

Pampan viewed bombing from Punchbowl

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

Monday marks the 40th anniversary of an event that changed the way the history of America was written.

On Dec. 7, 1941, at 7:55 a.m., a sleepy Sunday, servicemen based at Pearl Harbor on the island of Oahu in the Pacific, looked up and saw what they first believed to be U.S. Navy bombers in bombing practice over the Harbor.

It was the infamous day in American history when the Japanese sneak-attacked the Pacific fleet without provocation.

It was the first time America suffered a military disaster. There were 2,341 servicemen dead, 1,143 wounded. The battleships USS Arizona and USS Oklahoma were a total loss. The battleships USS California, USS West Virginia, USS Nevada, USS Pennsylvania, USS Maryland and USS Tennessee were damaged in the surprise bombing.

There was no on-the-spot television coverage with up-to-the-minute details for the 48 states. There was only the radio to inform the citizens that they were presumably at war.

Denny Roan of Pampa has most vivid memories of the attack.

On Dec. 7, 40 years ago, he was a serviceman with the U.S. Army Infantry, serving at Pearl Harbor. He was 19 years old.

He came to Pampa in 1944 after his term of service.

"I went over there in 1938. It was a beautiful, peaceful place — not like the commercial pictures I see of it now. I've never had any desire to go back," Roan said.

"On that particular morning (Dec. 7), my outfit was bivouacked at Roosevelt Field in Honolulu. We were really about the only ones in the field at that time," he said.

"I had radio stations and blinker light stations on top of the Punchbowl (the crater of an extinct volcano), which overlooks Pearl Harbor. When I got up on that Sunday morning, I heard the noises. I thought it came from the Schofield Barracks, which is about 20 miles north of Honolulu," he said.

"But it didn't come from there — it was the bombs. We heard some more noises again, and they were getting closer. Our colonel came out and told us he'd heard the Japanese were bombing Pearl Harbor," Roan said.

"I ran up on Punchbowl, and by the time, I got up there the show was on! There were dropping torpedos and bombs everywhere. We could see it, and it was really something," he said.

"Everything was a shambles. They did bomb the Schofield Barracks where I lived. If I had been at my barracks, I would have been directly in the line of the strafing," he said.

"Later, when I went back to my barracks, I found a bullet right under my bunk," he said.

"The Japanese just turned Wheeler Field inside out. They got the planes that were on the ground. They also hit Hickham Field. That was their strategy — they got most of the planes," he said.

"They got the ships easily. The ships had been lined up as though for inspection. As I looked over the island, I could see the fires; and I thought I saw the Arizona list a little bit, but I'm not sure," he said.

"There was not really a panic here at the time. It was more a type of anger," he said.

"I had a friend on the Arizona, and I had just been there visiting just a week before. I lost my friend. When you looked down there at it, there was just smoke," he said.

"They dropped some bombs on the streets of Honolulu and a radio announcer, Webley Edwards, was on the radio telling everyone to get off the streets, fast," he said.

"The announcer was trying to tell what was going on and help the people. He was really getting after it. I saw one bomb dropped on School Street in Honolulu, but I don't think the Japanese had it in mind to ruin Honolulu," he said.

"It didn't take very long for the servicemen to get their guns and be ready for action. I've talked to survivors from Pearl Harbor, but the feelings were so high and the reports were mixed, so I just don't know what really happened right after the initial bombing," he said.

"I didn't stay in Punchbowl very long after the bombs first fell. We went immediately to our headquarters. All the troops were mobilized, and we were actually waiting for a Japanese landing," he said.

"I think they could have taken that island," he said.

"Everything was really in a shambles. There was no live ammunition issued. We just weren't ready for an attack," he said.

"I don't think there was anyone to blame for the lack of readiness. Not even General Short and Commander in Chief Admiral Kimmel. They took the blame, but I don't think they were at fault," he said.

"Someone did know what was going to happen at Pearl Harbor, but I was too far down the chain of command to ever really know about that," Roan said.

"There have been a lot of things said, and there are a lot of things I could say, but I just don't know for sure about the Washington connection," he said.

"We had a lot of commanders over there who had served in World War I, and they just don't shake easily. They took a minute or so to get themselves into the correct thinking, and they were concerned about safety and the bombing, but they knew exactly what to do," he said.

"It was just a matter of hours before we started picking up the Japanese residents and taking them to a camp," he said.

"I had a lot of Japanese friends over there, and some of them just didn't know what was going on. But there were also some Japanese people who made no bones about their feelings, and they were for the Japanese," he said.

"I think we could be taken by surprise again, and we could lose a lot of men before we could retaliate," he said.

City police arrest eleven residents in drug raid

Forty years erase traces, but not memories, of 'day of infamy'

By BRUCE DUNFORD
Associated Press Writer

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — Fuel oil glistens on the murky waters over the hull of the once-proud battleship Arizona, and there are still scars on the concrete headquarters of the U.S. Pacific Air Force command.

The fuel oil is from the dreadnought, which was ripped open and sent to rest on the muddy bottom with most of its crew when a 1,000-pound bomb pierced the forward deck and penetrated to the black powder magazine before exploding.

The pock marks show where bullets from strafing Japanese fighters stitched their way across Hickam Field. There are similar scars on the base library at Schofield Barracks.

Little other physical evidence remains of what happened here Dec. 7, 1941, the day 40 years ago that President Franklin D. Roosevelt said would "live in infamy."

In a little more than two hours, 353 dive bombers, torpedo planes, high-level bombers and fighters launched in two waves from six Japanese aircraft carriers reduced the U.S. military fortress on the island of Oahu to flaming wreckage.

The final toll was 2,341 U.S. servicemen dead and 1,143 wounded, 18 ships, including seven battleships, sunk or heavily damaged; more than 200 Army Air Corps and Navy planes destroyed or unusable. Sixty-eight civilians also were killed, Navy records show.

Of the dead, as many as 1,177 remain entombed in the Arizona to this day. A gleaming white memorial now straddles the sunken Arizona and is one of Hawaii's top tourist attractions.

Japanese losses included 29 planes, five midget submarines and 64 men.

The attack was launched simultaneously with a breakoff in negotiations on a new treaty between Japan and the United States, and avenging the "sneak attack" on Pearl Harbor became a rallying cry for Americans who launched themselves into the task of war in Europe and in the Pacific.

But there also were cries of outrage in the United States that the American forces had been so off guard, and even today the debate over whether Roosevelt knew in advance of Japan's intentions continues in historical works.

Military historians agree the attack was perfectly executed, but also say the Japanese high command blundered in not knocking out the large naval supply center, the rows of fuel storage tanks and the submarine base, all easy targets at Pearl Harbor. Also detracting from the strategic value of the attack was the absence of any U.S. aircraft carriers in port.

Although Americans felt certain the United States eventually would have to go to war, Pearl Harbor survivors say the mood on Dec. 7, 1941, was relaxed. Most servicemen were sleeping in, as was allowed on a Sunday morning.

Two incidents might have tipped off the sleepy island defenders, but in the critical hour before the attack, military duty officers ignored them.

Shiga was a Navy flight lieutenant, already an ace in China, when secret training for "Operation Z" began in the fall of 1941 in Japan's Inland Sea.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Shiga said he realized he was involved in an event that would change history when he first saw the armada — eight destroyers, two battleships with 14-inch guns, three cruisers and six carriers with 360 planes: 81 fighters, 135 dive bombers, 104 high-altitude bombers and 40 torpedo bombers.

"After weeks of training, we knew we were in for something special," he recalled. The pilots were told their destination 10 days after the strike force left Hitokappu Bay, the final rendezvous point in the Kurile Islands off northern Japan, on Nov. 22.

"It came as no surprise — we had known for some time that Pearl Harbor was a possibility," said Shiga. "We were confident we could beat the U.S. Navy. We had trained so hard, in case they attacked Japan, that we thought we were invincible. Secretly, I think most of us felt Japan should only attack Pearl Harbor in retaliation for an attack on Japan."

Word that the surprise attack took place was radioed back to Tokyo from Vice Admiral Chuichi Nagumo's flagship, in code: "Tora, Tora, Tora!" Japan awoke to the news on Monday morning as the American fleet blazed at its moorings.

Iharu Tanaka, then a 14-year-old student — who would see the atomic bombing of Hiroshima — was summoned with his classmates and told of a "great victory in the western Pacific."

"It didn't really mean much to us because we were always being told of great victories by the Japanese army in China," says Tanaka, now a correspondent for Japan Broadcasting Corp. "We shouted 'banzai, banzai,' like we always did."

Today's younger Japanese have few reminders of Pearl Harbor. But this 40th anniversary is drawing more notice because of articles speculating on whether U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt knew in advance of the Pearl Harbor attack plan.

"The war, that's what my father talks about all the time. Of course, I know about Hiroshima and kamikaze pilots, but it happened so long ago. It wasn't my war," says 20-year-old

A city-wide drug raid here Friday resulted in the arrests of eleven persons and the confiscation of heroin, marijuana, pills and a 1981 automobile thought to be involved in one of the drug arrests, according to Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman.

Ryzman said the "pretty successful" drug raid was the result of three months of undercover work by Sgt. Lynn Brown and Detective Danny Lance under the supervision of Lt. Glen Cardin.

While Ryzman conceded that the arrests will not totally stop the drug traffic in Pampa, he did feel that it would certainly slow down the drug operation. He added that more arrests are expected, and investigation is continuing.

KGB grabs daughter-in-law of Nobel prize winner Sakharov

MOSCOW (AP) — Two KGB agents grabbed the daughter-in-law of Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov as she tried to board a train to visit him Saturday, shoved her into a car, then left her to hitchhike 12 miles back to Moscow, she said.

Liza Alexeyeva said the men warned her not to try to see Sakharov, but she said she will try again.

Sakharov, 60, and his 58-year-old wife were reported hospitalized in the Volga River city of Gorky Friday after a two-week hunger strike aimed at pressuring the Kremlin into letting Miss Alexeyeva emigrate to the United States to join her husband.

"The men reminded me that I had been warned 18 months ago not to go to Gorky and they said I had ignored this by trying to go again," Miss Alexeyeva told Western correspondents in Moscow. "They told me that if I was clever I would take their advice. I told them I will still try to go to Gorky."

Miss Alexeyeva, 26, said she was advised to go to Gorky by the president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences. She seemed unharmed and apparently unperturbed by the incident. She was smiling and calm as she answered questions at Sakharov's Moscow apartment.

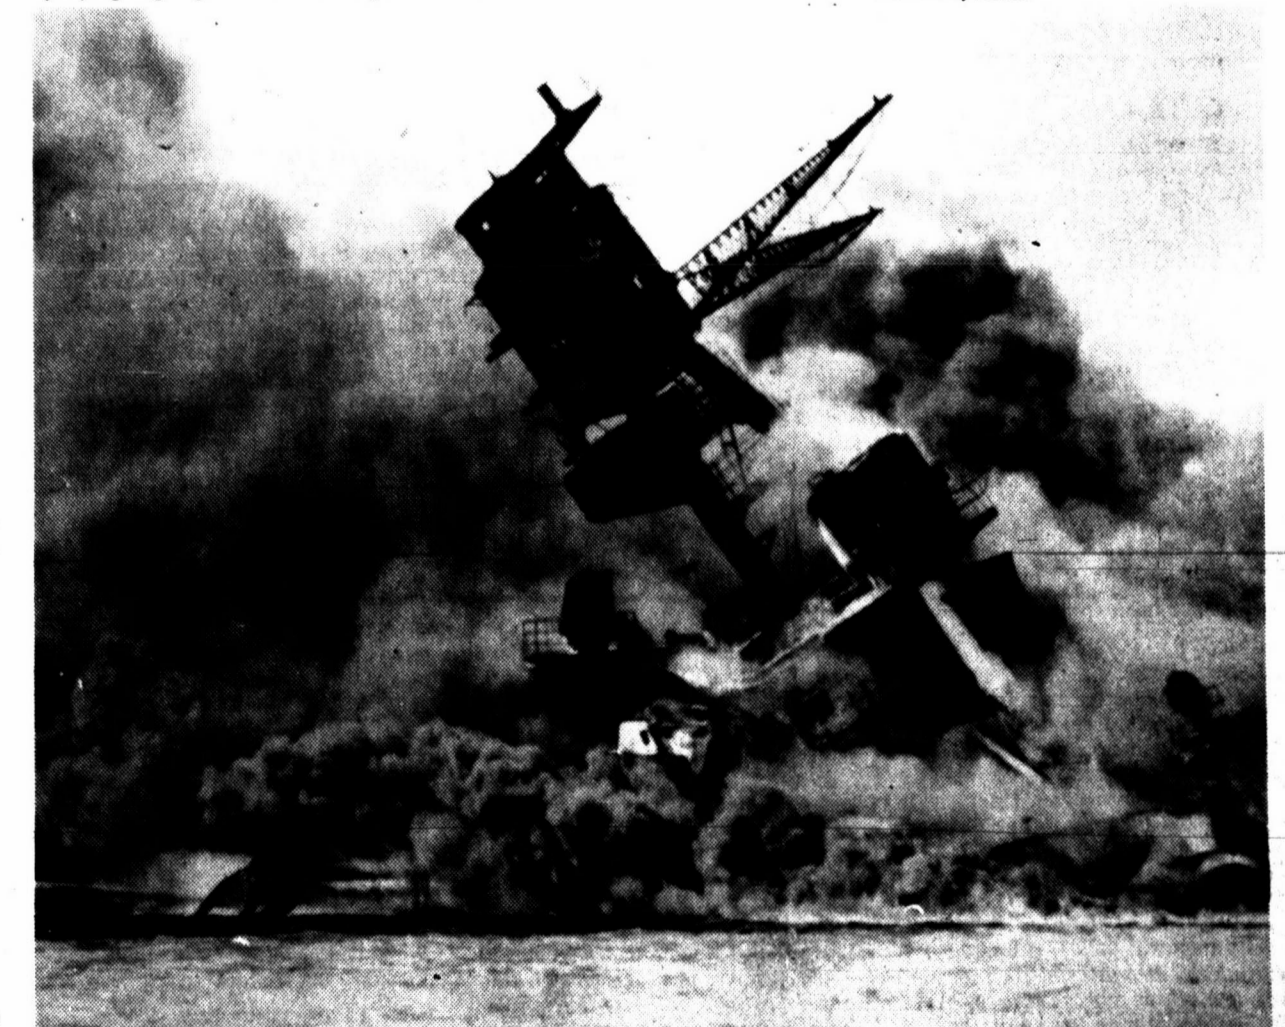

Miss Alexeyeva said she was grabbed before she could board a train for Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow, where Sakharov was exiled nearly two years ago for his human rights activities. The Kremlin said Sakharov, one of the creators of the Soviet hydrogen bomb, was exiled for passing state secrets to the West.

Miss Alexeyeva, who has been denied an exit visa to join Sakharov's stepson in the United States, said she was driven away in a black sedan, questioned and then put out of the car on Moscow's outskirts three hours later. She hitchhiked back to Moscow by early evening.

Family members said there has been no word from Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, since Soviet authorities moved to disrupt their hunger strike.

Miss Alexeyeva's husband, Alexei Semyonov, told reporters in Newton, Mass., he was grateful his wife was safe but worried about the fate of his parents.

"I am relieved at least to know that my wife is safe at home," Semyonov, a graduate student at Brandeis University, said.

THE BURNING USS ARIZONA is shown after the initial attack at Pearl Harbor early Sunday morning, 40 years ago. The proud battleship sunk when her forward magazine blew up, with as many as 1,177 of her crewmen aboard. Today, a memorial bridge spans the hull of the USS Arizona, with the names those who were killed inscribed on a marble wall. The memorial is dedicated to those Americans who made the ultimate sacrifice for their country on Dec. 7, 1941.

Hiroko Suzuki, who works for an insurance firm.

"The United States is always telling Japan to spend more on defense and so on. The world has changed. Now, we Japanese only want peace."

Ex-Pearl Harbor flier Shiga, while saying he thinks the younger generation is "spoiled and selfish," expresses the wistful view that "the war is long over, and people should not look back. They should look to the future."

However, for Shiga and the dwindling number of former colleagues who launched into the wind on that Sunday morning 40 years ago, the past doesn't fade easily.

"Do you know," he said, "that I've never been back to Pearl Harbor, or been abroad since the war ended? Too many friends died - I still pray for their souls."

Three die in mining accident

BERGOO, W. Va. (AP) - The body of a third man was pulled Saturday from beneath a 35-foot block of slate, ending a 33-hour rescue mission, and residents of this tiny mining town prepared to bury their dead.

The wife and five children of Donald Arbogast, 31, were told Saturday morning that the miner's body had been found at the end of the Stillhouse Run mine, a third of a mile inside Leatherwood Mountain.

Arbogast was one of three men killed when the block of slate fell without warning from the mine roof Thursday night. The collapse triggered an around-the-clock rescue effort, and three other trapped men were freed after lying for hours in the darkness.

"We done everything humanly possible but it was just no good," said William Cooper, one of the rescue workers who trudged grimly from the mine as Arbogast's body was carried away.

Even before the last rescuer was out, residents of the central West Virginia community were banding together in support of the victims' families.

Libyan government denies plot to assassinate Reagan

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) - The Libyan government on Saturday said news reports of an alleged Libyan plot to assassinate President Reagan were products of "the CIA fantasy farm."

"Let me state categorically and unequivocally that there is no such team working under orders from the Libyan Jamahiriya (the Libyan name for the country)," said a statement issued by Khalifa Azzabi, the director of foreign information.

Azzabi said the one-page typewritten statement was Libya's first official comment on U.S. news reports that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy was trying to kill Reagan and other top government officials.

Azzabi accused the United States of waging a "disinformation campaign" to destabilize Khadafy. The statement said the Western news media "appear to operate as an annex of the CIA rather than the disseminator of facts and news."

Also on Saturday, the Libyan news agency JANA denied reports that Libyans had planned to kill Philip Habib, the American Middle Eastern envoy, during his present tour of the region.

Security for Reagan and three top aides has been stepped up following the U.S. reports, which said the assassination team might have entered the United States by crossing the Canadian border. At least two informants, long regarded as credible, have provided details of the alleged Libyan plot to U.S. government agents, a reliable source in Washington said.

Khadafy reportedly wanted to kill Reagan because he was enraged after U.S. Navy jets under attack shot down two Libyan reconnaissance planes over disputed waters 50 miles off the Libyan coast in August. Another supposed motive was anger over reports that the CIA wanted to kill Khadafy. The state-controlled media here have given wide coverage to the alleged CIA plot.

Injuries investigated

Pampa Police are investigating an incident involving suspicious injuries received by a 46-year-old Pampa woman shortly before 8 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Louise Provience Jordan, 536 S. Reid, was taken to Coronado Community Hospital with head injuries which she claims came when she was struck by an ax. She was treated Friday night for a three-inch head laceration and was released from the hospital Saturday.

Police officers were questioning a suspect in the incident, but no charges have been filed.

Suspect escapes from city jail

Lyle Eugene Mayes, 20, 204 E. Tyng, escaped from the Pampa Police Department jail Friday afternoon and remained at large Saturday.

Police said Mayes was on a work detail with janitor Francis Christianson when he escaped about 4 p.m., shortly after he had been arrested on charges of burglary, police said Friday.

The charges stemmed from the robbery of Holmes Gift Shop at 304 S. Cuyler on Thanksgiving Day in which $2,500 worth of sports clothing had been taken. His bond was set at $10,000.

A second man, Samuel LaDon Hallman, 19, of the Western Motel in Pampa, was arrested Friday in connection with the Holmes Gift Shop burglary. His bond was set at $10,000. He remained in custody in the city jail Saturday.

Defensive driving offered

A defensive driving course will be held Monday and Tuesday at Clarendon College from 6 to 10 p.m.

The course will be the typical defensive driving course, covering defensive driving, mental preparation, driving attitudes, traffic laws and driving environment. Persons taking this course will be eligible for a reduction on their automobile insurance rates plus other benefits.

Frank Anderson will be teaching the course.

For further information, call the Chamber of Commerce at 669-3241.

Woman hospitalized after beating

A Pampa woman was listed in serious condition late Saturday in the Intensive Care Unit of Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo from injuries she received in a beating in Pampa Saturday.

Janette Slagle, address unavailable, was taken to the Amarillo hospital about 10:45 a.m. Saturday with multiple facial and body injuries.

According to Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan, local law enforcement officials were notified of the incident Saturday morning from Amarillo.

"I spoke briefly to the woman and details of the beating are still sketchy. However, she is very badly beaten," Jordan said.

"A prime suspect in the case is currently in custody in Potter County Jail in Amarillo," Jordan said.

"The suspect will be arraigned in Amarillo Monday morning, and charges will be filed if the woman elects to file charges," Jordan said.

Investigation into the case is continuing through the Gray County Sheriff's Department.

FREED. Clarence Williams, center, reacts with one of his attorneys after his 50-year sentence for the sexual assaults of a Bridge City, Texas, woman and her children was vacated Friday. Williams, jailed since October, was released after Jon B. Simonis, the so-called "Ski Mask Rapist," told Louisiana police Wednesday he was the man who attacked the woman and children. Simonis is currently being held in a Jena, La., jail.

Man facing 50-year prison term freed by another's confession

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Clarence Von Williams, convicted of rape and facing a 50-year prison sentence, grinned broadly and waved at 100 well-wishers as he walked away from jail a free man after another man confessed to the crime.

"He's totally wiped out," said Donald "Cochise" Shockley as he led his boyhood friend to a waiting limousine amid cheers from a crowd of teary-eyed friends and co-workers.

Williams, 42, had never been arrested before authorities charged him with being the masked assailant who raped a Bridge City, Texas woman and sexually attacked her teen-age son and daughter on April 30, 1979.

Williams, who proclaimed his innocence throughout two trials on the charge, was exonerated after Jon B. Simonis told Louisiana state police he was the man responsible for the attack.

"I didn't want to be found innocent, because everyone would have always thought I had just hired a good lawyer," Williams said. "I wanted the man to be caught and confess. I was so scared he was going to be killed doing it (committing another rape) and nobody would ever know."

Simonis, described by Louisiana authorities as the "Ski-Mask Rapist," has admitted to at least 77 crimes, mostly involving robbery and sexual assaults, in at least seven states, according to state police.

Simonis, 30, was sentenced to 231 years in prison after his guilty plea in Jena, La. last week to two counts of armed robbery, one of aggravated burglary and one of unauthorized use of an automobile.

Louisiana officials said the sentence does not allow for suspension, probation or parole. Authorities also are holding two men who allegedly aided Simonis in the crime spree.

Prosecutors joined with defense attorney Don Kelley during a special Friday night hearing in asking that the charge against Williams be dismissed. The hearing was called after Orange County authorities went to Louisiana to view a videotape in which Simonis discussed the crime. Williams' first trial on the charge ended with a hung jury, but he was convicted during a second trial in October.

"I have never been more grateful than when I learned the district attorney's office had the fortitude to acknowledge the injustice to Von Williams, and had the courage to, in open court, join in our motion for a new trial and dismissal," said defense attorney Don Kelley.

Prosecutors were not available for comment. Williams, a chemical plant worker, had spent 51 days in jail and was awaiting a hearing on a motion for a new trial. Had that motion been denied, he would have been sent to the state prison at Huntsville, authorities said.

Shockley, at whose wedding Williams had served as best man, had worked on his behalf since the conviction.

"I've always said we went down with the system and we can come up with the system," Shockley told the Beaumont Enterprise.

The victim and her two children testified that they were attacked by a masked assailant, but identified Williams through a slit in the mask, court records show.

The woman said she had met Williams at a party.

During the trial, prosecutors did not offer any fingerprint, hair or semen samples connecting Williams with the crime.

On the night of the crime, Williams told police he had been drinking until the early morning hours at an Orange bar.

Shockley's wife, Judy, said, "We knew the day would come that it would be proven he didn't do it."

Williams, a 20-year worker at the Gulf Chemical Co. plant at Orange, also has his job back, according to his boss.

Harrelson goes on trial Monday on cocaine possession charges

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Professional gambler Charles Harrelson, identified by federal officials as a prime suspect in the slaying of a federal judge, goes on trial Monday on charges of cocaine possession.

Harrelson, 43, surrendered to police in Van Horn on Sept. 1, 1980, after keeping officers at bay for four hours by holding a gun to his head. Harrelson also faces a firearms charge.

Jury selection before state District Judge Sam Callan gets under way in Van Horn on Monday, and Harrelson's attorney, Joe Chagra of El Paso, Texas, says that "if the jury doesn't know who Charles Harrelson is by now, they must be from another planet."

Harrelson, being held at the state prison in Huntsville, spent 10 years there after a 1968 conviction in the murder-for-hire slaying of Hearne grain dealer Sam Degelia.

Federal officials suspect Harrelson in connection with the death of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. in San Antonio on May 29, 1979.

Chagra says he is concerned that his client will make a deal with prosecutors in connection with the death of the judge.

"I've heard a rumor that Charles wants to work some kind of deal and get out of Huntsville," Chagra said. "I don't know if it's true. In all fairness to Charles, I don't even know if he can make a deal. What do you offer someone who you think is the trigger man?"

Chagra's brother, Jimmy, who is serving a federal sentence for drug smuggling, as a suspect in Wood's death, federal officials say.

"I certainly would have to get out of it as his attorney if he wanted to deal," the attorney said Friday. "The deal would be that he would talk against my brother."

Chagra said he hadn't talked with Harrelson in more than a month, but he would meet with him before the court proceedings.

The attorney said he plans motions to consolidate the two charges into one trial. Prosecutors planned to try the cocaine charge first.

Because of Harrelson's prior conviction, the cocaine charge has been enhanced from a second-degree felony to a first-degree felony with a possible life sentence. Harrelson could be sentenced to up to 20 years in prison on the firearms charge.

"I think we've got a real good shot with the cocaine charge," Chagra said. "He was carrying a bag, like a shaving kit bag, with him. The cocaine was in the bag, which was closed and zipped. It's my opinion that they should have obtained a warrant before they opened the bag."

The weapons charge, however, could not be suppressed on a search clause because "the weapon was in plain view," Chagra said.

Callan said Friday that he would try to keep a tight rein on the trial.

"It's gotten all complicated by the innuendo that he killed Wood," the judge said. "I'm just going to try to play it by ear and try to keep it as calm as I can make it and try to get him a fair trial."

Dallas drug bust nets 22 arrests

DALLAS (AP) — Two female undercover police officers, acting as students at Sunset High School, collected evidence during a 14-week investigation that culminated in the arrest of 22 people on drug charges, authorities said.

The bust was the third undercover drug operation in a Dallas high school in the past 18 months, police said.

The arrests, which included 15 adults and seven juveniles, followed drug purchases made by the two rookie officers, who posed as transfer students from another Texas city, according to Capt. Don Milliken.

Nine of the adults had been indicted Thursday on charges involving the sale of controlled substances and five of the juveniles were named in warrants issued Friday, police said.

The others were picked up as the arrest procedures were carried out, investigators said.

Included in the arrests were four members of one family — a mother, father, a 14-year-old boy and a 12-year-old boy who allegedly delivered drugs to one of the officers, Milliken said. All of the charges were third-degree felonies, carrying up to 10 years in prison and a $1,000 fine, police said.

Joel P. Pittman, principal at the high school located in the West Oak Cliff section of Dallas, said he and other school officials were notified of the investigation when it began, but were not given the identities of the two undercover officers.

During the investigation, the officers, ages 21 and 22, were randomly selected by one of their teachers to perform clerical duties in the school administration office, according to Milliken.

The officers used school records to verify the names and other information about the students involved in the drug purchases, Milliken said.

During the undercover operation, one of the officers took a week off, got married and went on her honeymoon, said Milliken.

Roswell man, who claimed to be 129, dies

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Jesus Coronado of Roswell, who died at the age of 129, believed in rising early and working hard. And, he "always ate frijoles and potatoes every day."

Coronado, who had said he was born Dec. 25, 1851, between Corpus Christi and Robstown, Texas, died Friday at St. Mary's Hospital in Roswell. The death certificate showed he died of natural causes.

A rosary is scheduled for 7 p.m. Sunday at Ballard Chapel in Roswell. Funeral Mass is to be celebrated at 9:30 a.m. Monday at St. John's Catholic Church.

Coronado had no proof of his age, but he and his family believed him to be 129.

Coronado, interviewed by a Roswell reporter in 1978, outlived three wives and fathered 20 children. The oldest now is 58, and he said his youngest child, born in 1959 or 60, is dead.

Asked the secret of his long life, he replied, "That is a question for God." But he noted he "always ate frijoles (beans) and potatoes every day and worked very hard."

Coronado was married to his third wife, Eudelia Gonzales, for 46 years before her death in 1977. She had tried in vain to gather evidence of her husband's birth or early life.

His daughter, Lupe Arias of Roswell, had a letter dated in 1968 from Monsignor William T. Thomas of the Diocese of Corpus Christi to the Rev. Chrysostom Partee of St. John's Catholic Church in Roswell.

It stated that church records prior to 1910 had been searched, but there was no record of birth or christening of Jesus Coronado.

Coronado, who chopped and picked cotton until he was 97, raised all the family's vegetables behind their house until about seven years ago.

He said he had been quite a drinker until he was married for the third time, but that his wife "said it was too much" and made him stop.

He recalled in the 1978 interview the excitement that the invention of the automobile created, and he remembered that it took three months "to drive the cattle from Fort Worth to Corpus Christi and then to Robstown."

That was the only traveling he ever did besides following the cotton crops because he "had to work all the time to earn money for the food, for the clothes."

What is most important in life? "To have a job, a family, to be able to work for the family, to earn enough for the food and clothes," he said. But he added, "nothing is so good any more since my wife died."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

The new 'Ban the Bomb' campaign

By COLONEL RONALD WARING

The month of October saw a series of huge demonstrations in Western Europe: On a recent Sunday, a crowd variously estimated at between 150,000 and a quarter of a million blocked the center of London all day; in Rome another huge crowd marched through the streets; in West Germany a crowd of about a quarter of a million marched in Bonn and Berlin, and similar marches have taken place in the other NATO countries. The marchers carried C.N.D. (Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament) banners and placards and shouted a variety of "Ban the Bomb" slogans.

The purpose of all these demonstrations was to whip up popular demand for an European veto on the deployment of the American cruise and Pershing II missiles in Western Europe, and to call for the unilateral disarmament.

In Paris it was the Communist Party which organized the demonstration. To their great credit, the Socialist Party, which now governs France, boycotted the march. As a result, it turned out to be a flop, with only a few thousand communists attending.

This was not so in Britain, where the demonstrators were addressed by Michael Foot, the leader of the British Labour Party, who made the astonishing claim that only by unilateral nuclear disarmament could Britain be secure. The British Labour Party has pledged unilateral nuclear disarmament, and to demand that American nuclear bases in Britain be dismantled. With the popularity of the Conservative Party falling lower week by week, the prospect of a Marxist Labour Government in Britain within the next two and one-half years is a real possibility.

Most of the marchers were very young, and had been trucked in from schools and universities all over Britain. The same pattern was repeated in other countries. The lunatic elements were well represented: some had their faces painted, others had their hair dyed various colors. There were banners demanding everything from free love to free beer. But it would be a very great mistake to ignore these demonstrations. The quarter of a million in Britain, and the same in other Western European cities have votes, and they will vote for a nuclear-free zone in Western Europe. Nor is it only the students and the young, but very many others as well who feel this way.

On examination, certain factors emerge: the demonstrations were extremely well planned, expertly executed and well funded. They are the culmination of decades of efforts of leftwing teachers, who have taught Europe's children that their only future is annihilation in a wholesale nuclear holocaust unless America can be prevented from using Europe as a nuclear battleground.

This propaganda has been carried on ceaselessly, and very many young Europeans believe it. Most of the press in Europe is controlled by the political Left. The slogan "Better Red than Dead" has come to be believed, and if the majority would not actually choose to live in a Soviet-style "Peoples Democracy," they believe it preferable to atomic incineration. Nor do they believe that this is necessary, as they have been persuaded that Europe can become neutralized without falling completely under Soviet domination. They do not understand, or believe, that NATO and the nuclear weapons have prevented war in Europe for 36 years.

What is quite amazing is that this reaction should have come as such a surprise to the United States. Western intelligence has known for some time that the Soviets were spending billions on a massive "Ban the Bomb" propaganda offensive in Europe, designed specifically to prevent the deployment of the cruise and Pershing II missiles in Western Europe, and also, if possible, to split Europe away from America and to bring about British unilateral nuclear disarmament.

Directly or indirectly, the money, the planning and the propaganda have come from the Soviets, with some very considerable success. Supported by trendy leftwing clergymen, leftist academics and intellectuals, as well as dedicated and sincere people, the European Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament is growing at a furious pace.

Curiously enough, there has been little attempt made to counter this propaganda, apart from the occasional serious article in the Conservative press. There is no public campaign showing America as the defender of Europe, nothing to explain to young people that those who are not prepared to defend themselves are invariably enslaved. Propaganda can be a deadly weapon, which can destroy the morale of a people, which can cause fear and panic, which can split alliances, and which can bring about victory without any necessity for war.

President Reagan is wrong in his belief that it is only a very small minority who are opposed to nuclear weapons being deployed in Europe. Egged on by ceaseless propaganda and clever organization, and supplied with almost limitless money, they are already very many and their numbers are growing daily. The threat to the whole strategy and concept of NATO is very great.

Canada on a slow path

Compromise. Historians will tell you it's the glue that held the United States together more than 200 years. The one time the states could not compromise led to the Civil War, or the War Between the States, which is exactly what it was.

Since 1867, when Britain gave Canada its present "constitution," the nation's provincial governments have been independent political forces, much opposed to strong rule from the central government in Ottawa. In recent years, French Canadians in Quebec neared the brink of secession. However, the spirit of compromise played heavily in cooling off hotter heads.

Now Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has negotiated constitutional reform. Some of his proposals have been hotly contested, resulting in a year-long deadlock. However, Canadians are working out their differences.

The United States also had to struggle when it agreed upon a national Constitution in the late 1700s. And it was through a series of compromises that it succeeded. The Canadians are in a similar confrontation, with Quebec the lone holdout.

From the United States' perspective, this is of concern. We know too well the tragedy that can befall a nation if it cannot give and take where regions differ on issues. A strong, united Canada is in the best interests of Quebec — and this country.

A great project, and lots of luck

There's hardly anybody who doesn't like to sink a tooth into a nice tender abalone steak, crunch on a broiled lobster puffed with butter or fork a few oysters off the shell and send them "down the hatch."

Those who rejoice in such delights must honor a group of scientists associated with the University of California at Santa Barbara Marine Science Institute and the Department of Biological Sciences. They are the authors of a scientific paper describing revolutionary new techniques for boosting production of abalone, oysters, scallops and other shell fish off the California coast — and other parts of the world, for that matter.

The group, led by Prof. Daniel E.

Morse, recently won first prize at the international symposium of the World Mariculture Society, which met in Venice, Italy. The other members are Neal Hooker and Aileen Dobson Morse.

Basically, their paper tells how an inexpensive, naturally occurring and easy to use amino acid can cause marine larvae to rapidly begin metamorphosis and development — boosting their numbers in the sea.

The substance, known by the acronym GABA, should be a boon to abalone mariculture in California and in Mexico, Australia, New Zealand, China and Japan, the authors say.

Gourmets must be thinking, "Godspeed to such a project."

Reduce government by limiting taxes

President Reagan is to be congratulated for his apparent rejection of sharply higher taxes in 1982.

Some budget officials and several Republican senators have the idea that billions of dollars in added taxes would contain ballooning deficits and win sympathizers among the Wall Street skeptics. Not only is this Carteresque approach a proven failure in past trials, but it runs contrary to supplicative economics, a concept the GOP embraced months ago that holds that government revenues increase as tax rates go down.

There've been several targets suggested for higher taxes: frowned upon commodities such as liquor and tobacco, excises on a number of goods and services including the telephone, a national sales levy, "windfall" profits that would accrue from any decontrol of natural gas prices, or the approved cuts in income tax rates over the next three years that could be delayed or curtailed.

Each method stands to affect some people more than others, in direct and indirect ways. A "sinner's tax" for instance, probably wouldn't spare one who neither smokes nor drinks, because of economics: When the prices of those pleasures are boosted, customers usually buy less of them. If a store or restaurant has been relying on those sales for its profit margin, it will be inclined to raise the prices of other selections to recoup the revenue.

Taxes are taxes. They drain money from the productive economy and redirect people's efforts away from creating wealth to the less fruitful (to society) activity of shielding it.

Reagan and his Treasury Secretary Donald Regan have courageously not accepted the advice of old Washington hands who tremble at the dimensions of the economic experiment this president has embarked on. Their memories are short, these putatively prudent men who counsel fiscal policy of the sordid that hasn't produced a balanced budget in more than a decade. They belong in the ranks of the Tories who diluted and undermined Margaret Thatcher's attempt to right Britain's course; they ignore long-term interest rates that laugh at the prospect of Congress balancing its budget — however high the tax rates — in the years to come.

Deficits are bad. High taxes are worse. The second won't cure the first. Only borrowing and spending restraint — the fortitude in Congress to cut programs that must be cut, such as Social Security, and the intellectual honesty in the administration to trim the defense and state departments, too — will ever bring government under control. In the meantime, the private economy must be permitted to stay ahead of it.

A balanced budget with honor ought to be Reagan's rallying cry: a zero balance achieved by taking less than 20 percent of the GNP from the people in taxes, the way it was before Carter, rather than the 22.6 percent it was in 1980.

As Reagan is fond of saying, if not now, when? If not by him, by whom? You revive our economy by reducing government. And, as Milton Friedman stresses, you reduce government by limiting taxes. Now is indeed the time. There can be no looking back.

Everyone shares some intolerance

Jews, who have suffered from prejudice and persecution for centuries, were made aware of their own intolerance the other day when maestro Zubin Mehta conducted the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in a presentation of music by Richard Wagner.

There were violent protest demonstrations, because Wagner, idealized by Hitler and considered the cultural epitome of Teutonic antisemitism, has been banned in Israel since 1939. Mr. Mehta expected public controversy, but not the storm of criticism that fell upon him.

Nevertheless, this ugly little episode has developed into a sort of national catharsis for the Israelis, having induced some belated soul-searching. The Israel orchestra quickly made Mr. Mehta, who is also conductor of the New York Philharmonic, its music director for life. The furor has subsequently subsided into introspection.

The Nazi murder of 6 million Jews, we must remember, left an open wound on the Jewish soul. But healing, as Mr. Mehta's dramatic gesture proves, is not to be found in unforgiving rage and hatred against a whole people and their culture. Great music, such as Wagner's works, like great art and great literature, transcends national boundaries and even the pettiness of their originators. It is not less barbaric for Jews than Wagner because he was German than it was for Hitler to ban, as he did, such musical giants as Mendelssohn, Offenbach, and Meyerbeer, because they were Jewish.

The sound of Wagner in Tel Aviv, therefore, is the most exquisite sort of Jewish rebuke to anti-semitism in the past or present or future.

Ah So!

A Japanese newspaperman came into my office the other day, bowed deeply, and said, "Forgive me for this awkward intrusion, but I am doing a story for a newspaper in Tokyo about Richard Allen and the Nancy Reagan interview."

"Ah so," I said, "I would be most honored to answer any of your questions."

"What do you personally think of this situation?"

"I would prefer not to comment on it," I replied, "until the Justice Department finishes its investigation."

He smiled and gave me a white envelope containing $100 in cash.

"Ah so," I said, smiling back. "But I cannot accept a bribe for granting you an interview."

"It is not a bribe," he said indignantly. "It is a tradition in my country to give a small gift of appreciation when someone grants an interview."

"Why didn't you say that in the first place?" I said. I called in my secretary and told her to put the envelope in the safe.

"Do you feel," he continued, "that someone in high position in office should accept a gift from a newspaperman for arranging an interview with the First Lady of the land?"

"Mr. Allen expected nothing but he has great respect for your traditions and would do anything not to insult you. When Mr. Reagan took office the first thing he said to his foreign policy advisers was, 'Under no conditions do I want anyone in my administration to offend the Japanese.'"

The newspaperman smiled and handed me another white envelope. He looked at his notes. "What do you think Mr. Allen intended to do with the $1,000?"

"He says he intended to give it to charity."

"Why didn't he?"

"Because he forgot about it. You must understand, Mr. Allen is the President's National Security Adviser and he forgets very easily. One day he says a certain country is a threat to the United States and then he forgets all about it."

"Am I taking up too much of your time?" he asked.

"Heck no," I said. "Not as long as you keep passing over white envelopes."

"Mrs. Reagan knew nothing about the arrangement?"

"Mrs. Reagan doesn't even remember being interviewed by the Japanese magazine."

"That means she must be very unhappy with Mr. Allen?"

"Well, she's not working on a needlepoint pillow for him for Christmas this year."

The Japanese newspaperman was writing furiously.

"I don't want to offend you," I said, "but you forgot to give me another white envelope."

"Ah so," he said. "A thousand pardons."

"It's okay. But we Americans aren't used to answering questions for nothing."

"One final question. Is it your opinion that Secretary of State Al Haig is happy or unhappy about the way things are going for Mr. Allen?"

"He looked very disturbed the last time I saw him on television and I couldn't tell whether it was because of Mr. Allen or Nicaragua."

The Tokyo newspaperman handed me my last envelope.

As soon as he left I called Tom Brokaw and said, "The next time you want me to do the 'Today' show it's going to cost you 10 big ones."

"But that's checkbook journalism," he cried.

"Ah so."

Today in history

Today is Sunday, Dec. 6, the 340th day of 1981. There are 25 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Dec. 6, 1492, Christopher Columbus discovered Haiti.

On this date: In 1917, the Republic of Finland was proclaimed.

Also in 1917, 1,600 people were killed in an explosion following a collision between Belgian and French ammunition ships at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

In 1921, the Irish Free State was established.

And in 1972, Apollo 17, the last of the Apollo moon shots, began with a delayed blastoff at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Ten years ago: Pakistan severed relations with India as the war between the two countries intensified.

Five years ago: House Democrats elected Thomas O'Neill of Massachusetts as Speaker of the House and Jim Wright of Texas as Majority Leader.

One year ago: A U.S. presidential commission headed for El Salvador to look into possible Salvadoran military complicity in the slaying of three American nuns earlier in the week.

Today's birthday: Baseball star Larry Bowa is 38 years old.

PROGERIA VICTIMS. Alicia Gowans, 11, of San Jose, Calif., dressed in a Snow White outfit, listens to 26-year-old artist Meg Casey of Milford, Conn., talk in a Disneyland Hotel room in Anaheim, Calif., Friday. Both are victims of progeria, a rare ailment that causes premature aging. (AP Laserphoto)

Progeria victims meet in real-life fantasy

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A week in a fantasy world broke a real life history of isolation for two little boys from opposite sides of the Atlantic Ocean who suffer from a rare aging disease.

Mickey Hays of Hallsville, Texas, and Fransie Geringer of Orkney, South Africa, each used to think he was the only victim of progeria, which has stunted their growth and made them look like old men.

Mickey, at least, was not happy Saturday at the prospect of leaving Disneyland, where the boys met their fairy-tale heroes.

"I don't like it 'cause I'm not ready to leave California," said the feisty 9-year-old Texan.

As for whether he was ready to leave his new friend, Fransie, Mickey looked sad and shrugged his shoulders.

The two boys were practically inseparable soon after they met last Sunday night, but by the end of the week they had found their individuality again and were not sticking quite as close together.

In the beginning, their parents were worried about the parting.

"It will be all right," said Fransie's father, Herman, 37, whose family leaves for Florida on Sunday.

The boys' widely publicized meeting at Disneyland drew two females afflicted with the same incurable illness.

Meg Casey, 26, who may be the oldest living victim, traveled from Milford, Conn., and Alicia Gowans, 11, flew from San Jose, Calif.

The four have in common startling physical characteristics that make them look remarkably similar. Regardless of race or sex, progeria victims are bald dwarfs with a bent posture and wizened hands and feet. They normally succumb to heart attacks by their mid teens.

Before the recent publicity that began with an Associated Press story about Fransie, the victims had never met anyone else who looked like them.

Some families keep their afflicted children very sheltered. One California girl, who wanted to be anonymous, had a private dinner Friday night with Miss Casey and Alicia and their relatives.

Bleak economic winter ahead for Canadians

OTTAWA (AP) — Canadians are buttoning up for a rugged winter of layoffs, high interest rates and rising prices, a bleak economic season whose coldest winds blow in from across the U.S. border.

Always battered hard by American economic storms, Canada this time has fallen into its deepest business slump in 27 years.

Homeowners burdened with sharp rises in mortgage payments are trying to unload their houses at distress-sale prices. Ontario farmers have formed self-styled vigilante groups to intimidate bankers foreclosing on farms. Pro hockey players are upset — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's tight budget closed one of their tax loopholes.

Trudeau and his Cabinet, with an eye on U.S.-Canadian relations, have been careful not to place too much blame for Canada's high interest rates on President Reagan's economic policies. But if Canada's rates were not at least as high as the U.S. rates, investors would head south of the border to get better returns on their money.

Also, the industrial slump in the United States has meant a drop in demand for Canadian exports.

Trudeau's critics on the left loudly condemn "Reaganomics" and what they call Canada's follow-the-leader economic policies.

Reagan's tight-money policies are having "terrible spinoff effects" on other countries, complains Edward Broadbent, leader of the socialist New Democrats, Canada's No. 3 party.

"The crippling, devastating effect on working people... of this economic idiocy is beyond description," Canadian Labor Congress chief Dennis McDermott told the AFL-CIO in New York last month.

Even one of the country's leading conservative politicians, Ontario Premier William Davis, has suggested that Canada look for ways to divorce its interest policy from U.S. rates.

The Liberal Party government announced the latest bad economic news last week: the Canadian gross national product declined by 1 percent in the third quarter of this year, indicating a recession that's expected to worsen through winter.

Daily announcements of thousands of layoffs in the automobile, lumber, mining and other industries bear out another gloomy statistic: Canada's unemployment rate has risen to 8.2 percent. It was 7 percent three months ago. And consumer prices in October were 12.7 percent higher than a year earlier.

U.S. unemployment in November stood at 8.4 percent, and inflation is put at 9.6 percent. The impact is especially severe on homeowners.

Mortgages that must be renewed periodically have long been the norm here, and as a result one out of every five Canadians with home mortgages is renewing it in this year of stratospheric rates.

In addition, Canadian homeowners are not able to deduct mortgage interest from taxable income, as Americans can.

"This means the domestic impact of high interest rates is quite different for us in Canada," Bob Rae, the New Democrats' chief economics spokesman in the House of Commons, said in an interview.

"It is much less devastating in the States."

Columbia and Challenger to carry cargo in '82

WASHINGTON (AP) — The shuttle Columbia returned from its truncated second flight in such good shape that space officials believe they can have it and a second ship, Challenger, carrying commercial cargo by late next year.

The launch target for the third of Columbia's four test flights is March 19 — a four-month turnaround period compared with seven months between the first and second flights.

"The ship came back in super condition, in better shape than after the first mission," says Jim Harrington, chief of shuttle orbiter operations at Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The bad fuel cell that shortened the November mission from five to two days is expected to have no effect on the length of the third flight, which will have Marine Col. Jack Lousma and Air Force Col. Gordon Fullerton at the controls.

"I've heard of nothing that would alter plans for a full seven-day mission," Harrington said.

If all goes well on STS-3 (Space Transportation System, flight three), Vance Brand and Bob Overmyer will take Columbia up for its fourth and final test in June or July, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would schedule the shuttle's first operational flight in October or November. The first cargo: Three commercial communications satellites.

On STS-3, Lousma and Fullerton will further test the ship's many systems, give a lengthy workout to the mechanical arm that deploys and retrieves satellites, and operate a set of scientific experiments.

On STS-4, Brand and Overmyer are to land on a 15,000-foot concrete runway near the launch site at Cape Canaveral, bypassing the wide-open desert strip in California and eliminating the need for the time-consuming and costly return on the back of a Boeing 747 jet.

Rockwell International is scheduled to deliver Challenger to NASA next June for about six months of pre-flight outfitting. Two more shuttles, Atlantis and Discovery, will follow in the next two years.

Thus, NASA's vision of a "Space Van Lines" is still bright, even though turnaround time between flights is still measured in months, not the three or four weeks required of an operational system.

"EVERY SECRET THING." # Hearst says survival made her join SLA

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst Shaw says she was involved in bombings and in a bank robbery that led to the death of a customer, although she was never charged with those crimes.

"I want to join you," she said she told Symbionese Liberation Army leaders. But she said she was driven into the ranks of her captors by fear and the need to survive.

The robberies and the story of her capture are part of a new book by Mrs. Shaw, who took the name "Tania" during her exploits in the early 1970s, first as the captive and then a member of the terrorist SLA.

Mrs. Shaw is reported to have received a $600,000 advance for "Every Secret Thing," which was released Friday. It is published by Doubleday & Co. and sells for $17.95.

Now married and a mother, the heir to the Hearst publishing fortune described how on Feb. 4, 1974, she was dragged screaming from the Berkeley apartment she shared with her boyfriend, Steve Weed.

She said she was carried away to an apartment in Daly City, south of San Francisco, dumped into a closet and humiliated until, convinced escape was impossible, she enlisted in the SLA as Tania, the revolutionary.

"Grateful for my re-education classes, I gave them back all the rhetoric, all the slogans, all the buzz words that they had filled me with over the past month or so" after her kidnapping, she said. "And they loved every word of it. The more blatant and preposterous my statements became, the more they believed them."

While she was telling the terrorists what they wanted to hear, "the thought of escaping them never entered my mind...there was no possibility of escape."

About nine weeks after the kidnapping, toting a gun, she entered a San Francisco branch of the Hibernia Bank with her SLA comrades and helped rob it of $10,690. Less than two years later, a jury found her guilty of bank robbery, refusing to believe her testimony that she participated out of fear.

In the book, Mrs. Shaw admitted she drove the getaway car from a Carmichael bank robbery in which a woman was killed. She also said she helped plan a second holdup and was involved in several bombings.

Mrs. Shaw wrote that SLA member Emily Harris admitted gunning down customer Myrna Opsahl, 42, during the 1975 robbery of the Crocker National Bank in Carmichael, near Sacramento.

"Who shot her? I asked," the book said.

"I did," snapped Emily. "Let's not talk about it. Keep your eye on the road and your mind on the driving."

Mrs. Harris and her husband, William, are serving prison terms in Mrs. Shaw's kidnapping.

No one ever was charged with the killing of Mrs. Opsahl. SLA member Steven Soliah was charged with the robbery but later acquitted. A lawyer for Mrs. Harris declined comment on the book's statements.

L. Anthony White, chief deputy district attorney for Sacramento County, said, "We wouldn't consider the book in and of itself competent evidence." But he said the murder case was still open.

California's felony murder rule says accomplices in a murder case can be accused of murder.

During her trial for the Hibernia Bank robbery, Mrs. Shaw refused to testify about any alleged involvement in other bank robberies. U.S. Attorney Francis Goldsberry said he had not seen the book and would not speculate whether any action would be taken against Mrs. Shaw.

Mrs. Shaw wrote that lawyer F. Lee Bailey advised her she was to answer no questions that might link her with the Carmichael crime.

She said the SLA used money from another robbery to buy weapons and ammunition and practiced in Grass Valley, near Sacramento.

Mrs. Shaw also wrote she helped plant a bomb at a San Francisco police station. It never went off. A week later, using a pipe bomb she helped make, the SLA blew up a police cruiser near Oakland, she said.

In May 1974, leader Donald DeFreeze and six other SLA members died in a shootout with police when the house in which they were holed up burned down in Los Angeles.

On Sept. 18, 1975, Mrs. Shaw was arrested in San Francisco and the Harris were arrested the same day. She served less than two years in prison before her sentence was commuted by President Jimmy Carter.

Lynn's dreamers seek renewal from city's ashes

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — They grew up in good-natured rivalry, kids from opposite ends of a fading factory town. Then Edward Calnan and Kevin Geaney found themselves sharing a dream — to make Lynn a showcase of renewal.

They shared pain and anger when it burned, but even before the flames died the two friends were planning yet another rebirth.

Calnan, Lynn's community development director, and Geaney, city planner, are school-vacation veterans of the factories that made Lynn the nation's shoemaking capital in the 1890s.

The factories grew silent and vacant with the passing of the years.

In 1976, a mayor put them on the team assigned to design Lynn's downtown waterfront renaissance. The project was nearly complete when it was extinguished in an $80 million fire Nov. 28.

"I jumped into my clothes and ran down there as quickly as I could," says Geaney, a robust 35-year-old. "I figured maybe one or two buildings..."

"The smoke was so thick I couldn't see anything. Then a gust of wind lifted the smoke and I could look down Broad Street at the rubble of those buildings. I stood there and I really wasn't sure where I was," he says. "It was eerie."

Calnan, 42, watched in confused shock. "All the frames of reference — the buildings — were gone," he remembers.

They watched last week as wrecking balls and bulldozers smashed and piled the half-square-mile of smoldering debris, the remnants of the turn-of-century "loft buildings" constructed after a fire in 1884.

The 15-hour blaze had consumed 17 buildings, damaged nine others, cost 1,500 jobs and left hundreds homeless. President Reagan declared the city a disaster area eligible for emergency federal assistance.

Calnan said he felt a sense of professional and personal loss. But amid those emotions came something else.

"We're in the public development field. We can be forgiven, I guess. (But) around 8 o'clock in the morning, six hours before the fire was out, we were saying, 'what can we do with that site?' We had thoughts even then," Calnan recalls.

Now Mayor Anthony Marino has given Calnan, Geaney and economic development director Robert Baker the task of redesigning the devastated area.

"I have absolute confidence in these three men and their ability," the mayor said.

"After you realize your loss, you just get back at it," Geaney said. "We've got a lot of good ideas and we'll develop those plans in the next couple of months."

Tafoya says student should have cooperated

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Eugene Tafoya, free on bond Saturday after being convicted of a minor assault charge in the shooting of a Libyan student, says Faisal Zagallai would not have been shot if he had "cooperated."

Tafoya, convicted of third-degree assault and conspiracy charges Friday, faces up to two years in prison.

Defense attorney Walter Gerash, however, noting that the 46-year-old former Green Beret had no prior criminal record and served nearly eight months in jail while awaiting trial, said he expected his client to receive probation when he is sentenced Jan. 5.

Tafoya was released on $5,000 bond Friday and left the Larimer County Jail with his half-sister, Bonnie Lynn Tafoya.

As the two enjoyed drinks at a bar here, Tafoya reflected on his arrest in April and the time he spent in jail.

"Bitterness is a heavy load to bear," he said.

When advised by his attorney to keep his belongings as evidence in case an appeal is filed, Tafoya said, "Appeal — who'd listen?"

Tafoya said he wanted to find a job "and make some money." He said he had a high-paying job as a construction worker in his hometown. Truth or Consequences, N.M., before his arrest.

He also said he felt sorry for Zagallai, but added, "If he had cooperated, everything would have been fine."

Meanwhile, Zagallai, left partially blind after the attack Oct. 14, 1980, pledged to continue working to overthrow the regime of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

It was Zagallai's opposition to Khadafy that led Tafoya to the student's apartment, according to prosecutors in the month-long trial on charges of attempted murder and conspiracy.

A nine-woman, three-man jury found Tafoya innocent on a charge of first-degree attempted murder and conspiracy to commit murder. He was convicted on the least severe charges against him.

Tafoya admitted the shooting but said he acted in self-defense. He said he went to Zagallai's apartment on behalf of the CIA to warn him against making radio broadcasts critical of Khadafy.

According to Tafoya, he fired two shots at Zagallai's head only after the student pulled a gun on him.

The CIA denied ever hiring Tafoya, and prosecutors said he was working as a hitman for the Khadafy government.

On an average day you probably get out of bed, adjust the thermostat, make a pot of coffee, cook breakfast... perhaps use the dishwasher.

Later, maybe you do a load of laundry and listen to the radio. Then you cook dinner and put the leftovers in the refrigerator. You may turn on the television or settle down in your favorite chair next to a lamp to read.

Battle lines drawn in renewal of Endangered Species Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Endangered Species Act, the controversial 1973 law that lifted the snail darter and the furbish lousewort from obscurity, comes up for renewal next year — and battle lines are being drawn.

Twenty-five conservation organizations have banded together to protect the law against a likely assault by Interior Secretary James Watt, developers, timber and mining companies and electric utilities.

Watt's Interior Department is looking at 27 sections of the law as possible targets for change. Although the department says no decisions have been made, environmentalists are worried.

"It is clear that they are going to try to gut key aspects of the act as part of the deregulation mood of this administration," said Lewis Regenstein, executive vice president of the Fund for Animals.

"With thousands of species facing extinction, they are planning to loosen the safeguards we already have," Regenstein said.

But there are groups unhappy with the law. When the department asked for recommended changes, it got 400 comments.

"As viewed by the federal courts and agencies, the Endangered Species Act with its snail darters, squawfish, humpback chub, louseworts, desert turtles and other species stands supreme in the land no matter what it costs the country and its people in lost opportunities, declining job markets ... and the like," wrote the Colorado River Water Conservation District, which builds dams.

Environmentalists argue that industry groups are overplaying a few well-publicized cases.

In the most famous, completion of the Tellico Dam in Tennessee was delayed for years because of a three-inch fish, the snail darter. The issue tied Congress up in endless debate and wasn't resolved until the dam was granted a special waiver.

In another instance, a variety of snapdragon, the furbish lousewort, threatened to block the proposed Lincoln-Dickey Dam in northern Maine. The dam was modified to change the area to be flooded, although the project remains stalled in Congress for other reasons.

Conservationists say the few instances of major conflicts show the law is working. They say Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service has conducted more than 20,000 reviews since the law was passed and only a handful have wound up recommending substantial project changes.

The law bars federal agencies from building, supplying funds or granting permits to any project that jeopardizes an endangered species. The Fish and Wildlife Service reviews those decisions.

OVERCOME WITH EMOTION. Former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel hugs his wife Jeanne after his arrival at Baltimore-Washington International Airport Friday afternoon. Mandel was released from federal prison following a commutation by President Reagan of his three-year sentence. He had served 19 months of his prison term. (AP Laserphoto)

Out of prison, Mandel wants to be 'average Joe'

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, whose prison term for a felony conviction was cut short by President Reagan, says he'll return to family life and try to become "just an average Joe."

"There is no way I can explain ... the feeling that fills me right now — unbelievable. I am just so delighted to be here," Mandel, looking thin and tired, said here Friday night after a flight from Atlanta.

Mandel, 62, served 19 months of a three-year term at a minimum-security prison camp in Florida for mail fraud and racketeering.

He was convicted of taking $350,000 in cash and gifts as kickbacks in a scheme to fix favorable racing dates for the now-defunct Marlboro Race Course, in which his co-defendants held a secret interest.

The commutation of the sentence was ordered Thursday after a concerted lobbying effort by Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and a number of Maryland politicians.

"I just want to be an average Joe. I want to devote my attention to my family, which I haven't been able to," Mandel said after embracing his sobbing wife, Jeanne, at Baltimore-Washington International Airport.

Mandel said in Atlanta he has not decided what he will do now that he is free "because being institutionalized there's no place to try to make any plans."

Mandel has been suspended from law practice in Maryland and must face disbarment proceedings. He and his wife face a civil suit filed by the state for the return of 57 valuable art objects and antique furnishings officials contend were taken from the governor's mansion when he left office.

The state also contends the Mandels made off with state-owned food and liquor. The couple denies the charges.

Reagan also commuted the sentence of W. Dale Hess, the only other defendant in the case still in custody. Hess will be released Dec. 20 from a halfway house with the stipulation that he pay the remainder of a $40,000 fine imposed when he was sentenced.

No encouragement for farmers on their income

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest word from the Agriculture Department offers no encouragement to farmers that their income situation will improve significantly in coming months.

"This year's large U.S. crops and the weak economic climate here and abroad will continue to dominate the agricultural outlook until well into 1982," officials said Thursday. "Consequently, the farm sector faces the possibility of a third consecutive year of low net income."

But the report, issued by the department's Economic Research Service, said the 1982 outlook will be affected by several factors, including:

—The outcome of Northern Hemisphere winter crops, such as the U.S. winter wheat crop planted this fall, and summer crops now growing in the Southern Hemisphere.

—Decisions by U.S. producers on how much corn, spring wheat, soybeans, cotton and other crops they will plant next spring.

—The current recession and when the economy recovers.

—The outcome of Northern Hemisphere winter crops, such as the U.S. winter wheat crop planted this fall, and summer crops now growing in the Southern Hemisphere.

estimated for 1981 at $20 billion to $24 billion, compared with 1980's depressed level of $20 billion. Department economists have said 1982 income could fall $1 billion to $3 billion from this year.

"The overall downward pressure on farmers' incomes these last two years has affected farming groups unevenly," the report said. "For example, nominal crop receipts in 1981 will be up about 7 percent to $74 billion, while livestock receipts will rise only 2 percent to $69 billion."

Further, it said, farmers' interest costs are up sharply and are a significant factor in rising production expenses.

"The economic health of individual farms hinges largely on their level of indebtedness and the degree of their reliance on credit to finance farm operations," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average price farmers pay for fuel has apparently leveled off this fall, according to the Agriculture Department.

As of mid-November, according to the most recent tabulations, leaded gasoline delivered to the farm in bulk averaged $1.29 a gallon, unchanged from mid-October. A year ago, it averaged $1.17 a gallon.

Diesel fuel delivered to the farm averaged $1.17 per gallon nationally, also unchanged from October. It was $1.01 in November 1980.

Bulk deliveries of LP gas averaged 70.5 cents per gallon in November, up from 70.1 cents in October and 64 cents a gallon a year earlier, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Butter production continues to be above year-earlier levels, reflecting record milk output this year.

The Agriculture Department said butter output in October totaled about 100 million pounds, up 10 percent from the same month of 1980.

Production of American-type cheese was 198 million pounds, up 6 percent from October 1980, according to the department's Crop Reporting Board.

The monthly report also showed October production of non-fat dry milk at 90.4 million pounds, up 24 percent from a year earlier.

Windbreaks tame strong Panhandle breezes

Severe windstorms can make life difficult in rural areas. One of the most economical ways we can tame these high winds is through the use of windbreaks.

A great deal of soil moisture is lost during wind storms. Windbreaks are designed to reduce the wind velocity and conserve soil moisture which is so important to farming in this area. This extra moisture at planting time can play a major part in getting that good stand that farmers hope for every year. Then, after the crop is up, the dense stand of trees will protect the plants from strong winds that could destroy crops in their early stages.

Any 4-H'er or former member, 14 through 21 years of age, are eligible to participate in the LABO program. 4-H'ers wanting to go to Japan must contact the County Extension office before December 15, 1981, for more information and to have your name sent to the State 4-H office as a possible delegate.

Dec. 11 - 6:30 p.m. — Grandview 4-H meeting, Pizza Hut

HORSE JUDGING

The 4-H Horse Judging program will begin meeting each Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Courthouse Annex in Pampa. The next meeting will be December 9. This meeting will be about judging halter horses.

Any youth aged 9 to 19 who likes horses and wants to know how to judge and evaluate horses is invited to attend these meetings. It is not necessary to own a horse or have one available. Parents are also invited to attend the programs with their children.

PARADE ENTRY

Congratulations to the Bit and Bridle 4-H Horse Project group for winning first place in the Non-Commercial Division of the Torchlight Christmas Parade.

Many hours of thought and work were required to complete the float, and the first place award is a welcomed reward.

Hot tubbing new on dating circuit

By DEBORAH BELGUM
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On a typical Friday or Saturday night, the parking lot at the former Montessori school is packed with cars as disparate as the clientele. Jaguars, Porsches and Alfa Romeos are parked next to Fords, Chevrolets and Volkswagens.

Inside, a roaring fire lights the lobby where guests — mostly couples — sign in for an hour or two of soaking in sybaritic splendor.

Hot tubbing — the backyard custom of lounging in 100-degree bubbling water — has become the latest thing to do on a date in Los Angeles.

The idea was popularized by two area establishments — Hot Tub Fever and Le Hot Tub — where, for $10 an hour per person, patrons rent hot tub rooms complete with sauna, showers, hair dryers, tape decks and "relaxation" beds.

At Hot Tub Fever, once the door to a private room is shut, the rest of the world is a thousand miles away. Hot tubbers can idle away their time soaking in a five-foot tub while listening to taped music, lounging on a rubber hammock slung over the tub, playing backgammon on a floating board or relaxing in the sauna.

For Dedra, 19, and Miguel, 21, both students, it was their first time at the place. "I really enjoyed it," Dedra said. "It was different and relaxing."

Another couple, Sharon and Wayne, both in their late 30s, came because it was something out of the ordinary. "We usually go to the movies," she said.

The weekend action is not restricted to just single couples.

Carole Cook invited her husband, Jim, who just turned 34, to Hot Tub Fever as a birthday present.

For the true hedonist interested in more than just relaxation, there is the V.I.P. room which has the added attraction of a fireplace, built-in color television set with remote control and videotape machine, bathroom complete with bidet, and backdoor entrance for those celebrities who wish to go unnoticed.

"We've had office parties in the V.I.P. room," said owner Steven Freedberg, adding that he gets a lot of V.I.P. business from the movie and record industry.

The 39-year-old Freedberg, who used to be in the packing business, says his average customer is between 18 and 45 and stays between 1½ and two hours, although the record was 12 hours and 40 minutes.

He said business is brisk on Friday and Saturday nights from about 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. The club is open until 6 a.m. on weekends and until 3 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Hot Tub Fever offers various fruit juices to its guests, but patrons can bring their own more spirited refreshments if they desire, Freedberg says.

Hot Tub Fever Inc., which is owned by Freedberg and several other partners, invested $500,000 to renovate the building.

The initial capital outlay has kept a lot of competition out of the market for now, with only a handful of clubs located primarily in northern and southern parts of the state.

Hot Tub Fever's main competitor in the Los Angeles area is Le Hot Tub Club, a smaller $250,000 establishment with only six rooms and a low-key setting. The building is wedged in between a YWCA and a small retail business. There is no large lobby where customers can wait, and patrons must make reservations specifying how long they plan to stay.

To owner Larry Davis, hot tub establishments are "the American version of the Japanese bathhouse." The bearded 34-year-old entrepreneur — who got into the aquarium business 17 years ago, branched into retailing hot tubs four years ago and started renting them two years ago — says the club gets a lot of stag parties and anniversary parties.

"We got about 25 students once who had just taken their bar exam and decided to celebrate, even though they weren't going to be getting the results for a couple of months," Davis said, who calls his typical customer a "BMW driver."

"They are in their late 20s to late 40s and annually make between $30,000 to $100,000 and up," he said.

"We have a lot of women who come in with their boyfriends blindfolded as a birthday surprise. They will have called in advance and reserved a room," he said.

Cold facts for seniors

By Lou Cottin

Winter is coming. Young and middle-aged folks may welcome the winter with words like "brisk," "exciting" and "refreshing."

But older people will check threadbare overcoats — if they have them. In very cold weather, they will bundle up and wear several layers of sweaters and underwear. These garments may keep them warm when they are forced to go outdoors.

It will not matter too much if they shiver a bit at home. Or so they think. As they see it, the main thing is not to catch a cold that may turn into pneumonia.

But even more dangerous to old people is the possibility of contracting "accidental hypothermia" — a medical term that translates to mean "subnormal temperatures of the human body."

If left untreated, the disease can be fatal. The condition is particularly dangerous to seniors. For example, the incidence of hypothermia is five times greater for people over age 75 than for those under 75.

Specific rates of accidental hypothermia among the U.S. elderly have not been determined. But a survey in Great Britain found that 3.6 percent of those over age 64 admitted to hospitals during winter had body temperatures below 95 degrees, the level at which a person is considered hypothermic.

Accidental hypothermia is difficult to diagnose clinically. It can go undetected when ordinary clinical thermometers are used. Special low-reading thermometers are required for positive recognition of the condition.

Yet, a survey of 243 hospital emergency rooms made by physicians at New York's Mount Sinai Hospital revealed these startling facts:

— Only 20 percent of the hospitals had low-reading thermometers in their emergency rooms.

— An additional 30 percent had some access to low-reading thermometers. But whether the doctors know where in the hospital to find these thermometers is anybody's guess.

— The most dismal fact is that 50 percent of the hospital emergency rooms had no ready access to low-reading thermometers.

Obviously, American hospitals need to be better prepared to detect and treat older people with hypothermia.

Just as obviously, the elderly need to keep their homes warm enough (at least above 65 degrees) to stave off hypothermia. But the cost of heating a house — any house — will be higher this winter than many poor older Americans can afford.

The social services, the offices for senior citizens, the paramedical organizations and the other groups that serve older Americans know the cold facts very well.

What, then, is called for in this looming emergency?

Social-service organizations in every community should organize to keep the elderly warm this winter. States should start the program with a ringing call for action. Cities and counties should offer leadership. The well-to-do should be asked to make donations.

Yes, the drive to keep our homes warm should be organized top to bottom. Businesses, banks and community organizations should be part of this drive.

Be sure of it. Even if the upcoming winter is the worst on record, the federal government's skinflints will lend no help at all. The budget cuts passed by Congress will hurt most in winter.

Timber companies are tightening security

By BETH WATERS
Beaumont Enterprise & Journal
BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — In the millions of acres of timberland in East Texas are a handful of people at work stealing lumber of private and commercial concerns. Statistics show that although only a few timber thieves are at work, their activities are costing timber businesses thousands of dollars a week.

The timber thief's tools are often sophisticated — walkie-talkies and citizen's band radios are employed to coordinate accomplices and to thwart security efforts.

Smaller operations incorporate a simplistic but successful scheme of diverting timber from its legitimate destination for an illegitimate profit to be pocketed tax-free. The small operation also may incorporate simple "timber rustling" or falsifying deeds to sell timber not owned by the salesman.

Timber industry executives explain that while strikes by timber thieves are few, the number of dollars lost in one theft is staggering. For example, a single timber load is worth $1,000 and 50 loads may be handled daily. If one load were taken each day of the year by one timber thief, more than $250,000 would be lost.

Because the number of thieves are few, the number of contractors many and the amount of loads and sales great, discovering the illegal activity is tough. Often, the timber-stealing may go undetected long after the actual theft has occurred.

"If timber theft is as bad as some people say, we've either been very lucky or we've been living through ignorance," says Glenn Chancellor, vice president of land and timber for Temple-Eastex, the largest timber landholder in East Texas with more than 1 million acres in 22 counties.

"We've tried to set up as foolproof a system as we can. We use two different people to verify the logs coming in, a logging supervisor and an audit forester, who conducts random visits," Chancellor says. "It's just not a major problem for us right now, but that could mean that we don't know about it."

Another major timber company in the region, Kirby Forest Industries, has used similar security methods and one of those measures clued the company to a $100,000 ripoff that had been operating for more than seven months right before administrators' eyes.

John Wood, general manager for resources at Kirby, said a single thief has been responsible for stealing more than $100,000 worth of timber. A grand jury has indicted a suspect who is now awaiting a court appearance.

 "He made one mistake ... he stayed on a big company too long. He should have stayed with the smaller businesses," Wood said, adding he suspects the thief has been stealing timber for 20 years. "It has not happened to Kirby on this scale before, but it has on a smaller scale of about one or two loads per week."

Kirby officials went through their contracts with loggers and log truck scale receipts to piece together the pattern of "diversion" theft, which involves a single contractor who enters a company's track to cut, haul and deliver the timber. The illegal contractor then diverts the load to another company that unknowingly accepts the wood and pays the contractor for the lumber as if it were his.

 He also may get paid for cutting and hauling timber, which could be the second payment he has received for the same work as contracted by the original timber company.

"Ninety percent of our logging contractors are just as honest as they can be and that's a good percentage," Wood said.

But he added the case has caused his company to become "sensitized" to timber theft and has led to stricter administrative measures. Kirby also has discovered another suspected scheme involving false land deeds.

In such operations, Wood said, people file false deeds for timber land not their own, transfer the deed several times and eventually buy it back and sell the timber at the site. The many transfers of false deeds make it difficult for companies purchasing the stolen timber to detect the illegal activity when they research the land's ownership.

In some cases, the phony deed holder may enter into contract with a company allowing them to enter the track and cut the timber, nearly making that company a party to the theft. While Wood says his company now conducts more intensive title searches in those cases, the "absentee landowner" often still does not know his land has been cleared of timber.

Predictions for the timber theft are mixed. Temple-Eastex Chancellor says the current economic slump, which has curtailed the demand for building materials,

There's a new law that affects every working American today.

Senator Bill Sarpalius
Reports

The Price of Federalism
 AUSTIN — During the last session of the Legislature, we passed a bill to regulate the disposal of low-level nuclear waste stored in this state. We made sure the dump site, wherever it may be, would be in an appropriate location, it must be well-maintained, licensed, etc.

We had the power to regulate a state site for storage of low-level waste generated in this state. We, the Texas legislature, do not have the power to regulate federal disposal sites for high-level waste.

First, we should decide what we're talking about. Low-level waste is things like used X-ray film and gloves worn by workers in nuclear power plants. High-level waste is the fuel used in nuclear power plants, the explosive used in nuclear bombs and plutonium.

Test crews have been in the Panhandle periodically to look for a site for permanent disposal of high-level nuclear waste. This does not mean such a site will be established in the Panhandle. It does mean it is possible.

Disposal of high-level nuclear waste is the responsibility of the Department of Energy in Washington. That agency will make the final determination of where to put the site. Now, it is considering sites over about a 1,000 square-mile area which includes Randall, Donley, Oldham and Swisher Counties.

We want all of the people we represent to know that we are absolutely opposed to the establishment of any kind of nuclear waste dump anywhere in the Panhandle. We will do what we can to stop the storage, but the matter is in the hands of the federal government.

Officials of the DOE will drill a major test hole by late 1983. They plan to test this shaft extensively, and decide which site to use by 1985. Actual storage would begin by 1990.

Two other sites are in the running to become high-level storage facilities: one is in the Gulf Coast and one is in Utah. We do not know, nor does the federal government know, which will be chosen.

We may not be in the business of disposing of high-level nuclear waste now, but one thing seems certain — we will be in the business of generating such waste soon after the opening of the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City and the Comanche Peak Nuclear Project near Fort Worth. Other states are reluctant to store "foreign" high-level waste, that is, waste from other states, just as we are.

Next week, we will outline the technical requirements DOE is considering in this choice of a site, and tell you what you can do to object to the establishment of a high-level nuclear waste storage site in your area.

Normally, we close this column by inviting you to write us and tell us what we can do for you. In this case, there is not much, if anything, the Texas Legislature can do. If you are interested in nuclear waste storage, or in the workings of the Department of Energy, write the DOE, Nuclear Waste Terminal Storage Office, 505 King Avenue, Columbus, Ohio 43201.

Product advertising is aimed at Hispanics

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso billboard reads "Budweiser es para usted" (is for you). A local television salesman closes his TV ad with "thank you and muchas gracias." A radio spot for a car dealer includes mariachi music.

Advertisers in the Southwest are aiming their promotions and their dollars at the growing Hispanic population, developing a "new" market and creating a boom for Hispanic ad agencies.

The increase in advertising is coming mostly because of the increase in population, says San Antonio ad man Lionel Sosa. "There are more families buying more every day. The companies who don't do anything about it are losing by default."

Census figures estimate that there are 15 million people in the United States with Hispanic backgrounds and that number is growing every year.

"The Hispanic population is growing 6 1/2 times the rate of the non-Hispanic population," Sosa said. "One out of every four Texans is Hispanic. One out of every two kids in the first grade in Los Angeles has a Spanish surname."

Sosa believes the Hispanic population was "discovered" by national advertisers in 1978 when Time magazine carried a cover story on Hispanics that detailed the rapid growth rate.

Three months later, Newsweek had a big article, he said. "There's also been articles in the Wall Street Journal, Forbes, every major publication. The smart marketers said, 'Hey, maybe this is the way to increase our market share.'"

El Paso media consultant Steve Maese agreed that the increase in advertising for Hispanics has occurred in the last three years, but said he believed more accurate counting of the population was the main reason for the growth.

Whatever the reason, advertisers found themselves aiming their ads at a market they had virtually ignored in the past. The problem, they found, was in how to approach a diverse group of people whose common bond was the Spanish language.

They turned to advertising firms that specialize in appealing to the Hispanic audience. Different firms have developed different methods of analyzing the Hispanic market and designing ads that will result in higher sales for their clients.

Sosa and his vice president, behaviorist Bernadette Brusco, developed a method of segmenting the Hispanic audience called acculturation influence grouping.

"Most advertisers who are interested in entering the Hispanic market ask what is the difference between Mexican-Americans, Puerto Ricans, Central Americans, South Americans," Sosa said. "We find that, yes, there are differences between those groups. But there are more differences based on how long these folks have been in this country."

The three groups Sosa uses in his research are Group 1: recent immigrants with ties to the old country who still speak and read mostly Spanish; Group 2: Hispanics equally comfortable in Spanish or American language and culture; and Group 3: those who speak and read little Spanish and are most acculturated into the American mainstream.

For example, Albuquerque is 50 percent Hispanic, but of that amount, 40 percent of them are in group 3," Sosa said. "They are third, fourth, even fifth generation Mexican-Americans. In Los Angeles, it's the exact opposite. Sixty percent there is in group 1."

"When we are able to segment these groups, we are able to determine how the advertiser can get the most for his money," Sosa said.

"It's just segmented marketing," Bob Bloom, chief executive officer of the Bloom Companies Inc. in Dallas, said focusing advertising toward Hispanics is part of a nationwide trend toward segmented marketing of all kinds. Because of high advertising costs, Bloom said, advertisers try to best use their dollars by appealing to more specific audiences.

Bloom, whose staff of 300 is one of the biggest in the field of Hispanic advertising, segments markets on geographic, demographic and psychographic lines.

He said the Hispanic community is unique because it is different in all three segments. Demographically and psychographically, the Hispanics perceive themselves as a fairly cohesive group with similar language, culture and tastes. Geographically, they are concentrated in the Southwest. Southern California, New York, Miami and Chicago. A June study by the New York research firm of Yankelovich, Skelly and White found that 76 percent of Hispanics are located in California, Texas and New York. Seventy-eight percent of Mexican-Americans, the largest Hispanic group, are in California and Texas.

Bloom said the concentration of the Hispanics allows advertisers to reach them through local and regional media — much cheaper than national advertising.

Reaching the Hispanic communities was a problem in itself because of the relative inexperience advertisers had in appealing to that market.

The first problem was language. The Yankelovich study says 43 percent of Hispanics speak no English or only enough to get by. Forty-seven percent are fully bilingual.

The initial approach by many advertisers was to dub Spanish into English language commercials. That, they found, doesn't always work.

"It was ridiculous," said Pilar Herrera of the Artworks Advertising firm in El Paso. "You spend all that money on this slick commercial, then you ruin it by using dubbed Spanish."

"You have to study whether you can adapt the campaign in Spanish as well as English," Mrs. Herrera said. "Sometimes, you have to start all over. For example, a pun in English will not translate."

There was also a problem with dialects spoken by the different Hispanic groups.

"Advertisers often say, 'Well, just how do I talk to a Central American as opposed to how I talk to a South American,'" Sosa said. "Our approach is let's just say we're talking to Americans. There is a neutral Spanish that is like Walter Cronkite's English. It is understood by everyone."

The Yankelovich study found that nearly half of the Hispanics' exposure to media was to Spanish language television, radio and newspapers. But many companies aim their ads toward the Hispanics who speak English, most of whom are in better financial shape than those who recently arrived in the United States, Bloom said.

The advertising agencies found through their research that they can appeal to the growing market through traditional Hispanic values such as family, masculinity, the homeland and holidays. Hispanic faces, music and food add the touch to English language commercials the agencies think will get Hispanic attention.

Maese noted that the national advertising is primarily very macho. The men have mustaches and dark hair. The Spanish flavor is the whole thing."

But Sosa warned that advertisers must take care that they don't go to extremes in portraying Hispanics.

"Overdoing that kind of thing can backfire," he said. "Anything that even verges on a stereotype can be dangerous."

"The keyword here is sensitivity," agreed Bloom. "It's a festive audience. The advertising should be upbeat, but you can't do it to the point that it's corny."

Mrs. Herrera said the key is to make advertisements relative to Hispanic culture. Many advertising tricks used for Anglo audiences will not work with Hispanic audiences because of different cultural frames of reference.

Walking the tightrope between exploitation and appeal has become a big business for advertising firms.

"Many of the big companies are forming Hispanic departments and there are a lot of new companies springing up," Mrs. Herrera said.

One of those companies is Sosa and Associates, which Sosa formed less than a year ago after leaving another firm. Sosa said his eight-person staff expects to gross $2.5 million in its first year.

"There isn't a week that goes by that at least one major advertiser doesn't call for information about the Hispanic market," Sosa said.

Man arrested had cop's badge

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A man was arrested for investigation of impersonating a police officer when he claimed that he retired from the South Houston, Texas, police department after being shot in the leg.

Dennis Allen Stone, 30, told Fresno police he was Capt. Paul Brookover and was carrying a detective's badge to prove it.

Mexican oil boom means riches north of border

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Wealthy Mexicans — enriched by an oil boom — are coming to San Antonio and buying condominiums, luxury cars, high-priced clothing and jewelry with stacks of cash carried in suitcases and paper bags, business officials say.

The best figures available show that this city — second only to Los Angeles as a favorite U.S. shopping spot for Mexicans — benefits from Mexican trade by at least $750 million a year — $350 million in exports and $400 million in tourism.

Those figures might be low, said Morrison Woods of the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce. He said some cash transactions probably don't show in chamber statistics.

"They sometimes buy on the credit, but mostly it's done for cash and I mean real cash — not checks or anything like that," said Tom Wallendorf, general sales manager at a Chevrolet dealership.

Wallendorf said he has seen customers from Mexico buy $13,000 Chevrolets and pay in all $20 or $100 bills they tote into the dealership in suitcases.

"They always buy large cars, fully loaded, everything on it. They buy sports cars and they buy big cars," he said.

Joe Tressa, sales manager at a Cadillac dealership, said one couple from Mexico bought a luxury house in the San Antonio area, had it furnished and stocked with groceries, then had the furniture dealer pick up a new Cadillac and park in the garage to await their arrival. All was bought with cash.

"In other words, they wanted it furnished when they got here, and a car. We never met the people," Tressa said.

Lola Lozano, a real estate saleswoman, recently sold a $71,000 home to a Mexican couple referred by another client from Mexico she had sold a condominium to several years ago.

"They put the down payment and earnest money up in cash," the realtor said. "They do have money, no doubt about it."

Joe Condello, advertising and marketing director of North Star Mall, a recently renovated center of luxury stores near the airport, estimates 20 percent of the mall's $175 million in sales last year were made to Mexicans.

Customers from Mexico fly or drive in, particularly on weekends and holidays, to stock up on clothing and other items not readily available, or more expensive, in Mexico, Condello said.

He said most Mexican customers come to San Antonio from Mexico City and Monterrey, which has a swelling middle class of young professionals in suddenly oil-rich Mexico.

"They are getting a lot of young professionals, people who never had money before. They pay even better than on our side of the border, and all of a sudden you have this nouveau rich over there. It's more of the building of a good upper middle class, and it's all American money by the time they reach North Star Mall," Condello said.

He said many of the Mexicans are carrying empty suitcases, as well, so they can stuff them full of new clothing, wear their new jewelry and not have to pay any duties on the American products when they fly or drive back into Mexico.

Pat Ehler, another real estate agent, said many rich Mexicans had purchased $150,000 to $200,000 condominiums, in posh Mission Trace and hired interior decorators to furnish them.

"They like the security of Mission Trace because most of them go out and buy all-new furniture, all-new everything," she said. "It's incredible. You're in awe when you go down and look at them (condos). They come with briefcases full of cash. It's really interesting. A lot of them do have bank accounts here in town. A few of them have gotten loans. Savings and Loans generally want a higher down payment from Mexican nationals and usually higher interest rates because they are part-time homes."

Bill Sawyer, general merchandising manager for Dianne Flack Interiors, said an important part of his firm's business was done with Mexican customers buying part-time residences in San Antonio.

buying for retirement, some for vacation homes. Some use San Antonio as a pivot point and don't want to stay in hotels, and certainly can afford not to," Sawyer said. "We've had people from all facets of business from agriculture to textiles, in fact, very little oil. Most of our clientele, I would say, is Mexican old wealth, not new wealth."

"They're buying everywhere... We have one particular client who comes here for medical reasons and just doesn't want to stay in hotels. We have another who gave his wife a furnished home for Christmas. They're all concerned about the devaluation of the peso."

"If I were to make a general statement about it, I would think the people of Mexico we've dealt with are a very genteel group of people. They are well-educated, well-traveled. They enjoy Americanization. For them to have a washer and dryer in Mexico with their (electric) voltage is unique. This is a country of gadgets and they really enjoy that."

"They don't have access to those things in Mexico. I think generally they are enamored with the American life style and want it. They can't have it there, so they are getting it here and in Montreal and San Francisco and Houston," he added.

Woods said Chamber of Commerce figures show that 1980 was a turning point in which for the first time Mexican tourists began spending more per capita than Canadian tourists. The average of $812.50 for every man, woman and child coming here from Mexico is the most spent by any group of foreign tourists, he said.

He used that figure to project that $400 million is spent by Mexican tourists in San Antonio.

In all, Wood said, 3.2 million Mexicans came to the United States last year and spent $2.6 billion, with 16 percent of the total tourism and expenditures taking place in San Antonio.

Los Angeles leads the nation by hosting 30 percent of the Mexicans, San Antonio is second with 16 percent, followed by Houston with 15 percent and San Francisco with 10 percent, according to the U.S. Travel Service, Department of Commerce.

Fred Lepick, president of Frost National Bank, the city's largest financial institution, confirmed "a large business with Mexico and the Mexican people," but he wouldn't release any figures.

"We have a lot of good (Mexican) bank customers and we'd like to have more. Our business is increasing rapidly. I think Mexico is a great deal more prosperous than it was two or three years ago," Lepick said.

Ms. Ehler said she heard that one Mexican couple bought a residence here because "they were getting their money out of Mexico" because "they feared a Communist takeover."

Sawyer and others speculated fear of a major devaluation of the peso, which has floated since a major devaluation in 1976, was causing Mexicans to spend, invest and deposit more money in the United States.

But Lepick said he discounted the devaluation theory. "We really haven't seen that," he said. "We just think it is an increase in volume and activity in Mexico."

Whatever the reason for the stepped-up Mexican interest in San Antonio, local merchants are happy they are getting a share of the business.

"We are very, very fortunate to have a very wonderful clientele from Mexico," said Allan Shephard, general manager of La Mansion del Norte, a hotel which caters to wealthy travelers. His hotel provides free transportation to and from the airport and North Star Mall, keeps a bilingual staff and changes pesos to dollars for registered guests.

La Mansion del Norte, North Star Mall and other local businesses have begun advertising south of the border to attract Mexicans to San Antonio.

One local magazine, the Spanish-language Ventana USA, circulates 235,000 copies in El Heraldito, a national Mexican newspaper, and El Norte de Monterrey, another newspaper. The magazine is full of advertising to lure Mexicans to U.S. stores.

Scots will attend Capitol centennial

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The lord provost of Aberdeen, Scotland, will be an honored guest at the Texas Capitol on Feb. 1 when the state marks the 100th anniversary of the start of construction of the Capitol.

Alexander Collie said his wife will be in honor of the Scottish stone masons who helped build the granite building, according to Randy Lee, executive director of the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

The Scottish visitors will arrive at the Capitol in a horse-drawn carriage that once carried Presidents William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt, according to Lee. Gov. Bill Clements and wife Rita will join the Collies in the carriage.

Lee said the committee also wants a giant, Capitol-shaped birthday cake for the party.

Heard-Jones DRUG

Harvesters race past Altus, 84-49

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Writer

It was one of those games where the scoreboard didn't exactly tell the whole truth.

Although the final numerals said Pampa 84, Altus, Okla. 49, it just didn't add up to one of the Harvesters' better games.

"The score looked good, but we just didn't play well," Pampa coach Garland Nichols said, following Friday night's interstate game in Harvester Fieldhouse. "It just didn't feel like we beat them 35 points and I know the kids didn't feel that way either."

Nichols was particularly displeased with errant passing on fast break attempts that helped produce 25 turnovers.

"We'll take a win any day, but our passing just wasn't as crisp as I'd like for it to be," Nichols added. "I don't know if the Altus defense had anything to do with it or not, but we're going to be working on our passing."

"We don't like to get into a rag-tag game with anybody. We want to run, but we want to do it with consistency."

Pampa spotted Altus a 4-0 lead in the early going, but Pampa caught up and went ahead to stay, 12-10, on Charles Nelson's corner jumper midway in the first quarter.

The Harvesters shot 56.6 percent (17-30) from the floor and overwhelmed Altus on the boards, 17-9, for a commanding 41-27 halftime lead.

"Rebounding was a plus part of the game for us," Nichols added. "We were very physical on the boards."

Overall, Pampa shot 55.9 percent (33-59) from the floor and 64.2 percent (18-28) from the foul line.

Altus managed only 32.8 percent (22-67) from the floor and 35.7 percent (5-14) from the charity stripe. Pampa had a 37-23 advantage in rebounding.

Mike Nelson, a 6-3 junior, scored 24 points, pulled down 13 rebounds and was a perfect eight of eight from the foul line. Nelson hit his first five shots from the floor and wound up with an eight of 12 shooting night.

Charles Nelson, a 6-4 senior, chipped in 18 points and five rebounds. Terry Faggins, a 6-4 senior, had 14 points and nine rebounds. Phil Jeffrey, a 6-4 junior, came off the bench to toss in 11 points.

Also scoring for the Harvesters were Coyle Winborn, seven; Paul Prentice, five; Terry Ferguson, three; and Meryl Dowdy, two.

Dennis Neal paced Altus with 18 points.

Pampa is now 3-1 on the season. Altus is 0-1.

Pampa takes on Borger, currently unbeaten at 5-0, Tuesday night in the Bulldogs' gym.

"Borger has a good team this year, so we want to pack their place with our people," Nichols added.

Briggs paces SMU victory

DALLAS (AP) — John Briggs scored a career-high 18 points, including a tip-in to give Southern Methodist a 70-65 lead with 2:32 left, to lead the Mustangs to an 82-73 college basketball victory over Texas-Arlington Saturday.

The contest was extremely physical. Texas-Arlington forward Andre Langford was called for a flagrant personal foul and ejected after he threw an elbow that fractured the jaw of Southern Methodist guard Chuck Anderson.

The Mavericks accumulated 32 fouls and starters Ralph McPherson, Albert Culton and Don Williams fouled out midway through the second half.

"That is what killed us," said Texas-Arlington coach Snake LeGrand, who was assessed two technical fouls.

Southern Methodist, now 3-1, got 14 points from Dave Piehler, and Mustang center Jon Koncak blocked eight shots and grabbed 11 rebounds. Briggs had eight rebounds.

Ralph McPherson and Jeffrey Stewart led Texas-Arlington with 18 points each as the Mavericks' record fell to 1-2.

Pampa girls fall in tournament

LEVELLAND—Pampa fell to Post, 55-42, Friday in girls' basketball play in the Levelland Tournament.

Betty Prangler poured in 32 points for Levelland while Keva Richardson topped Pampa in scoring with 12 points.

Prangler is one of the better players we've played against this season," Pampa coach Jerry Johnson said.

Debi Young and Ladina Hunnicutt had six and five points respectively for the Lady Harvesters.

Johnson said Tina Greenway and Trecca George had outstanding defensive games.

"We're getting to be much more consistent than we were last season," Johnson said. "We lost to weak teams last year, but every team we've played this year has been pretty strong. The team is showing much more of a competitive spirit."

Young pulled down 11 rebounds for Pampa while George and Richardson had seven and six respectively.

Pampa, 1-8, plays Lubbock High there Tuesday night. The Lady Harvesters are entered in the Clovis Tournament Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Allen awarded Heisman Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying, "I wish there were a lot of little Heismans that I could distribute among my teammates," USC tailback Marcus Allen Saturday night accepted the trophy given to the finest football player in America.

Allen, the first man in college football history to gain over 2,000 yards in a season, became the fourth University of Southern California tailback to win the Heisman Trophy.

He received 1,797 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, beating Herschel Walker of the University of Georgia, who finished second with 1,199. Jim McMahon of Brigham Young was third with 706 points, followed by Pittsburgh's Dan Marino with 256 and Ohio State's Art Schlichter with 149.

"I've found my place in history," Allen said. "Nobody can take this from me. It makes me feel proud, and it's something I'll always cherish."

Allen was the blocking back as a sophomore when USC's Charles White won the Heisman in 1979.

"I guess I've got two now," the senior said. "Charlie and I are real good friends and when he won it, I felt I was contributing to something great."

If '79 was White's year, then 1981 was clearly Allen's.

"I wasn't thinking Heisman," he said. "Obviously it was in the back of my mind. But I decided I'd just try to give the best performance every week, tried to win each week and everything would fall into place."

By winning the trophy, Allen becomes a voter in future competition.

"I'd have voted for myself," he said, "because in this particular year, I thought I'd have deserved it."

Army, Navy battle to deadlock

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Punter Joe Sartiano kept Navy in the hole and the Army defense rose to the occasion Saturday as the underdog Cadets earned a 3-3 tie in the annual football clash between the two service academies.

Sartiano had punts of 51 and 57 yards in the fourth quarter to keep Navy deep in its own territory. In the first half, Sartiano recorded punts of 58 and a record 79 yards.

The 82-year-old series now stands at 38-37-7 in Navy's favor, but the tie by the 3-7-1 Army team was more than just a draw against the highly favored Navy team, 7-3-1 and bound for the Liberty Bowl.

Army took the second-half kickoff and drove to the 3-3 tie on a 27-yard field goal by Dave Aucoin. Keying the 11-play, 81-yard drive was Todd Williams' 42-yard run.

The sophomore running back, subbing for Gerald Walker, who suffered a bruised thigh in the first half, picked up 90 yards on 16 carries.

A 16-yard pass from quarterback

Jerry Bennett, who replaced starter Bryan Allen, to flanker Al Wynder put the ball on the Navy 13. Three running plays netted 6 yards before Aucoin came on to knot the score.

Running back Eddie Meyers had 119 yards on 32 carries. Meyers' 1,318 yards set a new Navy season record, breaking the 1977 mark of 1,292 yards set by Joe Gattuso. His 277 rushes also broke Gattuso's season mark and the senior holds the Navy career rushing record 2,935 yards.

UNBEATEN TEAM. The T Shirts Plus team, pictured above with their coach, Miles Cook, went undefeated to win their age division in the Pampa Soccer Association. T Shirts Plus, along with 38 other teams, will be honored with an awards ceremony at 7 p.m. Monday night in M.K. Brown Auditorium. All youngsters entered in the fall leagues will receive an Association patch. The highlight of the evening will be the presentation of first-place individual plaques to the winners of each age division.

Cowboys seek playoff momentum against Colts

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, assured of their 15th National Football League playoff berth in 16 years, seek to gain some postseason momentum Sunday against the hapless Baltimore Colts.

"We have to play every game and every team well from here on in, no matter what the records are," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said as the Cowboys prepared to face a Baltimore team that has lost 12 straight following an opening game victory.

"That's what we have to do if we're going to do well in the playoffs," Landry said. "You build a certain momentum to take into the playoffs and in you don't, then you usually don't last very long."

Dallas is favored by 12 points in what appears to be a gross mismatch. But after surviving a Thanksgiving Day scare to defeat the lowly Chicago Bears 10-9 and run their record to 10-3, the Cowboys weren't expected to take the Colts lightly.

Landry, in a conference call interview from Texas, said he tries to remind his players of such letdowns, "but sometimes they don't listen."

"From an offensive standpoint," Landry said, "the Colts have as good offensive weapons as we face each week."

Last week, however, the Baltimore offense turned in its worst effort of a dismal season as the Colts were blanked 25-0 by the New York Jets.

Quarterback Bert Jones, the subject of persistent trade rumors, completed 10 of 24 passes for 142 yards, threw one interception and was sacked five times.

Jones suffered an injured right shoulder on the last sack of the game, and did not practice early in the week for the Cowboys. If Jones were unavailable, David Humm would start after little more than a week with the club.

Humm, who had thrown just 83 passes in six previous seasons with Oakland and Buffalo, was signed as a free agent after backup quarterback Greg Landry injured his back while picking up his daughter.

Schoolboy football roundup

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer
Richardson Lake Highlands halfback Alvin Rettig dashed for two fourth-quarter touchdowns on Grand Prairie fumbles to lead the Wildcats to a 28-21 win in Class 5A schoolboy football quarterfinals Friday.

Rettig rushed for 151 yards against the Gophers, scoring the touchdowns on runs of 2 and 14 yards. The Wildcats, now 13-0, will play the winner of Saturday's contest between Hereford and Fort Worth Eastern Hills.

A 14-14 tie that lasted until early in the fourth quarter was shaken when Grand Prairie's Rusty Lagow fumbled on his own 2-yard line and Lake Highlands' Bobby Kinder recovered 2 yards short of the goal.

The fumble allowed Rettig to score on a 2-yard run on the following play and Todd Tschantz added the extra point, giving the Wildcats a 21-14 lead.

Grand Prairie quarterback Marion Brown tossed a 14-yard pass to Leonard Smith with 3:58 left in the game, but the ball popped out and Lake Highlands' Thomas Jefferson recovered at the Gopher 37.

Rettig scored from the 14 with 1:20 remaining to make the score 28-14, after Lake Highlands drove 37 yards in six plays. The Gophers closed the gap with a 99-yard kickoff return by Milton Morton with 1:04 left, but Lake Highlands then ran the remaining seconds off the clock.

A 2-yard touchdown run by Lagow and a 34-yard pass from Brown to Leonard Smith gave Grand Prairie a 14-7 halftime lead. Lake Highlands' first-half score was on a 1-yard run by quarterback Steve Hurst.

The Wildcats tied the score on their first series of the second half with a 7-yard run by Jay Allen.

In other Class 5A playoff action, San Antonio Churchill quarterback Cody Carlson threw two scoring passes and ran for a touchdown to head up a 28-15 quarterfinal win over Alice at Austin's Memorial Stadium.

Carlson passed 3 yards to Tim Dimler and 10 yards to Tony Sacre, then ran 13 yards to score. San Antonio Churchill, now 13-0, ensured its second schoolboy semifinal playoff berth in four years.

Churchill will face Houston Yates, who handed a 45-14 defeat to Aldine, in next weekend's semifinal round. The site and time of that game have not been set.

Dimler accounted for Churchill's final score of the game, plunging 1 yard for a touchdown with 24 seconds left in the game.

Alice scored on a pair of touchdown passes by Sonny Brown — a 2-yard toss to Gilbert Ozuna and a 23-yard throw to Sac Buentello — and Darryl Meyer's 24-yard field goal.

In the Yates victory at the Houston Astrodome, quarterback Thomas Ledet threw for three touchdowns and rushed for two more scores to lead the Lions to the semifinal spot.

Ledet tossed first-half passes of 22, 57 and 29 yards to wide receiver Jeffery Fields to give Yates a 21-7 halftime lead.

Fields scored on a 51-yard interception return in the third quarter and Ledet followed with scoring runs of 1 and 3 yards in the final period as Yates improved its season record to 12-1.

Lemuel Moton added a 28-yard field goal late in the fourth quarter to provide Yates with its final margin of victory.

Aldine collected its only two touchdowns on a 14-yard run by Bill Bates and an 11-yard run in the third quarter by Dede Davenport.

In Class 4A action, Fort Bend Willowridge narrowly accomplished a 15-14 upset win against previously unbeaten Beaumont Hebert as place kicker John Simpson booted a 26-yard field goal with 3 seconds left in the third quarter.

The Eagles, now 12-1, will meet the winner of Saturday's Brownwood-Rockwall semifinal playoff game.

Willowridge fullback Anthony White rushed for 156 yards on 26 carries, including a 71-yard touchdown run, in the third quarter.

Willowridge jumped to a 6-0 lead with 7:36 left in the first quarter when wingback Terry Rose scored on a 35-yard run to cap a seven-play, 73-yard drive. Simpson missed the extra point.

Hebert scored with 9:18 left in the half when quarterback Gerald Landry connected with wingback Floyd Dixon on a 51-yard touchdown pass. Kenneth Johnson kicked his first of two extra points.

Hebert scored on its first possession of the second half as fullback Jerry Ball ran for 12 yards with 4:28 left in the third quarter.

Willowridge retaliated when White climaxed a three-play, 76-yard drive with his 71-yard run.

In Class A action, Wink quarterback Steve Eggleston threw for 112 yards and three touchdowns on five completions to lead the Wildcats to a 40-23 win over Aspermont.

Wink, with a 13-0 season record, will face Saturday's Harleton-Bremont winner next week for the state title.

Eggleston threw a 15-yard scoring pass to halfback Joe Wolf and a 12-yarder to split end Ron Rasco to amass 21 third-quarter points.

Running backs Wolf and Ronnie Thomas combined for 159 rushing yards in the second half. They complemented Eggleston's passing and kept the Aspermont defense off-balance the entire half.

Georgia rolls to victory

ATLANTA (AP) — All-American Herschel Walker rambled for 225 yards and four touchdowns and quarterback Buck Belue picked apart Georgia Tech's defense as second-ranked Georgia crushed the Yellow Jackets 44-7 Saturday.

The Bulldogs, reeling off their eighth consecutive victory since a 13-3 loss to top-ranked Clemson, struck for scores on their first six possessions, including Belue's pass to Lindsay Scott that covered 80 yards on the first play of the game.

Walker's yardage total lifted his figure for the year to 1,891 yards, third best single season mark in NCAA history. It eclipsed the Southeastern Conference record of 1,686 set by Louisiana State's Charles Alexander in 1977.

Walker scored on runs of 2, 1, 2 and 1 yards, giving him an SEC record 20 touchdowns for the year.

Kevin Butler accounted for Georgia's other scoring with field goals covering 52, 46 and 35 yards. The three field goals gave Butler 19 for the year.

A BIG HIT. Big Bubba Smith grabs two would-be thieves in an episode from ABC's new situation comedy, "Open All Night." The former Michigan State All-America and former Houston Oilers' defensive end says he likes the role because "it's light and humorous and he's not the heavy anymore" despite his 270 pounds. (AP Laserphoto)

Former all-pro finds little difference in acting, football

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Big Bubba Smith says that going from football to show business is as easy as shifting from a four-man to a six-man line.

"Football is my first love, my real love," insists the 6-foot-8, 270-pound former defensive end who starred with the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League and now like many of his contemporaries he is making it big in TV.

"Actually, there's not much difference. The jobs are exactly the same. In show business, as in football, you've got to do a lot of preparing. Then you do it. You work yourself to the bone and, when it's over, you get that great feeling of satisfaction."

Bubba is the new double threat of the magic tube. He's got a good thing going in those popular beer commercials. And he's starring in a new situation comedy called "Open All Night," shown Saturdays on ABC at 8 p.m. EST.

The gigantic Michigan State alum was in New York over the weekend taping a new commercial for Miller Lite, an often hilarious sales pitch involving interesting sports personalities.

"They're teaming me with Dick Butkus (another rugged NFL alum), Bubba said during a break in the screening. "In this one, Butkus picks up a bowling ball and says, 'Hey, this ball hasn't got any holes in it.' He hands it to me and I say, 'Now it has.'"

As other viewers, Bubba will be watching from a cozy chair in his Los Angeles living room when the second of the "Open All Night" series shows Saturday night.

"The pilot was run last week," the gargantuan lineman said for the benefit of those who might have punched another button, "and the response has been good. We have made 13 segments and are pretty encouraged."

"It's about this store in a bad section of town. I come in just as two guys start running out the door after ripping off the place. 'Stop those punks!' the manager yells. I grab one in each hand. The guy makes me night manager."

"Next thing you know, I am picked up by the cops and charged with robbing Carnegie Hall. I clear myself of that mess and this week picks up with me coming back on the job."

Smith said the role pleases him because it is light and humorous whereas most of his other-TV parts have cast him as a "heavy."

"In the 'Odd Couple,'" he said, "I was able to play myself, a football player dealing with a sports writer (Jack Klugman). In 'Good Times,'" "Charlie's Angels" and "Wonderwoman" — several episodes — I was always the mean guy."

"I was the intimidator but I always got my come-uppance and occasionally even got killed."

Bubba, son of a Beaumont, Texas, football coach, has come a long way since earning All-America honors at Michigan State in 1965-66, playing in the Rose Bowl and later becoming an All-Pro with the Colts, Oakland Raiders and Houston Oilers before retiring in 1977.

In college, he was rather stand-offish and shy, one of the most publicized and beleaguered athletes of the time. He began to open up as a pro and now is strictly an outgoing show business personality.

Fitness First!

By Tim McGaughy
Pampa Youth Center Director
Strength Training

Strength is one area of fitness that is readily improvable in the majority of people because few have achieved their full potential. Most people do not realize that strength training increases energy, endurance and muscle tone used in everyday living, including even a desk job.

Weight training can be divided into three basic categories: power lifting (competitive heavy lifts), body building (Mr. Universe) and sports training (for specific sports or everyday work). The principle idea behind weight training is isolation and intensification. By isolating a muscle or muscle group and exercising with resistance, results can be achieved in one hour that could not be accomplished in one week of sports activity.

When lifting weights, several suggestions will help to gain the maximum benefit from each exercise. Control your breathing, inhale, and as you lift, exhale. Do not hold your breath. Perform the exercise with as full a range of motion as possible, or you will risk losing flexibility. Always warm up adequately before lifting. Remember, the basis for any program is a strong heart and a good set of lungs, so never quit training aerobically.

Circuit Training Available

Dannie Cagle will be conducting circuit training at the Fitness Center for men from 8-9 Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. If you are interested, show up Monday night Dec. 7. Room is available for 30 men.

Circuit training is setting up a set of exercises for a group of lifters who move from station to station and perform the different tasks within an allotted amount of time. It is great for men who have trouble motivating themselves to work out, or who do not have lifting experience and want to become involved.

Tennis Discount Cards

For all the tennis players who have completed 80 percent of their matches, the 20 percent discount cards from Vance Hall Sporting Goods are available at the Fitness Center. A special thanks goes to David Martin and his crew for their support of the Center and its programs.

Wrestling Program

A new boy's wrestling program has been added with Manny Holden coaching. They are meeting from 5:30 to 7:30 Monday, Tuesday and Thursday in the old gym at the Youth Center. Any interested youngster may contact coach Holden at the Youth Center during these hours.

Swim Club

Another fine program that is conducted at the Youth Center every afternoon is the Dolphin Swim Club. Coach Jackie Stephens does an outstanding job with the kids. Jackie also coaches the high school swim team and teaches physical education at Lamar Elementary School. Any youth interested in the great sport of competitive swimming should contact her at the Youth Center.

If you have any questions or comments, write or come by the Pampa Youth Center, 1005 West Harvester, or call 665-4381.

Be watching for the 1000 Mile Runner's Club.

Signup for Optimist Girls basketball is Tuesday

Registration for fifth and sixth grade girls' basketball will be held at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Pampa Optimist Club.

Registration will be held only one day and each participant must sign up then if they want to participate in the program this year.

The signees will be placed on a team and after two weeks of pre-season practice, the schedule is tentatively set up to begin Jan. 4 at the Optimist Club gym.

Girls who were on a team last year should sign up again, but they will be contacted by their coaches in the event they do not sign up.

UCLA rips Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Forward Mike Sanders scored 24 points Saturday as eighth-ranked UCLA, breaking open a tight contest in the early moments of the second half, rolled over No. 19 Notre Dame 75-49 in a nationally televised college basketball game.

The Bruins, 2-2 under first-year Coach Larry Farmer, led 26-23 at halftime after Notre Dame's John Paxson scored 11 first-half points. But UCLA ran off the first six points in the opening two minutes of the final period on baskets by Kenny Fields and Ralph Jackson, plus a steal and fast-break layup by Jackson.

Coach Digger Phelps' Irish, 1-2, closed the gap to five points on a pair of free throws by Tim Andree and a baseline drive by Paxson. But UCLA stretched the lead back to 11 at 42-31. A second 8-2 spurt pushed the lead to 15 midway through the final period.

The Bruins, scoring 14 of their final 20 points from the free throw line, built their biggest lead on the game's final basket by reserve center Mark Eaton with 37 seconds remaining.

Michael Holton added 14 points for the Bruins, while Fields finished with 10 and Jackson 8, all in the second half.

Paxson topped the Irish with 19 points, while Andree added 12.

Chiefs, Broncos, Charges sort out deadlocks today

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

With three weekends left in the National Football League's regular season, a pair of three-way first-place ties will be sorted out Sunday.

The Kansas City Chiefs, tied with Denver and the San Diego Chargers at 8-5 atop the American Conference's Western Division, will visit the Broncos, whom they beat 28-14 on Oct. 18. The Chargers play another playoff hopeful, the Buffalo Bills.

In the National Conference's Central Division, the Detroit Lions are tied at 7-6 with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Minnesota Vikings. The Lions visit the Green Bay Packers, whom they beat 31-27 on Oct. 25. The Packers are 6-7 and still in the chase for a playoff berth. The Bucs host the Atlanta Falcons, another 7-6 team with playoff hopes, and the Vikings visit the NFC Central's last-place Chicago Bears.

On Thursday night, reserve quarterback

Gifford Nielsen's 30-yard scoring pass to Dave Casper led Houston to a 17-13 triumph over Cleveland, dropping the Browns into sole possession of last place in the AFC Central with a 5-9 record. The Oilers are now 6-8 in the AFC Central.

The Bills, like San Diego, are 8-5. But they trail the Jets and Dolphins in the AFC East. It's their first meeting with the Chargers since the 1980 playoffs, when Dan Fouts' 50-yard touchdown pass to reserve wide receiver Ron Smith with 2:08 to play gave San Diego a 20-14 victory.

The Lions are bidding for their first playoff berth since 1970, the first year of the AFL-NFL merger, when they earned a wild card but were eliminated in a 5-0 loss to Dallas. Detroit hasn't won a division title since 1957, when it obliterated Cleveland 59-14 for the NFL crown.

The Packers are bidding for their best finish since their 8-7-1 record in 1978. Green Bay finished tied for first with the Vikings that year but lost out to Minnesota for the division crown because the Vikes had beaten them once and tied in their other meeting.

Atlanta, eliminated from contention for the NFC West title they won a year ago, can still take a wild card, while the Bucs are battling for the NFC Central championship they won in 1979.

Put it together for a winning combination. You'll look great in this poly/cotton blend Oxford stripe pullover touched off with a khaki fashion collar. Then pull on a pair of these poly/cotton blend 14 wale corduroy jeans from WRANGLER WRAPID TRANSIT collection with boot cut bottoms and special piping on the spade hip pockets and you'll be ready for anything. The Salvation Army reaches out to the lonely. It visits those in institutions. It welcomes those who need companionship. It offers a holiday meal to men and women who have no families of their own.

During the holiday season, The Salvation Army tries to make sure that no one is left out in the cold.

By giving to The Salvation Army, you help to make Christmas a time of warmth and joy.

SALVATION ARMY VOLUNTEER Polly Sutton puts the finishing touches on an intricate doll costume. The doll clothes are made by volunteers who then give the dressed dolls to the younger children at Christmas time. The dolls dressed in their costumes will be on display Dec. 9 at various local businesses.

CHRISTMAS BASKETS for needy families are now being prepared by Mrs. Cherry Craddock and a staff of volunteers. Donations of food are collected through local organization and the Pampa Schools. For individuals wishing to participate, canned food donations may be brought to the Salvation Army headquarters, 701 S. Cuyler through the Christmas season.

"Each Christmas the Salvation Army gives out approximately 135 Christmas baskets to local families and to needy persons passing through our community. We try to supply more than just the Christmas dinner. Included in our baskets are toys for children and an extra supply of food," the Pampa Salvation Army Director, Lt. David Craddock, said.

Most of the food and toys are donated by local merchants, schools and individuals throughout the Christmas season. The rest of the food and gifts must be purchased.

"Christmas is a celebration and there can be no celebration if there is not food on the table and not a toy under the tree," Lt. Craddock said.

"We expect that to have many more people for the Christmas Basket Program this year based on the number of applications we've had," Lt. Craddock said.

Another program that is highlighted during the holiday season is the Christmas Doll Program.

"We buy undressed dolls and they are given to sororities, individuals and church organizations to dress. A judging is held to find the best dressed dolls. The dolls will be put on display on Wednesday Dec. 9 at Gattis Shoe Store at the Mall and at Citizen's Bank. Cherry Craddock is the coordinator for the Doll Program.

"When we give these dolls to the little girls on Christmas, it is definitely a highlight of their day," Lt. Craddock said.

The Christmas Kettles are a tradition of the Salvation Army during the holiday season.

The kettles are manned by members of local service organizations who volunteer their time.

"The kettles are put out each season the day after Thanksgiving. After that, the kettles will be out on each Saturday in December until the week of school vacations and then they will be out each day," Lt. Craddock said.

The kettle donations are used to fund the Christmas programs. This year Craddock expects to spend $1,500 on toys for Christmas and up to $2,000 on additional Christmas Basket food.

The local units thrift store is located at 102 S. Cuyler. The thrift store deals in donated articles of clothing, furniture and household items. Donations can be made at drop boxes scattered throughout the city, at these four locations: Coronado Center, Gibsons, the Ideal Store on Ballard and the Salvation Army Church. For individual pick up call 669-9921.

Craddock said he has been having trouble with being able to empty the pick up boxes immediately.

"Our collections have been slower lately, due to the large amount of donations coming in, but I'm not complaining," he laughed.

On the fourth Tuesday of every month a Golden Agers Dinner is held. The dinners are funded through the Salvation Army operating fund.

"When the dinners were started in June of 1980 we had just 35 persons. During our Thanksgiving dinner we had 130 persons in attendance," Craddock said.

"We will hold our Christmas dinner for the Golden Agers on Tuesday Dec. 22. Mrs. Craddock does most of the cooking with Salvation Army secretary, Maggie Ivey. Luckily there are usually several other volunteers available to aid with the cooking and serving," Lt. Craddock said.

"It is heartening to see that our facilities are being strained," he said.

It is impossible to talk to a man about salvation if his stomach is empty. This is the philosophy on which the Salvation Army was founded in London in 1865.

The organization grew and developed a military structure for its war against sin, poverty and ignorance. The army has worked as a unit in times of crisis for many years. Perhaps, this is what they are most noted for.

During the Spanish - American War the first Salvation Army chaplain sailed with the troops to Manila and set up the first overseas Salvation Army service center for U.S. troops.

During World War I, the Salvation Army raised funds for civilian relief work and sent personnel to the front lines to serve the fighting forces.

During the depression of the 30's, the Army found ways to provide food, lodging and jobs for the needy. This was before government relief programs were established.

During World War II, the Army led the way in forming the U. S. O.

Today, the Army offers counseling, religious worship, recreation, drug and alcohol assistance to service men and women and their families.

The Salvation Army offers more than just disaster relief. The army serves the whole man, physical and spiritual.

Each Salvation Army unit is designed to serve the community. The Pampa Salvation Army, under the leadership of Lt. and Mrs. David Craddock, offer programs for children, teens, adults and senior citizens.

Last year, the Pampa Salvation Army assisted 179 people traveling through Pampa and 1149 residents. This aid was in the form of food, lodging, transportation, rent and utilities.

Lt. Craddock said, "There are no monetary guidelines for need, everyone is accepted on an individual basis."

The League of Mercy consists of volunteers who visit nursing homes and private homes. Last year this group called on 2,684 individuals.

Pampa children are invited to join the activities at the Pampa unit and take part in Camp Hoblitzelle at Midlothian, Texas. The camp offers youngsters horse - back riding, swimming, recreational and educational activities.

Special fund raising projects make the summer camp a reality for area children. Children involved in activities at the unit are eligible, but if funding is available other children are welcome. It costs approximately $85 per child for one week at camp.

Home League, the world's largest women's organization, is very active in Pampa. This organization is for women 16 years of age and older. The local chapter takes on community projects which include the baskets at Christmas, dinners, and gifts for nursing home residents.

On the fourth Tuesday of every month, the Pampa unit serves lunch in their building at 701 S. Cuyler. This is a free meal for anyone 35 and older. The meal is followed by bingo games, the prizes are donated.

Each Salvation Army unit is supported by the community it serves. There are no national fund drives.

"The reason our unit in Pampa is so effective is because the people here are so generous," Lt. Craddock said.

Each Christmas we give out approximately 135 baskets. We try to supply more than just the Christmas dinner. Included in our baskets are toys for children and an extra supply of food," Lt. Craddock added.

Most of the food and toys are donated by local merchants, schools and individuals. The rest must be purchased.

The local units thrift store is located at 102 S. Cuyler. The thrift store deals in donated articles of clothing, furniture and household items. Donations can be made at drop boxes scattered throughout the city, or individuals can call 669-9921 for pick - up.

Mending Mature Marriage

Avoid over-criticism

DEAR LOUISE: My husband has always been a stickler for details that he calls "living decently." I like to be comfortable and sometimes string the books and magazines around the chair when I read at night — or leave the toothpaste tube open on the lavatory. Once in a while I even leave the dishes in the sink till morning if we had a late snack of pie and coffee.

He can't stand anything out of place and lands on me with both feet when I lose something. But in his younger years he just mumbled a little and then dropped the subject. Now he carries on like I'd killed somebody.

I know he's older and his business worries him. He should have sold out, which he could have for a profit. But he says he'd go to seed if he came home and sat. So he stately with it and takes his frustrations out on me.

The worst thing happened yesterday. I locked my keys in the house and sat on the front porch till G came home for dinner. I hadn't dared call him for fear he'd scream and holler and lay me out for being so dumb. Well, he did it anyway, saying no woman with any sense would lock herself out of anywhere.

He gets more critical as we get older. We're both 69 now, married 49 years. I'm sick of being criticized for every little thing I do wrong. Do I have to go on taking it? C.C.

DEAR C.C.: Yes, you do, for three reasons. First, you love him or you wouldn't have stayed with him for 49 years. Second, you "grew up" with his criticisms and should be able to sluff them off amiable. Third, you can remove the causes of his tantrums by changing your sloppy ways.

Since he wants to continue his business, you should admire his spunk. Staying in the mainstream of industry is keeping many older men mentally and physically alert. You can't want to change that.

What you can do is improve your absent-mindedness. I know how you feel because I have the same tendency. But I know you can change yourself — because I have, at least partially.

I'm blessed with a good-natured husband, but I know I have tried his patience more than once in our 44 years together. He has retraced our route many times to retrieve a purse, an earring or some other small item that I forgot. He never complained until lately — and not drastically then.

But it was a last straw. I suppose, a few weeks ago, when I left my keys locked in the car with the motor running I was talking to a friend, paying no attention to the car as I got out. Of course the battery had run down by the time Otis got home and there was much to do getting everything back to normal.

He still didn't berate me to my face — but I heard him telling people, time after time, "Louise doesn't just misplace things for a few minutes. She loses up a whole day!"

I vowed to reform — and, to some extent, I have. When I get out of the car now, I make sure the keys are in my purse. I make lists and check on myself. I never leave anything anywhere but the place it belongs. I'm even working on my chronic nervousness, meaning the upsetting of glasses of water at banquets when I talk with my hands, which is all the time. (I never spilled anything on anybody else, but I've soaked Otis and me countless times.)

Every spouse should do his best to eliminate the things that upset the mate. Since you know what bothers your husband, C.C., make a conscious effort to remove that cause — starting tomorrow morning.

DEAR LOUISE: Our grandkids live in a nearby town and come to visit us real often. J and I both want them, so we say. But he fusses at them from the time they get here till they go home. He makes them play outdoors instead of in the house — and then he scolds them for tracking in dirt. And he's always saying, "When I way your age, I worked hard and never gave anybody any trouble the way you kids do us."

I know they're getting tired of hearing it over and over. I'm afraid they'll stop coming to see us. Any ideas about what to do about his heckling the kids? S.D.

DEAR S.D.: You might try to involve J and the kids in some outdoor games. Put up a goal somewhere and let them shoot baskets with Grandpa. He might forget to fuss in his enjoyment of the game.

If that doesn't work, keep the youngsters out of J's way as much as you can. Play in the back yard with them — and wipe their shoes when you bring them inside.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Fashions for the holidays

BY DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

With the holiday season, comes parties, family gatherings, receptions, open houses, and other forms of excitement. For the fashion conscious woman, Christmas season 1981 is the season to sparkle!

Red is inevitably the favorite color followed closely by a combination of black and gold.

Holiday tops feature blouses with full soft sleeves worn with flared culottes and skirts. Ruffles and bows add drama as they accent cuffs and necklines. Sweaters are wide cut and feminine featuring tucked full sleeves or peplums and dainty detailing.

Tunics remain important for the holiday scene and are made from knits, wool, angora, and silk. Big shirt tunics as well as camisole tunics slide over slim pants.

Pant looks are varied ranging from short, cropped and curved evening pants to ballooned and harem styles. Leather and suede jodhpurs, wool flannel culottes, taffeta harem pants, sweatshirt pants, and pleated jogging pants are among the shapes going short and long for the holidays.

Skirts will be full and flared and cut in rich metallics. The dropped-waist skirt will look great. The ruffled collared blouse with ruffled cuffs will be worn with tiered skirts and culottes.

CREATIVE CHRISTMAS SCHEDULE

Wouldn't it be wonderful if Christmas came gorgeously gift-wrapped and tied neatly with a bright red bow? When we were children, we probably thought it happened just that way. Now we realize the importance of planning ahead.

The secret to a "merry" Christmas is to begin attending to details early. Make a plan which includes doing a little shopping, wrapping, and baking each week. Adapt the schedule to your changing needs. Check off each task when it is finished. You'll find that Christmas day will culminate a whole month of giving - with no need for regrets.

Budgeting time will help streamline holiday preparations for entertaining in particular. Organizing time will also save hours in the kitchen. If you are planning a party or large family gathering, consider how many people you want to invite. This will determine the type and location of the party and the kinds of foods to serve small groups or a crowd without a lot of effort. Holiday entertaining is also a good time to show off your best china, silver, and crystal!

Selecting the recipes to serve is most important in planning for holiday entertaining. Include old family favorites, along with new and interesting ones, for a pleasing menu. Cost and preparation time will determine your recipe selection. Use recipes that can be prepared or partially prepared ahead of time. Old fashioned recipes that have a family history are also nice to serve and share with friends and family.

The holidays are a perfect time to entertain and share the giving spirit of old-fashioned holidays. Be a confident host or hostess this holiday season by pre-planning.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For years I have been trying to convert my husband to "punctuality." It is my life's work.

What I'm dealing with is an 11-month baby who has never seen the first ten minutes of anything. He's never seen a curtain go up, never heard an overture, never seen a race start, never entered a bus that was standing still and has never gotten a parking place close to the door.

Just once I'd like to get to a buffet table where there wasn't a gaping hole in the tuna mold or a salad with all the tomatoes gone.

Just once I'd like to go to a movie when the lights are on and I can see to find my seat.

Being late is habit-forming. I know there is something Freudian about it, but I don't know what. My best guess would be that wherever he's going, he doesn't want to go in the first place.

The thing about people who are always late is there is no way to reach them. I've tried deception, where you lie about the time you're supposed to be somewhere. His body rejects the adjustment.

Humiliation has been tried. Like the night we arrived at a party and we heard a voice say, "Good night, the Bombecks have arrived. I didn't know it was so late. Roy, we've got to go."

Enticement never worked. One night I talked him into going to a football game on time. When the band struck up a tune he said, "What is that?"

"It's 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' They play it before every sports event."

"What for?"

"Everyone sings it and it sets a tone."

"No one is singing it," he said, "and for this I came without socks."

The conversion of a confirmed dawdler is the dream of a lot of people. We got lucky the other night, en route to a sports event. Made every traffic light, found a parking spot near the entrance and encountered no crowds. Inside, we made a discovery. The event wasn't until the next night.

As my husband sat down in the bleachers he said, "This early enough for you? I don't know what you see in being here on time. It's boring."

MRS. TIM SUDBRINK

Smith, Sudbrink exchange vows

Rhonda Kay Smith and Tim Sudbrink were united in marriage on Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. in the Keeler Baptist Church in Borger with the Rev. David Miller of the Borger Christian Center officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Smith of 913 West Drive, Borger.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Sudbrink of Grafton, Wis.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Lana Brock of Pampa, organist; and Mrs. Terry Maywell of Phillips as vocalist.

The bride was attended by Pam Smith, maid of honor, sister of the bride, of Borger and Mrs. Dennis O'Bryant, matron of honor, of Durant, Okla.

Christy Edwards of Farmington, N. M. was the flower girl.

The groom was attended by Robert Sudbrink and John Sudbrink both brothers of the groom, from Grafton, Wis. Steven Frick of Borger acted as ring bearer.

Candlelighters were Jim Frick and Rick Partin.

The bride wore a formal length white gown of chantilly lace and organza. The gown featured a Princess Anne neckline outlined with lace appliques sprinkled with pearls and sequins. The fitted lace covered bodice was accentuated at the waistline with silk flowers and satin ribbon streamers. Sheer bishop sleeves of organza were detailed with lace bands and cuffed with lace flounces. The full skirt of organza was overlaid with a ruffle edged lace apron. The skirt was bordered with a flounce of multi-tiered ruffles which dipped to form a chapel length train.

was edged in chantilly lace and attached to a lace covered headpiece sprinkled with pearls.

The reception was held in the Keeler Baptist Fellowship Hall. Serving were Mrs. David Miller, Sid Reynolds, Larry Skipper, Harold Cox and Harold Partin.

The couple spent their honeymoon in Colorado, Springs.

Upon returning, they will make their home at 804 B. N. Nelson in Pampa.

The bride is a graduate of Borger High School, Frank Phillips Jr. College and West Texas State University. She is employed as a teacher at the Pampa Middle School.

The groom is a graduate of Grafton High School and the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater. He is a Sales Engineer at Magcohar.

Wonderful news about one of Pampa's own! We've all known for years that Mary Jane Rose Johnson, daughter of Rex and Maxine Rose, had one of the most magnificent voices in America — and we hoped the world would realize it. Well, now it has!

Most of you probably know that she is to sing with the great Pavarotti in Philadelphia in April or May of 1982. What you may not know is that she will open the Concert Series in Lubbock and also sing with the Lubbock Symphony next fall.

She has often sung in Pampa, to the enjoyment of us all. She now lives in Amarillo with her husband, David, and their daughter, Taylor. We are very proud of her talent and her well-deserved success.

Been hearing about an unusual and enjoyable method of raising funds for a good cause. The Pampa Altrusa Club has always been innovative, but some say their latest feat is their most memorable. They held an auction, as sellers and buyers, had great fun and made a lot of money.

Cleo (Mrs. Buck) Worley merited the title of "most clever person". She seemed to wave a magic wand as chairman of the club's annual auction of handmade items to benefit the Founders' Fund Vocational Aid, an international service project for women for vocational training. The theme, "Best Little Auction House in Texas", with appropriate signs posted around the room, put the members in a buying mood. Committee members, dressed in work caps, were given aliases of "Skeeter," "Scooter," "Tooter," "Killer" and the like.

Members volunteering as auctioneers were Marilyn McClure, Mary Lou Lane, Marian Stroup, Marian Jameson, Mary Wilson, Joyce Roberts, Billie Bruner, Pat Marcum, Rena Belle Anderson, Leona Willis, Deana Finck, Donna Brauchi and Jane Gattis. All of them put out "spies" that professionals might have envied.

Katherine Sullins, dubbed "Diamond Kate," auctioned for the members - turned - chicken who plunked a quarter each in the "chicken bucket". Understand that sale items included scrumptious and artistic creations of kitchen goodies, crocheted, needle point, knitting (Glendora Gindorf knitted a lilac sweater of angora yarn!) Christmas decorations, stuffed toys, a painted bird house (by Cleo) and much more. More than $800 was raised.

Eligible women are urged to apply for awards through the local club to be approved by the International Foundation. Women who are interested in qualifying may contact Leona Willis (Mrs. Billy J.), club president, for further details.

Heard that the Christian Church bazaar, held a couple of weeks or so ago, was a huge success. It was said to be a time of visitation and fellowship as well as a fine meal and an excellent money-making project.

The crowd, estimated at 700, enjoyed a dinner of stew or chili, corn bread and pie, all homemade and delicious. Many ladies made the pies. Vicki and Flora Williams, sisters-in-law, helped on the chili. Linda Holt, David's wife, and Sherry (Mrs. Jerry) Carlson, made the corn bread. (As an aside, how many rhyming husband-and-wife names are there in Pampa besides Sherry and Jerry?)

Janey Bilyeu, John's wife, made the mouth-watering stew. Janet, the daughter of Calvin and Rochelle Lacy, is multi-talented, a Sunday School teacher and speaker as well as an excellent cook. Her partner in the stew-making was Virginia (Mrs. Clyde) Carruth.

Art Skewes, his wife and their daughter were in charge of a food booth. A special goodie was the peanut brittle made by Max Louvier, who stirred and poured slabs of the candy that sold as fast as he made it.

Marvelous to know that church members work together to achieve that kind of success. Heard that two other churches in Pampa have important anniversaries coming up soon. First Methodist will celebrate their 75th year this winter. And First Baptist is already planning to honor their 75th in 1982. Feel sure that both will have big doings.

Pampa news room staffers joined together for a dual celebration Wednesday evening - a shower for the new baby of Mr. and Mrs. John Wolfe, staff photographer, and a surprise going away party for reporter Deborah Bridges who is moving to Amarillo.

Guest who has a new hobby? Pampa police officer Neil Greene who is working midnights is using his daytime hours making hot pot holders... and we didn't even know he could sew! Wonder when he plans on putting them up for sale - we can hardly wait.

Did anyone see the big horse roundup about 4 a.m. the other night over by Highway 60 and Hobart? Heard that Pampa's finest (?) had to bring in four colts for loitering. No bond was set by the local Justice of the Peace.

There was a party last weekend at the home of Vernon and Joe Bell for their son Mike Murry and his new bride, Melissa. All of the Bell's old and new friends showed up to congratulate the happy couple.

Hostesses for the party were Georgiana Organ, June Ivory and Knoxine Cotham. They served a casual buffet of hot dogs with all the trimmings.

Guests included Adele Myer, Robert and Clara Mae Sailor, Rosie Sanford, Scott Murry, Sandra and David Bronner, Gerald and Martha Allen, Patrick and Kathryn Bronner, Diana Griffin, Doug Hollingshead, Carl Cotham and Ed and Cinda Robinson.

Heard that Christmas festivities are starting. Understand Mary Lou and Jerry Lane will entertain three different groups on separate nights. They'll have Open House to the Chancel Choir of the First Methodist Church, Methodist Men and Altrusa Club. Don't the rest of us wish we were members of one of those groups.

Couple exchange vows in traditional ceremony

Charlotte Lynn Redwine and Michael Lee Watson exchanged vows on Nov. 14 at 7 p.m. at the Calvary Baptist Church in Panhandle with the Rev. Orval See and the Rev. Will Deane officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Redwine, Jr. of Panhandle.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Watson of Lefors. Wedding selections were provided by Mrs. Dwight Hardin.

The bride was attended by Karla Meyer, bridesmaid, of Pampa.

The groom was attended by Gary Range, best man, of Abilene.

Seating guests were Leslie and Lanny Redwine, brothers of the bride and Jon Watson, brother of the groom.

The bride wore a formal white gown of organza with a sheer victorian neckline of chantilly lace and reembroidered medallions accented with seed pearls. The long sheer sleeves ended in a deep lace cuff. The skirt had a ruffled hemline that extended into a chapel length train.

She carried a cascade bouquet of carnations, small mums and baby's breath in fall colors mounted on a small lace covered Bible.

The reception was held in the Calvary Baptist Fellowship Hall. Serving were Leasha Redwine, sister of the bride and Lori Watson, sister of the groom.

The couple will make their new home on a ranch 14 miles north of Pampa.

Apricot Bars Beverage

APRICOT BARS
Always a favorite.

1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour

1/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar

1/2 cup butter

2 large eggs

1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar

1 tablespoon lemon juice

1-3rd cup all-purpose flour

1/2 teaspoon baking powder

1/2 cup cut or broken walnuts, the size of large peas

1/2 cup dried apricots,

finely slivered

In a medium bowl stir together the 1 cup flour and the 1/4 cup brown sugar; with a pastry blender cut in the butter until particles are fine; pat over bottom of a buttered 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden — about 15 minutes. Leave oven control on. Meanwhile beat the eggs until foamy; add the 1 cup brown sugar, lemon juice, 1-3rd cup flour and baking powder; beat until smooth. Stir in the apricots and walnuts. Spread over hot baked layer and continue to bake until brown — about 25 minutes. Loosen edges while still warm, but cool completely before cutting into bars.

Christmas shopping blues

BY CINDA ROBINSON

Lifestyles Editor

Christmas shoppers, start your engines.

Yes, the time is upon us — to either do or die.

If you haven't started your Christmas shopping, then you are among a very elite group of procrastinators who are still holding birthday cards that were meant to be sent to relatives for the last two years.

Pampa is an excellent town to do all of your shopping in, unless you have particular gifts and sizes in mind.

The store flyers that have been distributed in the News or by bulk mail list numerous gifts, sizes, shapes and colors, but just try to actually fit those to your specifications.

Why don't children simply request gifts by generic names?

Example: Small darling daughter should say, "Mommy, I would like a 'doll' for Christmas. But nooo, she says, 'Mommy, I have just got to have a 'Tippy Toes Doll'."

"What," says typical Mommy, "is a 'Tippy Toes Doll'?"

"Don't worry about it, Mom. Just tell Santa Claus. He knows everything," quips intelligent child.

Sure, that is a small matter of detail, but what do you do with a husband who wants customized mud flaps for a '42 model jeep?"

Then there are always your nephews who already own every toy ever manufactured. Their bedroom looks like the toy section of the Montgomery Ward Christmas Catalog. I think I'll get them toothbrushes — that should rip their knickers.

What do you buy a sister (who is the oldest living hippy) since the new paraphernalia laws have been put into effect in Texas?

Then there is always Grandma and Grandpa. They have a comfortable home, no pets and more art than the Smithsonian Institute. Grandpa has 46 bottles of aftershave and cologne and Grandma's dresser looks like a cosmetic counter.

That leaves, of course, Mom and Dad. They live in a $150,000 home and have already bought everything and anything they could possibly want.

How do you incorporate into a meager gift the real meaning of Christmas? It is like trying to buy a gift for Jesus, whom many tend to forget is what Christmas is all about.

How do you say, "I love you. All those years of patience, understanding and sacrifice have not been wasted."

That's the toughy and if anyone can find that on the shelves of one of the local department stores, please let the rest of us shoppers know. Happy shopping.

Laxatives cause poor bowel function

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm interested in what you can take or eat for a laxative instead of Ex-Lax and other store-bought laxatives. Could you name some things other than prunes, raisins, orange juice? I don't like to take laxatives. It can mess up your bowels, can't it? Tell me something about that, too.

When I moved to South Carolina from Louisiana I had a bowel movement about every day but when I moved back here I only have a bowel movement about two times a week. Could it be from what you eat? Send me a pamphlet on this if you have one and tell me what to eat or drink.

DEAR READER — I'm glad you recognize the dangers of developing a laxative habit. A number of laxative preparations sold to the public do contain chemicals that stimulate the contraction and movement of the bowels. Most of these, if used regularly, do cause poor bowel function. They empty the bowel too soon and then there is a long waiting period for more undigested food residue to accumulate for normal function. Such a habit can lead to or contribute to a spastic colon problem.

The bulk laxatives are mostly inert and do not have the same chemical action. These include Konsyl, Metamucil, Movicol and Syliact. The action of different laxatives is discussed in The Health Letter number 12-8, Laxatives, Enemas and Suppositories, which I am sending you at your request.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

What you eat and drink does indeed have a lot to do with normal bowel function. The best source of bulk for normal function is in your food. Apples are good as are other fruits that contain bulk. So are whole cereals that contain bran. Don't forget a good bowl of hot oat meal as a source of bulk. And if you get dehydrated it will affect your bowel function. So drink plenty of liquids, which includes fruit juices and that best drink of all for normal hydration — water. It is also important not to overuse things that may increase colon spasms, such as coffee.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you give me some information on Librax? I had a history of diarrhea for many years. I had the usual tests and got the usual answers. These past few years the condition has improved while taking Metamucil and Librax, but I still have gas in the lower bowel. I have only been nauseated twice in the past six months. The doctor suggested gallbladder tests but I had them two years ago and don't want to go through that again.

The Librax causes dryness in my mouth and affects my eyes. I do not eat spices or raw vegetables. I am 84 years old. My family thinks I am fine except for arthritis pains.

DEAR READER — I am glad to hear you have done so much better. Librax is a combination of Librium, a tranquilizer, and an antispasmodic. It is often very helpful for people who have an irritable colon or in other digestive complaints. It will cause dryness of the mouth as you have noted.

Unless you had an acute problem it is unlikely that you would be a candidate for gallbladder surgery in your age group. You might be sure to avoid coffee, tea, colas and cold drinks. And you might want to see if avoiding all milk and milk products would improve your bowel function.

What's new at the library

New books available at Lovett Memorial Library:

FREE FALL IN CRIMSON. John D. MacDonald: Hired to find the person who killed an ailing tycoon with his bare hands, Travis McGee must contend with the tycoon's disinherited artist son and his aging actress wife.

BROTHERLY LOVE. William Blankenship: Identical twins Ben and Harry Ryder — one a respectable success, the other a philandering genius, exchange their personalities and their lives and become locked in a deadly struggle.

PATHFINDERS. Gail Sheehy: The author examines through personal case histories, analysis and examples — creative, original and expansive ways to effectively overcome the crises of adult life by drawing on one's own inner resources.

THIS PARK IS MINE. Stephen Peters: A crazed Vietnam veteran, armed with a Vietcong AK-47 assault rifle, takes possession of Central Park, enclosing it with concertina wire and booby-trapping it with mines and initiates a guerrilla-style battle.

BETTY CROCKER'S MICROWAVE COOKBOOK. Here at last, is a major microwave cookbook prepared by the experts. Each recipe has been thoroughly tested and comes with clear, step-by-step instructions.

NIGHT PROBE. Clive Cussler: American agent Dirk Pitt's deep-sea mission to recover a lost treaty by which Canada was sold to the United States is countered by the British and the Soviets.

THE LADIES OF HANOVER SQUARE. Rona Randall: An absorbing saga of three very different women, set against the decline of Edwardian splendor and the cataclysm of the Great War.

SOMEONE IN THE HOUSE. Barbara Michaels: The collective attempts to solve the riddle of Grayhaven

Manor provide ample chills and supernatural occurrences call for reinforcements.

THE SILVER SPOONER. Darcy O'Brien: When A. J. Kruger inherited the Sunrise, his father's vast Oklahoma cattle estate, he brought to it a lifetime of training, an ambitious wife, a loyal and resurcful friend and a naive confidence in his ability to perpetuate and improve his legacy.

NO TIME FOR TEARS. Cynthia Freeman: a multi-generation family saga which begins in war-torn Russia and a journey to Jerusalem. The family divides, with the father remaining in the Holy Land, to play a crucial part in the formation of Israel and the mother coming to America to make the family's fortune in the New York diamond market.

VERMILION. Phyllis Whitney: A New York couturiere travels to Arizona in search of her father's murderer. There she discovers a blood tie she never suspected and the ending is a definite surprise.

Bob Will's Original Texas Playboys to be in Amarillo

The Panhandle - Plains Historical Museum, as a money-raising effort for its Endowment Fund, is bringing the late Bob Will's Original Texas Playboys to Amarillo. These pioneers of Western Swing will be playing for the Museum's Second Annual Cowboys' Christmas Ball, scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 12, at the Hackamore Club (formerly Red Steagall's), located south of Amarillo at the Canyon Expressway and McCormick Road.

Several of the Texas Playboys who played in Will's band when it was at its best will be in the group. Leon McAuliffe, who joined the band in 1935, will be leading the group and playing the steel guitar, an instrument he helped pioneer in American music. Al Stricklin, now age 73, will be playing piano. Stricklin joined Bob Will's in late 1935. Smiley Dacus, Will's first drummer, will be playing the drums. Dacus left a hotel orchestra in early 1935 to join the Playboys. Joe Ferguson will be playing the fiddle the instrument he played when he joined Will's in 1936. Leon Rausch, who joined the band in the late 1950's, will be the featured vocalist. The band will play a variety of popular music — swing from the age of the big bands, blues, jazz, western swing and country — and western.

Boots, jeans, bonnets and bandanas will be in style at the Second Annual Cowboys' Christmas Ball. Aside from the music of the Texas Playboys, a cash bar will be available. Tax-deductible contributions to the Endowment Fund will be $50 per couple. Tickets may be ordered by calling 655-7191 (Panhandle - Plains Historical Museum.)

MR. AND MRS. ESTLE J. MALONE

Couple to celebrate 50 years

Mr. and Mrs. Estle J. Malone will be honored with a reception to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Sunday, Dec. 13 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Energas Flame Room.

Estle J. Malone and Bessie K. Dorman were married, Dec. 12, 1931 in Rush Springs, Okla. They lived in Skellytown, before moving to Pampa in 1956.

Mr. Malone is retired from Cities Service Oil Co. and both are active members in the Pampa Seniors Citizens.

The reception will be hosted by their children, Mrs. Naomi Bichsel of Hobbs, N. M.; Mrs. Lavenia Henderson, Bastrop, Texas; and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Malone of Pampa. Family and friends of the couple are invited to attend.

Go ahead -- have a party

By HEIDINOLTE
NEW YORK (AP) — The newly wedded bride steps up to the platform on which rests a five-tier wedding cake and tableware for 250 guests. Before her lies the swimming pool flanked on all sides by numerous well-wishers invited to the reception and hungry for dessert.

As the bride proceeds to slice the cake there is a slight rumbling noise as the scaffolding gives way and cake, plates, forks, table and all topple into the pool.

What next? "Stay calm and improvise," advises Milton Williams, California caterer for the past 30 years, whose relatively few disasters include the one just described. "You can't do anything about disasters, so just grow by them," he adds.

But the possibility of disaster is no reason not to have a party; neither are rising costs, space limitations, nor the anxiety some people suffer at the prospect of having 10 people over to dinner.

"There is NO excuse not to have a party," insists Williams who has just written "The Party Book" with Robert Windeler.

If throwing a party, then, means facing such adversities — why entertain?

"To have an enjoyable time," says Williams. "To have a party is actually very simple. People tend to complicate things," he explains. All it takes is some forethought "and a lot of flair."

It need not cost a lot of money to entertain, but you do need some idea of a budget when you plan for the party, he says. "What you're going to do depends on what has to come out of that money," such as hiring a photographer, renting equipment and buying food.

Then you can think about guests. "The best and most important ingredient for any party is the guest list," Williams emphasizes, "because people enjoy each other with or without food."

"And the invitation should really be the beginning of it — one that's eye-catching," he advises. "I'd rather pay two cents more for an invitation that won't be thrown away together with the junk mail."

"What is important is that you write out the invitations yourself, and show as much imagination as possible in their creation," he adds.

Whether you own a three-story mansion or rent a two-bedroom apartment, the amount of space shouldn't limit the number of guests you'd like to invite, Williams points out.

"You can have an informal open house with 50 people over the apartment and have them sit on pillows on the floor. The buffet can be set up in the kitchen with the punch in the sink."

Holidays are a great time for these large informal gatherings, he adds.

"moving-to-new-house" parties, weddings, divorces, birthdays and more.

"Anytime is occasion enough for a party," he says. "You just have to have the desire and everything else will fall into place. But whatever you do, do it with a flair."

Dear Abby

Thankless children grate on stepmother's nerves

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband has five children from a previous marriage. Some of them are married with children of their own, and some live with their mother. I am responsible for buying, wrapping and sending all the gifts for their birthdays, Christmas, etc. (He pays for them, and I must say he is not cheap.)

The problem: I am filled to the gills with his ungrateful children, who never bother calling him to say "Thank you," "Kiss my foot," or anything else. For all we know, the gifts weren't even received. I know he's hurt, but he insists on sending them presents year after year for every occasion. Should I continue to buy for my husband's children, should I tell him to do it, or should I buy them all a book on manners?

TIRED OF IT

DEAR TIRED: I agree, your husband is foolish to continue sending gifts to ingrates, and I don't blame you for balking. But look at it this way — you are doing it for him, not them.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle-aged woman engaged to be married in three months. My fiancé has been a widower for 10 years.

I am going to move into his house after we're married, but there is something I haven't discussed with him and it's bothering me.

I do not want to sleep in the same bed that he occupied with his wife for 20 years, but I don't know how to bring the subject up, Abby.

Am I being unreasonable? If you agree with me, how do I approach him?

NO OLD MEMORIES, THANK YOU

DEAR N.O.M.: Unreasonable? No way! Come right out and tell him you want a new bedroom set. And if it would be easier to clip this column and slip it into his shirt pocket — be my guest.

***

DEAR ABBY: How do I handle a habitual eavesdropper who sits at the desk next to me in an office where we are both employed? Whenever she sees me talking on the telephone, or if someone comes to my desk to talk to me, Ms. Eavesdropper turns her typewriter off and listens to what I'm saying.

Eavesdropping is one thing, but she even joins in on the conversation and asks questions about whatever it is we're discussing.

I don't want to start a fight because I have to see her every day, but I would like to put an end to this. Any suggestions? IRRITATED AND FRUSTRATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Anything less than a direct confrontation would be ineffective in dealing with one so obviously insensitive. Simply tell Ms. Eavesdropper that it's not nice to shut off her typewriter and listen in on other people's conversations. If you tell her in a friendly, helpful way, you'll probably get results. If you keep your frustration bottled up and your irritation builds, you'll probably get ulcers.

***

DEAR ABBY: You wisely advised "Another Churchgoer" to practice the virtue of tolerance. That caused me to recall the words of the late E.M. Forster in his "Two Cheers for Democracy":

"Tolerance is a very dull virtue. It is boring. Unlike love, it has always had a bad press. No one has ever written an ode to tolerance, or raised a statue to her, yet this is the quality which will be most needed if different races and classes are to settle down together."

ARTHUR H. PRINCE

DEAR ARTHUR: With all due respect to Mr. Forster, to me, "tolerance" has a lukewarm, passive ring to it. To "tolerate" a race or class of people suggests "putting up with them." I would prefer the word "respect" in this instance.

Copycat Seasoned Salt

A reader cut the salt in our original recipe for this mixture; here's his version.

- 1/2 cup coarse salt
- 2 1/2 teaspoons celery seed
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano, pulverized
- 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme, pulverized
- 1/4 teaspoon pulverized bay

- leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon ground pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon ground anise
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

In a screwtop jar thoroughly stir or shake together all the ingredients. Store, tightly covered, at room temperature. Makes about 1/2 cup. Delicious as a seasoning for fish.

What killed ancient mammoths is a puzzle

By the Editors of The World Almanac (Fourth of five parts)

In 1900, a deep-frozen carcass of a woolly mammoth was discovered in the permafrost of the Siberian Arctic, near the banks of the Berezovka River in what is now the Soviet Union. Since then, many more of the preserved beasts have been found.

The manner of their death and preservation is a continuing puzzle to archeologists.

Mammoths roamed the Siberian steppes up to perhaps 8000 B.C., along with sabre-toothed cats, steppe bison, sloths, tapirs, wolves and armadillos.

The mammoths were slightly smaller than today's elephants. They stood up to 10 feet high and had a pair of broad curving tusks. Their coarse outer hair was up to 18 inches in length and covered a reddish-yellow under-fleece. Tough skin over a 4-inch layer of fat protected them from the cold.

The animals were highly prized by prehistoric man and they figured in many primitive cave paintings. Their meat was eaten or used to bait traps; skin and bones went into the making of tepee-like shelters, while horns were used as utensils. The unearthed carcasses of these mammoths have been in varying states of preservation — some extraordinarily lifelike, others little more than fossilized bones. Many of the skeletons have not been entire, indicating that the carcasses had been disturbed and ruptured while in the ground.

Occasionally, great quantities of bones have been found together, as though many individuals died together in one spot. The best-preserved single specimen was that of a 90-kilogram baby found near the Kolyma River by Siberian gold prospectors in 1977.

After 40,000 years, it was still in a remarkable state of preservation. For instance, it still possessed two appendages or "fingers" on the end of its trunk — the first time this feature had been observed outside of cave-paintings of the period. The baby mammoth was exhibited in the U.S.S.R. and was nicknamed "Dima."

Several unusual things were noted about the preserved mammoths.

Some of the beasts were preserved in upright, standing positions, not recumbent or prone. This suggested a sudden death. At least one specimen was found with undigested food in its stomach and buttercups on its tongue. Most were found not in ice but in the frozen muck known as permafrost. Some were so well-preserved that pieces of their flesh were allegedly fed to sled dogs.

The orthodox explanation for the mammoths' demise is that they died accidentally by falling into ravines, being trapped in bogs, landslides or mudflows, or drowning in rivers. They then froze solid and were preserved in the permanently frozen tundra until today.

However, this explanation leaves many questions unanswered. How, for instance, could the beasts have been frozen in standing positions? Indeed, how did they freeze at all if the temperature was warm enough for buttercups?

But the biggest question relates to the state of the carcasses' flesh. How could a mammoth have been deep-frozen so quickly that the meat remained well-preserved 40,000 years later? Why hadn't the flesh rotted and the contents of the stomach putrefied?

If a mammoth had fallen into a crevasse in the permafrost, it would have frozen very slowly. The temperature of the permafrost is only a little below freezing. An animal as large and as well-insulated with fat and hair as the mammoth would have taken months to freeze solid. Most of the car-cas would have putrefied long before it froze.

And even the flesh near the skin, which would have been dehydrated by the slow freezing process. The actual cells were not dehydrated, however, indicating that they had been frozen quickly, like a side of beef in a modern freezing plant.

To satisfactorily freeze even a side of beef requires temperatures many degrees below freezing — usually minus 40 degrees for 30 minutes. It has been estimated that to deep-freeze a whole mammoth, insulated by thick hair, would have required temperatures of minus 150 degrees — readings that have never been recorded within living history on earth.

It appears then that something extraordinary must have happened to freeze the mammoths. One minute they were grazing on grasses and buttercups, the next they were subjected to temperatures so extreme that they were frozen where they stood.

THIS PRESERVED CORPSE of a baby permafrost of the Soviet Union's Magadan mammoth was unearthed from the territory.

Hatton ferry still fords the James River

By Tom Tiede

HATTON, Va. (NEA) — When Ned Hocker was a boy there was only one way to get from this side to that side of the James River: the pole ferry. The bridges were far apart, mechanically powered transport was scarce, and travelers hereabouts had to be pushed across the waterway by hand.

So the young Hocker saw the opportunity for a job with security. He began to hang around the muddy docks, and he made friends with the grizzled operators. Soon he was taking the pole himself on occasion, to get the feel of the river, and when he was 17 he was hired as a full-time ferryman. That was in 1930, he says. Today, more than a half century later, Ned Hocker is still at it. The bridges have closed in, the internal combustion engine proliferates, but Hocker continues to move traffic here at Hatton by stick. He runs the last pole ferry in Virginia; it may well be the last one in the nation. Oh, there are still a few other river ferries in operation. But they are driven by pistons and fossil fuels. The only help Hocker has is a 12-foot piece of pine; he plants the pole in the riverbed at the front of the ferry, and then muscles the barge across more than 600 feet of rushing water.

he is said to have charged 25 cents for wagons and a nickel for pedestrians. And that's the way it was for more than a century. Hocker said the toll was high and the pay was low. "When I was hired I got $5 a week, and I worked 16 to 17 hours a day. Sometimes I made 50 crossings before noon. Back and forth. I remember I didn't have time to eat my lunch."

Then, in 1936, some alterations were made. The state of Virginia bought the ferry, the toll charge was quickly removed, and Hocker the poleman became a public servant. He presently works five days of the week, receives medical and other benefits, and he says he earns $11,000 per annum.

Yet if some things have changed at the Hatton Ferry, other things have not. Hocker says the idea is still to push a 50-foot barge, loaded with 10,000 pounds of traffic, over sometimes troubled waters; the work is arduous, taxing, and tedious; it can also be quite dangerous.

One danger is the steel cable that guides the ferryboat from shore to shore. It is only an inch thick, and under a relentless attack from the swirling currents. If it snapped, Hocker says it might whip along the length of the barge, and sweep everything and everyone into the deep.

Then there are the various threats of Mother Nature. There are huge rogue logs, for example, that float out of sight beneath the river's surface, and there is ice in the winter that is honed like a knife; the ferryman claims the ice is sharp enough to cut the cable guide like a string.

NED HOCKLER: "I can't go on forever."

Cancer deaths could be job-related

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Union Carbide and federal researchers are at odds over the implications of two studies that show the firm's plant here has a brain cancer death rate two to three times the national average.

A National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health study of 9,000 employees released last week concluded 23 workers died of brain cancer between 1941 and 1977, and it raised the possibility that the deaths may be job related.

But an independent Union Carbide study of 6,600 current and former employees found 12 brain cancer deaths since the plant opened in 1941, and plant manager Damon Engle said the deaths appeared to be a "chance occurrence."

"We simply are far apart on interpretations," said NIOSH spokeswoman Deborah Van Brunt. She said Engle's contention that the deaths were a chance occurrence does not hold water. "It's not likely to be a sampling error," when the variance is as great as this one, she said.

Neither study included women, but the government study included black men. Engle said the company sampled only white men because the firm thought it was following ground rules laid down in 1978.

"If NIOSH had used the same rules, they would have found the same 12 we did," Engle said.

Government investigators counted certificates that listed brain tumors or brain cancer as the cause of death. That method is used to figure the number of brain cancer deaths nationwide. Ms. Van Brunt said.

Engle said Union Carbide checked death certificates as well as autopsy and other medical records in drawing its conclusion. He said one death certificate incorrectly reported that a worker killed by lung cancer died of brain cancer.

He said another worker the government counted as dead is still living. Engle said there was no link between the workers' deaths and their job assignments. But Ms. Van Brunt said the company was overlooking the possibility that a combination of chemicals could raise the death rate.

The coyote has hunted and been hunted, been revered and reviled for centuries

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer
KAYCEE, Wyo. (AP) — The Indians believed he was God's dog, entrusted to carry a jar full of stars until his urine got the better of him and he lifted the lid, scattering them to the heavens for eternity.

Mark Twain branded him always poor, out of luck and friendless. He is so spiritless and cowardly that even while his exposed teeth are pretending a threat, the rest of his face is apologizing or it.

The loudest chorus against the coyote today comes from Western ranchers who are asking the government to lift its ban of Compound 1080, a poison they consider singularly effective.

Without it, they say, the coyotes will continue to ravage their sheep, threaten the stockmen with economic ruin and the consumer with ever higher prices for lamb chops.

Opponents argue the poison won't help the sheep ranchers cut their losses but instead will wipe out a lot of wildlife while coyotes go their marauding ways — because the coyote is first and foremost a survivor.

For nearly two million years the coyote has hunted and been hunted, been revered and reviled, been killed and multiplied again.

By every biological twist and turn necessary to adapt to a changing planet, the coyote has fitted himself to Arctic wastes and shifting deserts, barren mountains and treeless prairies.

He's stalked everything from prehistoric elephants and camels to domesticated lambs and calves. Last year he killed a 3-year-old girl in Los Angeles, the first recorded death of its kind in America.

Statisticians believe that when Columbus landed, there were two million coyotes in the United States. Biologists believe that in 1981 that figure remains the same.

Since 1914, when Congress appropriated $125,000 to kill wolves, the U.S. government has been at war with predators at the behest of the powerful stockmen's lobby which annually urges lawmakers to increase funds and manpower to control the "varminis."

Sheep and cattle ranchers say that in 1979, they lost 1.45 million sheep, lambs and calves to predators, mainly coyotes. They say those losses cost them $160.4 million in revenue. That same year the stockmen and federal and state governments spent about $17 million on predator control in a cooperative program where the ranchers help foot the bill for the government trappers.

In a backhanded tribute to the official animal-damage control program initiated in 1931, ranchers no longer are severely troubled by many predators who were on the initial "hit" list.

Wolves, bobcats, mountain lions, grizzly bears and golden eagles have become so scarce that many now are on the endangered species list. The coyote now stands almost alone as the pest that must be pursued in large numbers, by radical means, at an estimated cost of more than $400 to the taxpayer for each one killed by a government trapper.

This year, for the eighth time in nine years, the stockmen's lobby is clamoring for the government to lift a 1972 ban on Compound 1080 which they say is the only effective weapon against the coyote.

That use of Compound 1080 was outlawed nearly a decade ago because the Environmental Protection Agency decided it killed too many non-target species, caused an inhumane and lingering death, and was not selective or effective in getting rid of specific livestock-killing coyotes.

Compound 1080 is an odorless, colorless, tasteless white powder, technically known as sodium monofluoroacetate. It is highly water soluble and chemically stable.

Don Meike, chairman of the board of the National Wool Growers Association, is a main spokesman for the livestock industry. He says that Department of Agriculture statistics — which are mainly compiled from figures supplied by ranchers — indicate that sheep losses to predators have jumped 29 percent since the 1972 ban.

Biologists insist that the coyote population nonetheless has remained stable since 1972, and no matter what man does, they say, the coyote will save itself.

Hope Ryden, on the board of directors of Defenders of Wildlife, says studies have proven the coyote is a density-dependent species. It responds to any thinning of population by producing greater numbers of young," says Ms. Ryden. "After suffering a drastic reduction, a coyote population is capable of a four-fold increase."

Environmentalists charge that Compound 1080 induces an "extremely painful and traumatic" death in coyotes. They also claim the poison kills many other species when placed on the open range, doesn't single out the aggressive coyotes who attack the lambs and calves, and is eagerly desired by the ranchers only because it's extremely cheap.

"In reality, Compound 1080 is still sitting out there in the West all over the place," says Cynthia Wilson, a former Department of Interior environmental ombudsman in the Carter administration and now a private consultant for the National Audubon Society in Washington.

"My feeling about the loopholes in the pesticide laws is that if Compound 1080 again becomes available, it's going to be misused."

Alan Abel, 'Jester at large'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — I should have suspected something was amiss last January when I picked up a newspaper here and read that my pal, Alan Abel, had died of a heart attack in Orem, Utah. It shocked me. But something didn't ring true. Maybe it was that he'd reportedly been out there scouting sites for a screwball horror film, "Who's Going to Bite Your Neck, Dear, When All of My Teeth Are Gone?" Still, I wrote a sympathy note to his wife, Jeanne. But two seconds after mailing it, I had an uneasy feeling. After all, Abel's checkered past did include a celebrated hoax in the early Sixties — a campaign to put pants on animals. Maybe I should have waited a few days. "That would have been wise," a penitent Abel conceded a few days later. His checkout proved to be a masterful hoax that took in, but in no way amused, the august New York Times. "Boy, are they mad at me.

not to mention some of my friends," he said. Then he cheered up. "But at least it lets you know how many people really cared for you. And that's not a bad thing." Abel, you see, is a put-on artist by profession. He revels in the mental hotfoot, the superior spoof. Of late, he's been starring in an off-Broadway show that recounts his adventures in leg-pulling. "Jester at Large" is the opus, playing at the Little Broadway, on Broadway. It's his New York stage debut.

And it's no hoax. A recent visitor found it to contain not only Abel, but also piano playing in the manner of Jonathan Edwards, tales of his hoaxes large and small, and a question-and-answer period and, at the start, eulogies for the star. "In a way, it's really like the wake I'd planned after my demise," says Abel, 48, a kindly, pipe-smoking man with an expansive manner and the look of one who sends his clothes to the cleaner for rumpling. "I had a church and Dixieland band all lined after my death," he says. "Instead of eulogies, there be a roast by some pals Marvin Kitman, the columnist, Buck Henry, C. Robertson and Jack West all friends in the business. "Then I was going resurrect myself. But the got to thinking, maybe I gone overboard, that it'd too cruel. So I called it off." His hoax was exposed anyway, by reporters who had their doubts about cancellation notice, who took eight Abel plotters successfully post here.

Actress survives 'Time Bandits'

By David Handler

New York (NEA) — Shelley Duvall says the only reason she flew off to London to play a cameo role in "Time Bandits" is because Terry Gilliam, the Monty Python alumnus who produced and directed the movie, told her Sean Connery was going to be in it. The Sean Connery. Well, she spent two weeks there. She was tied to a tree. She was rained on by ice water. She was jumped on by six flying dwarfs. She almost had her neck broken by one flying director. And, for all of that, she never did get to meet Sean Connery. "I did all of my scenes with Michael Palin, who I already knew," she sighs. "It was an enormous disappointment."

Miss Duvall is, of course, kidding. She is pals with Gilliam and his Python cohort, Palin, and was happy to spend "two weeks with the guys" filming "Time Bandits." She is especially happy now because the toothy, 32-year-old star of "The Shining" and "Popeye" happened to wander into what has emerged as the fall's biggest hit, both critically and at the box office. "Time Bandits" is a whimsical, unpretentious little fairy tale about six dwarves who steal a map of time portals from The Supreme Being and accidentally take a little boy along with them on their journey through time. Much havoc is wrought as they meet up with Napoleon (Ian Holm), Robin Hood (John Cleese), King Agamemnon (Connery), an Ogre (Peter Vaughan), Mrs. Ogr (Katherine Helmond), an evil doer (David Warner), and, ultimately, The Supreme Being, portrayed by Sir Ralph Richardson in a cheesy gray business suit. Miss Duvall calls the film

"every kid's dream." She plays Princess Pansy to Palin's Sir Vincent. They are a young couple eloping in medieval times. Somehow, they also turn up on the Titanic in tennis whites, only to have the dwarves and kid once again fall through a time portal and land on them in a heap. Actually, she reports, the dwarves were afraid to fall on her. "They were supposed to jump off of a scaffold four feet high," she recalls. "That's high up for them — like six feet for us. So Terry demonstrated to show them how easy it was and he landed right on my neck. Evarded on the set could hear the crunch. They thought he'd broken it. I think if I'd been tensed he would have."

Duvall, a sweet-natured Texan who seems to have sprung to life from a Disney cartoon. She herself is fond of fairy tales, so fond that she is producing a series of dramatizations for cable, the first being "Jack and the Beanstalk" with Dennis Christopher. Meantime, she just finished doing a bit for a Steve Martin TV pilot, a hosting stint on "Fridays" and is still battling to bring "Even Cowgirls Get the Blues" to the screen. She owns the film rights to the Tom Robbins best-seller and was planning to produce it for Warners. The studio pulled out of the project after a year. Now she's trying to raise money. "It's about a girl who is born with giant thumbs who becomes the most famous hitchhiker in the world," she reports. "It's a romantic comedy."

LAWMAN OF A DIFFERENT ERA. James Arness, one of Hollywood's most private men when it comes to granting interviews, talks candidly on the MGM lot about his new role as a modern-day detective in the new TV series, "McClain's Law."

Law. Known best for his 20-year stint as marshal Matt Dillon of "Gunsmoke," Arness says, "I think there are many parallels between McClain and Matt Dillon."

James Arness, 'McClain's Law'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Arness plays a modern-day detective in his new series for NBC, "McClain's Law," but you half expect him to strap on a six-gun and climb into the saddle. "It's hard to think of Arness and not picture him as a Western hero. To millions of television viewers he is still Matt Dillon of "Gunsmoke," the 6-foot-6 marshal who kept the peace in Dodge City for 20 years. For another four years he was mountain man Zeb Macahan in "How the West Was Won."

"I had to make a little mental adjustment myself in the beginning," says Arness. "For 25 years I was in Western garb. But I've gotten past that now and it's kind of fun. As for how the public will react, we'll just have to wait and see."

Arness stars as Jim McClain in the Friday night series on CBS. He plays a detective who comes out of retirement to solve the murder of a friend and stays on to rejoin the police force. He's a man who remembers the old days and chafes at the new legal limitations placed upon policemen. The series was created by Eric Bercovici, who also wrote the screenplay and produced "Shogun."

What Eric Ambler learned in Hollywood

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Over the years Eric Ambler has grown accustomed to what filmmakers and TV producers do to his magnificent suspense novels. But that patience took a long time to develop.

There was a time when he went to see a movie based on one of his books and it was a physically painful experience.

That happened shortly after World War II. During the war, the English-born writer had served in the British Army. While he was in uniform, Warner Brothers had filmed two of his novels here in Hollywood — "Background to Danger" and "The Mask of Dimitrios."

"After the war was over," Ambler says, "and I came back to Hollywood, they arranged a showing for me of 'The Mask of Dimitrios.' I had to leave in the middle with stomach cramps. "Somehow, producers find it creates a bad impression for the author to leave the screening room clutching his stomach."

Ambler lives in England now, but he was a Hollywood hand for a dozen years, between 1958 and 1970. At the time, his wife, Joan Harrison, produced the Alfred Hitchcock programs on television. So Ambler worked here and wrote several books during that period. And, he says, working here was beneficial to him: "It helped me write American characters and American dialogue," he says. "I had had the temerity to write American characters before."

Actor says Wood, Holden might have survived if not for alcohol

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Film stars William Holden and Natalie Wood might have survived their fatal accidents if they hadn't been drinking beforehand, according to Dana Andrews, an actor who overcame bouts with alcoholism.

"It is clear to all of us. I am sure, there is every likelihood Bill and Natalie would be alive today if it were not for alcohol, and that should not, cannot, be ignored," Andrews, a member of the board of the National Council on Alcoholism, said Friday.

"If we ever to register any real progress in the fight against the tragedies caused by alcohol," he said, "then we must resist all attempts to soft-pedal the results of its misuse."

Miss Wood, 43, drowned off Santa Catalina Island Sunday after falling into the water from her yacht. Her husband, actor Robert Wagner, and another actor, Christopher Walken, had been having a heated discussion aboard the boat.

An autopsy showed she had 0.14 percent alcohol in her blood. California's legal standard for intoxication is 0.10 percent.

Holden, 63, hit his head during a drunken fall in his Santa Monica apartment early last month and bled to death. The coroner's office said his blood alcohol level was 0.22 percent.

Andrews never implied Miss Wood was more than a social drinker, but said she and Holden could both be faulted for heavy drinking before their deaths.

The 72-year-old Andrews said he quit drinking in 1958 but relapsed into alcoholism from 1964 to 1969. Although he didn't blame Hollywood for the disease, he added, "I think my career might have had something to do with it."

"You walk into it unsuspectingly...first thing you know you've got it...it happens very slowly," said Andrews, perhaps best known for his 1946 movie, "The Best Years of Our Lives."

He said he knew Holden when both were vice presidents of the Screen Actors Guild in the mid-1950s.

Names in the news

KENNY ROGERS

NANCY REAGAN

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Red Skelton, who likes to portray clowns on stage and paint them on canvas, made an appearance at a gallery where some of his paintings and sculptures were being sold in Palm Springs, his old stomping grounds.

"We gave quite a few parties in Palm Springs," the 68-year-old comedian said Friday, recalling his earlier years in the desert resort with his late second wife, Georgia.

Skelton, his hair grey and thinning but his cheeks still rosy, surfaced at the Clown Shop gallery.

On sale were autographed copies of his 32 paintings of clowns, his three books and small sculptured busts of the characters Skelton and live shows: Freddy the Freeloader, San Fernando Red, Junior the Mean Widdle Kid, Clem Kadiddlehopper, Sheriff Deadeye and — in a limited edition only — Freddy in the Bathroom.

Skelton says he makes about 125 personal appearances a year and tapes TV specials for cable television.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Country music star Kenny Rogers and his wife Marianne are the parents of a baby boy, his third child and her first.

Christopher Cody Rogers was born Friday evening at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, weighing in at 7 pounds, 8 ounces and measuring 20½ inches.

"They're doing great," said Guy Thomas, a spokesman for the singer. "The baby is very healthy and the parents are with the baby now."

Rogers, whose records have sold 235 million copies worldwide, and the former Marianne Gordon were married in 1977 after meeting two years earlier on the set of television's "Hee-Haw."

He has two children from previous marriages, Carole, in her early 20s, and Kenneth Ray, Jr., 17.

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan says if parents, teachers and others work together to fight drug abuse, they can give their generation "America's youth."

"We've come to realize there aren't any 'soft' drugs — they're all dangerous and damaging," she told a meeting of the American Council on Marijuana Friday.

Mrs. Reagan said children are "smoking, shooting or sniffing while parents stand by feeling confused and heartless."

The president's wife said she was concerned not only about the use of marijuana, but all abused drugs.

"When our children are young we inoculate them against polio and diphtheria and whooping cough — if only we could do the same for drug abuse," she said.

The council is a national, non-profit educational group trying to inform the public about the effects of illicit drug use.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock musician Ike Turner was among those roughed up and robbed of $72,000 in jewelry and cash when gun-toting intruders barged into a home in Playa del Rey, police said.

The two robbers gained entry to the house about 1 a.m. Friday by mentioning the name of Turner's son, who was among the guests, said Sgt. Dave Nichols.

Once inside, the two men pulled out handguns and roughed up and robbed the guests, Nichols said.

Turner, 49, led the now-defunct, hard-driving rock-soul group, Ike and Tina Turner Review.

HULL, England (AP) — Michael Foot, leader of Britain's Labor Party, lost his footing and fell off the stage into an organ well during a public meeting in this eastern England port city.

Foot, 68, was walking across the platform of a Methodist hall Friday night when he disappeared behind the back of Hull's legislator, John Prescott, who was

Moments later, Foot reappeared at the feet of the platform as he climbed out of the organ well. He assured everyone he was not hurt.

The politician, who is having a hard time holding his unruly party together in fights between its left and right wings, later delivered a speech criticizing Conservative government policies.

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. John Jenrette says he is considering a run for his old seat, now held by Republican John Napier, despite the Abscam conviction hanging over his head.

Jenrette, who was convicted of bribery and conspiracy on October 7, 1980, but has not yet been sentenced, told a gathering of fellow Democrats at a fund-raiser in Conway on Thursday night that his decision will hinge on the outcome of his appeal.

"I'm feeling good and I am being encouraged to run for Congress when I get this thing behind me," the 45-year-old attorney said.

U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn is expected to act soon on Jenrette's motion that the verdict be set aside on grounds the government violated his rights during the investigation.

Jenrette, who was found guilty of taking a $50,000 bribe, was one of several congressmen snared by the FBI's undercover Abscam investigation.
