House committees use Reagan blueprint for budget cutting

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress set to approve a compromise $695.4 billion budget blueprint accommodating President Reagan's proposed deep spending and tax reductions, individual committees are beginning to translate savings outlined in the plan into actual program cuts.

The House was expected to vote today on the compromise, with approval almost certain. The Senate is due to act by Thursday.

Reagan originally called for spending $695.3 billion in 1982 with a $45 billion deficit. The compromise reached last week on House and Senate versions of budget blueprints that the president had embraced predicts a deficit of $37.6 billion next year. The compromise is the initial step in the lengthy congressional budget process and generally sets guidelines for House and Senate committees to follow later in the year.

But included in the guidelines are binding instructions to committees to achieve a total of about $36 billion in savings in existing programs under their jurisdictions. The individual committees must decide the details of the cuts and report back these reductions in current programs to the House and Senate budget committees by June 12.

That budget-cutting spree is under way.

organized crime is a subject of legitimate legislative interest and that the Senate intends to continue to pursue that subject diligently and fairly.

In action today: —The House Education and Labor Committee, which has been ordered to cut $10 billion in authorizations and direct spending from current laws, was meeting to consider how to go about the task.

—The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, faced with making $5.1 billion worth of cuts, was hearing from Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman.

'Willie the Rat' enters Round 3

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted mob extortionist William "Willie the Rat" Cammisano is moving toward the Supreme Court in Round 3 of a historic battle with Congress over its power to imprison witnesses who refuse to talk.

Camisano lost — and Congress won — the first two rounds in federal trial and appellate courts. His attorney, Bruce Houdek of Kansas City, Mo., says he's prepared to carry the fight to the Supreme Court.

The Camisano case is the first test of a 1978 law making it easier for Congress to force witnesses to testify or go to prison.

Houdek and congressional lawyers agreed that the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in the case last week was an important victory for Congress.

"I think it's wrong, but it is very significant," Houdek said in an interview Monday.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who launched the Camisano case when his subcommittee subpoenaed the Kansas City mobster to testify at crime syndicate violence hearings a year ago, said the decision "has lasting significance" in the history of the Senate.

The case demonstrates "convincing evidence that the U.S. Senate is willing and determined to follow through in its oversight function and investigative powers," Nunn told the Senate last Thursday.

Miami school board to hold homes for teachers

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Miami School Board members decided against purchasing real estate in Miami for incoming teachers but agreed to hold rent homes or apartments this summer for teachers moving to Miami this fall.

"We are not going to give anyone a home, but due to the housing shortage here we can reserve the properties until the teachers arrive," School Board President Jimmy Bowers said, during a special session of the school board Monday.

Teacher housing had been discussed at the previous regular school board meeting and Bowers was appointed to study the problem.

The Miami School District will need to replace six teachers for the 1981-82 session and housing has been a problem for the incoming teachers, according to Bill Vestal, Miami School Superintendent.

"I can't hire teachers if we do not have housing — especially (hiring teachers) on a one-year contract," Vestal said.

"We are not trying to spend the school district's money for real estate, but we are in a bind for teacher housing," Bowers said.

The Miami School District has owned homes for teachers in the past and found upkeep was a problem. Having some teacherages (homes for teachers) also caused problems among the other teachers who were not getting a home," Miami resident John Sebastian told the board.

Teachers coming to Miami will pay rent for the homes when they arrive," Bill Breeding board member said.

Miami board members also discussed hiring new teachers to fill positions for school principal, kindergarten teacher, librarian, band director, girl's coach, and math teacher.

The resignation of Miami School Principal Bob Burgoon had been accepted at the earlier board meeting.

"Mr. Burgoon has been here for eight years and will be relocating. We will miss him," Vestal said.

Pope's assailant tells of plans to kill dignitaries

Queen Elizabeth II, Waldheim targeted

ROME (AP) — The man accused of shooting Pope John Paul II told police he made plans to kill Queen Elizabeth II of England and considered killing U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim or Simone Veil, president of the European Parliament, a well-placed police source said today.

But Mehmet Ali Agca told police during questioning Monday that he finally chose the pope as his target because his personal ideology would not permit him to kill a woman and he could not fly to New York to kill Waldheim, the source told The Associated Press in an interview.

"He told us he went to London to make plans," said the police source, who asked not to be identified. The source said Italian police have asked British police to confirm Agca's description of his trip to England is true.

The source said the suspect, who is held at police headquarters with five guards in his room, told police he wanted to draw attention to the problems of developing countries by killing someone he considered a symbol of imperialism.

"He's a very strict Moslem," the source said. "He doesn't drink alcohol, he doesn't smoke, he won't eat pork. He hardly sleeps at all. He sleeps in an arm chair with his elbows on a table. He won't sleep in bed."

Agca escaped from a Turkish jail in November 1979 where he was awaiting trial on charges of murdering a journalist. He was convicted in absentia in April 1980 and sentenced to death.

Police believe extreme right-wing Moslem fundamentalist groups in Turkey helped him escape from jail and obtain a false passport that allowed him to travel in half a dozen European countries and six Italian cities.

Agca has insisted that he acted alone for "ideological" reasons, telling police he got money by extortion — not from a political group.

"He calls himself an idealist who acted completely alone," said another official who asked to remain anonymous in another interview. "He said he did it as a noble act to attract public attention to the problems of the Third World, to the imperialism of the United States and the Soviet Union."

Italian regulations prohibit members of the special anti-terrorist squad of the police from being quoted by name in the press without authorization from the Interior Ministry.

The police source told The Associated Press that investigators believe there is a "fifty-fifty" chance that Agca acted alone, both in the planning of the attack against the pope and in the execution, as he claims.

But there is also a strong possibility that he had financial help from rightwing Turkish nationals in West Germany and possibly other countries, the source said.

House members' wealth - and debts - disclosed to public

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. James Collins has several million dollars in assets. Rep. Fernand St Germain could be approaching the million mark in liabilities and Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. probably has the most valuable bird in the House.

Those are just a few of the highlights from the financial disclosure statements released by House members Monday. The Senate is scheduled to release its forms Wednesday.

The forms show at least 21 House members have more than $1 million in assets and another 55 have holdings that could approach or top that mark.

But the House is not just the home of the wealthy. Fifty-five members reported no holdings other than their private residences. And another 39 reported assets of less than $50,000.

Most members fell within the comfortably fixed category with outside assets in the $50,000 to $300,000 range and outside income of more than $10,000. Those figures don't include the congressional salary of $60,662 a year. Neither do they include the value of homes or cars.

It's impossible to tell who the richest member of the House is. The forms give only ranges of values and the highest range has no upper limit. In addition, some members included assets of their spouses while others did not, some listed their homes while others did not and some listed no value for their homes but included their home mortgages as liabilities.

But several members are obviously well off, reporting income from their investments last year that far surpassed their congressional salaries.

Rep. Sedgwick William Green, R-N.Y. reported he made at least $471,000 in dividends, interest and capital gains last year on assets of at least $2.6 million. Collins, a Texas Republican, reported income of at least $375,000.

County jail certified

By FRED M. PARKER
City Editor

Gray County's jail Monday became one of 85 county lockups throughout the state meeting the minimum jail standards of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

A certificate recognizing that the county jail, located in the northeast corner of the fourth floor of the Gray County courthouse, meets the standards was presented to County Judge Carl Kennedy and Sheriff Rufe Jordan late Monday afternoon.

Presenting the certificate, which the sheriff said will be framed and placed in a prominent spot in his office, was Joe Slator, supervising inspector of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

Slator had spent Monday inspecting the jail, which he said was in excellent condition "for its age."

The state inspector reported the minimum standards for county jails deal with life safety, security, sanitation and proper supervision.

He stressed, however, "that because the jail is in compliance today, there is no guarantee it will be in compliance the next time we inspect it."

Slator explained that the main reason for a jail, which has been in compliance, failing to pass a state inspection is because of overcrowding.

date because of the low jail population and keeping the number of prisoners in each cell low.

During a tour of the jail with Judge Kennedy, both Jordan and Slator noted the variable intensity night lights and the emergency lights recently installed. Cleanliness of the jail was also evident.

Noting he was speaking on behalf of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards following the inspection, Slator said, "The Gray County officials, Judge Kennedy, the four county commissioners and Sheriff Jordan and his staff, are to be commended for this splendid accomplishment. This is not due to any one person, but to all working together."

The state official added, "The taxpayers should be proud they have elected officials who have been able to achieve this result at minimum costs."

"Having achieved compliance with the Texas Jail Standards and with continued attention at this level, you can be assured that ... volous complaints and lawsuits will not be looked upon favorably by the federal courts."

Slator explained that compliance with the laws of the State of Texas serves "to protect you as these rules and statutes have been tested and upheld on numerous occasions by the federal courts."

The jail inspector concluded, "I would like to add my congratulations to these officials. It is a pleasure to work with them."

House speaker's day benefits Boys Ranch, Girlstown USA

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The current members honored the current speaker, and the current speaker honored the former members. It was Speaker's Day in the House on Monday and Speaker Bill Clayton celebrated by hosting the first reunion of all former members.
 During the day a total of $38,130 was donated in honor of the speaker. The money is to be divided between Cal Farley's Boys Ranch at Tascosa and Girlstown USA at Whiteface and Borger.
 Nine former speakers were introduced, and about 275 former members lined up to introduce themselves.
 "This is the first time in my 20 years here that we've allowed lobbyists on the floor of the House," Clayton said as he gazed out on the former lawmakers, many of whom have become law-pushers.
 The older former members returned to a changed chamber. There's electronic voting now, and each representative is backed by a staff of aides and secretaries.

 It was not the way Harry McKee, 88, recalled the Depression-era House he served in from Port Arthur.
 "We served for $10-a-day and we didn't have administrative assistants," he told the House, recalling the bank of stenographers who waited at the back of the House.
 McKee lost by a year to Charlie Pigg of Waxahachie in the oldest former member contest. Pigg, who served from 1943 to 1950, drew no opposition from the current lawmakers when he said, "I do believe all members of the Texas Legislature are just a little bit above the average fellow in morality and intelligence."
 Pigg said he once drew support for a bill by saying he was a distant relative of former Texas Gov. Jim Hogg.

Jess Osborne, who once represented the West Texas district Clayton now serves, was the third oldest alumnus at 86.
 House Dean Bill Healy, D-Paducah, looked at former members and warned his colleagues, "All these old men ... they're the ones who saved Texas. Let's not give it away." Healy, a 14-term member, introduced former Speakers, Robert Calvert, Claude Gilmer, Durwood Manford, Ruben Senterfitt, Waggoner Carr, Byron Tunnell, Ben Barnes, Jim Turman and Rayford Price.
 Most of the former members announced only their name and years served. Others could not resist the lure of the front microphone in the House.
 "In four years in the House and 18 years as a lobbyist I never lost a vote in the House," boasted D.W. Buchanan of New Braunfels, who later became a Texas Brewers Institute lobbyist.

Border cities resolve difference

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - El Paso and Juarez have settled differences over tourist traffic across the international bridge linking the two border cities with an agreement one official plans to present as a model relationship at the Border Governors Conference.
 Before Monday's announcement, El Paso officials complained that too few guides were available and that Mexican regulations requiring detailed information on tours months in advance were unreasonable.
 Juarez officials have said that organized tours from the United States have ignored the Mexican law requiring the use of Mexican guides.
 El Paso Public Transit administrator Karl Tesch said Monday he hopes to present the agreement that has ended the squabble as a model relationship at the Border Governors Conference scheduled for September 1 and 2.
 The complaints arose due to "misunderstandings" after the recent appointment of a new head of the Juarez delegation of the Mexican Federal Department of Tourist Services.

 Francisco Balderas Munoz said he would enforce the Mexican federal tourism laws to their fullest extent after taking office.
 Balderas said Monday, however, that after consultations with federal, state and city officials, his department decided to expedite the paperwork involved in tourist visits.
 Tesch said he had agreed two years ago to begin providing letters on information about each tour to the Mexican authorities.
 This certificate, however, came to be thought of by officials as a requirement. Balderas said the practice would be discontinued.
 Regulations require that any U.S. tour making more than two stops in a Mexican town have a Mexican guide.

 Balderas said it is important to have a competent guide so tourists can "learn the history of our people."
 However, he admitted that the five guides now registered with his office are not enough to fill the demand.
 Until that situation is corrected, buses from El Paso will be allowed to give tours without guides if none is available, Balderas added. He said, more guides will be provided on the basis of studies recently done by the two cities.
 Balderas did ask that tourists in El Paso for pre-planned conventions notify Juarez officials a month in advance of their intention to visit.
 He has pledged, however, to reorganize his department. In addition, he said discussions had been held with the city's police department as well as the federal Transit Police to encourage them to be more helpful to both Mexican and U.S. visitors.

Americans cutting back on spending

WASHINGTON (AP) - American consumers are finally cutting back their spending, and the national economy is slowing down with them, a new government report indicates.
 Personal consumption spending increased 0.2 percent in April, the Commerce Department reported Monday. But that plus undoubtedly would have been a minus had not inflation driven up the prices of goods.
 Such spending, which makes up more than 60 percent of the gross national product, had risen 1.4 percent as recently as January. But then it leveled off at about the rate of inflation before dropping in April.
 The Commerce Department was releasing revised first-quarter GNP figures today, and analysts said in advance that the revision could show even more strength than the robust 6.5 percent growth reported last month.

But they also said that the growth was concentrated in January and that the economy has slowed considerably since then.
 Two Commerce reports released Monday seemed to back that up, indicating that:
 -Personal income rose only 0.6 percent in April, the smallest increase since last June, while spending climbed 0.2 percent, the smallest rise since last May.
 -Housing starts rose 4.2 percent last month, making up only a little of the 27 percent decline recorded in February. And the department's acting chief economist, William Cox, said that "the housing sector is without a doubt going to be a negative influence on the next couple of quarters" of overall economic growth.
 A separate Federal Reserve Board report showed U.S. manufacturers operating at 80.3 percent of capacity in April. That 0.3 percentage point increase - to the highest level in a year - was considered an indication that producers are not about to shut down entirely in the face of reduced consumer spending.

 Taken together, the reports appeared to show the sluggish, basically flat economy that most economists - including those in the Reagan administration - have been talking about for some time.
 Personal consumption spending, one of the most important fuels the economy runs on, "seems to have come to a halt," Cox said.
 He noted that after taking inflation into account, spending showed no gain in February and actually declined about 0.1 percent in March. And April will probably be even lower when inflation figures are announced, he said.

Model student charged with girl's murder

CHICAGO (AP) - Friends and teachers see 18-year-old George Jones as a model student - a gifted actor, a track team hurdler, editor of the school newspaper and a popular "class clown" active in school affairs.
 They were stunned by charges that this clean-cut, well-dressed son of a Chicago policeman is a killer.
 Authorities and a 10-year-old boy in a hospital bed accuse Jones of being the intruder who viciously attacked the boy and brutally murdered his 12-year-old sister in their South Side home.
 As editor of his high school newspaper, Jones wrote with contempt of the violent society that bred the assassination attempt on President Reagan and the gang-related slaying of a classmate earlier this year.

And now, just weeks before his graduation, Jones has been charged with murder and aggravated battery.
 Jones is not permitted to talk with reporters, but his lawyer said the youth denies the charges.
 Sheila Pointer, 12, was sexually assaulted and fatally beaten, and her brother, Purvy Pointer Jr., was attacked and nearly killed when someone entered their house while their parents were away May 4. Jones lives near the Pointers.
 Police recovered a lead pipe, which they believe to be the murder weapon. No motive has been established for the attack, police say.
 After the slaying, Jones discussed the incident with his friends. "How can somebody do such a thing to an innocent little girl?" one friend quoted young Jones as saying. "She didn't even have a chance to grow up."

 But young Purvy kept repeating the name "George" the first few days after the incident, his mother said.
 Detectives had to wait a week before they questioned the boy because he was so seriously injured. But detectives took a photograph of Jones to the hospital last week and Purvy "began to cry and stated that (Jones) was the man who had come in his house and hit him and his sister on the head," according to the police report.
 Jones, who told police he had been home at the time of the beatings, also was identified by the boy when they took him to Purvy's hospital bed, police said.

Pope has breakfast, fever down

ROME (AP) - Pope John Paul II sipped tea with milk for breakfast today, the first time he swallowed liquids since he was shot last week, and doctors said the pontiff had almost no fever when he woke after a tranquil night.
 "I feel better than in the previous days," John Paul was quoted as saying by urologist Eugenio Alcini, one of the pontiff's doctors at Gemelli Policlinico Hospital.
 "The pope has slept seven hours without the use of sedatives," Alcini told reporters. He said the pope's temperature at 8 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT) was 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. The pope had been running a fever of around 100.4 for the past five days.
 A well-placed police source, asking not to be identified, told The Associated Press that the man accused of shooting the pope, 23-year-old Mehmet Ali Agca, made plans to kill other international leaders, including Queen Elizabeth II of England.

 The Italian news agency ANSA reported that police were searching for an Austrian man who once owned the pistol allegedly used to shoot the pontiff.
 Alcini said the pope "has resumed oral feeding" six days after a bullet ripped through his abdomen and another wounded his arm. "He had the breakfast of tea with milk," the doctor said.
 The daily medical bulletin issued by the hospital also reported that the pope's temperature had largely disappeared and that he had taken his first liquids. He has been fed intravenously since the shooting.

 The pope celebrated his 61st birthday Monday by moving out of the intensive care ward to an 11th-floor hospital suite with a view of the dome of St. Peter's Basilica in Vatican City.
 "From here I can see my beautiful Saint Peter's. It's certainly the nicest present that you could have given me," the Rome daily Il Tempo quoted the pontiff as saying when he arrived in his new room.
 Dr. Emilio Tresalti, chief of medical staff at Gemelli Policlinico Hospital, said in a telephone interview that the pope's recovery was proceeding well.
 "He is a strong man and his body is responding well to treatment. He is recovering very quickly," Tresalti said.

Senate gives textbook bill a final look

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas taxpayers may furnish private schools with the same free textbooks given public school students under a measure that gets final Senate consideration today.
 Senators tentatively approved the measure 21-9 on Monday.
 Opponents argued it would increase costs to tax payers while supporters said it would save tax money by educating more students in private schools.

"This is the beginning of a program to increase dramatically the cost to the people of this state," protested Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin. "People are removing their children from public schools to enter private schools of their choice and I don't think we should have to pay the increased cost."
 "Private schools are saving Texas taxpayers about $415 million a year now because about 150,000 students are going to private instead of public schools," argued Sen. Tati

Santiesteban, D-El Paso, sponsor of the measure.
 The bill says that the same textbooks adopted by the State Board of Education for public schools "shall be furnished without cost to students attending non-public schools."
 The Legislative Budget Board estimated the bill would cost $12.7 million from the state's general revenue fund for the 1981-82 school year, plus $3.3 million for each succeeding year.

Horse betting bill in starting gate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House members thought they were free of the fear of having to cast a politically dangerous vote on legalization of horse race gambling this session.

But the fear revived Monday night when Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, told them he was releasing the grip that had kept the horse racing bill from reaching the floor after the House State Affairs Committee had approved it.

Uher, the committee chairman, had blocked the bill by the simple method of failing to sign the committee report. Last Thursday, the House refused to force him to sign.

The committee approved the bill May 11 by an 8-7 vote that set horse racing lobbyists to cheering.

Uher announced Monday night he had signed the report.

"You can anticipate voting on pari-mutuel wagering some time in the near future," he told the House.

Rep. Susan McBee, D-Del Rio, chairwoman of the House Calendars Committee, indicated the measure probably would come up next Wednesday — five days before the legislative session adjourns.

That means House members would be making a record on a bill that has virtually no chance of passing both the House and the Senate before adjournment day.

"It's going to be treated like any other bill — no better and no worse," Mrs. McBee said.

Uher had said he feared the racing lobby would spend large amounts of money in the next election to defeat representatives who voted against horse race gambling. Meanwhile, many House members have large constituencies of Southern Baptists who historically have opposed pari-mutuel wagering.

Rep. John Whitmire, D-Houston, jokingly asked Speaker Bill Clayton to indicate when pari-mutuel would be on the calendar because some members might come down with "illnesses or chest pains" that day.

Uher said he had been under no pressure from Clayton to release the bill, which is sponsored by Clayton's close friend, Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston.

Uher said he signed the report after the committee staff finished all the necessary paperwork on it.

"I could have withheld my signature, but I think the House would object to that kind of conduct by a chairman. It would be a violation of the rules. If there was any other way to hold the bill I would have done it," Uher said.

Washington's bill would allow race track betting only in counties where approved by a majority of the voters in a local option election. Racing and betting would be regulated by a State Racing Commission.

Congressional redistricting bill advanced by House favors GOP

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas House, where Democrats outnumber Republicans three-to-one, has voted for a congressional redistricting bill that one Democrat called a coup for the GOP.

House members tentatively approved the bill Monday, 103-41, with a final vote set for today.

The bill assigns the three new congressmen Texas receives by virtue of the 1980 census to Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas where the GOP has made sizeable gains in recent years.

Reps. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, and Gene Green, D-Houston, said the House redistricting committee bill — despite Democrat control of the House — would give all three new seats to Republicans.

The leader of the Mexican-American caucus asserted that blacks and Hispanics had been "pitted against each other" in the jockeying for votes.

The bill allocates one of Texas' three new congressional seats to a Dallas-Fort Worth mid-cities area, another to Houston and the third to an area dominated by Houston but including suburban and rural counties to the north and west.

Corpus Christi is split, with most Anglos going into a coastal district that runs north into Brazoria County while Mexican-Americans join the district of U.S. Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-Laredo.

Mexican-American legislators protested the division to no avail.

Green, majority whip, failed in an 86-58 vote to put across an alternate redistricting plan approved by most members of the House Democratic Caucus.

The caucus plan would have preserved the re-election chances of Congressmen Bill Patman, D-Ganado, and Jim Mattox, D-Dallas, whom the House redistricting committee plan shoved into politically unfavorable new territory.

It also would have placed the three new districts in a Mexican-American area of South Texas, a solidly Democratic section of Houston and an area taking in parts of Tarrant, Collin and Denton counties. Nueces County (Corpus Christi) would have gone entirely into the South Texas district.

In our plan, there are three new districts that could be filled by Democrats. Under the committee plan, there are three new congressional districts that probably will be filled by Republicans," Green said.

Green urged Democrats to reject bipartisanship, saying states with Republican-controlled legislatures were doing no favors for Democrats in their redistricting plans.

He also appealed to the state representatives to consider the impact of redistricting on the chances of House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, to become speaker when Tip O'Neill steps down. Wright's chances depend on continued Democratic control of the U.S. House.

"I don't think we should get into Republican versus Democrat. That is really not our purpose. We need to look at the plan in terms of basic fairness and compliance with the law," said Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, redistricting committee chairman.

Blacks voted against the Democratic Caucus plan because it did not carve out a district in Dallas County that a black congressional candidate could win.

Mexican-Americans supported the caucus plan because it included a new South Texas district where a Hispanic could be elected to Congress.

"I'm embarrassed to be here when we and the blacks are pitted against each other," said Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, chairman of the Mexican-American caucus.

It was discovered over the weekend that the committee map put U.S. Reps. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, and Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson, in the same district.

Von Dohlen said the pairing was accidental and would be corrected by the House-Senate conference committee that will write the final bill.

"We must face up to the fact that partisanship has finally arrived in the Texas House. The Republican Party has effectively put together a bill that guarantees them three new seats and defeats two Democratic congressmen."

The Republicans are to be applauded. This is one of the finest political maneuvers I've seen in five terms in this body," Coleman said.

Von Dohlen said the bill would comply with the U.S. Voting Rights Act by neither diluting minority political strength nor "retrogressing" — giving minorities fewer congressmen than they have now.

New taxpayer notice of levies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senators quickly approved and sent to the governor Monday a House-approved "truth-in-taxation" bill.

"Some of these counties have been telling the people that the Legislature raised property taxes in 1979 when we did no such thing," said Sen. John Wilson, D-La Grange.

The bill would require that taxpayers be told the whole story when they are asked to pay their taxes. This is a "truth-in-taxation notice" bill.

The bill would require that any person whose property value has been increased by more than $100 above last year must be told the value of the property the preceding year, the amount of taxes imposed the preceding year, the value of property for the current year and the amount of current taxes according to the assessment ratio.

Unions give fishermen support

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Commercial fishermen protesting a proposed ban on redfish and trout catches courted support from coastal labor unions as they extended their floating picket lines to the upper Texas coast.

The fishermen, who oppose pending state legislation that would allow sport fishermen to catch redfish and spotted trout during the two-year ban on commercial harvests, have been demonstrating along lower coastal waters since Friday.

The Corpus Christi local of the National Maritime Union of America Monday agreed to back the fishermen, but spokesman Woodrow Nayer admitted the support would be mainly symbolic.

"We definitely sympathize with the fishermen's right to work and that's all we can do," Nayer said of the union that represents crewmen on ocean-going vessels.

It would take support from the International Longshoremen's Association and tugboat pilots, however, to shut down traffic at Texas ports.

"We're in support of them, but we can't have a stoppage of work. We'd be jeopardizing our own position," said Corpus Christi ILA local official Joe Galan.

Some tugboats in the Seadrift area sported signs supporting the commercial anglers, and many shrimpers stayed near shore to join the protests.

Organizer Janie Waghorne said four tug pilots observed the protesters' picket lines for up to six hours on Sunday.

"Every minute that tug sits there, that's money," commercial fisherman Ernie Butler said. "It doesn't look like we're blockading, but we're getting the job done."

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Stamp out marijuana prohibition

Every so often we entertain the opinion that efforts by the United States government to stamp out marijuana usage amount to nothing more than a gigantic welfare program for bureaucrats. They provide the Drug Enforcement Administration the opportunity to spend endless amounts of taxpayer money on programs it concedes in advance won't work, and take an occasional junket to South America. All this provides employment for a lot of bureaucrats and an occasional story for the newspapers. But it doesn't do the general public a bit of good.

Federal officials are now trying to develop a plan to destroy the U.S. domestic marijuana crop, though most of them concede in advance that it's likely to be an impossible job. The problem, they say, is that the governments of Colombia and Jamaica won't do much to destroy their own crops if they don't think U.S. authorities are coming down like stormtroopers. Some congressmen want to spray paraquat on domestic crops. The program of subsidizing the Mexican government to spray paraquat on marijuana there continues, even though Congress expressly tried to stop it in 1978.

Domestic marijuana growing didn't start in a big way until the U.S. government went into the paraquat program in Mexico. The full dangers of paraquat are somewhat in dispute, but it does make people sick, and our wise enforcers figured they could discourage marijuana smokers by making them sick. They spent at least $100 million of the taxpayers' money to subsidize the Mexican government's program of spraying paraquat on marijuana fields between 1972 and 1978.

The result was that budding entrepreneurs figured it was better to grow marijuana in the United States, where it's illegal to use paraquat. The weed is now the leading cash crop in several Northern California counties, despite sporadic and expensive enforcement efforts.

Now the feds want to launch an elaborate program to eradicate this crop. They figure that if we show we mean business, the governments of Jamaica and Columbia will then graciously accept more millions from U.S. taxpayers to spray paraquat on their crops. Each expensive enforcement technique opens the door for another, yet more expensive enforcement effort. It's all a bureaucratic empire builder's dream world.

The result has been to raise the price of marijuana. It has done little to reduce usage, just made it more expensive. That means organized crime, which used to leave grass to the amateurs and small-timers, is moving into marijuana. With the price higher, more muggings and petty crimes occur. The level of violence is approaching the level of hypocrisy.

It's about time to admit that the national experiment in prohibition of marijuana is as massive a failure as the national experiment in prohibition of alcohol was. Indeed, many historians contend that the campaign against marijuana took root in the efforts of federal officials to find something to justify their continued feeding at the federal trough when alcohol prohibition was lifted. It's time to end this particular fiasco. But this time we should abolish the Drug Enforcement Agency outright, and send the bureaucrats off to find honest employment, if they're still capable of doing honest work.

What a person chooses to ingest is his or her business. Maintaining a prohibition on marijuana makes no more sense than trying to prohibit tobacco or alcohol, the harmful effects of both substances being much more clearly documented. We don't think any of them should be banned. And we're a little tired of seeing taxpayers' money wasted in this futile effort when real crime is such a serious problem.

No incentive to save

There is no mystery about the failure of Americans to save. The government, through its tax and regulation policies, has given Americans every incentive to go into debt and little or no incentive to save and invest.

In the last quarter of 1979, the American savings rate as measured against individual's after tax income, dropped to its lowest level in 30 years — 3.3 percent. It was the first time it had been under 4 percent in any quarter since 1951.

In West Germany, the rate was 14 percent. There the government adds a bonus to special savings accounts that are frozen for six or seven years.

In Japan, the rate was 20 percent. The Japanese government exempts from taxes virtually all interest income earned by the average Japanese citizen. Part of the Reagan tax reduction package should be a generous exemption of interest income for American taxpayers.

Let Uncle Sam rely on nosy neighbors

Jane Q. Public, it's time to prune your family tree.

Uncle Sam's been watching you. Big Brother's been watching you. Now Mother Country's got the wants to watch.

And you better watch out.

There is a bill before Congress to spend federal money to promote "self-discipline and chastity" among teen-agers. Drafted by Sen. Jeremiah Denton, a Republican from Alabama, the proposed legislation enjoys broad support among his colleagues.

Denton's bill calls for the government to provide $30 million to continue the operation of centers that have been helping pregnant adolescents seek birth control information or devices.

Thirty million dollars. Could it be that Sen. Denton has failed to get the word that this is a time for austerity within the government?

The senator not only wants to ignore the call for cuts in government spending, but also desires to redirect the emphasis of the centers, 27 of which are now operating at sites across the United States.

He wants counselors to stop referring pregnant teen-agers to abortion clinics. And he wants clients to get their parents' permission before they get birth control information or devices.

Really now, Senator. Government isn't anyone's uncle. Or brother. Or mother. Or daddy, especially a Big Daddy.

And as for offering moral advice to teen-agers, well, nosy next-door neighbors already have that market cornered. And they don't cost the taxpayer a dime.

BY ROBERT J. WAGMAN

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Most political observers expect a match race for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination between former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Mondale has decided to maintain a low profile during the coming months while he concentrates on building a strong campaign organization. He is adhering to the traditional political wisdom of not getting out in front too early.

Kennedy, however, has opted for a very high profile. He is attempting to position himself as the keeper of the Democratic faith in a party short of leaders and as the most outspoken opponent of the Reagan administration in the Republican-dominated Senate.

Kennedy is using to great advantage his position as ranking Democrat on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. He has defined a whole range of issues on which he thinks his party should oppose President Reagan and has won agreement from committee Democrats to vote against the administration on many of them.

This may not do much to bring about the defeat of the president's proposals in the Senate. But Kennedy is gathering valuable IOUs from Democrats across the country by leading the defense of the programs and positions that they hold dear.

Kennedy and his staff have carefully chosen the issues on which he will oppose the administration and the Senate's conservatives. They include military aid to Saudi Arabia and El Salvador, re-establishment of close ties with right-wing regimes such as Argentina's that have less-than-glowing human-rights records, reduced federal support for health-care facilities and hospital cost containment, abolition of the Legal Services Corporation and cuts in spending on school lunches, education and fuel-cost assistance to the poor and the elderly.

The contrast in the approaches of Mondale and Kennedy could not have been more clearly shown than when they recently addressed a gathering of Democrats in Mondale's home state of Minnesota. The former vice president gave a safe speech in which he talked about the need to reunite the party before 1984 and to formulate new programs in light of the conservative shift in national opinion.

Kennedy gave a rip-roaring speech that was much more liberal in tone than Mondale's. "We will be ready with new ideas," said Kennedy, "but they will not be retreats of the reactionary nostrums of this day. They will be rooted in the time-tested values of the Democratic Party. . . . Let us resolve that we will not run from great political convictions for the convenience of the hour."

Kennedy's speech was well received by party activists in Minnesota, as it has been at other Democratic gatherings around the country. Its refusal to back away from traditional party values is clearly becoming Kennedy's theme for the future.

But Kennedy has a major obstacle to overcome before he can begin his 1984 presidential campaign: winning re-election to a fifth Senate term next year. Conservatives, especially the National Conservative Political Action Committee, have targeted Kennedy for defeat in 1982 and will spend millions of dollars trying to do so.

Most political observers in Massachusetts say that Kennedy should have little trouble defeating any candidate that the Republicans put up despite his losses in the 1980 presidential primaries, the recent break-up of his marriage and the continuing burden of Chappaquiddick.

But the senator and his staff are working not for a mere victory but for a landslide. They realize that Kennedy's biggest problem is the opinion among many Democrats he cannot win the general presidential election, especially at a time when the nation is becoming more conservative.

Kennedy's political advisers know that this notion will be one of the strongest factors working for Mondale and against Kennedy in 1984. They hope that a massive re-election victory will go a long way toward dispelling it.

What they do at those Rotary meetings

BY D.R. SEGAL

I live in a neighborhood in which my distinction lies in my appalling lack of considerable achievement. I do not own — or even lease — a Rolls Royce. I have never been a member of a Cabinet. I do not call him "Ronnie" and I am not of the opinion that R. Nixon was the victim of vicious pinkos with foreign names. When my neighbors talk about having sailed on the Titanic or flown with Orville and Wilbur, the best I can do is, "Well, I have been a Rotarian — twice." This does not establish me as a clean-up hitter.

However, there must be a lot of people who have never been Rotarians even once, and I am not going to blow off any mark of distinction, however piffling.

My first experience as a Rotarian was in South Texas where the local club had been dead last in the district attendance record for 10 years and running. We were all very proud of our unsurpassed mark, and every month the new rankings would come out and we would be at the bottom of the list again. There would be cheers and backslapping and we would go over the Rio to Mexico to celebrate the rewards of our aberrant behavior.

I don't know if you know it, but attendance is one of the most important things in the world of Rotary. If you die on Tuesday, your relatives are encouraged to ice you down until the Wednesday noon meeting, to keep the attendance record up. Our club was maverick, reveling as we did in our naughtiness, and I rather enjoyed it. We once decided to run a fellow for district governor, but he hadn't come to the meetings in so long we weren't sure he was still alive, so we abandoned the idea. It would not be good form to elect a deceased Rotarian to an office of that sort.

Years later I joined another Rotary club in North Carolina. They were gung-ho about attendance and quite serious about the whole thing. They had programs that consisted mostly of films lent to them by Mobil Oil and travel bureaus and government agencies, and as soon as the lights went off the room emptied.

This club was a very old one — like everything in North Carolina — and so were its members. In fact, most of them couldn't eat the standard grub and they didn't sit around the tables but occupied a line of chairs along the wall. I later realized that what was wrong with them was that they had been downing that Rotary chow for 25 years and it had got into their bloodstream and had poisoned them. I never was partial to fried meat, cold mashed potatoes, canned greens and banana pudding, so I didn't eat much. I just counted and joined the old busters in the Roloids line until the lights were dimmed and then I lit out. I resigned once and they turned me down, so I stayed on, except I began to miss more and more meetings and they finally churched me.

I know this does not sound like much to talk about when all your neighbors are recalling sailing with FDR on the Potomac or with the Duke on his minesweeper — but it's all I've got. Drat! Drat! Drat!

Across a crowded room

by ART BUCHWALD

Phyllis Schlafly testifying in front of the Senate Labor Committee on sexual harassment in the workplace: "When a woman walks across the room, she speaks with a universal body language that most men intuitively understand. Men hardly ever ask sexual favors of women by unwelcome sexual propositions or familiarities, obscene talk or profane language."

I never accept a statement from a Senate witness without first checking it out. So I went to a government agency the other day run by a friend of mine and showed him Mrs. Schlafly's statement.

"What do you want to do?" he asked. "I would like to observe the universal body language of your female employees, to see if they're saying anything."

"Be my guest," he said.

I went out into a large office and stationed myself near the water cooler.

In a few moments I noticed a woman walk across the room with a folder in her hands. Intuition told me she was trying to tell me something.

When she got to the cooler I said, "What were you saying with your body when you were coming over here?" I asked her.

"I was thirsty and wanted a drink of water."

"There was more to it than that," I challenged her. "I got the feeling you were going to say 'Yes.'"

"Yes, what?"

"Yes, please."

"Get out of my way, buster, before I kick you in the shins."

Please don't get upset. I'm just doing a study on sexual harassment in the office, and I felt that because of the way you were swinging your hips as you crossed the room, you were sending me a message."

"What kind of message?"

"Well if it wasn't clearly a 'yes,' it certainly wasn't a definite 'no.'"

"No what?"

"No, like in 'what kind of a girl do you think I am?'"

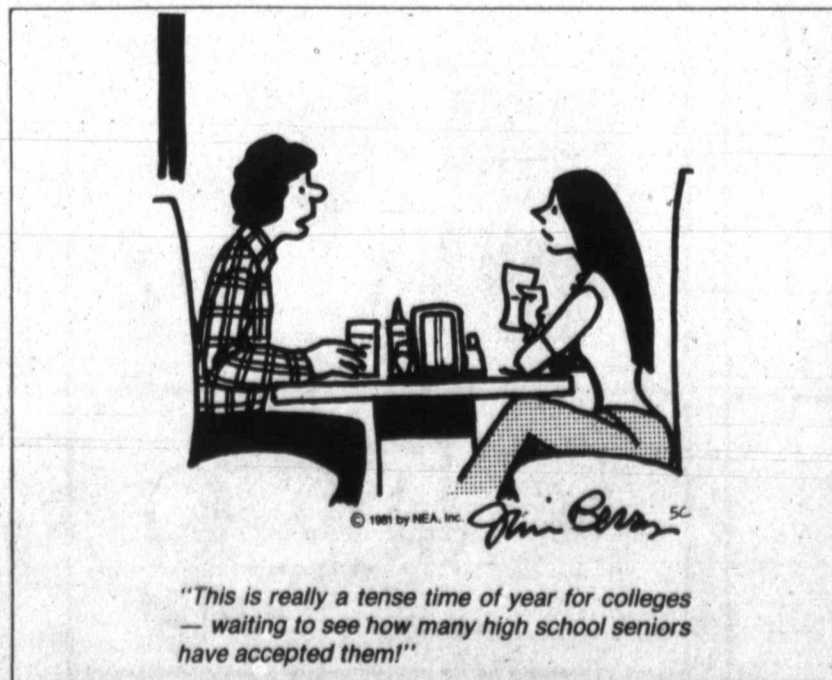

"What department in the government did you say you were from?"

"I'm not in any department. You see, Phyllis Schlafly, who is an expert on sexual harassment, testified that you can tell a loose woman from a virtuous woman just by the way she walks. There are certain women who men know instinctively are asking for it all the time."

"She sounds sick."

"On the contrary. She's a very distinguished member of the far right,

Some Texas Congressmen are millionaires

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 75 members of Congress have accumulated enough assets to make them millionaires — or very close to it — and 10 of them are from Texas, according to financial disclosure statements just released.

Rep. Jim Collins, R-Texas, is the richest of the Texans and among the wealthiest in all of Congress with assets of more than $4.6 million spread over a large number of stocks.

Congress released the financial statements Monday as required by the Ethics in Government Act.

Collins, a former insurance company executive, who is contemplating a challenge against Sen. Lloyd Bentsen next year, listed assets in 58 different ventures, plus stock dividends from 87 sources that netted him at least $375,000 in 1980 income.

Other Texas congressmen with assets clearly over $1 million are Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont; Rep. Sam Hall, D-Marshall; and Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall.

Brand hearing is underway

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Senate subcommittee hearing on the nomination of McAllen Mayor Othal Brand to the Texas Board of Corrections is expected to last at least two days, Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, said.

McKnight's office said Monday the Senate chamber had been reserved for Tuesday and Wednesday morning before the start of the regular Senate sessions.

"We're already had about 30 people who say they want to be witnesses," said McKnight, chairman of the nominating subcommittee.

After the hearing the subcommittee will make its recommendation to the full Senate, which must approve gubernatorial nominations by a two-third's vote in order for them to be effective.

Clements first picked Brand to replace Freeman Dunn of Houston, who resigned, then withdrew it April 27 after Brand became involved in a controversy over videotapes showing McAllen police beating prisoners.

Civil rights lawyers protested and asked for further investigation of Brand's qualifications.

After Brand was reelected as mayor on May 9, Clements submitted Brand's name to the Senate for the second time as a new TDC member.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, Brand's hometown senator, said he wanted to hear testimony before deciding if he would back Brand's nomination. Normally, fellow senators will respect the hometown senator's wishes in a governor's nomination.

They are among only 21 in the House of Representatives, although 55 others have enough assets to be millionaires also, if their assets are on the top side of the ranges they reported in various assets.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, heads six Texans who are among the "possible" millionaires. Others are Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston; Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Marlin; Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Dallas; Rep. Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson; and Rep. Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, the majority leader of the House.

On the other end of the scale, three Texas congressmen listed little or no assets.

In contrast to the vast holdings listed by the million-dollar club, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, listed a savings account with $477.13 and two certificates of deposit worth a total of $962.42, plus a $500 honorarium he earned for speaking last year at San Antonio Community College. He showed no debts.

"I have no other sources of income, property (tangible or intangible, corporeal or incorporeal or hereditary). Neither does my spouse or any relative to the 10th degree of consanguinity. I am, as always, a full-time congressman," Gonzalez wrote in the "income" space of his statement.

Gonzalez, a 65-year-old liberal Democrat, wrote: "No change; no income," in the assets column of his statement.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, also showed no assets and no debts. Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, showed only $1,000 to $5,000 in assets and listed three bank loans as liabilities: one over $50,000 and two of more than $15,000 but less than $50,000.

Hightower listed among "other income" a $12,847 stipend from the state of Texas for his 1980 pension benefits as a result of his service in the Texas Legislature. Other former members of the Legislature got similar income.

Congressmen were not required to list their $60,000 annual congressional salary.

They were asked to report their assets and liabilities in one of six categories: $1,000 to $5,000; $5,001 to $15,000; $15,001 to $50,000; $50,001 to $100,000; $100,001 to $250,000; and over $250,000. Collins' lengthy list of assets included holdings worth more than $250,000 in seven different accounts, holdings of $100,000 or more in 19 other accounts and $50,000 or more in 14 others.

While the lower range of his assets totaled $4.6 million, Collins' properties could be worth $8.6 million if they are on the upper side of the range he reported. Similarly, his 1980 stock income could be as much as $1,064,500 if those dividends were on the upper side of the range reported.

Brooks had at least $1.6 million tied up in 38 properties and 1980 earnings of at least $215,000, with a third or more coming from stock dividends.

Sam Hall showed 34 assets worth more than $1.5 million, with 1980 income of at least $43,500 from 29 sources, most of them oil properties.

Ralph Hall, a first-term congressman, showed $298,548 in earnings as a lawyer last year before giving up his seat in the Texas Legislature to come to Washington. In all, he had $323,527 in 1980 earnings and assets in 22 ventures worth at least $1.7 million, possibly as much as $2.7 million.

But he also showed the biggest liabilities, with 11 bank loans — including three of more than $250,000 — for a total of more than $1,040,000.

Brooks showed more than $415,000 in loans, with one loan of more than $250,000.

Wilson, whose investments included a number of oil properties, showed assets of at least $786,000 but possibly as much as $1.9 million and 1980 income of at least $90,000, perhaps as much as $280,000.

Rep. Richard White, D-El Paso, lumped several apartment properties together and listed their value as "over $250,000." He disposed of some of them before the year was up and showed loans in a range of $205,000 to $530,000, apparently to finance the ventures.

Wright's assets, as listed, are worth more than $516,000. But they include several oil investments and other properties listed as worth "over $250,000." At the top range, his assets would total $965,000, but could be worth over $1 million depending on how much more than $250,000 the individual properties are worth.

Senate committee rejects money market bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Senate committee has rejected a proposal investment officers claim would threaten the only chance middle-class America has to "offset the pain of inflation."

Sen. Bill Meier's proposal would only have required money market funds to report their finances every six months to the State Banking Department.

Several witnesses, however, told the Senate Economic Development Committee the measure was part of a scheme by banks and savings and loan institutions to force the funds out of Texas.

The committee voted 6-3 Monday to table the measure. Arnold Scott, senior vice president of Massachusetts Financial Services, said if the House-approved bill got to the Senate floor it would become a "Christmas tree for the proponents who came before this committee this morning."

"What they really want is to force money market funds out of Texas," said Scott.

A banker and representatives of savings and loan associations, builders, realtors and apartment owners supported Meier's proposal.

It was stated that money market funds have total assets of $117 billion, and DeWitt Hale of the Texas Association of Builders said $100 billion of that amount had been withdrawn from savings accounts.

Six million Americans, including 217,000 Texans, own shares of money market funds, which pay higher yields than savings accounts, the committee was told.

"Texans are now $160 million wealthier over the first four months of 1981 alone by virtue of their placement of funds in MMF's versus passbook savings accounts," testified George Morgan, finance professor at the University of Texas at Austin.

Austin lawyer C.C. Small Jr., general counsel for the Texas Savings and Loan League, said Texas savings institutions "are being crippled every day" by withdrawals that go into money market funds.

"Those being hurt are people who need capital to run businesses and to live on," said Small. "It's high time something is done in this state to help borrowers of money."

Witnesses for the funds said they already report four times a year more information than Meier's bill would require to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Texas Securities Board and six million shareholders.

Meier contended his bill was necessary because investors in funds that operate as business trusts could be liable for more than their original investment if the fund should fold.

Such dangers, said J. Leon Lebowitz, UT-Austin law professor, are "much more theoretical than real" and "extremely remote."

Not once in almost 50 years, he said, "has any shareholder of these funds been held liable for its debts solely because of his status as a shareholder or participant in a business trust."

A disclosure requirement such as Meier proposed would only create "uncertainty," said Harvey Pitt of Washington, special counsel for the Investment Company Institute, which has more than 500 member companies.

"From the standpoint of investor protection, there is absolutely nothing to be gained by superimposing another conflicting, regulatory structure on this industry," Pitt said.

"We should be here cheering and commending" money market funds — "not trying to pass restrictive and punitive legislation to destroy them," said Thomas Powers of Houston, president of Funds, Inc.

Paul Jacobs of the American Association of Retired Persons said the funds "are the first and only opportunity for small investors" to fight double-digit inflation. "It is his or her best chance of just staying even," he said.

Meier originally proposed strict state regulation of the funds, and the committee quickly approved his proposal as an amendment to an innocuous bill updating banking regulations.

Such a furor developed, however, that the Senate voted to send the bill back to committee for a full hearing on Meier's proposal.

Court limits officers' questioning of suspects

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday sharply limited police officers' ability to question criminal suspects who ask to have a lawyer present during interrogation while in police custody.

The nine justices voted unanimously to overturn the convictions of Robert Edwards, who was convicted of robbery, burglary and first degree felony murder stemming from an October 1974 armed robbery at a Tucson, Ariz., bar.

Edwards asked for a lawyer when he was arrested on Jan. 19, 1976, but the following morning was questioned by two police officers after being told he "had to" talk to them.

"An accused such as Edwards having expressed his desire to deal with the police only through counsel is not subject to further interrogation by the authorities until counsel has been made available to him, unless the accused himself initiates further communication, exchanges or conversations with the police," Justice Byron R. White said in an opinion for the majority. He was joined by Justices William J. Brennan, Potter Stewart, Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

The Supreme Court has held in a long line of decisions that a criminal suspect must be advised of his rights under the 5th and 14 amendments to remain silent and to have a lawyer present during police interrogation.

Senate committee approves farmers' land title resolution

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Senate committee once again has approved a measure that would let three Leon County farmers keep the land they've lived on for at least 50 years, even though the state actually owns it.

The House-passed proposed constitutional amendment written by Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston, and sponsored in the Senate by Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, clears a 140-year-old title defect and would let Jessie Johnson, 81, who finished paying for "his" property 40 years ago, keep his land.

Cotton production should rebound

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early indications point to a sharp rebound in U.S. and world cotton production in the coming year, the Agriculture Department says.

But the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Monday that the supply and demand situation for the 1981-82 marketing year that begins Aug. 1 will depend greatly on world economic and weather conditions in the next few months.

Even so, the experts say a world cotton harvest next year of 68.9 million bales is possible.

Cotton production in the 1980-81 year now is estimated at nearly 65.5 million bales, an increase of about 300,000 bales from indications a month ago, the agency said.

Despite the increase, cotton production this season still is expected to be slightly less than the crop of almost 65.7 million bales in the 1979-80 year.

All the increase in global cotton output was the result of an upward revision to 12.4 million bales in China's crop, the report said.

Total foreign cotton production was put at a record of 54.3 million bales, compared with about 51 million bales last year.

The 1980 U.S. cotton harvest, at 11.1 million bales, was unchanged from the estimate last month. Last year's U.S. crop, which was stricken by drought, was less than the 14.6 million bales in 1979.

World cotton use in 1980-81 was estimated at a record 66.2 million bales, slightly more than the 65.6 million used last season, the report said.

With use exceeding production, cotton inventories at the end of the 1980-81 season are expected to be drawn down further to about 21.3 million bales by Aug. 1, compared with about 21.9 million on hand a year earlier.

Looking at the U.S. potential, the report said a 1981 harvest of 13.8 million bales is possible because planting conditions "have been very favorable" and prospects now point to above-normal yields.

Prospects for China and India appear particularly good at this point," the report said. "In addition, the Soviet Union is expected to produce another large crop, although smaller than last year's record."

The fortunes of U.S. cotton producers, like many other farmers, are tied securely to exports and what happens elsewhere in the world market.

U.S. cotton exports this season are expected to be about 6 million bales, down from the 9.2 million of 1979-80. Some recovery, possibly to about 7 million bales, is in the works for 1981-82, according to the latest projections.

China has been a major U.S. customer and what happens there can have substantial impact on the outlook for American producers.

By comparison, U.S. textile mill demand remains slack at an estimated cotton use in 1980-81 of about 5.8 million bales, down from 6.5 million last year. Textile mill use could recover slightly next season to around 6.1 million bales, officials said.

World spot prices of cotton dropped again in April as mills continued guarded buying," the report said. "The slowdown in world textile demand and the cost of financing cotton stocks are dictating minimal inventories even as prices become relatively favorable."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says farmers must increase exports or fail.

"Let's face it," Block said in remarks prepared for delivery today to the Delta Council of Cleveland, Miss. "We really don't have any other direction to go. Producers in Illinois and Mississippi and many other states are capitalized to produce for exports."

"We have the equipment, the technology and the ability to produce. Unless we take the incentive to build a strong world market, we won't be able to survive, other than at the continued grace of the federal government. I don't want that for my future."

Block reiterated that he will be working to boost exports wherever possible and will be "looking at the world market situation with an emphasis on providing a climate in which the U.S. producer can expect to compete" on an equal and fair basis.

"We'll be looking at developments in other nations that could lead to greater restrictionism and instability in the European market," he said.

Block said he was certain this will be discussed in Rome at a meeting of the World Food Council, which he plans to attend later this month.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two agencies of the Agriculture Department have agreed to look into the possibility of extending federal crop insurance to tree farmers.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corp. and the Forest Service will conduct long-range pilot studies to see if such an insurance coverage is feasible. The project is supposed to begin in 1983.

Officials said the agencies will measure the risk involved and collect additional actuarial information from private forestland owners and others who have investments in forest resources.

Dear Abby

No free lunches - even for dogs

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the woman who brought her son to a doctor's office in an emergency without her checkbook: I assure you this happens all too often.

My husband is a veterinarian and I help in his office. "I forgot my checkbook" is a common excuse. It is often months and many reminders later before we're paid.

There are few products and services we can get without cash, check or charge (established credit, that is). And I'd like to see you get your car out of a garage after it's been repaired by saying, "I forgot my checkbook."

It's time for the consumer to realize that nothing is free, and there is no reason why a doctor or any other professional should extend credit to anyone who comes in off the street.

TIRED OF THOSE "CHECKS-IN-THE-MAIL"

DEAR TIRED: I agree. But in this case, the patient wasn't "off the street"; he was referred by his regular physician who was unavailable at the time of this emergency. Also, you can't compare a human with a broken arm to a Honda with a broken axle.

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 years old and have a problem. Softball starts soon, and it falls on the same day and time as my clarinet lesson. My parents want me to continue my clarinet lessons, but my softball coach can't change the practice time.

My clarinet instructor can't change my lesson time either. I want to play softball. Your reply will help us decide.

L. WAGNER, ELKHORN, NEB.

DEAR L.: Appeal to your clarinet teacher again. Surely there is one pupil who will change the time of his (or her) lesson to accommodate you. While sports is as important as music, a town the size of Elkhorn can't afford to lose a clarinetist to the softball team.

Dr. Lamb

Facts about iron intake

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know more about our body's iron requirements. Not long ago a boy died who received a lot of transfusions. His doctors said iron had built up in him and had killed him. Some vitamin preparations have as much as 50 mg of iron in them. Is this too much? I also read that phytic acid robs you of your iron. How are we to know whether we are getting the proper amount of iron and whether bran is absorbing it?

DEAR READER — Only about one-tenth of the iron in your diet is absorbed. Your body cannot eliminate iron easily and may lose only about one mg a day. For adult normal males a daily intake of 10 mg results in one mg absorbed and one mg eliminated — or a good iron balance.

Because we cannot eliminate iron easily except from bleeding, it follows that people who receive lots of blood transfusions for any reason other than to replace blood lost by hemorrhaging may have a build-up of iron from the hemoglobin in the transfused red blood cells. When too much accumulates, it can deposit in the liver and other tissues and cause damage.

There are a few instances where the intake of excess iron by mouth will result in too much iron build-up also. This is the main reason that the anticipated additional increase in iron content in bread never came to pass. In most of us the digestive system regulates how much iron is absorbed. If you have more than you need, the excess may not be absorbed.

Menstruating women need more iron than others. The requirements are increased in pregnancy and in growing children who need more iron for increasing amounts of blood cells.

The iron content of common foods is given in The Health Letter number 4-4, Iron and Anemia, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. You need to know that heme iron, found in meats, is better absorbed than iron in vegetables and cereals.

Your doctor can test your blood to find out if you need iron or not. In view of popular advertisements, I must add that very few people are tired because of iron-poor blood. Fatigue in most people is on an entirely different basis.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I got in a discussion at lunchtime where I work about iron in blood. One of the ladies told us that you should cook everything in an iron skillet and you wouldn't have trouble getting iron. She got very angry with me when I told her I had trouble with iron most of my life until I started eating iron-building food. She claims a doctor in New York told her this. Would you please write about this?

DEAR READER — The lady is absolutely right that iron cookware helps to provide essential iron in the diet. That includes iron pots for boiling water. A small amount of iron is then dissolved in the food during cooking and at one time this was a major source of absorbable iron for the body.

And you're right that certain foods can help. That includes meats that provide heme iron which is more effective than iron from plant sources. Liver is a good source.

Even with the best dietary and cooking procedures people who have increased iron requirements, such as women during the childbearing years and during pregnancy, often need additional iron supplements.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

When the kids were growing up, no one was more of an anti-mess militant than I. Call me a fanatic. Call me strict. Call me picky. But I insisted all food stored under the beds had to be covered. Windows had to be kept closed at all times to keep the pollution localized. And dead pets had to be buried underground.

That's when I was the nagger and they were the naggees.

The other day my son walked into my office and observed, "This place is a dump!"

"If you don't like it," I said, "you don't have to look at it. Just close the door."

"If I close the door, it's still a part of the house. What are you doing with dead flowers on your desk?"

"DON'T TOUCH MY DESK!" I said. "I know where everything is."

"And these old coffee cups. I cannot believe you are too lazy to carry them out to the kitchen."

"Look, do I come in your apartment and tell you how to live? This office is warm and lived-in and efficient. Everything I need is in the wastebasket and everything that should be thrown out is on my desk."

"My friends will never believe me when I tell them about this room," he said. "When was the last time this ironing board was down?"

"In 1971. The year we moved."

"And I suppose you are going to tell me you are going to return that soft drink cooler from wherever you got it?"

"I told you I'd return it to the garage and I will... when I get time."

"I certainly hope you're cleaner when you visit people. I'd be embarrassed to death to have people think you were my mother."

"You are confusing neat with clean. I wash my hair every day."

"I know. I just checked your bathroom and there are 36 pounds of hair in the drain. Is this sweater dirty?"

"No."

"Then what is it doing on the floor?" he asked.

"Did you want something?"

"I wanted to tell you to pick up this place. I have friends coming over."

"Kids! I'll be glad when I can get my own apartment."

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Partners will play important roles in your affairs this coming year, but they are likely to have the minor position while you have the major one. However, their backup will prove helpful when needed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have a slight edge today in business dealings. If you handle matters properly, you should come out with a profit. Check all the angles: Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Assert yourself in areas today where you feel you can do a better job than your associates. They'll follow your lead if you're on the right track.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Give-and-take is essential in dealings with coworkers today. You may be required to give a little more than they will, but all will even out later.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In activities with your peers today, you may find it difficult to take a back seat. Stand up for your views, but don't try to overpower pals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Major achievements are possible today, but you might not accomplish what you hope to on your first effort. However, be persistent. You can do it on the second try.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be flexible regarding your ideas and opinions today. Someone could have brighter thoughts than yours. Much can be learned by being a good listener.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a good possibility today that you can reap gains from a source which does not represent your usual channel of earnings. Keep all avenues open.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Partnership situations could prove very beneficial today, provided you work as a team. If your cohort is the stronger, let him or her be the front person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Some extra burdens may be placed on your shoulders today not entirely of your own making. They'll be annoying, but you'll handle them in stride.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Youngsters in your charge could be a trifle more rambunctious than usual today. Manage them with a firm hand, but don't try to break their spirit.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Confusion will ensue in your domestic affairs today if you give the family one set of orders and your mate gives them another. Pull together.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It may be necessary today to revise or adjust long-range plans in order to meet your immediate needs. Make changes where it is important.

Words of hope for voiceless

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tower Snow held his forefinger over a hole in his neck and wheezed a string of raspy words.

"Do you have any trouble understanding me?" the 72-year-old man asked a visitor at his Walnut Creek home east of here.

Snow's voice was a whisper. A few words were lost in a hiss of air. But most of his sentence came across.

A few months before, Snow "spoke" with an electronic gadget pressed to his throat. The retired insurance man is a laryngectomee, one of some 9,000 Americans each year whose larynx—or voice box—is surgically removed, usually because of cancer.

Snow now speaks with a feather-light, silicon tube, just over an inch long and rounded at one end into a one-way duckbill valve. The Blom-Singer device, named for its developers, stays in place in a surgically-made opening in his neck.

Snow is "absolutely delighted" with it. Doctors who treat such patients also are impressed with the device, now used by about 500 Americans.

"At the moment it's the best thing we have if you can't master esophageal speech," said Dr. Herbert Dedo, professor of otolaryngology at the University of California, San Francisco.

Doctors estimate that at least 50 percent of laryngectomees can't learn esophageal speech. It involves gulping air, forcing it down the esophagus instead of the windpipe and burping it into the pharynx, a cavity where a sound resembling a voice is made.

Lack of motivation, a poorly-trained speech therapist and the amount of tissue that was surgically removed usually figure in the failure, doctors say.

Before development of the Blom-Singer device, unsuccessful students of esophageal speech carried an awkward instrument, as Snow did, to communicate. Forgetting the device left one literally speechless.

The outlook for laryngectomees began to brighten considerably about three years ago when Dr. Mark Singer of Indianapolis began inserting a tube into a small opening between the trachea (windpipe) and esophagus—a hole created in a simple surgical procedure.

The device extends from a hole in the neck to just inside the esophagus. The small wings of the device are usually taped to the skin on the neck to hold it in place.

When the speaker blocks the opening in the neck with a finger, air passes from the lungs up the trachea and into the device through an opening in the bottom of the tube near the hole. A slit-like, one-way valve in the inner end of the tube lets air into the esophagus for speech. When the person isn't speaking, the valve stays closed.

The valve has disadvantages. The patient must remove the tube once a day to clean it. If the tube isn't quickly reinserted, the hole begins to close and sometimes must be reopened surgically.

Singer says about 90 percent of the 150 procedures he has done were successful. Dedo and other doctors who have done fewer such surgeries report a slightly lower rate of success. Success means giving patients a voice that's as good or better than esophageal speech.

Oddly enough, Singer said in a telephone interview, his procedure doesn't differ much from a technique used in what may have been the first laryngectomy, in 1873.

That operation probably succeeded, Singer said. But when patients survived laryngectomies back then, they often succumbed to infection.

But doctors are concerned that patients will become overly optimistic when they hear of the Blom-Singer device.

"I don't think it's the final word," said Dr. George Sisson of Northwestern University.

Jury information bill to inform of parole provisions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — R.A. Southard of Odessa served as foreman of a jury in 1974 that thought it had sent a man to prison for 99 years for the murder of an 81-year-old millionaire lawyer and rancher.

The murderer was released in April, and Southard says he agrees with Gov. Bill Clements that jurors should be told the parole mathematics that add up to shorter terms for many convicts.

Southard learned from a reporter that Bill Scott was out of prison, paroled by Clements.

"It doesn't amount to a darn thing to sentence a man to 99 years and he's out in 13," he said. "I didn't expect him to serve 99, but I thought it would be longer than 13."

That's Clements' point in his jury information bill. Backers say it would "take the blindfold off jurors" as they decide prison terms.

Scott was convicted of killing Odessa lawyer Paul Moss during a 1967 burglary. He pleaded guilty at his first trial and got 25 years. He served six years before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals granted him a new trial. Scott was assessed 99 years by Southard's jury. He served seven years after the verdict. The 13 years plus "good time" credits added up to 26 years' credit toward his sentence and made him eligible for parole.

The Scott case is a gray-area case. Moss was killed in a bizarre, probably unintentional manner.

At the time Scott was 39. The victim was a venerable old Odessa lawyer and rancher, known as "Judge."

Scott told police he stalked Moss and cased the lawyer's office.

On May 11, 1967, Scott went to the office to burglarize it. Moss came in and Scott hid in a bathroom, until he made a dash for the door. Moss was standing on a chair, putting books on a shelf.

"My going by him startled him and caused him to fall from the chair. I heard two big crashes, a big one and a small one," Scott told police.

"Mr. Moss had fallen on the floor and he was bleeding pretty bad and gurgling and spitting up blood."

Scott left the office, bought a newspaper and returned to the office. He took keys from Moss' body and stole some blank checks. He forged Moss' signature and cashed a $12,300 check and a $9,321 check.

He fled and was caught in Colorado after several months.

He pleaded guilty, but won a new trial because he had not fully been warned of the implications of his plea.

The new trial ended with Southard's jury recommending the 99-year sentence.

"I knew that they do get out on a real short term occasionally," jury foreman Southard said. "I guess I'm not really all that astounded."

Clements says jurors should know the parole rules, rather than guessing the result of their verdicts in real prison time. The governor's bill has not yet made it to the floor of either house for debate.

David Dean, head of the governor's clemency division, said Scott won parole because of his excellent record in prison and the questionable nature of Moss' death.

"He did not, in fact, beat him to death," Dean said.

Scott earned 52 hours of college credit and served as an ambulance driver while in prison.

Scott, released to his family in Houston, had been denied parole on five previous applications, Dean said. This time the numbers and circumstances were right.

"You've got a 53-year-old man with credit for 26 years, with some of the facts in dispute, with no protest from the trial officials, with recommendations from the Texas Department of Corrections, ... it's not unusual at all," said Dean.

Clements' bill would have allowed Southard to get a clearer picture of what the 99-year sentence meant, Dean said. In this case, the only greater option was a life sentence, which has the same effect as 99 years.

Matney signs with Tech

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech track coach Corky Oglesby signed his first recruit of the 1981 season Monday when he received the signature of Slaton shotputter Ken Matney on a letter of intent.

Matney, 5-10, 220-pounder is a two-time district and regional champion and finished third in the state as a junior and senior.

This year he set a district record with a throw of 58-7 and a regional record with a throw of 59-9 1/2. The regional record was the sixth best throw in the state for all classes.

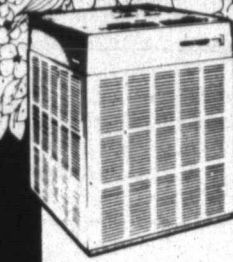

"We really needed help in the shot put, and we feel like Kenny will be a very good boost to us," Oglesby said.

Spring game scheduled Friday

Pampa High's annual Green-Gold spring football game kicks off at 7:30 p.m. Friday night, and it promises to be a real crowd pleaser, if not the real thing.

"The players are really excited about it," Harvester head coach Larry Gilbert said. "We feel the fans are going to enjoy it too. We're going to try and conduct the scrimmage as close to a real game as possible. We'll be kicking extra points this year, and we may do some punting. I just don't know about that yet."

Following the spring game, there will be a hamburger supper in the high school athletic barn.

All Harvester fans are invited to the supper, sponsored by parents of the football players. Gilbert said there was a lot of needed improvement in Saturday's scrimmage.

"The offensive line was getting off the ball better, and we had better timing overall," Gilbert added.

Rangers pound Tigers for 19 hits

DETROIT (AP) — The Texas Rangers were due. Manager Don Zimmer was sure of it.

No baseball team with a .289 batting average and starters the likes of Al Oliver, Micky Rivers, Bump Wills, Pat Putnam and Bobby Bell — all of whom hit .290 or better — can be denied runs forever.

So Zimmer wasn't surprised when his team, which had scored only one run the entire weekend in two games against the Chicago White Sox, bounced back Monday night with a vengeance, connecting for 19 hits and a 13-5 American League victory over the Detroit Tigers.

"We just were due to hit tonight, and tonight we hit," said Zimmer. "We just went 18 innings and got one run, so I guess we were overdue."

"Texas was hitting everything," agreed Detroit catcher Lance Parrish, who watched five pitchers troop to the plate trying to stop the Texas barrage.

"I don't think it mattered who was up (pitching)."

"You'd throw fast balls and they'd hit fast balls. You'd throw sliders and they'd hit sliders. You'd try curve balls and they'd hit curve balls."

The Rangers got all the pitching they needed from Jon Matlack, who went 7 1-3 innings for the win, improving his record to 2-3.

In his last three starts, Matlack came away with two no-decisions and one defeat. In all three games, he had left the game with the Rangers ahead, only to have the bullpen fail to protect his lead.

This time, however, there was little doubt that Matlack would win.

When he left the game for reliever Bob Babcock, the Rangers already were ahead 11-5 and Matlack said Zimmer jokingly told him, "I think I can win this one for you."

Dave Rozema finished up for the Tigers after the Rangers sent nine men to the plate in the third inning and 12 in the sixth, chasing four Tigers' pitchers in as many innings. Dan Petry, 1-3, took the loss.

Kevin Saucier, the one Detroit pitcher who was moderately successful against the Rangers, had to be pulled after pitching to four hitters in the fifth inning and one in the sixth when he dislocated his right shoulder trying to field Mario Mendoza's high bounce.

Saucier's shoulder popped back in almost immediately, but Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson had no idea how long Saucier would be lost to the club.

The victory, coupled with Oakland's 5-1 loss to Baltimore, gave Texas a 19-14 record and pulled the Rangers within 3½ games of the A's. Detroit fell to 16-18.

Tigers southpaw Dan Schatzeder, 1-2, faces Rangers right-hander Doc Medich, 3-2, in tonight's game.

Fans join players in Celtic celebration

BOSTON (AP) — Celtic green was the color of the day when thousands of whooping, raucous fans jammed into Boston's City Hall Plaza to celebrate the Boston Celtics' championship victory in the National Basketball Association.

The happy fans, estimated by some as high as one million, cheered Monday when they were shown the NBA trophy. They yelled when team members like Cedric Maxwell and Kevin McHale threw their hats to the crowd. But the biggest ovation came when Larry Bird, the Celtics star forward, came to the podium.

"After all the hollering and screaming I look out on the crowd and I see one thing that typifies our season," said the 6-foot-9 hero of the Celtics' victory over the Houston Rockets in the championship series.

Then, inspired by a crudely drawn sign held in the chanting audience, Bird used a scatological vulgarity in reference to Houston center Moses Malone. Malone angered the Celtics during the playoffs by dismissing them as an inferior team that he could beat with a "pickup" squad.

Spokesmen for Mayor Kevin H. White, quoting Police Superintendent Robert Bradley, estimated the plaza crowd at 50,000 to 60,000 and the crowd along a parade route at more than one million. However, given the modest crowds along portions of the parade route, the one million figure appeared to be high.

The crowd's enthusiasm resulted in three injuries when a young man standing on the roof of a subway entrance crashed through a plexiglass bubble, landing on two women.

The three were treated for cuts and sprains at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Vendors did a brisk business in Celtics pennants, T-shirts and bumper stickers as the crowd celebrated Boston's first champion sports team since the 1976 Boston Celtics. For many it was a welcomed respite from the city's months-long financial crisis that has threatened to close the city's schools for nearly a month.

"The Celtics have given Boston a tremendous uplift. There really is a Celtics pride. It is passed down from one generation of players to the next in the same way that pride in our city is passed along from parent to child," White said in a statement.

"It's good for the city," said John Luikert, an insurance claims adjuster who walked over to the rally from his office. "At least something in this city is run properly."

Bird, chosen by his teammates to speak to the crowd, offered his own observations on the city's plight.

"For the last couple weeks in the paper I've been reading about Boston going bankrupt," Bird said. "Well, I spent about two minutes up in Mayor White's office and all them people up there do is run around asking for autographs. Now I know why they're going bankrupt."

Bird said he could think of only one place he'd rather be: "French Lick," his Indiana hometown.

Garza typical of Indy's new breed of drivers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indy-style auto racing may have found some of the new blood it needs in Josele Garza, the fastest of 10 rookies in the field for Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

Garza, a handsome 22-year-old Mexican, will be starting his first Indy race in the second row, right behind four-time winner A.J. Foyt and next to three-time winner and defending champion Johnny Rutherford.

"That's real impressive company," said Garza, the first person from his country to qualify for the race. "It's exciting to be starting a race with Bobby Unser on the pole, A.J. ahead of me. And Gordon Johncock is on the same row as Rutherford and I."

Garza, who qualified his Penske-Cosworth with an average speed of 195.101 mph, says he hasn't planned any race strategy, but anticipates success if he keeps pace with the cars that will be near him when the race begins.

"It's really rewarding that I hit 195. It took a lot of patience by myself and the crew. When you're a rookie, you experience something wrong with the car and it's hard to explain," he said. "You go to the crew and you say, 'Well, the back end feels funny.' Then you have to sit and chat for some 15 minutes to find out exactly what's happening."

Garza, who began his racing career in go-karts in 1976, doesn't believe in setting goals that are easy to achieve.

"Indianapolis is the big place in racing. It's been my dream to be here. I didn't plan on being the first Mexican. That's something that just happened. But now that it has, I want to represent the country as good as I can."

He's not cocky enough to predict victory in his first try, but anticipates being in Victory Lane here before his career ends.

"And I also want to win a world driving championship," said Garza, who was to be honored today by the American Dairy Association of Indiana as the fastest rookie qualifier.

Garza, who crashed at Phoenix earlier this year on the third lap of his first Indy car race, says he has respect for the challenge of Indianapolis.

"It's a very tough track. The big names have been here quite a bit and they know a lot more about the track," he said. "I don't think anybody can learn everything about the track in a month."

He credits veteran driver Steve Krisloff, who became a teammate this month, with helping him here.

"He knows the track pretty well and he's been telling me about wind shifts and things like that," said Garza. "The track itself is very difficult to master. You cannot be aggressive. You have to try and be smooth. That's the name of the game."

Garza, Krisloff and rookie Geoff Brabham, the son of former Grand Prix champion Jack Brabham of Australia, all are carrying the colors of the Psachie-Garza Racing team in the 33-car field that will start the 65th Indy 500.

The cars are painted green, red and white — the colors in the Mexican flag.

On the light side

SIoux CITY, Iowa (AP) — Ronald Curry wonders if a submarine will be at his doorstep some morning this week when he comes to work A periscope appeared Monday. Packed in a heavy wooden crate, the 2,000-pound, 30-foot long optical instrument lay in front of Curry's business, KC Designs, when his employees came to work. The periscope is made out of brass with brass fittings and heavy flip-up handles at one end that manipulate a glass prism at the other end. Curry, a former aerospace engineer, guessed the periscope was of World War II vintage. He couldn't figure out what a periscope was doing in the middle of the great plains, much less in front of his business. Armed with the serial number, Curry says he thinks he will be able to track down the manufacturer and possibly find out if it once belonged in a submarine.
