First In State

Janna Love and Glynda Burkett won first place to become state champions in Class B debate Saturday, May 4, at the State University Interscholastic League Literary Meet in Austin. The two juniors won three rounds Friday evening and Saturday morning to qualify for the finals. In the final round, they defeated Anthony by a 5-0 decision to become the champions.

The 1978-79 debate question for high schools selected by the National University Extension Service is "What should be the energy policy of the United States?" Under this general heading, Borden Co. debated the proposition "That the Federal Government should establish a comprehensive program to significantly increase the energy independence of the United States."

In the awards assembly where the winners were announced, the girls were presented individual medals and a plaque to take home to their school.

Two other Borden County students made the finals of their respective contests. Lisa McLeroy, senior, made the final round of Prose Reading to qualify as one of the top six readers in Texas. Also accomplishing this remarkable feat was Carla Jones, junior. Carla attained a spot among the top six in Poetry Interpretation.

The fifth Borden County entry in the state meet was Heather McPhaul, a sophomore.

She participated in Prose Reading.

Sharon Huddleston, who teaches high school English at BHS, coached and sponsored these students. In her nine years in Borden County Mrs. Huddleston has had students participating in one or all of these literary events at the regional level every year. This is the fifth year that she had had students qualify for State under her guidance.

The girls were accompanied to Austin by their families and sponsors: Mr. and Mrs. James McLeroy, Gena McLeroy, Mr. and Mrs. Jack McPhaul, Mrs. Don Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Burkett, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Huddleston.

Appreciation Shown To Borden County

(Ed. note: The following was printed in "Copelin's Corner" in the April 30 edition of the Wichita Falls Times. Mr. Copelin is a staff writer for the Times)

"Totally ignored in the news of Wichita Falls' recent tornado was the fact that the 200 or so students of the school of Gail, Texas (that's somewhere between Snyder and Lamesa and Big Spring and Post) unanimously voted to help us Wichitans and raised about $800 to buy bedding, food, tools, necessities and the like, along with other goods they were able to collect.

The youngsters gathered enough to fill a trailer and camper. That's nice, but what's the big deal, you ask. Well, for starters, Gail is the only town in Borden County and has a population of only about 200. To collect as much as those kids did was a minor miracle. That would be like getting $2 apiece from every resident in Wichita County. Think you could do it? Heck, no. Those youngsters performed a great feat."

Thank You

May 4, 1979
To Our Friends in Borden County:

Please accept this letter as a means of saying thank you for your response to our plea for emergency help. It is good neighbors like you that helped the tornado victims in Vernon and Wichita Falls bear the burden and sorrow placed upon them. It's good to know that you can be counted on when a need arises. With your help we were able to exceed our goal.

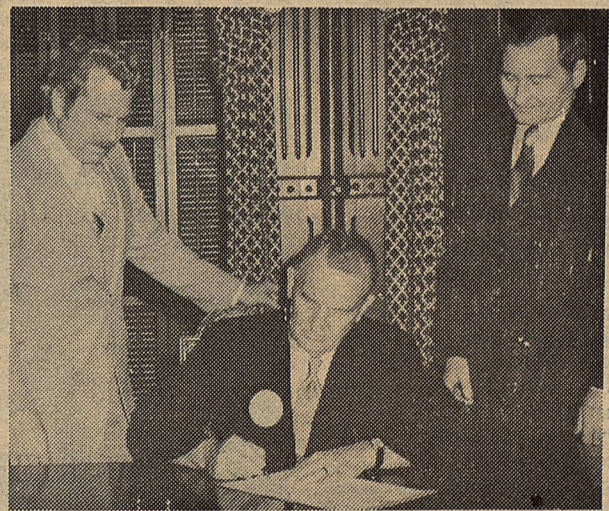

Sincerely,
/s/ Dorman G. Kinard,

AAM Asks For Charter

HEREFORD- County representatives of The American Agriculture Movement met in Dallas, Texas, on April 28th and 29th for the purpose of establishing a legally chartered farm organization in the state of Texas.

"The American Agriculture Movement was conceived in adversity, born in despair, nurtured with hope, grew with participation, and lives with determination," said Mike McCathern, newly elected State Coordinator.

"We have used our tractors, the symbol of our industry, to bring to the attention of the American public and to the Congress of the United States, the problems which exist in rural America. We have been successful in bringing together the largest group of grass-roots farmers in the history of our nation. We have proven that we are willing to actively participate in the political pro-

GOVERNOR PROCLAIMS NURSING HOME WEEK . . . The traditional week beginning Mother's Day, May 13th this year, is designated by Governor Bill Clements as Nursing Home Week in Texas and everyone is urged to visit a nursing home in their community during that period. This year's theme is "Light Up a Life," borrowed from the song made famous by Debby Boone. Along with her famous father Pat Boone, the superstar entertainer, are serving as celebrity Hosts for the week. With Governor Clements is Sid Rich, (left) President of Texas Nursing Home Association and Dan Pomykal of Ennis, Chairman of the Board of the Texas Association. There are more than 1,000 licensed nursing homes in Texas with accommodations for over 102,000 residents.

Mrs. Copeland and the Kindergarten would like to thank Mrs. Sallie Wilson and Mrs. Melba Rinehart for the assistance that gave the class preparing them for the play.

Three representatives of the Gail Future Homemakers Of America Chapter attended the 1979 state meeting. The convention contained over 4,500 people. If all of those people had as much of a learning experience and as much fun as our girls, the convention was indeed a success!

"Today's Youth Forming Tomorrow" was the theme of the 1979 State Convention of the Texas Association of F.H.A. The convention was held at the Tarrant County Convention Center in Fort Worth April 26 & 27.

Those attending were Joie Brummett, Tammy Telchik, and Charla Vaughn. Shirley Kountz, advisor, also attended.

The first general session was one of business. Each chapter had one voting delegate and voted on various parliamentary changes. The speaker of the evening was Phyllis Cicero. She served as the F.H.A. State President of F.H.A. in 76-77. Her first speech was on the confidence each of us must have in ourselves. "If You Believe" was a very motivating speech to us all. Next on the agenda was the naming of the new State officers.

The second general session was Friday morning. Frederick McClure gave a speech to the Future Homemakers Association on "The Signs Of The Times". This theme posed the question "Where are we going? Who can follow the signs of the times?" McClure is a native of San Augustine, Texas.

In the third and last general session, Dr. Purkey talked on the subject, "God Didn't Make A Nobody". Dr. Purkey was enjoyed by all. At the end of Dr. Purkey's speech, the new State F.H.A. officers for the 1979-1980 year were installed. It was a very inspiring ceremony as the pins of each office that had been handed down over the years by the outgoing officers were given to the incoming officers.

All three girls attended various workshops. Joie Brummett attended a workshop entitled "The Dating Game". This workshop centered on dating. Mr. Gary Moore talked on a lot of different subjects concerning dating. It was very interesting.

Tammy Telchik attended a workshop on accomplishing one's goals. Dr. Robert Galvan spoke on a workshop entitled "First down and ten to goal". This workshop involved the four steps in achieving one's goals.

Charla Vaughn attended a workshop entitled "I Am Me". This workshop was given by Doug Dennison, the DALLAS Cowboy. He emphasized the importance of setting a goal and being willing to sacrifice to achieve it. When asked who his Hero was, he said he had several; one was Tom Landry, but the most important Hero of all was God. The State F.H.A. Convention was a valuable learning experience for all who attended.

Bright Future For Cottonseed

Graduate students and research staff at the Texas Women's University in Denton, are actively involved in finding ways to incorporate proteins from yet untapped plant sources into foods that everyone will enjoy.

One such alternate source of protein is cottonseed. By examining the growth rates of rats that were fed various proteins, TWU researchers determined that milk protein and cottonseed protein produced similar growth patterns. Several years of extensive study have shown that cottonseed is safe for human consumption, both for children, young adults, and the aged.

Use of cottonseed flour to supply protein in the diet offers economy, high quality, and flexibility to the typical American family. Because it contains low levels of fat, the use of cottonseed flour in the diet may be especially helpful to individuals with obesity or coronary heart disease who need to limit their consumption of fat. The high protein and low fat content of cottonseed flour suggest an excellent future for products made from the flour.

Cottonseed flour can be incorporated into casserole dishes, snacks, desserts, and a variety of other food products. It prolongs the freshness of baked goods and helps prevent rancidity. Recipes have been developed in the Human Nutrition Research Laboratory at the Texas Woman's University. The foods have been carefully tested for their nutritive value and the acceptance of taste, both of which have scored high.

The future for cottonseed protein looks especially bright. As glandless cotton becomes more economically profitable for farmers and they plant more glandless seeds, the amount of cottonseed flour available for human use will increase. This will be economically profitable to the farmer as well as the consumer.

"The AAM will continue to be governed by the grass-roots members, just as it has been from its inception", Mc: Cathern said. "Its goals will be to have maximum input from grass-roots farmers into all future legislation, to keep the nation informed of problems which exist in agriculture, to support political candidates who support agriculture, and to oppose those who oppose our goals of full parity prices for our commodities," he continued.

"We urge our members to Western Texas College will host its fifth annual Bible Camp for students in grades 7-12 from July 8-14.

Fees will be $45 per person, which includes lodging in the college dormitories, meals in the Student Center cafeteria, recreational activities and some class materials. Persons wishing to make reservations for the camp are to contact Gary Lowe at Western Texas College, Snyder, TX 79549.

Western Texas College received approval for several off-campus course offerings when the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System held its quarterly meeting in Austin on April 27. Approved for WTC were:

Adult Vocational courses in Aspermont, Hamlin, Rule, Stamford, Gail, Bronte, Jayton, Roby, Rotan and Roscoe, all subject to final approval by the Texas Education Agency. (The TEA must approve the course outline and the instructor for Adult Vocational courses.)

Child Care and Real Estate courses in Haskell County.

General academic, Adult Vocational and technical programs in Ballinger.

Law Enforcement and secretarial programs in Crosbyton

State law requires the Coordinating Board to approve any courses offered for credit by public junior or senior colleges at off-campus or out-of-district sites. The purpose is to avoid duplication and conflict in courses offered by institutions serving the same area. WTC's new approvals will not affect its programs at the extension centers already in operation in Sweetwater, Haskell, Crosbyton, Rotan and Ballinger.

Jeri's Gottings

Like wow, person! Thirty (30) years ago in June I received a degree from college. That's right, boys, ole mom actually went that road too. Things weren't as different then as you might think. Roads were paved, telephones worked good--the dial system had replaced "central". TV had even come on view. Our skirts hovered around the same length as today. Bikinis had even become popular among the daring. Rolled up straight jeans were the uniform of the weekend and of the night (in the dorm). Today's bustierre was a strapless then, and very popular and beguiling on those who had the shape.

No one had been to the moon in those days. But very few had been to Gail either. So I was looked upon as though I might have come from the moon. You see, boys, everything is sorta relative. The sound barrier hadn't been broken, but the planes we flew got us there faster than we preferred anyway. (And they weren't open cockpits, thank you.) Now the trains were the way to travel. That was real luxury-- relaxed -- room to stretch out--good food. Amtrak nor the Concorde will ever replace the old Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe. The magic of train travel was captured in song-- Chattanooga Choo-Choo - - Pennsylvania Station. Who has come up with a ditty about Alleghany Airlines, DFW or even Love Field?

And the cars! What a thrill to be a senior and be allowed to have a car on campus. None of this stuff about taking for granted the privilege - - or expecting the right-- of driving your own car off to college that first semester. Heck, we had to earn the privilege--to prove that we had matured to the point that we could handle the distraction of an automobile. Male persons didn't have wheels either. We used the mass transit system to get downtown--the commuter trains to get out of town--our feet to get to the woods. But when the school and your folks had decided you were going to make it and you got That Car! Such a fine one I had too-- a Studebaker convertible--red. It had a downhill backing break and got 28 miles to the gallon. What a chariot.

The war was over and there were great social changes taking place. The schools were flooded with boys returning from the service. But my almae matri remained (to this day) a women's college (not a female conservatory, please.) I don't remember anyone complaining about the absence of men in the sleeping quarters or in the classroom, for that matter. There were plenty of mentypes in the surrounding area to satisfy our flirty eyes. And by being a women's place of learning, we were relieved of the pressure of constantly preening for masculine attention. There was enough competition on the weekends to keep us on a diet and our seams straight. But during the week we competed for grades, not dates. And that's a freedom not afforded to many these days.

I remember viewing my senior picture with horror. I thought I looked old enough to be receiving my Ph. D. thirty years hence. Well, here I am. And as a matter of fact, if I puff out my cheeks to ease the crepeyness, tape the furrow out of my brow, there isn't all that much difference. Same hair style--same dress length. Looking back, life has been just like the skirt lengths these 30 years--a series of ups and downs. But life levels out after this long--no more "new look"--no more mini skirts--just a sensible leveling off at about two inches below the knee. About two inches below the frenetic - - and about two inches above the apathetic.

If I'm going back to reunite with the gals of '49, I guess I better bone up on my Latin -- "E longinguo, e propinquo--."

Marijuana: Myths vs. Evidence

National Defense Committee, NSDAR

By Phyllis Schlafly

GENETIC DAMAGE

Robert J. Staab and Vincent de P. Lynch of St. Johns's University College of Pharmacy warn pregnant women against smoking marijuana in the light of the "high incidence" of kidney malformation as well as death and stunted growth in the offspring of mice exposed to low doses of cannabis during pregnancy. Other studies indicate that the genetic risks involved with "normal" use of marijuana probably exceed that of exposure to sublethal levels of radiation.

THC has also been associated with genetic changes through the suppression of cell division and the alteration of protein syntheses. In the 8th Technical Review of Genetics and Drug Abuse, August 1976, E. Sasenath reported findings on the increase in malformations in the offspring of monkeys exposed to marijuana. These findings on malformation confirm the results of earlier studies with laboratory rodents. Abnormalities were found in the offspring even when only the father monkey was exposed to marijuana.

The Senate Internal Security Subcommittee report added to the growing body of evidence that marijuana adversely affects the reproductive process and poses a serious danger of genetic damage and mutation. Based on the scientific evidence it collected, the Sub-committee concluded: "Male hormone (testosterone) level was reduced by 44 percent in young males who had used marijuana at least four days a week for a minimum of six months. Sperm count was dramatically reduced in the same group of marijuana smokers, falling almost to zero with heavy smokers, so that they had to be considered sterile. Very heavy smoking in a number of cases resulted in impotence. Potency was recovered in some cases when marijuana was given up. In a number of animal experiments, marijuana was found to cause a very high rate of fetal deaths and fetal abnormalities, including runting and lack of limbs--the thalidomide effect."

Dr. Hardin Jones believes that the association between marijuana and malformation in human offspring is indicated by the statistical tabulations on the number of malformed infants born in the United States during the past ten years. Although malformations had been on the decline in the United States for 30 years, since 1970 there have been striking increases in malformations of the hip joint and of the cardiovascular system. While it will take more years to compile more data, the fact that the 1970 date is coincident with the rise in marijuana use points to the conclusion that marijuana use is the cause of this epidemic of malformation of infants.

COMPARISONS WITH TOBACCO AND ALCOHOL

The evidence suggests that marijuana is far more dangerous than tobacco or alcohol. Marijuana damages the lungs and respiratory system ten times as fast as cigarette smoking. It usually takes years for a social drinker to become an alcoholic and drink himself to death or out of a job. Marijuana, however, can destroy our young people in a couple of years, before they ever have the chance to know life and the excitement of confronting its challenges.

The correlation between cigarette smoking and lung cancer, emphysema, and other respiratory problems is well known. With marijuana, because fewer cigarettes are smoked, less carbon monoxide is taken up in the blood. However, the lungs of the marijuana smoker become more irritated than those of the tobacco smoker. According to Dr. Hardin Jones, "the irritation is greater because THC is more tightly bound to the carbon particles in the smoke than nicotine is, and, in order to get an effect, the marijuana smoker must inhale deeply and hold the smoke in his lungs. After even a short period of exposure, as the carbon particles accumulate, the lungs of the marijuana smoker change permanently from pink to black."

The Senate Internal Security Subcommittee reported that "chronic cannabis smoking can produce sinusitis, pharyngitis, bronchitis, emphysema and other respiratory difficulties in a year or less, as opposed to 10 to 20 years of cigarette smoking to produce comparable complications." This is producing a new crop of respiratory cripples early in life. The Subcommittee described the damage done to lung tissues as "precancerous."

A study by the Leuchtenbergers, working at the Institute of Experimental Cancer Research in Lausanne, Switzerland, concluded that "marijuana smoke causes a greater range and degree of damage to lung cells than tobacco smoke."

Marijuana is often said to be like alcohol, but the two drugs are not at all alike. Alcohol is water-soluble and leaves the body rapidly and completely without any residue. THC, the principal active ingredient in marijuana, is insoluble in water but highly soluble in fat. So THC remains in the fatty structures of cells for long periods and, with repeated use, accumulates there.

Marijuana is a complex mixture of many cannabinoids, each of which may have different effects on the body. The retention of the cannabinoids in the body means that even small doses may have adverse effects correlate with the duration of use rather than with the size of the dose, and there may be no truly safe range of exposure.

Dr. Hardin Jones warns that, "Molecule for molecule, THC is 10,000 times stronger than alcohol in its ability to produce mild intoxication. For example, ...50 grams of alcohol produces mild intoxication and is metabolized in about five hours. Only 5 milligrams (0.005) of THC are required to produce the same degree of intoxication. THC is removed slowly from the body, and many months are required to recover from its effects. The marijuana user is under the influence of the drug even between highs".

It is also important to note that those caught up in the cannabis epidemic are not using marijuana as a substitute for alcohol. Increasingly, the two drugs are being used together. The scientists who testified before the Senate Subcommittee agreed that adding marijuana to alcohol, or alcohol to marijuana does not produce an arithmetic effect but a synergistic, or compounding, effect. The two drugs in com-

"THE COMING OF AGE"

In American society, interest in the problems of older people is currently high. Older people as a group have "come of age".

May has been declared Older Texas Month in Texas by Governor Clements. We want to emphasize the older persons in our lives at this time. Receiving and giving recognition is important and necessary at any age.

For some, the giving of recognition to others of any age just seems to come naturally, for others it is difficult. What makes the difference? The role model parents provide for children may be the difference. If children see parents writing, calling, sending gifts, extending invitations to lunch, remembering special days and requesting advice from their parents and friends, then the children will probably follow these same practices.

Individuals learn to recognize others. We are never too old or too young to learn to share with another the messages of "I like you", "You are special" or "Just thinking of you."

It is important to remember that recognition is not so much something you do as it is something you are. It is sensitivity to others as persons, not a strategy for getting them to like you or to get them to do something for you.

- Ways to Recognize Others
Listed below are possibilities for remembering grandparents, parents, children, teachers, peers, friends, ministers, co-workers, students, neighbors and others!
1. Smile
 2. Treat to a soda
 3. Ask for a report on how things are going.
 4. Send a birthday card.
 5. Be pleasant
 6. Respect their wishes
 7. Say "Good morning."
 8. Greet by name
 9. Give them a responsibility.
 10. Honor their preferences.

And the list could go on and on. Can you add other ways to give recognition? Are you practicing by remembering others? When was the last time you sent the message "I Like You", "You are special", or "Just thinking of you?"

Food Preservation Workshop

Get canning equipment and supplies ready ---harvest and preservation season for garden fresh fruits and vegetables is just around the corner.

To help you get ready for the food preservation season the Borden, Mitchell and Scurry County Extension offices are jointly offering a Food Preservation Workshop. The workshop will include how to get canning equipment ready, selection of jars and lids, approved canning techniques and drying foods.

The Food Preservation Workshop in Borden County, notes Kathy Blagrave, Borden Co. CEA will be held May 14 at 7: p.m. in the Homemaking Dept. at Borden High School. There is no charge for the workshop and everyone is encouraged to bring a neighbor.

If you want to save money and learn all the latest and approved methods of food preservation, you won't want to miss this opportunity.

bination have a far greater effect than the sum of their individual effects. The person who combines whiskey with pot is indulging in a far more potent and dangerous form of intoxication, whose short-and long term consequences we still know very little about.

ADDICTION

Those who argue for the legalization of marijuana say that it is non-addictive. Even though marijuana may not be chemically addictive, that is no argument in its favor so long as it produces severe physical damage in so many ways.

However, Dr. Hardin Jones has pointed out that drugs can be harmful if they are psychologically addictive, even though they may not be chemically addictive. He says, "there is an inseparable relationship between chemical and psychological addiction, and the two forms coincide when the addictive substance is a pleasure-giving drug." Breaking a psychological addiction may be even more difficult than breaking a chemical addiction.
