has caused quite a furor across the country. Elected officials have taken public stands in favor or against the film.

And the Mobil Corp. — a $5 million-a-year contributor to public TV and one of four U.S. owners of an oil consortium that accounts for 75 percent of Saudi Arabia's oil output — ran newspaper advertisements suggesting PBS "review its decision to run the film." Station officials in Texas said callers opposing the film — especially in oil wealthy Houston — are concerned about the possibility of alienating the Saudi government.

The Corpus Christi public television affiliate, KEDT-TV, will not air the film tonight. Station officials said the broadcast would be taped and possibly aired May 26.

Here is a viewer's guide to "Death of a Princess":

THE STORY — Saudi Arabian Princess Mish'al and her commoner lover were publicly executed July 15, 1977, in a parking lot in Jidda. The 19-year-old princess was shot to death and her companion hacked with a sword.

They had been accused of adultery, and the execution was ordered by the princess' grandfather, a powerful member of the royal family. The princess was given an opportunity to deny the adultery, but refused to do so.

THE FILM — British filmmaker Antony Thomas learned of the execution four months later, during a casual after-dinner conversation. He was intrigued, and initially considered a drama based on the execution.

After several months' work in England and the Middle East, Thomas decided to produce instead a film detailing his search for facts behind the sensational story.

The film has been called a "docu-drama." The film's producers use the term "nonfiction movie."

THE POLITICS — Saudi Arabia expelled Britain's ambassador after the film was broadcast in England April 10. As the date for the PBS presentation approached, the Saudis expressed their concern in a letter to Warren Christopher, the acting acting secretary of state.

Christopher passed the communication on to Lawrence K. Grossman, PBS' president, urging the non-commercial, government-supported network "give appropriate consideration to the sensitive religious and cultural issues involved."

THE CONTROVERSY — The Saudi letter to the State Department described "Death of a Princess" as "disparaging to the Muslim religion" and "offensive, not only to Saudi Arabia but to the entire Islamic world."

The film does not mention Saudi Arabia by name. It does question the position of women in Arab society.

Judge reverses Wall Street decision

DALLAS (AP) — A state district judge who had prohibited the Wall Street Journal from publishing an article on Tuesday today reversed himself and dissolved his own restraining order.

District Judge Joe Fish issued the new ruling after hearing arguments during an hour-long court session requested by attorney Robert Sack of Dallas, who represented the nationally circulated newspaper.

Fish had granted a temporary restraining order against the newspaper last week, barring it from printing a story about an internal investigation of the OKC Corp., an oil and cement company.

At the time, the judge ordered a hearing on the merits of the case for next Friday — four days after the intended date of publication for the article.

Tuesday is also the day OKC has scheduled a crucial stockholder's meeting to vote on a proposal to dissolve the corporation.

"You have to understand that all this happened during a lunch break and I didn't have time to research this exhaustively," Fish said of last week's decision.

Sack said he and attorney John Martin asked Fish for today's hearing "on the basis of facts in the law that weren't available to him at the time he entered the original restraining order." He declined to elaborate on the points of law.

"As a matter of constitutional law, the judge did not have the power," he said.

"We think the temporary restraining order is unconstitutional (and) it violates the First Amendment."

Sack added that editors planned to wait until after the hearing before deciding whether to print the story Tuesday.

OKC has scheduled a special stockholders meeting Tuesday to vote on a proposal to dissolve the publicly owned oil and cement corporation.

"My hope is that the order will either be rescinded or overturned," Sack said. The other two options are appealing the restraining order or taking no legal action, he added.

"After weighing all the circumstances, I thought of the old saying 'You can't put the toothpaste back into the tube,'" Fish said. "And I decided there wouldn't be a serious threat to First Amendment rights."

OKC has maintained that the newspaper "wrongfully obtained" the report, saying it is privileged by the attorney-client relationship and should remain confidential.

The story concerns an internal investigation by a Dallas law firm commissioned by OKC to look into the company's financial transactions and its chairman, former Detroit Lions football player Cloyce Box.

The report by the law firm Locke, Purnell, Boren, Laney and Neely was released by a board member to an employee and has been quoted in several publications.

The published reports said the investigation found that OKC's brokers were friends, longtime business associates and relatives who were low on capital and inexperienced in selling oil.

David Ownby, a former OKC sales manager, told investigators that several transactions appeared to have benefited the "friendly brokers" at the expense of shareholders.

The investigation found no evidence that Box received special benefits or kickbacks from the brokers, however.

The corporation also is being investigated by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

OKC had contended its Fourth Amendment rights against unreasonable search and seizure would be violated if the SEC were allowed to use the internal report.

Long hours and little sleep order of day for detectives

Being a detective can mean many things, but mostly it's hard work, long hours and little sleep.

"You may work day and night for two or three days on a case," Det. Michael Hartssock says. "Even with a suspect, you have to do all the paper work, gather the evidence, get the case ready for the prosecutor."

"One thing I like about being a detective, though," he says, "is you usually get to work on the more serious offences, where something needs to be done."

"You have to really like to do it," he adds.

A detective's life is not like the movies, Hartssock says.

"It's not like it's portrayed in the movies and television. "Once in a while you meet someone who expects the 'cloak and dagger' routine. But once they get to talking with you, the mystique vanishes," he says.

"You have to utilize all outside energy you can to determine what actually happened," Hartssock explains. For examples, he lists sources, witnesses and evidence.

"Then put everything together in a logical order before you give it to the attorney," he says.

"I enjoy putting the facts together," he adds.

Most cases are determined by the witnesses, Hartssock says.

"They're the ones who experienced it, who saw it and they're the ones who can tell you what happened."

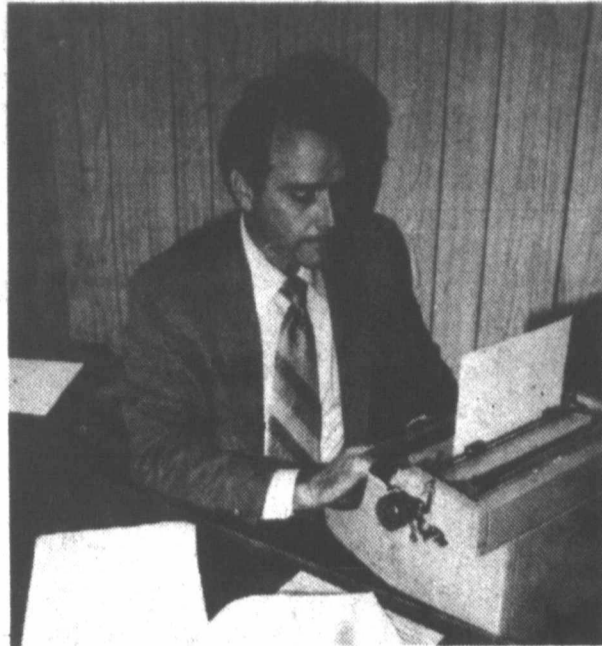

Information is often hard to obtain, however, he says, because many people are "hesitant to testify in court."

Plus, he says, detectives are limited to obtaining their facts within the dictates of the law.

With a family of three — two girls and a boy — and his wife, Tina Jo, Hartssock says he believes the practicing Christian family is the greatest deterrent to crime.

"These people do not just start out being criminals," he says, citing 50 percent of all crimes are committed by juveniles. After commitment, he says, 87 percent are repeat offenders.

"I would like to see a community of Christian families," he says which would be the real influence on the reduction of crime.

A & M names districts

COLLEGE STATION — With the premise that there's more in a name than a number, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service is naming each of its 14 districts.

"The names will relate to the various geographical areas of the state so that Texans will be able to more readily identify with our educational programs and activities," says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, Extension Service Director.

Extension districts will now be known by their name in addition to their number.

The new descriptive terms are as follows:

- District 1 - Panhandle
- District 2 - South Plains
- District 3 - Rolling Plains
- District 4 - North Central
- District 5 - Northeast
- District 6 - Far West
- District 7 - West Central
- District 8 - Central
- District 9 - East
- District 10 - South Central
- District 11 - Upper Coast
- District 12 - South
- District 13 - Southwest
- District 14 - Coastal Bend

The newly launched program is designed to key all of the Extension Service's educational efforts to six major concerns voiced by Texans in a recent survey.

These concerns are energy, land and water resources, leadership development, social conditions, economic conditions, and marketing and policy.

High court races warm up for June

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' high court races probably were the most overlooked political campaigns in the recent Democratic and Republican primaries.

The survivors hope they will get more attention in three runoff June 7.

In the May 3 politicking, the low-key judicial races were overshadowed by a hot presidential primary contest, particularly when three of the men who want to be the next U.S. president spent much of the last week in Texas.

There also were two loud and bitter campaigns for the Texas Railroad Commission.

None of that will be around during the next month. This is a period of political calm while both parties organize internally for the late June state conventions and the July and August national conventions.

The leading statewide race in the June 7 second primary undoubtedly is the campaign to pick a successor to Associate Justice Zollie Steakley of the Texas Supreme Court, who is retiring.

Judge Jim Wallace, 51, of the Houston Court of Civil Appeals, a former state senator, faces Judge John D. Phillips, 63, of the Austin Court of Civil Appeals. The two went into a runoff when Wallace got 45.88 percent of the vote on May 3 and Phillips 33.28 percent, while Wayne Scott, 42, law professor at St. Mary's University, San Antonio, was eliminated with 21.04 percent.

Two seats on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals will be at stake in the runoffs.

For Place 2, incumbent Judge W.T. Phillips, 67, faces Austin attorney Michael J. McCormick, 35. In the first primary, McCormick got 40.59 percent of the vote and Phillips 32.82 percent. Dallas lawyer John E. Humphreys, 55, was eliminated with 26.58.

In Place 3, incumbent Judge Tom Davis, 58, got in a runoff with Austin attorney Edith Roberts, 47. Davis collected 41.33 percent of the vote while Ms. Roberts got 31.16 percent. Houston attorney Walter Boyd, 44, lost with 27.50 percent.

The judicial races may get some help when other runoff races stir up interest in selected areas of the state.

There are congressional runoff races in state House and Senate districts that include Lake Jackson, Henderson, Lufkin, Greenville, Rusk, Liberty, Conroe, Corsicana, Stephenville, Dallas, Beeville, San Antonio, McAllen, Edinburg, El Paso and Houston.

Incumbent Judge Leon Douglas, 63, of the Court of Criminal Appeals, was defeated May 3 by Houston attorney Marvin O. Teague, 46, in the Democratic primary. Teague got 53.93 percent of the vote and Douglas 46.07 percent.

Bryant claiming victory as speaker of the house

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After some surprising last-minute endorsements Rep. John Bryant has declared that the 1981 House speakership is in his pocket, even though the make-up of the House has not yet been decided by voters.

Heatly said when reached late Sunday by phone. "I figured it was about time I announced my intentions. The damn train is moving and they are going to get some steam up."

It takes a vote of 76 — a majority of the 150-member House — to elect a speaker.

Bryant's aide, Carlton Carl, said Bryant now has more than 80 firm commitments "in terms of people who will, with as absolute certainty as anybody could have, be in the next Legislature."

Caraway was the only representative other than Bryant who said he was a candidate for speaker whether Speaker Billy Clayton made a serious bid for an unprecedented fourth term or not.

Clayton, the subject of a Houston federal grand jury investigation into FBI Briab (bribery-labor) operation, has said he would drop out only if indicted and not acquitted by the time legislators elect a speaker in January.

Clayton's press aide said Sunday night the speaker still has 117 pledges of support from incumbent legislators and others who are candidates for the 1981 House.

"It would be hard to believe," George Works said of the Bryant announcement. "The speaker has every indication he will be in it in January."

The announcement from Heatly, a West Texas rural conservative like Clayton, was something of a surprise.

Asked if his endorsement of Bryant would be considered unusual, Heatly replied.

"He's not as liberal as Price Daniel Jr. was and I voted for him," Heatly said, referring to the House speaker from 1973-1975. "He (Bryant) is a very brilliant young man... a family man

... a good, honest boy." Heatly was chairman of the House Appropriations Committee under former Speakers Waggoner Carr, Byron Tunnel, Ben Barnes and Gus Mutscher, but lost the position when Daniel came into office during a post-Sharpstown reform surge.

When Clayton took the House reins in 1975, he did not make Heatly chairman again, but did give him significant power as a member of the Legislative Budget Board and House negotiators on the biennial state budget.

"He likes to go with winners," Carl said of Heatly's support. Asked if Bryant planned to continue Heatly's existing power over appropriations or enhance it by returning the chairmanship, Carl said, "There are no plans, no commitments one way or the other."

Heatly said he made his decision only Sunday, but might reconsider if Clayton actively campaigns when the Legislature reconvenes.

"If Bill Clayton comes back (into the race), that makes a different situation. I would say if Bill came back into it, I would have to go back to Bryant and talk to him." It has been widely speculated that Clayton could be indicted by the Houston grand jury in early June.

Clayton has acknowledged accepting a $5,000 cash contribution during a taped discussion with an FBI informant posing as an insurance man seeking the state's group insurance contract. But Clayton maintains he intended to return the money and accepted it only to avoid embarrassment to persons attending the discussion.

Aquino undergoing heart tests

DALLAS (AP) — Benigno Aquino Jr., an outspoken foe of his own Filipino president, undergoes extensive heart tests at a Dallas hospital today as doctors try to determine if the former senator needs open heart surgery.

Aquino, who has been imprisoned since President Ferdinand Marcos declared martial law in 1972, was released for the medical trip after a March 15 heart attack.

A Baylor University Medical Center spokesman said Aquino's physician, Dr. Rolando Solis, will decide if surgery is necessary after analyzing the tests tonight.

Aquino, 47, was joined by his wife, son, and two of his daughters in a private suite at the hospital.

He left Manila last week for the United States, and upon arriving in Dallas, denied rumors that he will seek asylum here. He vowed to return home after treatment, despite speculation from his friends that he would seek asylum while in Texas.

"I made a covenant. I promised the president and the supreme court," he said. "I gave them my word and I won't go back on it... If I did, they would say I was acting in bad faith."

A popular and vocal opponent of Marcos, Aquino had planned to run for president in 1973, but was imprisoned when Marcos disbanded a U.S.-style congress and declared martial law in the fall of 1972.

Aquino was arrested, charged with murder, subversion and illegal possession of firearms and sentenced to die before a firing squad in 1977.

But the United States and other nations protested the sentence, and Marcos ordered the trial reopened. While in prison, Aquino has remained an active opponent of Marcos, staging hunger strikes and organizing petition drives for his release.

His physician in Dallas, Solis, grew up in the Philippines and moved to Texas 15 years ago. He has treated other members of the Aquino family, but met the former senator for the first time during this trip.

Heavy concert staged

DALLAS (AP) — Rock group Blimp rolled onto the music scene last week but the musicians already have made it big — to the tune of 1,476 pounds.

Lead guitarist Pat Rider weighs 325 pounds. Rhythm guitarist Cory Hubbard weighs 350; keyboardist Walt Newton, 286; vocalist Tony Cobra, 235, and drummer Bryan Pitney, 280.

They were brought together by a newspaper ad — placed by Dallas Realtor Judy Drake and her mother, Edie Lewis — searching for overweight musicians.

The two women, after reading there are 80 million overweight Americans, decided to evangelize about excessive weight via a band of fat musicians who would pledge to bring their weights down to normal limits within a year.

"To qualify for the band, we each had to be at least 70 pounds overweight," Newton said. "By the end of the year, we have to achieve normal weight levels or at least make some progress. And we already have a maintenance program planned keeping the weight off."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

The continuing railroad fiasco

One of the more costly fiascos the federal government is engaged in is the transportation of passengers by rail. Amtrak. Since its inception in 1970 this federal train service has failed to significantly increase its ridership, in spite of increased gasoline prices. In typical fashion, there is a move on to pour billions more dollars into this transportation failure.

There are proposals circulating in Washington to establish high speed train corridors in several parts of the country at an enormous cost. In California CalTrans chief Adriana Gianturco is promoting the idea of creating, with federal help, such a tax-subsidized system between San Diego and Los Angeles, and between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara. The pricetag on each of the 18 corridors under study could run as high as $1 billion. This is no deterrent to the government planners.

Plans are moving ahead on Capitol Hill to spend $750 million for the completion of the Northeast Corridor Improvement Project. Despite the one billion dollars the taxpayers already spend subsidizing Amtrak per year, there is speculation the NECIP is going to get its funding.

In 1979 Amtrak carried 11 million passengers in the Northeast Corridor, between Washington, D.C. and Boston-New York. The cost of this operation was $238 million; the revenues were only $118 million. If this situation continues, a likely trend, the taxpayers will be picking up $1.2 billion during the next ten years in order to subsidize Northeastern businessmen on their way to work. These businessmen should pay for their own tickets, which most can afford to do, or move closer to work.

Instead of pouring more money down the rail-transportation rathole, the national Taxpayers Union has a better idea. It suggests that if any more money is needed by the NECIP, then fares should be incrementally increased, beginning immediately, so that by 1985 100 percent of operating costs of the corridor can be recovered through revenue. It's a good idea.

Further the NTU says that the public should be made aware of just how much it is subsidizing rail transportation. Today numerous programs, including the one that pays for the railroad workers' pension fund, are little more than a gift to those people who use the train or work for Amtrak. At this time the taxpayers have no idea how much of a gift they are providing.

The last NTU suggestion is that the federal government should refrain from getting involved in any more rail transportation schemes. The organization is, of course, referring to the emerging corridors proposals. The NTU is right on all counts. The biggest blunder is when the federal government got involved in rail transportation in the first place, but that was a long time ago.

Heartlessness and the exodus

There had to be some way for officials in Washington to dampen the heartwarming spirit of freedom that the ten thousand Cubans in exodus project to all the world, and, sure enough, a way has been found.

When governments of the Americas could not reach an agreement with dictator Fidel Castro on an official emigration of the throngs that poured into the Peruvian embassy in Havana earlier this month, members of the Cuban exile community in south Florida hired craft to ferry many of the refugees to the United States. Some of the boat operators charged a hefty premium for the emergency service — a few thousand dollars per passenger.

There is an easy tendency to abhor such "greed," such quickness to capitalize on others' misery, but the fact remains that it accomplishes the goal: moving great numbers of human beings where they want to go, with relative speed. Meanwhile, governments haggle over the terms of a sanctioned transfer while wretched humanity waits. The United States is officially a party to this inaction — delay that is truly the most abjectly heartless aspect of what ought to be a thoroughly inspiring spectacle of liberation. Worse yet, Washington sees fit to try to discourage the more expeditious approach of the unauthorized armada. It should not be surprising that the Cubans already in exile are willing to defy their chosen government to ship their brethren across 90 miles of sea: it seems that all of us are more tempted each day to oppose our governing bodies in order to further the very freedoms the government was supposedly set up to protect.

Witness, in the Caribbean, the fact that Coast Guard ships do not carry human beings to their emancipation, but tag along other boats that do. One purpose: to insure that all Cubans brought into this country are entangled in official entry papers. There is a quota, you know. Some 10,000 slaves risked all to be free: here in the land of plenty we can accommodate only 3,500 and we will expend precious resources to see that our limit is not exceeded.

The colossal gall of it all! The U.S. State Department lectures the refugee runners for "playing into the hands of the Cuban authorities" by not waiting for our government and others to work out some processing arrangement with Castro, as if these diplomats and their talk had accomplished anything for the sake of Cubans during the last 20 years.

The beauty of the escape from Cuba is not in the ceremony, but in the substance. Officials of the United States — land of the free, home of the brave — stand on ceremony. Let them stand. The free and the brave will skirt around them.

By Don Graff
Now that John Anderson has finally had the courage of a lot of other people's conviction and declared his independent presidential candidacy, what else is new? Let us forget, independent or third-party candidates have been a factor in virtually every presidential election of modern times. Looking back just a bit, there were two of some significance last time out — Eugene McCarthy and Lester Maddox. There was a thin year in 1972 with no real standouts, but then we have 1968 and George Wallace at what turned out to be his peak. And moving all the way back to 1948, we have a real classic — both Henry Wallace and Strom Thurmond. Here and there in preceding years there are a few other rememberable and even some memorable names. Robert LaFollette and the redoubtable Norman Thomas to name two. Eventually we hit 1912 and the champion of them all — Theodore Roosevelt. A major concern of the major parties — and on occasion the explicit hope of a candidate such as George Wallace — is that the popular presidential vote will be so fragmented by the minor entrants that no one will receive the 270 or more electoral votes necessary for election. That would throw the decision into the House of Representatives. The House has had that responsibility only once in the nation's history, however, and then — in the Hayes-Tilden contest of 1876 — it was not a consequence of minor candidates skewing the count but of disputed returns from several states. Neither have independent and third-party candidates made much of their potential as "spoilers" — siphoning off sufficient votes from a leader to throw the election to the major candidate who otherwise would have been the also-ran. True, Democrat Woodrow Wilson did win in 1912 with a minority of the popular vote. But that was an anomaly in which the "spoiler" was a former president — Roosevelt — who captured the majority of the Republican Party from its official candidate, incumbent William Howard Taft. In 1948, Harry Truman won despite the combined siphoning efforts of Henry Wallace's Progressives and Strom Thurmond's Dixiecrats. George Wallace's 14 percent of the vote does raise a question about the 1968 Nixon-Humphrey race, but it's a question without a definite answer. It may well have come equally from both major party candidates, or from those who would have been nonvoters had Wallace not been in the running.

It is most often said in favor of the minor candidates that they serve a purpose in articulating issues that the major candidates might otherwise prefer to dodge.

Possibly, but not certainly. George Wallace may be said to have had some impact to this effect. And Socialist Thomas went about the task with dedication election after election but with what appeared scant impact at the time. Many of his concepts, however, were to find subsequent expression in the legislative programs of both Democratic and Republican administrations.

Eugene McCarthy, possibly the most intellectually elevated presidential aspirant since Wilson, articulated with a vengeance in 1968 when he was a Democratic challenger unseating his own party's incumbent. But his presence as an independent in 1972 was virtually unnoticeable.

So it goes, or has gone. Anderson, who has proved himself the brightest of dark horses in the current campaign, is being taken very seriously. Polls currently show him the preference of better than 20 percent of the electorate. But then remember when the same polls indicated the Democratic nomination was Edward Kennedy's for the announcing?

It is much too early to count John Anderson in or out. In an election in which the distaste of much of the electorate for both major party leaders is so pronounced, he just might make history.

The odds remain very long, however, that when history gets around to looking back on the 1980 election, it will say John Anderson's real contribution was to the good consciences of a large but nondecisive body of voters. His candidacy enabled them to do their duty as good citizens at the polls and still vote for none of the above. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Say no to Chrysler

The recent news from the Chrysler Corp. was, unfortunately, predictable. Chrysler analysts now forecast 1980 losses of $750 million — up $250 million from the estimate just two months ago.

Chrysler executives blamed the deteriorating economy. Granted, rising interest rates and the accompanying credit crunch have cut into automobile sales. But it is also true that independent financial observers disputed Chrysler's official 1980-81 projections even before the sharp rise in interest rates that began earlier this year.

By no coincidence, Chrysler representatives were attempting to renegotiate agreed-upon preconditions for obtaining $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees when the new loss estimates were made public. Admitting that it "seriously underestimated its need for federal assistance," Chrysler wants the Carter administration to liberalize the terms of the loan guarantees.

The proposed new terms would reduce the total of private loans Chrysler would have to obtain to qualify for federal loan guarantees. In exchange, Chrysler would sell off more of its assets and negotiate additional concessions from foreign creditors.

The Carter administration should say no. The loan guarantees the administration pushed and Congress approved last December were questionable even before the economic downturn that now looks more like a bona fide recession. Chrysler's declared strategy for reclaiming enough of the automobile market to enable it to survive seemed dubious from the start. And if the economy does "drop into" a recession this year or next, Chrysler's red ink could rise out of control.

A prudent decision would be to disengage from the Chrysler tar baby while there is still time and before any additional public funds are placed at risk. Look for the Carter administration's decision just before or just after May 20, the day of the Michigan presidential primary.

Medical doctors discover nutrition

by Paul Harvey

Jealousies among scientists are altogether as pertinacious as among Hollywood stars. Medical specialists are tenacious in defending their specialties — and have closed ranks only against "outside practitioners." While doctors condemned chiropractors and osteopaths — they, the doctors, nonetheless adopted and adapted some of their techniques under the heading of "physical therapy." Now, at long last, doctors are making friends with nutritionists. We are what we eat. Our food intake contributes the chemical balance that generates the electricity to make inert tissue alert. Yet until very recently the subject of nutrition has been neglected by medical schools and largely ignored in the practice of medicine. True, some doctors were "closet nutritionists," daring to prescribe for their patients specific diets for specific ills. But the closet door was flung open at this year's unprecedented conference on nutrition sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The co-chairman of that conference, Dr. Orville Levander, proclaimed "iron deficiency the number one public health nutrition problem in the United States." He said, "Important in combating this deficiency is new data on interaction between vitamin C and iron." There's more to it than that, however. Kansas University Medical Center researchers discovered that "while C boosts the absorption of iron, it interferes with the absorption of copper." But there was a consensus among conference speakers that vitamins are the biochemical sparkplugs of the body — that essential vitamins help the body turn food into useful energy, help nerves, muscles and organs work properly — and promote growth of body tissue.

For the medical profession to relate vitamins and minerals to the prevention and cure of disease — and for medical schools now to teach that relationship — exonerates some daring pioneers. Dr. Linus Pauling, for one, has promoted the health benefits of vitamin C for a quarter-century. He is convinced that proper nutrition can add 25 years to the average American life. Recent research at the University of Illinois seems to confirm a relationship between proper diet and intestinal cancer, our nation's second most common form of cancer. From this research, a high-fiber diet — such as bran — appears beneficial. Anyway, as I say, the diet faddists can come out of the closet now: they have won the interest and some support from medical professionals. Next, because of physiological variables among individuals, the professionals must discipline themselves to qualify pronouncements relating to their new enthusiasm. What's the sauce for the goose may be something else for the gander. (c) 1980, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Private sector squeeze

By Anthony Harrigan

The effect of President Carter's phony war against inflation is to cut off credit to private citizens and provide abundant funding for vote-getting government programs. At the moment, for example, Americans are finding it almost impossible to finance new homes. The slowdown in the building industry is having a ripple effect in the economy. The administration is calling for withholding on interest, which will complicate cash flow problems for business. All along the line, individuals and corporations are facing a credit squeeze because of administration actions. At the same time, however, there are growing demands to provide additional billions for the food stamp program. The huge over-run in the cost of this program is exposed on the basis that it helps the "poor." Congressional and White House liberals never shed a tear for the new poor in the middle class. How grand it would be if, for once, the country had an administration that was concerned about the productive middle class. Fortunately, there are members of Congress who understand what is happening. One of these is U.S. Rep. Steve Symms of Idaho. In a recent report to his constituents, Congressman Symms said: "As the Federal Reserve tightens the money supply and restricts credit to fight inflation, the American people should not be the ones to suffer." Rep. Symms noted correctly that "if the government balanced its budget and ended its off-budget borrowing, the available credit in the economy would flow to farmers, small businessmen and prospective homeowners instead of to the Federal Treasury. Thus the Federal Reserve could continue its restraint with less risk of unemployment and recession, and with lower interest rates." This is one of the best statements I have seen on what should be done. Unfortunately, the Carter administration isn't taking this route. The Office of Management and Budget reports government receipts are expected to equal a record 22.4 percent of gross national product in fiscal 1981. The Wall Street Journal says that is "higher than the 21.9 percent record set in 1944 during World War II." In short, while the average citizen is strapped for credit, the federal agencies are getting all the money they want for give-away programs. However, the electorate has an opportunity this year to vote this policy out of existence. The only meaningful alternative to the spend and elect policy is old-fashioned fiscal conservatism—a balanced budget achieved through reductions in federal spending. It would be a grave mistake if the public bought the notion that the country can forget about high spending and concentrate on tax reduction. This notion prevails in some quarters as a type of economic populism. It is as unsound as the Carter administration's policy. Tax cuts are desirable, but only as spending is reduced. High federal spending is the root cause of our ills today. It must receive priority attention from the Executive and Congress. To concentrate on tax reduction without reducing spending would result in a dangerously lopsided fiscal condition. # THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

By JOE GRAEDON
Q I used to have a cast iron stomach. I could eat or drink anything and never have a bit of indigestion.

Lately, however, I've begun experiencing waves of heartburn, especially if I have a snack or shot of whiskey before bedtime. Are some antacids better than others for treating this problem?

A. Instead of relying on an antacid for symptomatic relief, how about preventing the heartburn in the first place?

First, why not skip those midnight snacks? Eating fatty foods or drinking alcohol or coffee can increase the likelihood that you will suffer.

If your problem occurs primarily after you lie down you might want to try elevating the head of the bed about six inches. This simple trick can keep the acid from trickling up into the esophagus.

Some drugs can also make people more susceptible to heartburn. Cold remedies, antibiotics, antidepressants, drugs for parkinsonism, arthritis, anxiety, and paradoxically, medications used for the treatment of ulcers, can all aggravate the problem.

If you started taking a new medicine you should check with your pharmacist or physician to make sure that is not what is causing your increased sensitivity to those late-night snacks.

If you can't give up your dietary indiscretions and none of the other suggestions work, a liquid antacid that combines both aluminum hydroxide and magnesium hydroxide may provide substantial relief. Brands that contain both ingredients include Aludrox, Creamalin, Delcid, Di-Gel, Gelusil, Maalox, Maxamag, Suspension, Mylanta, and WinGel.

Symptoms that persist, however, require medical attention. Indigestion may only be a sign of some more serious problem such as peptic ulcer or heart disease.

Q I have high blood pressure and take Aldomet (methyldopa) daily to control it. Sometimes if my weight gets out of hand my doctor also prescribes a diet pill called Ionamin (phentermine). Is there any interaction between these drugs?

A. The makers of Ionamin warn physicians that this appetite suppressant should not be administered to people with hypertension since it can elevate blood pressure.

Taking a diet pill simultaneously with a drug which is supposed to lower pressure would be a little like driving with your foot on the accelerator and the brake at the same time. Just as it would be hard to maintain a constant speed so too it would be difficult to control hypertension.

Your doctor made a serious mistake when he combined these two drugs. Rather than rely on the appetite suppressant you'd be better off managing your weight problem through modification of eating patterns and a supervised diet program.

Q How effective is zinc for treating acne? I've been taking two capsules a day for three months and so far haven't seen much in the way of improvement.

A. A few years ago there were reports that oral zinc was beneficial in treating mild to moderate acne. But a more recent investigation has discredited this form of treatment.

AT WIT'S END

Most women become mothers by accident, some by choice, a few by social pressures and a couple by habit.

This year, nearly 100,000 women will become mothers of handicapped children. Did you ever wonder how mothers of handicapped children are chosen?

Somehow I visualize God hovering over earth selecting his instruments for propagation with great care and deliberation. As He observes, He instructs His angels to make notes in a giant ledger.

"Armstrong, Beth, son, Patron saint, Matthew."
"Forrest, Marjorie, daughter, patron saint, Cecelia."

"Rudledge, Carrie, twins, patron saint... give her Gerard. He's used to profanity."
Finally, He passes a name to an angel and smiles. "Give her a handicapped child."

The angel is curious. "Why this one, God? She's so happy."

"Exactly," smiles God. "Could I give a handicapped child a mother who does not know laughter? That would be cruel."

"But has she patience?" asks the angel.
"I don't want her to have too much patience or she will drown in a sea of self-pity and despair. Once the shock and resentment wears off, she'll handle it."

"I watched her today. She has that feeling of self and independence that is so rare and so necessary in a mother. You see, the child I'm going to give her has his own world. She has to make it live in her world and that's not going to be easy."

"But, Lord, I don't think she even believes in you."

God smiles. "No matter. I can fix that. This one is perfect. She has just enough selfishness."

The angel gasps. "Selfishness? Is that a virtue?"

God nods. "If she can't separate herself from the child occasionally, she'll never survive. Yes, here is a woman whom I will bless with a child less than perfect. She doesn't realize it yet, but she is to be envied. She will never take for granted a 'spoken word.' She will never consider a 'step' ordinary. When her child says 'Momma' for the first time she will be present at a miracle and know it! When she describes a tree or a sunset to her blind child, she will see it as few people ever see my creations."

"I will permit her to see clearly the things I see... ignorance, cruelty, prejudice... and allow her to rise above them. She will never be alone. I will be at her side every minute of every day of her life because she is doing my work as surely as she is here by my side."

"And what about her patron saint?" asks the angel, his pen poised in mid-air.
God smiles. "A mirror will suffice."

DEAR ABBY: I am puzzled by your continuing support of the Equal Rights Amendment. It is my understanding that this amendment is not necessary because women already are very well protected under the United States Constitution.

I am confused. Will you please explain in plain language why we need the ERA?

PROTECTED ENOUGH

DEAR PROTECTED: You may not be as "protected" as you think. You don't say in which state you live, but if your husband dies or leaves you, are you sure you'll be provided for? Even if you are protected in your state, millions of American women in other states are not, and I believe that all American women should have the same protection and equality that is guaranteed to men under the highest law in our nation.

Don't be deceived; as things stand today, they do not! The Constitution — as interpreted by the Supreme Court — does not give equal rights to women. If it did, we wouldn't have needed the 19th Amendment in order to gain the right to vote.

There are too many discriminatory laws on the books to cite them individually, but when Pennsylvania adopted the ERA, 300 state laws had to be rewritten in order to give women equal rights with men.

We need ERA so that all women will be protected regardless of where they live.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to DISAPPOINTED, who felt cheated because the bridal couple didn't open their wedding gifts at the reception.

Gift giving should be a private, loving act between the givers and recipients — not a show for the benefit of others.

It is a strain for the newly married couple to stand for hours opening gift after gift, trying to show equal enthusiasm for those that are nothing to write home about as compared to the more expensive and impressive presents.

I vote for opening wedding gifts in private. If the newlyweds want to display their gifts later, fine, but they shouldn't make a public show of it.

PRIVATE PERSON

DEAR PERSON: I agree. And consider the feelings of those who shopped for hours to find an appropriate and imaginative gift, only to watch the bride unwrap the fourth toaster, third blender and a fifth Crockpot!

DEAR ABBY: I have had epilepsy all my life, but fortunately I am able to keep it completely under control with medication. Because so many people who travel depend on daily medication these days, I have a suggestion that might be helpful: Never pack all your medication in your luggage, and never carry it all in your purse.

I pack as much medication in my luggage as I'll need for the trip, and carry the same amount in my purse. I never carry it all in my purse; neither do I pack it all. Purse can be stolen and luggage can be lost.

P.L. IN SOUTHERN CAL.

DEAR P.L.: Thanks for a helpful travel tip. Many travelers will bless you for it — not to mention the airlines.

Chinese soldiers, horses in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of soldiers with their horses, assigned some 2,000 years ago to a permanent guard of the mausoleum of the First Emperor of China, has left its post to appear in New York City.

The men and animals are larger-than-life-size terracotta figures excavated near the ancient Chinese capital of Xi'an yang. They were part of an underground army created as the external bodyguard of Qin Shihuangdi, who died in 210 B.C.

The figures are among 106 pieces featured in "The Great Bronze Age of China" exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art here through July 9.

Clinic gives language to deaf children

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Enrique Armendariz, his 3-year-old face set and serious, placed his open hand on his cheek so he could feel his mouth move. He creased his forehead and said one word: "Open."

His face fairly glowed with happiness. It was no small accomplishment. Enrique had never heard the word before. He never will.

Enrique is deaf, one of about 300,000 Americans who live in a silent world, a world that can become an isolated prison.

But Enrique and youngsters like him are learning speech — the key that can unlock that prison — at an unusual facility called the John Tracy Clinic. John Tracy was the deaf son born to actor Spencer Tracy and his wife, Louise, who founded the center in 1942.

"All our services are entirely free of charge to anybody who walks in here. The only requirement is that there is a need," said James Garity, director of education services.

Besides its nursery school and tutoring services, the clinic — supported by donations — offers tests for hearing.

State treasurer gives DAR program

Mrs. Tom Upchurch Jr., treasurer of the state organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution, gave a program for members of the Las Pampas Chapter during a recent luncheon meeting.

Mrs. Upchurch, a member of the Arredondo Chapter, spoke on the national theme, "A Tapestry of Service." Weaving threads of the ancestors of DAR members, she told of their establishment of the United States and their service throughout the years. Mrs. Joseph Dempsey, state chairman of the Honor Roll committee, awarded the chapter with a Silver Honor Roll Certificate.

Miss Norma Lantz read the president general's message. Mrs. Walter Whatley gave the national defense report.

The group will sponsor a booth at the Pampa Mall this month. The next meeting of the Las Pampas Chapter of the DAR will be in September.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Millie, 14, from Tacoma, Wash., is white and she wants to date a boy who is black but her parents refuse. Millie would like a little guidance from me and from her peers. Linda Garcia, 16, from San Antonio, Texas, and Robert Shirll, who resides in Santa Ana, Calif., will do the honors. Welcome.

Dr. Wallace: I am a 14-year-old girl who has many friends both black and white.

There is a black boy whom I have known for a long time. He is a good friend, a sweet guy and I like him very much. He has asked me to go out with him but when I told my family, they "blew up."

Now when I talk to him at school, my sister runs home to my mother and tells her. My mother says that if I don't "knock it off" she will not allow me to go anywhere. In fact, she said she will come to school to make sure I don't talk to him.

This boy treats me with respect and what my sister and mother are doing is making me start to hate them.

Please, help me get through to my family that because he is black doesn't mean he is bad. For the first time in my life, I feel someone really cares for me. I would also like to hear from your teen guest writers. — Millie, Tacoma, Wash.

Millie: Prejudice is one of the more difficult of family "maladies" to cure. In many cases, the disease will never be arrested. If it means that continuing to see the boy will cause total chaos in your house, stop seeing him.

Level with the boy by telling him the truth. He will understand. Probably the best thing that has taken place through it all is when it comes to race, you are color-blind.

If there would be any way you could get this boy over to your house to meet your family — do it. — Dr. Wallace

Hello Millie: I thought my dad was prejudiced but he is mild compared to your mother (my dad only wants me to date Mexican-American boys).

Why don't you suggest to this boy that his mother call your mother and have a nice little chat? It can't do any harm and who knows, your mother might allow you to at least talk to this boy. It would be a start. — Linda, San Antonio, Texas

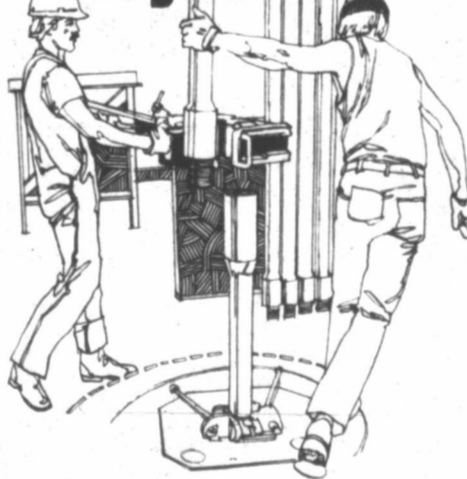

Hi Millie: Wow! You do have problems. Racial prejudice runs deep and many times nothing can change those who are prejudiced. I see no way of dating this boy as things stand now.

The first thing that I would suggest is to win your sister over so she keeps her mouth shut. Then I would go to your counselor at school and see if this person has any positive suggestions. If that doesn't work keep seeking help from a teacher, nurse, family doctor, clergyman, etc.

You may never change your mother's views but you could "go down swinging." — Robert, Santa Ana, Calif.

If you would like to be a guest teen writer, please write to me in care of this newspaper, stating your sex and age.

Mrs. Niekro had 'no lose' Mother's Day

LANSING, Ohio (AP) — The way Ivy Niekro saw it, she was in a no-lose situation on Mother's Day.

"At least I got one Mother's Day present," she said, after her elder son Phil pitched the Atlanta Braves to a 7-4 victory over younger son Joe and the Houston Astros Sunday.

"Joe called yesterday (Saturday), and he didn't think Phil would pitch until Tuesday," Mrs. Niekro said. Instead, the brothers wound up facing each other for the eighth time in their major league careers. Each has now won four of the encounters.

"I didn't know who to root for," admitted Mrs. Niekro, 65. "Joe needed it to keep on going, and Phil needed something to pick him up." The victory improved Phil's record to 2-4, while Joe fell to 4-2.

"I always root for a tie and then hope they take them both out," she said.

The sibling rivalry — always a friendly one — has been something the Niekro family has had to deal with since Joe and Phil were youngsters on the sandlots of this eastern Ohio town.

"I've never seen any other brothers have to get into it like they do," she said. "But they get along very well."

"I've never had any grass in my yard," Mrs. Niekro continued. "We always had a bunch of boys playing ball out there. I still can't believe they're major league ballplayers. You wouldn't know it when they're around here — they're just like the rest of us. You could never tell how much they're getting paid."

A neighbor who was "like a third son" has also done well in sports, Mrs. Niekro noted. His name is John Havlicek.

She said Joe, 35, was envious of Phil, 41, when the older brother made it to the big leagues with the Milwaukee Braves. "When Phil would play in Pittsburgh (about 60 miles away), Joe used to watch him come out of the dressing room and say, 'I wish that was me.'"

A short time later, thanks to a good slider, Joe signed his own professional contract. He's since developed a knuckleball, a pitch both boys credit to their father, Phil, 67.

"Their dad threw the knuckleball when he was playing sandlot ball," Mrs. Niekro said. "Joe didn't used to throw it, because he said his fingers couldn't grip it right. I think he throws it harder than Phil now."

She said last year was a particularly pleasant baseball year since Joe and Phil both won 21 games "and once they both won a game on the same day." She has never seen them pitch against each other, but their father watched their very first encounter in Atlanta in 1967.

"He was rooting for Phil and I was rooting for the younger one, for Joe," Mrs. Niekro said. Phil won the game, she said.

"I'm just so happy that they're where they are," she said. "When you think about how many people would like to make it to the majors, and how few actually do, I can't believe they both did it."

NUMBER 23. A. J. Foyt, 45-year-old four-time winner of the Indianapolis 500-mile race, prepares to go out to practice for his 23rd attempt to qualify for the 64th running at the brickyard. Qualifications for the pole began Saturday. (AP Photo)

Watson now headed for back-to-back wins

DALLAS (AP) — They called it incredible and ironic, ho-hum and high drama. It probably was some of each.

Whatever, Tom Watson's victory Sunday in the $300,000 Byron Nelson Golf classic propelled the fairway financier toward the richest jackpot in the history of a game he now minnows.

"Just four more rounds," he grinned. "I'm looking ahead now to that $200,000 bonus."

Watson, 30, conquered bumpy greens, blustery winds and two serious challenges and swept to a 1-shot, $54,000 triumph that sent PGA officials scurrying for the record book.

The Nelson verdict was his third straight victory and fifth of the year and sends him into the $300,000 Colonial National Invitation at nearby Fort Worth with a monumental incentive.

It's called the "Texas Bonanza."

Sponsors of the Nelson and Colonial put up $200,000 in bonus prize money for any golfer who could win the back-to-back tournaments. Watson narrowed the list of potential winners to one.

"I've never won three in a row before," he said after his third straight. Then, with a smile, he added, "I've never won four in a row either."

Watson closed the rain-delayed, 36-hole finale Sunday with rounds of 69 and 71 for a 72-hole total of 274 over the 6,993-yard, par 70 Preston Trail course.

The 6-under-par effort, triggered by a spectacular 64 on Friday, was a stroke ahead of Bill Rogers, whose closing 70-67 earned him $32,400.

Rogers, who lost to Watson in a playoff here last year, spoke not in anger but in awe when he pointed out that Watson has led or shared the lead in his last 12 rounds of competitive golf.

"What he's done the last 12 rounds is incredible...fantastic...something you just don't do," Rogers said. "It just seems that he wins week after week after week."

Sunday's victory comes on the heels of the San Diego Open, the Los Angeles Open, the Tournament of Champions and the New Orleans Open and hiked his 1980 winnings to an astounding $300,525.

He's knocked down an average of roughly $27,000 for each of 11 tournament appearances.

Ironically, golf historians say the last person to hold or tie for the lead in 12 consecutive rounds was Byron Nelson, who is Watson's mentor. That was 35 years ago.

Watson has won the Nelson four of the last six years.

It's almost eerie, as Watson is quick to admit.

Joe Niekro loses match to brother

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It was Niekro vs. Niekro, but not an especially award-winning performance by either pitcher.

Especially Joe.

"I don't think I was up today," said Joe Niekro after his Houston Astros lost a 7-4 decision to Phil Niekro's Atlanta Braves Sunday in an ironic Mother's Day matchup, the eighth time that the brothers have hooked up in their major league careers.

Phil's younger brother was chased in a four-run Atlanta sixth after giving up eight hits.

"I'd rather not pitch against him, but when I do, I'm not going to give him anything and he's not going to give me anything," Joe Niekro said.

Each brother now has won four times in this sibling rivalry, but it hasn't been particularly pertinent to Phil.

"I look on it as a win over the leaders of the Western Division of the National League," said Phil. "Joe just happen to be pitching."

But he does see the publicity factor in their simultaneous appearance.

"I'm not looking for a tie-breaker," the veteran Atlanta pitcher said. "But I think it's good for the game, good for baseball to have brothers pitching against each other. You don't see much of that any more. We take a lot of pride in the opportunity to pitch against each other."

Phillies 7, Reds 3

Pitcher Dick Ruthven drove in two runs with a second-inning single to help Philadelphia beat Cincinnati. The Phillies scored twice in the second on a single by Ruthven, 3-2, and scored three more in the third to chase Mike LaCoss, 3-3. Philadelphia's Pete Rose provided a highlight when he walked in the seventh inning, then stole his way around the bases. Ruthven pitchedinnings, giving up 10 hits and striking out eight.

Old names dominate Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Speeds are down, but the old familiar names dominate the front row for the May 25 Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Johnny Rutherford, Mario Andretti and Bobby Unser, three former winners who average 43 years of age, earned front-row starts in the opening rounds of qualifications — the first of two weekends of time trials leading up to the $1 million race.

But the second row is a different story, with a trio of younger generation drivers who are hungry for a taste of Indy glory.

One of them, Rick Mears, already has one Indianapolis triumph under his belt at the age of 28, and the others will be starting that high in the lineup for the first times in their young careers.

Spike Gehlhausen, one of the youngest Indy starters in history when he made his debut at age 21 four years ago, has finally secured capable equipment. He turned in an impressive qualification run at better than 188 miles per hour on Saturday.

Jerry Sneva, 30, who may finally be emerging from the shadow of his older and more successful brother Tom, was just under 188 for a starting spot in the middle of the second row. Mears, less than a half mile-an-hour slower than Jerry, got the outside of the second row.

And all three second-row starters aren't afraid to challenge the front-runners.

"I feel a lot better," Jerry Sneva said Sunday in his Gasoline Alley garage. "We have a good chance. Nobody will be running away from us. I haven't started that far up front before, but then I've never had that good a car to drive. It should give me a pretty good seat for the race."

What Sneva will see as he takes the green flag a week from next Sunday will be the rear of Andretti's Penske racer. To Andretti's left will be pole-sitter Rutherford's Chaparral, and to the right will be Unser's Penske. The three front-row starters have combined for five Indy victories.

Right behind Mears sits three-time winner Al Unser; behind Al is four-time champ A.J. Foyt, and two runs in back of Foyt is 1973 champ Gordon Johncock, his broken ankle mending in a flexible cast.

Rutherford's pole-position qualification run at 192.256 mph on Saturday, worth $10,000 to the 42-year-old Texan, was about 1.5 mph slower than Mears' top speed last year. But new U.S. Auto Club restrictions on engine "boost" — the allowable manifold pressure — dropped everybody's speeds somewhat.

Rainey brings pitching relief to Red Sox

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The starting pitchers, Rainey and Gale, made it sound like a storm was brewing, but Chuck Rainey put a little more shine into the Boston Red Sox's shellshocked pitching corps.

With Boston's big three — you should pardon the expression — of Dennis Eckersley, Mike Torrez and Bob Stanley bogged down at a collective 3-11, Rainey has picked up some of the slack.

The second-year right-hander gave the Red Sox some much-needed relief as a starter Sunday, scattering eight hits in a 5-2 victory over Kansas City.

It was his second triumph of the season, both over the Royals, who he blanked on five hits May 3.

"When we left Florida he was my fifth man, but the fifth man never came up for us for three weeks, maybe even more," said Manager Don Zimmer.

However, Rainey's effort was hardly the best in the American League Sunday. Detroit's Dan Petry blanked the California Angels 4-0 on four hits for his first major league shutout, veteran Tommy John hurled a six-hitter as the New York Yankees downed the Minnesota Twins 5-0 and Mike Norris allowed seven hits in the Oakland A's 12-1 victory of the Toronto Blue Jays. The run was unearned and Norris' earned run average dropped to an unbelievable 0.36.

Meanwhile, Seattle whipped the Cleveland Indians 9-4 for Jim Beattie's first victory in a Mariners' uniform, the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 and the Texas Rangers downed the Chicago White Sox 1-1.

Tigers 4, Angels 0

Petry, a 6-foot-4, 21-year-old right-hander who grew up in Placentia, Calif., about 10 minutes from Anaheim, walked two and struck out seven in winning his second game since being recalled from the minors May 1. It was the sixth

Snook wins state track title

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Snook, the king of small town basketball in recent years, is now on the throne of Class B track and field for the second consecutive year.

Killeen in 4A and Needville in 2A also successfully defended their team championships at the state meet over the weekend, with Killeen taking its third straight title. Terrell won 3A and Ganado captured A.

Dennis Brantley of Houston Worthing and Mark McNeil of San Antonio Houston made close runs at national records to rank as the individual stars at the 70th annual meet.

Brantley, a Southern Methodist track recruit, zipped the 110-meter high hurdles in 1:31 seconds, which is second only to the 12.9 run by Renaldo

Nehemiah of Scotch Plains, N.J., in 1977.

Brantley's performance, however, was aided by a 9 mph wind, which is too high to count in the national listings. His time did break the state record of 13.5, which he held with two others. It was Brantley's 24th consecutive high hurdle victory, and he also won the 300-meter hurdles in 36.8.

McNeil, who has a scholarship to bid for a defensive back's job at Nevada-Las Vegas, rocketed to a time of 10.0 in the 100 meters in the first year the event has been run at the state meet. The 10.0 was hand-timed, and he was credited with a fully automatic time of 10.21, second nationally to the 10.16 run by Houston McTear of Baker, Fla., in 1976.

McNeil had a breeze of slightly over 6 mph at his back, however, which also was over the allowable of 2 meters-per-second, or about 4 1/2 mph.

McNeil won the 200 meters in 4A in the relatively slow time of 21.7.

Snook's six runners won all six events in which they were entered and set a conference of 3 minutes 18.8 seconds in the 1,600-meter relay for an overall total of 80 points and the B championship.

The Bluejays, members of a community of fewer than 400, were led by the Kerr brothers — Larry and Jerry, whose older brother Leslie is a premier sprinter at Texas A&M, 13 miles west of Snook.

Dietary lecture assails diners in faculty club

By MIKE FEINSLBER
Associated Press Writer
PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Folks who eat lunch at the Faculty Club at Stanford University get more than a meal. They get a lecture from the menu, want it or not.

Everything on the menu is rated by how much damage it'll do.

The roast beef and Jarlsberg cheese sandwich, for example, is rated FF-1000-CC.

The F's stand for saturated fat, the C's for cholesterol and the numbers for calories.

Better settle for the artichoke casserole — it's only F-400-C.

Only in California — and only on the campus of a high-powered, heavy-thinking, prestigious university — would the menu offer such a nudge, giving you a poke in the conscience when you want to eat something unhealthy.

It is not unusual for restaurant menus to offer waist-watcher plates or even to whisper the caloric content of dishes.

But here the menu goes beyond that, rating each dish relative to the others.

So a dish with two F's would be twice as bad for you as one with one F. An FFF dish would be even more hazardous to your health and an FFFF dish would be a dietary timebomb.

Scientists suspect that saturated fats are a culprit in heart and blood vessel disease and strokes; cholesterol is linked with those ailments, too, as well as hardening of the arteries.

The menu was instigated by Stanford professor Bruce Wallace, a radio astronomer who, when president of the Faculty Club, became concerned about whether his colleagues were eating well.

There was a rumor that medical school faculty members were boycotting the club because the food was too rich for their blood.

So Wallace went to the Stanford Heart Disease Prevention Program, which, with the help of a dietician, came up with the rating scheme.

Has it changed faculty eating habits?

The Heart Disease Prevention Program says it cannot discern much of a change, but Mario Scherrer, manager of the club, said diners eat 125 hamburgers (FF-900-CCC) a week in 1973 but only 26 in a recent week.

"It sounds like a good idea, but I haven't made any decisions based on it," said Kenneth Harker, a senior physics research associate.

His fellow diner, Fred Crawford, was having an F-900-C meal, soup and salad, but he said, "There are days when I have a Frenchburger (that's a cheeseburger on French bread — an awesome FFFF-1200-CCCC) and I'm still here to tell the tale."

But student waiters at the club say the professors are becoming more conscious of what they're eating than they might want to admit.

"People say, 'Oh, OK, I'll be good to myself,'" says Mark Sitzer. "Sometimes people change what they order after they hear what everyone else at the table is ordering."

Waiter Doug Townes said sometimes diners, half joking, become irritated with the tell-all menu. "They say, 'Why do you tell me what I don't want to know?'"

On the Stanford menu, the bad guys are the Reuben (FFF-1200-CC) and the crab louie (FF-700-CCC) as well as the burgers.

In the middle are such dishes as the hero sandwich (tham, salami, Jarlsberg, tomato, sprouts and olives on French bread and FF-700-C); the seafood crepes (shrimp, red snapper, mushrooms, American cheese in white wine sauce and only F-600-C) and the spinach salad (spinach, bacon bits, egg, oil and vinegar dressing and FF-300-CCC).

Heroes of the table are the breast of turkey sandwich (0-700-C); the zucchini and eggplant casserole (zucchini, eggplant, tomatoes, olives and Monterey Jack cheese and 0-400-C) and the turkey and broccoli crepe (F-400-C).

Dr. John Farquar, a professor of medicine, says the menu is bound to alter habits, even if people aren't aware of it.

"We know that changing human behavior is more difficult than putting labels on a menu," he said. "But this is a good beginning. It gets stored away in your brain — sort of an environmental cue."

Carter and Kennedy both claiming uncommitted delegates

By The Associated Press
Campaign officials for President Carter and Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy both claimed large gains in support among uncommitted Democrats as state party officials today continued to tally votes from county conventions.

With 69 percent of the votes from Saturday's balloting counted, Carter had received 65 percent to Kennedy's 24 percent. An additional 11 percent was uncommitted.

"We show we picked up 10 percent of the previously uncommitted. We think that shows a strong movement of uncommitted to our side," said Carter campaign worker Kathy Baker in Austin. "We've picked up 10 percent since last week, and our phones were ringing off the wall Friday from uncommitted delegates calling to switch their vote," said Kennedy campaign worker Joanne McGuire in Houston.

Definitive results were expected by Wednesday, state Democratic officials said.

Texas' 152 delegates to the Democratic National Convention this summer will be determined by the presidential preference shown by the 3,900 state delegates at the state senatorial district caucuses June 20-21 in San Antonio. Kennedy garnered his heaviest support in the state's two major urban areas, Dallas and Houston, and in the predominantly Mexican-American portions of the San Antonio area.

But Carter swamped Kennedy in most other areas of the state.

The returns indicate President Carter has increased his delegate lead from the precinct conventions a week ago, said Bob Beckel, state campaign manager for the Carter-Mondale campaign in Austin.

"If the trend continues, we expect the president to exceed 100 national delegates after the balloting at the state convention in San Antonio," he said.

General Dynamics Corp. readying final bids for contested contract

FORT WORTH (AP) — General Dynamics Corp., manufacturer of the F-16 fighter jet, is readying final bids for two hotly contested contracts that could net the company an estimated $3 billion.

General Dynamics again is locked in head-to-head competition with McDonnell Douglas Corp. to provide Australia with 75 fighter planes at a cost of $1 billion and Spain with 144 aircraft for $2 billion.

Officials for both defense contractors, however, have declined to reveal the monetary value of their current proposals.

Decisions by Spanish and Australian officials are expected by October.

The Saint Louis-based McDonnell Douglas recently won a $2.4 billion contract over General Dynamics to produce 37 F-18 fighters for Canada. Both companies had offered to place billions of dollars in subcontract and other industrial work in that nation as part of their packages.

Canada's decision probably will carry some weight, but industry analysts agree that does not make McDonnell Douglas the favorite.

"They are going to be just too close to call," said an industry spokesman who declined to be identified.

Spanish government officials say the fighters would replace aging McDonnell Douglas F-4s and the French-manufactured F-5s. The new aircraft would be used for air-to-air and air-to-ground defense purposes similar to those of Belgium, Denmark, The Netherlands and Norway.

In Australia, the new jets would replace the Mirage 3, a 20-year-old French aircraft, and would be required to have air-to-sea combat capabilities.

At issue, however, are benefits of the twin-engine F-18 compared with the single-engine design of the F-16. McDonnell Douglas contends its twin-engine jet is more reliable and more capable of adding new armaments and electronics as they are developed.

"The Australians will be patrolling over sparsely populated land and water in sometimes hostile climate," said McDonnell Douglas spokesman John McGrath. "If he (a pilot) does have a problem, he will at least have one engine to get him home."

General Dynamics contends the single-engine F-16 is just as reliable as a twin-engine craft, less expensive to maintain and could save both countries billions of dollars in fuel costs over the life of the plane.

"The competition will emphasize the twin-engine advantage," said a General Dynamics spokesman. "but it will be the only advantage they have."

TEXAS BRIEFS

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A 30-year-old San Angelo man allegedly threatened to shoot his way into a hospital to see an assault victim was arrested late Sunday after a fight with five police officers, authorities said.

The man was booked into San Angelo City Jail on warrants for assault and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and a charge of aggravated assault on a police officer, said Detective David Caudle.

The assault victim, identified as Pat Wofford, 25, was listed in critical condition late Sunday. Officials at Shannon Hospital refused to disclose her injuries.

Ms. Wofford apparently was pushed from a moving vehicle following an argument with a former boyfriend Saturday night, police said. She was treated and released.

An ambulance was summoned to her residence at 3:15 p.m. Sunday, according to fire department records.

Caudle said the suspect threatened "to shoot his way into Shannon" during a telephone threat made Sunday to the Tom Green County Sheriff's Department.

Officers staked out the hospital, located in downtown San Angelo, for several hours Sunday until the suspect was subdued in the parking lot of a bar, Caudle said.

An officer involved in the arrest was treated for minor injuries and released, hospital officials said.

Formal charges were expected to be filed today, Caudle said.

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — South Texas law officers are investigating the bizarre slaying of a retired school teacher whose body was discovered gagged and bound with a telephone cord in her home Saturday morning.

Authorities said they suspected burglary was the motive in the apparent strangulation of Marianne Kelley, 67.

Police Lt. Herman Shafer said a small puncture wound in her ribcage indicated she also may have been stabbed. An autopsy was pending.

Authorities said there were no signs of forced entry or robbery at the house.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — It will take at least three weeks to clean a nuclear power plant that was shut down when 50,000 gallons of radioactive water flooded the basement of the reactor building, Arkansas Power & Light Co. officials said.

There was no release of radioactivity into the atmosphere in Saturday's accident, which left about 18 inches of water in the basement of Unit One of Arkansas Nuclear One, utility officials said.

William Cavanaugh, utility vice president, said the accident at the west-central Arkansas plant was caused by a broken seal on a reactor coolant pump. The nuclear power plant's second unit was not affected.

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities say a 35-year-old man, apparently distraught about a custody fight over his two children, shot and killed his son and daughter in a motel room before killing himself.

Police say they found the bodies of Valentino Donatelli, his 7-year-old son Marco and 10-year-old daughter Claudia Sunday morning in a motel in the Astoria section of Queens.

Police say Donatelli was depressed about a fight with his ex-wife, Maria Theresa Cohen, over the custody of the children. He had picked up the children from a babysitter's house Saturday afternoon.

Hollywood seer has film role

Ayatollah is drug addict, says psychic

By Dick Kleiner

PSYCHIC PETER HURKOS has a role in the film, "Boxoffice." He counts many show business personalities among his clientele.

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Peter Hurkos, the world-famous psychic, recently revealed that he had talked with the Ayatollah Khomeini in Paris, before the Iranian revolution, when Khomeini was an exile in France.

"I met with Khomeini in Paris in December 1975," says the Dutch-born psychic. "He was sitting on the floor. I felt he was no good. A sick man. A dope addict."

Hurkos says he had gone to Paris on a mission. He is noted for his ability to solve crimes through his psychic powers. In this case, there had been a robbery — a $300,000 robbery, he says, although he won't go into the details.

He says an American had been the victim of the robbery and the trail led to Paris where the French police told Hurkos that the Ayatollah Khomeini was in some way involved in the robbery. Hurkos went looking for Khomeini.

"I went to a restaurant," he says, "where he and his men went. I introduced myself. He knew me, knew who I was. He is a psychic believer and had my book. He sent one of his men to get it and had me autograph it for him."

Hurkos says he quickly realized that the circle of men around Khomeini were, like the Ayatollah himself, "fanatics and dope addicts." He estimates that "about 40 percent" of the current Iranian government is addicted to drugs.

"That's why you cannot believe anything they say," Hurkos says. "Khomeini just sits and dreams and says he talks to God. He has a lot of hallucinations."

Hurkos predicts that the end of the hostage situation will be a violent one.

"I see the hostages being freed," he says, "and I see violence in Iran. One of the hostages I see is already mentally disturbed. They didn't get good treatment there at all."

"When the hostages are freed, there will be a big fight there in Tehran. Many people who don't want the hostages to go free will be killed."

Hurkos further predicts that Khomeini's future will be a short one — "He won't be alive two years from now." He says he told the prefecture of police in Paris, at the time of that 1975 meeting, that Khomeini's death would not be a normal one.

Hurkos is branching out more into show business now, in addition to his routine psychic work. He has always been a darling of Hollywood, with many show business clients clamoring for him to look into their futures. He says he predicted, for John Wayne, the Oscar he ultimately received; he predicted, for Carroll O'Connor, that the series he was about to begin ("All in the Family") would run for a long time; he made personal predictions that were accurate for Frank Sinatra, Gloria Leachman, Gloria Swanson, Glenn Ford and Forest Tucker.

Now he is playing a role (as himself, but still it's a role) in Jennings Lang's next film, "Boxoffice." Lang's wife, Monica Lewis, is also in the cast. She was once one of the top pop singers and is resuming her career, with Hurkos' guidance.

"Yes, I am helping Monica with her new career," Hurkos says. "She is making an album, and I am telling her which are the best songs for her. I picked the arranger, the producer and the music for her. The album will be called "Locked In and Hot."

He says that picking songs is only the latest in a long line of psychic work he has done.

"Computers don't do too well," he says, "so why shouldn't people try psychics?"

"Gen. Omar Bradley, when he used to go to the race track, would pick horses through me. I picked five winners for him one day, including one 51-1 long shot. But I never gamble myself."

"You know, I can't use this gift for myself. I can't even find my own shoes if I lose them."

He says that his psychic powers are not consistent — "some days they are strong, some days not worth a dime" — which is one reason why he never volunteers his services. He only does it when he is called on.

Members will float a giant airship

Stelle Group readies for world's end

By Tom Tiede

RICHARD KIENINGER (left), a.k.a. Ekklai Kueshana, says he received a visit in 1945 from a mystic named "Dr. White" who advised him the world will end on May 5, 2000. Kieninger has formed The Stelle Group, a philosophical brotherhood of folks who have built a village with a goal toward surviving the end. Malcom Carnahan (right) is the president.

STELLE III (NEA) — Inflation? Political rot? Mount St. Helens? If you think things are bad now, wait two decades. The economic and political structures will break down altogether. Volcanic eruptions will kill billions of people, and on May 5, in the year 2000, the world as we know it will end.

That, anyway, is the quite serious belief of the 120 folks who occupy this pleasant company town on the northeast Illinois plains. The company is The Stelle Group, a philosophic brotherhood whose members have built their own village with a goal toward surviving the coming planetary catastrophe.

Even now the town is preparing for the last days. Residents are stockpiling food in their larders. They are fortifying their homes for the earthquakes that will accompany the mountain explosions. They are building schools to teach children reading, writing and civil defense.

Richard Kieninger, the chosen one, says it all began in 1945. He was 17 on the occasion, and received a visit from a man he identifies as "Dr. White." The latter said he represented a mystic association which had evidence of the inevitable end. Kieninger insists Dr. White was not balmy.

White instructed Kieninger to organize people who were opposed to the notion of dropping dead in 2000. He taught the boy a secret language, renamed him "Ekklai Kueshana," meaning "The Harbinger of Atlantis," and reportedly carved proof of his visit into young Kieninger's leg.

OK, it does sound contrived. And Kieninger, now 53, compounds the suspicion by reducing his narrative to the simplicities of a comic book. Life on earth started in a place called "Mu," he says. The new world island in the Pacific is to be called, nicely enough, "The Kingdom of God."

But, somehow, Kieninger has credibility. Perhaps because he's as simple as his ideas. He speaks in a monotone, avoids color at all cost and is tailored by J.C. Penney. His own people say he has the charisma of a stone step, and could not sell footwear in a tack factory.

Yet nearly 800 people have lived in Stelle since it was formed in 1973. Probably because Kieninger preaches old-time values as well as 21st-century survival. "We may have had members who did not think the world is going to end," he says, "but everyone has agreed with the brotherhood's way of life."

That way is: charity, community and Christianity. Kieninger says Stelle is far from being utopia, but it is an alternative to the predominately combative society.

In a phrase, Stelle is a village of cooperative volunteerism. The 240-acre plot (60 miles south of Chicago) was purchased with contributed money. Each of the 34 homes has been constructed with neighborly assistance. There are no taxes; residents donate tithes to raise operating capital.

At length the villagers hope to float a gigantic airship in which they will escape the ravages. They will remain in the clouds until such time as the global turmoil has concluded, and then will set down on an island in the Pacific Ocean where they will build a new and more promising society.

No, they aren't crazy. Not certifiably, anyway. Neither do the people of Stelle seem to be religious or generational zealots. They are bright, middle-class capitalists who happen to subscribe to the expostulations of a former cabinet maker who claims he has been touched by great experiences.

Richard Kieninger, the chosen one, says it all began in 1945. He was 17 on the occasion, and received a visit from a man he identifies as "Dr. White." The latter said he represented a mystic association which had evidence of the inevitable end. Kieninger insists Dr. White was not balmy.

White instructed Kieninger to organize people who were opposed to the notion of dropping dead in 2000. He taught the boy a secret language, renamed him "Ekklai Kueshana," meaning "The Harbinger of Atlantis," and reportedly carved proof of his visit into young Kieninger's leg.

OK, it does sound contrived. And Kieninger, now 53, compounds the suspicion by reducing his narrative to the simplicities of a comic book. Life on earth started in a place called "Mu," he says. The new world island in the Pacific is to be called, nicely enough, "The Kingdom of God."

But, somehow, Kieninger has credibility. Perhaps because he's as simple as his ideas. He speaks in a monotone, avoids color at all cost and is tailored by J.C. Penney. His own people say he has the charisma of a stone step, and could not sell footwear in a tack factory.

Yet nearly 800 people have lived in Stelle since it was formed in 1973. Probably because Kieninger preaches old-time values as well as 21st-century survival. "We may have had members who did not think the world is going to end," he says, "but everyone has agreed with the brotherhood's way of life."

That way is: charity, community and Christianity. Kieninger says Stelle is far from being utopia, but it is an alternative to the predominately combative society.

In a phrase, Stelle is a village of cooperative volunteerism. The 240-acre plot (60 miles south of Chicago) was purchased with contributed money. Each of the 34 homes has been constructed with neighborly assistance. There are no taxes; residents donate tithes to raise operating capital.

Gritty Britt takes refuge in 'The Hostage Tower'

by Steve K. Walz

New York—Britt Eklund personifies the typical Swedish stereotype. Blonde, beautiful, sexually liberated and emotionally tough as nails. If one were to describe the 37-year-old actress' life it could be summed up in only one word — "tumultuous."

Britt's soon to be published "kiss and tell" book True Britt chronicles her rip-roaring adventures with rock and movie stars, plus all the naughty stuff that she deemed fit to print. Of course, this hasn't done much for Britt's reputation in Hollywood. Outside of a few TV series guest appearances and some forgettable low-budget movies, Eklund hasn't worked hard since she teamed up with close friend (and fellow Swedish actress) Maud Adams and Roger Moore in 007's "The Man With the Golden Gun."

New start

But come May 13, Eklund and Adams will team up again in the CBS tele-thriller "The Hostage Tower." From her palatial home in Bel Air, Britt spoke fondly of her latest movie. "I get to play a baddy (sic), which is nice for a change. I play the criminal's right hand woman and mistress, and I walk around with an invisible whip threatening my rival Maud Adams with my eyes. I'm glad I got the chance to do this kind of role because usually blonde and blue-eyed women get to play sexy young things," Eklund claimed.

Detecting a tinge of resentment and sarcasm in her voice, I asked Britt if she regretted having her memoirs come out just as "The Hostage Tower" was being filmed. "I have no regrets at all. I haven't put down anyone, and I just don't have any qualms about it whatsoever. The unfortunate thing with the book though, is that it's not giving me the opportunity I would like in movies and TV. I'm sure True Britt was a little disturbing to the Hollywood producers, that's why I would like the book thing to be done and over with, so that I can get on with my career. Whatever was in the past has already been done. It has nothing to do with today. But if you think I objected to the publicity—I didn't! I thought it was nice to be on the cover of People magazine," Eklund said proudly in her seductive Scandinavian voice.

When pressed about what sort of roles she thought she could play, Britt quipped sardonically, "Well, you aren't going to see me in the classics! I thought I would have been perfect for a role in 'Scruples.' Basically I love TV in general. There's this wonderful immediate thing you have with the audience. Right now I am in discussion with three different networks for several projects. But I certainly wouldn't do a 'Charlie's Angels' type of show. That sort of thing isn't very conducive to my brain. I'd like to do a half-hour sit-com maybe. In June I'll also be making a movie called 'Dark Eyes,' a psychic-thriller, which I think will also be fun."

Telling it
As sassy as Britt is, one must give the alluring actress credit for trying to piece her life back together instead of continuing down a path of destruction. Ms. Eklund openly admitted to her past whimsical ways, but justified them as part of living out a fantasy. "I've lived out most of my fantasies. I made a record that didn't do that well, but it was fun. One of my fantasies was to be a simulated rock 'n' roll star. Then I've hosted a rock show ('Jukebox') which was treated like a variety show which was very creative. Of course, I've traveled all around the world. I just pretended to be carefree, and the champagne flowed freely and there were always people around me which I enjoyed then. But last summer though, I said, 'enough-is-enough. Now I like my privacy in Bel Air. You can act out fantasies, but you can't act out dreams, and its miffs me to see that after 28 films I am still considered a 'starlet.'" Britt said, sounding quite perplexed.

No one knows for sure what the future holds for Britt Eklund, and I don't think Britt knows either, but she'll never be dull.
