Convicted hit man seen in secret Wood lineup

HOUSTON (AP) — Convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson, once questioned by a grand jury investigating the assassination of a federal judge, has appeared in a secret lineup staged here with the federal authorities leading the massive investigation, sources said.

Although no arrests had been made and no charges filed, sources close to the investigation told The Associated Press Thursday that authorities "may be close to a solution" in the 1979 slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Wood, who earned the nickname "Maximum John" because of his stiff penalties on drug cases, was gunned down outside his posh San Antonio townhouse early on the morning of May 29, 1979.

The FBI has conducted one of the most massive investigations in its history in the 17 months since Wood's death, but has so far been unable to crack the case.

Thursday's lineup at the Houston police building was at least the fourth conducted in the assassination and attempted slaying of former assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who had prosecuted several drug cases in Wood's court.

The two shootings frequently have been linked during the investigation and Kerr has viewed at least two of the secret lineups that included members of the Bandidos motorcycle club.

Kerr was ambushed as he left his San Antonio home on Nov. 21, 1978 but escaped serious injury by ducking beneath the dashboard of his luxury car as it was riddled by gunfire from a van.

A man later identified as Harrelson was whisked down a corridor at the Houston police building Thursday afternoon as heavily armed deputies cleared the halls and clamped a tight lid on proceedings in the building.

Harrelson's attorney, Bob Tarrant, confirmed that his client appeared in the lineup, but refused to connect Harrelson with the Wood inquiry. Authorities also refused to comment on possible links to the assassination investigation.

Harrelson was convicted of murder in 1968 and paroled 10 years later, then he moved to Dallas. He appeared before a San Antonio grand jury investigating Wood's death in October of 1979, but said afterwards he knew nothing of the assassination and was in Dallas the day the judge was shot.

Present at Thursday's lineup was federal prosecutor Jamie Boyd of San Antonio, FBI agents, U.S. Marshals and criminal investigators from the Houston police department.

Harrelson, a professional gambler, was arrested in Houston earlier this year on a drug and gambling paraphernalia charge. He failed to appear at a court hearing last July in Harris County and later was captured in the West Texas community of Van Horn and returned to Houston.

After Harrelson was arrested in Van Horn, Jack Lawn, agent-in-charge of the FBI's San Antonio office, said federal agents wanted to interview Harrelson again about the Wood case.

However, Boyd said prosecutors were not interested in bringing Harrelson before the grand jury again.

Harrelson was sentenced to 15 years in prison by a Brownsville jury in 1973 after he was convicted as the hired killer of Hearne grain dealer Sam Degelia Jr. He was paroled in the fall of 1978 from a Texas penitentiary.

As Harrelson was escorted from the Harris County jail, deputies armed with automatic rifles and pistols swept through the third floor of the police building, clearing out all visitors.

A Houston Post reporter, Barbara Canetti, was arrested for failing to move at the instruction of a police officer. She later was released.

residence. Meese, who is heading the transition team, is to become a Cabinet-level counselor to the president. Baker will become Reagan's chief of staff.

Reagan to choose top Cabinet members from list of finalists

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan, his debut among the nation's power brokers over, is flying home to California to begin choosing a Cabinet.

Reagan is expected to spend the weekend reviewing a list of Cabinet finalists prepared by a group of old friends and trusted advisers.

A source close to the transition said Reagan will focus first on the top Cabinet posts — State, Defense, Treasury and Justice — along with the Cabinet-level jobs of running the CIA and the Office of Management and Budget.

Even as the weekend approached, the Cabinet competition was still developing.

A source said California Supreme Court Justice William P. Clark, a Reagan appointee who served as the former Republican governor's first chief of staff, now is in the running for attorney general. Until Thursday, that slot was thought likely to go to William French Smith, Reagan's personal lawyer, who was said by other sources still to be the leading candidate.

Reagan was to talk with former President Gerald R. Ford and meet with his transition team before departing today.

He capped his five-day stay here with a White House conference Thursday with President Carter, their first meeting since the election.

"We're very glad to have you here," Carter told his successor as he and his wife, Rosalynn, greeted Reagan and his wife, Nancy, at the South Portico of the White House. "I think you'll like the place."

Carter said the 90-minute session dealt with some of the problems Reagan will inherit when he takes office. Until then, the two men agreed that Carter is in charge "in the fullest sense of the word," the outgoing president said.

Carter added that he expected to see Reagan often in the future.

Reagan said the man he defeated in a landslide on Nov. 4 "has been most gracious and most cooperative, and has certainly made it a much easier time than it would otherwise have been."

Reagan, who will be inaugurated Jan. 20, met later with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, breaking tradition by scheduling the get-acquainted session before formally taking office. Reagan declined to meet with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, when Begin was in the United States last week.

Schmidt, who had visited Carter earlier, declined substantive comment on what he and Reagan discussed during their 50-minute meeting.

"The governor with his own hands opened my tobacco box," the pipe-smoking German leader said.

An official joint communique issued after the Schmidt-Carter conference said the two men discussed a wide range of political, security and economic issues and agreed to continue close consultation.

Schmidt has often been critical of Carter administration policy, especially regarding military security. Just this past weekend he said, "There is a new decisiveness in the American nation, and that certainly will make itself felt in the new Senate, the new House and obviously in the new White House and President Reagan."

While the meeting between Carter and Reagan was traditional, some of the president-elect's other appointments earlier this week were not.

He visited Capitol Hill — Republican senators as well as Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. Reagan received Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., visited the Teamsters union and the Supreme Court. He hosted a dinner Tuesday night for Washington's elite and dined privately Thursday night with columnist George Will.

Reagan also received his second national security briefing Thursday from CIA Director Stansfield Turner and traveled to a government office building to meet with a group of early congressional supporters.

U.S. cautions against renewed hope for release of hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are cautioning against renewed hopes for the imminent release of the American hostages in Iran, despite Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie's assurance that the United States has agreed in principle to Iranian demands for the captives' release.

"You can accept the principle of something, but the details of how you carry it out can be very significantly different," State Department spokesman John H. Trantner told reporters Thursday. Trantner also cautioned against "over-excitement" and expectations that the 52 Americans, now in their second year of captivity, are about to be freed.

Trantner was attempting to play down what appeared to be a more optimistic assessment Muskie made earlier in the day.

"We've said publicly we accepted the four points in principle," Muskie said, referring to the terms set down Nov. 2 by the Iranian parliament. "I think the way in which the Iranians have handled our proposals is positive."

In Tehran, meanwhile, the official Iranian news agency, Pars, quoted Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai as saying the United States "has not understood the problem" of the hostage crisis. Rajai said that "we intend to elaborate the matter more."

Iran has not responded officially to the American proposals, carried to Algiers on Nov. 10 by Deputy Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher and four other U.S. officials. Details of the American response have not been disclosed.

The United States and Iran have been dealing through Algeria in the hostage negotiations.

Muskie's remarks apparently were the first by a senior Carter administration official that the Iranian terms for release of the hostages were acceptable even in principle.

But other U.S. officials indicated there is still disagreement over the details of the Iranian demands.

The Iranians have demanded an American promise of non-intervention in Iranian affairs, the freeing of more than $8 billion in assets frozen by the Carter administration in retaliation for the seizure of the hostages, cancellation of all American claims against Iran and return of the wealth of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The last two demands — cancellation of the claims and return of the shah's wealth — pose the greatest legal and practical obstacles for the Carter administration.

The hostages have been held in captivity since Nov. 4, 1979.

Fisherman sees world's end as lake goes down the drain

JEFFERSON ISLAND, La. (AP) — "The end of the world is coming," yelled a fisherman as a voracious whirlpool drained Lake Peigneur right out from under his boat.

And the big question after the collapse of an abandoned salt mine shaft — which also drew a $5 million oil rig, a tug boat, 10 barges and a botanical garden into its gaping maw — was whether this entire island might be next.

The island is part of a massive outcropping of salt. If the lake waters sucked into the mine during the shaft's collapse Thursday dissolve the subterranean pillars of salt, the salt dome beneath this marshy island could go crashing inward, officials fear.

The island, 10 miles square, was evacuated Thursday after a 1,300-foot-deep abandoned salt mine shaft collapsed when it apparently was punctured by oil drilling and seeping lake water caused a cave-in.

A growing crater sucked in more lake water, creating a whirlpool that emptied the 20-acre lake and swallowed almost everything on and near it.

"There is the potential for the island to cave in," warned Wayne Knack, district manager of the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration office in Dallas.

The danger stemmed from the fresh lake water that had drained underground, said deputy sheriff Ron Sonnier.

"The whole dome is sustained by 90-foot pillars of salt. If the water eats up those pillars, the dome itself will go in," he said.

On or near the dome is Jefferson Island with a Diamond Crystal Salt Mine Co. mining operation, a tourist garden and some oil operations.

Texaco's Max Hebert said a well "may have entered a shaft," and spokeswoman Brenda Buras said the oil company did not know its rig was resting above an abandoned shaft.

Seven men on the rig escaped by tugboat, 50 men in the salt mine got to safety, and no injuries were reported, officials said.

Once the shaft collapsed, a crater grew rapidly, devouring two Texaco rigs, the lake, a tug, a string of salt barges, thousands of gallons of water and mud and nearby Rip Van Winkle Gardens, a tourist botanical attraction.

"That water was roaring. I'm not kidding you a bit," said fisherman Leonce "Spec" Viator Jr., who was fishing on the lake at the time.

At one point, water in the Delcambre Canal, a shrimp boat channel linking Lake Peigneur with Vermilion Bay in the Gulf of Mexico, was running backwards, pulling Gulf water into the crater at about 20 mph, witnesses said.

Close-range combat with Iraqis reported in Iranian foothills

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian paratroopers fought close-range combat with helicopter-dropped Iraqi commandos today for a strategic chain of heights along the foothills of western Iran's Zagros Mountains.

Tehran radio reported Iranian paratroopers were pushing the Iraqis back in the fighting near Iran's border towns of Mehran, Gilan Gharb and Sar-Pol-e-Zahab. It said Iranian troops had inflicted heavy casualties and destroyed many enemy fortifications.

A communique from the Iraqi defense command in Baghdad said its forces drove off the attackers behind waves of bombing air force jets and rocket-firing helicopter gunships.

The three towns, conquered by invading Iraqi forces in the first week of the 61-day-old war, control the routes from Iran's western border to the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, 90 miles farther westward.

Military communique from the two warring nations on the northern rim of the Persian Gulf suggest the battle for the heights might become crucial to Iran's week-long counter-offensive at the northern and southern sectors of Iraq's 300-mile invasion front.

Control of the heights is essential for holding the three towns as well as the major border-crossing Iranian city of Qasr-e-Shirin, which also is in Iraqi hands.

The Iraqi communique said 45 Iranian troops were killed in the running battle for the heights this morning.

An Iranian communique made no mention of casualties there but claimed 60 Iranian troops were killed in mid-morning helicopter gunship assaults on Iraqi positions around the embattled Iranian town of Susangerd, 100 miles to the southeast.

None of the claims could be confirmed because Western reporters have been barred from traveling to the battlezones on a regular basis since Iraq invaded Sept. 22.

The capture of Susangerd would let the Iraqis drive 35 miles farther southeast to Ahwaz, capital of Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan Province, and the oil wells beyond.

The Iraqis are shelling Ahwaz from the south, having pushed there after taking most of the port of Khorramshahr and surrounding the nearby refinery city of Abadan, 65 miles to the south on the Shatt al-Arab estuary. Iraq's only waterway to the Persian Gulf.

Iran's Pars news agency said one Iranian was killed and 25 injured in Iraqi shelling of Abadan and the area was "relatively calm" during the night after Iranian forces attacked Iraqi positions on the highway to Ahwaz.

Swedish Socialist Party leader Olof Palme, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's special envoy, visited the Khuzestan war zones today. Tehran radio reported he was scheduled to meet with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in Baghdad on Saturday.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai met with Palme Thursday and both told him there would be no talk of peace until the Iraqis are driven from the east side of the Shatt al-Arab and other occupied Iranian territory.

Meanwhile, Bani-Sadr was quoted as saying in an interview with the London-based Middle East Economic Review, published today, that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was a "war criminal" and that his army would collapse within two months because it had not expected extended fighting or heavy losses in the war.

THE MYSTERIOUS ASSAILANT of DALLAS' "bad guy" lead J.R. Ewing, portrayed by Larry Hagman, left, is to be revealed in tonight's episode of DALLAS, which will air at 9 p.m. on CBS. The subject of much debate and numerous bets throughout the world, "urgent" broadcasts of the secret are planned by many news agencies. The secret is to be revealed to the actors in the series tonight. Hagman appears here as he appeared Thursday night at the Silver Anniversary Conference of Personal Managers West in Los Angeles. Hagman presented the organization's "Industry Man of the Year" trophy to Lorimar Productions president Lee Rich.

Human fetus found in Amarillo dumpster

AMARILLO — Amarillo police, working on an informant's tip, discovered a human fetus in a trash dumpster near a 709 S. Arthur Street residence at approximately 6 p.m. Thursday.

"The age and sex of the fetus is still undetermined," Amarillo police officials said today.

"We are waiting for the results of the autopsy being performed today to see if we even have a crime on our hands," police officials said.

Fire strikes MGM casino

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A major fire broke out at the MGM Grand hotel-casino today, sending smoke throughout all 26 stories and trapping hundreds of guests in their rooms. Clark County Fire Capt. Ralph Dinsman said two people died jumping from their windows and "we have too many injured to count at this time."

"Abortion is legal in Texas, and if the autopsy determines that is what happened, there is no crime," police officials said.

"We can prosecute only if the infant was alive at the time it was placed in the dumpster."

Amarillo officials revealed that an informant, living at the Arthur Street address, provided the tip concerning the fetus in the dumpster.

Police officials also said that the fetus had been in the dumpster only a short time when it was discovered.

Italian trains crash head-on VIBO VALENTIA, Italy (AP) — Two express passenger trains traveling full speed at more than 100 mph crashed into empty freight cars from the opposite direction early today, killing at least 20 people and injuring 80, officials said. A police source said a signal malfunction appeared to be responsible.

Police officials said the crash occurred shortly after midnight just outside the station in Vibo Valentia, a Calabrian town near Catanzaro.

Police said express train "587," bound from Rome to Siracusa, Sicily, hit two or three empty box cars of a freight train, bouncing them onto an adjoining track where they were hit by the Rome-bound "588" express coming from the opposite direction.

Police said the passenger trains were traveling "at full speed" in excess of 100 miles an hour.

"It's a ghastly sight. Some cars were destroyed completely and others flattened like sandwiches," said Dr. Franco Pansitta, the health director of the Vibo Valentia Hospital.

Doctors and nurses were brought in from nearby towns to treat the victims, said Pansitta who was directing the emergency first aid operation.

Clements wants Tower in Senate, not cabinet

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says Sen. John Tower is more valuable to Texas and the nation as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee than as secretary of defense.

At a hastily called news conference Thursday, Clements tried to erase talk of a Texas double play in which President-elect Ronald Reagan taps Tower as defense secretary, and Clements picks John Connally to fill Tower's senate seat.

"I don't know why everybody keeps talking about this. They must have run out of things to talk about," he said. "I don't have any reason to believe that is going to happen anytime soon, if ever."

The governor said it's unlikely that former Gov. Connally wants to be a senator.

"If he had any ambition to be a senator he would have done that 20 years ago," Clements said. "He has no ambition to be a senator from Texas."

Tower, who is due to become the chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee, met with Reagan in Washington Wednesday, but declined to comment on his discussion with the president-elect.

One source said Tower still was a contender for the defense post, but that choice "was not as solid as some of the others."

Because Tower's appointment would require a special election within 90 days to fill the unexpired four years of his senate term, his selection could hinge on Reagan's assessment of Republican chances of retaining the seat. A Democratic victory would erode the slender Republican majority in the Senate.

Clements' opinion on Republican chances of retaining the seat could weigh heavily on Reagan's decision.

The governor said Tower is "uniquely qualified" to move into the chairman's seat of the armed services committee because of his 16 years on the panel.

Clements said Gen. Alexander Haig, also mentioned as a possible secretary of defense, would have "some difficulties" because of his military background.

"Anytime you have a four-star general, you have crossed the line of civilian control," he said, citing "a very positive line of authority and tradition" of civilian control of the military.

Clements stressed that Reagan has not made up his mind on cabinet selections, and predicted appointments would be announced next Wednesday at the earliest.

He has not seen the lists of candidates for each post.

"The less I know about this the better position I'm in with you," he told reporters.

The governor went to Washington today to meet with defense, State Department and intelligence officials as part of the Reagan interim advisory committee on defense and foreign policy.

Clements will spend one or two days a week in Washington until the Texas Legislature convenes in January, he said. His role after Reagan takes office will be up to the new president, he added.

"That's entirely up to him. He understands full well I have a limited amount of time," Clements said, indicating the Legislature will keep him busy.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young has told friends that he intends to run for mayor of Atlanta next year, the Atlanta Constitution reported today.

The newspaper quoted sources as saying that Young, a Democrat, will not make any formal announcement of his candidacy until after the Jan. 15 celebration of the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Young, a former congressman, said in an interview this week that he wasn't as concerned about the political aspects of running another campaign as he was about running the city.

"I know about running a race," he said. "It'd be a tragedy to run a race (and win) and then say, 'What do I do now?'"

The current mayor, Democrat Maynard Jackson, has served two four-year terms and by law is not allowed to run again.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Actress Sophia Loren may play the part of dethroned Iranian Empress Farah Diba in a movie to be made by Miss Loren's husband, director Carlo Ponti.

The couple on Thursday ended a four-day visit to Panama as guests of former head of state Gen. Omar Torrijos, who suggested the film and Miss Loren's role in it.

The Iranian royal family was in exile for a time earlier this year on the Panamanian resort island of Contadora. The family later went to Egypt, where the shah died.

Ponti said he also plans to film a movie about the Panama Canal based on the historical work "Path Between the Seas" by David McCullough. He said Miss Loren would play the part of Maria de la Ossa de Amador, the wife of Panama's first president, Manuel Amador Guerrero.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The cinema-television school at the University of Southern California will get a start on a new five-building complex with a $4.7 million gift from producer George Lucas.

Lucas, 36, whose films "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back" are among the highest-grossing in movie history, is a 1966 graduate of USC.

Sidney Ganis of Lucasfilm Ltd., Lucas's production company, said the producer hopes the new center will become the source of young talent for the film and television industry.

Lucas will provide the funds for the first building in the complex and part of the second, Ganis said. It is hoped that private contributors will kick in for the remaining construction, Ganis said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor has been in plenty of movies, but never a Broadway play. And at age 47, she's decided it's time to remedy that.

Her vehicle will be "The Little Foxes," the play by Lillian Hellman about life in a Southern family. Miss Taylor will play the greedy, heartless Regina.

"I've been wanting to do a play for a long time and now that the election campaigning is over, this seemed like a perfect time," said Miss Taylor, who is married to Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

The play opens in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 27 and will move to Broadway in April after an engagement in Washington.

Chamber's conference hears Clayton and water experts

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Delegates attending the West Texas Chamber of Commerce's pre-legislative conference here heard more about the politics of water during the meeting's second day.

In the morning session Thursday, Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton told the 200 delegates that the major issue in the upcoming session of the Legislature will be reapportionment of the state's political districts.

At lunch, State Sen. E.L. Short of nearby Tahoka returned to a topic that arose Wednesday: water importation.

The afternoon session included a panel discussion among state and federal water experts on state and national water issues.

In his speech, Clayton said the state's growing population could give Texas two or three more congressmen. Clayton, of Springlake, said his information showed the state now has 14.1 million residents.

The first regular legislative session after each census is responsible for redistricting the Texas Senate and House, Clayton said. But should the legislators be unable to finish the task, the matter goes to a redistricting board consisting of the lieutenant governor, attorney general, House speaker, comptroller and land commissioner.

Clayton said a special session would be called for redistricting of congressional seats.

Sen. Short told delegates that "a conservative estimate is that water in such quantities to serve the needs of Texas for the next 50 years could be imported in for less than Texans will be charged for the windfall profits tax for the next three years."

On Wednesday, the director of planning and development for the Texas Department of Water Resources told the group a conflict may begin brewing between East Texas and West Texas when the state is forced to import water.

Four admit guilt in 'untold disaster'

PEKING (AP) — Four of the 10 defendants accused of bringing "untold disaster" to China during the Cultural Revolution have admitted their guilt, but Mao Tse-tung's widow still is posturing like the movie actress she once was and striking "a nauseating pose," the Chinese press said today.

The trial of Mao's widow, Jiang Qing, her three radical associates in the so-called "Gang of Four" and six supporters of the late Defense Minister Lin Biao opened Thursday in Peking with the reading of the 20,000-word, 48-count indictment.

Chinese sources said no session was scheduled today, and there was no indication when the trial would resume.

The two groups and their allies are accused of causing the deaths of more than 34,800 people during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, of framing other top leaders in an attempt to take over the government, of plotting to murder Mao and stage an armed coup and of plotting to stage an armed rebellion in Shanghai after Mao's death.

They could be sentenced to death.

Television reports of the first trial session showed Jiang Qing looking as self-assured as she did when she was in power, before her husband's death and her arrest four years ago.

She was escorted into the courtroom by two armed women guards, but she showed no ill effects from her long detention. She held her head high, and her appearance was unchanged. Dressed in a dark Mao suit, she wore her usual dark-rimmed glasses, and her hair was still thick and jet black despite her 67 years.

During the seven minutes of TV film broadcast Thursday night, she looked around the courtroom occasionally and yawned a few times. Some of the Chinese reporters who attended the trial said she wept at one point, but in general she "looked pleased with herself," the official Xinhua news agency reported.

"This woman, who wants to be an empress still, in every move maintains her accustomed artificial posturing," said Xinhua. "She still uses some of the techniques from her days as a movie actress and under the public gaze deliberately holds up her head, slows her step and adopts a nauseating pose."

The People's Daily, the Communist Party newspaper, reported that 76-year-old Chen Boda, Mao's former political secretary and the oldest of the defendants, and Li Zuopeng, the former navy political commissar, became ill during the reading of the long indictment and were given injections and oxygen.

Express trains crash at 100 mph

VIBO VALENTIA, Italy (AP) — Two express passenger trains travelling 100 mph crashed into empty freight cars from opposite directions early today, killing at least 20 people and injuring 100, officials said. A police source said a signal malfunction appeared to be responsible.

Rescue workers, firemen and soldiers used blow torches and crowbars to pull the victims from the twisted metal, and police sources said many of the bodies were dismembered and spread over a wide area just outside the Vibo Valentia train station.

"It seems the cars were not fully packed. Otherwise we would be talking about deaths of hundreds," one rescue official said. The crash occurred shortly after midnight just outside the station in this Calabrian town near Catanzaro.

Police said the 16-car express train "587," bound from Rome to Siracusa, Sicily, hit two empty box cars detached from a freight train, bouncing them onto an adjoining track where they were hit by the 15-car Rome-bound "588" express coming from the opposite direction.

Police said the passenger trains were travelling "at full speed" of 160 kilometers an hour — 100 miles an hour — and that at least three of the cars of the Rome-bound train were destroyed.

"It's a ghastly sight. Some cars were destroyed completely and others flattened like sandwiches," said Dr. Franco Pansitta, the health director of the Vibo Valentia Hospital.

Doctors and nurses were brought in from nearby towns to treat the victims, said Pansitta who was directing the emergency first aid operation.

It was the worst train wreck in Italy since 1978 when two express trains crashed near Bologna, killing 43 people.

Compelling argument for ABSCAM tactics

It was to be expected that members of Congress ensnared in the FBI's Abscam sting would cry foul and assert that government agents had resorted to entrapment. What other defense was possible for public officials videotaped in the act of stuffing their pockets with tens of thousands of dollars in bribes?

The allegations of entrapment, nonetheless, raised serious legal questions. A number of respected legal authorities condemned the Abscam operation on just those grounds. And it was apparent that the government's prosecution of the Abscam defendants would be compromised, if not wrecked altogether, if it could be shown that agents had induced the six congressmen and other public officials to commit crimes they were not predisposed to commit.

There is a larger lesson to be drawn from the Abscam case. The FBI cannot hope to mount a credible attack on white-collar crime and most especially on political corruption unless it can employ these kinds of undercover tactics.

Meanwhile, legal experts who are offended that congressmen are baited with money are having their day in court. This serves a useful purpose and we're glad these critics remain on the job.

These cases stemming from Abscam constitute a compelling argument for an aggressive FBI employing tactics it must to search out corruption in high places.

Taxpayers get hit coming and going

Double-digit inflation and the graduated federal income tax have the American taxpayer in an excruciating bind, according to the Ohio Public Expenditure Council.

As one's dollar income rises, he graduates into a higher tax bracket, meaning he pays a higher rate of income tax than before. It follows that during severe inflation, one's dollar income may rise but his real income, or power to purchase, rises less or even declines. Yet, he pays a higher rate of tax. We have the absurd result of taxing people at a higher rate the lower their ability to pay becomes.

For example, assume a taxpayer with three dependents got a salary of $20,000 in 1979. The following year, inflation being 14.5 percent, let us assume he received a raise of 14.5 percent or $2,900.

He got a raise, but in reality he got a cut. The dollar increase of $2,900 boosted him into a higher tax bracket, so that the impact of inflation, his federal income and Social Security taxes added up to more than the raise—some $270 more.

So it seems the United States government is putting two screws, not one, to the citizen: through its Federal Reserve Board and U.S. Treasury, it is inflating, causing the cost of living to zoom, and through its Internal Revenue Service it is boosting taxes. Both of these are deliberate, long-continued policies.

Politicians not perfect: that's news?

Congressman Michael Myers has been booted out of that august body for taking a bribe from an FBI man posing as an Arab sheik. Congressman Bob Bauman is accused of sexual activities with minor boys. Sen. Harrison Williams and three others are indicted in connection with the ongoing Abscam case. Justice Department investigators accuse President Carter of failing to cooperate with their probe of Brother Billy and his Libyan terrorist buddies.

It's not often that you'll find us expressing sympathy with government officials accused of wrongdoing. Even now our sympathy is qualified and doesn't condone those actions. But it does seem to us that the public expects a standard of conduct from public officials that is not altogether reasonable. Many seem to expect elected officials and all their friends and families to be little tin gods, free from selfishness, human weakness, wayward thoughts and errant actions. That's unreasonable. Public officials are human beings, and we can expect about the same proportion of wastrels, scoundrels and boodlers among the legislatures of the land as among the population at large.

Indeed, some political scientists maintain that the current congress is freer of outright graft than congresses of, say, a hundred years ago, when bribes, callgirls, orgies and minor malfeasances were so commonplace as not to attract the interest of newspaper reporters. At a surface level, there's some plausibility here. But we would note that what would have been recognized as outright vote-buying a hundred years ago is often now clothed in "progressive" rhetoric. The corruption is more cleverly concealed and subtle, more carefully "covered." But we doubt that the level has fallen significantly.

We're not really shocked at the presence of corruption and malfeasance in high places. In fact we're sometimes surprised that others are so surprised. Elected officials share human weaknesses and shortcomings with the rest of us, and perhaps a larger proportion of the vices that often accompany personal ambition and feelings of self-importance.

The great American seed corn banquet

By the Honorable William E. Simon
(Editor's note: Mr. Simon is a former Secretary of the Treasury and author of the best-selling 1978 book - "A Time for Truth". This text is extracted from his recent major address at Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Michigan.

Government actions in recent years have removed incentives and have caused many to doubt increasingly that the American dream is within reach. Watching the economy stagnate has tended to remove hope and has pushed people toward a desperate sense of working and living simply to survive.

What is plainly necessary is a set of policies designed for growth, and such growth has its roots in individual self-interest as it responds to clear incentives, not in benign government wisdom.

The new regulations and the ever present inflation serve as a double whammy, and the result is a substantial decline in after-tax earnings for everybody. In this regard, it is of course no secret that corporate profits - adjusted for inflation and outmoded accounting practices - declined 50 percent in the decade from 1965 to 1975, and retained earnings were a negative $18 billion in 1974. One could call this the Great American Seed Corn Banquet!

Measured in after-tax income, it becomes more beneficial for some individuals not to work than to work. The supply of labor shrinks along with the shrinkage in after-tax income. Without labor there can be no production, and output growth declines.

But the rise in unemployment benefits raises the federal deficit and issuance of government bonds; and monetary growth expands with the Federal Reserve purchasing the new bonds to prevent interest rates from rising. So demand increases while supply falls, and once again inflation becomes worse!

The more ambitious people strive to become richer than they were, and this too is part of the American dream. But government has deprived us of this freedom by removing incentives and strangling initiative. In the process of removing our economic freedom, it has increasingly eroded our political freedom as well.

Fundamental economic and political liberties are being circumscribed by the encroachment of bureaucratic institutions into what was once the private domain, and all in the name of improving economic performance, fighting inflation, and making the poor better off while making the rich less so.

Yet the loss of economic freedom will surely lead to a loss of political freedom and liberty for rich and poor alike--there is a certain historical inevitability to it. Government planners who wish to reshape the economic landscape will soon move to reshape other institutions--social, cultural, religious, and political!

GOP's costly campaign

By Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) - Although the Republican Party this year spent millions of dollars on a sophisticated campaign to gain control of state legislatures throughout the country, that effort produced only limited success on Election Day.

The GOP achieved significant gains in three major states, but the results of the unprecedented effort pale in comparison with both the amount of money spent on the endeavor and the party's victories in this year's other political contests.

As a result, Democratic politicians in many state capitals will again dominate the process of drawing new boundaries for congressional and state - legislative districts based on population shifts reflected in the 1980 census.

In an attempt to thwart the Democrats, the Republican National Committee, a special political - action committee called GOPAC and other organizations poured $3.5 million to $5 million into the campaign treasuries of Republican candidates for seats in dozens of state legislatures.

But among the approximately 6,000 seats contested in 43 state legislatures this year, the Republicans' net gain was only about 200 seats - considerably fewer than the 275 to 300 seats they picked up in 1978, when they spent $2 million on a similar effort.

Because the Democrats won some seats that had been vacant or held by legislators affiliated with minor parties, their losses were limited to approximately 175 seats, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Finally, the Democratic - dominated redistricting of legislative seats in the early 1970s made many of those districts virtually impregnable to Republican attack - which explains why reapportionment is so important to so many politicians.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Nov. 21, the 326th day of 1980. There are 40 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Nov. 21, 1877, Thomas Edison announced the invention of a talking machine and dubbed it a "phonograph."

On this date:
In 1806, Napoleon Bonaparte issued the Berlin decrees, declaring a blockade of the British Isles.

In 1938, Nazi troops took over the western border areas of Czechoslovakia.

In 1956, the United Nations General Assembly censured the Soviet Union for its invasion of Hungary.

In 1963, the Roman Catholic Vatican Council authorized the use of the vernacular instead of Latin in the sacraments.

Ten years ago, U.S. planes carried out heavy raids against North Vietnam in retaliation for attacks on American reconnaissance planes.

Five years ago, Vietnamese governments in Hanoi and Saigon agreed on a speedy merger as the key to unification of the country under communist rule.

One year ago, thousands of Moslems stormed the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan. One Marine guard was killed in the ensuing riot.

Today's birthdays: Baseball great Stan Musial is 60 years old. Actress Vivian Blaine is 59.

Thought for today: The history of liberty is the history of the limitations on the power of government - President Woodrow Wilson (1856-1924).

Send money to church

By Paul Harvey

You who do not go to church, please send money.

Pastors plead with you to show up in person to save your soul; that's their business.

I'm urging you to send money if only to save your skin.

As is, you are locked behind bolted doors and shuttered windows, and with automatic night lights you try to hold back the dark. While out there in the streets people are being killed, raped, beaten, robbed at a rate that's increasing seven times faster than our population is increasing.

You pay higher insurance premiums every day to try to shelter your wife, your life, your possessions, your property, your car...

I ask for an investment at least equal to your car insurance.

The best cure for drugs and the best preventive for crime that any amount of money can buy is the discipline imposed by religion.

Why am I coming to you?
Because inside that church too many two-dollar bettors are reaping more than they're sowing.

So please, if you can't or won't go - send help!

Inflation is escalating the costs of running a church, too. The church down the street from you is hurting, and may be dying.

There is no church which could not give more young people more things better to do than mischief - except that many churches can't keep up with heat and light bills.

There's never been a time you've walked down that street and not been silently thankful that the church is there.

You don't know what it looks like inside, but nonetheless - amidst so many dirty movies, taverns and porno shops - the church makes your community look good.

Your daily paper is all smeared with blood, corruption and busted Commandments.

Cops are handcuffed, schoolteachers can't paddle and parents won't.

The Church - alone now - seeks to catch the criminal before the crime.

I'm asking you for money because somebody has to and it's unbecoming for church pastors to.

The high and mighty televisionary clergy has no compunction about pleading for money with all sorts of gimmickry - and thus such resources get sent elsewhere, to the neglect of the neighborhood.

You don't have to be a believer to be an understander.

You have a stake in the strength or weakness of your corner church as surely as you have a stake in keeping traffic lights lit.

You are also entitled to criticize the people inside that church who pray for and get a lot more blessings than they pay for.

We've a lot of people singing "God Bless America" without giving Him any good reason why He should.

I've heard you say that some of the best people don't even go to church. Prove it. Thank you.

Cut your own taxes

Investors planning pays tax dividends

By Ray DeCrane

Investors have a real opportunity to do a juggling act at year end. They have ways of shifting income from one year to the next.

If they already have realized gains (which would increase their tax) they have the opportunity to raise still more capital without paying any tax. Just sell off enough losers in your portfolio to wipe out the gains already taken.

If it is worthwhile for regular taxpayers to get an "early bird view" of their income tax situation before the end of the year, it is doubly advisable for investors. They have many opportunities to lower their tax.

To complete this exercise properly, a few basic rules must be understood. Short-term transactions (the result of a sale within a year of the purchase) produce gains that are fully taxable and losses that are fully deductible (but not more than $3,000 of an offset against ordinary income in one year).

If you sell something more than a year after the purchase, it is a long-term transaction. If it resulted in a gain, only 40 percent of the gain is taxable. If it created a loss, 50 percent of the loss is deductible.

What is your stock-market picture so far this year? If you have short-term gains, you know they are 100 percent taxable. Look for an equivalent loss that could cancel out that gain. If you have a short-term loss, it will be fully deductible, although you cannot apply more than $3,000 in losses against other income in any one year.

So, if you have no more than $3,000 in short-term losses, you might want to stand pat. You have an extra $3,000 in deductions for this year. Or, if you have a winner in your portfolio, you might want to consider the sale of enough of it to offset the loss. That way you have raised investment dollars for another opportunity at no tax consequence.

A net long-term gain might be the best possible position to be in. You can pocket 60 percent of the gain tax-free. The tax will be paid only on the remaining 40 percent.

A long-term loss position is the worst one to be in. Only half of your losses may be applied against other income, and this is only up to the yearly limit of $3,000. Look at it this way: Your long-term losses are worth only 50 cents on the dollar.

A possible remedy: Look around for the opportunity of taking a gain against that loss. The gain could be either long-term or short-term. First there is a dollar-for-dollar offsetting before the special rules on long-term and short-term gains and losses apply.

If you are a heavy loser and have no opportunity to take offsetting gains, there is still a measure of relief for you. Those losses beyond the $3,000 allowable for this year can be carried forward to future years until they are used up.

Cooler weather frees boy from box

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Cooler weather has temporarily freed Raul Espino Jr. from his plexiglass box in his classroom at Egly Elementary School.

The 7-year-old first grader has been confined to a wheelchair since a car accident six years ago left him paralyzed and unable to control his body temperature. His brain was not damaged and he is considered a bright student.

When school began with temperatures in the 90s this fall, Raul had to stay in an air-conditioned box built by school officials to accommodate his special needs.

But afternoon highs have only reached the 50s recently, so Raul has a temporary respite from the box, which he says sometimes makes it difficult to hear his teacher.

His parents, Ana and Raul Espino Sr., complained the enclosure isolated him from the class and asked the school district to air-condition his entire room. They have now taken the fight to the Texas Education Agency.

High temperatures have been in the 50s lately so Raul no longer needs to stay in the box.

When the Brownsville Independent School District decided last year to transfer him from a special education campus to Egly Elementary School, officials told his parents they would take care of Raul's special requirements.

But Mrs. Espino said administrators never told her about the glass box until Raul showed up for class. School officials have refused to air-condition the entire room. They say none of Brownsville's elementary classrooms are air-conditioned and parents of other children might object to the special treatment.

She met with school district officials and her son's principal in October.

"They said they had made their decision and couldn't do anything else for him," she said.

"That's when I thought to myself I'd better get myself some legal help," the apartment manager said.

She went to Jerry Garcia of Texas Rural Legal Aid Inc., in Harlingen. He will represent the family before a hearing of the state education agency. No date has been set for the case.

Garcia says a federal law requires the district to educate Raul in the "least restrictive" environment.

"The cost factor is not considered under the law. They didn't go far enough to do what's appropriate under the law," the lawyer said. "Raul should not be required to live in a glass box while in school."

Mrs. Espino says she is determined to win her fight. "I hope we can settle this by the time it gets warm again, like in April," she said.

Con artist gains money, sympathy from 'old pals'

EL PASO (AP) — When a man claiming to be a high school chum called and said he desperately needed $25 for rent, a few members of the class of '55 rushed right downtown with the money.

It was only after they returned home and tried to look up the old buddy in El Paso High School annuals that they realized they had been skunked by a clever con man.

"He collected at least $1,000 before we caught him," said Police Detective Henry Castillo.

"Some of his victims would go downtown and bring the money to him. He would say he lived in Juarez (Mexico) and if he didn't get the money today, he and his family would be evicted."

"He was good. He was real good."

The defendant, Hector Nunez, was given a magistrate's warning before Justice of the Peace Robert Kessel, who ordered him held in lieu of $800 bond pending formal arraignment on a charge of theft by deception.

Cancer rate up among residents

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cancer cases are increasing nearly twice as fast as the population in Texas and state health department officials say children possibly face the same dangers at school as refinery workers on the job.

David Cochran, chief of environmental health, disclosed Thursday that nearly half of the construction samples taken recently from 184 Texas schools showed the presence of cancer-causing asbestos.

Cochran said health officials have tried for years to control asbestos in the work place, and he added, "Recently the focus on asbestos exposure has moved to the schoolhouse."

Dr. George Anderson Jr., consultant for occupational medicine, said the state's population has increased 18 percent over the past 10 years but cancer deaths have increased 32 percent. Over the next decade, he said, cancer deaths in Texas will increase an additional 21 percent.

Some 18 industrial chemicals or processes have been identified with increased carcinogenic risk in workers, most of which are found in Texas industrial settings, particularly in counties where petroleum refining is carried out, said Anderson.

The health officials addressed an advisory committee on cancer control.

Cochran said the health department is cooperating with the Texas Education Agency in investigating the use of asbestos in Texas schools.

He said 104 schools submitted 623 samples to the health department, and 595 analyses have been completed, with 291 showing the presence of asbestos. Many new schools were built in the 1950s, he said, and asbestos was widely used in walls and ceilings because it retards fire and has good insulating acoustical qualities.

"If it (asbestos) is being released into the atmosphere, something should be done very quickly. If it is in board, however, perhaps the anxiety is not as high," Cochran said.

In some schools, he said, a fresh coat of paint might provide proper safeguards.

Cochran said the TEA would start a "more vigorous program" after regulations of the federal Environmental Protection Agency become effective Feb. 1.

T.R. Jones, director of school plant services for the TEA, said federal law requires schools to examine their facilities for "friable" material, or material that can be crushed by hand. If they locate such material, three samples must be submitted for laboratory analysis.

Jones said a federal formula is used to determine whether the material is safe.

The government could withhold federal funds if schools should refuse to follow instructions to encase or remove the material, but Jones said, "I'm sure the school districts will want to do what is best for the kids."

In removing asbestos, Cochran said, "consideration must be given to the effect on the workmen." Also, he indicated, there could be problems finding places to dispose of the old asbestos.

Jones said the two state agencies should have a state plan for removing asbestos from schools ready by Dec. 15.

Anderson said hearings by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration revealed that "cancer is a serious problem among workers and that carcinogens in the work place must be controlled."

"We must never forget that in dealing with the occupational environment, we are in an arena shared by many players each with specific interests often diametrically opposed or at least not equally shared nor understood," he said.

"Occupational medicine in establishing preventive programs must demonstrate health gain for the employee to get individual support and cost effectiveness to the employer," he said.

Suspect awaits charges in two knife murders

KERMIT, Texas (AP) — Panic and a desperate effort to get away may have prompted a man to stab two people to death and seriously wound another woman, an investigator said.

A 19-year-old man has been arrested in connection with the weekend attack in this West Texas town and could face two counts of capital murder and one count of attempted capital murder.

"We think the guy panicked and started cutting people just to get away when he realized how many people were in the house," said Odessa Detective Houston Seabolt, who assisted in the investigation.

Police said the charges would specify capital murder, an offense that could carry the death penalty on conviction, because the killings allegedly occurred during a burglary, officers said.

Police said the suspect, who was arrested Wednesday in Odessa for outstanding traffic warrants, lived near the home where the attack occurred and once had worked for the son of one of the victims.

Jeannie Marie Pardue, 51, and her daughter, Lee Ann Wallace, 15, were slain Saturday as they slept at the home of Mrs. Pardue's son, Carey Gene Wallace.

Wallace's wife, Molly Ann, about 22, was seriously wounded in the 4:30 a.m. attack. She remained hospitalized in stable condition Thursday.

A 16-year-old girl cowered in a back bedroom during the attack after her dying friend, Lee Ann, staggered to the door and told her to keep quiet. Police have refused to identify the girl.

Police revealed that the Wallaces' two children, as well as Mrs. Pardue's 10-year-old son, also were in the house. The boy saw the intruder running through the living room, officers said.

Autopsy reports said the women were stabbed with a large hunting knife or butcher knife.

Wallace reportedly was at work in an oil field when the slayings took place. Mrs. Pardue and her daughter were spending the night at the home of Mrs. Wallace reported having fainting spells, police reports indicated.

Sanctions follow alleged hazing

FORT WORTH (AP) — "Conduct unbecoming a gentleman" and hazing at a country beer bust have led to the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity to impose sanctions on its Texas Christian University chapter.

The national office in Evanston, Ill., suspended the chapter's charter and appointed a seven-man alumni commission to supervise the TCU local, said David Arendt, SAE's director of chapter development.

In the hazing incident, pledges allegedly partially undressed and were smeared with an axle grease-like substance at a beer party on Oct. 2. Arendt declined to discuss details.

The TCU chapter admitted the incident to the university's Interfraternity Council, which was waiting for the fraternity to finish its investigation before taking any action.

Arendt said said an alumnus and two members will face a fraternity tribunal because of their alleged involvement in the hazing.

"No one was injured," Arendt said, "but these are activities that we definitely do not approve of."

He said the national office also found isolated problems where some members exhibited "conduct unbecoming a gentleman."

"These are not chapter-type things, but they still reflected on the reputation of the fraternity," he said. "The chapter was having problems dealing with these individuals."

The local chapter also has been asked to evict eight non-fraternity members from its house, he said.

The alumni commission will supervise all chapter activities, and must approve all new pledges, Arendt said. The national office will monitor the fraternity's conduct and academic performance during the next semester, he added.

If there is no improvement, the chapter could be shut down when the national conference meets in June. But Arendt said chapter members appear willing to work with the national office and have taken some positive steps.

Southern Cal-UCLA still bitter rivals despite no bowl prospects

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

With no Rose Bowl in the offing, those two West Coast powerhouses — Southern Cal and UCLA — can get down on the mat at the Los Angeles Coliseum Saturday and gouge away at each other to their hearts' content.

The only pressure stems from their traditionally bitter rivalry.

Southern Cal will be coming off a staggering loss to Washington, which broke its 28-game unbeaten skid, and will be looking ahead to a Dec. 6 date with Notre Dame, always a bone-rattler. On the other hand, it's a "home" date for UCLA, which must be smarting under four losses in a row, seven in the last 10 years, to their cross-town adversaries.

That adds up to a UCLA victory despite the 2½-point spread favoring USC. The team that shut out Ohio State should be able to harness Marcus Allen & Co.

Similar impetus should drive Michigan in the Big Ten matchup with Ohio State, but the Rose Bowl is at stake in this one and the Buckeyes, at home, have a faculty for winning the big ones.

This is the weekend of hoary rivalries, including the hallowed Yale-Harvard match. Throw away the form chart.

Last week: 35-11. 761. Season: 398-137, 744. Here's the next-to-last fling (favorite's point spread in parenthesis):

UCLA 20, Southern Cal (2½) 14; Kevin Nelson, freshman backup for Freeman McNeil, could well be the hero.

Ohio St. (4½) 10, Michigan 7; QB Art Schlichter will have to show his mettle against a defense unscored on in 14 straight quarters.

Yale (1) 14, Harvard 7: A great day for tail-gaters in the Harvard Yard.

Nebraska (8) 34, Oklahoma 28: Jarvis Redwine and J.C. Watts should keep the scoreboard spinning.

Stanford (12½) 19, California 15: In Northern California, this is "The Game," needing no further embellishment.

West Virginia (4) 30, Syracuse 23: The West Virginia hills will resound with the sound of thudding bodies.

Texas 15, Baylor (3) 10: A letdown for the Cotton Bowl-bound Bears, an extra effort for the proud Longhorns.

Clemson 17, South Carolina (6) 14: Danny Ford's Tigers take some of the shine off George Rogers' Heisman hopes.

Washington (11) 27, Washington St. 7: The Huskies can play it loose now that they're set for the Rose Bowl.

Louisiana St. (1) 14, Tulane 12: The Bayou Bengals were thinking "green" when they let Mississippi State score 55 points last week.

Brigham Young 43, Utah 18: There's only one way to travel, says BYU, and that's by air — more than 400 yards a game.

Purdue (8) 25, Indiana 14: Mark Herrmann becomes the first player in history to pass for more than 9,000 yards in his career.

Notre Dame (34) 38, Air Force 14: With USC ahead, the Irish won't strain too many muscles.

The others:

Pampa opens cage season tonight against Lawton

The 1980-81 Pampa High basketball squad is eagerly awaiting tonight's season opener with Lawton MacArthur (Okla.). So is head coach Garland Nichols.

"We've had some real good practices and we're ready to play," Harvester coach Garland Nichols said. "We're ready to get after some people I know I'm ready."

Nichols is expected to start off with 6-5 senior Damon Fleming at the post position, 6-1 junior Terry Faggins and 6-2 junior Charles Nelson at forwards, 6-0 sophomore Mike Nelson and 5-11 senior Kirt Crouch at guards. Mike Nelson is the only returning starter off last season's district championship club.

That's one better than Lawton, whose lone returning starter, Kevin Lambert, is still playing football.

"It remains to be seen just good we'll be this year," said Lawton coach Hartwell Menefree. "We should have some good floor speed and quickness."

Lawton's tallest starter is 6-3 junior Marvin Williams, but Menefree isn't complaining.

"We've got a short team every year, but this is the tallest we've been in five years," he added.

Rounding out Lawton's starting five is Leon Miller, 6-1 senior, and Roderick Jackson, 6-0 junior, at forwards; Anthony Rice, 5-5 senior, and Broderick Jackson, 5-10 junior, at guards.

MacArthur posted a 7-15 record last season, losing to Pampa, 57-43, in the only meeting between the two clubs in the Lawton Invitational Tournament.

"Lawton is an unknown quantity, but I understand they've won some scrimmages this year," Nichols said. "I do know that they're quick and well-coached."

Nichols worked the Harvesters on the fullcourt press Wednesday and then studied Lawton's offense Thursday.

"I'm making sure we've got everything down pat," Nichols said. "We want to get the season off to a good start."

Tipoff time for the varsity game is 7:30 p.m. in Harvester Fieldhouse. Pampa's junior varsity meets Shamrock varsity at 6 p.m.

Pampa gymnasts win honors

Pampa youngsters turned in outstanding performances during the West Texas Gymnastics Meet held last weekend in Pampa.

There were 136 girls entered in the all-day event.

How they placed in the different age groups and classifications are as follows:

Class 4
12-14: Kim Kaddatz, seventh, all-around; sixth, vault; sixth, bars; sixth, floor exercise; Deann Ingram, third, vault; eighth, bars.

9-11: Serina Clinkingbeard, fourth, all-around; first, vault; Tracy Medley, sixth, vault; Crystal Mills, third, vault.

7-8: Crystal West, third, all-around; third, vault; sixth, bars; third, beam; second, floor exercises.

Class 3
12-14: Joanna Barbaree, third, floor exercises; Kristi Hughes, first, vault, first, bars; first, floor exercises; first, all-around.

Astros board members want McMullen removed

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Limited partners in the ownership of the Houston Astros, after three weeks of silent planning, have delivered the opening blow in the battle for control of the Astros by filing a suit to remove John McMullen as general partner.

Attorney Joe Jamail, representing the irate limited partners, presented McMullen with papers Thursday dissolving the general partnership agreement and asked the New Jersey shipbuilder to resign as general partner.

McMullen, who purchased the National League franchise last year for $19 million, refused to resign as general partner and J. mail quickly filed a federal court suit charging McMullen with mismanaging the assets of the limited partners.

"The partnership is officially over, that's final," Jamail said. "McMullen has exercised an option to remain as general partner under reorganization. I asked him to quietly resign and he refused so we are going to court to have him removed."

Under terms of the partnership arrangement filed last year in Delaware, the limited partners could dissolve the partnership if 60 per cent of the interest in the club favored a reorganization.

Jamail said he represents limited partners whose interests totals more than the required 60 per cent.

McMullen, a Montclair, N.J., shipbuilder and former part owner of the New York Yankees, controls 34 per cent interest in the Astros.

Jamail said court action was necessary, however, to remove McMullen and reorganize under a new general partner.

A hearing on the suit was scheduled Monday before U.S. District Judge Carl Bue.

McMullen, who met late into the night with several limited partners in his office, declined to comment on Thursday's actions on advice of his attorneys.

The suit charged that McMullen had breached his obligations to the limited partners and the breach was so serious that it "renders him unworthy to continue in the position of general partner."

Morale of the Astros players has been shattered by McMullen's mismanagement, the suit said.

"The defendant's behavior greatly threatens, and continues to threaten, the stability and success of that organization," the limited partners said in the suit.

The limited partners' dissatisfaction with McMullen surfaced Oct. 27 when he abruptly fired popular President and General Manager Tal Smith, who was a major force in rebuilding the Astros into a World Series contender.

Smith further irked the limited partners by replacing Smith with Al Rosen, who had less than three years of experience as a baseball executive.

Another sore point was McMullen's purchase of a $2.5 million five-seat airplane for the Astros without assessing the limited partners of his plans.

A face-to-face confrontation was scheduled between McMullen and the limited partners Thursday but word of the dissolution leaked out in the Houston Chronicle shortly before noon.

McMullen then confirmed he had received dissolution papers from the limited partners and the full meeting never came about.

The suit also asked that

McMullen be prohibited from selling or transferring any of the stock in the Astros until the court appoints a receiver to handle the rearrangement of the organization.

Smith is still keeping a close eye on the Astros situation but declined direct comment.

"My position has to be that that is an ownership question," Smith said. "It is between McMullen and the limited partners. And I'm not a partner. That's all I care to say publicly."

Rosen also declined comment.

Corrales remains with Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Former Texas Rangers manager Pat Corrales will stay with the American League club to develop a Latin American scouting system, officials announced Thursday.

Executive Vice President Eddie Robinson said Darrell Johnson, 53, former manager of the Boston Red Sox, will coach third base for new Rangers manager Don Zimmer, who was fired as Red Sox manager shortly before the end of the 1980 season.

Other newcomers to the Ranger coaching staff are Tommy Helms, former Red Sox infielder, and Wayne Terwilliger, longtime manager in the Rangers' minor league system.

Robinson said Corrales will begin the scouting system in Puerto Rico, "then expand to Venezuela, Mexico and the Dominican Republic."

"Corrales speaks Spanish fluently and is well known in those countries," he added.

For Harvesters

Grid future looks promising

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

In the beginning, he looked out and saw a team that would win three of four games before entering the formidable part of the non-district schedule.

The 3-1 record came true, but the semantics were all wrong for Pampa High football coach Larry Gilbert.

The Harvesters won a game they hadn't figured on (17-10 over Lawton High), but lost one they had counted on winning (21-20 to Borger).

"It really hurt to lose to Borger," Gilbert said. "We can look back and see where we shouldn't have lost it. That was also the game we lost Leroy Kuhn to injuries."

Kuhn, the starting fullback and cornerback, missed the next three games, including the consecutive losses to Altus, Okla. and Lubbock Monterey.

"Leroy was our best left cornerback and Altus and Monterey really took advantage of his absence," Gilbert added.

Then came the loss of two-way lineman Billy Ward and linebacker John Shilling to injuries.

Losing Ward was really a blow to our offensive and defensive line because he was the only player we had or any real physical size," Gilbert said. "Besides that he was a great leader."

The Harvesters appeared well on the way to putting the pieces back together with a district-opening win over Caprock, 21-0, but then came three straight losses to Tascosa, 27-7; Palo Duro, 28-6, and Amarillo High, 14-10.

"We had some discipline problems that came at an inopportune time," Gilbert said. "It hurt our season to a certain extent, but we still played well against Tascosa and Amarillo High. That Palo Duro loss is still a mystery to me. I guess maybe we were looking ahead to the Sandies and just forgot about Palo Duro."

Pampa's annual year-end clash with AHS may have been the best played game of the season between District 3-5A teams.

"It was a very exciting game from a spectator's point of view," Gilbert said. "There was a little bit of everything, but those close games sure make coaches uneasy."

Gilbert couldn't help but be disappointed with Pampa's 4-6 record in his first year as a head coach, but he also believes in counting the moral victories.

"I felt like we have established some things in our program," Gilbert added. "Our discipline should be better and our seniors showed how unified they were, especially against Amarillo High. The Harvesters football future looks bright. Our freshman team was just one game away from winning district and one of our eighth-grade teams was unbeaten."

Gilbert, however, does face a rebuilding year. Only one starter, Cavin Coleman, tight end and field goal kicker, returns on offense. The entire backfield of quarterback Sam Edwards, Kuhn and running backs Bobby Dorsey and Arthur Lee Williams travel the graduation route.

"We've lost heavily, especially in the skilled positions," Gilbert said. "There's going to be a lot of wide-open competition."

Gilbert looks for running back John Kadingo and quarterback Derrick Bigham, both reserves this season, to provide leadership ability.

"John played a lot for us this season and I'll be looking for immediate help from him next season," Gilbert said.

"Derrick came in and did a good job on defense and I'll be looking for him to do the same thing at quarterback. One of our big question marks is finding somebody to fill in behind him."

Gilbert said JV players Dennis Daugherty and David Owens and frosh signal-callers Robert Knight and Devin Cross will all get a crack at the quarterbacking position.

Finding a replacement for glue-fingered receiver Steve McDougall will be a major task. McDougall led the district in receptions the past three years.

"I don't think we can ever replace a Steve McDougall, but guys like Devin Cash and Bryan Welborn, among others, should help out," Gilbert said.

Returning on defense are noseguard Harold Landers, tackle Joe Ryzman, end James Borchardt and Bigham at strong safety. Ryzman and Bigham were also parttime starters.

"We've got a fair nucleus defensively," Gilbert said, "but we've still got a lot of rebuilding to do."

There is one category that Gilbert can't kick about.

"Our kicking game is going to be in fine shape, in fact we'll be able to specialize in it," he pointed out. "We've got Coleman as our long-range field goal kicker and Robert McCoy for inside the 20. Coleman will again kick off and McCoy will kick our extra points. I'm not sure yet about our punting since we've lost Robbie Leffel, but Coleman is an adequate punter. Cody Allison from the JV team and Cross from the freshman team are both real good punters."

Coleman, who was Pampa's leading scorer with 34 points, booted four field goals and 10 PATS.

Most of the building blocks for the 1981 squad will come from this season's Junior Varsity crop.

Noseguard Bill Carter, tackle Ted Cain, running back Mark Kotara, fullback Jeff Poole, linebackers Kelly Leach, Wade Barker, Ricky Beard, defensive ends Brad Voyles, Cliff Baker, offensive linemen Bryan Bowen and Todd Mitchell are considered by Gilbert to be the top prospects.

"If these kids dedicate themselves in the off-season and really strive to improve, we're going to surprise some people next year," Gilbert added.

Chargers win in overtime

MIAMI (AP) — San Diego kicker Rolf Benirschke, whose confidence hit rock bottom last weekend, said his concentration was so intense against the Miami Dolphins that he couldn't see potential disaster staring him in the face.

"Routine? No kick is routine after the week I had," Benirschke said Thursday night after booting a 28-yard field goal with 7:46 remaining in overtime to lift the Chargers to a 27-24 National Football League victory.

Benirschke, who missed on three field goals tries and had another blocked in addition to missing an extra point in San Diego's 20-7 triumph over Kansas City last Sunday, said he was so determined to make good on the game-winning field goal attempt that he didn't see the snap from center bounce before it reached holder Mike Fuller.

"I was so tuned in and so confident that Mike would give me a good hold that I didn't know the ball bounced until we got in the lockerroom," the fourth-year placekicker from California-Davis said.

Linebacker Woodrow Lowe's interception of a David Woodley pass set up the winning kick. Lowe picked the aerial off at the Miami 40-yard line and rambled down the right sideline to the Dolphins 12.

Three running plays netted two yards and Benirschke, who had kicked a 37-yard field goal in the second quarter, came on in the season's sixth overtime game.

Woodley said his primary receivers — wide receivers Nat Moore and Jimmy Cefalo — were covered and that he spotted running back Tony Nathan open near the sideline. "He was open. I just threw the ball behind him," he said.

"I lost sight of him (Lowe) when I went outside," said Nathan. "I saw Woodley throw the ball, and didn't see him (Lowe) until the last moment. I'm not sure if I was open."

"We were in no special defense. But Lowe sure made it look like we were rolling to that side just like we had drawn it up. It was a helluva play," said Chargers Coach Don Coryell.

The victory moved the Chargers, 8-4, to within a half game of American Conference West leader Oakland, who will carry an 8-3 record to Philadelphia Sunday. The Dolphins dropped to 6-6 and fell out of a third place tie with Baltimore in the AFC East.

Delvin Williams' desperation dive for a touchdown on a fourth-and-one play from the Chargers 1-yard-line with 1:21 remaining in regulation forced the overtime period as the Dolphins rallied from a 24-17 deficit.

The Dolphins, who bounced back from costly mistakes all night long, had been stopped on downs at the San Diego 1-yard-line on their previous possession.

"For everybody to work so hard and then lose it on one play is tough on a team," Woodley said. "We kept fighting back, forced it into overtime. Then it seemed like we really had a chance and in a matter of three or four seconds it's over."

Miami Coach Don Shula called the defeat, "one of the toughest losses we've had around here for a long, long time. You have to feel bad for the players who battled out there tonight."

San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts completed 25 of 41 passes for 230 yards to hike his season total to 3,530. He had scoring tosses of 4 yards to running back Clarence Williams and 7 and 6 yards, respectively, to wide receivers Charlie Joiner and John Jefferson.

But the Dolphins' young secondary, consisting of one second-year starter and three first-year starters, refused to give up big gainers to Fouts, who increased his touchdown pass production to 26.

"Obviously Miami had a game plan to take away our deep stuff. It became a battle of discipline then," said Fouts. "We had to take short stuff, be satisfied with it and let Miami get frustrated giving up 9- and 10-yarders."

Woodley, starting for the sixth straight game since veteran Bob Griese went down with a shoulder injury, hit 22 of 34 passes for 251 yards. He tossed a touchdown pass of 7 yards to Nathan to complete a drive keyed by a 61-yard pass play from Woodley to Nathan.

Terry Robiskie's 6-yard scoring run gave Miami an early 7-0 lead, but the Chargers stormed back with a 11-play, 73-yard drive capped by Fouts' scoring pass to Clarence Williams. Benirschke's 37-yard field goal made it 10-7.

The teams exchanged touchdowns — Woodley's pass to Nathan and Fouts' flip to Joiner — before Miami's Uwe von Schamann kicked a 48-yard field goal three seconds before halftime to tie the game 17-17.

San Diego running back Chuck Muncie, who had been listed as questionable with a knee sprain, came off the bench in the second half and went on to gain 77 yards in 10 carries. His 53-yard run in the second period led to Fouts' scoring pass to Joiner.

It was the second overtime victory of the year for the Chargers, who beat Oakland 30-24 in the second game of the season. They have won three of five overtime games overall, while Miami has lost all three overtime games it has played in regular-season play.

The game was played before a crowd of 63,013 — most this season for a Dolphins home game — in the Orange Bowl.

Struggle goes on

Merchants hire experts to help revitalize town

By John Halvorsen
Associated Press Writer

BIDDEFORD, Maine (AP) — More than two years ago, merchants in this small industrial city hired a Boston consulting firm to draw up an "action plan" for the revitalization of the downtown area.

The consultants issued a detailed report which envisioned the downtown evolving into "a vibrant, people-oriented city center." They created a slogan intended to symbolize the city's new pride in itself — "Look Up, Biddeford," a reference to the architectural craftsmanship on the upper stories of old downtown buildings.

Today, businessmen and city officials are still struggling to get the renaissance under way. The city's bid for federal funds to help finance the revitalization has run into one snag after another. A major department store, a fixture on Main Street for more than 40 years, closed its doors last year and there are 10 vacant commercial spaces in one two-block area. The City Council recently voted to tear out the benches in a mini-park which had become a focus for vandalism and was popularly known as "pot park."

Something else is missing, too, according to some residents — the public spirit that has helped change the face of other small cities such as Portland, Bath and Portsmouth, N.H.

There's still "the old negative — that you can't do anything about downtown Biddeford so let's forget it," says Roger B. Johnson, the city's economic development director.

"The attitude locally seems to be a real can't-win attitude," remarks Constantine Karyonides, who runs an advertising agency and once served as chairman of a downtown task force. "I've been accused of having a blind enthusiasm," he adds, "and my only complaint about that is I wish more people had it."

Biddeford is the epitome of the old New England mill town. At the turn of the century, the mills employed 7,000. The local economy is far more diversified now, but the two surviving mills still have more than 1,000 workers.

Neighboring Saco, with its fine colonial homes, was where the mill owners lived. Biddeford, with its tenements, was, and to a large degree still is, the home of the French-Canadian workers. At least 60 percent of the city's current population of 20,000 is of French heritage.

The city's problems — the physical deterioration of its core, the growth of suburban malls which have drawn shoppers away — are hardly unique. But many say the city has been slow to address them.

The city has permitted too much scattered development, Karyonides says. Instead of allowing a McDonald's to be located at an outlying shopping center, for example, city officials should have stood on their heads to locate McDonald's in the downtown area.

The red-brick mills — 31 buildings in all — still dominate downtown physically.

Anderson - Notter - Feingold Inc., the Boston architects and preservation planners hired by the city as consultants, released their report in August 1978. Among other things, they proposed creation of a city square "public green," a parking deck, realignment of downtown streets and street and sidewalk improvements. The report called for more attractive storefront signs and facades and other amenities to improve the "pedestrian environment."

To finance the plan, the city last year won preliminary approval for a $750,000 Urban Development Action Grant, after business interests pledged $2.2 million to the effort. But problems ensued, and a major blow came this April when the biggest single private investor, the York County Savings Bank, withdrew its plan for a new branch downtown.

It's not as though nothing has been done to improve downtown in recent years. A handsome post office building was renovated for use as a district courthouse. Housing projects have been built for the elderly, and a shuttle bus, serving shoppers downtown as well as in Saco and Old Orchard, is in its third year. Robert G. Dodge, the city's former community development director, has things like these in mind when he says Biddeford may be "still parochial, still a conservative community. But it's also progressive in many ways, or trying to be progressive."

Like Dodge, who lived in Philadelphia and Washington and came back with a "different perspective," Karvonides returned to Biddeford after living in New York. Both are cautiously optimistic about their city.

Frustrated by the slow progress, Karvonides says "the thing that really hurts is that it has a lot of potential and could be a beautiful community."

"I think the revitalization will eventually happen," he says. "I don't think there will be any miracles, unfortunately."

America renovates communications weaponry

By Peter Arnett
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — America is renovating its communications weaponry in an intensifying competition for the ears of the world.

Exotic tongues like Uzbek and Azeri, spoken by Islamic nationalists in the Soviet Union, are being added to the language arsenal of the Voice of America that daily beams news and policy views around the globe.

More powerful transmitters are joining the 100 already on station at home and abroad to reach more of the estimated worldwide audience of 400 million shortwave radio listeners.

"The Voice of America should be heard in every square inch of the earth," says John R. Reinhardt, director of the U.S. International Communications Agency. USICA is "the body charged with the nation's public diplomacy effort." In addition to broadcasting, the effort includes educational and cultural exchanges.

But even as the Voice of America is strengthened in its competition with the 122 national radios that crowd the airwaves, there are worries that the other arms of America's public diplomacy are withering.

"We are a poor fourth in the world today after the French, the West Germans and the Soviets," says Alice Ichman, associate director of the USICA for educational and cultural affairs. "Thirty-five presidents and prime ministers currently in office came to America at some time in their careers on our exchange programs. But because of funding problems we are in danger of losing contact with a whole generation of new leaders."

The Voice of America is benefiting from increased congressional interest in spreading the U.S. message abroad. Nearly a quarter of the half-billion-dollar budget for USICA is spent on broadcasting, and money has been appropriated for new equipment.

"We need it badly," says director Mary Bitterman, whose staff works in a building at the foot of Capitol Hill on equipment that was installed in the early 1950s. "I was very troubled to find how antiquated it was."

Radio Moscow is VOA's chief competitor, broadcasting around 2,000 hours each week in 85 languages. VOA broadcasts 885 hours in 39 languages. Other, friendlier competitors are the British Broadcasting Corporation and West Germany's Deutsche Welle.

VOA says it reaches about 80 million regular listeners around the globe, and it's particularly pleased with its 16 hours of Chinese and English language broadcasts to China. "A recent delegate here told us our audience is in the millions," Mrs. Bitterman says. "You don't call on Chinese officials between 8 and 8:30. That's when they listen to the Voice of America." Whether its program philosophy is on the right tack, however, has been a matter of continuing debate.

There are those who believe we're a Goebbels-like propaganda operation," says Mrs. Bitterman. "Others feel we should talk less about America's own difficulties. They point out that the Soviet Union does not share its problems with an international audience."

Mrs. Bitterman, 36, a former manager of public television station KHET in Honolulu, says credibility is of major importance to VOA "and we have greater credibility abroad if we're honest about our domestic matters."

VOA uses foreign and American news services and 19 domestic and foreign bureaus to supply the news and analysis that make up 65 percent of its program.

VOA buttressed its credibility, says Alan Baker, chief of the Near East and South Asia Division, "by our candid reporting of the Watergate affair. After hearing us report on it for months, our listeners realized we were honestly reporting the dismantling of our government."

A congressional charter for VOA in 1976 further aimed at strengthening VOA's credibility. It decreed that VOA would serve as a "consistently reliable and authoritative source of news," and "not any single segment of American society," and present the policies of the United States "clearly and effectively."

In addition to the news and a bit of Americana, VOA also serves up news analyses and commentaries that reflect the views of the U.S. government. These are "almost like a commercial break for the government, suitably labeled," says News Director Bernard Kammensky. News Editor John Schultz puts it this way: "Our news reports are the engine, the commentaries the freight we have to carry."

In commentaries directed at Southeast Asia, the Voice seeks to reassure allies of continued U.S. interest. "Some may have thought that the American departure from Vietnam portended a larger United States departure from Asia, and abandonment of America's long-standing role as a Pacific power. Nothing could be further from the truth. The United States today... remains strongly committed to policies aimed at protecting the security and enhancing the economic future of this key part of the world."

Not everyone on the staff raves about the commentaries. Ronald J. Dunlavey, one of VOA's team of news analysis and commentary writers, says they tend to be "heavy-handed and flat-footed" because "it sends a shudder through the bureaucracy to be casual. We're tied down by policy guidelines."

But policy surveillance can be more intrusive.

An analysis Dunlavey wrote on the Bicentennial celebration deplored commercialization of the event. "The piece was killed by the policy office uptown with the comment that it was one of the worst examples of the VOA running down America," he says.

Director Bitterman says VOA doesn't close its ears to critics. "There used to be much more oversight, particularly by ambassadors. We aren't opposed to hearing from ambassadors today, but neither they nor anyone else can tell us what to broadcast."

Suggestions nevertheless abound.

Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., complained earlier this year that the voices of Moscow and Peking were louder in the Middle East than America's, and said, "this is a war of words we can't afford to lose."

WHO SHOT J.R.? Larry Hagman hasn't even hinted, but viewers will learn who perpetrated the dastardly deed in TV's biggest mystery when the DALLAS feature is shown tonight on CBS television.

The secret will air - tonight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Was it Sue Ellen, threatened with confinement in a sanitarium? Was it Cliff Barnes, cut out of a big oil deal? Was it Kristin Shepard, faced with a prostitution bust?

Hang on to your cowboy hat, America — tonight's the night we finally find out who shot J.R.

And just about everybody on the hit "Dallas" series looks like a likely suspect.

J.R. Ewing, of course, is that scoundrel of an oil tycoon who double-dealt his way into an international frenzy of speculation after someone pumped two slugs into him at the end of the last season. Fans have been waiting to find out whodunnit ever since.

The denouement will be broadcast to East Coast and Midwest viewers at 10 p.m. EST. In the Mountain time zone, the show will begin at 11 p.m. EST and on the West Coast the show be on at 1 a.m. EST.

Viewers in the West can find out the secret early by listening to broadcast outlets, some of which plan urgent news reports. Passengers on Air France jets bound for Europe will be told who shot J.R. when the secret breaks.

Actors on the show, including Larry Hagman, who plays J.R., will be told the secret at a party tonight. They've also been kept in the dark for security reasons and only about 20 people in Lorimar Productions are said to be privy to the secret.

Bookies in Las Vegas, Nev., were setting odds on the shooting until the Nevada Game Control Board told them to stop because the show wasn't a sporting event and "somebody knows the outcome."

Odds makers at the Castaways Hotel in Las Vegas were offering the best odds, 3-to-1, that Sue Ellen acted in concert with her boyfriend, Dusty Farlow, in the shooting. Farlow, played by Jared Martin, supposedly was killed in a plane crash, but no one knows that for sure.

J.R. himself was something of a long-shot at 20-to-1. Bookies were offering 500-to-1 odds that the assailant — for reasons not quite clear — was Tom Landry, the real-life coach of the Dallas Cowboys football team. Roger Staubach, a former Cowboys quarterback, was rated at 1,000-to-1.

Just about every character in the show looks guilty. Nearly all had the opportunity, and there are no lack of motives for shooting J.R.

J.R. has mortgaged Southfork Ranch right out from under his parents. Jock and Miss Ellie, planned to sink oil wells on Miss Ellie's land, driven his brother Bobby away, planned to commit his wife to an institution, hatched a plot to convict his sister-in-law of prostitution and driven one business associate to suicide and left another bankrupt.

Here is a rogue's gallery of the leading suspects:

—Sue Ellen Ewing, played by Linda Gray. Sue Ellen has a passion for alcohol and other men, no doubt driven to both by J.R. The night J.R. was shot, he told her he was committing her to an institution for alcoholism. She tucked a gun into her purse and left Southfork Ranch.

—Kristin Shepard, Sue Ellen's sister and J.R.'s former secretary and mistress, played by Mary Crosby. Kristin was very cozy with J.R. until he told her to get out of town. To make his point J.R. had a policeman suggest he could arrest her for prostitution.

—Cliff Barnes, J.R.'s archrival, played by Ken Kercheval. Cliff is the son of Digger Barnes, the partner Jock Ewing double-crossed and left penniless when J.R. was only knee-high to a sidewinder. He had claim to some Ewing wells, but J.R. decided to shut down the field.

—Alan Beam, a devious lawyer and political fixer, played by Randolph Powell. Beam was the saboteur J.R. planted in Barnes' unsuccessful campaign for Congress. J.R. felt Beam knew too much and tried to get rid of him.

—Vaughn Leland, a banker, played by Dennis Patrick. Leland lost $20 million in an Asian oil swindle pulled off by J.R.

—Marilee Stone, the widow of a business associate, played by Fern Fitzgerald. Her husband committed suicide after he lost everything in J.R.'s oil deal.

—Bobby Ewing, played by Patrick Duffy. Bobby got fed up with J.R.'s dirty dealings. In addition, J.R. said some nasty things to his wife.

Rights to 'J.R.' market subject of suit

DALLAS (AP) — A firm which claims it saw the commercial possibilities of exploiting television character J.R. Ewing before his producers did is suing for $20 million.

Gray Originals, which claims Lorimar Productions of California gave it exclusive rights to market J.R. Ewing items, says Lorimar violated a February contract when it sold the rights to other companies.

State District Judge Hugh Snodgrass Wednesday issued a temporary order against Lorimar, preventing it from allowing other companies to distribute novelty items about the villainous character.

Snodgrass set a hearing for Wednesday to determine whether a temporary injunction should be issued against Lorimar.

"We are contending basically that the plaintiffs developed the concept of the J.R. promotion" through marketing studies last fall, said Tom McElroy, one of Gray Originals' attorneys.

Gray Originals "invested a lot of money getting ready to market these items and according to our view, Lorimar reneged on its commitments to the plaintiffs."

McElroy said.

The February contract preceded "the explosive rise of the character of J.R.," he added.

"The plaintiffs were given licensing rights to novelty merchandise such as postcards, laminated posters, mugs, ashtrays, travel bags, transfers, T-shirts and bumper stickers," McElroy said.

When Gray Originals contacted retail outlets about marketing the items, "Lorimar would send a cease and desist letter telling them not to do business with us," he said.

'Gang of Four' leader ruthless - and charming

EDITOR'S NOTE: John Roderick, former chief of The Associated Press bureau in Peking and AP's long-time China-watcher, knew Jiang Qing in the communist cave capital of Yenan in the 1940s. He last met her in 1975.

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent

TOKYO (AP) — Jiang Qing, leader of the "Gang of Four," has been compared to China's ruthless last empress dowager, Tzu Hsi. Both were stubborn, willful and cruel, but capable of charm when it suited their needs.

Seen on television, Chairman Mao Tse-tung's 67-year-old widow bore herself with her usual air of self-assurance when she entered the courtroom in Peking Thursday before a picked audience of 880.

In contrast to the nine male defendants, hers was a dramatic, even electrifying presence. The men shambled in, subdued and dazed-looking, but she held her head high and her body erect.

The six minutes of TV coverage contradicted recurrent reports that Jiang Qing had lost her reason and her hair and had been reduced to a scrawny skeleton during four years in detention.

Wearing dark-rimmed glasses as usual, her thick black hair combed neatly back, she looked very much as she did when President Ford and American correspondents met her in 1975 in Peking.

Her accusers reported a week ago she refused to confess to the crimes charged to her. She did not appear Thursday to have altered her stubborn attitude, though Chinese reporters attending the trial session reported she wept at one point.

Born in abject poverty, she was kidnapped as a child and forced into a theatrical troupe. Moving to Shanghai as a young woman, she became an actress in left-wing productions. One of her many lovers introduced her to communism.

Mao met her in the late 1930s in Yenan and was captivated by her good looks and intelligence. The party's elders resisted his marriage and made her promise she would never take part in party affairs. Mao divorced his third wife, then in a Moscow hospital, and had a child by Jiang Qing.

She kept her vow to stay away from politics for 25 years, until the start of the Cultural Revolution in 1966. In the next 10 years, until Mao's death in 1976 and her arrest, the forces she and the late Defense Minister Lin Biao directed were said to have persecuted several hundred million Chinese, bringing the nation to the brink of economic and political ruin.

Those who have put her and her nine associates on trial are survivors of that tumultuous period. Some also were the targets of Jiang Qing's passion for revenge.

Firms say patent dispute over rodeo device is 'a lot of bull'

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Three Alabama firms accused of infringing on a patented rodeo raining device say it's all a lot of bull.

The mechanical bucking bulls are the issue in a federal court suit filed by Gilley's Inc. of Pasadena, Texas, against Star Bull Inc. of Pelika and Cassidy's Inc. and RoJo Inc. of Birmingham.

Gilley's contended the firms are engaging in unfair competition, trying to pass off their bulls as the same as the one ridden by John Travolta in movie filmed at Gilley's and infringing on the rodeo training device patent secured in 1976 by Star Bull.

Turner and Gilley's said Turner invented and patented the gadget for simulating the bucking and spinning action of a rodeo animal trying to unseat its rider.

Star Bull has filed a motion to dismiss the case or transfer it to the Montgomery federal court district, where the Opelika firm produces its mechanical bulls.

Cassidy's and RoJo's contended there was no infringement on Turner's patent, saying similar devices were in public use or on sale more than one year before Turner's alleged invention and patent application.

Turner and Gilley's seek damages and ask the court to stop the Alabama firms from producing or using the mechanical bulls.

BOOKMAKERS. Twenty-year-old Cathy Gregson of the William Hill Bookmakers Association, gives a knowing wink as she posts up the odds of "Who Shot J.R." in one of the company's offices in New Bridge Street here Friday. The betting company closed the book Friday after taking $150,000 in bets on who shot J.R., the central character in the television series DALLAS. The name of the person who shot J.R. will be revealed in tonight's segment.

Handicapped youth has unusual musical skill

PEWAWKEE, Wis. (AP) — Leslie Lemke couldn't walk until he was 13 and couldn't talk for several years afterward. He's blind, retarded and suffers from cerebral palsy. But at 18, a remarkable talent emerged: a computer-like memory for music.

He can remember whatever he's heard and immediately play it on the piano, note for note. And at 26, he now gives concerts at schools and hospitals.

His adoptive mother, May, says it all began one morning when she heard music coming from his room and thought the television had been left on overnight.

"He was sitting at the piano, playing Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1, 'Tonight We Love,' all the way through," she said. "It was Liberace's theme song, and that's where he had heard it."

"I got down on my knees and cried and laughed and cried again," Mrs. Lemke said. "Then I thanked God for giving my boy the gift of music."

The young man appears at churches, schools, nursing homes and hospitals.

He's also been on local television programs, and a crew from ABC's "That's Incredible" was at the Lemke home Thursday, filming a segment for a future broadcast.

Leslie's brain apparently approaches music much as a computer would, said psychiatrist Darold Treffert, executive director of the Fond du Lac County Mental Health Center. The psychiatric term for the phenomenon was idiot savant, literally translated as "learned idiot," he said.

"It is associated with retarded persons who have remarkable powers of memory," Treffert said. "Of course, Leslie's case is even more striking because he also is blind and suffers from cerebral palsy."

Leslie came to live with the Lemkes as a 6-month-old baby.

He "looked just awful, terrible... a helpless, forlorn-looking creature. They told me he would likely die anyway," Mrs. Lemke recalled. "But I thought to myself, God loves all children, even this little creature, so I'll do what I can do."

When Leslie was 10, Mrs. Lemke began teaching him to walk by fastening a leather belt around her waist and his, then dragging him behind her, hoping he would imitate her. After more than three years of daily practice, he took his first step.

She taught him to talk by pressing her mouth to his cheek, forming words, speaking and singing.

His first words came when he was in the back yard and she asked, "Leslie, what are you doing?"

"And he said, 'I'm having fun'... And that was the beginning."

Before Leslie learned to talk, Mrs. Lemke and her husband Joseph sensed that he was drawn to music. They got him a piano, played records for him, sang to him.

He learned to sing before he could talk and can imitate Louis Armstrong and Al Jolson and others, singing in German and Italian as well as English, although his speech remains primitive.

Woman freed in bizarre slaying of husband

HONEY GROVE, Texas (AP) — A Fannin County grand jury has refused to indict a woman who says she shot her husband and with the help of some of the couple's 13 children buried him under a shed behind their North Texas home four years ago.

Mrs. Delores Wilson, 41, had been charged with murder earlier this week in the death four years ago of J.B. Wilson, 45, whose remains were uncovered from a shallow grave beneath a shed Monday.

But the grand jury refused Thursday to indict Mrs. Wilson, who had been free on $10,000 bond following the filing of charges Wednesday. She will apparently go free now because of the grand jury's action.

Fannin County Assistant District Attorney Dan Meehan pieced the story together through interviews with Mrs. Wilson, some of her children, who range in age from four to 21, and relatives.

"The evidence is that he was a bad, drunk son-of-a-bitch. The kids say he had beaten on all of them at one time or another," Meehan said.

Meehan said Wilson was a native of Honey Grove, about 75 miles northeast of Dallas. He said Wilson had trouble keeping a job, forcing the family to live on welfare most of the time.

"He didn't work in June because it was too hot, and he didn't work in August because it was too wet from the rain," the prosecutor continued.

"He said interviews show that sometime in September or October of 1976, no one knows for sure exactly when, Wilson came home drunk.

"He came in there and started beating on them again. Everybody was scared. She (Mrs. Wilson) loaded him up with a .22 (pistol)," Meehan said.

Authorities, who found Wilson's remains wrapped in a decaying bedspread, said he had been shot twice in the back of the head.

Family members told Meehan and law enforcement officers that the older-children helped their mother carry the body out to the shed in back of the Wilson home.

"One of the boys said they read a few Bible pages over him. I guess they had a little ceremony before they rolled him in," Meehan said.

No one outside the family, including Wilson's mother, knew what happened to him until recently, Meehan said.

The prosecutor said the strange case first came to light Monday morning when Carl Wilson, who married Penny Wilson, a daughter of the victim, came to police headquarters and told Police Chief Roy Allen that he had killed J.B. Wilson. Carl Wilson was not related to the J.B. Wilson family until his marriage to Penny Wilson, authorities said.

Meehan said one of the victim's sons apparently told Carl Wilson about the shooting. Carl Wilson told Chief Allen that he had been having trouble sleeping since learning of the slaying.

But, why, authorities wondered did Carl Wilson suddenly confess to the slaying of a man they said he never knew?

Meehan said he believes the man confessed to the slaying in hopes that disclosure of the murder would help him in his legal problems. Carl Wilson, who recently completed probation on a felony burglary conviction, faces charges of indecency with a child. He is free on $1,500 bond on that charge.

Pieces of the puzzling story that began when Carl Wilson went to the police to confess began falling together when Penny Wilson came to ask Chief Allen why her husband was being held. Allen said he told the woman that her husband had confessed to killing J.B. Wilson.

"She said, no, that it was her mother that did it," Allen recalled.

It was then that workers were sent to the farm. They quickly uncovered the remains.

Meehan said he remains puzzled as to how the shooting and burial remained secret for four years.

"It's amazing. You'd think with all those little kids knowing it, somebody would have said something," Meehan said.

Mrs. T.G. Wilson, the victim's mother, said she had seen her son was dead until she saw a story about the case on television Monday night.

She said the last time she saw her son was apparently not long before he was shot.

"He said he was going to Lubbock. That's the last time I saw him," she said.

Apparently no one around this small town cared much that they didn't see J.B. Wilson or hear anything about him.

"There was talk that the police, they told him to leave town because so many people was having to help support his family," said family friend Elmo Strickland. "Everybody thought he just left out."

During the past four years, Chief Allen said, people would occasionally ask the Wilson children about their father.

"The relatives, they'd ask about him at Christmas time. The kids would say, 'Oh, he's all right,'" Allen said. "That's what the little kids would say."

Meehan said it's not hard to understand why the family kept the grisly secret.

"They were just scared. They just planted him in the back yard. As far as we could tell, there was no concerted effort to shut it up, to keep it quiet," Meehan said.

"It's just that no nobody ever talked about it. They still don't talk about it," Meehan said.

Some of the family would discuss the matter with Meehan.

But that still doesn't keep Meehan and others from being astounded about the turn of events in the small town of 1,853.

"It's the damndest thing I ever saw," the prosecutor said.

Chief Allen summed it up, saying, "That is one funny family."

Remington sculpture to be presented Sunday

Mrs. Nona Payne will present "Coming Through the Rye," a one-third size bronze casting by Frederic Remington, to the City of Pampa Sunday at 3 p.m. at M.K. Brown Auditorium. The presentation will be made during a reception sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association. The auditorium will be open to the public from 2:30-4:30 p.m.

The statue will be located in the foyer of the M.K. Brown Auditorium. It is sister to a full-sized sculpture in the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. Mrs. Payne has made many contributions to Western art. In 1970, Mrs. Payne, an Honorary Life Director and an Honorary Life Trustee of the Cowboy Hall of Fame, contributed funds for the Hall of Fame's Payne-Kirkpatrick Memorial that houses the Fraser collection and the statue, "End of the Trail." She also made it possible for the Hall to acquire a statue of Buffalo Bill.

Compensate for hazardous winter driving conditions

AUSTIN — Winter driving problems can slip up on you even in a Sunbelt state such as Texas.

One of the most dangerous conditions is glaze ice, the Texas Medical Association warns. This glass-slick ice layer is almost undetectable until sliding starts.

One way to get a feel for the road is to tap the brakes or gas pedal and see what minor response occurs. This technique has its own hazards so it should be done only when sickness is not obvious and there are not other vehicles or other hazards around. Watching other vehicles' response to the road is another good indicator of conditions, especially if you allow enough space to adjust your driving for their errors.

Once slick conditions do occur, pumping the brakes is better than jamming them on to avoid skids. Chains and snow tires also can help handle slick conditions but not many people have such equipment so they must depend on good tread on ordinary tires (which is very important in slick conditions). Texans also rely heavily on caution, slow speeds and possibly hazardous ideas such as putting extra weight in the trunk of cars that need it.

Some authorities say this traction-gaining technique is dangerous because a collision could throw the weight forward with dangerous force. Others say putting some weight such as sand or salt is safe when placed over the rear axle and tied so containers will rip open quickly in a collision.

If the car rear end does start to slide despite all precautions, turn the front wheels to adjust. For instance, if the rear slides to the right, turn the front wheels to the right and resist the temptation to lock the brakes. In a crisis seat belts are more important than ever because they hold you in place so you can control the car better and protect you in a collision.

If a mishap does occur, it is a good idea to have some warm clothes in the car. TMA says. Even if you are just driving in town, having at least a coat and good shoes can come in handy while handling problems ranging from collisions to flat tires.

Same room, different tastes

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

There's a well-worn joke about the suburbanite who comes home late after a night on the town, tiptoes up the stairs and into the bedroom, only to discover that he has wandered into the wrong house and the wrong bedroom.

This scenario may be good for a laugh. But it would never happen. We all put our personal stamp on the spaces we inhabit, no matter how similar the facade. One step across the threshold is enough to recognize the differences between one place and another.

An example of how personal choice can change the look of a place may be seen in a room which serves one function first, and then, later, another.

A typical city apartment bedroom, it can change its look completely according to the colors and patterns and accessories used to furnish it — even though the basic furniture and function of the room remain the same.

The first version of the room is arranged for a young girl. The bed is set in an alcove and both bed and nook are covered with the same floral sprigged fabric which is repeated in a puffed curtain tied with ribbons.

Now suppose the family with the daughter moves out and the apartment is taken by a childless couple. Out with the floral patterns, toys and childish accessories.

Instead, the same room and the same arrangement of shelves and windows are given a sophisticated black and rose color scheme with Oriental accessories.

Drama replaces whimsy in the room which is painted black and gets a black 1-inch blind over some storage shelves at one side of the window and a white and gold stripe blind at the window.

Showing the one room decorated in two different ways illustrates the point that a consumer can dictate the feeling of a room by choosing appropriate colors, patterns and accessories.

Hopper works shown at Whitney Museum

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
NEW YORK (AP) — The Whitney Museum of American Art here is having a celebration — with a major retrospective, "Edward Hopper: The Art and the Artist," on show through January 1981.

The show marks not only the 60th anniversary of Hopper's first one-man show, at the Whitney Studio Club, but is also part of the museum's year-long observance of its own 50th birthday. One signal achievement of its first 50 years was the museum's acquisition of the largest collection of Hopper works anywhere, and they are generously displayed in this exhibition.

There are about 380 works on show, approximately 170 oil paintings, 35 watercolors and 175 drawings. Here are the works that have become part of 20th-century American art history, landmarks in our visual heritage: "Automat," "Early Sunday Morning," "House by the Railroad."

But works from all periods of Hopper's artistic activity have been brought out, including some never shown publicly before. Preparatory drawings are placed here for the first time alongside finished works, and other helpful groupings of pictures give new insights into Hopper's experiments, his working methods and the way he pursued and interpreted his subjects.

Through the years Hopper (1882-1967) consistently returned to favorite themes and the scenes which he found the most interesting vehicles for what he wanted to express; many of the works here emphasize such patterns. There is also ample evidence of what earned him the description of major realist painter of 20th-century America.

But what also emerges is how Hopper arrived at his own

"reality" — starting with a descriptive sketch, eventually producing a finished work telling a different story, charged with psychological implications. And the exhibition shows the variety in his early explorations of styles and subjects, in spite of the refined range of subject matter of his mature years.

A selection from Hopper's many self-portraits — pencil sketches from 1900 to 1945 and oils to the late '20s — points up his introspection, his interest in the inner life. Works grouped under the heading Intimate Life also span the years; they include portraits of parents and friends, background scenes of his life, and sketches and paintings of his wife, Jo, who was so often the model for women in his paintings.

In his student days, Hopper tried out many different styles and techniques: a group of works from this period contains class sketches, and dark oils in old-master tones.

Between 1906 and 1910, Hopper visited Paris and worked there. Suddenly a new cast of characters appears in sketches; light, sunny pastel colors dominate an enchanting selection of oil paintings; there are glimpses of what becomes the familiar jutting shape in "House by the Railroad" of 1925, a row of trees foreshadows the 1962 "Road and Trees."

On his return to the United States, Hopper had to reconcile the French influence with the direction he decided to take at home. A Transitional Years group of paintings includes a series of dramatic shoreline scenes of Monhegan Island, Maine, in which his handling of form, color and light has acquired weight and force.

From then on Hopper steadily worked at the paintings which make up the major part of the exhibition, paintings of a totally personal, yet totally American character.

He lived with his wife in the same modest apartment in downtown Manhattan, traveled occasionally, sketched from life, but almost always from then on painted back in his studio, where he stripped away and changed detail to transform the sketches into compelling dramas frozen at a point of intense significance to him.

He returns often to the themes of solitude; buildings; city life — its restaurants, rooms and windows, ambiguous encounters. There are country scenes, too, more buildings, the lighthouses and the seascapes.

His space is peopled, sparsely, with withdrawn-looking figures, the recurrent brooding quality intensified by strong light, strong lines and angles, pure, vibrant color. The blocks of color bound by light and shadow suggest a stillness that is not repose, but that holds tension or even menace. The action has been interrupted, and the buildup of emotional pressure that results is conveyed in images that live on in one's mind.

After its closing in New York, the exhibition — which is sponsored by Philip Morris Inc. and the National Endowment for the Arts — will go to London, Amsterdam and Germany.

Young artists' competition slated

DALLAS — The 39th annual Dallas Morning News G.B. Dealey Awards Competition for young artists will take place March 12-15, 1981. Students of piano, violin and cello between the ages of 17 and 28 are eligible to enter. Vocal students between the ages of 20 to 30 are also eligible. Entrants must be U.S. citizens or foreign students studying in the United States.

Cash prizes awarded by the Dallas Morning News in the instrumental division are $1500 first prize, $750 second prize and $500 third prize. In addition, the first place winner will appear in concert with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. First prize in the vocal division is $1500, second prize $750 and third prize $500. The first prize winner will also be offered an appearance with the Dallas Civic Opera. First place winners also receive the bronze G.B. Dealey medallion and all finalists are given an engraved certificate.

Jurors for the 1981 Dealey competition will include John Ardoin, Music Editor of the Dallas Morning News; Plato Karayannis, General Director of Dallas Civic Opera; Ivan Davis, pianist and Charles Tregor, violinist.

All contestants must submit a list of compositions for the contest, selected in accordance with a required repertoire list. Included in the instrumental repertoire is a concerto which must be chosen from a specified list given in the application brochure. This concerto will be played with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra by those who reach the finals.

Vocal contestants must be prepared to sing a series of operatic arias and songs and oratorio selections as specified in the brochure.

An application and explanatory brochure may be had by contacting the Dealey Auditions office, P.O. Box 2977, Dallas, Texas 75221.

Woody Allen book thought-provoking

SIDE EFFECTS. By Woody Allen. Random House. 149 Pages. $8.95.

Brooding on life, on death, Woody Allen regards himself with a sigh and concludes:

"Socrates' brave death gave his life authentic meaning; something my existence lacks totally, although it does possess a minimal relevance to the Internal Revenue Department."

Not true. There are legions of Allen fans and to them the comic's life does have meaning. It means that if they are going to see an Allen movie, or play, or read one of his pieces they are going to be entertained on the intellectual level.

Sure, Allen occasionally indulges in slapstick but always his work contains enough relevance to the human condition so that it rises above the quickly forgotten pie-in-the-face routine and sticks instead in the memory.

Allen's talent as a comic with something interesting to say about life as it is now may be seen to good advantage in the 16 pieces that make up this book. The pieces are uneven, some far superior to others, but all have something to recommend them.

"Remembering Needleman," for example, is a funny item about a professor named Needleman who escaped the Nazis by disguising himself as a bush "and moving sideways only, three quick paces at a time, he crossed the border without being noticed." But, looked at closely, it is also the story of a man determined to adjust to life's absurdities no matter what the cost to himself.

In "The Lunatic's Tale," Allen tells of a man who is not satisfied with the way things are. Determined to make the world over the way he wants it to be, the man only succeeds in destroying himself.

"Family Affair" star to appear at dinner theatre

Petite Kathy Garver of the television series "Family Affair" will headline the Christmas show at Amarillo's Country Squire Dinner Theatre, opening Nov. 25 in the Broadway comedy hit, "Sunday in New York." Performances are scheduled Tuesday through Sunday evenings weekly.

Described by some as a "five-foot dynamo," Miss Garver appeared in over 60 television shows, 40 commercials, eight feature films and innumerable stage plays before she turned 21.

Then, while a freshman at UCLA, the petite child star became part of CBS's long-running series "Family Affair," co-starring with Brian Keith and Sebastian Cabot. For five years, Kathy was known throughout the world as "Cissy" in perhaps one of the warmest family half-hour situation comedies on the air.

Country Squire is located at I-40 and Grand in Amarillo. Buffet food service begins at 6:30 p.m., followed by pre-show musical entertainment by the Country Rogues and the performance at 8:15 p.m. Doors open on Sunday at 6 p.m., with show at 7:30 p.m. Reservations are advised.

Kachinas carved from cottonwood

THAT'S SMALL — Fingers of woodcarver George Godfrey emphasize size of miniature kachina dolls he produces. The 2-inch figures are carved from cottonwood roots supplied by Indians.

By MELISSA COONS
The Phoenix Gazette
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—It's a small world for George Godfrey and his miniature kachinas of the spirit world.

But it's a colorful world that brings him visitors who expand his life beyond the walls of the home to which he is confined. Godfrey, who can't travel by car because of a disabling spinal injury, carves the two-inch kachinas from cottonwood roots gathered by Indians in Winslow and shipped to Phoenix by train.

Each kachina is dressed for the spirit it represents, often wearing costumes of leather and fur. They are painted in acrylic paints with symbolic face masks. "I've been doing this for about 20 years," Godfrey says, "but I've never sold any. I make them for the Indians."

To ensure the authenticity of each kachina, Godfrey relies on his memory and past discussions with an Indian friend.

"My friend is dead now, but he used to help me by telling me if the colors and markings on the kachinas were correct," he explained recently, discussing his work. "I've also worked with Hopis, been on the reservation and attended their ceremonies. You can't rely on what books tell you about the kachinas' costume."

Godfrey finds a kinship with the Hopi attitude of honoring the unique. "In our society, people tease those who are crippled or different. The Hopis hold them in respect and awe," he said. "The Hopis believe that everything has a spirit, and they have a kachina for practically everything," he added. "There's even a left-handed kachina."

The carved miniatures reside in a revolving glass display case near the work area of his home. He selects his favorites to bring out and explain to the many visitors from all parts of the world who are sent to him by workers at Arizona museums.

"The identification of each kachina is in the markings of the face mask, such as the snowflake design on the head-dress of the snow kachina. Other details of their costumes vary," he tells them.

For instance, there is Hennis, the kachina that represents fertility.

"He carries a watermelon in one hand and cattails or corn in the other. This represents the fertility of the land. He also acts as a Santa Claus, bringing gifts to children," Godfrey said.

Then there is the Eototo kachina, who carries a bag of sacred meal and container of sacred water. He is symbolic of respect, harmony and love.

The Yunga kachina, however, is a bit more playful. He carries piki bread on a stick and a prickly pear cactus to defend the bread against greedy children.

Godfrey said the early kachinas made by the Hopis were plain because the Indians didn't have knives with which to carve them.

But now that they are more elaborate, "everybody wants them — and for a big price," he said.

Godfrey uses razor-thin knives for his work, carving the feet, body, legs and head of the kachinas from pieces of root. Separately carved hands, arms and tiny fingers are glued on. Next, the kachinas are painted, then dressed in their symbolic costumes.

For the "foxtail" many of them must have, he often uses a small piece of thick corduroy material.

Seeking a greater challenge in detail work, Godfrey has created an even smaller kachina — this one painted on the head of a pin and barely visible without the use of a magnifying glass.

The kachina, painted with enamel and fired, required Godfrey to make his own brush.

His hobby-in-miniature has expanded to jewelry making, and he has designed rings and bola ties.

His favorite ring is painted with the faces of 10 kachinas in many colors. It also was painted with a specially designed brush.

Though it all keeps him busy, Godfrey said he didn't keep track of the time each article took.

"You can't sit and feel sorry for yourself," he explained. "You've got to do something. It's something to do with my hands."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I really love my husband, but he has put on so much weight since our marriage nine years ago he isn't the same man.

Abby, he's 5-9 and weighs at least 250 pounds. He has a history of heart disease and knows he shouldn't weigh this much, but he refuses to do anything about it. He won't go on a diet and he eats constantly.

We have three young children, and I don't want to be left a widow to raise them alone.

I love this man, but I can't tell him what I am going to tell you. He has become physically repulsive to me. I just hate the thought of going to bed with him. Believe me, Abby, it's the hardest work I have to do.

Please print this letter for me and my children.
TURNED OFF

DEAR TURNED OFF: Here's your letter, but it's not only for you and your children. It's for anyone who knows he (or she) should lose weight but keeps putting it off "until Monday" or "after the holidays" or whenever. I'm not addressing this to people who are 10 or 15 pounds overweight, but to those whose excess pounds are sufficiently excessive as to be a problem to them or to those who love them.

DEAR ABBY: We recently married off our youngest daughter at a lovely church wedding. We had a reception and sit-down dinner for 220 guests. Since this was our third wedding, we were more experienced and would like to tell you how we handled 16 guests who failed to acknowledge our R.S.V.P. invitations but showed up anyway:

First, those who failed to acknowledge our invitations were not called and asked, "Are you coming?"

We simply prepared to serve those who responded, and we assumed that those who did not were not coming.

Those who didn't respond but showed up anyway were not given the same cordial welcome as those who responded in the affirmative.

No last-minute rushing around to set more places at the table, and no hastily scribbled place cards for them. They were treated like "drop-in" guests, and had to wait until they could conveniently be served.

Disco roller skating is 'in' in Paris

PARIS (AP) — The soft whoosh-whoosh of wheels over pavement being heard in Paris these days isn't coming from bicycles. More likely than not, it's coming from the patin a roulettes. Roller skates.

The roller-skating renaissance has hit Paris. But it bears little resemblance to its precursor — which appeared in the late 1800s and inspired relatively placid rolling along the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne by the chic-est of the chic.

The new renaissance is of a livelier sort. Disco skating is definitely in, as the more agile of the population perform leaps of terrifying velocity. And, defying past traditions of haute couture, the skaters tend toward flashing satins, winged caps and glittering metallics.

Out on the streets, however, one is more likely to see Paris skaters wearing the garb of Anytown, U.S.A. — just plain jeans. But it is somehow inevitable that in this most elegant of the world's cities, roller-skating has risen to new heights.

Take the case of Florian Pinter, for instance. A bellboy of utmost decorum at the ornate old-world Paris Inter-Continental Hotel, the 19-year-old youth has a passion for le patin a roulettes. Not content only to practice his skills after working hours, he brought in roller skates (the kind that attach to your shoes, a conservative gesture) to speed him on his appointed delivery rounds.

On young Pinter's days on duty, one is likely to see him rolling out of the hotel, bag in hand, pulling it all off with graceful aplomb. As he disappears around the corner, there is a silent pause from guests, delighted smiles all around, and a lot of people left wondering if it is possible to try a spin around Paris on skates.

Mais oui — but of course. With the dedication only an intrepid skater could provide, Pinter has supplied the hotel staff with a list of skate rental stores and has personally tested out several routes around the city. His helpful pointers and map of recommended routes have even been printed up in English and French by the hotel and are distributed to every room.

The routes take those who dare down the Champs-Elysees and Rue St. Honore for a little window shopping — but, "try not to be too distracted as Hermes, St. Laurent and Gucci slide by," the guide cautions, "particularly on the Champs-Elysees, where the slope is deceptive and can leave one gathering unexpected speed."

A quieter route guides skaters through the Palais Royal grounds or through the beautiful Tuileries Gardens. Even the Louvre, a mere 10 minutes en route from the Inter-Continental, acknowledges the newest old craze. While viewing the Mona Lisa, skaters may check their wheels at the door.

To avoid possible falls, the guide warns, be wary of "Place Vendome because of narrow and bumpy sidewalks, the Avenue de l'Opera, dangerous at high speed, and 'Les Halles,' please avoid the hole!"

These plants grow in thin air

By MARION KWARTLER
SITRIYA, Israel (AP) — Imagine a greenhouse trough filled with healthy houseplants sprouting through a styrofoam cover. But lift the cover and the plants come off right along with it, and you see that they aren't rooted in soil but in thin air.

The empty tub is part of a new Israeli scheme called aeroponics, an agricultural system that dispenses with conventional soil or water methods. Instead, plants sprout and grow in sealed troughs where their exposed roots receive nutrient-enriched mist from a computer-controlled spray system.

Israeli scientists hope aeroponics will one day solve the problem of a shortage in usable agricultural land. Tiers of aeroponic troughs will grow vegetables on even the rockiest terrain, and there's no need for lowering or fertilizing with gas-suzzling tractors.

Israel's Agricultural Ministry as just awarded Adi Ltd., the Israeli company which developed aeroponics, a $200,000 grant to build a quarter-acre of modular troughs to test the system's large-scale commercial feasibility.

Aeroponics uses less water, less fertilizer and less energy, and experimental yields are up 200 percent higher than soil farming, says Adi's director, Yoram Keshet.

"Until people see it with their eyes it's hard for them to believe it," he said.

A simple computer console and sensors monitor humidity and temperature in each trough, carefully regulating these conditions which in other farming methods cannot be as easily checked.

Because the plants don't have light their way through natural resistance to soil and soil diseases, they're stronger and healthier, and the aeroponic system permits "farming" all year long.

"Because the roots are exposed you can see immediately when a plant is diseased and take it out," Keshet said. "So there's no chance for the sickness to spread to the other plants."

In an average trough, a minimum of 1,000 plants grow in approximately 9 square feet, four times the density of traditional soil farming.

According to calculations based on multiplications of experimental yields, a quarter-acre of aeroponically grown tomato plants will produce over 100 tons of tomatoes, while the best greenhouses in Israel produce only 20-30 tons.

In Adi's experimental greenhouse, house plants have rooted in 14 days instead of the usual month, and citrus and avocado trees cuttings have sprouted in 10-15 days instead of several months.

Keshet, a nuclear engineer who founded Adi five years ago to develop the aeroponics idea, has so far sold 15 systems to farmers in Israel and three for display in the United States.

St. Mark's celebrates 48th anniversary

The 48th Anniversary celebration for St. Mark's C.M.E. Church will be started Sunday Nov. 23 at 3 p.m. The anniversary, nearly joining the Thanksgiving Holiday feasts and celebrations, will begin with special messages and singing from city and area churches. The two day event will conclude with a special evening worship service. The 48th anniversary message will be delivered by the Rev. Blakemore of Borger, and music will be rendered by church choirs from Borger and Amarillo. A special thanks was issued from Rev. C.C. Campbell, pastor of St. Mark's Church to all the members and friends of St. Mark's for their loyal support given through the years in helping to make this year's celebration a highlight of the church year. The public is invited to attend, and refreshments will be served in the Fellowship Hall immediately following the worship hour.

City-wide Thanksgiving service slated Tuesday

The annual Thanksgiving Service sponsored by the Pampa Ministerial Alliance will be held Tuesday, Nov. 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis. This year's speaker will be the Rev. Gene Allen, pastor of Lamar Full Gospel Assembly. The Pampa High School Choir will present special music for the occasion. The public is invited to attend this inter-denominational religious service.

LINDA McNEIL

World Hunger Relief sponsors local concert

The World Hunger Relief will present a sacred concert, Sunday Nov. 23 at 7 p.m. in the worship center of the First Baptist Church. Linda McNeil, a voice and choir teacher in the Mexia School system, will be sharing her talent. Miss McNeil is professionally accredited through performing in musicals on the road and at Fort Worth's Casa Manana, the Dallas Repertory Theater, Fort Worth Opera and many others. She has been cast in the show Oklahoma, My Fair Lady, Brigadoon, Show Boat, South Pacific, Mame, Cabaret, Hello Dolly, Fiddler on the Roof and others. Linda has committed her talent to be used free in the service of the Lord through performing fund-raising concerts in support of World Hunger Ministries. The total monies raised by the host church is directed to the ministry of World Hunger Relief Inc. The money is directed through the Southern Baptist Convention Foreign Mission Board to buy food for the hungry in various parts to the world. David and Ann Campbell will also share in the service. David Campbell is a former minister of music at the First Baptist Church. The Campbells now make their home in Waco and are giving all of their time and talents to World Hunger Relief. David will sing and play the piano. All are invited to share in this worship experience through music and testimony. A free will offering will be taken at the close of the service to be used for World Hunger Relief. First Baptist Church is located at the corner of Kingsmill and West streets. Claude Cone is the pastor.

'Jews for Jesus' to present special concert

A six member team of Jews for Jesus will be in Pampa on Saturday, Nov. 22, to present a free concert of what is called "Jewish Gospel Music," at the First Baptist Church, Kingsmill and West streets at the 7 p.m. evening worship. When one Christian leader asked, "What does Jewish-Gospel music sound like?" the answer was given, "Think of the songs from Fiddler on the Roof or the music played at a Jewish wedding. Or listen to the sounds of modern Israel, music with a varied tempo in a minor key. The melodies sung by the Liberated Wailing Wall include all these Jewish sounds." The Liberated Wailing Wall group is constantly on the go. The group is based in Chicago but are only there for a brief period of time to re-train, re-supply and take care of personal matters such as dental and medical care.

Rev. Allen to speak on Holy Land trip

Pastor of the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, Rev. Gene Allen has recently returned from a trip to the Holy Land. Pastor Allen said that he "has been deeply concerned with current events as they relate to bible prophecy." He has been to Israel before - because of his intense interest in the way bible prophecy is being fulfilled throughout that part of the world. "However, recent events have sparked new efforts in my ministry to become more knowledgeable with regard to just where we are on God's time calendar. The war now being waged between Iran and Iraq are signs passed along the highway of God's time table. The role of Egypt - and that countries relationship to Israel in prophecy is a source of much prophetic speculation. The war between Afghanistan and Russia are events of possible great importance to the entire world. Is the hysteria that is sweeping the world because of the strife in these nations well founded? Are the Fundamentalist ministers who are declaring that these happenings are sign posts pointing to the soon return of the Lord Jesus Christ correct in their analysis of world events as they relate to bible prophecy? The public is encouraged to attend Lamar Full Gospel Assembly on Nov. 23 and hear a first hand report on events in that part of the globe. Hear and draw your own conclusions as to how current events relate to bible prophecy."

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life, in thy presence is fulness of Joy..."

PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

Take a Second Look

On your first look, you may think that this little girl is riding a rocking horse, but look again. It is not a rocking horse but a little donkey.

About animals now, and children. Donkeys were one of the first animals to be tamed by man, and are gentle animals when they are not practicing the quality of being stubborn.

The quality of gentleness somehow reminds us of our Saviour, the Wonderful One.

Parents, teach your children about Jesus, who admonished us to let the little children come unto Him. Our Lord would remind us that the little ones are precious to the Father. We invite you to take the children to church this week.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

November 22, 1980

This coming year you are likely to place great stock in friendships you will be developing. Your faith will not be misplaced, because pals will help make your lot in life easier.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck tends to look upon you favorably today in ways you may be unaware of. Out-of-sight happenings work for your good. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Normally you're one who likes to call the shots, but today you will fare better in situations where you play a supportive role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Something advantageous that would give your career a big boost could be developing at this time. An old ally will be busy laying the foundation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Having fun at what you do will be important to you today. Your actions will have a much larger influence on others than you may realize.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is a good day to make changes which you feel will be beneficial for the entire family. Get moving

If you've got a nifty idea. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your judgment is quite keen today. You should be able to handle yourself admirably in matters requiring major decisions. Don't dodge issues.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be alert today, because you may find ways to add to your resources through more than one channel. Luck and industriousness could play equal roles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your leadership and organizational qualities are very pronounced today. You shine, especially in areas that help bring pleasure to others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The more deeply you become involved in things today, the more your luck is likely to improve. Keep plugging away until the rainbow yields its gold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Dealings with friends who have influence and clout should turn out extremely favorable for them, as well as for yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something very beneficial to you personally could develop where your work or career is concerned. It may be advancement, or an increase in salary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) One of the major reasons you're apt to be successful today is because you'll treat whatever occurs philosophically. Your demeanor will win the respect of associates.

'Idolmaker' portrays stars' rise

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It seems so long ago, that innocent time when boys could be yanked off the streets of South Philadelphia and hyped into heartthrobs for teen-age America.

The music business has traveled light years from those days of the late 1950s and early '60s. Those who wish to relive that era can attend United Artists' "The Idolmaker," starring Ray Sharkey as Vincent Vacarri, with Tavah Feldsuh, Peter Gallagher and Paul Land.

The credits list Robert Marcucci as technical adviser. It figures, Sharkey's character might as well be called Marcucci.

Twenty years ago he was the biggest starmaker in the pop music world, a Svengali who seemed able to convert unknowns into million-dollar attractions overnight. His most notable creations: Frankie Avalon and Fabian (Forte), who are represented in the film by Gallagher and Land.

"The Idolmaker" began with a providential bit of table-hopping at La Scala restaurant in Beverly Hills.

"It was in February 1976," Marcucci recalled, "I stopped by Gene Kirkwood's table to congratulate him on 'Rocky' (on which Kirkwood was executive producer.) I had managed Gene for a brief time when he was 17 and wanted to be a teen idol. But when I heard his New York-Tony Curtis accent, I said, 'Forget it.'"

"Gene asked me what I was doing, and I told him I was writing a book incorporating my experiences in the music business. Not an autobiography, because then I would have to mention names. This would be fictionalized history, which is the kind of book I like to read.

After I told Gene about it, he said, 'I want to do it.'"

MOBBED BY FANS. Actor Peter Gallagher, playing the role of Caesar, continues to sing after being mobbed by adoring fans during a scene from the movie, "The Idolmaker." Gallagher's character is a late 1950's style rock and roll singer. (AP Laserphoto)

'Man with the golden ears' puts out hot record tips

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pitcher has his arm, a fashion model has her good looks, and then there's Kal Rudman — the "man with the golden ears."

As editor and publisher of Friday Morning Quarterback, the country's most influential radio programming tipsheet, Rudman listens to as many as 200 new records a week, then tells his 4,000 or so subscribers which ones are destined to be hits.

FMQB doesn't look like much. The type is tiny, the graphics almost nonexistent and it's printed on a couple of dozen brightly colored sheets of legal-sized paper stapled together.

But when Kal talks, the radio and record community listens. FMQB has been called the radio-h3w0n ER'S BIBLE. Each issue contains 250,000 words' worth of information — which radio stations are playing which songs, Rudman's own record chart, a list of the records being stocked by the major wholesalers (you can't have a hit if people can't buy it) and little nuggets of industry news and gossip.

But what most of the people who pay $250 a year for an FMQB subscription are really interested in is the hairs on the 50-year-old Rudman's neck. He says they stand up when he hears a hit-to-be.

"I can't explain whether it's a psychic phenomenon or what it is, I just don't know," says Rudman, who was once known as the "round mound of sound" but has recently lost a lot of weight and looks very much the successful businessman.

"All I know is, it works for me and I'm grateful for it."

So are the programmers. Most radio stations add only two or three new records to their playlists each week, and heaven help the program director who doesn't gauge his audience's tastes properly.

Record companies are equally interested in Rudman's judgments. When a disc gets Rudman's colorful nod of approval — "a GO-RILLA!" — is one of his favorites — you can almost hear the promotion man cheering.
